The Way to Keep Down the Cost of Living:

Buy Your Groceries, Teas & Coffees From WENTZELL'S Limited.

From one end of the Province to the other WENTZELL'S LIMITED is known as the "Big Store." It is known as a store having a big stock, a big variety, and giving big value—the only part that is small is the price.

WENTZELL'S LIMITED buy in the very largest quantities direct from sources of supply. Having ample capital, they pay cash, thus securing everything at the very lowest market prices.

The policy of the "Big Store" is "large sales and small profits." This has built up a tremendous business, nothing like it east of Montreal. That's the reason why the "Big Store" prices are always so reasonable, and why you can keep down the cost of living if you trade here.

Free Delivery Offer.

We pay the freight on all orders amounting to $10.00 and over, except for such heavy goods as sugar, flour, molasses, salt, oil, etc. If your name is not on our mailing list, send it along, so that you will receive our catalogue and special lists as they are published.

First Mail by Air Craft.

The New York World has had the first mail matter delivered by air craft. A big bundle of The World papers on the morning of May 25 was placed aboard a Curtiss flying machine in New York City and the aerial machine started for Washington, 225 miles, where it arrived in three hours and four minutes.

Lord Kitchener's Successor.

A despatch from London dated June 28th says: "Partly as a result of the activities on the various war fronts this week a widespread belief has been created that the next fortnight will see the most important news of the war."

'It Might Hae Been Waur.'

A story is told of an old village worthy who was an optimist of the most pronounced type. No matter what calamity or catastrophe when Sandy heard of it his invariable answer was, 'Ah, well, it might hae been waur.' Man were the traps laid to catch Sandy, but to no purpose. Two or three of his comrades put their heads together with the following result:—One of them approached Sandy. 'Man,' says he, 'I had an awful dream about ye last night. 'Ay,' says Sandy, 'what was that? 'I dreamt the del' came in person and took ye awa' in his clutches. Sandy was nonplussed for a moment, then came the answer. 'Weel, it might hae been waur.' 'But, think, Sandy,' said his companion in horrified accents, 'what could be waur than that?' 'Ah, weel,' said Sandy with a triumphant gleam in his eye, 'it might hae been true.'

The Rev. Edwin Smith pastor of a Presbyterian Church, Tilsonburg, Ont., has accepted a commission as Lieutenant in the Royal Navy. He has been released from his congregation till the end of the war. He is about to add to his varied experiences that of submarine chasing on the Atlantic. Mr. Smith is a native of Merigomish and has labored in the Province of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Danger in Face Powder.

With the advent of hot sunbath and the use of powder to prevent the tender skin being burned, a word of warning is necessary. Some preparations of face powder are the cause of inflammation of the eyes. This form of inflammation occurs from obvious reasons—almost exclusively in women. They will complain that the vision is blurred; that they cannot read or sew for any length of time; that the lids burn and itch, sometimes intolerably, and that rubbing the lids only aggravates the itching.

Sugar for Wounds.

German army doctors are using sugar with great success in the treatment of wounds. The method is as simple as possible. The wound is dressed with granulated sugar, and then bound. The sugar does not act as a disinfectant, and must not be applied until bleeding has been arrested. But when applied to a clean wound surface healing proceeds with astonishing rapidity. No washing of the wound is necessary when re-dressing, which is merely a matter of re-sowing the application of sugar every second or third day. The sugar-dressing has also the advantage that there is no adhesion to the flesh.

Whooping Cough.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Licuand and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of producing piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Worse Still.

Someone ago an eminent physician requested an equally eminent physician to accompany him to see a distinguished patient, and he readily agreed. The patient (who was always very loath to pay his debts) was exceedingly polite to both the medical men, shaking hands with them and bowing them out of the room in the most affable manner. Soon after this professional visit the same physician called again on the surgeon, requesting him to see another patient. On their way thither the surgeon remarked: 'I hope this patient will behave more liberally than the last did.' 'Why,' said the physician, 'did he not give you a fee?' 'Not a shilling,' was the reply. 'Indeed,' said he, 'with a tons of his head—Why, he borrowed five guineas of me to give to you.'

Canadian Timber Values.

According to a recent Commerce Report the values of the various classes of timber produced in Canada in 1914, together with the values of the forest products, total $176,672,000, being divided as follows: Lumber, lath and shingles, $67,500,000; fire wood, $60,500,000; pulpwood, $15,500,000; posts and rails, $9,500,000; cross ties, $9,000,000; square timber exported, $4,000,000; cooperage, $1,900,000; poles, $700,000; logs exported, $250,000; tanning material, $25,000; round mining timbers, $500,000; miscellaneous exports, $300,000; miscellaneous products, $10,000,000.

Paper Coal.

The problem of supplying the soldiers of Italy with fuel while they are battling up in the mountains wholly bare of wood is being met by patriotic girls and boys at home, which shows, too, that the ingenuity of the Germans in solving acute domestic and military problems is matched at least in this instance, in Italy. The new fuel, in the preparation of which thousands of children are concerned, is called "coal paper," though "paper coal" would do as well.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., JUNE 30, 1916.

Editorial Brevities.

It is stated that in some parts of Northern France, where the fighting has been heaviest, towns have simply disappeared, where formerly hundreds of people had their homes.

Lunenburg has adopted the Curfew Bell. No boy under fourteen, or girl under 15 shall, be on the streets after nine o'clock at night unless accompanied by their parents or an authorized adult guardian.

It really would seem as if the Kaiser were literally between the devil and the deep sea. That is he can only escape from the hug of the Russian bear on the eastern frontier by falling into the mouth of the British lion on the western frontier or having his eyes picked out by the French eagle. No wonder the German Chancellor now says that Germany has not the slightest intention of retaining Belgium after the war is over!

The ACADIAN has already referred to the difficulty experienced by the care-taker of the government building in keeping those visiting the premises from walking on the grass instead of using the walks provided. We would again call attention to the matter with the hope that more results may follow. Citizens who take an interest in their town must be proud of the fine appearance of this property and should be not only willing but glad to assist in beautifying it.

The plot of railway ground near the station now presents a very fine appearance. The management has had the ground neatly fenced and the town authorities have put in some more shrubs and made other improvements. Some years ago this lot was secured by the Wolfville Board of Trade and quite an amount of money was expended upon it. Of late, however, it has been somewhat neglected. We are glad to see the improvement noted above and trust the good work can be extended here and elsewhere in the town.

Great Britain never pretended to be a military power outside of India, but thanks to the Kaiser and the creative genius of the late Lord Kitchener she has now at her command in Europe alone over 5,000,000 troops. Germany boasted of the great parade of troops she made through the streets of Brussels at the outbreak of the war but Great Britain's army of 5,000,000 men marching four abreast would in close formation stretch over 2,000 miles in length. This says nothing of the trains of commissariat and other supplies.

One reason given for the victorious return of the local government in the elections held last week was that their organization was greatly superior to that of their opponents. This is largely due, we suppose, to the fact that they have been so long in power that practically every official is a supporter and worker on election day. This was very manifest last week in any who were observing the activity in and around the polling booths. Whatever may be said of the Murray government they are certainly good politicians.

Germany manifestly recognizes her perilous situation. Having failed in indirect negotiations with various countries to act as an intermediary for peace, she now approaches Spain but while Great Britain may treat any negotiations from Spain with the utmost respect, yet it will be a decided negative presented in a respectful manner. There can be no peace until terms are dictated by the Allies as the result of triumph in this war. Great Britain especially did not willingly put her hand to the plough, but having done so, true to the traditions of the English speaking races, she will plough the furrow to the end, no matter what obstacles may need to be overcome. It is a duty we owe to our children and to our children's children to bequeath to them the same heritage of peaceful opportunity for national development as our ancestors bequeathed to us.

The Allies terms of peace—obviously these must include the evacuation of the occupied territories. The purely physical problem of restoring Belgium, Montenegro, Serbia, Poland, and the North France departments. But there is also the spiritual problem of what has been called militarism. The only really effective defeat of Germany must be the defeat of her principles. To clear the enemy out of a strip of Italy and out of Belgium and the other occupied territories, is only a question of time and paying the price in men and money. But that alone would not solve the problem of the war. So long as German Possessors are allowed to preach a non-civilized morality of supremacy and so long as the people of Germany, from Social Democrats upwards, believe in them, the world will continue to sleep on a uneasy couch.

There is only one way to smash this idleness. It is to let out on Germany crushing defeat in the field and to occupy German territory by the Allied Armies. A decisive military and naval defeat of Germany will achieve this end and that defeat is inevitably coming. When it comes the "conquered" territories will be restored and the German people will be brought into line with the rest of the civilized world.

Agricultural Education.

That the policy of the Federal Government in providing a subsidy of ten million dollars, spread over a period of ten years, towards furthering agricultural education in the different provinces, is bearing good fruit is abundantly proven by the second annual report of the commissioner of Agriculture. This report is for the year ending March 31st, 1915, and tells in detail how the money has been applied. It shows that while much remains to be done before the work is perfected in rural schools a great deal has been achieved. Teachers have had to be trained and for this purpose short courses have been held in connection with all the agricultural colleges, generally in the summer vacation, and the attendance has everywhere been satisfactory. Funds for this purpose came out of grants made by the Dominion under the Act. New buildings have been erected, old buildings enlarged, schools better equipped, higher salaries and more experienced instructors engaged, teachers specially trained, college extension work greatly extended, boys' and girls' competitions encouraged, the district representative system widened and developed, demonstration methods increased in number and improved in scope and character, and women's work at home and abroad aided institutionally and otherwise.

In short, there is not a branch of agricultural education or of home economics in any of the provinces that has not been beneficially influenced by the operation of the act in providing more funds than would otherwise have been available for these activities. The provinces having been left free to use the grants, which have increased from $700,000 in 1914 to $900,000 in 1916, and will be $1,000,000 each of the succeeding six years—as they thought fit within the purposes intended, the applications have not always been identical, but in the report every item in detail is set forth. The story of every province is told, furnishing interesting reading for every well wisher of the agricultural industry and every member of the farming community. A letter to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, will bring the report free of all charge.

No Lack of Officers.

The heavy casualties among officers in the recent fighting make it possible that some of the very large number in Canada who have qualified but are still unattached may get an opportunity to go to the front, although it is well known that there are many officers still in England who for one reason or another were left behind when their units left for France. There has never been any trouble in getting officers. An Ottawa despatch to the Toronto World says: "There is at present a surplus of 3,700 duly qualified officers for whom there are no places in the various units for overseas service. Some 3,000 of them are infantry and artillery officers. About 500 casualties have occurred among officers in the recent heavy fighting at the front, and as this is more than any surplus of Canadian officers in England now, a certain number of the surplus here will be absorbed. As far as the great bulk of the surplus in Canada is concerned, however, they will be at the summer camps and will get some practical experience in drilling and handling men. There may also be a plan to have them go to the front as non-commissioned officers and receive their promotions to the rank of lieutenant as openings occur."

There is no danger of any falling off in the crop of officers at home or in England, but why should not the places of dead and wounded officers be filled wherever possible by promotion on the field? There are many very bright young men who enlisted as privates, and who after six months or a year in the trenches are better qualified to lead men than young officers are who have had no experience at the front and probably owe their appointment to political influence rather than merit.

What a pity it is that we cannot say there is a surplus of recruits for the ranks of private soldiers. But since there are enough unattached officers to make up nearly four battalions, why not invite them to form at least two battalions from among themselves? It would be a fine example.

A Bitter Fact For The Kaiser.

Providence Journal:—Said the Kaiser, addressing the crews of the battered High Sea Fleet, upon its return from its first meeting with the British armament: "The English fleet was beaten; whatever you have done you did that, in the future, Germany may have freedom of the seas for its commerce." But there is no more freedom for German commerce than there was before the fight. If a German merchant gets an order for a package of postcards, from any part of the world more distant than Scania, he must appeal to the Allies as he has been doing, for permission to ship them. All the Kaiser's boasting cannot obscure that bitter fact.

The labor department at Ottawa is looking into the matter of increased prices and where these prices are not absolutely justified, the government will see that a reduction is made. Hon. Mr. Crothers is getting after the milk dealers in several Ontario towns. Those will be the terms of peace of the Allies.

Preserving Fruit Without Sugar.

"Preserving Fruit Without Sugar" was the subject of an address by W. E. McTaggart, fruit markets commissioner of British Columbia, at the recent session of the Retail Merchants' Association held in Winnipeg. The speaker told the assembly that if fruit sales were to be up to the average in the coming Autumn the women must be told how to preserve fruit without sugar or they would refuse to put down preserves.

If there is one thing more than another, he said, that has engaged the attention of the western retailers during the past few weeks it is the increasing price of sugar. Merchants, jobbers, growers and brokers have had their eyes on this commodity as it has soared in price from day to day. Customers now look askance at anything that requires sugar in its preparation. After long sessions of experimenting it was found that fruit could be preserved in such a manner that it would retain its original fruitiness. The recipe is simple; this is it: The fruit is prepared in the ordinary way, the jars are cleaned and scalded, while the rubbers and tops are boiled. The fruit is then placed in the jars in which cold water is placed. When the jars have been readied and they are placed in a boiler filled with cold water which is brought to a boiling point berries should be removed when the boiling point is reached while larger fruits, such as peaches, cherries, plums and apricots should receive 20 to 30 minutes of boiling.

Hague Conferences.

Sir Harry Johnston, in the London Chronicle, sets forth very clearly why there can be no more Hague Conferences, and very properly mocks at the suggestion that the United States should call such a conference at the end of the war. If former Hague Conferences could not save Belgium, nothing of value can be expected of them in the future; and it would be a grave impertinence for nations which remained neutral after the violation of Belgium to offer themselves as a guarantee that there would be no future violations of a similar character. As Sir Harry Johnston points out, the Allied nations must look to their own united efforts to save the world from a repetition of such acts as caused the present war. They will welcome the support of nations now neutral, but they will take care that their own ideals are not left to the mercy of those who saw Belgium violated without raising a hand. This war has proved the utter futility of Hague Conferences. The Allied nations, when they have crushed German militarism, will, with or without the cooperation of neutrals, take such measures as will prevent the Central Powers from ever again bringing upon the world a war so unjust in its inception, and so terrible in its destruction of human life and property. The Allied nations are the victors.

Land For Veterans.

Rhodesia has shown the way to the other colonies by placing at the disposal of the British government half a million acres of land for the settlement of British war veterans. The Imperial Commissioner, Sir Rider Haggard, who is visiting the colonies in the interests of the movement to provide for the after-war settlement of British soldiers, expects similar grants from Australia and New Zealand. Canadian provinces, as well as the Federal government, will probably find this Imperial project worthy of support on patriotic grounds, as well as on the more selfish ground that it offers the opportunity to secure a very desirable body of settlers. During the period of reconstruction following the war a large exodus from the British Isles is anticipated, for which Canada should benefit as much, if not more, than any other colony.

New York city justices of the court of special sessions have decided on most severe treatment for intoxicated persons driving autos. One year in penitentiary and a fine of $500 will be their portion. There will be no occasions hereabout when with such a law in effect there would have been opportunity to collect.

Here is a little story that the suffragists will be glad to clip for their scrap-books. During a supper-party a gentleman in conversation with Madam Duse remarked that it was absurd for women to expect equal rights with men. "Man was made first," he said, "and woman sprang from man."

"Quite so," replied the actress quietly. "It is natural for the fower to come after the stem, but surely you do not call that an indication of inferiority."

Wheeling The Ice.

There is no worse pride than wanting to seem to be humble. A college student who recognized this temptation said to an older Christian friend: "How do you get away from this? I was wheeling a lot of ice with one of the fellows. He said, 'let's go by the road.'" "No," said I, "let's go across the grass." Now the reason I wanted to go across the grass was so that the people in the dormitory should see me wheeling the ice."

This college student clearly recognized that he wanted to get the credit for the humility of being willing to do a menial task. Only he was franker than most of us who eagerly hope for just that sort of credit from the people who are watching our lives. When we are ready to let Christ deliver us from the selfish sin of wanting to seem humble, he can begin to work the miracle of accomplishing true humility in our otherwise self-serving lives.—S. S. ### Compulsory Training.

Australia has adopted a system of compulsory military training for every young man between the ages of twelve and twenty-six years. From the ages of twelve to eighteen, athletic exercises and shooting are a part of the regular school work. The junior cadets have not less than fifteen minutes daily for one hundred and twenty days a year, and the senior cadets considerable more. At the age of eighteen years the young man becomes a citizen soldier, and for the next eight years gives from sixteen to twenty-five days a year to training, a part of the time in camp.

Safeguarded.

The following is a bona fide statement made by a seven-year-old girl who had listened to medical talk all her life. Being asked her father's business, she replied:

"My father is a doctor, but he isn't a quack! My father's got a license, so if he kills anyone they can't arrest him!"

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

Ever receive the proper balance of food to scientifically nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown by many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses the concentration from the very best elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes their sturdy and strong and active.

The History of Gasoline.

AT ONCE THE INFANT TERROR OF THE OIL INDUSTRY.

Gasoline first compelled public attention in the role of the little demon in the kerosene or oil lamp. In this capacity it kept the coroner and the insurance adjuster working overtime.

When crude oil was first discovered in the Pennsylvania district the public received it as a cure-all for a disease instead of fuel or an illuminant.

Then it was discovered that by subjecting it to distillation a certain portion of it could be used for lighting purposes, to supplant candles and lamps using whale oil and vegetable oils.

But it was found that a considerable fraction—about 20 per cent.—of this oil had so low a boiling point that it was so volatile and explosive, that it was extremely dangerous in lamps.

At the sign of the coal oil lamp of that pioneer period fires and explosions were the prevailing program.

It was soon seen by the refiner that it kerosene was to become a popular illuminant, the "light boiling portion" must be taken off the top and disposed of in some other way.

For a considerable time it was turned into the nearest streams and allowed to dispose of itself by evaporation; but experience proved that this was a very unwise method of disposal. The refiners were forced to recognize the fact that in some way they must find a legitimate commercial outlet for this volatile fluid, which was so explosive that it could not be dumped without great peril to life and property.

Under the pressure of this economic necessity, about 1875, a man named Hull, who was in touch with the Cleveland refiners, invented a "kerosene stove of today. For a time this furnished a very considerable outlet. A considerable quantity of gaso-line was consumed at this period in street lamps and out-door lighting systems.

About 1903 the motor car, with its internal combustion engine, appeared on the scene—just in time to rescue gasoline consumption from a decided setback, due to the fact that gas had come into general use for lighting and heating purposes, and was able, on account of its greater cheapness and safety to push gasoline out of competition to a greater extent.

Gasoline has in short, pushed King Kerosene from the throne. The outcast, in the infant terror of the oil industry, has now become the center of the whole empire of petroleum commerce, and there are few who do not pause at the sign of the garage pump to pay him tribute.

A friend of mine once gave out a notice which one would rather have left unissued. While the preacher was actually in the pulpit, he announced: "The collection today will be to get rid of the dry-rot in the pulpit."

"Mamma," asked three-year-old Freddie, "are we going to Heaven some day?" "Yes dear, I hope so," was the reply. "I wish your mother could go too," continued the little fellow. "Well, and don't you think he will?" asked the mother. "Oh, no!" replied Freddie; "he couldn't leave his business."

Towards the end of a tiresome long play an actor came on in a prison scene and began picking at the walls of his cell with an iron bar. Pausing and wiping his brow, he said: "This will take years."

"Good night," said a youth in the gallery.

"Thank you, I will take the Nerve Food with me."

"I don't want to miss a single dose, because it is doing me so much good. My nerves were so bad that I could not rest or sleep, and would get up in the morning feeling tired out."

"Besides that, I frequently had severe nervous headaches and got so cross and irritable that every little noise would set my nerves on edge. I did not seem to have any energy or strength, and the slightest exertion would use me up entirely."

"Then a friend told me of the benefit she obtained from using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I decided to give it a trial. It was not long till I found that I was sleeping better and enjoying my meals. There did not seem to be so much to worry me, and I began to find a new pleasure in life. It is just the way the Nerve Food is helping up my health and strength, and since I have been using it I have found out that many of my lady friends have had a similar experience."

This is the way women everywhere are talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Seldom has any treatment ever aroused so much favorable comment. While natural and gentle in action, this food cure is wonderfully potent in building up the run-down system. Ask your friends about it and put it to the test when in need of restorative treatment.

The Heartening Drum.

HEPPEL A MARSHAL OF FRANCE TO SAVE HIS ARMY.

A general must always preserve his dignity, but he should be prepared to do almost anything, even to taking a spade in the trenches, to keep his men in good heart in critical situations. Many such crises occurred during the terrible retreat of the French from Moscow in 1812, when what we should call blizzards prevailed.

The cold wind and the French soldiers, who were left a simple memoir of his experiences. He relates that one bitter day in the Wilna road the men were sinking on every side, when Marshal D'umout, Prince of Eckmuhl, rode up and shouted to the colonel:

"Twelfth of the line! Where are your drums?"

The colonel answered, "for 12 days now I have had no drummer left but little Maurice here."

"My young friend," said the marshal to the boy, "go to the head of the line and lead the march!"

Maurice went to the head of the line. He beat the march as hard as he could. The men's hearts were quickened by the roll of the drum. They marched on bravely. They held an impregnable place in the line, and the march led by the side of the little drummer.

For three-quarters of an hour Maurice beat the drum. Then the sounds began to fail. His hands were at it with cold. His face and ears were frozen. Tears ran down his cheeks and froze on his chin as they fell.

"Prince," said the boy, "I can't keep it up any longer, I am frozen."

Better fall behind and die, like the other drummers! He'd rather go to sleep and die that way than suffer so cruelly."

Marshal D'umout said nothing, but got down from his horse, gave it to an orderly and took the drum from Maurice's hands. D'umout had worked his way up from a low grade and in his early service had learned to drum.

He beat the drum well enough, but at one rate to inspire the men. Even little Maurice took heart, and after snapping his fingers in cloth, was able to take the drum again and resume the march, while the soldiers struggled on through the snow against the biting wind.

One of the overweights of history is his neglect of what John Lind said when the muzzle of office was removed.

Pointers on Publicity.

Stopping an ad to save money is like stopping a clock to save time. If all thought alike; there could be no horse trading or advertising.

The time to advertise is all the time. The man who fishes longest has the largest basket of fish.

Advertising is an insurance policy against forgetfulness. It compels people to think of you.

What makes Sapiro a household name? Cont-inuous advertising. You are not allowed to forget it.

The unprofitableness of advertising is not in doing too much of it—it is in not doing it correctly.

Like writing, advertising should be continuous. When today's breakfast bill answers for tomorrow's you can advertise on the same principle.

Advertising does three things: It forms the public what you are, what you want to know about, and what is having or sale—an irrefutable advertisement into the veins of trade grows the business heat.

No one else awake thinking of your business, out of print, out of mind.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting weaker every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not sleep, and I was very nervous because of the pain in my back and I had no appetite in any stomach. I was a doctor's patient for a long time and was operated on, but I got no relief. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said, 'I know nothing will help me now, but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health, and did not have the operation."

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do, but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory telling how operations were advised and were performed or if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

Germany's Losses

Boston Post.—The drain of this war upon the manhood of Germany is only too terribly set forth in the official tabulation of the casualty lists for the period including the month of May. These, as quoted, give the total of dead, wounded, prisoners and missing as 924,586.

It is to be remembered that, since these figures were compiled, the great Russian drive against the Austrians has brought in 118,000 prisoners, with possibly double that number left killed or wounded. No account, moreover, is taken of the loss in naval equipment. It is entirely within the range, then, to say that the cost to Germany thus far in the war exceeds largely three millions of its able-bodied men.

In comparison with this loss of efficient industrial population, the cost in money and in material seems insignificant, stupendous as it is.

A lion has just eaten a missionary in the Sudan. So it does happen outside of the comic papers!

"Ku Ro" is the newest world language. But the only successful world-wide linguist so far has been Ching.

The trouble about the thing we call conscience is that it persists in speaking when we want it to keep silent.

SAME OLD SPELL

It Came Over the Girl at the Proper Time as It Always Has.

By J. V. SYMONS.

"Lucia, don't I have some news for you," said little Miss Brett, taking her by both hands in her dressing room in the Imperial theater. "I am going to leave the stage."

"You mean! Why—why Prescott told me himself that he means to give you the star part in 'Under Two Flags' next month. You can't mean it, you who have won fame almost in a night."

"But that doesn't mean anything to me now," answered the girl, smiling. "You see," she added in a lower voice, "I am engaged to be married."

Lucia Clay kissed her warmly and chatted for quite five minutes, which was a big slice out of a busy woman's life. Then she watched her go down the draughty corridor and sank back into her chair and wept bitterly.

People would have been astonished if they could have seen Lucia crying. She was one of the big discoveries of the past two years. But she had worked hard for her success. Ten years of barren poverty and unproductive labor lay behind her. Cold as ice, they called her. Even in stage-land, that prolific center of gossip, her name had never been associated with that of any man. And yet she had temperamental parts. She seemed to have lived through and lived down some of the greatest sorrows of the world where formerly they had blazed, and under an exterior that was faultlessly serene.

"There must have been big experiences in Miss Clay's life," said an old critic to his friend once.

There had been the biggest of all experiences, because the most universal. She had been married and her honeymoon had lasted eleven days.

They had been days of delicious happiness both for herself and for the young painter, Lawrence Murdoch. I suffered the continuance of this hideous tragedy.

"The curtain's up, Miss Clay," announced the colored woman who assisted with the wardrobe. Miss Clay put the final touches to her make-up and joined the little group in the wings. It was a repertorial piece, one of those that are put on by the best companies at times, either during the dull season or for some special cause, such as to fill up an unexpected gap in the schedule. There had been only two rehearsals, for the company had played this often before, and the scenery had been completed only that morning, the properties being lost somewhere in a tie-up in the middle west.

Lucia walked on the stage. She heard the applause of the audience as an accustomed thing, she glanced indifferently into the packed masses and bowed; and then she saw Lawrence's face, and he might have been her sole auditor, for everybody else was but a blur in the dimly lit auditorium.

She had never seen him since they parted. Now he sat in the third row of the parquet, watching her. He was hardly changed, but somehow the look on his face told her that his soul was here, and that across the intervening years their spirits would leap together if only permitted. She turned and then, for the first time in her experience, Lucia Clay forgot her lines.

For on the canvas background was the little cottage of her memories. There was the clearing over the woods and the sweet williams. And then Lucia was back in fairyland with her lover again.

How she stumbled through her part she never knew. Once or twice, waking out of a sort of dream, she saw the other members of the company regarding her with wonder. But when the curtain fell the last thing she saw was Lawrence's eyes looking into her own, and the old spell was on her, and she hurried to her dressing room, avoiding the anxious questions of her friends. She knew that an influence stronger than either of them had taken possession of them and had hurried their pride and annihilated the ancient law that marriage should last as long as they two should live.

She found him at the stage door, and because there was nothing to be said she took him by the arm and led him back upon the darkened stage. And there, by the feeble glimmer of the gas jets in the wings, they stood together before the little cottage and their vows were pledged.

"Mr. Prescott, I have some news for you," said Miss Clay that evening. "I am going to leave the stage."

"You, Miss Clay! Why—why, you can't mean it, you who have won a national reputation. We have looked forward to still greater triumphs for you."

"But that doesn't mean anything to me now," answered Miss Clay, smiling. "You see—I am engaged to be married."

WOODEN LEG WON A HUSBAND

Happy Man So Satisfied With Previous Ventures That He Made a Determination to Stick.

Augustus Haro used to relate how a certain lady was worried and won for the sake of her one leg.

One day, not long after her marriage, she was, during her husband's temporary absence, seized by curiosity to look into a wardrobe that had always been kept religiously fastened, and found therein, to her terror, two wooden legs, the patch of everlasting roses, they stood together before the little cottage and their vows were pledged.

Filled with dismay, she sought some casual acquaintance, to whom she related her gruesome discovery, only to be assured that, although the false limbs were indeed those of her husband's two former wives, there was no cause for alarm, for her husband, who had originally wedded a one-legged lady, had been so happy in his marriage that, on her death, he had vowed never to mate again save with a wife similarly circumstanced.

A short while afterward he met a lady who fulfilled the required stipulation. Her he courted and won. His second venture, even more felicitous than the first, had caused him, on his beloved partner's decease, to renew his former vow, the outcome of which is his present happy union. This explanation calmed the wife's alarm, for she now recognized that the wooden legs were not only mementoes of past but guarantees of future happiness.—London Times.

Who Owns Boy's Trousers?

To whom do a boy's trousers belong—the boy himself or to his father? This momentous question was debated at a London county court when a new trial of an action was asked for. While playing football in the street the boy concerned ran against a tin box outside a tradesman's shop, and tore his trousers. His father put in a claim for the value of the trousers, and the registrar allowed £1.25. The tradesman's counsel argued that the boy had no right to sue at all, as the trousers really belonged to his father, he being an infant. "Of course, the father could not steal them," remarked the judge. "It is clear they belong to the father," replied the counsel. "Whether the father could sue or not, will not say," observed the judge. "A father has a prior right over his son's trousers," repeated counsel. The judge refused the application for a new trial.

In accord with the eternal fitness of things a man with narrow shoulders sought to wear a broadcloth coat.
