Archbishop Patrick John Ryan.

Archbishop Ryan, the golden-tongued orator of the American hierarchy, is no more. He died peacefully at his residence, in Philadelphia, on February 11. Although the serious nature of his illness was announced more than two weeks ago, later he rallied somewhat, attaining some ground for hope of ultimate recovery.

The sad news has been received everywhere with sentiments of deep regret, for it was felt instinctively that the world would be poorer for the loss of a personality which during so many years has stood for whatever is upright and noble in principle or conduct in the lives of men.

There is deep sorrow within the wide circle of those who looked up to him as their archbishop, and deeper still among those of his ecclesiastical household, as well as among the priests and people who have had the privilege of listening to the music of his voice and drinking in the wisdom of his lips which seemed to have been touched like Isaiah's living coal by the angel's of the enlightenment and sanctification of his fellow men.

The Most Rev. Patrick John Ryan was born near the ancient ecclesiastical city of Thurles, County Tipperary, Ireland, on February 20th, 1831. He first attended the Christian Brothers' School at that place, and in his twelfth year was sent to Dublin to begin his classical studies. It was at this time that young Ryan fell under the spell of the great O'Connell. The boy had already shown a marked talent for declamation, and in 1844 he was selected as the representative of his schoolmates to deliver an address of sympathy from them to the unfortunated King, then imprisoned in Richmond Bridewell. It is told how the great man said to him, "My boy your tongue will make you famous. Don't forget it, it is your talent." The prophecy was literally fulfilled. From the day when the hand of encouragement and approbation was placed upon the head of the little red-haired lad, he was impelled by the Liberator until the moment when as Archbishop of Philadelphia he laid down the Shepherd's crook and uttered his last God bless you to his flock, Patrick John Ryan was marked with distinction among men as one on whom the benediction of the Lord descended ever in manifold fruitfulness.

In pursuance of his ambition to become a priest he entered St. Patrick's College at Galway, and five years later as a subdeacon was accepted for the American mission by the Most Rev. Peter Richard Kenrick, then presiding over the archdiocese of St. Louis. In September, 1853, although not twenty-three years old, more than a year under the canonical age, he was ordained a priest, a privilege granted on account of his exceptional scholarship and ability. Promotion came rapidly. He was successively assistant at the Cathedral, secretary to the Archbishop, rector of the Cathedral, then pastor of the parish of the Annunciation, where he built a church and school, afterwards of the Church of St. John the Evangelist and finally Vicar-General. All these positions he filled with marked ability and success, winning the hearts of everyone by his kindness and priestly solicitude and learning, leaving an enviable record for his services to the Church and to the Venerable Archbishop.

Archbishop Ryan was a man of large heart, dominating a mind of uncommon grasp, trained in all the knowledge of the schoolmen and enriched with spiritual insight, which was the direct result of study and prayer and deep meditation. Many still living can recall how revered and loved he was in St. Louis, even in the early days of his priesthood, and how his brilliant and graceful qualities soon won for him hosts of friends among all classes of his fellow citizens. During the year of the Civil War when Missouri was a border state there stood in Father Ryan's parish in St. Louis a Federal prison, where over one thousand Southern prisoners were constantly confined, and in the same parish also a hospital for United States soldiers. Every day of the week during those years this soldier of Christ visited the boys in grey and the boys in blue, bringing the comforts of religion and communicating happiness which ever beamed from his countenance to prison cell and hospital ward with the charity that knows neither Gentile nor Jew, barbarian nor Syrian, bond nor free, but Christ in all.

While at St. John's he attended the second Plenary Council of Baltimore; in that year he received the degree of Doctor of Laws from New York University, a distinction which he was also to receive twenty years later from the University of Pennsylvania.

Higher honors than these came from the Church. His Bishop, the Most Rev. Dr. Peter R. Kenrick, inspired by his great energy, zeal and piety, applied to Rome for an assistant, and in 1872, Father Ryan was appointed Coadjutor Bishop, with right of succession. This advancement only opened a field for still greater activity and usefulness, and for the next twelve years the Coadjutor Bishop ably assisted his beloved Superior in building up the great ecclesiastical institutions which have made of the Archdiocese of St. Louis a centre of Catholic life and expansion in the Middle West.

Chosen by the aged Archbishop of St. Louis, he attended the call to Rome of the Higher American prelate in 1883, and while abroad visited his native land, where he was received with distinguished honors, and where he increased his reputation as a pulpit orator by his masterly discourses in the city of Dublin. In January, 1884, came his elevation to the archiepiscopal dignity, and six months later he was transferred as successor of Archbishop Wood to the archdiocese of Philadelphia, from which time for more than a quarter of a century his name and his fame have been linked with those of Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul as the illustrious triumvirate, and he the Nestor of the American hierarchy.

During the many years of his episcopal charge in Philadelphia Archbishop Ryan came to enjoy the same love and respect which was his in St. Louis. No great public gathering of the citizens of the place which has been the theatre of the greatest deeds was considered complete if he was not invited and given a prominent part. His ready wit and unflinching humor, his immense sympathy for all, for the poor, the oppressed, the working class, the friendless, the orphaned, for the clergy of his diocese, both secular and regular, endeared him in the hearts of his fellow men and gave to his words a power which no one cared to analyze, as no one challenged, but all felt.

His last appearance was at the memorial service held a few weeks ago for the victims of the disaster fire in Philadelphia, which he attended despite the warning of his physicians that it would hasten his death.

At all the great Church celebrations in the past forty years his commanding figure and gracious presence were seldom missing. He was personally selected by Cardinal McCloskey on the occasion of the dedication of the Cathedral in New York, and was the preacher when the first of the American Cardinals was laid to rest. The opening sermon of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore was delivered by him, as was also the centennial sermon in Baltimore in 1889 in commemoration of the establishment of the Catholic hierarchy of the United States. He was the orator chosen by Cardinal Gibbons when that prelate received the Cardinal's hat. He preached the sermon when the pulpit was conferred on the late Archbishop Corrigan, and again on a more solemn occasion, when clergy and people gathered in St. Patrick's Cathedral to pay their last tribute of respect and love to the illustrious successor of Archbishop Hughes and Cardinal McCloskey. Two other notable speeches added to his oratorical triumphs—one at the unveiling of Archbishop Hughes' statue at Fordham University and another on Catholic Education at the Georgetown commencement on the occasion of the graduation of a nephew.

These great occasions, however, were comparatively rare. For once that he appeared in great public assemblies, a score of times he preached to the people of his own Cathedral parish, to the religious in the cloisters, to the orphans in the asylum, to church societies and sodalities, to the poor in the institutions he visited, and through an interpreter even to the little Philadelphia Society of Catholic deaf mutes.

One of Archbishop Ryan's greatest works was the establishment of the Catholic Protective for wayward boys in Philadelphia. His interests and labors in behalf of the Indians brought about his appointment by President Roosevelt as a member of the Board of India Commissioners, giving thereby additional prestige and distinction to that body and an influence to its recommendations which was visible in all the subsequent legislation of the government in regard to the wards of the nation. As Chief-pastor of the archdiocese of Philadelphia, in which is the convent of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People, of which Mother Katherine Drexel is the founder and Mother Superior, the unwearied laborer became the spiritual director of that Apostolic woman and was her adviser in regard to the expatriation of the large sums which she annually contributes and the unselfish labors which she and her Sisters devote to the education and improvement of the Indians and the Negroes.

Now that the great prelate is gone, panegyrics will dwell on his wit, or his wisdom, his power in the pulpit or his influence in public life, the comprehensiveness of his love for humanity, the soundness of his public utterances, the soundness of his doctrines and his theories, the unswerving orthodoxy of his convictions. One may be pardoned for thinking of him as the great high priest, the model pastor among his people. A life without blemish was his, sans peur et sans reproche, spent in preaching the Word in season and out of season, reproving, entreating, rebuking in all patience and doctrine; vigilant, laboring in all things, doing the work of an evangelist, fulfilling his ministry. It is as such we feel that he would be remembered, because as such more frequently has he stood before the just Judge and rendered his account.

Four score years of benevolence and well doing towards one's fellow men rounded out a career to which few after all, even among eminent men ever attain. Archbishop Ryan witnessed the golden jubilee of his priesthood and the silver jubilee, first of his consecration as Bishop, when he was made Coadjutor to the Venerable Archbishop of St. Louis, and then of his translation as Archbishop of Philadelphia. If every virtue, personal merit, holiness of life and unswerving devotion to the cause to which he had dedicated his life, brilliancy of natural gifts and superadded attainments, together with the love of priests and people, would establish a right to greater honor in the Church than that which he had already attained, then no one could put forth a higher or stronger claim to honorable preferment than the deceased prelate. But it may truly be said that as the honors he did obtain came unbidden and without his seeking, so any further advancement lay beyond the horizon of his humble vision. There was only one glory and one crown he sought with a steadfastness of purpose that never flagged—the glory of God through the ministry of the Word and the crown of eternal life which is laid up for those who have fought the good fight and have kept the faith. That he advanced the glory of God in his whole life all men will bear witness; that the crown of immortality is now his blessed portion all who have known him or have come within the magic circle of his priestly power will, with all the confidence that the example of a noble life devoted to God's service inspires, feel persuaded he has already attained in the Kingdom of the Master.

Was So Bad With Heart and Nerves Could Not Sleep At Night.

Many men and women toss night after night upon a sleepless bed. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the heart and nervous system that they cannot enjoy the refreshing sleep which comes to those whose heart and nerves are right.

Mrs. John Gray, Lime Lake, Ont., writes:—"Last summer I was so bad with my heart and nerves that I couldn't sleep at night. There was such a pain and heavy feeling in my chest that I could not sleep, and at times I would become dizzy and have to grasp something to keep from falling. I tried different things but never got anything to do me any good until I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and I can now recommend them to all troubled as I was."

On Monday of this week, the Commonwealth of Australia served notice on the business world that it would not harbor foreign trusts. The following memorandum was given to the press by Sir R. W. Best, Minister of Trade and Customs: "For several months past it has been an open secret that representatives of the American meat trust have been visiting Australia with the object of extending its operations here. The Government is determined to take drastic measures to discourage and if necessary to prohibit its operation in Australia."

Sir William Van Horne, who returned to Montreal from Cuba a few days ago, expressed himself as highly disgusted at the proposal put forward to carry through the Fielding-Paterson reciprocity agreement. "I am too much disgusted to talk about it," he said. "Just think of it. Our government returns show that the commerce per capita of the people of Canada is $97 per head, while the commerce per capita of the people of the United States is $33 and some odd cents per head. Naturally they look on us with acovetous eye, and this proposal for reciprocity is the result. Now we are actually proposing to remove the mill dam, and you know what happens when the mill dam is removed level. It is a common and disgusting to find such a deal as this one proposed by Messrs. Fielding and Paterson being seriously entertained. I won't trust myself to say another word about it. Here just say that my opinion on the subject are summed up in the following," and Sir William sat down at his desk and wrote: "Reciprocity agreement: "I am sick and ashamed—too sick and too much ashamed to say anything about the subject."

Just how the reciprocity agreement is expected to work in the United States is well shown by the following extract from the Minneapolis Journal, which says: "We stand at the parting of the ways. One path leads to practical, if not political union with Canada, and the development of the entire North American continent as the heritage and the possession of a great and free people. The other path leads to the hardening into two distinct political entities, two hostile, or at least unsympathetic, peoples on this continent. It leads to a closer relation between Canada and Great Britain. It means the carrying out of Joseph Chamberlain's great dream of a British Imperial federation, bound together not less by trade than sentiment, with preferential tariffs on either side, with Canada taking the place of the United States as chief purveyor of food products and manufactured articles to Great Britain. Today England is our best customer and Canada our third best. But our foreign trade wanes, and that of Canada grows. If we push Canada into England's arms, the trade arrangements between the two will tend more and more to shut us out. How long will our trade with these two customers last if reciprocity fails? Our Canadian trade must drop off as the West and East channels of commerce are scooped by us, and Canada will more and more supply English needs in our stead."

Reciprocity in the Commons.

What is regarded by the opponents of the reciprocity agreement as its deathblow, was dealt on Feb. 23rd by R. L. Borden. He proved from Mr. Fielding's unwilling lips that the farmers of Canada have been delivered into the hands of their trade rivals of many countries, that they have been sold, not only to the United States, but to twelve other nations under the favored nations treaty. The scene in the House was at times wild and turbulent, and it was always seething with excitement. The members had expected a quiet academic debate like the battle of other days, but the sitting had hardly begun before it became evident that there would be doings. Dr. Reid questioned Mr. Fielding regarding the effect of the agreement upon the favored nations. The finance minister would give no satisfaction, but finally Mr. Borden forced him to give the House and the country a definite understanding where Canada really stood. Mr. Fielding for a while was evasive in his answers, but his opposition leader pinned him down to direct questions. He asked if each of the twelve favored nations would be able to send their produce into the Dominion on the same terms as the United States, that is, if they would be able to send it in free. Mr. Fielding was compelled to answer "Yes." He admitted also indirectly that Canada would not enjoy the equal privilege of sending her produce free into these countries. In scathing language the Conservative betrayal of the Canadian farmer, and Dr. Reid showed that Mr. Fielding had made a compact whereby the Danish butter makers, the finest butter makers in the world, would be able to corner the Canadian market with their butter, and selling it at a lower price than Canadian butter, sweep the Canadian farmer out of his own natural market. In return for the favor of getting butter into Canada free, the Canadian farmer would get nothing free into Denmark. Canadian produce going into that country would still be subject to the high duties. And so with the Argentine and all the other favored nations. Their produce would come in free. The Canadian farmer would have to compete on his native heath not only with the United States, but with all the great producing countries, while these would still keep their doors barred against him. C. L. Owen, East Northumberland, read a telegram from Washington stating that Senator Cummings had moved that the reciprocity agreement be amended so as to admit into the United States the manufactured products of Canada. He asked if this was done at Washington would the Canadian government take similar action. Mr. Fielding replied that such action on the part of the United States would not affect the agreement because the United States was at perfect liberty to make additional concessions. As to what Canada would do he thought it would be well to receive such a proposition before replying to it.

The Supreme Court which met at Georgetown yesterday, Mr. Justice Fitzgerald presiding, completed its work the same day and adjourned in the afternoon. His date: Hon. Clifford Sifton, former Minister of the Interior, has come out strong against the Reciprocity agreement, and made a scathing speech in opposition to it in the House of Commons on Tuesday.

Winter Service, aired in the House of Commons.

(HANSARD FEBY 20.)

MR. AUSTIN L. FRASER (Kings, Prince Edward Island). Mr. Speaker, the question is sometimes asked by members of this House, why the members from Prince Edward Island take up so much time—perhaps they may use the word "valuable" time—pressing their claims before this House, and discussing this matter of winter communication. The reason why we do this, is not far to seek. When our province entered confederation, one of the things that were promised at that time was that this government would give us continuous and efficient steam communication with the mainland for the carriage of mails and passengers. I am sorry that neither this government nor the former government has been able to carry out this provision. I am safe in saying that until the last effort was made to fulfil this provision of the terms of confederation, the members of Prince Edward Island will be compelled to occupy more or less of the time of parliament in advocating their case, and that is my excuse, if excuse be needed, for speaking now. The present winter has been a very severe one all over the North American continent, and in respect to the carriage of mails between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, we are today bringing them across in small iceboats between the capes, just as we did fifty years ago. No improvement therefore, has been made in this respect in half a century, when everything else around us has made a wonderful advance. I may say, Mr. Speaker, that I have no knowledge of the feasibility of the new Tatamagouche route proposed by the mover of this motion (Mr. Warburton), and if parliament or the country is in possession of any exact information concerning it, I have been unable to discover it. I do not wish to say anything against that route for I would be glad to see a new harbour on the mainland but, while not taking back anything I said last year about the difficulty of winter communication being "at Pictou," I would say to the government: Before you abandon that route and take up a new route, you should feel perfectly convinced that the new route will be the solution of the difficulty. While the government has positive knowledge that the new Tatamagouche harbour will be a better harbour than "Pictou" harbour, it would be a waste of money to experiment on Tatamagouche. There is, in my own county, Georgetown harbour, which is without doubt, the best harbour on the Island, and even if Tatamagouche should turn out favourably, the steamers would still have to come to Georgetown from Tatamagouche, because I believe it is impossible to navigate the Straits of Northumberland into Charlotte-town harbour in heavy winter ice. I am informed, and I believe it to be true, because I have often entered a tattered Charlotte-town harbour, that a shipper however tried to call the station up, and he found to his consternation that the rumour was unfounded. Yet this is the twentieth century when the old stage coach is no longer with us, and many other old things have passed away. Nevertheless certain antiquated services such as a deaf and dumb telephone at what is now the principal shipping station on the island are still with us. How long, oh how long must the public endure such back woods methods.

This is a small matter, and I trust, now that the minister's attention is called to it, that he will see that a telephone is put into the station at Georgetown, which would cost only $20 or $25 a year. It is very annoying to shippers and travellers who want to learn whether the boat is in or when it is going out, to find that there is no telephone at this, the principal shipping port of the province, and that the nearest public telephone is at least a quarter of a mile distant. While on this subject I wish to call the attention of the minister to another matter, for which he may be able to provide a remedy. Mr. Fraser then discussed the matter of crossing at the Capes and quoted The Guardian comments on that service.

This was referred to by the hon. member for Queens. (Mr. Warburton), and I thoroughly endorsed what he has said with regard to it. The most successful steamer on the route was the "Stanley." After some years the "Minto" was built, but it did not quite come up to expectations. As a matter of fact it is well known to everybody that the "Minto" was not better, if she was as good as the "Stanley." But the new steamer "Earl Grey," which was put on a year ago, is proving to be superior to any of the steamers that preceded her, and it is thought now that until we get the tunnel, which I thoroughly believe is the only permanent solution of this question, we should get another new steamer of the type of the "Earl Grey." I would urge the department to consider the advisability of so doing. It may perhaps be said that in asking for this we are asking too much, but I think not. When the "Stanley" was built a few years ago, the government said to us, we are giving you the "Stanley," but the "Stanley" has been taken off the route last winter and this winter and has been put on service in other parts of the Dominion. Therefore I do not think we should be charged with the cost of the "Stanley," we should rather be credited with it, since the steamer has been taken away from us, and this is a reason why the government should now give us another steamer of the type of the "Earl Grey."

I shall not make any further comment on this, as the hon. minister is present, and I merely wished to place it before him for his consideration. It is not fair that these passengers, who have to cross the straits, and who have to get out and assist in hauling the boats, should be charged the exorbitant rate of 28 cents a mile for that service, especially as it is a government service.

Sheriff's Sale. By virtue of a Statute in force in the province of New Brunswick, I have taken and seized as the property of the said John McLeod all the estate, right, title and interest of the said John McLeod, in and to all that tract, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being on Lot or Township Number Sixty, bounded as follows, that is to say: Commencing on the north side of the Mainland Road in the eastern boundary of a plot of one acre and three rods previously conveyed to John McDonald; thence west to the northwest angle thereof; thence southerly along its west boundary two chains and fifty links or to the road line mentioned; thence west along the same sixty-four chains and twenty links or to the place of commencement, containing seventy-three acres and one rod of land a little more or less, agreeably to a plan showing location and division thereof on the margin of a deed from the Commissioner of Public Lands to the said John McLeod, dated the ninth day of January, A. D. 1888.

And I do hereby give public notice that I will on Tuesday, the 28th day of September, A. D. 1911, at the hour of twelve o'clock noon, at the Court House in Charlottetown, set up and sell at public auction the said property, or as much thereof as will satisfy the levy marked on the said deed, being the sum of three hundred and eighty-six dollars and ninety-five cents and interest on one hundred and forty-four dollars from this date till paid at the rate of five per cent. per annum, besides Sheriff's fees and all other legal and incidental expenses.

The Dance Problem

THOUGHTS SUGGESTED BY AN ANXIOUS MOTHER

An anxious mother in a neighboring State, is troubled about her duty towards her children in regard to permitting them to attend dances.

What a train of thought this good earnest mother opens up with the same old question that has perplexed parents and parents for many a year.

In this manner the mother learns the character of her children's associates, and in her quiet way she creates an ideal circle of friends for her sons and daughters.

The Public Dance Hall

Dancing is one of the diseases which are both infectious and contagious. It develops at any age, but is most prevalent among the young.

Teen in cities and the larger towns there are the annual balls or assemblies under Catholic auspices managed by committees of representative Catholics, and patronized by Catholics almost exclusively.

These reunions, however, are not always conducted (doubtless because of their size) with the care that should characterize them.

There was a time when the young women of good standing could not attend a dance or ball without the protesting presence of the chaperon.

Permissible Dances

"But young people must dance!" exclaims the advocate of youth's privileges. "They must have some amusement. Love of fun is strong in all normal young things; and, thank God, some of us manage to keep it alive after youth is gone.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia for years, and tried every remedy I heard of, but never got anything that gave me relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. I cannot praise this medicine too highly for the good it has done me. I always take it in the spring and fall and would not be without it."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Strengthens and tones the stomach and the whole digestive system.

with both pleasure and propriety, since dance they must. Naturally, we think first of the home. The wise mother in planning for her children will make ample provision for their amusement; she will encourage home gatherings, when her boys and girls will assemble their friends under their father's roof for a genuinely good time.

Let a mother feel that she can lean upon you. Alas, too often the devotedness is on the part of the mothers, who slave for their children, while the latter take this as a matter of course!

Within comparatively recent years a new preservative force has arisen—the influence of the alumni associations of the parish schools. These associations bring graduates together, to renew their school friendships, and to gratify their love of recreation—including dancing—with the approval and under the supervision of their directors.

Other Approved Occasions

Each Catholic home is a unit of the parish, and the coming together of these units in the parish reunion or associate dances, under the supervision of the pastor or chaplain, ought to be the ideal public occasion for wholesome recreation.

These reunions, however, are not always conducted (doubtless because of their size) with the care that should characterize them.

A BAD COLD

Developed Into BRONCHITIS.

Neglected Bronchitis is very often the direct cause of consumption, and on the first symptom appearing Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be used and the Bronchitis cured.

The symptoms are, tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, and later of a greenish or yellowish color, coming from the bronchial tubes when coughing, especially the first thing in the morning.

Mixed Gatherings in Small Towns

Our correspondent also questions the safety of the social gathering in small towns where Catholics and non-Catholics are brought into closer companionship, and are more dependent on one another than in the cities. From their very makeup these functions are above suspicion as far as propriety is concerned, but for the Catholic young man or woman there is always a lurking danger that the friendly feeling they engender, and the opportunity they afford of fostering a deeper feeling, may lead to a mixed marriage.

It would be a great mistake to suppose that the disturbances of Liberalism in Spain are of modern, twentieth century origin.

A Daughters Duty

Let a mother feel that she can lean upon you. Alas, too often the devotedness is on the part of the mothers, who slave for their children, while the latter take this as a matter of course!

But a time comes in the lives of most girls when they leave the parental roof and take a partner for life. Or they are obliged to seek some occupation which necessitates their going away from home.

At times rolls on, the relations between parent and child are inverted. Then it is the daughter's duty to tend and the mother, to provide as far as possible all the necessary bodily and spiritual comforts.

And when God has called our aged parents home to Himself, toward the children will a duty toward them? Yes, they can and should pray for them, even though they did not belong to "the household of the Faith" on earth.

Mrs. Dan J. McCormack, Cleveland, N.S., writes: "My little boy two years old caught a bad cold which developed into Bronchitis. He was so choked up he could hardly breathe. Reading about your wonderful medicine, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I decided to try a bottle and with such good result I got another which completely cured him, without having a doctor. I cannot say too much in its praise; I would not be without it in the house as I consider it a sure cure for Colds and Bronchitis."

The price of "Dr. Wood's" Norway Pine Syrup is 25c. It is put in a yellow wrapper. Three pine trees is the trade mark. Be sure and accept no substitute for Dr. Wood's.
