CHAPTER XV.

The horse had stopped once or twice to bait, and Clarence Clifford had dismounted, but he had eaten nothing and merely crawled to some leaning post and leaned there with the same stupefied face and want of purpose.

Once or twice rural policemen had looked after him meditatively and considered whether they were doing their duty in allowing such an evidently absent-minded man to risk his life.

But no one had stopped or interfered with horse or rider, and the lights of London were before them.

Then, towards dark, an incident, the solitary one of the journey, occurred, and Clarence Clifford received a fearful shock.

In a narrow part of the high road the horse had suddenly stopped.

Clarence Clifford looked up listlessly to see the obstruction and found that it was a large cart, drawn by two horses, which had stopped to allow a man to examine the harness.

It was an ordinary, heavily built cart, and the stricken mourner would have passed it without a glance had not something dark and bulky lying in the body of it attracted his dull eyes for a moment, but in that short time he knew that he was beside the cart of which he had heard the men in the parlor of the Rivershall Arms speak.

His eyes seemed glued to the dreadful, fever-tainted glass, and with a groan he put his hand up to them.

As he did so—that is to say, while his eyes were covered—he heard, or fanned he heard, a deep-drawn sigh proceeded from beneath the tarpaulin that covered the bundle.

With a start he took his hand from his face and looked back. He saw that the driver of the cart had turned his head in the direction of the inside and seemed listening.

"To what?" asked Clarence Clifford, hazily. "Had he heard the sigh, also?" He pulled up the tired horse and waited in the shadow.

The cart started and rumbled on. As it passed him he heard—or fancied he heard—the sigh again.

The cold perspiration started from his forehead and he seemed rooted to the ground.

Petrified in this way, he saw, the cart pass and once more heard the sigh, louder this time, and—horror of horrors—from the deadly heap a low, smothered cry. With his knees sticking to the horse's sides, he struck it with his whip, and bounded on, with one delirious desire, to fly from the dreadful thing which was sending him mad.

For, dizzy and benumbed, he was convinced that the sighs and the cry were the dreadful fancies of approaching insanity.

CHAPTER XVI.

In due course the Mistress of Rivershall arrived.

The Hall had been thoroughly cleaned and redecorated; many of the old servants had been dismissed as too old for the new owner, and a great many more had been sent away to make room for those she brought with her.

One old servant, if so she could be called, remained, and that was Miss Lucas.

Mr. Packer had, soon after his transmitting the news of Lady Melville's loss of her relatives and consequent gain of the estate, received instructions to make the aforesaid redecoration, and to hand an inclosure to Miss Lucas.

What that inclosure contained no one knew save the person to whom it was directed, but it was noticed that after its receipt the quiet governess, in a manner, assumed the charge of the house and that a tinge of authority was perceptible in her manner and voice.

The day of the funeral Dr. Bromwell had taken his departure. He had superintended the disinfecting of the place, his work was done, he said, and he felt that he wanted a change.

It was generally understood that he had returned to that part of the continent whence he had come.

Lady Melville arrived quietly as be fitted a mourner.

Her travelling carriage had only two horses, and besides her maid and a courier there were no attendants.

It was dark when the carriage rolled into the drive and stopped before the door; but there was light enough left for Lady Melville to see the serene, composed look of triumph on the face of Miss Lucas, where she stood at the open door ready to receive her ladyship.

Lady Leonora Melville, Mistress of Rivershall, was a different person in appearance and bearing to Lady Melville of no place in particular and a small house in London in general.

Miss Lucas saw that at a glance, and scanned in great curiosity the pale face with its anxious eyes and uncertain lips, the slightly drooping figure attired in its deep mourning.

"Your ladyship is late and must be perfectly exhausted," said Miss Lucas, like the purring of a cat, as her ladyship gave her black-gloved hand to her with a cold smile.

"I am tired—and late. I will go to my room, please, at once. Marie, this lady will show you the rooms."

The French maid looked hard at the Englishwoman and followed in silence.

Lady Melville stopped a moment to give some instructions to the coachman and brought up the rear.

A few servants stood at the head of the stairs and bowed low.

Lady Melville bowed absently and seemed to have no eyes for anything living, so absorbed was she in the great hall and the corridor above.

At the picture gallery, notwithstanding her exhaustion, she stopped short and with one hand upon a tall, carved chair, gazed up and down it with speechless admiration and awe.

Suddenly her eyes were arrested by the vacant place where her portrait had hung before Sir Ralph had caused it to be removed. Then the pale face flushed redly and the small hand clutched one chair passionately.

"Took my portrait down!" she muttered, between her teeth; "left a vacant spot for every idiot to gaze and chatter at! It is like them. Ah, but I have had my revenge. They made a few feet of oak vacant of me, but I have made the whole house vacant of them."

It was a dreadful reflection, and nothing but the malice of the moment would have given it birth. Immediately it left her lips she shuddered and hurried on.

The London upholsters had been given carte blanche, and they had availed themselves of it.

Lady Melville's suite of rooms was a wonder of tasteful luxury; a soft light revealed marvels of the room, the artist's studio, and the greatest manufactures of the day.

An exclamation of genuine delight burst from her lips, and she turned to express her pleasure to Miss Lucas, who had waited a moment, but turned so suddenly that she was in time to see a sinister smile upon the thin lips and to catch the listless gray eyes fixed upon her face with a cat-like watchfulness.

The pleasant words died from her ladyship, a cold dampness fell upon her breast, and with an imperceptible shudder she walked to the mirror, saying, coldly:

"It is all very pretty; you must have had an infinity of trouble, Miss Lucas, for which I thank you very much, very much."

"Your ladyship makes me very happy," murmured Miss Lucas, humbly. "What time would you like dinner served?"

"In an hour," said Lady Melville. And Miss Lucas withdrew. But as if remembering some other question necessary she opened the door, and so suddenly that Lady Melville started with a half exclamation and dropped the bracelet from her hand.

"I beg your ladyship's pardon," said Miss Lucas. "I had forgotten to ask if you would have it served in the grand hall?"

"No, no," was the reply. "In the small room, please."

Miss Lucas retired for good this time but waited outside for a moment with a smile.

"Then, her ladyship is nervous," she murmured, showing her teeth, and stole, in her usual noiseless way, down the stairs.

Her ladyship was nervous—exceedingly nervous, and her falling became a by-word in Rivershall.

If a servant dropped a brush or any other equally simple and ordinary article within her hearing, she started with a suppressed scream. If the wind moaned a little through the great hall or the upper corridors, she shuddered.

And once the house had been terribly alarmed by finding her in the picture gallery lying in a hysterical fainting fit, asserting that the portraits of Sir Ralph and his unfortunate daughter, Lillian, had moved from their panels.

All this was shocking and lamentable.

If your lady be nervous, then it is only proper that your maid should follow suit.

ANCESTRY.

If I'm descended from an ape, I am not much depressed by that; I shed no tears, I pin no crape upon my coat sleeve or my hat. If some gorilla was the sire of my proud race I do not care; I'm nobly tolling at my lyre to settle for the bill of fare. I herd my hens and plow and sow, and do not care a tinker's oath what chanced a million years ago to either apes, or men, or both. I do my work in proper shape, I milk the cow and spray the tree, and if my grand-sire was an ape it surely cuts no grass with me. I worry over many things connected with the present day; my silver has two broken springs, I've found some midew in my hay. The hair is falling from my dome, which makes me murmur and repine; my aunt is coming to my home, to visit for six weeks or nine. The chair I sit on falls apart, and lets me down and makes me swear; the cost of living fills my heart with indignation and despair. When I have concrete griefs like these, why should I fill the air with wails because my forebears sat in trees, or swung from branches by their tails? I strive to dodge the bogie, four-eyed savants sweat o'er problems of the long ago. It may be they are talking bunk, it may be what they say is true, but there's no prehistoric monk can stop me when I've work to do.

Fads and Fashions

Lace and chiffon are inseparable for evening. Prints grow more vivid and tropical in design. The inserted front panel is apt to be pieced. The mode employs every known variety of tuck. Welt pockets give a tailored emphasis to a frock. Some frocks use two or more jabots as trimming. A trimming note of interest is the use of applied bands. The scarf collar which appears on frocks is very narrow.

Two Steamers in Precarious Position on Sable I. Shoals--President Coolidge Plans a Conference to Deal With Anthracite Dispute--125,000 Gallons Gasoline Explode in Chicago River

MINISTRY OF CARDINAL BEGIN.
QUEBEC, July 19.
His Eminence Cardinal Begin died at twelve-thirty o'clock.

STEAMERS IN DANGER.
HALIFAX, July 19.
The West Cohas, a steamer of about four thousand tons, and the French trawler, Labrador, were on the shoals off Sable I.

Surviving crews seeking to effect rescue but held at bay by heavy and dense fog. The Labrador about half past eight this morning and immediately sent out distress signals, wireless she proceeded to the rescue and probably reach the Labrador at 11 o'clock, eastern standard time.

Word received from the Cohas an S.O.S., stating she had run aground at the three mile mark on the shoals of Sable Island, and in need of immediate assistance. The stranded vessels released dense fog and heavy seas. The Labrador, dispatched to the aid of the Labrador, made three attempts to reach the stranded craft but could not get within half a mile. The best word received from the Labrador was that the life boat was on the North side of the shoals, awaiting a favorable opportunity to reach the shore. The life saving crew sent out a message, according to word here early to-night. It was thought in shipping circles here that the West Cohas might slip aground at high tide, as she struck about 11:15 a.m. and was thought to be proceeding slowly at the time.

Spahlinger Serum
DOCTOR M.P.'S AND A CONSUMPTION TREATMENT.

The five medical M.P.'s--Dr. T. Watts (Withington), Dr. A. Salter (Bermondsey), Dr. A. Vernon Davies (Ryton), Dr. T. Drummond Shiels (East Edinburgh), and Dr. J. H. Williams (Llanelli)--who went to Geneva to investigate the Spahlinger treatment of consumption, which consists of a serum and vaccine of a nature known only to the discoverer, Mr. Spahlinger, a Swiss bacteriologist, have issued their reports.

On the evidence presented to us a prima facie case has been made out for the Spahlinger treatment.

We consider it imperative in the interests of humanity that an exhaustive trial of the remedy should be made under test conditions, as soon as it is possible to obtain a sufficient quantity of the serum and of the vaccines. We do not wish to raise exaggerated hopes, but we state definitely that of all known methods of combating tuberculosis the Spahlinger method seems to us at the present moment the most hopeful and promising.

The greatest part of the fortune of Mr. Spahlinger and his family has now been spent upon carrying through his researches.

The estate on which his laboratory is situated has been mortgaged to Geneva banks for approximately £20,000.

Two days after we arrived in Geneva notice was received by Mr. Spahlinger that the property would have to be put up for auction on July 25. As far as we can gather, at least £15,000 must be found forthwith if this calamity, involving the closing of the laboratory and the disposal of its contents, is to be avoided.

The Parliamentary Medical Committee at a meeting passed a resolution that the committee is of opinion that a prima facie case has been made out for further investigation, but that the committee cannot as a corporate body take any action in the matter.

Von Hindenburg's Stand
ON SECURITY PACT, SOUGHT.

London, July 11.—There has been great activity between London and Berlin in the last few days on the security pact negotiations in preparation for the despatch of the German reply to the Briand note, which will be sent about July 12.

A feature of these negotiations was the visit paid to Von Hindenburg by the British Ambassador here, who it is understood sought to impress the President with the necessity of such action by Germany as will keep the security pact discussion going to the point at which the convocation of an international conference will appear practical.

The conference itself, it is understood, is to be proposed from London rather than from Berlin, but only after France and Germany shall have arrived at a more basic understanding.

Pending further progress in the exchange of communications between Berlin and Paris there should be no open discussion of the security pact problem in the Reichstag, Luther to-day told the Reichstag's steering committee, apropos of the demand by the opposition parties for such discussion prior to the despatch of Germany's reply to Briand.

The reply which will be of a preliminary character, will, it is understood, facilitate further negotiations in the direction of a conference.

Ship That Ran Amuck

ELLIOT O'DONNELL) Captain Eaton, commanding the Strathclyde, now down the Channel, was behind him, and approaching the port quarter, was a vessel.

"I don't see anyone," he remarked to one of the crew, "she seems bent on overhauling and crossing our track."

"A bare," Captain Eaton exclaimed, lowering his glasses, "I'll see her course and see what she does then."

"The chase in the Channel," he said to the man in charge of the steering-gear, and the Strathclyde's helm, changed her course. The strange vessel did the same.

"I don't see anyone," he remarked to one of the crew, "she seems bent on overhauling and crossing our track."

"A bare," Captain Eaton exclaimed, lowering his glasses, "I'll see her course and see what she does then."

"The chase in the Channel," he said to the man in charge of the steering-gear, and the Strathclyde's helm, changed her course. The strange vessel did the same.

"I don't see anyone," he remarked to one of the crew, "she seems bent on overhauling and crossing our track."

bounded, but, instead of coming to a halt, commenced backing, and turning her head away from the Strathclyde. "Stand by us," Captain Eaton again shouted. "Throw us ropes and lower your boats!"

Checking a Panic.
 The Franconia veered right round, and, with her stern towards them, began steaming away in the direction of the French coast.

Water was pouring into the two huge holes in the side of the disabled steamer, and it was evident to all that she would soon sink. Capt. Eaton now ordered the big port lifeboat to be prepared for lowering, and, while it was still in the davits, helped fifteen ladies into it, putting them in charge of the third officer and three of the crew. Just as the boat was about to be swung out a number of panic-stricken men crowded into it. A revolver gleamed ominously in Captain Eaton's hand, and they tumbled out again.

The boat was then lowered but had hardly touched the water, before a heavy swirl, partly caused by the sudden sinking of the stern of the Strathclyde, capsized it, and everyone in it was pitched into the waves. The second officer immediately got the gig out on the starboard quarter and shoved off to their assistance, saving several of them.

Meanwhile, the stern of the Strathclyde sank lower and lower, and a big sea, sweeping over the bridge, carried away with it a crowd of shrieking men and women.

Finally, the captain, second engineer and fireman were the only persons left on the ill-fated vessel, and they leaped off just before she finally sank.

In all, seventeen persons perished. When full details of the disaster became known, and it was understood that no attempt to save anyone had been made by the Franconia, a storm of public indignation was raised against Kuhn, the captain of that steamer. An inquest on the body of Jessie Dorcas Young, one of the passengers, was held at Dover, and loud cheers greeted a verdict of manslaughter against Kuhn.

The latter was then arrested, and was tried at the Central Criminal Court before Mr. Baron Pollock on April 5th, 1916, the exact charge against him being that by negligently navigating the Franconia he had caused that vessel to collide with the Strathclyde, that by this act the Strathclyde had sunk, and the deceased, Jessie Dorcas Young, had been drowned.

In The Law Courts.
 The defence, conducted by Mr. Sergeant Parry, while disputing the right of an English Court to try Kuhn, denied negligence, and essayed to prove that the onus of the collision rested as much with Captain Eaton as with the prisoner. Further, it tried to show that, in leaving the Strathclyde to her fate, Kuhn had acted for the good and safety of his own vessel, which had been so badly damaged that it seemed doubtful whether he could get her to port.

No word was said on either side relative to the persistent dogging of the Strathclyde by the Franconia. The Crown won, and a verdict of "Guilty" was returned. The defence then reminded Mr. Baron Pollock that a point of law had been raised concerning the right of an English Court to try a foreigner for an offence committed on a foreign ship on the high seas. This point, his lordship said, would have to be submitted to the Court of Criminal Appeal. Meanwhile, Kuhn was let out on bail.

No Key to the Mystery.
 When the Appeal Court met, the judges, six in number, couldn't agree, and the case had to come up yet again. This time the Court, consisting of thirteen judges, quashed the conviction on the ground that at the time of his alleged offence Kuhn was outside the pale of English jurisdiction, though actually within three miles of the British coast. The court held the view that the right of jurisdiction, popularly believed to extend for three miles beyond the British coast, did not apply to foreign ships actually on their way to foreign ports.

The verdict roused much controversy, and many legal authorities disagreed with it. Thus, however, the case ended, leaving the mystery of the Franconia's pursuit of the Strathclyde a mystery still. Had Kuhn a grudge against the Strathclyde, or was there someone on board her whom he hated? Many wondered, but no one will ever know.

Harbor Grace Notes

Rev. W. H. Harris, who has been pastor of the Methodist Church here for the last three years, completed his term of service on Sunday last, and has now taken up residence at Carbonear, where he and Mrs. Harris will remain for a couple of years, after which they expect to leave Newfoundland.

During their stay amongst us, Rev. and Mrs. Harris have made many friends who regret their departure, but will wish them many years of health and happiness.

At the close of the service on Sunday evening, Rev. Mr. Harris was presented with an address and purse of gold. Mr. E. Simmons read the address, while Mr. John Trapnell, J.P., I.S.M., (one of the oldest members of the church), made the presentation, on behalf of the congregation.

The Hymn "Blest be the Tie That Binds," was then sung, which brought to a close a time to be remembered by all present.

Below is a copy of the address presented to the reverend gentleman, and his reply:—

Rev. W. H. Harris,
 Pastor of the Methodist Church,
 Harbor Grace.

On the eve of your retirement from active service, we, on behalf of the Congregation, take this opportunity of expressing to you our sincere regret on your approaching departure, and to tender you an expression of high esteem and regard.

Your term as our Pastor has now come to a close, and we find it difficult to express our thanks for the very faithful efforts that you have manifested during the three years that you have ministered to us.

Your untiring zeal has, we feel, placed us in a much healthier condition financially than we could ordinarily have hoped to be in at this time, and we assure you that the Congregation appreciates, to the full, your earnest endeavours to raise it to a higher spiritual level.

Your Congregation of Harbor Grace South and Bristol's Hope also express their appreciation of the faithful ministrations rendered on their behalf, and also their regret at your departure.

We feel that as you recall your term of nearly half a century devoted to the Call of Christ—thirty nine of which you have given to Methodism in Newfoundland—your thoughts will, naturally, revert to the many years spent along our rugged coast, taking in: The Straits of Belle Isle, St. Anthony, Notre Dame Bay, Bonavista Bay, Trinity Bay, and Conception Bay. No doubt you have often been in danger as you traversed the lonely trails and crossed the open bays to fill your many appointments. As a Pioneer Missionary, you have braved the storms of our Northern clime, and through it all, God has wonderfully preserved you.

We especially pray that your daughter, now a Missionary in China, will receive Divine Protection, and that her anticipated return to greet you will soon materialize.

With kindly feelings, which words do not adequately express, we beg you to accept this purse, as a small token of the esteem in which you are held by your Congregation.

We are not wishing you and Mrs. Harris "Good-bye" but "Au Revoir," for we hope to have the pleasure of meeting you many times before you leave Newfoundland.

Signed on behalf of the Congregation:
 Recording Steward.
 E. SIMMONS,
 Secretary-Treasurer.

Harbor Grace,
 July 12th, 1925.

To the Methodist Congregation of Harbor Grace.
 My Dear Fellow Workers.—

It is useless for me to say how I was taken by surprise last Sunday evening, as I listened to your kind words of appreciation as expressed in your Address at the close of my term of ministry among you, and no words of mine can adequately express the sentiments of gratitude which seemed to fill my heart.

I came to minister to you under unique circumstances, your former Pastor being translated to higher service; but I can assure you that my term of three years has been most enjoyable and harmonious. I must readily acknowledge the many imperfections that have marked my services, but you have most patiently and sympathetically borne with them.

I feel sincerely grateful to my Heavenly Father who in His providence has enabled me to execute my ministry of thirty-nine years in this land, most of them spent on most of the hardest fields. I desire to thank you for your co-operation in every department of the work, for your exceeding kindness to Mrs. Harris and myself. We are not going to say good-bye, as we expect to see you often, and that the strong tie of friendship formed between us will still remain.

WILLIAM H. HARRIS.

On Friday evening, July 3rd, the Ladies' Aid met at the Parsonage and presented Mrs. Harris with an address and a purse of gold. Supper was then served by the ladies and a most enjoyable evening spent.

The following is a copy of the Address:—

Dear Mrs. Harris.—

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid, on the eve of your departure from us, wish to express to you, our appreciation of your valuable and willing services rendered in our Aid.

We shall not forget the many pleasant evenings we have had together and the lively interest you have taken in our church activities.

Now, as you and Mr. Harris, after your many years of faithful service, are about to retire from the strenuous work of the church, we trust that you will be long spared to enjoy the reward of the years so well spent in the Master's vineyard.

We ask you to accept this little gift, as a slight token of our love and esteem, and you will take with you our best wishes and prayers, that God's richest blessing may still continue to follow you.

SOPHIA DAVIS,
 Vice-President.

F. BUTT,
 Secretary.

Har. Grace, July 3, 1925.

Mrs. Harris, who was taken quite by surprise, made a fitting reply, thanking the ladies for their kindness, and assuring them that the time spent with the Ladies' Aid of Harbor Grace, would form pleasant memories in the future.

St. Paul's Sunday school picnic which was set to take place on Wednesday had to be postponed owing to the unfavorable weather, and was held the following day at Connell's Farm. Races and the usual games were indulged in. The attendance was large—over one hundred children and scholars being seated at the same time for tea. The weather was ideal, and one and all spent a most pleasant time.

The third game in the Conception Bay Cricket League Series for the Jones' Cup was played between Hr. Grace and Bay Roberts' teams at Bay Roberts on Wednesday, and resulted in a win for the visiting team. After the game Hr. Grace team was entertained to dinner at Mrs. Taylor's and an enjoyable time spent. Short speeches were made by Messrs. A. George, F. C. Archibald, Dr. Barnes, M. Daws, and R. French. The visitors returned home by motor car.

The next game will be between Bay Roberts and Carbonear, to be played at Carbonear on Wednesday next.

Rev. N. St. Noel was a passenger by the s.s. Meigle on Tuesday evening, en route to St. Anthony, where he is stationed for a time. He has the best wishes of his many friends here.

Mr. Roy Yetman, of the Postal Staff, who is on a holiday, has visited St. John's and Grand Falls during his vacation, and returned home on Thursday. He returns to duty again on Monday.

Miss Winnie Noel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Noel, of the South Side, came home by Thursday night's train to spend her vacation with her parents and friends. Miss Noel is stenographer at the Royal Stores, Grand Falls.

Miss May Stevenson, who had been teaching at Garnish, returned home recently to spend her vacation with her mother, Mrs. A. Stevenson.

Salvation Army Annual Congress

Commissioner Sowton Lectures on "Social Regeneration."

Commissioner C. Sowton, of Toronto, arrived by Saturday's express and presided over the Annual Congress of the Salvation Army, and at the same time met by the united forces of the Life Saving Guards and Officers of the Local Corps to whom he expressed appreciation of the splendid reception accorded him. At 10 p.m. at the Citadel, New Gower Street, a Welcome Demonstration was held and very largely attended. Colonel Cloud, Territorial Commander of Newfoundland, officially welcomed the Commissioner, who expressed the great pleasure at being present. Brigadier Taylor, Editor of the War Office, spoke in appreciation of the welcome extended him on his visit here.

Yesterday, at 10.15 a.m., a great service of the united Corps, Bands and Life Saving Guards was held, followed at 11 a.m. by a Holiness Convention at the Citadel when the Commissioner again spoke and gave a public address on the necessity of abstinence.

At 3 p.m. the Music Theatre was filled to capacity with over 1200 Salvationists and friends being present to hear the Commissioner's lecture on "Social Regeneration." In the absence of Hon. J. R. Bennett, Colonial Secretary, who has not yet returned from England, Colonel Cloud presided. On the platform were the Commissioner, Brigadier Taylor, Mrs. Staff Captain Best, of Toronto, Mrs. Col. Cloud, Major and Mrs. Tilley and I. C. Morrison, Esq. The hymn, "O God Our Help in Ages Past," was sung with band accompaniment, prayer offered by Major Tilley, the Scriptures read by Brigadier Taylor, and a hymn played by No. 1 Band, after which Colonel Cloud extended to the Commissioner on behalf of the gathering a hearty welcome. The Excelsior Branch then sang "Lift Up the Army Banner," composed by a missionary in China. Col. Cloud playing a concertina accompaniment and the audience joining in. Col. Cloud then briefly introduced the Commissioner who said it was a great pleasure to him to be here and address such a gathering, which reminded him of four years ago when a similar assembly was held in the same building. He had chosen as his subject Social Regeneration, and as he was not sufficiently conversant with our political and other conditions here, to say if regeneration were needed in this direction, he would deal with the subject only from the standpoint of the Army in which position he would be able to do so.

The Army is now in its Diamond Jubilee year, he said, as it was 50 years since General Booth began the work which had developed into the present world-wide organization. It had always been part of the religion of the founder and Army to help the stricken and destitute but only in late years had the work been established on a proper basis. General Booth was inspired to take up this social work by seeing men, women and children sleeping in the crevices of London Bridge as he was returning in a hansom cab one night from a meeting in the South Side of London. He realized that here was the question of the homeless who had not the few pence necessary to secure the cheapest kind of lodging.

At the first opportunity he called his son Bramwell, who could never succeed him, and said he could never sleep still something had been done to shelter such as those he had seen on the bridge. The son doubted that a task of such magnitude could be accomplished or that the many buildings could be secured. The General's wife was then dying and by her bedside he wrote "Darkest England and the Way Out" borrowing the title from that describing the search of Stanley for Livingstone in Africa. The publication created a great sensation as the General had envisioned a sea of wretchedness engulfing the homeless who sank with hands outstretched in vain, and in the book he outlined his scheme of redemption and deliverance for them. He saw the need of food, shelter and assistance to restore the father to their manhood; also the need of training those who might later go overseas. He reckoned the cost at not less than a million pounds but seeing he could not get that sum asked for £100,000 and the interest on the balance. In a few weeks the amount was subscribed, the colony started and steps taken to train those who might go abroad. All acclaimed the General as the saviour of the poor at first, but soon opposition was raised by those who had plans of their own, or who said such work should be undertaken by the State. The General raised no objection, saying let them go on too and I will do the same. Even clerics were particularly adverse to the General's plan but his work went on and spread to wherever the Army has been established. The scheme was adaptable, with some modifications, to all climates and to-day there are no less than 76 different organizations of the Army for the regeneration of men and women. The Army plan has been imitated by many other organizations but there is no room for all. The underlying principle of all S.A. work is the regeneration of the individual by the Grace of God; not only to improve a man's environment or remove a woman from temptation but to bring about a change of heart and send them forth to live a new life. The Army has no fault to find with other similar schemes and hopes that all will go on but to be successful a big heart, a good head and a strong hand are needed.

The Commissioner referred to the work of the S.A. Hospitals and thanked God for their directors in every land. The Army seeks to adapt its work to every land and Adjt. Smith, a Newfoundlander, who is coming here shortly from India, will be able to tell of the regeneration of the criminal tribes there. This officer has dealt with one of the most criminal tribes which was a thorn in the flesh of the Government in India, and has done so well in reforming them that he has been awarded the Kaiser Hind gold medal. In Toronto no less than 1200 cases who frequented the Courts were handed over last year to the care of the Salvation Army officers. These cases were largely first offenders whom it was not desirable to send to prison. Under the kindness and care shown them they again became worthy citizens. From the North West Mounted Police the Army has received the highest praise for the assistance given prisoners. The Commissioner gave various examples to show that the Army is constantly in touch with all who are in misery and poverty and are thus keeping up the founder's motto of "Go straight for souls, and go for the worst." At Burwash prison a corps was formed, the members of which later went forth to lead useful lives in society. The Army helps all in need without question of religion, stretching out the hand of assistance to aid the fallen to help themselves. Husbands and wives are re-united and thousands of missing relatives located every year as part of the work. Here as well as abroad, the Army is endeavouring to put into operation the principles of the founder and it is a matter of rejoicing that much success is being met and a large measure of regeneration brought about by the Grace of God. In conclusion the Commissioner thanked the audience for the splendid hearing they had given him.

After a hymn had been sung and the offering taken, Mr. L. E. Morris, at the request of Colonel Cloud, spoke briefly. He paid a high tribute to the work of the Army in Newfoundland, being well acquainted with it as he has been in touch with social work for many years. It is not formalty he said, that will save a man, but his heart must be reached. Regeneration stands for a splendid thought and he hoped all would apply this principle in their efforts to reach the hearts of the people. He encouraged the Army to keep up their fight which had brought it to its present position and hoped the Commissioner would be spared many years to continue his efforts with abundant success. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and prayer by Colonel Cloud.

At 7 p.m. a great Salvation Meeting was held in the Majestic Theatre when the Commissioner, Brigadier Taylor, and Mrs. Staff Captain Best gave the straight Salvation talks. The Commissioner took as his text the words, "Son, Remember," and dealt with the importance of remembering certain things in one's life. An appeal for supporters resulted in some twenty approaching the pentent form. During the meeting there was appropriate singing, numbers by the songsters and a duet by Colonel and Mrs. Cloud. As at the lecture, the hall was filled to capacity.

On Thursday at 5 p.m. there will be a Life Saving Guard Demonstration at the Citadel, New Gower Street, to which a hearty welcome is extended to all.

At the Star To-Night

Opening Performance Of The Koppie Kid.

What promises to be the biggest of the biggest is the show that is featured at the popular Star to-night. It is a recognized fact that First National is a picture that is always good. Last at pictures are the pleasure of seeing "Flaming Youth," and if this is the style or type of First National pictures—and it is—then the Management of this Theatre are fully justified in placing them before their patrons in the way they do.

In "The White Moth" we are assured we have the sister picture of "Flaming Youth." The "White Moth" (Barbara La Marr) is the gay dancing idol of Paris and as such she is actually worshipped by the male habitues of the Theatre Francaise, while on the other hand she is hated by the females. Visiting France at the time is a young American millionaire; accompanying him is his mother, younger brother and fiancée. He is no exception to the others—he falls for "The White Moth." She picks him as her favorite. What happens? Well it would be a sin to tell. But to all we say see the picture.

Another big item is the opening performance of the Koppie Kid, a mere child of ten years, who will be seen in acrobatic dancing, and from what can be gathered this little girl is going to make a big hit. In connection with the amusement afforded the patrons of this theatre, is one outstanding feature that cannot be excelled—the catchy and classy music as furnished by Misses Ryan and Morris, and Mr. J. Cronan. The latter is a treat in himself when it comes to putting over the "effects" on the comedies, whilst the ladies leave nothing undone in their selections to please the audience, which show by their attendance their appreciation of the talent of the trio.

Mad Motorist

Yesterday as one motor car was crossing Manuel's Bridge, from the western and another from the eastern side, and were about to pass, a third car, which appeared to be travelling at a great speed, rushed between the two and barely escaped colliding with them. Had the drivers of the approaching cars not applied their brakes instantly, nothing could have averted a calamity. The occupants of the car and its number are known and the mad act of the driver in endangering the lives of the others is hotly resented.

THAT APPARENT FOREVERNESS OF VACATIONS.

Pr aise is the power that be for the foreverness of vacations! As seen in prospect, I mean. Not in retrospect. Alas, no. The vacation seen in retrospect is only as "yesterday when it is passed or a watch in the night." But in prospect, how eternal they seem, those vacations we have been planning for ever since last year's vanished so suddenly and unaccountably into the past!

We know in our minds just how short two weeks, or three, or four (in case we belong to the lucky folks who get that much) really is, but in our hearts we expect this two weeks to be different. We Plan To Spend 48 Hours A Day. For one thing, we always plan so many things to be done in them. . . . We never get a good chance to do much reading during the rest of the year, but with all that spare time our own we expect to do a lot of reading. And that in spite of the fact that we also expect to be outdoors every minute that we aren't engaged in summer's one indoor sport that rivals the outdoors.—I'll let you guess what that is. But that is one of the wonderful things about prospective vacations, they are infinitely elastic. Then again, vacations look long to us because we are so sure that they are going to be different and more eventful than every day life. Wonderful things may happen in them, things that may change the whole current of our lives. And as 50 years of Europe's longer than a cycle of Cathay, so the vacation really is longer than any other two weeks of the year.

Half the Joy of a Feminine Vacation. Women have one big advantage over men in looking forward to their vacations, and that is in their greater excitement over planning their wardrobe. One girl I know who used to take her vacation in August, now much prefers July, because if she took it in August she found she was saving up all her clothes to wear on her vacation and getting no good out of them for the rest of the summer. But there is a lot of fun in that saving and planning and contriving just the same. And, oh, the joy of packing a suitcase or a trunk with just one's best frocks and daintiest underthings and nicest accessories and leaving all the shabby old style, have-to-be-worn-out things behind!

Don't Make Blue Monday Blier. There is, however, one unfortunate result of this sense of foreverness. Because people do not let themselves think of the time they will come back from vacation, because the after vacation weeks seem so unreal and unimportant, people sometimes pile up trouble for themselves. There are two times a year when the loan sharks flourish the most—Christmas and summer vacation time. Both are peak times, when in the excitement of the preparation it is easy to forget that there is going to be a to-morrow. Praise the powers that be that gave us anticipation but ask them also to grant us a little common sense. It won't make us any less happy now and it will make us a lot more happy when the incredible has happened and the vacation has vanished.

Letitia of the Anchor-Donaldson Line from England and the official landing took place at 4 p.m. A tremendous reception was tendered the Field Marshal. On arrival there the great British General was warmly welcomed by many thousands. Montreal will officially receive the Earl and party on the return from Vancouver. An informal dinner was held here, given by the delegates to Capt. David Taylor, O.B.E., of S.S. Letitia, which included many prominent citizens of Montreal. At the conclusion the party bade farewell to the gallant Captain, officers of the ship and other guests. The journey to Ottawa was made by special train, arriving there on Sunday, June 28th. In the afternoon a monster parade took place, the troops forming in the square on Parliament Hill, surrounded by a vast assembly of the citizens of Ottawa, numbering more than 20,000. The Earl was here received by Hon. W. L. McKenzie King, Prime Minister and Ministers of the Cabinet. The Guard of Honour was from the Governor-General's Foot Guards. Illuminated Addresses were presented to Earl Haig from the Federal Government and the City of Ottawa. (to be continued.)

"Icebound"

Mrs. Alice Chapin, mother of Harold Chapin, the brilliant young playwright who was killed in the World War, plays one of the greatest mother roles in "Icebound," the William de Mille production for Paramount which will open a run of 3 nights at the Majestic Theatre to-night.

Synopsis in Brief.

Ben Jordan (Richard Dix) is a wild, handsome young chap dissatisfied with the drab life led on the New England farm. While playing cards and drinking with some neighbor lads in their barn, Ben by accident sets the place afire and disappears to avoid arrest.

He returns some time later on the night his old mother dies. She disapproves all her greedy relatives by leaving her considerable fortune to Jane Crosby (Lois Wilson), with the understanding that Jane is to make a man out of Ben.

Jane offers to put up money to keep Ben out of jail if he will consent to settle down and work the farm for her. Reluctantly he does this. Jane gradually falls in love with him.

Ben, eager for warmth and youthfulness, falls for the vamping of his flapper cousin, Nettie. Jane, broken-hearted, prepares to transfer over the Jordan money to Ben and clear out. But at the last minute he realizes that it is Jane whom he loves.

Richard Dix and Lois Wilson are featured in the principal roles. Among the more prominent in the supporting cast are Vera Reynolds, Ethel Wales, and Edna May Oliver. The last mentioned actress has the same role on the screen as she created in the play on Broadway.

To-Night's Bill at the Nickel

Extraordinary Film And Talented Local Solist.

The Nickel opens the week with an extraordinary bill, one that will appeal to lovers of unusual pictures and also music enthusiasts. The picture is "Lon Chaney's crowning achievement 'He Who Gets Slapped.' The other feature is the appearance of Miss Marjorie Hutchings, L.T.C.M., our own St. John's contralto. All are familiar with the quality of Miss Hutchings' beautiful voice. She will sing each night about 9 o'clock.

"He Who Gets Slapped," is the story of a brilliant scientist, who is deserted by his wife, and whose life work is stolen by his patron and friend. "He," embittered, and seeking forgetfulness, becomes a clown in a French circus. This is the beginning of the story, and the picture carries its audience into the back stage of a European circus, with the story told by clowns, trick riders and other performers of the hippodrome.

The picture was directed by Victor Seastrom, the noted Swedish actor-producer, who is now in America with the Metro-Goldwin-Mayer studios. Seastrom has been hailed by other directors, and by critics, as one of the greatest of directors, and this picture has proved an excellent vehicle for his technique and strong dramatic sense. The story is one of the most tragic and dramatic ever screened, and the locale of the circus provides many colorful settings and much interesting atmosphere.

Lon Chaney, king of character actors and make-up wizards, plays the leading male role, that of the unhappy clown, "He," and it is reported he has made it one of his greatest characteristics. Norman Shearer and John Gilbert play the romantic leads.

Historical Sketch of the Progress of Medicine in Newfoundland

Address by Dr. L. E. Keegan, President of the Newfoundland Medical Society—At the Opening of its Second Annual Convention on Monday, July 13th, 1925.

It gives me much pleasure to welcome the members of the Profession to our annual Medical Convention, and to assure our outport friends that we of the City are delighted to have them again. We sincerely hope your visit will be pleasant as well as profitable. At our last convention the Association lost one of its most active and prominent members. I refer to the late Dr. J. Murphy, of St. John's. His death was particularly sad and grieved us all, especially those who were with him to the last and who witnessed his heroic struggle for life. Cut down in his young manhood at the beginning of a brilliant career, he is mourned by not only those who were dear to him, but by members of his own profession all over the country. The Clinical Branch of the Association has already forwarded resolutions of sympathy.

Today I find myself, in the unfavorable position of having to deliver the Presidential Address and while I know it is the honour and privilege to give with the office, I would much rather perform a laparotomy or amputate a limb.

The greatest difficulty is in selecting a subject for an address of this kind, and as recent progress in Medicine and Surgery in other parts of the world is so well known to you all I have decided to stay within the rugged coastline of Britain's oldest colony and attempt to give you an historical sketch of the progress of medicine in Newfoundland.

Medical progress in the great cities of Europe, America, and Canada, helped by Universities and backed up by money has of course been rapid and I do not wish to record the few facts I have dug up, as to our progress, in the way of comparison or in order to depress you, on the contrary I want to encourage you and point out, that, cut off as we are from the great University centres, and even from each other, without money or philanthropic friends to help us in scientific research work, and up against insurmountable difficulties all the time, the marvel is that any progress has been made at all, and instead of being downhearted I think we should rejoice, that Medicine in Newfoundland is as advanced as it is to-day.

It is to the pioneers who struggled in the dark periods of this country's history, that we must reverently take off our hats, for it is only by dipping into the dusty past, and picking up bits of history here and there, that we can appreciate the great triumph of being able to hold a Medical Convention, here to-day at which the North, South, East and West of Nfld. are represented by highly qualified and efficient practitioners.

To discover the first medical men in Nfld., and when they came here, makes it necessary to go back many years, for as far as one can learn, none accompanied the first English colonists. We learn that Guy sailed from Bristol in May, 1610, in the reign of James 1st, he had with him his brother-in-law and 39 colonists, and after a fine passage out in 25 days, he sighted their new home in the deep Bay de Grave, now Port de Grave, in Conception Bay. The selection for the site of the new colony was the land locked harbour of Cupids, and here Guy built three houses besides wharves, stores, and fishing establishments.

From his letters I conclude there was no medical man with him and one in which he refers to the health of his colonists, is conclusive proof of this, it is written ten months after his arrival—He says: "After ten months, of all the number who wintered here, there are wanting only four, whereof one Thomas Percy, died of thought, having slain a man in Rochester, which was the cause being unknown to me until a day before he died, and one John Morris Taylor, miscarried the 1st of February from a bruise, the third, Marmaduke Whittington, was never properly well after he had smallpox, which he brought out of Bristol, and the fourth, William Stone, having at first only a stiffness in one of his knees, kept his bed for ten weeks and would never stir his body, which lameness, brought him to his end. Of the rest, four or five have been sick, some three months, some four, who are now better than they were. All of them, if they had good stomachs to their victuals, would long since have been recovered."

Had there been a Medical man present no doubt he would have reported on these cases, and the fourth case, Stone, would have been diagnosed a focal infection and would probably be living to-day if his colon had been removed.

William Coulston in a letter written in 1612, states that Nicholas Gure's wife was delivered of a lusty boy on March 27th, but we can only assume that she delivered herself.

In 1625 Lord Baltimore was given a charter from James I., and five years later he established a Colony in Ferryland, he did a good deal of fighting with the French, but there is no mention of a Doctor in any of his letters, and I can only conclude that during the reign of Charles I., and the administration of Cromwell, 1625 to 1660, there was no Medical man in Newfoundland, although the British inhabitants did spread themselves, not only around the eastern coast, but some had gone beyond Bonaville as far as Notre Dame Bay and some had made their residence in Placentia.

In the reign of Charles II. in 1662, a French ship, full of men and women, put into Grand Placentia where she landed a great number of soldiers and passengers, who fortified the harbour with 18 guns. Up to this date no Frenchman had lived in Newfoundland during the winter, and the first resident military of any kind were those who garrisoned Placentia in that year.

The place was strongly fortified, was referred to as the Gibraltar of North America, and although attacked by a powerful English fleet under Commander Williams, and others, Placentia was never captured. It is quite probable that a Doctor accompanied the first contingent to Placentia.

It is certain there was one stationed there a few years after, moreover a small Hospital was erected on the town site of Placentia, the site being near the present post office, and the Hospital was maintained for years. We may therefore conclude that the first Medical man and first Hospital in the Island were both French.

About the beginning of 1703 a permanent garrison was established in St. John's. This garrison was under the command of Major Lloyd, who apparently was a very poor specimen of humanity. He treated his soldiers badly, robbed them of their pay and did many other inhuman things. A petition for his removal was sent to the Lords Commissioner for Trade and Plantation in London, and this petition contains the first reference, I can find, to a British Medical Man, for among the charges against Lloyd, which numbers seventeen, "the third is put down as his barbarity to the Surgeon."

In 1708 St. John's was attacked by the French and I find that Lloyd and the garrison, including the Surgeon were taken prisoners and marched to Placentia. This Army Surgeon was the first British Doctor stationed here, later on when the French vacated and St. John's was re-fortified and soldiers of the regular army were here, there were Army Surgeons with them, moreover any settlers who might be sick, received medical aid from the Doctor of the Ships of War during the codfishing season, and it is likely that Ferryland, Carboneau and Trinity Harbour, where Military were also stationed, had some Army Doctors. In 1762, the second year of George III's reign, there was much fighting here. St. John's, Carboneau and Trinity were captured by the French and recaptured by the English, but towards the end of the Sovereign's reign things improved, and Newfoundland began to arise from the ashes, the old days of tyranny, corruption and violence giving place to the brighter days of civilization and progress. We had our first roads built, there was some attempt at education, Representative Government was allowed, a Court of Justice established, and in this reign we hear of our first Civil Medical Practitioners. The men who practised Medicine in Newfoundland before the year 1800 were—Jonathan Ogden, Francis Bradshaw, Doctor Mayne, Rev. M. Dingle, David Duggan, John McCurdy, and a Doctor called Moore, who was a Jersey man.

The first and most remarkable of these was Jonathan Ogden, who rose from a humble Hospital position in Halifax, N.S., to that of Chief Justice of Newfoundland. He came here in 1784 bearing a letter of introduction from Major General Campbell, the Governor of Nova Scotia; a few years after he was appointed to the Civil Branch of Ordinance, occupying a room at Fort William, as a Surgeon. I find from a letter dated October, 1792, the following:—"Mr. Jonathan Ogden, surgeon, having represented that the room he occupied at Fort William as a surgery, since his appointment to the Civil Branch of Ordinance, has been appropriated to the Clerk of Works, requests permission to build a room to adjoin the end of the quarters he now occupies, at his own expense. This permission was granted by Governor King."

In 1794 Ogden was made a Magistrate at St. John's. In 1798 he was appointed Magistrate for the Island and keeper of records for the district of St. John's, and later on in the same year it is recommended that he be paid a salary for his services.

In 1799 Ogden was appointed by Governor Waldegrave to the office of Naval officer for the whole Island. In 1802 three years after this appointment I find the following communication.

"George the third to our trusty and well beloved Jonathan Ogden, greeting, do by these presents constitute and appoint you to be our chief justice of our Supreme court of Judicature in our Island of Nfld., George Rex, 29th May, 1802.

Shortly after this Ogden's health broke down for I find a letter from Governor Gambier to the Right Hon.

Lord Hobart asking that Ogden be given leave of absence. This was granted but the ship he sailed on was lost with all hands, and thus ended a remarkable man and a remarkable career.

Doctor Francis Bradshaw was justice of the peace at Trepassay in 1793 and afterwards removed to Placentia where he practised Medicine, he also had the responsibility of administering the law, for which he received no remuneration. It is an illustration of the difficulties and hardships these men had to endure, always supposed to work for honour and glory and a word of thanks that might be handed out to them from time to time. For eighteen years Dr. Bradshaw did duty as magistrate without pay and then had the temerity to memorialize the Governor asking for some remuneration. His letter is dated June 1813 and the reply of Governor R. E. Keats is as follows:

Fort Townsend, July 20, 1813.

"I have received your memorial. Though perfectly willing to acknowledge the advantage which the Government and people at large derive from the services of a magistrate, who exercises authority with the same justice and integrity, which I believe you have done, the situation nevertheless is neither without example or totally destitute of those rewards which are peculiarly gratifying to one's feelings and which I doubt not you have often experienced. Though I willingly admit your merit, I cannot acknowledge a parallel in the labours of the magistrate of the populous town and district of St. John's and those of Placentia, and much as I should regret and feel the loss of your services in the Commission of the Peace, I nevertheless cannot entirely approve or consent to recommend to His Majesty's government the memorial.

(Sgd.) R. E. KEATS.

Within a month the same Governor sent Bradshaw the following interesting Placebo:

"I send you by the 'Pheasant' 2 nine pounder guns together with a proportion of powder and ammunition, which I shall be anxious to hear have been mounted, and which I doubt not, the zeal and patriotism of the inhabitants of Placentia, will induce them, to make the best use of, in case the enemy should give them an opportunity. You will please to sign and return the receipt by the 'Pheasant'."

I find no record of Dr. Bradshaw's reply to this document. Bradshaw continued to practice in Placentia until 1825.

The Rev. M. Dingle, Missioner and Doctor worked in Bay Bulls and Ferryland in the years 1794. Here he was also in the capacity of Magistrate without pay, in his case the "higher motive complex" was better developed than in Bradshaw, for apparently he did not memorialize anyone, until he was pensioned. This man had many interesting clipping shows:—

"When in 1796 the French burned Bay Bulls, they took on board their ship Jupiter, Magistrate Dingle, who was also Doctor. Other prisoners were also taken off and brought to St. Pierre, where they were set afloat in boats to find their way home as best they could. Apparently he found his way home but also found that his property was burned and he was penniless. I find that then he petitioned the Governor, Wm. Waldegrave, for remuneration for past services. The Governor, who apparently did not believe in hard cash transactions, wrote to His Grace, the Duke of Portland, the following magnificent letter:

"That Mr. Dingle's character in Newfoundland is that of a man equally honest and unfortunate. He has performed the duties of Magistrate for many years in the Island to the satisfaction of the inhabitants, and lost his whole property while holding that office, when the French invaded, and has some claim for his loss. If your Grace will recommend him to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, if found qualified on the examination for the post of missionary, it would relieve a worthy man from misery, and second the view of the Society."

WM. WALDEGRAVE, 1799.

To His Grace the Duke of Portland. As to David Duggan and John McCurdy both of them were practising at St. John's in 1797, the former is chronicled as acting surgeon to the Royal Nfld. Regiment, I have copies of petitions from both these men asking the Governor for permission to "enclose pieces of ground." Dr. Mayne practised in Bonaville town in the year 1796.

Coming then to the early part of 1800, we find the name of Doctor William Carson, and he figures among the supermen of our profession who unhonoured and unused have passed away.

Born in Kircubrightshire, Scotland, he graduated at the University of Edinburgh, practised in Birmingham for a short time and arrived in this colony in the year 1808. He was a man of great parts, highly intellectual, of tremendous energy, a fearless fighter, and a great medical man. He was not taking the treatment endured by the men of his own profession, who went before him, he intended to dictate policies when necessary, not to blindfold obey, and his outstanding ability and university training placed him far above the quarter deck legislators of that day, who ruled "the country with a rod of iron. Carson was a deep student of the British Constitution, knew that it did not mean the despotic system he saw around him, and he had scarcely settled down as a resident of St. John's before the thunder from his pen was echoed over the Island through the columns of the Newfoundland Sentinel, the Colony's first newspaper.

It was through Carson's efforts that the Feasting Courts were abolished, and a proper system of British Justice brought in. It was through Carson's great ability as a statesman that representative form of Government was secured for Newfoundland.

From various bits of correspondence I have read, Carson appears to have been the prime mover in every kind of reform, and whenever he was jumped on by the local rulers of the day, he appealed over their heads directly to the members of Parliament of the United Kingdom. In one of these appeals, on behalf of the inhabitants of Newfoundland, he says, "The ignorance of that English minister of the Crown, who enquired what kind of trees grew on the banks of Newfoundland, is truly characteristic of that defective information, which is still so apparent in the policy observed towards this settlement." Continuing he says fearlessly, "The inhabitants of Newfoundland know that you do not know them, that they have been distorted and obscured. It is the object of this letter to remove the veil that has concealed them and to expose the evil genius that has hitherto blasted the fortunes of this country."

Around 1810, when Carson was writing this way, the population of Newfoundland was 70,000, yet when the merchants and inhabitants decided to address the Prince Regent on their grievances, Carson was the man selected to send forward their petition with a covering letter of his own, which for its boldness and deep knowledge, stands out as one of the greatest documents written in the history of this country. Touching on the ignorance and prejudice of the Vice-Admirals, who then governed the inhabitants, he says:—"A high-minded Admiral endowed with nearly absolute power, cannot be expected to submit to the painful and humiliating task of learning; to appear ignorant of those high ideals which he is called on to perform, would be far too degrading for so dignified a personage, so enveloped in ignorance, he therefore assumes an impossible character, and the dignity of majesty is degraded in the character of its Representative." Such writing in days when an act of independence might be arraigned as an act of mutiny, illustrates the patriotism and character of this man.

Very shortly after Carson arrived he started an agitation for a hospital in St. John's, and in 1811 a committee was appointed to deal with the matter. The following advertisement appeared in the papers of that year: St. John's, Oct. 14, 1811.

The committee appointed by the Grand Jury for the management of a Hospital for sick persons, intended to be built, take this public manner of requesting the attention of merchants and other masters of servants, and also suppliers of those men, to stop one penny in the pound of each man's wages on a/c of the Hospital, and such monies as may be collected are requested to be paid into the hands of the Treasurer.

(Sgd.) Wm. Carson, M.D., Nathan Parker, Thos. Williams, Nicholas Gill, Alex. Boucher, John Dunscomb, Thos. Meagher, James Melledge, David Tasker, Treasurer.

This petition in 1811, engineered by William Carson, was the first attempt in Newfoundland for the establishment of a civil Hospital, and will be referred to when considering Hospitals later in this address.

When Representative Government replaced the system that Carson fought against, he became representative of St. John's, and was also Speaker of the Assembly. These positions he held until the sub-version of our free constitution by Lord Stanley, after which Carson started the fight for liberty again, but did not live to see the days of Responsible Government. On the evening before he died he sent for the editor of the "Patriot," Robert John Parsons, and asked him to stir up the friends of the people, to recover their rights, and win back by constitutional means, the Great Charter of which they had been so unjustly deprived. From his obituary I take the following:—

Hon. Wm. Carson may be said to be the first public character who ever departed life in Newfoundland, to him in conjunction with a few others, Newfoundlanders owe all they have obtained in political rights. Carson sacrificed many who might have been his friends, and relinquished an easily made fortune, surely such a man should not be consigned to a tomb without some kind of public testimonial to adorn his last resting place, of one whose life was exhausted in the public cause. We do not think that a public monument should be erected to his memory, at the expense of the Colony. It would be a tribute to worth, which the future historians of Terra Nova, would not fail to accord to our credit, as a people, and to which posterity would be an invaluable memento.

Alas, gentlemen, nothing was done, and the only memento I know of, to perpetuate the memory of this great member of our profession was the christening of one of the wards in the General Hospital after his name. It may not yet be too late, through the influence of the members of this Association, to erect in the Hospital grounds a small monument, by which posterity may remember him.

It must not be thought that St. John's was the only spot in the Island where medical enthusiasm was to be found, in the early part of 1800, for while Carson was fighting for the relief of suffering humanity there, the banner of Aesculapius had been unfurled in many of the Outports.

Even before Carson's arrival in the country, Burin is found looking after her sick, under the direction of Stephenson. He was there in 1804 and I find that his commission as Justice of the Peace is dated 1805. Stephenson was an ex-Naval doctor, when he decided to settle in Burin. He brought his family out from England, so he must have been middle-aged at that time. He was an excellent doctor and a very accomplished man, being a great musician. Practising with Stephenson was an Irishman called Row, who was also an ex-Naval Doctor. Row was described as a man of much wit, but as unfair charges are always being hurled at the Irish, you must take this statement cum grano salis. Row's wife had been present when the French burned Bay Bulls, but apparently it did not affect her nerves, for she lived to the ripe age of 96.

These men were succeeded in Burin by the Morans, Frank and James, both Irishmen. Frank spent his whole career at Burin. James practised for some years at Brigus, but returned to Burin as Magistrate in 1864. He died at the age of 73. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin. He is described in an old record as "well beloved and a very charming and cultivated gentleman." Before leaving Brigus he was presented with a very valuable watch, which, after his death, was sent to his brother-in-law, who was an ex-Lord Mayor of London. His brother, Frank, predeceased him by seven years, at the age of 75.
