SKAGWAY PIONEER

Geo. A. Brackett Now in Dawson

Constructed and Operated Wagon Road and Trail to White Pass Summit.

Former Skagwayans are pleased to see on the streets of Dawson Mr. Geo. A. Brackett who accompanied the senatorial party to this place. Mr. Brackett came to Skagway from Minneapolis with the first rush in '97 and soon thereafter began the construction of his famous wagon road from Skagway to White Pass City, a distance of 16 miles, and a pack trail from White Pass City on to the summit of White Pass, a distance of 4 miles. Although a toll road it was a great convenience to the public and it was largely instrumental in the early development of the Klondike.

All the freight coming to this country via Lynn canal was handled either over Brackett's wagon and pack road or the Chilkoot tram until they were both superseded by the White Pass Railway Company which purchased the rights and franchises of both.

Mr. Brackett, after disposing of his road interests became heavily interested with his son Frank at Atlin in a hydraulic proposition to which place he expects to go direct from Dawson. He has great faith in the future of the Atlin country.

Mr. Brackett's family is now at their old home in Minneapolis.

On a Grand Scale

Washington, July 1.—Details of the splendid finale of the festivities at Kiel in honor of the American squadron reached the navy department today in the following cablegram from Rear Admiral Cotton, dated Kiel, June 30:

"Yesterday self, commanding officers, staff, lunched with Admiral von Keeter, commander-in-chief Kiel station. In afternoon self and officers of squadron gave reception on board kearsarge, attended by Prince and Princess Henry, their suites and distinguished officials of state, navy and army. Late afternoon self, staff, commanding officers took leave by special appointment of the emperor on board Hohenzollern, at which time self expressed warmest and most cordial sentiment for the president and the United States, regretted our short stay at Kiel and hoped that visit would soon be repeated. Evening our ambassador, self, staff, commanding officers were guests at dinner of Kiel Yacht Club, at which emperor and Prince Henry were present. Fine electrical and searchlight display by German and American squadrons. This morning the emperor left for Eckenforde to return tomorrow. As Hohenzollern passed flying royal standard, our squadron manned rails and saluted with thirty-three guns and German ensign at main, which was recognized by Hohenzollern tipping her ensign as she passed our squadron. Squadron sails at six o'clock today, to arrive Portsmouth July 7. Will stop two days at Kallumborg, Denmark. Machias goes through canal today to rejoin squadron off Portsmouth."

Not Healthy.
London, June 27.—There is no more jealous guardian of its country's well being than the Lancet. This week it draws attention to the hitherto unsuspected danger which is threatening the British race, and with anxiety in behalf of the proper perpetuation of that race which would surely command the sympathy of the President of the United States, this leading medical journal raises its voice against baby shows.

It is needless to say that the Lancet does not desire to discourage babies. It does not even object to baby shows per se. The mischief lies in the principle whereon the awarding of prizes in these shows has been based. From time immemorial the first prize has always been given to the fattest baby. Last week at the Walthamstow show fifty babies born in last March competed. The winner turned the scale at 16 1/2 pounds.

The Lancet points out that this is all wrong, and, turning the cold, scientific eye upon such a prize winner, does not see why a fat baby should be the pride of its mother's heart. On the contrary, it regards such an infant as a "carbohydrate or sugared infant, with a curiously translucent, almost opalescent, appearance of the tissues."

"Fat babies," the Lancet says, are "hypertrophic, square-headed infants. To the touch they are cold, gelatinous and flabby, with none of the elasticity and tone characteristic of a vigorous, healthy, breast-fed baby."

The paper goes on to argue that for this reason the prizes should not be awarded to the fattest, but to the medically fittest baby. It goes on to say: "Then, perhaps, mothers will be dissuaded of many of their misconceptions, among others of their admiration for hypertrophic, pathological types, which Raphael and others among the masters have perpetuated on canvas as pleasing standards of vigorous babyhood to be copied and admired."

Says He Must Go

Olympia, July 1.—The supreme court has wiped out the last hope of George Roberts that he would not have to go to California to answer the charge of grand larceny. The court today denied the application for a writ of prohibition to restrain Superior Judge Bell, of King county, from giving Roberts into the custody of Thomas H. Ryan, the state of California's agent in the extradition.

of Roberts. The decision also ends the habeas corpus proceedings instituted by Roberts and out of which the application for the writ of prohibition grew.

On the hypothesis that habeas corpus in this case was a criminal instead of a civil action, his attorneys did not file an appeal bond within five days of the time of taking the appeals in civil actions. The court holds, after quoting several authorities, that a habeas corpus is always a civil action, although frequently made use of by persons charged with crime. On this basis the court concludes as follows:

"The effect of the relator's position is to ask this court to issue a permanent writ of prohibition commanding the respondent to refrain from doing a thing which from the record before us is now manifestly beyond his power to do, since the appeal is ineffectual to stay proceedings. This would lead to an absurd result, and the position of the relator cannot be entertained."

Davis is Enjoined

Chicago, July 1.—George Davis, shortstop of the New York National League team, by the terms of President Pulliam's edict, has been enjoined from playing in Chicago with the New York team. An injunction was obtained today by Sharp, Meagher & Whitney, who are supposed to represent Charles Comiskey and other owners of the Chicago American team.

The question of the legality of serving the injunction notice on a holiday, as would have to be done in this case, inasmuch as the New York team is scheduled to play two games here on July 1, and one on the 5th, is causing considerable anxiety to the lawyers of the American League. The general opinion, however, is that such action would be entirely within the law.

The Nome jury in the case of the United States vs. J. J. Jolly, charged with the murder of former police officer James, returned a verdict of not guilty in less than 40 minutes from the time they retired. The first ballot was an informal one and stood 10 to 2 for acquittal. The next one was unanimous.

Jolly was chief of police and had dismissed James from the service for alleged "crookedness." He pleaded self-defense.

Claim of Insanity
Hamilton, O., July 1.—In the Knapp murder trial today Police Officer Motion testified to the vain search for the box Knapp said he had thrown away at Lindenwall. Prosecutor Gordon then rested, and Darby, of the defense, moved the court to order a verdict of "not guilty" on the ground that murder was not proven. Judge Beldon overruled the motion and the defense began.

The chief defense will be insanity. Knapp's mother, Mrs. Susan Knapp, was called. Her testimony strongly tended to prove that Knapp was insane as a result of injuries received in youth. The mother said that a colt had kicked him in the head when he was six years old at their home in Porter county, Indiana. He was unconscious for days, and always thereafter complained of pains in the head.

Later Knapp fell off a mow, and again injured his head. Brain fever followed the accident. He was struck on the head by a baseball bat at Moline, Ill., and again seriously hurt. The mother said she regarded Knapp as insane after these attacks.

Once he went away and said he was in San Francisco. His condition became so noticeable that the boys called him "Looney" Knapp. He wrote a play and tried to make his sister wear wings and impersonate an angel.

This afternoon Mrs. Knapp detailed her husband's action about the time of the alleged murder, relating numerous wild assertions and acts tending to show insanity. In reply to a direct question by lawyer Darby, she said that she thought Alfred was insane. Prosecutor Gordon in cross-examination tried to show that Mrs. Knapp's memory was not reliable. He succeeded in involving her in repeated contradictions and errors as to the date of accidents and other circumstances.

The deposition of Mrs. M. T. Marshall, Knapp's former teacher at Madison Ind., was read after Mrs. Knapp left the stand. Mrs. Marshall said that Knapp was a dull, disobedient boy, incapable of learning and lacking, in her opinion, all discrimination between right and wrong. She thought that he was unbalanced. He was often sick in school and subject to bad headaches.

Cyrus Knapp, of Cincinnati, a brother, said that on the date of the alleged murder he visited Knapp, who acted irrationally, sitting with his head in his hands. Knapp told him that he was an actor and he expected to be the next mayor of this city. Answering a direct question he said that he regarded Alfred Knapp as insane. Court adjourned.

Another Crusade

Berlin, June 27.—Mrs. Theodore Duimschen and Alfred Neumann have just published a book which is intended to start a crusade against the Standard Oil Company in Germany. That company always has been a subject of attack, but nothing before has been so fierce and so determined as this book, which undoubtedly is arousing a strong feeling. They argue that the Standard Oil Company is "the greatest American danger." They say there once was a flourishing German petroleum trade, but it is dead, and in a year or two nothing but the ships and tanks of the Standard Oil Company will be seen. "King" Rockefeller will have placed his heel on his German competitors and Germany will fall completely under his sway.

Mickey Walker and the Lady

Two hundred dollars reward for return of gold watch stolen from elderly lady between Cliff street and Parker avenue. No questions asked. Apply 1032 Parker avenue, city.

"Gee!" said Mr. Mickey Walters to himself as he read and reread the above advertisement in the Record. "This here super must be a prize for fair." Reaching into the depths of his trousers pocket, he brought forth a rich and much bejeweled timepiece and regarded it with reverential awe. "It's a beaut," continued Mr. Walters, with a sigh. "But if she ain't gone an' put her blamed initials in a dozen places, an' cut deep too, there ain't a fence in the place 'd handle the dagdasted thing." He once more perused the interesting offer. "Well," he went on, "it's the only thing left to do, I reckon, an' I'll bet dollars to doughnuts it's genuine an' safe. She's such an' innocent old party, an' she never saw me do it either. Two hundred plunks ain't bad—more'n Schwarz'd ever pay too."

He rose and carefully surveyed his features in a glass. Then he caught up a brush and mug and carefully lathered his upper lip. In five minutes he had transformed himself from a twenty-eight-year-old man to an eighteen-year-old boy. His rital age was always a matter of conjecture, and his youthful appearance had invariably been his strongest card, one that he had always saved until the last and then played with telling effect.

All that day an aged lady sat in a window at 1032 Parker avenue. She had long white curls which shook with each movement of her head. Her face had become weakened with age, but there still shone a kindly light in her sparkling black eyes. The doorbell rang, and a man in livery appeared. He announced the presence of a man below. The old lady directed that he be shown up.

The old lady started slightly when a slender, fair-haired youth entered—a youth with a frank and honest face. The youth himself was nervous just a bit, as he pulled from his pocket a crumpled piece of paper.

"Is this here straight goods, lady?" he inquired in a pleasant voice. "Cause I ain't done nothin' wrong myself, an' it wouldn't be right to mix me up in anything when I'm only tryin' to do you a favor. Is it straight goods?" She nodded.

"An'," he continued, "d'you mean that you'll give $200 for your watch, an' no questions asked? Is that right?"

Again she nodded. "That is right," she replied in a mild, quavering voice. "If my watch is returned I will gladly pay the money." As she spoke she took from her purse a few crisp bills. Mickey Walters hesitated for a moment and then pulled out the watch.

"Is that yourn, missis?" he asked. The old lady's eyes sparkled with delight as they beheld her treasured timepiece. She stretched forth both hands, one to deliver the money, the other to receive the watch. "I am glad—so glad—to get it back!" she exclaimed gratefully. Mickey Walters stood on one foot and counted the money.

"Gee!" he said to himself as he did so. "Gee! But she's an easy old party!" Under ordinary circumstances at this juncture he would have discreetly retired, but his interested glance, roving around the room, had lighted upon several articles of vertu on the table at his side. These articles were marketable either in their present form or melted up. Two hundred dollars is a good find, but there's no use of flinging away good chances besides; at least so thought Mickey. So he executed a sort of flank movement which placed him squarely in front of the coveted objects.

"Well, ma'am," he said as his hand stole around and deposited a soft gold salver in his trousers pocket. "This here paper says no questions asked, but I want to say to you that I ain't got nothin' to do with this here thing. My old man took it offen you, an' I took it offen him an' brought it here. I wouldn't take your two hundred only I want to live straight an' honest." His voice quavered as he went on, and he pocketed a gold pen. "Perhaps 'tain't right 'rime to give the old man away. I don't want to get him into trouble, but you won't never find out who he is—a fact which Mickey himself had never found out either.

The old lady nodded sympathetically. At that instant Mickey made away with a gold and jeweled paper knife. "Well, now, ma'am," he continued, a sudden idea striking him, "I must be goin', but I'd like to know one thing. Do you mind tellin' just how this watch was took offen you?" The old lady explained how she thought it had been done. Mickey shook his head deprecatingly.

"The old man's a slick one, missis," he returned. Suddenly his glance became fixed upon some object across the way. The old lady, seeing this, also turned her head. At that instant Mickey Walters leaned forward. The next instant the treasured timepiece was nestling snugly in his vest pocket. "Gee, but this is easy!" repeated Mickey to himself as he started off, but the old lady placed a detaining hand upon his arm.

"I want to get you a book," she said kindly. "What will help you to live an honest life. Wait till I return." She hastened out, shutting the door behind her.

"Blame her," said Mickey. "She'll find that watch gone now. It was dangerous, but Mickey was prepared for it. He placed the watch on the window sill, where, if she missed it, she could easily find it, and he did not he could easily get it again.

"There," exclaimed the old lady, bustling into the room, "is the small book of which I spoke." Mickey watched her smile. He saw that all was right, so he took possession of the watch once more. The old lady touched him on the arm. "Now, whatever you do, be honest, always honest, Mickey Walters."

Mickey started at the sound of his own name, but the old lady, kept on shaking her curls, and shook them so hard that a funny thing happened—they came off—and they left behind only a round pate covered with short hair and the weakened features of Mr. "Sneakers" Kelly, the crack-detective of the Central office. He coughed. A blue coated figure appeared at the door.

"Captain," exclaimed Mr. "Sneakers" Kelly, "allow me to present the slickest pickpocket in three states. Captain Burke, Mr. Mickey Walters. Better search him right here, cap-

You'll find a gold card tray on him, an' a paper cutter an' a pen an' a couple of them there small ink bottles an' a brace of candlesticks from the mantel, an' he's got that there watch, too, an' what's more, he's got two hundred plunks that belongs to me. An' Mickey," he concluded, "it's more than I can afford, an' that's what."

"Dad fetch the luck!" complained Mr. Walters severely. "An' I wanted to go fishin' tomorrow too!"

"Fishin'?" exclaimed the captain. "That's good. I'd like to go myself, but I don't know, Kelly, but that you can say we've been. By the way Mickey," he inquired, "how much d'you weigh?"

"But a hundred an' thirty," replied Mickey.

The captain stepped forward. "Say," he inquired of the culprit, "would you mind our sayin' down there now that it's a hundred an' seventy-five? My sergeant's a fisherman, an' weight alius counts with him."

When they reached the street, the detective suddenly halted. "Why Mickey," he exclaimed, "if you ain't gone an' forgot that there book I gave you after all!"

matter was never brought up at the colonial conference. Hence they argue the absence of urgency of strong Canadian grievance.

The Standard, the government organ, still hesitates, though it admits a predisposing tendency favoring Mr. Chamberlain, but warns the public against premature decision, and says that cautious critics will postpone enthusiasm for Chamberlain in order to keep the taxation proposals independent of the old age pension, with which they were not concerned. "It is right to modify the tariff," it says, "we ought to do so without offering a huge bonus to working classes in order to gain their assent to the change."

It is evident that Earl Onslow, president of the board of agriculture, is determined to follow Hanbury's policy, and make no relaxation in connection with the embargo against Canadian cattle. Speaking at a farmers' club yesterday of the recent arrival at Deptford of Argentine infected cattle, he said the board will spare no pains to protect the flocks and herds of Great Britain from disease which threatened to decimate them.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones today declined to interfere with the order already made for the transfer of Superintendent Terry, of the Puyallup Indian school, and as soon as Terry executes a new bond he will go to Round Valley, Cal.

H. F. Listen, as already announced, will succeed him at Puyallup. Commissioner Jones based his action on the unsatisfactory condition of the school as shown by the reports of the inspector and by personal observations, and not upon the ground of political expediency, although he acknowledged the change was recommended by a part of the Washington delegation in congress.

NEW SYSTEM

Of Telephone Brought to Dawson

by W. R. Holden

Mr. W. R. Holden, formerly in the government telegraph service stationed at Five Fingers, arrived in Dawson on the steamer Yukoner Wednesday. Mr. Holden is representing a German company, introducing a new invention called the Metaphone. The Metaphone is a private telephone system for use in office buildings, hotels, warehouses, hospitals, etc. It is a new invention having only been introduced in Germany, where it is manufactured, about two years ago and getting across the water in to Canada last year. Instead of speaking into the transmitter as in the regular system of the telephone you speak across, thereby getting a perfectly clear enunciation. It will transmit for a distance of five miles and is so sensitive that the faintest whisper as well as the loudest tones can be heard perfectly. Wherever it has been introduced Mr. Holden says it has given the greatest satisfaction and as it is well adapted for use in mines there is no doubt but that there will be a big demand for it.

American Suicide in Paris

Paris, June 27.—The prefect of police has notified Consul-General Gowdy that Samuel Jameson, an American, committed suicide June 22 and was buried in potters' field. An investigation showed that Jameson was born in Lebanon, Ohio, and that later he lived in St. Louis. He resided here for a number of years with his wife, receiving a regular income through a firm of attorneys of New York.

Deceased was 66 years of age and his wife is 64. Recently Mrs. Jameson became deranged and failed to recognize her husband. This proved on Jameson's mind and he cut his throat.

Mrs. Jameson's mental condition is considered to be hopeless. She is confined in the police infirmary.

Plaintiffs Obtain Judgment

Case Involving 55, Hill Bonanza

Judgment in the case of John W. Gillespie et al versus Edw. Cannell et al defendants was handed down by Gold Commissioner, as follows:

The plaintiffs are the owners of the hill claim opposite the upper limit of 54 below disc Bonanza creek, located by the owner on July 26th, 1898.

The defendant Cannell claims a fractional part of the hill claim opposite the upper limit of 54 below disc Bonanza creek, and the hill above mentioned on February 1903.

The case was heard before April, 1902, when the protest level. The defendants and on the hearing of the case that the case be sent to court in order that the submit further evidence for this evidence I heard on last.

The defendants' contention Messenger, who staked the in question, placed his post uphill end of the fraction, staked by Mr. Jepson. The hills on the other hand, of Messenger's posts were placed bottom of the hill close to O'Brien tramway, and their fractional piece of ground is Cannell.

In the spring of 1897, Mr. Jepson surveyed the creek claim area as far down as sixty feet, and from the evidence says that his post between Nos. 51 and 54 on the right of the creek stands at the stream corner of the fraction.

For the defense H. H. Smith saw a Messenger stake Ogilvie's post in March, 1898, and saw the post in the fall of '99. H. H. Smith states he saw the Messenger stake Ogilvie's post on the hill claim above Messenger's posts were placed two days after Messenger's posts were about 190 feet from the O'Brien tramway. O'Brien tramway ran a right limit of Bonanza claim down hill line of the hill claim.

The plaintiff, on the other hand, states that he saw a post near the 54 1/2 in 1898, Hansberg saw Messenger's stake close to the tramway in April, 1898. After the lower stake line of the tramway in May, 1898, Jepson saw the post on the tramway in 1898 and 1899. Plaintiff Gillespie and Edw. Cannell staked their hill claim in March, 1898, and their purchasing the hill claim.

For the defense H. H. Smith states Gillespie staked boundary between the creek claim at Ogilvie's post in March, 1898, but would not however be an obstacle in the position of the post, as in case Ogilvie's post of the side boundary of claim the hill claim would be ground below that height Messenger's post in position claimed by the hills. Mr. Jepson's survey Messenger claim would not have been found there was no hill claim that it was the position in which the post was staked. Messenger's posts affect the case as it is the boundary between the hills. When staking by post the distance of 1000 feet.

As to the "width" of the fraction claim, he says that the claim between the O'Brien tramway and the hill above the ground line, and he saw his post in the ground in the third one close to the hill claim.

Gillespie let a lay to the hill claim in October, 1898, and it appears that the work on the ground was under said lay previous to making.

Mainiffs Obtain Judgment in the Case Involving 55, Hill Side Bonanza

Judgment in the case in which John W. Gillespie et. al were plaintiffs and Edward Cannell et al were defendants was handed down yesterday by Gold Commissioner Senker as follows:
The plaintiffs are the owners of a hill claim opposite the upper half, right limit, of 54 below discovery on Bonanza creek, located by one Messenger on July 26th, 1898.
The defendant Cannell staked what he claims as a fractional piece of ground lying between 54 below discovery on Bonanza and the hill claim above mentioned on February 9th, 1902.
The case was heard before me in April, 1902, when the protest was allowed. The defendants appealed, and on the hearing of the appeal, I ordered that the case be sent back to this court in order that they might submit further evidence for hearing. This evidence I heard on May 5th, 1903.
The defendants' contention is that Messenger, who staked the hill claim in question, placed his posts at the uphill end of his fraction, as surveyed by Mr. Jepson. The plaintiffs, on the other hand, claim that Messenger's posts were placed at the bottom of the hill close to the old O'Brien tramway, and included the fractional piece of ground staked by Cannell.
In the spring of 1897, Mr. Ogilvie surveyed the creek claims on Bonanza as far down as sixty below discovery, and from the evidence it appears that his post between claims 53 and 54 on the right limit of the creek stands at the uphill upstream corner of the defendants' fraction.
For the defense H. H. Smith states he saw a Messenger stake beside Ogilvie's post in March, 1899. Bowyer saw the post in the same position in the fall of '99. B. L. Holmes states he saw the Messenger post beside Ogilvie's post on the day he staked it and Edward Peterson staked the hill claim above Messenger's claim two days after Messenger staked it, and he states that both Messenger's posts were about 100 feet uphill from the O'Brien tramway. The old O'Brien tramway ran along the right limit of Bonanza close to the town hill line of the defendant's fraction.
For the plaintiff, on the other hand, Brown states he saw Messenger's posts near the O'Brien tramway in 1898. Hamberg saw both of Messenger's stakes close to the tramway in April, 1898. Applequist saw the lower stake lying down close to the tramway in May, 1898. William Dubau saw the posts near the tramway in 1898 and 1899 and the plaintiffs Gillespie and Jarvis both saw the stakes close to the tramway in March, 1899, previous to their purchasing the ground for $200.
For the defense S. G. Campbell states Gillespie showed him the boundary between the creek and hill claims at Ogilvie's post in 1900; this could not however be an admission as to the position of Messenger's posts, as in case Ogilvie's post showed the side boundary of the creek claim the hill claim could not claim ground below that point although Messenger's posts were in the position claimed by the plaintiffs. Mr. Jepson's survey of the Messenger claim would not affect the case as I find there was no admission by Gillespie that it was correct and the position in which Mr. Jepson placed the uphill Messenger post would not affect the case as locators are not to misjudge distances especially when measuring by pacing uphill a distance of 1000 feet.
As to the work on the hill claim, Peterson states he saw Messenger working on the claim before the present owners purchased. He worked the hill above the ground in dispute, and he saw him put down two stakes in the ground in dispute, also a third one close to the upper line of the fraction.
Gillespie let a lay to the brother of the defendant in October, 1901, and it appears that the defendant was working on the ground in dispute under said lay previous to the staking.
Mr. Barwell and Mr. Gillespie are of the opinion that the Messenger location notice at the upstream end, close to the Ogilvie post, is not a genuine notice, and considering the evidence of the original position of the Messenger posts, I am of opinion, some weight should be given to this evidence. There is no positive evidence of the original position of Messenger's location posts, Messenger is away himself and none of the witnesses saw him stake. To put the case as fairly as possible, if all other points in the case were equal, the evidence as to the position of the location posts is in favor of the defendants, owing to one witness stating he saw Messenger's posts beside Ogilvie's post on the day Messenger staked, coupled with the fact that at the time Messenger staked he was not apt to stake a hill claim from Ogilvie's stake back, as a locator at that time would usually assume that Ogilvie's post would show the side boundary of the creek claim, but as I stated, this evidence is not positive. The Messenger posts may have been moved shortly after they were placed in the ground by the original locator. I think the fact that the plaintiffs owned this hill claim so long before Cannell staked, the fact that they and their predecessors did so much work on the ground in dispute, at considerable expense after purchasing the ground for the sum of $2500, and from the fact that the plaintiffs believed from the time they purchased in March, 1899, over two years before the defendant Cabbage staked, that they had a good title to the ground in dispute, puts the defendants in such a position that they must show positively that the ground in dispute was not included within the Messenger location posts before they can deprive them of this ground, and there is no doubt that the regulations, intended that the locator of a hill claim include all the ground from the creek claim uphill, and it is the intention of every hill locator to commence at the side boundary of the creek claim when he locates.

The grant of the Cannell fraction is hereby cancelled and the protest is allowed with costs.

A WRONG START

Made by William McIntyre a Chechaco

William McIntyre, a chechaco who arrived in Dawson about two weeks ago, acknowledged to his lordship in the police court that he had made a start in the wrong direction after he had pleaded guilty to the charge of drunk and disorderly. William was very contrite and pledged himself to be of good behavior in the future. This being his first offense a fine of $1 and costs was imposed. William was short of ready money having but 25c left after his spree. It was shown that he had been simply helplessly intoxicated without creating any disturbance and his lordship ordered him to be released and told him to pay the $9 when he had earned it.

New Quartz Club

The first meeting of the Co-operative Quartz Club was held on the second floor of the Standard Library on Second avenue at 8:30 last evening. The meeting was well attended and a number of members enrolled.

The object of this new club is to advance the quartz industry of the Yukon, and assist the prospector in developing his property. Everyone interested in the development of quartz is invited to be present at the next meeting of the club, which will take place Monday, the 13th inst., at 9 p.m. at the same place, free of any cost. There will be at the next meeting an interesting speaker who is a practical quartz miner who will deliver an address.

Narrow Escape.

A serious accident was very narrowly averted last evening on Third avenue about 8 o'clock. Mr. Stanley Secares, the commission merchant, and Mrs. Secares were just starting from the store for a drive when the horse became frightened and started down the street at a break-neck pace, kicking and rearing as it went. It looked as if the frail buckboard in which they were riding would be broken to pieces at any moment and when the horse in one of its violent plunges threw one of its hind legs over the shaft people of the street held their breath fearful of what the consequence might be. Mr. Secares never for a moment lost his presence of mind and managed to turn the horse into the sidewalk after they had gone about two blocks. The suddenness with which the turn was made threw the horse, which still had its foot over the shaft, on its side, but a party standing near caught the buggy before it went over and another man held the horse until the occupants of the vehicle had alighted. The buggy was slightly damaged but otherwise no damage resulted.

ROTHSCHILD IN YUKON

Member of the German Family on Hunker

Is Negotiating for Purchase of Seven Miles of Hunker Claims.

Although the gentleman did not herald his arrival from the housetops there has been a real Rothschild member of the famous family of wealth and financial fame in this locality for nearly two weeks. The gentleman is of the German branch of the Rothschild family and is the New York representative of the great banking house which is interested in not less than twenty New York banks and is always seeking new fields for the investment of capital.
The baron, as the gentleman is called on Hunker where he has spent nearly all his time since landing in Dawson, represents the syndicate that owns the majority of the stock in the Williams concession on Hunker and it is to acquire more property that he is now here. He is now negotiating for the purchase of all the creek, sidehill and bench claims on Hunker for a distance of seven miles above the Williams concession and if the deal is consummated the big tract will be worked on the hydraulic system by water taken from Rock creek. The baron says:
"Show me that there is gold in the ground and I will buy the property."
His company already has two big dredgers here and five more have been ordered from an Ohio manufactory. Should the syndicate obtain control of the property in question it will constitute the most gigantic mining enterprise ever undertaken in the Yukon.

WM. LONG IS GUILTY

Of Picking Pocket of John Vinnie

On July Fourth of a Large Sum of Money Amounting to $2790.

William Long who was arrested on July 4th caught with a roll of bills in his hand amounting to $2790, was this morning pronounced guilty of stealing the said roll from the pocket of John Vinnie, the owner of the said roll, who was standing about a foot from Long and who happened to miss the roll and grab the right man at the same time.

The story of the crime, as has already been published, was to the effect that Vinnie standing on First avenue in front of the Sideboard saloon, watching the catching of the greased pig, felt someone bump into him and turning felt for his roll of bills which was in his hip pocket and discovering its absence immediately grabbed Long who was standing just behind him. Long had his right hand in his own hip pocket and Vinnie grabbed that and found therein the roll of bills and a silk handkerchief which was in the pocket also. Vinnie secured the roll and immediately began calling for the police, still holding to Long's coat and his hand slipping broke the latter's watch chain.

The roll of bills was made up of twenty-two $100s, seven $50s, ten $20s and four $10s. When recovered it was still intact and in the same condition as when last seen previously by Vinnie.

The evidence was pretty strong against him although the explanation of the accused was not lacking in a singular particular. The accused stated that he had been standing on the sidewalk watching the greased pig contest. He was smoking at the time and had looked down to expectorate when his eyes lighted on the roll which was lying on the sidewalk. He stooped to pick it up and had just done so when the informant Vinnie grabbed it out of his hand at the same time catching hold of him and calling for the police. He (Long) then said, "What's the matter with you? Take your hands off," and jerked back. Vinnie then tried to get another hold, and catching the watch chain jerked the watch from the pocket breaking the chain. Long then gave Vinnie a shove and he fell backward. He then stooped to pick up his watch when Vinnie grabbed his legs and the police came and arrested both.

In answer to questions put by the crown prosecutor during the cross-examination the witness stated that Detective Welsh had called at his cell and after informing him of his position and saying that anything he said would be used against him, he asked him who his friends were and if anyone was with him. He replied that he had no friends. "The detective then told me," said the accused, "that I was accused of stealing $3,000 from the old man and that I had better plead guilty and tell my friends' names, saying that he, the detective, would not go to state's prison for any man."

In reply to questions put by one of the jurymen the accused stated that by occupation he is a quartz miner and that he has worked in a machine shop.

Detective Welsh was then called and stated that shortly after the arrest he had gone to the barracks to take a look at the prisoner and find out from him if he had any friends, in order if he really were a pick-pocket and there were others to corrupt the bunch. The prisoner stuck to the story that he had no friends and that he knew nothing of the case. He said when told of the crime he was charged with that the old gentleman must have dropped something on the sidewalk and thought he had gotten it. He did not know what it was and said he had not picked it up.

Attorney Wm McKay acting for the accused made a strong plea in behalf of his client and Attorney Pattullo made an equally strong talk for the crown. The case was then given to the jury who were out only a few minutes when the verdict of guilty was returned. The jury was composed of the following: Arthur Maynard, M. G. McLeod, David Sietkisch, E. H. O. Vandin, W. H. Moffat and Chas. Barwell. Sentence will be pronounced next Monday.

SENATORIAL OUTING

Bonanza and Eldorado Yesterday

Visitors Much Interested in Process of Mining—Dine With Governor.

The senatorial party had a delightful outing on Bonanza and Eldorado yesterday. The party drove to Grand Forks where a newspaper man was picked up, none being taken from Dawson, and continued on to 26 Eldorado, where luncheon was served to the entire party by the well known and popular captains of industry, Charley Worden and Sam Stanley. Returning Mayor McLennan met the party at Grand Forks where short "rives" were held. A stop was made at the big dredger on discovery and further down at Fuller & Norwood's where a cleanup was witnessed. The party returned to Dawson at 7:30 in the evening highly delighted with the day's experience, it being the first mining ever witnessed by Senators Dillingham, Burnham and Nelson, but to the gentleman from Colorado, Senator Patterson. It was an old, old story except for the process of thawing which to him was also new.

This forenoon the senatorial party visited Mr. Justice Dugas' court in the territorial building and this afternoon they were taken across the Yukon by Emil Staff in his launch for the purpose of visiting the West side farms and gardens.

This evening the entire party will dine with Governor Congdon at the executive mansion.

A Free Fare.

Yesterday afternoon the four o'clock stage of one of the stage companies returning from the creeks stopped at the corner of Third avenue and Harper street to let a passenger off who was going to the Cecil hotel. Another passenger with intention descended and started to walk off when the driver called after him.

"Where is your fare?" "Hey?" replied the man. "What are you, traveling on—your face?" roared the driver. "Where is your fare?"

"Oh, that is all right. I am the man at the office, they know me," he replied as he continued walking down the street. The driver did not seem to know whether to take his word for it or not but having a big load he did not run after the man to press the argument but after the other passenger had gotten off, he picked up the lines and whipping up his horses continued on his journey.

The baseball game tonight will be played by the Idaho Hour and Grandolfo teams, and will be called promptly at 7:30.

SUICIDE THE VERDICT

Of Coroner's Jury in the Case of Clein

The coroner's jury is holding an inquest this afternoon over the body of Jacob Clein, the suicide who shot himself yesterday afternoon on 6th ave., between York and Duke Sts. The jury is composed of D. A. Matheson, Geo. Barnes, C. M. Carter, J. A. Hamilton, M. D. Campbell and Richard Chapman.

The witnesses called for the examination were Robt. Borg, Mrs. Chas. Bossuyt, Mrs. Clein (wife of the deceased), Constable Burke and Constable Taylor.

The jury visited the undertaking parlors of J. A. Greene where the body was viewed and then went to the barracks where the evidence was taken.

At 10 minutes of four o'clock this afternoon the jury returned the verdict that the deceased came to his death by a bullet wound inflicted by his own hand.

The Swedish government is about to impose a tax at a fixed rate per pound on all persons weighing over 125 pounds. The fat man, it is held, gets more than his equitable share of the good things of life and should pay for the extra space, air and edibles he consumes. This leads a railway contemporary to argue that it is inequitable to charge the same price for carrying a 100-pound passenger, occupying single-seat space, as for a 300-pound individual, requiring twice as much room. Passenger rates, it is held, should be fixed by the pound. Excess weight of baggage is charged for, who not excess weight of passenger? The trunk is less important and requires less care than its owner. But the proposal has not been received with universal favor. The policy of the corpulent man is entitled to recognition in rate-making, serving, as it does, to lessen the grumbling caused by late trains or other defective service.
