Brighten up!

Sherwin-Williams Paints and Varnishes "The Real Brighten Up Stuff"

Spring brings a desire to brighten up things about the house, both inside and out. This is a wearisome task unless paint and varnish be used, and an uncertain task unless you use the best. The Sherwin-Williams Co. make a finish for every surface in your house—a piano or a chair—a floor or a picture frame. A little time and money spent this Spring on "Brighten Up" stuff will greatly lessen your work and add very much to the appearance of your house.

Arraigned the Saloon

Editor Greetings: Please print the following and oblige: At the state Republican convention in Indianapolis, April 2, Gov. J. Frank Hanly called his speech with this masterly arraignment of the saloon:

"Personally, I have seen so much of the evils of the liquor traffic in the last four years, so much of its economic waste so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heartache, that I have come to regard the business as one that must be held and controlled by strong and effective laws. I bear no malice toward those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic. I hate its every phase. I hate it for its intolerance. I hate it for its hypocrisy. I hate it for its cant and false pretense. I hate it for its commercialism. I hate it for its greed and avarice. I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price.

"I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate it for its corrupting influence in civil affairs. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country, for the cowardly makes a public man. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compact of state constitutions.

"I hate it for the lead it straps to labor's back, for the palmed hands it gives to toil, for its wounds to genius, for the tragedies of its might-have-beens. I hate it for the human wrecks it has cast upon the earth. I hate it for the almshouses it peoples, for the prisons it fills, for the insanity it begets, for its countless graves in potters' fields.

A GIRL'S LETTER

Miss Rose Hurst, 233 Harris Street, Adelaide, Wis., Writes Something of Interest to All Women.

Read What She Says: I WANT to say a word for Persana for systemic catarrh and trust others who read this may try it and receive the same good from it that I did. I had been ailing for a long time and nothing seemed to do me any good, although I tried many doctors and many medicines. I had become so bad that there was no pleasure in living. I was finally asked by a friend to try Persana, which I did, with many mingling. What was my delight, after taking the first bottle, to see a great change for the better and I kept on improving until completely recovered. I now feel like a new woman. It has done wonders for me and I gladly recommend it to others. -Rose Hurst. No other woman can fail to be interested in the above testimonial. Miss Hurst was persuaded by a friend to try it, and she is now perfectly well like another woman. Such is a brief.

blight, for its moral degradation. I hate it for the crimes it has committed. I hate it for the homes it has destroyed. I hate it for the hearts it has broken. I hate it for the malice it has planted in the hearts of men—for its poison, for its bitterness—for the Dead Sea fruit with which it starves their souls. "I hate it for the grief it causes womanhood—the searing tears, the hopes deferred, the strangled aspirations its burden of want and care. "I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged, the infirm and the helpless, for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children, for its monstrous injustice to blameless little ones. "I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression. "I hate it as Abraham Lincoln hated slavery. And as he sometimes saw in phophetic vision the end of slavery and the coming of the time when the sun should shine and the rain should fall upon no slave in all the republic, so I sometimes seem to see the end of this unholy traffic, the coming of the time when, if it does not wholly cease to be, it shall find no safe habitation anywhere beneath Glory's stainless stars.

"I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate it for its corrupting influence in civil affairs. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country, for the cowardly makes a public man. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compact of state constitutions.

Baker in Shadow of the Gallows Warns Boys

New York, April 27.—In the shadow of the scaffold young James A. Baker, now in the Tombs prison, sends to all other young men a message of warning against evil companions and at the same time makes a strong plea for the "first offender." Baker barely twenty-three years old is awaiting extradition to West Virginia to answer to a charge of murdering a post office station agent, after having looted more than thirty post office railway stations in the preceding two or three months.

At the age of fifteen Baker went to South Africa, where he served creditably with the Colonial Light Horse through the Boer war. There he learned to gamble, and won $4,000 in two years. He reached England soon after with $5,000 in his pocket. He got a position in the War Intelligence Office and rose. "I was sent to America on a furlough," he wrote. "I met the one-time sweet heart, I married her. I soon discovered that she was not worthy of my love through a letter she dropped. "I worked my way east with tramps, hoboes and yeggmen, but I will not list the crimes in which I engaged. Then the postmaster at Carlington, W. Va., was killed and I was charged. I eluded detectives for some time, but at last was caught in the post office here. "Now I will take what is coming to me like a man. The girl who won my love caused my first step away from legal paths. This woman sent me to bad companions just when I was resolved to live a blameless life for her. All this embittered me until I am now where I am. To all young men I would say: "Stick to your mother, boys. Keep away from the bunch down at the corner. Be honest with yourself. Never do anything you wouldn't want your mother to know. Thank God! My own mother doesn't know about me now!"

"I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate it for its corrupting influence in civil affairs. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country, for the cowardly makes a public man. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compact of state constitutions.

The New Road Act

The act which will take the place of the present Highway Act will, it is understood, provide for the appointment of a Board for each parish composed of the two county councillors for that parish and one member to be appointed by the Government. It will be the duty of this board to divide each parish into districts and to appoint a surveyor to take charge of each. The board will also have power to decide what amount of taxes will be assessed each year for the parish, the maximum rate being fixed by law.

The Board will have control of the monies raised by taxes and the monies appropriated each year by the Government for the parish roads and will make estimates at the commencement of each season of the expenditures which will be necessary in the districts of their parish. All accounts before being paid will have to be submitted to and approved by the Auditor General.

The payment of taxes in cash or by statute labor will be optional. It is understood also that the idea of appointing an official whose special duty it will be to inspect the roads throughout the province and to instruct the people regarding the proper methods of roadmaking is also receiving the attention of the Government.

Bloodthirsty Sect in Northwest

Winnipeg, April 16.—Nine members of a peculiar religious sect known as Dreamers were placed on trial at Medicine Hat, Alberta, to day charged with conspiring to burn the premises of John Lehr of Josephburg district. The sensational evidence was given by Michael Brest. He said he had been a dreamer, but severed his connection with the organization when members began to talk of burning and killings. He alleged that Jacob Merkel, Sr., and Hauffman, of Dakota, were heads of the order. Merkel was the "Sun" and Hauffman "Moon."

A Dreamer had to carry out purpose of dream as instructed. John Lehr's name had come up at the meeting, and it was agreed to burn him out. Corporal Barchel, N. W. M. P. was to be killed at the first opportunity. It had been arranged that Michael Gill was to be shot through a window, and Palais was to be killed with an axe while working in the fields. He said the Dreamers believed in killing everyone who did not believe in them.

Business Outlook in Canada

Leading Canadian business men, whose opinions have been published recently, say that business all over the country is improving. There are many indications that the recent industrial and commercial depression will soon be a thing of the past. With a favorable spring and easier money trade is expected to soon resume its normal activity. It is estimated that over ninety million dollars will come into Canada during the current year from outside sources, which will be used for building up Canadian enterprises. Settlers are pouring into the country to begin farming operations on vacant lands. These and other conditions will contribute to the general prosperity of the country. Recent financial conditions, it will be noted, have been world-wide, and have no doubt, been less severe in Canada than in other countries.

Wet and Dry

The impartial observer must admit that the outcome of Tuesday's elections in several States of the Middle West is an unequivocal triumph for the Anti-Saloon Leagues. In Michigan ten more Counties have voted to suppress all saloons, and, as elections were held in only fourteen Counties, the ratio of dry to wet is ominous. In Colorado, a State dotted with mining camps and containing many adventures, nineteen towns out of thirty-five voted to suppress saloons. But the result in Illinois was by far the most significant. There nearly fifteen hundred saloons were wiped out by the ballots, and thirty-one Counties are now arid. Nebraska shows similar returns. In each of these commonwealths the reformers have been victorious in rural districts and almost uniformly defeated in the larger cities.

The causes of this varying success lie more deeply than the liquor reformers fancy. In explaining their repeated defeats in populous towns the enemies of the saloon usually have recourse to the theory that the cities are hotbeds of crime and corruption, and hence more easily controlled by the liquor interests. But the fundamental weakness of the country saloon lies, first, in its character and second, in the publicity which every casual or other effect of drinking obtains. There are ten unobnoxious saloons in every city to one in a rural district of equal population, and an obvious reason for this is that American customs and traditions are such that no rural saloon has ever been able to become a quiet family meeting place.

Again, the isolation of a country bar often invites recklessness and dissipation whereas the mere presence of a large population exercises, in various ways a steady restraint.—New York Tribune.

The Deadly Cigarette

The opponent of the cigarette should secure the reproduce in every way the experience of the recruiting officers on the gunboat Wasp, at Newburg. They have not been able to secure recruits because the young men who applied were not fit to make sailors of. Of the first one hundred applicants, only six were accepted. Of the other ninety-four, almost every one had both a weak heart and flat feet—although if there is any connection between these two disabilities the surgeons have not made it plain. Out of another batch of twenty young men, nineteen were rejected because of weak hearts caused by cigarette smoking.—Brooklyn Eagle.

EASTER CANTATA AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

The Easter cantata in the Baptist church Tuesday evening was a decided success. The large audience listened with rapt attention to the solos, duets, trios and choruses which told the Easter story, first of triumph, second of pathos and third the inspiring joyous music of the "Resurrection." Interspersed through the program were several readings by Miss Mary Johnston which were beautifully given adding much to the effect. The last number was the "Benediction" finely rendered by the choir. May entertainments of such a high order be frequently given in this town thus aiding the churches spiritually morally and financially. The following is the program:—

GRANITE WORKERS Strike is Ended

Three Years' Agreement with Manufacturers Signed—Loss $1,500,000

Barre, Vt., April 24.—The strike of granite workers in Barre, Montpelier and neighboring towns, which has kept 5000 men out of work for eight weeks, was settled tonight, when agreements were signed with the manufacturers' committee. All agreements are for three years. The contract with the lumpers, boxers and derrickmen provides for an eight-hour day, with weekly pay a 27.7-8 cents an hour and time and a quarter for overtime. The men of this department will go to work tomorrow morning, so that everything will be in readiness for general resumption of activity in the quarries Monday.

At the Bottom

(From the Dunfer Advertiser.) An Irishman who had just united with the Catholic Church in a small town was careless enough to let the priest catch him coming out of a saloon with a jug under his arm. The priest waited for him to come by, and said: "Pat, what is it you have in that jug?" "Whiskey, sor," answered Pat. "Whom does it belong to?" asked the good man. "To me and brother Moike, sor." "Well say, Pat, pour yours out and be a good man." "I can't, sor: mine's on the bottom," answered Pat.

Lilies of Easter

The big white lily, grown in profusion in Bermuda and elsewhere to meet the annual demand for floral symbols of Easter in New York and its neighborhood, is not essentially an Easter flower, and its recent association with the commemoration of the Resurrection has no historical significance. White lilies, to be sure, figure in some of the early religious portraiture. The little white lily of the woods, a flower of early summer, has long been associated by the poets including Shakespeare, Keats and Tennyson with modesty and purity. But the big Bermuda lily is not a symbol of modesty and has inspired no poet. Apart from its religious significance, Easter is the spring festival, and the real flowers of early spring, the tulip, the daffodil, the wild arbutus, are its more appropriate symbols. We derive our name for it from Ostara, the Saxon goddess of the East and the dawn. In Latin countries they cling to variants of the Aramis "pesach" (passover) as pascua pasqua, paques. If there is such a flower as "the resurrection lily," it must be the small purple lily of Palestine.

When the lily is mentioned in other seasons, we never think of Easter. "Consider the lilies of the field," Solomon, in all his glory, was not so arrayed. Flowers gorgeous in color are brought to mind. To paint them cries Salisbury, in "King John," were "wasteful and ridiculous excess." The fleur-de-lys of France is blue. The tiger lily, the panther lily, the red lily are as common in botany, if not in Bermuda and the Easter markets, as the big white lily.

All the spring flowers are, fitly symbols of the Resurrection, the renewal of life after the killing frosts, and commerce has made the Bermuda lily a spring flower. There are sweeter flowers and lovelier. The lately developed Easter lily resembles somewhat the blossom of the despised jimson weed, though it seems not nearly so beautiful to the artist's eye.

Unhappy Marriages

The universal expectation of married people is that their married lives will always be happy ones. Deluded dreamers! They imagine that they are different from other people, and that when they enter the portal of matrimony, love, peace and prosperity will ever be their attendants. Such ones had better by far consider themselves the same as others, but form iron resolutions that will keep them from the dangerous coasts upon which so many have been wrecked and ruined. Unhappy marriages depend upon many causes. Previous to marriage, many try to appear more intellectual, more amiable, or more accommodating than they really are. Depend upon it, that love brought into existence by a moonlight stroll strengthened by deceit and fashionable displays, and finally consummated through the influence of intriguing friends, will fade in after life almost as fast as the flowers which compose the bridal wreath.

That languid, lifeless feeling that comes with spring and early summer, can be quickly changed to a feeling of buoyancy and energy by the judicious use of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is a genuine tonic to tired, rundown nerves, and but a few doses is needed to satisfy the user that Dr. Shoop's restorative is actually reaching that tired spot. The indoor life of winter nearly always leads to sluggish bowels and to sluggish circulation in general. The customary lack of exercise and outdoor air ties up the liver, stagnates the kidneys, and oft-times weakens the heart's action. Use Dr. Shoop's Restorative a few weeks and all will be changed. A few days test will tell you that you are using the right remedy. You will easily and surely note the change from day to day. Sold by All Dealers.

Mother Hurled Babe Into Sea

New York, April 16.—An extraordinary tale of the burial at sea of a child which may have been alive when thrown overboard, was told by the officers of the steamer Statendam when that steamer arrived today from Rotterdam. The child is said to have been thrown overboard by its own mother, Mrs. Bertha Lzybik of Holland. She was coming to this country with two children, the youngest of which, Elsa, was about a year old. On the way over the child was taken ill with convulsions during a gale, and in about an hour was apparently dead. The other passengers of the steamer objected to the presence of the body on board and informed the mother that unless the child was thrown overboard, a storm would overwhelm the steamer. About midnight the body of the child was thrown into the sea.

Officers of the steamer soon discovered what had happened and the ship's surgeon who made enquiries is said to have expressed the fear that the child was merely in a comatose condition and might have revived under medical treatment. Mrs. Lzybik was taken to Ellis Island.

Drink Sour Milk Live to be 120

Chicago, Samuel Fallows, Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church and founder of Christian Psychology, a combination of faith cure and medicine—now in his seventy-third year, believes that men ought to be in their prime at eighty and live to be 120 years old. Here is the explanation he gave last night: Drink sour milk or pure buttermilk two or three times a day. Avoid strenuous living. Go to bed early and get up with the rising sun. Take plenty of exercise of a kind not associated with your actual employment. Obey rigidly the laws of hygiene. Keep a clear conscience. Love God and be square with your fellow-man.

Drink some more sour milk.

The prelate said: "I am indebted for my material to three sources:

"1 The Bible.

"2 A newly published book by Prof. Elie Metchnikoff, a French scientist.

"3 Science in general.

"Metchnikoff, one of the professors in the Pasteur Institute in Paris, is the greatest exponent in the world of the theories of Darwin. It is his business to hunt up diseases and their remedies. In a new book Metchnikoff points out that the reason men do not live to a great age is because under modern conditions the arteries harden with advancing age, due to deposits of calcareous substances.

"He has discovered that the antidote for this condition is sour milk. The sheaths of the arteries are softened by the milk. The principle, he says, is as sound as the virus theory in hydrophobia and antitoxin and vaccination for other ailments.

"Metchnikoff declares that sour milk or pure buttermilk should be drunk two or three times a day.

"He declares that fifty years would be added to the lives of aged persons if they do so. Now in the Old Testament, just after the flood, the prophet of God said: And the days of man are 120 years.

"It was centuries later that the psalmist said: 'The days of man are three score and ten years.'

Now, as to the scientific theory. Research has proved that the multiple of adolescence in animals is six. That is, they ordinarily live six times the length of their infancy. Man reaches maturity at twenty years. Multiplying that by six gives 120 years, the natural age of man, according to the present standard and length of life.

"This is not natural, and the reason is that man does not live naturally and does not take the proper precautions until too late."

"The rules of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are: Late hours, extravagance, worry, intemperance, suppression of virtues and expansion of bad habits.

Influence of Lady Friends

It is better for any man to pass an evening, once or twice a week, in a lady's drawing room, even though the conversation is slow, and you know the daughter's speech by heart, than in a club, hotel or pit of a theatre. All amusements of youth to which virtuous women are not admitted, rely on it, are deleterious in their nature. All men who avoid female society have dull perceptions, and are stupid or have gross tastes and revolt against what is pure. Your club swaggers, who are sucking billiard cues all night, call female society insipid. Poetry is uninspiring to a yokel; beauty has no charms for a blind man; music does not please a boor; a beast who does not know one tune from another; but as a true epicure is hardly ever tired of water, sauce and brown bread and butter, we protest we can sit for a long evening talking to a kindly woman about her girl Jane or her boy Frank, and enjoy the evening's entertainment. One of the great benefits a man may derive from woman's society, is, that he is bound to be respectful to her. The habit is of great good, depend upon it. Our education makes us the most eminently selfish men in the world. We fight for ourselves, we yawn for ourselves, we light our pipe and say we won't go out—we prefer ourselves and our ease; and the greatest benefit that comes to a man from a woman's society is, that he has to think of somebody to whom he is bound to be constantly attentive and respectful.

The Art of Choosing a Wife

Should a man marry a silly, an intelligent, a literary or a society woman? In choosing a wife for perfect marital felicity an undue amount of gray matter is considered a fly in the ointment. By a public vote the chances would be against the literary woman who wrote books. She would be considered a gas bleu. She would be led firmly but gently out of the arena. She would receive no votes.

The silly woman would receive a goodly share, but she must be pretty. Those who would have voted for her would say that they did not desire an idiot but, on the contrary, a woman only slightly foolish—not too much so. She would be sufficiently light and feathery to laugh and be merry, quite tractable, and would know just enough to stay at home and take care of the house. The intelligent woman—that is, of normal ability—would get a large number of votes.

The society girl would get none. The judgment of those who knew nothing of her would be that she flies by night and sleeps by day—like a bat—waking up only between times to order a new gown.

It matters very little in choosing a wife whether she is a society woman, a literary woman or a hottentot, if only she is of his own temperament; if there is a complete melody of heart taste and sympathies.

Every one knows that opposite types seek and love each other. The blonde attracts the dark and vice versa. But there are other occult and mysterious sympathies when it is not a case of a combination of opposites.

Beware of the mating of the bird and the fish. The court will grant a divorce for incompatibility of temper, but for incompatibility of temperament there is no redress.

She is radiant with the innocent joy of living, loves sunshine, society and friends. He is morose, jealous and suspicious. She is high strung and sensitive. He is cold and merciless. Will the bird or the fish survive?

A man should choose a woman of his own sympathies so that the music may keep perfect time. He is proud, ambitious, generous and desires to entertain. She insists upon dressing in calico, is parsimonious and retiring. He may lead a tranquil life, but the chances are that he will lead it somewhere else.

He has a prolonged thirst and loves to treat his friends as they drop in. She belongs to the W. C. T. U. and keeps tabs on the "little brown jug." Can you see their finish?

A man with aspirations would be likely to find his affinity in the social world. She will know how to cultivate and entertain those who are most useful to him; how to spend his money judiciously because she has always had money; prove faithful because she has seen many fascinating men and has chosen him, and will settle down because she is surfeited with pleasure.

But a man should not fly higher than his own roost or he is apt to get winged. If he desires a mate for domestic service, a cook or a housemaid, he should not seek her in the drawing room, but in the laboring class. If she has labored too hard, however, he may find her too frail to participate in domestic matters after marriage.

The ideal wife for a man of all degrees is the affinity who is in sympathy with his occupation and all that concerns him, who submerges her life in his, gives inspiration when things go right and courage and life when things go wrong.

Before taking a wife a man might take a bird's-eye view of his future mother-in-law. There are many good mothers-in-law, but the poets sing of others.

The Home Life

In the homelife never forget that the children have social rights, and the chief among these is the right to laugh when they are happy, to cry when they are unhappy, and to make a noise. A healthy child is always active. It must jump and scream, fall down, cry when it gets a hurt, and jump up only to repeat the same thing. But to keep it still means unhappiness, and nearly, if not quite death. Let them be gay. This is their element. We always class children, birds and flowers together. And why? Because they should be equally beautiful, innocent and happy. We should never rob childhood of its ideal loveliness. Even old people should be gay, and happy, and good.

too good to overcloud the children's horizon with angry eyes and lowering brows, nor turn their merriment to discord by continual fault-finding. Allow them all the freedom consistent with absolute safety. Let them play and be happy, but teach them self-control. God's estimate of self-control is this: He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his own spirit, than he that taketh a city." Condemn your children only when they are really wrong, and then as gently as possible but be sure to commend them when they do right. A little praise with a child goes a long way. A child may be very provoking, but not wilfully bad. Attributing bad motives to a thoughtless child has ruined many a little life. Just blame less and praise more, and we shall have better children. Especially as most of their faults are copied from their parents, we should exercise the strictest charity, for verily "Charity doth cover a multitude of sins."

Spring

With tangled hair and tear-washed face
She came one dreary wind-swept night,
Devoid of every gentle grace,
Her trembling limbs betrayed her flight.

"May I come in?" she pleaded sore,
And rest my soiled and weary feet,
Stern winter all my garments tore
And covered me with mud and sleet.

We brought the tired wanderer in
And bathed her wounds and bade her rest,
And left her sleeping through the night,
Our sweet-faced but disheveled guest.

But in the morning when we rose
We saw a being wondrous bright,
With face pure as an angel's face,
Her robe shone with celestial light.

And turning with a gracious smile,
The sweetest, daintiest, winsome thing,
That won our hearts forever more,
She softly whispered, "I am Spring."
—Emma Connor.

The Last Man Shaved

There were five of us hunting and fishing in the Queensland bush when one rainy day a stranger appeared. He said he was a tramp barber, and as none of us had been shaved for a fortnight we gave him half a day's work.

About four hours after he had left us a band of six men rode up, and the leader enquired if we had seen a tall roughly dressed man pass that way. We told him of the barber, and he looked from man to man and exclaimed:

"Good gracious, but you are all freshly shaved!"

"Yes, we gave the barber a job." "And he shaved each one of you?" "He did, and did it well."

"Boys, do you hear that?" shouted the man as he turned to his companions.

"What of it?" asked one of our party.

"Why, he went insane yesterday and cut a man's throat in his barber's chair over at Unadilla, and we're after him to put him in an asylum."

They rode away at a gallop and next morning returned to our camp with the man who had been captured after a hard fight and was tied to his horse. He seemed to remember us when he was given a drink of water, and as he handed the cup back he quietly observed:

"I say, gentlemen, please excuse me. I meant to finish off the last man who got shaved, but I got it thinking of something else, and it slipped my mind."

When either of the parties marry for money.

When the lord of creation pays more for cigars that his better half does for hosiery, boots and bonnets.

When one of the parties engages in a business that is not approved by the other.

When both parties persist in argument over a subject upon which they never have and never can think alike.

When neither husband nor wife takes a vacation.

When the vacations are taken by one side of the house only.

When a man attempts to tell his wife what style of bonnet she must wear.

When a man's Christmas presents to his wife consist of bootjack's, shirts, and gloves for himself.

When the watchword is: "Each for himself."

When dinner is not ready at dinner time.

When "he" snores his loudest while "she" kindles the fire.

THE GRANTEE TOWN GREETINGS

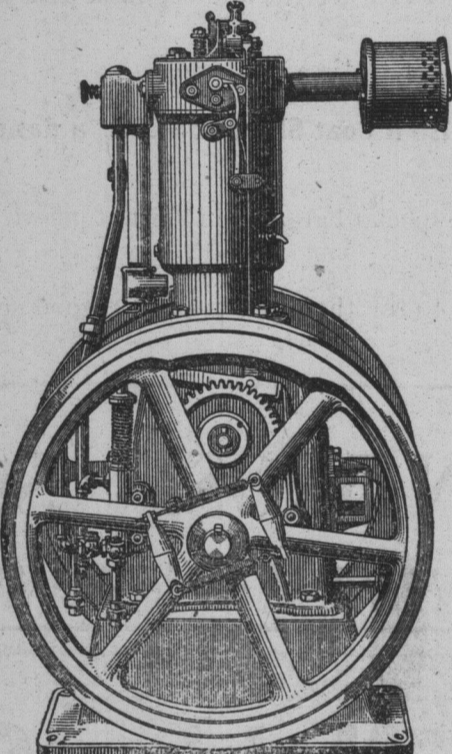

BIG BUTTER CONTEST National Buttermakers' Association Won as Usual by Users of DE LAVAL Cream Separators

On the 11th, 12th and 13th there was held at Minneapolis, Minn., the big annual butter scoring contest of the National Buttermakers' Association. 504 of the best buttermakers in the United States competed in this contest, which makes the results especially interesting and important. The first prize was won by J. C. Post, Hector, Minn., with a score of 98 p.c.; the second prize by E. O. Blomquist, Centre City, Minn., with a score of 97.2 p.c., and the third prize by G. P. Sauer, East Troy, Wis., with a score of 97 p.c. All three of these victorious buttermakers, of course, use De Laval cream separators. This contest, as has every similar contest held within the past sixteen years, shows a complete victory for butter made from De Laval separator cream. A clean sweep of all highest prizes was made by De Laval butter at the big National Dairy Show held in Chicago last October, as well as at sixteen of the more important state fairs of 1907. Going further back, De Laval made butter received the Grand Prize at the St. Louis World's Fair, as well as the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition. Invariably in these big contests more than 90 p. c. of the contestants who receive a score of over 90 p. c. on their butter have been found to be De Laval users. In hundreds of such contests the world over during the past twenty years, the superiority of the De Laval Separator over all others for making fine butter has been conclusively proven. A postal card will bring our handsome new catalogue illustrating and describing the new 1908 improved De Laval machines in detail, and affording a complete education in the production of the finest quality cream for making prize winning butter.

Beware the "Bossy" Woman!

Woman has every right to be independent, but the moment she becomes "bossy" she loses her charm. Men avoid her as they would the plague, and women, while they usually give in to her, have small love for her.

Sometimes a timid little man is swept off his balance by her strength of will and marries her. All his fellow-men pity him, and he lives a life of meek endurance.

You can usually detect the hen-pecked man. He is round-shouldered and furtive and looks afraid to call his own. A woman's strongest weapon is gentleness, and the wise man knows it.

If you must have your own way get it by gentle, not by sledge-hammer methods.

There is nothing very lovable about the woman who always wants to lead in everything. You don't feel like putting your arm about her or giving her a loving little pat every time you pass her.

And as for telling her your secret, you never dream of that. She will give you advice ad libitum, and what's more, she will insist that you take it, which is very tiresome.

Some way or another it is hard to imagine the "bossy" woman cuddling a bab close to her heart; see seems all angels and harp corners.

The woman who holds the love of all those in the household is she who rules by love, gentleness and sympathy. Thank goodness, she is not a rarity, but dear, every-day woman.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS!

Strikes are the order of the day. Sometimes justifiable, other times not. The labor and social problem is one of the problems of the day. For a safer condition of things we must educate the laborers either less or more. By all means let it be more. Laborers themselves, and the humanity and religion of the age, protest that it shall not be less. Educate, educate, educate, first, last, always. This need confronts us whenever and wherever we face the labor question. But the education must not be confined to laborers. In some respects the other classes need it equally or even more. The education which exalts society can not leave laborers in their present unsatisfactory condition. What a total revolution would be produced if Capital should learn that men do not exist for the industries, but the industries for men. Let men study conditions and in an intelligent way look at the claims of employers and we would have less strike, and more sympathy between employer and employee.

"Humanity should constantly strive to produce a few great men—this and nothing else is its mission." "The aim of humanity is the production of great men."

These are quotations from writings of authorities (?) Others have held similar views, as if the human race lived for the sake of a few men of genius or of eminent attainments.

That millions exist in order that a great man may step on them to attain a sublime height is far more consonant with ancient Orientalism than with modern civilization. Great personalities are a deeply felt need of the times—men who realize the urgent demands of the age, who rise above the average and stand before the world as models of excellence and samples of the ideals attainable in this life. But why should the aim to produce great men interfere with the purposes to elevate the masses? The two aims need not be antagonistic, but may be co-operative. The truly great man is the very one whose mission it is to seek to uplift his surroundings and exalt mankind.

A lesson might be learned for today from the study of the Ancient Israelites and his attitude to social problems. With him God was the Supreme Sovereign, and likewise the author and owner of all things. What his people possess is committed to them merely as trust. For their stewardship they were accountable. His will, the will of the absolute owner was the law of the land and the people. Certain things were deemed necessary; these were not to be taken by the creditor from the debtor. Thoughtfulness and mercy were to be exercised towards servants, strangers and even cattle. The Sabbath was devoted to rest for all, man and beast. The ox and ass were not to be harnessed together in plowing; the one through strength or speed might oppress the other. In treading out the corn the ox was not to be muzzled—he was to have a chance to get a bite. At harvest the field was not to be gleaned clean—something was to be left for the poor. Thoughtfulness and mercy characterized the system.

Much in this, it may be said, was intended for the times and is not equally adapted to our conditions. The people were intended to be intimately united and concerned for each other's welfare. Oppression was to be made impossible, the strong were to be fathers and brothers to the weak, and righteousness and mercy were to prevail. What a pity the age in which we live has outgrown the spirit of the age of the long ago.

BY THE WAY

The naphtha boats will have the right of way this summer.

The Mayor and Aldermen will kindly step up and oblige the town clerk.

Why not let the care of the streets out by tender, and see that the work is done properly.

Newspaper advertising is the modern method and has superseded the old style fence poster.

Hail to Mr. Froggie! His musical voice has been heard, and April at the finish concluded to be good.

They say there are interesting things coming in connection with using the "basin" for a dumping ground.

Don't talk about your increase in taxes when you spend your cash away where not one cent of it will ever be circulated in your own town, village or county.

Don't growl about your home merchants living in fine houses, when you send away your money to keep up mansions for those who do not know you.

Don't ask your home merchants for donations for your church, then send away for goods, perhaps to furnish the same. See what you can do at home.

Make the assessment on all property according to what it is actually worth, which is about half way between the asking price and the price the owner would receive at a forced sale under the hammer.

Excuse us, Mr. Engineer, but we are deeply interested in your movements around L'Etang. We would dearly love to know who you are, who sent you, and a lot of other things in connection with your visit.

If the new keeper of the almshouse can manage its affairs to please the commissioners, the council and the public, he will be entitled to promotion to a better office. He has our best wishes that he may accomplish it.

No paper can be entirely neutral in a campaign, and no editorial writer can conceal his own bias when he writes upon political subjects.—W. J. Bryan

What reason is there that a newspaper should not speak out its mind on candidates or policy?

It is reported that six thousand dollars will be appropriated for the public wharf. The government will assume charge of the wharf, when completed, and appoint a wharfinger, who will also perform the duties of harbor master. Other wharves in the vicinity of the town will also receive attention.

A mouse wandering around town in the early hours of the day, is a great annoyance, as the law is now on. Two of our prominent young men made the acquaintance of one a few nights ago. Continued immunity from harm of any kind makes them almost as tame as cows.

There seems to be a growing disposition in town to discourage any move in the direction of getting new industries to locate here. If the reasons given as to why the saw mill was not located here are true, the people will begin to realize that monopolies always have something up their sleeve.

Willie was discovered in the back yard shaking a poor little rabbit till the innocent animal was just about to shake off this pestiferous coil.

"Why, William," cried the boy's mother, interrupting the proceedings, "what are you doing that for?"

"Cause the big boy who sold him to me said he'd multiply rapidly, and the turned thing can't add two and two."

To be in the style right along, it is only necessary to buy your clothing, Footwear and Neckwear at Frauley Bros.

Schr. John R. Fell is taking a cargo of pulp for the St. George Pulp Co. She will discharge at Norwalk, Conn.

It is reported that Senator Gillmor will put further extensive repairs and improvements on his town property.

The moving season has opened. Several families in town will change their place of residence. Rents are scarce and high.

One of the finest dressed windows in town may be seen at the store of James O'Neill. He has the latest styles in hats, caps and clothing.

Sir Adolphe Caron, ex-minister of Militia and ex-postmaster-general, died in Montreal on Monday afternoon after a brief illness of pneumonia.

George Marshall is exhibiting an egg that measures six and a half inches in circumference. This egg is from one of his famous war horse breed of hens.

Miss Agnes Crickard gave a most delightful birthday party to her young friends on Wednesday. Music, dancing and games were indulged in. The merry party broke up at a late hour.

Mr. Ell. Sherwood has secured a site for his saw mill at Second Falls, and is getting his lumber ready for building operations which will commence soon. Up-to-date machinery will be installed.

A number of fine gasoline boats have been built and are being built for the coming season. Arthur Brown is considering an offer to sell his fine craft to Boston parties, who will use it on lake Utopia.

A moving picture show will probably come to town for a long engagement. The management have been looking the ground over, and feel that such a form of amusement here would be a financial success.

The syndicate boat Teaser will soon be launched, and will join those already in the game. This boat is a smooth looking craft, and her owners expect to lead the fleet in racing honors this season. Will Austin has been chosen Captain.

Inspector Carter has appointed Friday May 15th as Arbor Day. He also calls the attention of teachers to the importance of making preparations for the observance of Empire Day, which falls on the last teaching day preceding the 24th of May.

The last time Good Friday fell on April 17 was in 1840. The next time will be in 1931, 1987 and 1992. Before 1840 it fell on that day in 1835 and 1829. Earlier dates since the introduction of new style are 1609, 1615, and 1620, 1699, 1767, 1772 and 1778.

About the only Charlotte county matter which appears in the Civil Service Commission report is a letter from the collector of customs at St. George, who says that he has never received any increase of salary since he was appointed in 1879. He asks that the commission recommend an increase in his salary from 30 to 50 per cent. above what he is now receiving ($600).—Beacon.

The sardine season is open but no fish have, as yet, put in an appearance. It is expected that the next run of tides will be favorable and bring the small fish along. Connor's Bros. at Blacks Harbor and J. Sattou Clark at L'Etang have their factories in readiness to commence packing at once. It will probably be August before there is any marked activity in the canning business.

London, April 22.—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, former British Premier, died at 9.15 o'clock this morning at his official residence in Downing street. The end was peaceful.

The cause of Sir Henry's death is officially given as heart failure.

The authorities should take some action if the conditions existing on a farm, near town, are as reported. It is said that a horse recently died at this place of starvation, and other cattle are suffering. The stories around town are no doubt exaggerated, but the matter is one that calls for an investigation, and the authorities should take prompt action.

A quiet wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening April 22nd, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Woodbury, when Mr. John Kirch and Mrs. Ellen Craig were united in marriage by Rev. H. J. Lynda. The bride looked charming in a dress of crepe-de-chene with chiffon, ribbon and flowers. A large number of friends and relatives were present. Many valuable and useful presents were displayed, all testifying to the popularity of the young couple. After a brief visit with friends here Mr. and Mrs. Kirch will make their home in Oakland, Maine.

It is reported that the pulp mill will shut down for a few weeks, during which time needed repairs will be made on the plant. The company have not given out any information relating to the period during which the mill will be shut down. Unless heavy rains fall within a short time, there is danger of the company's large cut of last winter being "hung up" for want of water as the tributaries of the main river are very low. The mill has been running to the limit of its capacity and huge piles of manufactured pulp are on the wharves. It is understood that this will be shipped.

The special services held in the Baptist church last week were well attended and of much interest. The Easter service on Sunday evening brought out a large congregation which filled the house. The pastor Rev. F. M. Young preached an eloquent sermon on the Resurrection of Christ. The Easter Anthem rendered by a large choir is spoken of as especially fine and the solo part by Miss Edina Thompson was a treat to the congregation. Miss Brownell, in fine voice, sang a solo "Calvary" which was much appreciated by all present. At the close of the service the pastor administered the rite of baptism to four candidates, Misses Fay Jenks, Phillis McLellan, Lily White and Fannie McNeil. The services will be continued on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week.—Parrsboro Leader.

How Tommy Proved a Cruel Arbiter of Fate

"I'll teach you, Miss Tattletale--see if I don't!" Tommy stands glaring at me. His round, freckled, dirty little face is channelled with tears.
One gathers from an uneasy posture that he has had recent intimate knowledge of the rod that chastens.
"You should learn to take your punishment like a man," I remarked from the hammock.
"Yah-h-h!" snarls Tommy. Still livelier rage is painted on his countenance at this heaping of insult upon injury. "Just you wait, old Smarty-going-to-a-party--I'll show you!"
With which cryptic utterance my small brother dives darkly cellarwards, and leaves me to resume my interrupted dreams.
Dreams vague enough in all conscience--the ball tonight--music, flowers, lights. Dennis, I am afraid it all begins and ends with Dennis.
What a long afternoon! In my restless wanderings I catch a glimpse of Tommy's cropped head bobbing about in the tomato house and in the kitchen garden. But the grim spectre of war still extends its battle-like wings over Tommy and me and I go no nearer.
And the night comes at last.
I am floating with a bevy of girls down the winding staircase to where, at the foot, a group of men stand waiting for us.
Truth to tell, out of a blurred mass of upturned faces, of black coats and white shirt fronts, I see Dennis only.
And then I stop and almost rub my eyes, for Dennis--Dennis, if you please, has offered his arm to Marie Wright without a glance in my direction and, a moment later I see them walking past the door.
"What a perfect ball," exclaims Marie Wright, running her arm through mine, "and I never have seen you looking better, Helen. Isn't she a picture in that white tulle, Dennis?"
"Lovely," mutters Dennis, perfunctorily, without glancing at me.
Resentment!
But as we go in the door, a moment later, our eyes met for an instant, and to my utter confounding I read reproach, pain, and resentment in his. It is the last straw.
My chatter dies away in disjointed murmurs. My eyes, to my horror, fill with tears, and I sit staring, as if for dear life, at the salmon cutlet, modestly dressed in its party petticoat of frilled white paper, without a quail of sickness.
Finally the intolerable time is over. I am saying my mendacious thanks for "the loveliest time;" then I am out in the cold air, am whirling home in the carriage, and then crying my heart out, a mass of crumpled tulle, on my bed.
The next day Tommy drives with me in my pony phaeton.
Be it said that Tommy, as a driving companion, is about as agreeable as a bunch of young eels. Now hanging over the back, trailing a stick in the dust; now standing the better to see something, his dirty little feet soon trample my clean muslin into the semblance of a soiled rag.
But I pay him scant attention today. Flying fragments only of his enlivening discourse dart across the unhappy circle of my own thoughts--such as:
"Look at that rabbit, Helen. Golly! look at him run! Wish I had a gun. Bet you there's another in those blackberry bushes. Here's the ford, Helen. My word! the water's high!"
This last speech brings me back to material things, and I drive Goldie carefully into the unusually swift current.
"Sit up, Tommy!" I command.
Even as I speak the left wheel sinks in a hole, and with an ineffectual clutch at the air Tommy shoots plump into the water like a startled frog.
I got a glimpse of his poor little frightened face turned appealingly to me, and helter-skelter I am in the water, half floundering, half running after him.
Presently I catch up with him.
As my hand closes on his I seem to step off into a bottomless hole. For a dreadful minute we sink helplessly, then as we come up, a frantic struggle brings us to shallow water, and at last, I am wading back to the amazed Goldie, who has stood still, watching this remarkable performance.

Confession.

Between the fright and the water he had swallowed, poor Tommy, for some minutes can do nothing but gasp and gurgle. Then he bursts into a roar and we cling together like two rescued, shipwrecked sailors, the while I passionately kiss the cropped head burrowed in my shoulder.
Presently I prick up my ears and listen keenly.
"What is Tom saying?"
"Uh!" I did it--I did it. I know you'll be awfully wild," he is sobbing out. "I s'pose if I'd a been drowned I'd a gone straight to the wicked place. I said I'd teach you an' I went an' did it!"
"Did what, Tommy?" sharply.
"Buried 'em."
"Buried what?"
"Buried the box of flowers Dennis sent you the day of the ball"--his voice rises to a wail--"in the kitchen garden!"
I sit speechless. So this partly explains the mystery that has tortured me. And if ever a dear little brother just restored from the jaws of death comes near being severely spanked Tommy is that brother and the time is now.
It is the following evening. Behold me dressed in the white tulle, coaxed into pristine freshness and hinting naught of naught of tears. Poor father, utterly bewildered at my sudden change of front, escorts his erstwhile pale and languid daughter to the carriage--steals a last look at her bright eyes and rosy cheeks, shakes his head as if giving up the problem and closes her in with a final bang.
There has been a resurrection and the kitchen garden has given up its dead--a box of dried and broken roses and a note. The flowers are honorably buried in my desk. The note lies next my heart.
"Will you carry these tonight, Helen?" (It says). They are asking a question for me that I have never dared ask for myself. If I see them when you come down the steps I shall be the happiest man in the world. DENNIS.
And I didn't carry them--oh, Tommy. Now I am stepping eagerly down another stairway. My heart is choking me but when I see Dennis standing in the doorway gazing moodily out into the night, I go straight up to him.
"Dennis," I began bravely, if unsteadily.
He starts and turns a miserable face to mine.
"Oh, Dennis, Tommy buried them," I cry incoherently. I opened my hand and showed the faded rose. "And I never knew it until today. But I would have worn them--I--"
Dennis draws a long breath as of one waking from an evil dream. He catches my hand in a grasp of iron.
Regardless of onlookers, we stand joyously looking into each other's eyes, like two children. Then-- "Come," he says and we run down the steps and are lost in the moonlit garden.

Beware the Husband Who Finds Fault
There is no one in the world harder to live with than the fault-finding husband.
He comes home at night, and the moment his latch-key opens the front door the entire household undergoes a change. His children stand in awe of him. His wife fears him.
He complains of the children's noise. The dinner does not suit him. Nothing is right.
He does not stop to consider that his wife has put up with the noise all day, and that she did her best to please him with the dinner.
His fault-finding is written plainly on his wife's worn, nervous face. Her entire life is spent in the effort to please him, and what does she get in return? Nothing but cross words and criticism.
If Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Jones drops in he is all gallantly and politeness. He can pay other women pretty compliments but he can't treat his wife with perfect decency.
POWER IN PRAISE
If husbands only knew the power of a little praise where their wives are concerned there would be fewer domestic tragedies. All work is made sweeter by kindly appreciation.
It does not cost much to tell your wife that she looks pretty in her new dress, and yet how many of you fail to notice fail to notice the dress at all, or worse still if you do notice it, it is only to find fault with the cost of it.

You were glib enough with pretty speeches when you courted her. And now that she has far more right to your courtesies and attentions, why is it that you show her so few?
She of all people in the world has the first right to your interest and respect. She has given you years of wifely devotion and has helped just as much with the building of your fortune as though she earned an actual salary.
And yet many a wife goes through agonies of indecision before she dares ask her husband for money to buy a new dress or necessities for her children or house.
INCOME HERS BY RIGHT
You asked her to marry you and promised to support her. She has just as much right to the money you earn as you have.
The house and children are yours as well as hers. You have no right to look grumpy when she asks for money to provide for them.
Every wife should have as generous an allowance as her husband's income permits. It is humiliating to have to ask humbly for every necessary cent.
Just try the praise plan for a while. Give up fault-finding. Why should you speak to your wife in a tone of voice that you would not dare to use toward another woman?
A woman will work cheerfully forever if she gets love and appreciation of her efforts. You can't afford to lose your wife's love, for it is the most precious of all your possessions.
But only the tenderness and endurance of the most faithful of women wears out if it meets with nothing but neglect.

Some children are more prone to show temper than others, and sometimes on account of qualities which are valuable in themselves. For instance, a child of active temperament, sensitive feeling and eager purpose is more likely to meet with constant jars and rubs than a dull, passive child; and if he is of an open nature, his inward irritation is immediately shown in bursts of passion. If you repress these qualities by scolding and punishment, you only increase the evil by changing passion into sulkiness. A cheerful, good tempered tone of your own, a sympathy with his trouble, whenever the trouble has arisen from no ill-conduct, are the best antidotes; but it would be better still to prevent beforehand, as much as possible all sources of annoyance. Never fear spoiling children by making them happy.

New Theory About Rheumatism
This disease is constitutional--caused by virus in the blood that circulates to all parts of the body. To cure, you must use a constitutional treatment. Nothing so completely dispels the poison from the system as Ferronose. It purifies and renews the blood, clears it of every taint. The system is vitalized and strengthened and thus enabled to fight off threatened attacks. Not only does Ferronose relieve at once--it cures rheumatism, gout and lumbago permanently. Results guaranteed, 50c. at all dealers.

Flowers for the Dead
If friends would but have the good taste to place a few simple flowers about the departed ones, such as she or he was fond of in life, it would be very fitting, but it is surely not in taste to overload the casket with flowers representing an amount of money which would do much good to the poor. And then the custom of exposing the face of the dead to the gaze of those making the tour of inspection, which is now almost universal in country churches, is to us another very unpleasant feature of funerals. We often read with interest of the burial rites of comparatively unknown nations, and are surprised and amused with their peculiarities. Would not ours, in their turn, present some features as curious, if read of by distant people? If personal friends wish to take a last look of a deceased friend, it is surely due to them to do so alone, and without being gazed at by a crowd.

Cure For Dandruff
An excellent remedy for dandruff is the following: Take equal quantities of green soap and cologne, bottle, shake and let stand overnight. Rub this over scalp and through the hair when shampooing.

The Hour of Triumph

After the "first night" triumph, there was to be a supper down town for the members of the company, and Jerry Trent's paybills read "Flora Montrose," drove down together. Jerry flushed with elation, chattered gaily to his companion, not heeding her silence.

"Everything went so smoothly. Not a break. I was extra proud because it's the first time I ever played before my own people, and they liked me, didn't they? She was there, Flora, in the box on the left--the girl with the eyes and the red mouth and the big black hat--did you see her?"

"No, prevaricated the leading lady.

"When they applauded and I came out to make my speech, I looked at her and her eyes were full of tears. Just think, added Jerry softly, crying for me!

The leading lady moved a little restlessly.

"And I suppose, she said, "that you'll go to her house tomorrow and tell her how good you've been these months you've been away, and she'll say how proud she was of you tonight, and it will be all fixed up and you'll come out engaged."

"I hope so," said Jerry, simply. "I've tried hard to be what she'd want me to. Of course I haven't begun to do it, but at least I can go to her tomorrow and say, 'Christine, I'm not good enough for you I know, but at least there's nothing that you'll be ashamed of. Excuse me, Flora, I'm trying you out.'"

No, no, said the leading lady. But she did look a little tired.

"How long have you known her?" she asked after a silence.

"Two years--a little over."

"She didn't want you to go on the stage?"

"She was afraid I couldn't keep straight," confided Jerry. He had told Flora this before, but he liked to talk of it. "She had an idea that all actors drank and were dissipated and that sort of thing. I told her to try me this year and I'd show her, and I have. I can go."

"If you had failed--only once--do you think she'd turn you down?"

"She doesn't look at these things as you people do," said Jerry, very tenderly. She got a standard that you have to stand on tiptoe to reach all the time. If I'd failed, even once, I'm afraid she wouldn't have me. She's so young, you see, and so sweet and good herself, that she can't understand a man's lapses."

"You could do things, I suppose, without telling her," remarked Flora. Her voice was light, but the look she bent upon him was strangely attentive.

"Oh, I shouldn't deceive her in any way, of course, said Jerry.

The carriage stopped, and together they went into the hotel, where a number of the company were waiting for them. A small dining room was arranged for their use. There seemed to be lights everywhere, and the silver and glass sparkled on the white table. The leading lady had smiles enough now. She chattered and laughed and praised Jerry until he was brick red with gratitude and had forgotten everything but the success and enchantment of the evening. Later she made a ringing little speech and proposed his health, which they all drank standing. And then Jerry proposed her health, and they drank that. Somehow other toasts followed, and although the leading lady drank very little herself, she made it her special task to keep Jerry's glass full. All the evening her eyes followed him with the same attentive look that she had given him in the carriage. It was late when the party broke up, and as Jerry looked confusedly about him he saw Flora bending toward him and heard her ask if he were ill.

He passed his hand over his swimming head and laughed shakily to show that he was all right. He could not remember who helped him into his coat, but later he found himself in the corridor below, with Flora's arm under his. He had a misty idea that he was leaning rather heavily upon her, and he tried to straighten up. It seemed there was a little delay about a carriage, and as they stood waiting Trent heard someone talking boisterously, which he afterward dimly realized was himself. Everybody was laughing and he laughed too. Then out of the main supper room came a party of late diners. They quietly passed Jerry without looking in his direction all but one, who stopped for one breathless moment gazing at him. Suddenly sobered Jerry stood looking into the eyes of the girl who had sat in the box.

"Christine!" whispered.

It was only a moment before she hurried on to join her friends, and Jerry turned an agonized face toward the place where she had vanished.

The leading lady was waiting for Jerry when he was shown, into her apartment the following morning, and she took in his white face and heavy eyes at once glance. She had not slept, either, but she began lightly:

"Why, Jerry, boy, what's the matter? Jerry dropped into a chair with his head in his hands. "Last night--" he faltered.

"Don't think of that," said the leading lady quietly. "We don't--I don't."

"I've seen her face as she looked at me that instance," said Jerry, catching his breath, "I've seen it all night, and it'll be with me until I die."

It was so apparent that he thought of nothing but the girl that the leading lady stood looking plaintively at him.

"She'll never forgive me--why should she?--I can't explain anything--and I thought I was so strong!"

Flora Montrose crossed to where he sat and stood beside him, touching his hair with a gentle hand.

"Couldn't you forget her, Jerry? Would not it be better if she didn't forgive you? You belong to your own people--to us--if you're in this business."

"Do you think I'd cry Jerry, fiercely, that I wouldn't give up the stage and all of you--anything in the world--if it divided me from her?"

Flora walked to the window and looked out. After a long while Jerry got up and reached for his hat.

"I'm going, he said. I suppose I'll see you later."

He had almost reached the door when she stopped him. Her eyes were wet, and she laid her hand on his shoulder.

"I didn't think--" she began, and stopped, choking a little. "Jerry dear, when we meet again I'll have good news for you."

When he had gone the leading lady rang for her wraps and made ready to go out. And when she was in the street she hesitated only a moment before she turned her face toward the section of the city where the girl with the eyes and the red mouth lived.

To Reduce Rates on Weeklies to U. S.

Ottawa, Delegations representing Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario and western press associations met the Premier and Postmaster General re a reduction of rates on weekly papers posted to the United States.

D. F. McLean, Port Hood, and H. R. Coffin represented the Nova Scotia press and presented the case effectively. The Postmaster General, after pointed out that in Canada weeklies had free circulation within forty miles and beyond at lower rates than obtained in any other country in the world, said the department had under consideration an amendment to the postal regulations whereby weeklies could be posted at the town of publication to the border at 1-2 cent per pound and then by paying the United States rate of one cent per pound the papers would be sent to destination. This arrangement seemed to meet with the favor of the press men present and it is likely an early adjustment will be made.

Pain, anywhere, can be quickly stopped by one of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. Pain always means congestion--unnatural blood pressure. Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets simply coax congested blood away from pain centres. These Tablets--known by druggists as Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets--simply equalize the blood circulation and then pain always departs in 20 minutes. 20 Tablets 25 cents. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. for free. Sold by All Dealers.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness--nothing more. Possibly, not one weak heart in a hundred is in fact, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden but vital nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve--the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve--simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, paralyzing, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative--this popular prescription--is alone directed to those weak and ailing nerve centers. It builds up strength, it offers real, genuine heart help. If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these sources--re-establish them as needed, with

Cost of Liquor in Canada

The cost, direct and indirect, of the liquor traffic in Canada is over $150,000,000; our national assets are about $105,000,000—only enough to keep us in liquor for eight months. The nation's exports are valued at $213,521,000, and for every dollar worth of exports we spend seventy cents for liquor. The public schools of Canada cost, in 1904, $25,225,887. The liquor consumed cost six times as much. Canada spent last year a little over $6,000,000 on her postal system and received good value. She spent over $150,000,000 on the liquor traffic and what did she get?—5,000 corpses, 16,532 prisoners, thousands of orphans and tens of thousands of broken-hearted wives and mothers and children. If the money squandered in this awful curse were available, what could it not do? It would give a university education to every young man and woman in Canada, and pay all expenses. It would rent a comfortable cottage for each family in Canada—a million cottages say about 12.50 per month. It would provide our national revenue each year and leave $70,000,000 for a rainy day. It would purchase a suit of clothes for every man, a dress for every woman, and all the clothes needed for every child from Cape Breton to Vancouver Island. All this and more could be done with the money squandered for intoxicating drinks; but instead the tariff is permitted to plunder the country's bone and brains and brain, murder the bread winner, brutalize and debauch the defenseless women and innocent children—why? Because the Christian manhood of Canada has not risen in its might to crush this awful foe.

Not a drop of Alcohol

Doctors prescribe very little, if any, alcohol these days. They prefer strong tonics and cathartics. This is all in keeping with modern medical science. It explains why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is now made entirely free from alcohol. Ask your doctor. Follow his advice.

Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisonous products are absorbed, causing headache, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia. We wish you would ask your doctor about correcting your constipation by taking laxative doses of Ayer's Pills.

The Man who Makes Cork Legs

"A manufacturer or dealer in artificial limbs who wears a cork arm or leg himself is much better equipped for business than his competitors who are sound," said a man who uses a cork leg. "In fact, it has become a sort of unwritten law among us to patronize such men when possible. Sentimental reasons may have something to do with the case, but I guess the chief reason is that we consider that if a man can make a limb for himself that fits like the paper on the wall, he can make them for others. Manufacturers of artificial limbs know this, and frequently you will find an advertisement like this: 'The Soano Artificial Leg is built by a man who is wearing one and who knows from experience what you want for comfort.' This is a strong argument, for it's no easy thing to get an artificial limb that just fits. Persons who have trouble getting shoes that are just right are in great luck compared to us."—New York Sun.
