GENERAL INTELLIGENCE

Colonial

ECCLIESIASTICAL UNION.—The Presbyterian churches of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick met at their meetings of Synod in St. John, held there with a view of consummating a union of the two bodies, effected the object completely, and the united Synod chose Bro. J. S. Bennett, Moderator, and Rev. P. G. McGreggor, Clerk. An exciting discussion took place on the question of instrumental missions in public worship, which resulted in a decision adverse to its introduction into churches under the jurisdiction of the Synod.

DIOCESAN SYNOD

The Church of England clergy of Nova Scotia held their Annual Meeting in this city during last week. We understand that various matters likely to promote the prosperity of their church were adopted in the Synod with great unanimity.

JUVENILE DEPARTMENT

Three small boys were arraigned at the Police Court on Friday morning last, for theft from the residence of Hon. Mr. A. Almon, and were sent to the Reformatory for three years.

DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTION

The Annual examination of this humane Establishment was held in Temperance Hall, on Wednesday last. The Principal and Managers of this benevolent Institution are engaged in a really good work, worthy of the favour of the entire community. We wish them continued and enlarged success.

APPOINTMENT

Mr. Henry Starr, Esq. has been appointed Staff Paymaster N. S. M.

N. B. LEGISLATURE

As an amendment to Mr. Smith's resolutions in reference to delegation, Mr. Fisher moved the following, which was adopted by all the members present, with the exception of Mr. Smith and his supporters:—'Resolved, That the people of this Province have authority to delegate to the Legislature of the United Kingdom, inasmuch as it is desirable, and the House having agreed to request His Excellency the Lieut. Governor to appoint Delegates for the purpose of settling the plan of Union upon such terms as will secure the just rights of New Brunswick, and having confidence that the action of His Excellency under the advice of his constitutional advisers will be directed to the attainment of that end, sound policy and due regard to the interests of this Province require that the responsibility of such a decision should be left entirely to the people, and given by the people and their representatives.'

SKINNER SPOKE

Skinner spoke, defining his position, and stating that his previous remarks had been misunderstood and misrepresented. He was not trying to injure the Delegates, but to give instructions in the way of suggestions.

AS AT THE REVOLUTION

Recently introduced into Congress by Mr. Skinner, the resolution of the Provisional Government, Mr. Skinner asked leave to present a measure for the admission of the New England States into the proposed Provincial Confederation. It is contended under the latter is but a box, without any value or force.

AN OLD NURSE FOR CHILDREN

Don't fail to procure Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething. No mother who ever used it will consent to let her child pass through this critical period without the aid of this invaluable preparation. Gives rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child. Cures wind colic, and regulates the bowels. 25 cents a bottle.

FORTUNATE COMBINATIONS

We are opposed to proprietary medicines, and it is with some compunction that we see advertisements of them in our columns. Still we must confess that Brown's Troches are convenient and useful, in certain conditions of the throat and larynx, before speaking.—J. Y. Chris. Advocate.

United States

Portland has been visited by a terrible fire, which raged for twenty hours, sweeping over the city, and destroying property to the value of millions of dollars. It commenced on the 24th of the 4th, and continued till noon next day.

In the aquatic exercises in Charles River, the prizes were won by the new Brunswick boats. One hundred were present, Roberts and Sweeney, are quarrelling in right earnest.

Accounts from Mexico and Cuba are ominous.

European

Steamer Sazonia, with European dates to 27th, arrived on Monday. The laying of the Atlantic Cable would commence on the 30th of June.

In the House of Lords

On the 26th, Lord Russell announced that in consequence of the late hostile vote in the House of Commons, the Ministry had tendered their resignation, but the Queen wanted them to reconsider their determination. They awaited the result of an interview with the Queen, which took place on the 26th, and the result was a definite resolution. A military revolt took place at Madrid and Barcelona, and was suppressed. Seven hundred of the insurgents, who took refuge in a dread of the insurgents, were conveyed to Crete. France, were dispersed, and conveyed to Crete. Tranquillity prevails. The Italian army crossed the Mincio without meeting any opposition from the Austrians. It was followed by a short cannonade, and the Austrians were routed. The Italian Army was encountered by the Austrians in great force, in the battle of Custoza. A great battle commenced. The Austrians repulsed both wings of the Italian army. The fight was still going on. The Prussians had advanced into Upper Silesia and Bohemia. They easily repulsed the Austrian Hussars, owing to the effective power of the needle gun.

ended in the complete defeat of the Indians who were completely routed. Both armies fought bravely. The Indians were repulsed at all points, after a severe and bloody battle. The Prussians attacked Austria in Galicia, but were beaten off with loss by the Austrians. The Prussians intended marching through Tyrol direct to Munich.

A later telegram asserts that the Hauserian army is still completely surrounded. The King demanded twenty-four hours for deliberating on the conditions upon which his army is to capitulate. He expects to receive assistance from Russia.

A Florence despatch of the 25th says the papers there assert that the want of success in the first battle is but a new motive for redoubled energy and perseverance. The country has full confidence in the army, and the war against Austria will be continued until the complete liberation of Venetia has been accomplished. An official despatch of the 25th, says:—'To-day, in an engagement between the Italian Volunteers and the Austrians, between the bridge of Colofa and Longone, the latter were repulsed, leaving several killed and wounded.'

STAR LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY

We direct attention to the advertisement of this society to be found in another column. O. D. Wetmore, Esq. of St. John, N. B., and M. G. Black, Esq. of this city, are Agents of the Society for the Lower Provinces, who will be pleased to give full information to any who are inquiring respecting Life Assurance. The society they represent is worthy of all confidence. We need not say that the stability of the Society is established by the fact that it has been in existence for over twenty years, and has a capital of $1,000,000. We call the attention of our readers to the announcement in another column, that the 'Star Life Assurance Society' of England is established in British North America. Many of our readers are doubtless acquainted with the standing of the 'Star Life Assurance Society' in England, and the character and position of the Directors. To those who are not in possession of this information, we can state that the stability of this Society is established beyond all question, and the facts and figures in the column referred to will show, and the names which stand as the 'Council of Reference' for Toronto guarantee. The Directors are all gentlemen of sterling character and first-class position, and the management of the Society is conducted on principles of sound economy and prudence. Besides the strictly business advantages, the 'Star' possesses peculiar features that commend it to all Wesleyans. Its constitution, or 'Deed of Settlement,' distinctly provides that a majority of the Directors shall be accredited members of the Wesleyan Methodist Society. Many Wesleyan Ministers in this country, and fully two-thirds of its policy-holders are members or hearers of the Methodist Society. Since its establishment in 1843, the 'Star' has paid to its policy-holders in Great Britain, and in the colonies, over $1,000,000. The greater part was paid, at a time when it was not expected to be so successful. For these and for many other reasons, which we might adduce, we heartily commend the 'Star' to all our readers, and especially to those for themselves and their families the advantages offered by the best life offices.

The Family

The School-Girl's Dream.

I had a funny dream one night, not very long ago.

And why I'll remember it, perhaps you'd like to know.

I thought I'd make a playhouse back in the school-house yard.

And furnished it with snow-balls, so round, and white, and hard.

The bell had rung for recess, the girls were all at play.

But I within my little room preferred alone to stay.

I made believe to build a fire, the table spread for tea;

And though I knew I was but one, put dishes out for three.

I'd just begun my evening meal, when crack went something near;

I heard my heart go pit-a-pat, and knew my face looked queer.

From out the largest snow-ball two tiny creatures crept.

And lightly springing to their feet, toward the table stopping first to rest.

I leaned aside, quite out of sight, and as they passed close by.

I saw that one wore on his breast the simple words I'll try.

His step was quick, but very firm; his cheerful face was fair;

While the other, earnest eyes beamed out amid his wayward hair.

The other, lagging on behind, looked spiritless and lame.

I did not wonder when I saw that I can't was his name.

His face was peevish, sour, grim; his eyes looked blue and cold;

He walked with trembling, fearful gait, like some one very old.

They reached the table, took a seat, when looking up the air.

Off through the clear and quiet air, there shone what seemed a star.

A slender hand was holding it, while ringing from the skies.

I heard a voice proclaim these words, "Who wants to win the prize?"

"I want it, but the wish is vain," said I can't with a sigh;

"I want it, and I'll have it too!" shouted the brave I'll try.

The star, I thought, moved nearer the instant that he spoke.

And as he leaped to grasp it, I suddenly awoke.

The sun was shining bright and high, 'twas composition day;

I'd one to write on "little words," so had no time to play;

But got my paper, pen, and ink, and made my fingers fly.

And wrote, "Of all the little words, the best ones are, I'll try."

— Sunny Hours.

"Do it Yourself!"

It was the school-boy's welcome Saturday morning—ah, you know well enough what that is, don't you, boys? And you know too, who we are not school-boys,—for you make it such a different day from all the others of the week to us, that we are not apt to forget when Saturday comes! You don't always get down to breakfast exactly on the minute, Saturday morning; and you can even afford to stop, on your way to the table, to pat "Bruno" on the head, or startle the cat from her morning nap. There are no books to be strapped, and no "lunch-boxes" to be supplied. But there is, oh, such an unusual tramping of feet, in and out, up and down, from one room to another, all day! and such whistling and laughing and teasing and talking!—such famous plans for "fun," such scattering of boy's property round the sitting-room,—strings and sticks and knives and papers, etc.

Now, you see, it knows something about Saturday as well as you! And do you suppose we are sorry when it comes? Do we ever wish that there would be school every day in the week, to keep "those noisy boys quiet"? No indeed! We like Saturdays for our games; we don't mind the noise; and we are glad when you have "fun." Only, dear boys, we would have you no more, no generous, so noble, that not only Saturdays, but every day, may be bright with well-earned pleasure. And that is why we are going to tell you this little story, which begins with the school-boy's Saturday morning.

It was kite-flying time, too; and George and David were making great calculations for a day of sport. The table was covered with paper and sticks; and knives as well as tongues were very busy.

"Oh, George! what a big one!" exclaimed David, looking at the long stick which his brother was rounding and smoothing so nicely.

"Big! I guess it is! I bet you'll beat every other kite! It's mine, going to be 'Eagle' and when I will soar!" George executed a series of whistles, flourishing his sticks.

"Where are you going to fly it?" asked his mother.

"Over on Reed's hill. We made it up yesterday, had a dozen of us, to meet there this morning and have a jolly good time. What a nice wind there is!" he added, stopping a minute to look out of the window.

"I'm going to make one just like Ed. Hammond's; and we're going to fly them together," said David.

"Look out you don't get it too high!" George said, smiling slyly, as his brother's fingers worked slowly and a little awkwardly, by the side of his own skilful ones.

The work went on; and soon George's "Eagle" was completed, and stood defiantly before the store. Then the string and gorgeous "tail" were arranged; and he put on his hat, and was ready to start out, when David's voice called "Oh, say, George, won't you just fix these bands on mine, before you go? I'm afraid I'll spoil it."

"Oh, nonsense! no you won't; do it yourself! I'm off now!"

A cloud came over David's face. "Hateful fellow! he never will help a body any! he likes to do his own things nice, but he don't care for any one else's!"

"There! David, never mind; do the best you can."

And so he had to do; but a great deal of the brightness seemed to have gone from his expectations. And all that morning, whenever he thought of his brother, a bitter feeling came into his heart. "I'll never ask him to do anything for me again,—never!" he said to himself, tossing his head independently, and looking, with half-tearful eyes, up through the clear air to where his kite sailed so gracefully.

At dinner time George came in with glowing cheeks and wonderful accounts of how his "Eagle" had gone quite out of sight, and what splendid fun he had had. He never once seemed to remember how he had refused to help his ne-

Temperance.

Brother with his kite, indeed, for he had even ask David where he had been, and if he had spent a pleasant morning.

"What a selfish fellow!" do you say? Ah, boys, be careful! We can't afford to "throw stones," as long as we live in "glass houses."

Well, the afternoon passed away, and at length the Saturday's fun was over. Both the boys were tired, and glad to sit and rest a while more it was time for lights and the evening study hours began.

"George," said his sister, coming in just as he had arranged himself comfortably in the armchair, "there's an example in my arithmetic that I'd like you just to look over for me, after tea."

"Oh dear me! why can't you do it yourself? I don't feel like bothering over some to-night!"

Before Julia had time to reply, David exclaimed, "don't ask him to do anything for you! he never helps any one but himself!"

The tone was harsh,—oh, how harsh!—to be spoken by one brother of another! George seemed surprised at first; for he had almost forgotten the occurrence of the morning; and just as it came back to his remembrance their mother's voice said gently, "Come here, children, I have something to tell you." And when they had seated themselves on her bed, she went on, and told them of what she had never heard from her before.

"When I was about your age, George, I had a sister nearly two years younger. I loved her, as I am sure you love each other; but, like you, George, I loved myself and my own comfort too; and I had just the same selfish habit that you have of refusing to exert myself and to help others; and the same careless way of saying, 'Do it yourself!' One morning, my sister was going away on a little visit, and she was late, and I was hurrying her, to catch the train. 'There, I've left my scarf upstairs!' she said, as she was tying on her bonnet. 'Lucy, just run and get it for me, won't you?'"

"Just run and get it for me, won't you?"

"Just run and get it for me, won't you?"

A little pettily, without looking up from my book, "you ought to have hurried more," I added, as she disappeared up stairs to get it herself.

"I probably should have quite forgotten it, but there was an accident on the road, and she was injured,—injured so that she died in a week. Oh, how kind I was to her all that week! I did everything I could, caring not how much trouble I took; but I could not blot out that sad remembrance! There lay the little scarf, soiled and torn from the accident; oh, how many pairs of stairs I would gladly have gone up then, to get it for her, had she asked me! But she never asked to help her again! I and I never could forget how unkindly I had refused to do that little act for her."

"Now, George, do you wonder that I feel, when I hear you selfishly refusing to do something to help your brother or sister? How you have made David's holiday unhappy, by not being willing to spare a few moments from your own pleasure, to help him! and how unkindly you speak to Julia, when she asks your help over a single sum? These are little things; but they may cause you many a sad hour in after life!"

"You may not soon be deprived of a sister or brother as I was; but sooner or later the time for parting will come; you cannot always stay together on earth; and oh, for those left behind, how sad it will be to remember the times that they have refused so easily!"

The children did not speak; George's hands were full; and he could scarce keep his head as tears as they rested on David's little heart that had worked so eagerly making the kite that morning. David's face was hidden in his mother's lap; and the harsh, bitter feelings were all gone. And after tea, when Julia came in with her book, how willingly her brother worked out the sum and explained it to her; and how sweetly the spirit of kindness began its reign among them!

Boys and girls, learn to help each other! We all need help so much! We were not made to go through life alone, caring just for our own wants of those around us. Ah no! First of all, there is God;—and how much he helps us. How should we ever get salvation, ever keep in the right way, ever find any hope and comfort, if God should bid us do it ourselves? Oh, how we forget the example of our great Helper!

There are so many little things that we can do for one another to make life brighter, to give joy and happiness to, let us try to be always ready to do them, with cheerful, loving hearts!

A Word to the Moderate Drinker.

We ask in humanity's name, to discontinue the use of the intoxicating draughts. You may consider this an impertinence on our part, as meddling with your privileges. But be not impatient. You are a rational being, and you are to be actuated in all things by reason. Come, then, and let us reason together. This custom of drinking ardent spirits is a trifling matter of taste, it is an incurable weighty responsibility, and far reaching in its results. Involving your own dearest interest; its consequences extend beyond yourself, and affect the destiny of others. Before you take another glass then, give the subject one candid, patient thought.

And first, view the matter as it relates to your own best interests. You may perchance be young; you would make the most of your life; this habit affect your hopes? How you ever start down and estimated how much it will probably cost to gratify this appetite, should you live to be old? If not, do so, and then ask yourself whether you can afford to make so costly an offering to Bacchus; whether amid all the calls for charity, in this age of charities, you can afford to appropriate so large a share, for which you will receive no thanks, and which you are asked to barter a minute. Can you afford to barter a minute for a glass of rum? Or so minutes may hang your immortal destiny. How many in life's last hour would give worlds for a few minutes more of precious life.

And then comes the consideration of personal safety. Look at the subject in this light a moment. You have been demonstrated that alcoholic drinks are a positive injury; that they cannot be used as a beverage without harm to the system. How does it accord with your idea of self-respect, with your idea of right, to be taking that into the system, which is working its ruin; destroying that delicate organism that God has so wonderfully and fearfully made? Each glass is shortening your life doubtless, by a little. Can you afford to sell any part of your existence, for what is more worthless than a mess of pottage? It may shorten your life a minute. Can you afford to barter a minute for a glass of rum? Or so minutes may hang your immortal destiny. How many in life's last hour would give worlds for a few minutes more of precious life.

And so he had to do; but a great deal of the brightness seemed to have gone from his expectations. And all that morning, whenever he thought of his brother, a bitter feeling came into his heart. DR. RADWAY'S PILLS ARE COMPOSED OF VEGETABLE EXTRACTS PREPARED IN VAPOUR.

Superior to all Purgatives, Cathartics, or Alteratives.

COATED WITH GUM.

Which renders them very convenient, and well adapted for children, and persons who have a delicate or nervous constitution. They are also well adapted for the cure of Biliousness, Indigestion, and all the other disorders of the bowels, and are highly recommended by the most eminent Physicians of the day.

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS

It is a well known fact that Physicians have long sought to discover a vegetable purgative as a substitute for Calomel, and that would cleanse the Alimentary Canal of all diseased and retained humors, as thoroughly as Calomel will the stomach, without producing sickness at stomach, weakness, or irritation of the mucous membrane.

In Dr. Radway's Pills, this very important and essential principle is secured. A dose of two or six (according to the condition of the system) of Dr. Radway's Pills will produce all the positive alternative change—from a sluggish or torpid, to a healthy action of the Liver—as the physician hopes to obtain by a dose of Blue Pills, or Calomel; and will as thoroughly cleanse the Stomach, and purge from the bowels the diseased and retained humors as the most approved Calomel, or cathartic.

Professor Reid,—College of Pharmacy, THE GREAT PURGATIVE.

The celebrated Prof. Reid, of New York, Lecturer on Chemistry, and author of the "Pharmacology," writes of Dr. Radway's Pills as follows: "I have used your Pills in the treatment of Biliousness, and I can say that they are the best I have ever used. They are perfectly safe, and they produce a healthy action of the Liver, and they cleanse the Stomach, and purge from the bowels the diseased and retained humors as thoroughly as Calomel will the stomach, without producing sickness at stomach, weakness, or irritation of the mucous membrane."
