Life at Cambridge

Pen-and-Ink Sketch of the Famous English University.—The Proposition of Work to Play Depends Entirely on the Temperament of the Undergraduate.

(By Edith Lang)

Life at the University of Cambridge is made up of a delightful mixture of work and play, and, as in every other university, the proportion of work to play depends entirely on the temperament of the individual student.

The students may not register until they are eighteen years old, as the work usually done here in the first year's course is always done in the schools in England, thus relieving the professor of the necessity to teach what is really elementary work to be "at" the university a student must register at one or other of the individual colleges, whose names are so familiar, even on this side of the Atlantic. The biggest are Trinity, Hall, King's, St. John's, Christ's, Pembroke, Caius (pronounced Keys), etc., for men and Newham and Girton for women.

Each of these colleges is residential; it has absolute self-government so far as internal economies go; it has its master, staff of tutors and lecturers, who advise, coach, and give lectures, both to students of their own college and to others who wish to attend, including the women from Newham and Girton. Each college has its own chapel and dining hall, its own athletic grounds, its sporting and other clubs, its own charter, and, however, do not grant degrees. This is done by the "University," which consists of a Chancellor, acting Vice-Chancellor, and Senate, which holds examinations, grants degrees, appoints the university professors, and administers the property and affairs which concern the university as a whole.

QUANTUM TERMS OF RESIDENCE.

Before being admitted to sit the degree examination, all students must have "kept" nine terms of residence, i.e., they must have fulfilled for three years the terms of residence of their own college. These "terms of residence" are some of them, quaint in the extreme. To have "kept a day" in college a student must have been in Cambridge for at least a part of the day and to have slept in his own college or certified lodging. He must also "eat a certain number of dinners in college," as it is called, during each term, that is, he must dine in the college dining hall a certain number of times; he must also attend a certain number of services at the college chapel during each week. These services are held at about 7 a.m. and 5 p.m., and the morning ones are the cause of many amusing sights, as the students are always to be seen hurrying along as the last tinkles of the chapel bells die away, trying to pull on a refractory "gown," or even carrying that over their arm while they struggle into their coat and waistcoat!

All students must wear the cap and gown at all university functions, such as chapels, dinners, lectures, etc., and also whenever they are on the streets after 10 p.m. The gowns are generally in rags, and the "caps" without any points, no one wishing to appear too new, where seniority counts for so much.

"PALEY'S GHOST."

"Freshers," or first-year students, must pass a preliminary examination called the "Little Go," which demands a liberal all-round education including, as it does, Greek and Latin, mathematics, one modern language, an essay on some book, and logic, or a paper on an old-fashioned, out-of-date book called "Paley's Christian Evidences," which no one ever sees, but which everyone "crams" up for the occasion from a chart containing the chief points of the argument; this chart rejoices in the very expressive title of "Paley's Ghost!"

This milestone passed and the necessary terms of residence fulfilled, a student may take his degree examination, for which there are two types of papers set, viz., the papers for the pass or "ordinary" degree, and those for the honors degree or "Tripos." In either case the student must specialize in some one subject, but as he has only this one subject to take for his Tripos, the specialization is, of course, carried much further and the standard demanded very high. Students who passed the mathematical Tripos used to be arranged in order of merit in these classes called, respectively, "Wranglers," "Senior Optimes" and "Junior Optimes," the best man of all being termed the Senior Wrangler. There was such keen competition for this coveted title and for the second, third, etc. Wranglerships that it was thought that specialization and competition had been carried too far and had lost their good points, so the system has been altered; the men are still divided into classes, but the names in those classes are alphabetically arranged.

SPORT ON THE CAM

Much of the sport and innocent fun of Cambridge undergraduate life takes place on the River Cam, that delightfully lazy river which once gave rise to a bet between two learned professors as to whether a snail, or a straw floating on the river would reach a given point first; but slow as it is, and in many places narrow, Cambridge would be much less attractive without it. Passing through the grounds of many of the principal colleges, it adds an indefinable charm to the view of the 'Backs' and in summer it is ever an animated scene as the students in their white trousers and many colored "blazers" often accompanied by girl friends in gay dresses and gayer parasols, lazily paddle along.

CANOEING IS POPULAR AT CAMBRIDGE.

Cambridge is perhaps the one place in England where canoes are as much used as in Canada. In Oxford the usual craft is a punt; there the graceful figures of men or girls, standing in the rear of these punts and propelling them by means of a long pole are a pleasant sight, but one which lacks the utter restfulness and peace of the scene on the Cam. On the river, too, a little below the colleges, take place the Lent and summer races between the college "eight's."

Halifax Exhibition

Though the Provincial Exhibition for this year is a long way off yet things are being gotten into running order for the big show, and Manager Hall is busy at work on details in the way of preliminaries. It is hoped to make this year's exhibition one of the best yet, particularly in the manufactures department. The main building has begun to show signs of wear and tear and considerable repair work will be done about its foundations during the summer. Concrete piers are being set under the pillars supporting the galleries of the building and the sills of the structure are to be replaced immediately. With these repairs made the building will be practically as good as ever.

The new main entrance, at the corner of Windsor and Almon streets, to the grounds is to be ready for use this Fall and will be a big improvement. The entrance building will be removed from its present location on Windsor Street, to the corner and an awning will project out from it overhead to protect patrons from rain while they are at the ticket boxes or waiting for cars.

The contract for repairing the roof of the grand stand, part of which was carried away by one of the gales in the late winter season, has not been awarded but soon will be, and some other repair work about the grounds will be done at the same time.

Manager Hall is going to New York in a few weeks to look up material for his grand stand special attractions programme, but he has decided already on his sensational features— or one of such. It is known as Auto Polo being really polo played in autos, a dare-devil game to be played on the field inside the track. The "Hippodrome Hay Waggon" will likely be another feature and the act will be on the track. The waggon will come down the track and the hay-makers, a group of gymnasts and acrobats, will then do wonderful stunts.

The Weekly Monitor. ESTABLISHED 1873. AND WESTERN ANNAPOLIS SENTINEL. Published Every Wednesday BRIDGETOWN, ANNAPOLIS CO.

The Colleges and Schools of Canada have been pouring out and distributing to their homes and various occupations the young life entrusted to their care during the recent months.

Everyone who bears in mind the good work which has been done in the Institutions at Wolfville, in the training of men for the pulpit and the bar, and in the various professions and callings, and in preparing young women as home-makers and teachers and influential co-workers in the betterment of humanity, will deeply regret the loss and anxiety occasioned by the fire of the last week in the midst of the Closing Exercises.

Dr. Campbell stated that four hundred and twenty-seven names were enrolled on the registry of the Ladies' College, for the year then closing more than two hundred of whom were resident lady students.

A good deal is being said of late about the Montessori system of teaching. The system derives its name from its originator, Miss Maria Montessori, an Italian lady, the first lady graduate of an Italian School of Medicine.

The students unaccountably resented the innovation and endeavored to make her the subject of banter and ridicule. However, she persisted, graduated with honor, and found her first work in the care of defective children.

Another child chooses letters, and is taught to distinguish them, and call them by their names and put them in their order, and spell words with them.

The interest of the child is awakened by this opportunity of choice, and its special intellectual ability is drawn out.
