which we increased our obligations. After observing the close connection that exists and must always exist between the prosperity of every portion of the Dominion and Great Britain herself, and referring to the position of England, he went on : England is unquestionably over-peopled. No remedy is proposed to remove the real cause of distress. The Times the other day recommended young men to go to the colonies for a profitable return for their labor. The Times has considerable truth n its statement, and I believe it embodies he thought in the minds of many men in England at this moment, that largely in emigration the remedy is to be found. If so, is it not a peculiarly fortunate circum stance that England owns THE GREATEST COLONY WITHIN FOURTEEN DAYS SAIL and a country whose greatest want is men? The circumstances are exceedingly propitious, and it is worth while to cons whether the interests of the colony and of the Mother Country may not be found one and the same. I have been told that owing to the change of Government I had better go home. (Laughter.) That is simply out of the question. It is true we believed we possessed the sympathy of the late Government, but am I to suppose that a new Gov. ernment has been elected distinctly for the purpose of ameliorating the condition of the poorer classes in England, it will shrink from what would be to the true interest of the colony I represent? I believe ost thoroughly the gentlemen who now

They say, "Let them go." Is not that a reproach? To conclude in one word : Let it be remembered that the whole world never can again offer an oppor-tunity of creating such an Empire as opporthe North-Western territory and the Pacific Railway, in opening up a great tract of country. Only the other day I saw in the newspapers statements that the policy of Encland had been ruinous in saw in the newspapers statements that the policy of England had been ruinous in giving up control of the Crown Lands in the colonies. I wonder what the support-ers of the policy of England would have said if they had been told twelve years ago that in order to open up the North-West, $5,000,000 were necessary. Why the country would have remained unde-veloped to this hour. Only by leaving the matter toCanadathis territory has been taken out of the hands of the Hudson's Bay Company and eivilization introduced

The Canada Club will forgive me, if I speak with some little warmth on the subject and if I turn rather to what we have done. In regard to the expenditure of the sum we have expended on the North-West country, we have as I have said, taken it from the hands of its old proprietors in the North-West, and made law and order from the hands of its old proprietors in the North-West, and made law and order to prevail from one end to the other. We have made a peaceful arrangement. Every Indian tribe throughout the whole vast country has got all its claims to land settled in the most satisfactory manner. We have introduced municipal institu-tions, we have given the people schools and free education. In short we have provided for people everything requisite to

Comparing our fish trade for twelve years, under the Treaty of 1854, it is found that while the average yearly bulk was $3,960,375, the relative proportion of ex-ports to the United States was 35 per cent., and 65 per cent. to other countries. There is, therefore, a comparative de-crease under the Washington Treaty, which may be accounted for in part by be designated in the race. Frenchy will crease under the Washington Treaty, which may be accounted for in part by the transfer of attention to other markets, arrive at the course on Monday, as well the transfer of attention to other markets, where an enforced experiment has become an established advantage. Such also was the case in respect of the lobster business, in which the export of canned lobsters to European markets increased between 1874 and 1879 from about $300,000 worth to nearly a million of dollars worth, without materially decreasing the annual export of the United States, notwithstanding the notorious lobster can tax. This cutte dodge was resorted to in 1875 for the purity pose of giving to United States citizens also James H. Riley, of Saratoga, both of there will be no difficulty in regard to "drifting." Now, all this is very childish, and the Carleton fishermen will, no doubt, soon begin to understand that the whole thing was got up to promote a "hum" in favor of Sir Leonard. The case in a nut-shell is, that Sir Leonard's Govern-ment passed an order to rob them of a privilege they had always enjoyed, in party of forty Torontonians, who are warm admirers of their townsman, and they will reach here the first of the week. are wild and picturesque. Mr. L. W. Winchester, of the National Express Company first visited the region about six years ago, and as he is ardently devoted to the sport of fishings found it a most favored and enjoyable place. Since then he has visited it almost every Summer and each year has induced some of his friends to accompany him. A few weeks since it was learned that the Fraser place could be purchased for about $30,000 and the subject being talked of among some of the gentlemen who knew what a paradise of sport it was, the amount of the purchase-money was subscribed in 10 nutes. Since then bed-linen, table cutlery, china, carpets, and other articles 20 of furniture have been bought, a staff of cooks and servants has been employed and sent up, and the club-house is now fairly opened and partly occupied. At first it was designed to limit the club to about 30 members, but there were so many applicants that the number was increased to 40, and no extension will be made beyond that figure. Among the best known of the gentlemen who are in the association are William K. Vanderbilt, William R. Garrison, L. W. Winchester, William E. Dodge, Jr., Robert C. Living-ston, Franklin Lawrence, Oliver K. King, Roland Redmond, Charles E. Fearing, Gen. Chester, A. Arthur, Johnston Living-stone, PhilipSchuyler, the Count d'Haute-William E. Dodge, Jr., Robert C. Livingstone, Philip Schuyler, the Count d' Hauteville, M. W. Cooper, and John L. Cadwallader. An association was formed, and Mr. Winchester, was chosen Presi dent. Mr. Lawrence Vice-President. Mr. King Secretary and Treasurer, and Messrs. Cooper, Redmond, Cadwallader, and Fearing were constituted an Executive Committee. By the rules of the club each member is allowed to invite not more than one male guest at a time, and is restricted to the use of one fishing-rod at a time, but they are free to take their families and ady friends to the club. An application has been made to the Provincial Government of Quebec for a charter.

The grounds lie on the forty-eighth parallel of latitude, or, say 500 miles north of New York. It is the intention of the club to use their station not merely as a Summer resort, but also as a Winter camp, from which they will indulge in mose, caribou, and possibly bear hunts. The grounds are reached by going to Montreal or Quebec, thence taking the Grand Trunk Railway to the depot, which, as before stated, is within a hundred yards of the club-house; or a pleasant voyage may be made by a yacht along the Newfoundiand coast, into the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Chaleur to Campbellton. Elder, Esq., has again a county team match; and Lt. Col. Maunsell, D. A. G., offers a cup for young shots. There are ten regular matches, but added to these are the grand aggregate (for the 17 making the highest aggregates in the meeting), the Governor General's use of binoculars will be permitted. medals and the special aggregate. In the latter the main feature is Major Parks' prize. Then there is another incentive to careful shooting during the continuance of the competition-a place among the 15 to be provided with $300 to defray their expenses to Wimbledon, and a probability of passes to the men (if the arrangement of last year is continued) who compose the number. The competition is to begin on Tuesday, August 24th, at 9 a.m., and will be continued on the following days at 8 o'clock. The prize list and rules and conditions are annexed :-

postman's knock as she sat down to her solitary breakfast in her prim little dining-room on the first of April, 18-; and her little servant brought the missive into the room as she poured out her first cup of coffee. It was a handsome envelope with an elegant monogram upon it- a monogram Miss Cameron did not know, and it looked like a gentleman's handwriting, she said to herself, with a little vonder, for her correspondents were all ladies There was a time when Miss Cameron had received billet-doux, and even yet she was handsome ; but in a village where single women abound they are set aside as old maids as soon as the tongues of their rivals can effect the operation, and Margaret Cameron had made no resistance. She was very well off, living in her own house on a good come; and she was a little afraid of that sort of impecunious man that offers itself to every woman with money until it finds a victim.

teens, with a young soldier who died on the battle-field. Two other men had been very much in love with her. Since then she had had offers that were rather a trouble than a triumph. Heavy, solemn widowers, who wanted housekeepers ; bachelors of the prudent sort. She regretted no one but the dead soldier, and even him only mildly after all those years ; and as we began to say letters from gentlemen were so rare that this one surprised her. She opened it carefully, drawing from its decorated envelope a sheet of paper that was really elegant, and began to read as follows :--- read as follows:--CROSS HOUSE, March 20th. MY DEAR MADAM: Do you believe in love at first sight' I confess I do, though I have lived on earth for fifty years with-out experiencing it until to-day. To-day, my dear lady, I met you. I followed you for a long distance (pardon the liberty which I confess), and I must say that you inspired me with the tenderest emotions-emotions, however, I beg to assure you, as respectful as they were ardent. In a word, I desire to offer you my addresses. I sm a bachelor, a man of good social position and ample means. You can discover my character by inquiring of my neighbors, my friends, and our clergyman-for we at-tend the same church. May I not have the privilege of calling upon you? A re-ply will be esteemed not only a favor but a condescension.
