

The HURON SIGNAL

DEVOTED TO COUNTY NEWS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE

THIRTY-EIGHTH YEAR.
WHOLE NUMBER 720.

GODERICH, ONT., FRIDAY, NOV. 6, 1885.

MCGILLICUDDY BROS. PUBLISHERS
$1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

THE HURON SIGNAL

Is published every Friday Morning, by Mc Gillicuddy Bros., at their Office, North St. GODERICH, ONTARIO.

And is despatched to all parts of the surrounding country by the earliest mails and trains.

By general admission it has a larger circulation than any other newspaper in this part of the country. It is one of the oldest, newest and most reliable journals in Ontario possessing, as it does, the fore-going essentials and being in addition to the above, a first-class family and frugal paper—it is therefore a most desirable advertising medium.

TERMS.—$1.50 in advance, postage pre-paid by publishers; $1.75, if paid before six months; $2.00 if not so paid. This rule will be strictly enforced.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.—Eight cents per line for first insertion; three cents per line for each subsequent insertion. Yearly half-yearly and quarterly contracts at reduced rates.

JOB PRINTING.—We have also a first-class jobbing department in connection, and possessing the most complete outfit and best facilities for turning out work in Goderich are prepared to do business in that line at prices that cannot be beaten, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.—Terms Cash.

FRIDAY, NOV. 6TH, 1885.

AT THE meeting of the school board on Monday evening last there were 150 applications for the six vacancies in Goderich public and ward schools—which looks somewhat as if the market was glutted.

THE Toronto World nominates E. B. Oler, the eloquent criminal lawyer, for the future leader of the Liberal party. The World evidently believes that the criminality of the present Government at Ottawa requires a specialist to look after it. Although we do not think Mr. Oler is anxious for the position of Reform leader at present, we are of opinion that he would be a valuable aid in the House in ferreting out Tory rascality, and we hope to see him in Parliament at no distant day.

THE Hamilton Spectator, Goderich Star and some other Tory journals are of opinion that Sir John will not go to England, and that Riel will be hanged next week. The Spectator, the Star and other journals denied that Sir Tupper was going to return to Canada this year. That Sir Macpherson was going to resign his position of Minister of Interior; that Riel wouldn't be hanged on the 16th of Sept.; that Sir Leonard Tilley was going to resign; and other denials of a similar nature. After Riel is reprieved, the Spectator, the Goderich Star and kindred sheets will cry aloud that things have turned out just as they desired, and loudly proclaim, "Great is Sir John Macdonald!" Whatever the chieftain does is right with the Tory party organs. They have no opinions of their own.

REFERRING to the fact that the grand jury in the recent Huron county assize, deplored that persons, both old and young, whose only crime was poverty, should be subjected to prison-fare, associations and discipline, the Toronto News very properly says:—"Possibly the grand jury didn't really mean to catalogue poverty as a crime, but they should have said so if they didn't. But whether the jury blundered or not, the fact that in many counties the pauper is treated the same as the lawbreaker still remains, and it is time this disgraceful anomaly in our system was removed. While the victims of poverty are often irresponsible for their condition, the criminals are almost invariably responsible for their criminality. It is not unjust that with such unequal responsibility there should be equal condemnation."

THINGS are getting wofully mixed at Ottawa or we would not hear the absurd rumor that Charlie Mackintosh is likely to be made Minister of the Interior, vice Thos. White promoted to Finance Minister, vice Sir Leonard Tilley, elevated to the Lieutenant-Governorship of New Brunswick. Ability must be lacking in the Tory ranks when Mackintosh's name could be thought of in connection with a cabinet position, and if he were pitched into office we would not be surprised to see a full Cabinet comprised as follows: Premier, Sir John Macdonald; finance, Jumbo Johnson, of Strathroy; interior, C. H. Mackintosh; railways, Tom Cowan; agriculture, Roddy Pringle; public works, Pat Kelly; postmaster-general, "Big Push" Wilkinson; secretary of state, Mahaffy of Muskoka; inland revenue, John Shields; customs, A. W. Wright; marine and fisheries, Iok Evans; militia, Johnny Hawkins (the old guard dies, but never surrenders—a sea); justice, Edward Meek, of conspiracy fame. With such a cabinet, and Jim Weeks, of Carleton Place, as receiver-general, our Tory friends could have a galaxy of stars to look up to about whom they could shout themselves hoarse in glad acclaim. While Sir John is busy patching up his cabinet, let him make "a cabinet as a cabinet."

TILLEY'S RESIGNATION.

Sir Leonard Tilley, the "heaven-born financier," has deserted the sinking ship, and has, as in 1873, betaken himself to the comfortable seclusion of a Lieutenant-Governorship. In 1873, he received his appointment from a moribund Government—in 1885 he accepts the office from an Administration which he knows to be dying, and dying fast. Straws show how the wind blows, and the recent cabinet changes, coupled now with the desertion of the chief apostle of the N. P., betoken the early collapse of the most corrupt Government that ever cursed a country since the time of Walpole. The St. John Telegraph, in commenting upon Sir Leonard Tilley's resignation, gives a brief history of the ex-Finance Minister from the time when he was the Liberal leader in New Brunswick: "Before the union he cast Charles Fisher out of his Government at Fredericton for a mere peccadillo. Afterward he took to his bosom the man reeking with Pacific scandal. How the political standards by which he weighed men and principles must have changed in the interim! In his own Government at Fredericton before the union Mr. Tilley was king; whom he would be set up or cast down. With Sir John he was but a day in the hands of the potter. He lent to the Ministry what it greatly needed, respectability, cleanliness, temperance. He worked hard for his leader, whom he appears to have adored with a sort of hero worship. He made sacrifices for him, sacrifices of political principle, of promises, of the interests of his Province. He had his reward in being almost continuously in office."

Sir Leonard has since 1878 been looked upon by the Tory party as the most far-seeing man in Canada. It was he who advised the young man of Canada to "crowd on all sail for seven years," and he followed his own advice, with the result that, notwithstanding the enormous sums wrung from the pockets of the tax payers, he now leaves the country to face a deficit of $2,500,000. Sir Leonard made a mistake when he took his own advice, and was not so wise as the old doctor who said the reason of his uniform good health and lucrative practice was because his patients took his advice and paid for it, and he did not. But at last Sir Leonard's eyes have been opened, and he sees now that the crash is coming and it is best for him to stand firm under—and he has climbed to a safe safe so as to avoid the final wrecking. Sic transit gloria mundi.

THE Democrats carried New York and Virginia for Governors on Tuesday. The other state elections were unimportant.

AND now Edward Hanlan and John Omer are each trying to prove that the other is a fraud, a delusion and a snare to his friends and bankers. And it is possible that both of them are right.

THE Government of Sir John, N. B., unrepresented for eight months after Mr. Burpee died, has that Sir L. Tilley has resigned, and election comes off immediately. Nominations on the 17th inst, election on the 21st.

THE revising barristers for the province of Quebec have been appointed, and in nearly every instance a position has been taken by a notary who has filled the role of political hack on days gone by. In Ontario Sir John had to bow to popular opinion, and appointed a number of county judges to the positions, but in Quebec he is not afraid to show the cloven foot, and put in creatures whose sole object will be to dirty political work for him.

Mr. Blake Praised.

The Montreal Star, giving half credit to the Toronto Mail's account of Mr. Blake's resignation from the Liberal leadership, says:—"Such a course would have many advantages for Mr. Blake personally, but it would be little short of a public calamity. Canada is not so rich in able men that she can afford to lose from her deliberative assembly her ablest orator, her best learned parliamentarian, her best constitutional lawyer, a man who in public estimation occupies the first place with Sir John A. Macdonald. The mud-slinging and the abuse of their organs have not succeeded in blinding the eyes of the most thorough-going Conservatives to the fact that in Mr. Blake the country possesses a man of whom it should be proud—proud of him not only for his ability, but also because he, unlike many of our publicists, wears 'the white flower of a blameless life.' Only those who follow the debates in parliament closely can understand the value and the extent of the work he does year after year for the country."

Miss Cooke, the popular pianist, is now prepared to take pupils. Miss Cooke's public performances are a good recommendation of her fitness to give instructions on the piano.

John Bates well known to many of our readers, died on Sunday from an attack of typhoid fever. Mr. Bates, although a young man was very stout, the result of a dropsical affection. He was obliging, and was well liked by his acquaintances.

GO AS YOU PLEASE RACE.—Arrangements are now being made for an hour's race-as-you-please match, to come off in the drill shed some day next week. The building will be open from now until the day of the race for runner's practice. The prizes will amount to over $25. The race ought to draw a big crowd.

STRAY CATTLE.—Farmers, who wish to do what is legal and fair, should advertise stray cattle coming on their premises in the local papers. All who lose cattle, also, would save expenses by advertising for their animals in THE SIGNAL. One dollar will advertise stray cattle four times in this paper.

The Hamilton Times gives its readers an interesting lecture on domestic economy as follows:—"Don't paste paper over stovepipe holes. Mr. Britt did this and the fire department was called to his house, 109 1/2 King street west, yesterday afternoon on account of it. The paper caught fire from the chimney."

Young and old will be welcome at the organization meeting of the shorthand class this evening, in the Mechanics Institute class room at 7.30 p.m. A general explanation of the system will be given, which should prove of interest.

At the close of the class will be organized a series of lectures on domestic economy as follows:—"Don't paste paper over stovepipe holes. Mr. Britt did this and the fire department was called to his house, 109 1/2 King street west, yesterday afternoon on account of it. The paper caught fire from the chimney."

Don't MAKE ANY EXCUSES.—All accounts due THE SIGNAL must be paid in on or before the 10th of the month.

The honest man or woman reading this item will pay us at once if they owe us. The dead beats will perhaps require a summons and division court costs. Remember, all accounts, however small, owed McGillicuddy Bros., should be paid in at once.

That patriotic march "The National" of E. A. Shimmers, a frequent contributor to the WHIG, is to be played, at the Governor-General's request, by the Guards' band. Copies have been sent to "A" and "B" Batteries, and to the Royal family. All Canadian bands will be invited to play it on the Queen's jubilee anniversary.—[Kingston Whig.]

FOREST.—At the regular meeting of Court Goderich No. 32 C. O. F. the following officers were installed by G. P. C. R., Bro. R. R. Symonds; C. R., Bro. Alec Saunders; V. C. R., Bro. Robert Fulford; Chap., Bro. D. S. Stoddard; E. Sec., Bro. William McCreath; Fin. Sec., Bro. Charles McKenzie; Treas., Bro. Chris. Crabb; S. W., Bro. Thos. Ferratt; J. W., Bro. Martin Moss; S. E., Bro. John Nicholson; J. B., Bro. Samuel; Court Physician, Bro. Thos. J. McLean, M. D. The Court is making rapid progress and initiations under the new endowment scheme will be greatly increased.

PARKS. GOSWELL.—Notwithstanding the very disagreeable weather, there was a good turnout at the parlor concert held at Dr. Grea on Thursday evening of last week. The programme was a most acceptable one. Messrs Foot and Lloyd, on violins, and Miss Cooke, on the piano, gave some excellent solos. Miss Grace Johnston and Miss E. Dickson, two very young reciters, were most appreciated. Miss Kay and Messrs Foot and J. McGillicuddy sang solos; and choruses were acceptably rendered by Knox church choir, Messrs Knox and Miss Cooke gave a Shakespearean scene in really first-class style. Dr. and Mrs. Ure and Miss Macdonald were most attentive to their guests.

M. DOWELL'S COMEDY COMPANY.—This well-known theatrical company will appear in Victoria Opera House, Goderich, on Wednesday and Thursday next. The Toronto Mail says:—"Jeff D'Angelia is a versatile genius sure enough, as most people must have thought who witnessed his performance as Spaulding, or the private secretary, last evening after having laughed until his sides ached at his Dutch comedy business in Pontiac last night before his J. O. Le Brasse, was a study, and evoked almost continuous laughter, in which none joined more heartily than Lady Macdonald, who occupied the Patti box."

All Soul's Day was celebrated with a Requiem High Mass at St. Peter's on Monday, followed by the pubing saying of the Mass, which finished that devotion for October. Fr. Letz preached an impressive sermon from Job 19th Chapter and 21st verse "Have pity on me, have pity on me, at least you my friends, because the hand of the Lord hath touched me. Like Rachel on this day, the church mourneth for her children."

At the High School Literary entertainment last Friday evening the following programme was presented:—Instrumental solo, Miss Allan; reading, Miss Bailey; solo, Miss Miller; recitation, Miss Spence; address selections, Miss Aikenhead; duet, Misses Ellard and McIntyre; reading, Mr. McLeod; recitation, Miss Williams; solo, Miss Burritt. During the evening Mr. McLeod was elected president, and Miss Mary Miller vice-president.

THE TELGMANN FAMILY.—The Ladies Aid Society in connection with St. George's Church have engaged, at great expense, the services of the celebrated Telgmann Sextette Club, from Waldeck, Germany, for a concert of high class and popular instrumental and vocal music, to take place at Victoria Hall, on Thursday 10th inst. The Telgmann family are musicians of the very highest order, and they have been very highly spoken of by the press wherever they have been. It is rarely that an opportunity to hear such music is afforded a Goderich audience. The concert is to be in aid of the funds of St. George's Church.

POISONED BY CANNED SALMON.—On Wednesday evening James Yates, wife and child, Miss Snayd, and Miss Emma Acheson visited John Acheson, jr., and had tea there. Among other articles that the party partook of was a box of salmon. Eight persons were helped to the canned salmon, and about three hours afterwards seven of the eaters were taken with all the symptoms of poisoning. Mr. Yates, who had helped himself generously to catnap and vinegar with his salmon, alone escaped prostration. Medical aid was at once called in, and all the victims were given immediate relief. Mrs. Acheson and child were the worst cases, having vomited blood in their endeavor to throw off the poisonous substance. All the persons afflicted are now recovered from the most serious consequences was very close. Careless canning is supposed to be the cause.

The Listowel Banner, whose editor is an old teacher, thus refers to the address delivered by the Principal of Goderich High School at the Perth Teachers' Convention held in Stratford recently:—"Mr. H. I. Strang, of Goderich, now took up the subject of English Grammar, and treated it in a manner becoming such an acknowledged authority in all that pertains to the teaching of English. That there is a revolution about to take place in the method of teaching this subject, goes without saying, where our changes are advocated were endorsed by all present. No longer shall our children be disgusted with a superabundance of definition, and subdivisions of the various parts of speech, but only that which is essential shall be exacted from them. The time now spent in analysis and parsing, shall be devoted to the more congenial employment of conversation on topics familiar to the children."

The London Advertiser says:—"The other day a girl of only 17 came down from the other side of Clinton and applied for admission to the hospital. She had no order from the county authorities of Huron, and of course it was not strictly correct to admit her. Her story, however, was so pitiful, that the rules were stretched and she was allowed admission. She had been working for a farmer, and had become engaged to a neighbor's son. He betrayed her under a promise of marriage, and then left the country. She came down here having nowhere else to go, and at the time she applied for admission to the hospital had only $2 in the world. Another case which came before the hospital authorities lately was that of a girl in Kensington, in the same predicament. Finding she could not obtain admission to the city hospital she gave herself up to the police, in the hope that the Police Magistrate would order her removal to the hospital."

FRAX.—On Monday at midnight a fire broke out in the stable used by George Crabb, just behind his grocery. The building, which was a brick one, was destroyed with all its contents, consisting of a horse, harness, hay, blankets, etc. The fire at one time threatened to sweep the whole block, as the steam fire engine got out of order after running a few minutes, and did not get in trim again for about half an hour. The building owned and occupied by Saunders & Son caught fire, but by aid of ladders and pails of water only little damage was done. George Acheson, owner of the stable will lose about $125; no insurance. George Crabb will lose about the same, no insurance. Saunders & Son have their loss covered by insurance. The fire is said to be the result of careless dumping of ashes by an occupant of the block. As the engine went wrong at Crabb's fire, as well as at the last one, the town council should see to it this evening that every precaution is taken to prevent such a condition of affairs in the future. Don't shut your eyes, gentlemen.

The Regina Leader says:—"Judge Sinclair, of Hamilton, has been appointed a revising barrister for the county of Wentworth. Judge Sinclair was an ardent Reformer, and is an intimate friend of Mr. Mowat and Mr. Blake. The appointment is a good one, the judge being an able lawyer and an upright man."

NEW STORE.—James Luby has opened out a grocery in Crabb's Block, in the store formerly occupied by Henry Cooke. In addition to a well selected stock of groceries he has a 5, 10, 15 and 20c counter, where tinware and other useful articles can be purchased very cheaply. We hope Mr. Luby will find things boom.

PORTER, THE JEWELLER.—Charles Sumner having retired from the firm of Porter & Sumner, the business will henceforth be under the complete control of W. R. Porter, who this week, in a big advertisement, announces a discount of from 15 to 20 per cent on all cash sales for the next sixty days. It will not be Mr. Porter's fault if there is not a boom in the jewelry business this season. Call and get Porter's latest cash rates, if you desire bargains in watches and jewelry.

The feast of All Saint's day fell on Sunday this year. At St. Peter's, Rev. Fr. Letz celebrated divine service, and preached a very edifying sermon from the Apocalypse, 7th chap. 9th verse, in which he essayed to show that this life is a vast battlefield, the obstacles and difficulties which assail us being well nigh insurmountable, yet the saints were in the flesh like us, and with the same courage, and cheerfulness that they even suffered death for Christ's sake we should follow their example in every Christian duty.

The Goderich life boat was launched on Saturday afternoon, and in a rough sea showed good qualities. The crew was composed of Capt. Babb, in command, and T. Finn, Neil Melvor, Norman McAuley, Wm. Robinson, John McLean, and John McDonald. The men wore life belts, and all did their work in a seamlike manner. A life buoy representing a man was cast overboard, and picked up in a very good style. The boat, however, owing to its size and buoyancy, experienced considerable difficulty in landing at the beach. The boat and crew are likely to do good work should the occasion demand it.

The town council will meet this (Friday) evening.

M. I. Evening Classes.

The book-keeping class was organized on Friday evening last, and will meet for first lesson on Monday.

The arithmetic class met on Tuesday evening, and will continue on Tuesday evening next.

The drawing class met last night after we went to press.

The class for shorthand will be organized tonight.

The classes will be down to regular work next week.

The New Life Boat in Toronto.

The Life in describing the launch of the new life boat recently made here by W. Marlon for the Toronto life saving station, says:—"The first practice trial of the new life boat for Toronto harbor, took place on Tuesday afternoon. After a three hours' pull from the Island in a heavy north-west wind, good progress was made toward windward. The boat was tested severely in various ways, in the trough of the sea, quarterly, etc., in all trials giving every satisfaction to the crew. The boat is a self righter and self bailer, but owing to the severity and calmness of the weather, the crew did not themselves test her self-righting powers. But in order to satisfy themselves that it possessed this quality it was taken to York's derrick, and upset by it."

It was then worked back to its station on the Island. Regarding its equipments all are good, yet the crew claim that the cork jackets would have been preferable to the belts with which it is supplied.

Sale of Short-horn Stock.

The sale of Short-horn stock of John Washington, on his stock farm, lot 25, con. 3, West Wawanosh, on Thursday, Oct. 22nd, was a very successful one. The following is a list of the principal buyers:—John Marquis, Colborne, cow, Dufferin Bess, $131. Thos. Rose, Wawanosh, calf, Kate, $80. Wm. Wellwood, West Wawanosh, cow, Auburn Lass, $105. Wm. McGowan, West Wawanosh, cow, Huron Maid, $100. Appleton Elliott, Stanley, cow, Rosa 1st, $110. John Thompson, West Wawanosh, cow, Princess 2nd, $95. Geo. Stewart, East Wawanosh, cow and calf, White Rose, $115. Henry Hoover, East Wawanosh, bull Buttery Duke, $150. Jas. Higginbottom, West Wawanosh, cow and calf, Kitty, $140. Thos. Welsh, Belgrave, Matland Maid, $30.

Orderbooker.

Orderbooker employed 7,000 Chatham on his contract. He was awarded it by Sir Charles Tupper, though his offer was $209,000 higher than the lowest tender. Yet he lodges a heavy bill for extras, and what is more, it is likely to be paid. The Tory Cabinet is over kind to the millionaires.—Hamilton Times.

STOLEN PLEASURES.

PART I.

John Webber passed a group of his fellow workmen who loitered on the sidewalk outside the gate of the Zenith Machine company's works one Thursday evening, with a quick, business like step. It had been a very hot day: the sun had not yet set, and was pouring its level rays along the street, making the dust look gold colored and dazzling the eyes of everybody who faced it. The air seemed closer and warmer than ever, and the men scolded about it and wiped their grimy faces with an impatient, half indignant gesture, as if they felt a sense of personal injustice after such an August day.

"Where are you racin' to now, Webber?" somebody asked our hero, and several of his friends in the complaining group turned to look at him.

"Goin' home," responded Webber, cheerfully, as he paused for a minute; and when somebody said, "Give our love to the baby!" in a tone that was meant to be provoking, he only shook his head with mock resentment.

"Hold on!" called the first speaker. "We're gettin' together to see how many of us want to hire John's barge for Sunday and go down to the beach. Start late Saturday, quick's we're out of the shop, and get back some time Sunday night. Jones'll take us for a dollar ten apiece, if we can get 24 to say they'll go."

"Well, I ain't one," answered Webber, moving off. "The only time I ever tried such a spree I came home worse off than I went. Ride all night and scorch all day; that ain't my idea of fun," and he disappeared round the corner, smiling with all his might, as if he knew of something a great deal better than any such colish plans.

He was a delicate-looking, boyish young man. Everybody liked Johnny Webber, for with his quick temper and satisfaction with his own way of doing things, he was friendly and generous and always ready to do anybody a good turn. His acquaintances had laughed at him and taxed him over and over again for his habit of telling long stories about his own affairs. He seemed to think that everybody was as much interested as he when something pleasant happened to him—it was not brag on his part and he had no idea of outshining anybody else, but to use the oft repeated saying, "Johnny Webber thinks he must go halves with everybody." It was deplored among the wisest of his comrades that he should have fallen in love with a selfish, complaining sort of a girl, a pretty girl enough, but vain, and not of the sort that John Webber deserved.

But he was apparently satisfied, and never seemed to be troubled when things went wrong; he was always ready to make excuses for everybody else, and when his wife fretted he blamed the weather or her ill health or the housework which she did not like, or the care of the baby, which, to be sure, he always tried to take upon himself at night.

As he walked along this evening he whistled and felt an unusual pride in his success and well being; then he hummed a tune, and occasionally slipped his hand into his side pocket to feel his purse. This was the second Thursday in the month and accordingly pay day. For the last four weeks he had been doing double work, and there was the pay for it folded away safe and sound, and in his heart was a secret joy ready to be told. He was as tired as a hard workman could be, but he forgot his aching back and hurried as fast as he could towards home along the dusty, half-built streets that made the outskirts of the town.

The evening grew hotter and hotter, but he did not mind it, and he felt as if he could wait another minute before he turned into the new bit of street where there was a row of eight small houses, all alike, and looking as if they were set in there in the sand to be sold and carried away elsewhere and established among trees and made houses of—only one had a bit of garden already in this temporary-looking spot, and it was toward that door that John Webber went. With all the sand, and no fence for shelter except a row of stakes made from a split dry-goods box, he had managed to make some flowers grow like those his mother had in her little front yard when he was a boy. There was an invisible yard about this plain, dull, little dwelling, which separated it from the rest of the world. As he glanced at the rest of the houses as he passed them they all looked inferior to his own, which really belonged to him and his wife and baby. He had chosen it because there was a tree in the small back yard, a silver poplar, that had persisted in growing in spite of many discouragements. John Webber had felt very much disappointed because his wife had complained that it cut off her view of another road, which was a thoroughfare from the kitchen window.

The master of this little house looked eagerly up at that window as he came along, because, when Hattie was good-natured and felt like it, she used to stand there and watch for him, and hold the baby up for him to see. Anybody else must have been forced to recognize the fact that the baby was not a beauty; but there was nothing in the world so lovely, the young father thought, and he mistook the round, fat, pinkish face and imperceptible whitish hair and faded blue eyes for the best good looks that any baby in the world could have. His own eyes were beaming full of love and pride, and changed sadly at the moment when he made sure that nobody was looking out for him that evening. Somehow a foreboding sense of disappointment filled his heart as he mounted the steps to the back door and found it—locked!

Yes; and when he rapped the house echoed the sound from its empty corners. There is a difference between the sound of a knock that somebody hears, and that beats against the recognizing ears of some housekeeper, and an unanswered summons like this. What could have become of Hattie and the baby? John Webber stopped to think. She would not have locked the door and shut the windows if she had only gone to see one of the neighbors. Ah! perhaps she had gone to her sisters, two miles farther out in the country, thinking it might be cooler there. They had been meaning to go out and spend a day or two, though John himself had preferred craftily, being conscious of something or plan which he had been keeping secret. It was too far away from his work and he had pleaded that and his real tiredness in this dog-day weather. He lived too far away from the works already, but he knew the air here was so much better for Hattie and the baby than it would be in the heart of the town. That very morning Hattie herself had been complaining of various maladies, and said she felt too ill to be out of her bed—perhaps her sister had come in and insisted upon taking her home. John did not like this sister; she was always making Hattie see faults and failings in people and things, and wondered why he had bought a house just here; in fact, she seemed to question everything he did. Hattie had seemed dreadfully dissatisfied lately, but perhaps it was only the hot weather.

He had found the key under the door mat, and gone into the deserted, cheerless hot little house; he put away his dinner pail and sat down in the rocking chair. He was tired and hungry, and he did not know whether to go out to join his wife or not. There was nobody to tell his secret to, and he had been counting for weeks upon the happiness he would have this evening. Well, he must cool off awhile, anyhow, and then he would take the rest of his long walk. How still it seemed without the baby! The little fellow took up more room than anybody in the house already, and John reached to the table for a rubber rattle that lay there and held it in his hand a minute before he began to strike his knee with it and make the bell ring as if the baby were there to hear.

PART II.

Hallo! there is a folded piece of white paper pinned to the table cloth, which he had not observed before, and he springs for it and takes it over to the window, where the light is better. Hattie writes a faint, cramped little school girl hand that is not easy to read, but John Webber's heart sinks as he spells out the note:

I didn't see any chance of your going to the beach or anywhere else like other folks, and Nell Stince urged me and the baby to start right off with her this morning. She has got part of a house for two weeks down to West Harborside and invited me to make a visit, so I won't expect I can be gone but a few days. Mrs. Stince felt as if the baby needed change very bad. She hopes you will come down for Sunday anyway—Can't you get a week off? I know you would say no if you were here. You are most always so dear, don't be cross, Johnny.

"She knew I would say no," muttered John Webber, his good nature stirred at last like a smooth, deep sea in a great storm. Then he covered his face with his hands and cried. The darkness fell; he sat there still in the rocking chair facing the fact of his wife's thoughtlessness and his own disappointment. She had been so pretty, so merry and trig and neat when he first knew her. She did not wear flaring colors like many other girls. Hattie looked like a little lady, he had told himself many times, and was proud to notice how many people turned to look at her as she went along the streets. It had been hard work to win her, for she had many other admirers, and John Webber was a plain fellow who had more money in the bank than some young men, but who would not spend any more money than he could help on new cravats or cheap shows and needless nonsense. Nell Stince for one had said he was stingy, and wondered why he did not give his promised wife all sorts of gilt jewelry, and one particular feather fan, which winked its spangles enticingly from a jeweler's window.

Nell Stince sneered at the presents this honest lover did buy; she even railed at his foolishness in buying a house and paying for it before he married. She would rather have paid rent and spent all that money for something worth having. She and her husband were both deep in debt already, but it mattered nothing to them.

"A short life and a merry one," Jim Stince was fond of saying to his admiring audiences on the street corners. They had one girl, a little monkey of a thing, rigged in greasy silk and dragged feathers. Nell Stince was Hattie's evil genius. They had worked in the same shop together before they were married, and Hattie would be worth twice as much if he could keep her to himself, poor John thought. Hattie had married him because she loved him—he reminded himself of that proudly.

He was not a dandy like the other fellows, but alas, Hattie seemed to be getting tired of him lately and of her small house, which they had put in order so lovingly in the early days of their married life. She was fretful and dissatisfied, and when John set there in the dark and remembered his mother and her dear, old-fashioned, simple, country life—the farm, the honest, friendly neighbors—he grew bitterly ashamed of all the shams and makeahifs of the town—the life that was all for show and made, what other folks would say, its only conscience. The sweetness of the first part of his wife's letter and the cajoling of the end gave him equal pain.

"She ought to know me better than that," he told himself over and over. Go down and spend Sunday with the Stinces—he would do first.

Poor boy, he had waited so patiently for his own holiday; he had never worked harder in his life than through this last month, and it was to make sure of a good time with his wife and baby at the end. He had found the wife's expense a hard pull anyway; the doctor's bill had been very heavy, but this extra work would make everything square. The extras of every month always counted about the same, and he tried to save a little as he went along—he had always been used to saving.

This very night, when he asked the boss if he could take his vacation, he had been given a hearty permission. "Take two weeks while you are about it, Johnny," said one of the owners who stood by. "I guess we can get along; you deserve it, and I wish we could scare up more fellows like you."

Two whole weeks! What couldn't he do in that time? The baby should go up to the old farm and see his grandmother, who had never taken him into her arms yet—he should roll in the grass where his father used to roll and get solid and strong—poor little beggar! His round, weak face didn't have the look that John Webber believed that a baby's ought to have, though he didn't know much about babies.

"Mother'll know how to cosset him," said John more than once; "and she'll set Hattie on her feet, too, and make some of those old herb teas for her that she used to set so much by. Wormwood; that'll make her hungry!" and Hattie should go down to Harborside and they would find a snug place to board, the first few days, and go out to sail once or twice, and dear me! how good it would all be! Hattie should not know a word about it until they were ready to start the next day—it should be a surprise. "You always want your own way," she had accused him more than once of late; now he would joke her well and see if his way wasn't a good one sometimes. Oh, poor Hattie! How could she have gone away?

That was a long, sad evening for kind-hearted Johnny Webber to spend alone. It was not only his wife's going away on a stolen holiday that troubled him, he had lost his trust faith in the woman he had given his best love. The woman and her trappings seemed so pitiful and trivial as he went through the rooms with a light that night. The life had gone out of everything, and it was untidy and uncared for.

"I learned my trade, and I know how to do the things I have to do. It ain't so with women. If I kept a school for 'em, hang me if I wouldn't turn 'em out to be good for something."

And then he caught sight of a little freak which the baby had worn that very day while he crept about the floor. Poor baby, poor Hattie!—they must both be taken care of; one was as much a child as the other.

The best people in the world are surest to have enemies, and so was our hero, hindered and worried by that worthless member of society, Nell Stince. She cared very little for the poor little wife whom she teased into more or less willing acquiescence to her own foolish ideas. Johnny Webber was such a pattern of propriety, was he? then nothing would content her but letting the world see that he was no better than anybody else—and any way she knew of mocking and shaming him must be tried. Hattie was well enough, but as weak as a straw, and so by flattery and challenge of a foolish pride the well being and prosperity of this new household were brought into danger. And the young wife's eyes were dimmed more and more.

The journey to the seashore had been hot and tiresome; the baby had cried pitifully, and even the Stince child had forgotten the satisfaction of her best clothes and was fretful and provoking. The dust blew after the hard springing wagon in white, stifling clouds, the country roads were unshaded, and the fourteen mile drive seemed likely to never come to an end. Nell Stince's brother, a saucy, half-grown boy, frightened poor little Mrs. Webber by his reckless driving and his beating of the thin horse stumbled every little while and was hardly equal to such a load. When they reached the beach there was no cool breeze—in fact, the glare made it seem hotter than it did at home. Even the despised poplar tree in the yard was remembered with affection, and later, when the depressed little company sat down to their evening meal—an uncomfortable, fly-beset lunch—the repentant wife said that she would have given anything if she had thought to get John's supper ready for him. Nell Stince gave a sneaking laugh which somehow grated on the listener's nerves.

Toward night there was a delightful breath of sea wind, and the baby stopped his crying and grew drowsy at last and went to sleep. Nell Stince was triumphant, and wondered how they should have lived through another hot night at home, but her guest thought of John Webber all the time and wondered what he said when he came home, and if he were angry, and wished over and over again that he were there with her at Harborside in the rough house which seemed very shelterless and uncomfortable. And John Webber's silly little wife cried herself to sleep. Running away did not seem like a joke at all from this point of view, though her hostess was merry enough downstairs with some new and old acquaintances whom she had picked up during the evening.

PART III.

When John Webber walked up next day from an uneasy sleep, he felt as if some enchantment had worked a miserable change in him. No words could say how lonely and wretched angry he was, for, like most good-humored, equable people, his temper was very sudden and hard to manage when it was once roused. This was a sad beginning to the holiday he had looked forward to with such high hopes; he could not go back to the works and face anybody's jeers and curious questioning, neither would he follow Nell Stince's lead and join the household at Harborside. Yes, this would be the best thing; he would go off by himself, too; he would go to see his dear old mother. She was very feeble this year, and he would not disappoint her of her promised visit. Oh, if he could only have taken his baby! But there was nothing to do but go alone, and so he shut the house and left the key at an neighbor's, and hurried away to the train. As he was rushing across the green inland country and the fresh air blew in the car window his anger faded a little.

"Poor Hattie," he said, once or twice, softly, as if he understood that she had felt the need of getting out of the hot town, and had known no better way to act.

He hardly felt like himself until he was nearing his old home on a high Vermont hillside, and after a long walk from the station there came in view the little red house and barn, which looked as if they had slipped part way down the long, long, lonely hill slope. Then he felt like a boy again, the very boy that had gone years ago from that quiet spot out into the busy world to seek his fortune. Alas! he was bringing back a heavy, disappointed heart; he began to wish that he had gone after his wife and brought her with him. That would have been the square thing, and he grew afraid to look his mother in the face.

There she was, dear soul, at the little side door—coming out to pick up some chips to boil the tea-kettle for supper, but she stopped first and shaded her eyes with her hand as she looked along the horizon, and then as if urged by some instinct of what was going to happen, cast an eager glance down the lane that led to the main road. Could it be Johnny? Oh, no, not without his wife and baby. Johnny, after three long years, when she had tried to fancy him, married and living in his own house, and being a father. He had sent her many a $5 bill and short, dull little letter, and nobody knew how much they loved each other, this mother and her youngest boy.

The troubled young man and anxious tender-hearted woman were soon face to face—they were both undemonstrative after the fashion of their kind. Their eyes were a half startled brightness as they reached out their hands to each other, and then John turned away and took the dull axe and began to split some wood while his mother stood watching him. He knew that she expected an explanation of his coming alone, and felt his face and even the very tips of his ears grow scarlet as he bowed away at the knotty sticks of pine in the gathering twilight. But one cannot split kindling wood all night, and at last John Webber threw down his axe and told his story. It was no use to spare him self, for the hard-worked, patient woman was as just a soul as ever lived, and she would not excuse him because he himself made excuses.

"Yes, 'twas hard on you," she said at last. "I can see how you felt, but you needn't have done wrong, Johnny. Now you go right back and get her. I'm glad its so that you wont mind the expenses as much as some other times. I'm urgent about it because I don't know's I shall be here another summer and I feel's though I wanted to see you four folks—winters go dreadful hard with me. * * * I've got a good many little things I want to talk over and get you to see about. Austin's folks have much as they carry and the girls, too. I've been kind o' feelin' as if you were the only child I'd get this summer, and I should ha' took it hard if she hadn't come."

So, early in the morning, before day, John Webber went back lighter hearted than he came and found his wife at the Harborside shanty, having anything but a pleasant time. The baby had taken cold in the night and been very sick. The doctor had been sent for and the little patient was out of danger, and even a great deal better, but his mother, unstrung and pathetically remorseful, threw herself into her husband's ready arms. Nell Stince sniffed a little; she had not made trouble between them after all; they loved each other a great deal better than they ever had before. The illusion of freedom and seeing something of the world had lost its charm for the poor little woman, she had had time to think over things—and as for John Webber, he had made up his mind anew and could not forget some wise words that his dear old mother had spoken, "I guess your woman wants a little old-fashioned mothering," she said. "And I never saw no good of secrets between husbands and wives or of their doing things apart. You might have let her have all the month's pleasure of thinking of it beforehand same as you had; and settlin' what she would do. You take right hold o' hands and lock at life!"

Fluid Lightning is simply a marvellous Rheumatic Remedy. I was for two months a cripple, unable to get out of the house from Sciatica. One bottle gave me instant relief, and placed me on my feet again. I have driven fourteen miles today (something I could not possibly have done were it not for Fluid Lightning) for the express purpose of procuring another bottle. So says Wm. Dixon, Gannosque. PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD.

What Was Done at Last Meeting by the Educationists.

The regular meeting of the school board was held on Monday evening. All the members were present, except Mr. J. C. Dettlor, of Clinton.

The minutes of last meeting and of special meeting were read and confirmed. The usual monthly report of the principal for the month of October was read, showing the average attendance at the public schools to be 742, or 77 per cent.

The contingent committee was instructed to procure models for drawing. A number of small accounts, certified to, were ordered to be paid.

A communication was read from John Russell re J. R. Miller and Knox church session's action in his (Mr. Russell's) case. In the discussion that followed this rather unusual kind of communication, Mr. Crabb and others pointed out that the moment such a communication was seriously entertained, it opened the door for any number of such matters. It was a question for the church courts to decide, and the school board had nothing to do with it.

The matter of the communication was not received as carried on the following division: Yeas—Crabb, Swanson, Morton. Nays—Ball, Butler.

Several accounts were presented and referred to the finance committee. The matter of the principal's special report then came up.

Mr. Embury, who was present, offered to withdraw the report. Mr. Crabb objected to the report being withdrawn, as it might yet be needed for reference.

On motion the report was received and filed. Mr. Crabb said there was a motion on the minutes that during recess one of the teachers should be on the playground. This had not been carried out.

None of the teachers made their appearance there now. Some boys recently had been subjected to great indignities, and he thought the principal should see to it that this matter was attended to in the future. The teachers should also be in their rooms at a quarter to nine to receive their pupils.

The chairman said it was just as necessary that they should be there early in the afternoon. Some of the members—That's the law. The chairman—It certainly ought to be carried out.

Swanson—Last winter some of the pupils complained that they were not allowed to come in when they arrived only five minutes before the hour. The chairman—I heard that, too. Mr. and Mrs. George should be allowed in the hall on cold days.

Butler—Last winter there was much complaint because the children found the school too cold when they got in. Ball—The teachers ought to be informed of these complaints.

Moved by Ball, seconded by Nicholson, that Miss Henderson be appointed teacher of the third room at a salary of $320.

Crabb moved in amendment, seconded by Butler, that Miss Henderson be engaged at a salary of $300. Ball withdrew his motion.

Crabb's amendment was carried. Morton moved, seconded by Butler, that Miss Sherman get the third room at $300, in the event of Miss Henderson refusing, and that Miss Robertson be second choice.

Yeas—Nicholson, Morton, Ball, Swanson, Butler. Nays—Crabb, Malcolmson.

Moved by Ball, seconded by Butler, that Miss Sherman get Miss Harrier's room at $275, in the event of Miss Henderson accepting the higher room. Carried.

Moved by Nicholson, seconded by Crabb, that Miss Robertson get the fifth room at $250.

Moved by Nicholson, seconded by Ball, that Miss March be re-engaged for her present room at her present salary. Carried.

Moved by Crabb, seconded by Ball, that Miss Cook be engaged at a salary of $200. Carried.

Moved by Ball, seconded by Nicholson, that Miss M. Sherman be appointed.

Moved in amendment by Swanson, seconded by Morton, that Miss Jeanie Thompson be engaged at a salary of $200.

For the amendment—Crabb, Morton, Swanson, Malcolmson. Against—Nicholson, Ball, Butler.

Moved by Ball, seconded by Nicholson, that Miss Cook's salary be altered to $225, and that she take a senior position of the ward schools, and that Miss Sherman get a junior position. Carried.

Miss Mary Struthers was appointed a senior ward school teacher at $225. Miss Mary Black was also appointed a senior ward school teacher, at $225. The board then adjourned.

Colborne.

W. F. Clarke, the popular owner of the Clydesdale stable "Cain," has gone to the Ontario Veterinary College, to study for the profession. He ought to make a successful "vet."

HYMN'S BOYS.—On the afternoon of the 28th ult. there was a large gathering of friends and relatives of the principals at the residence of Mr. Joseph Morris, to witness the marriage of his only daughter Annie, to Mr. George Stewart, photographer, of Goderich. The groomsmen were Mr. Charles Stewart, of Clinton, brother of the groom, and Miss Kate Reid, of Carlow, cousin of the bride, attended upon her. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Ure in an impressive manner. The wedding present was a magnificent affair. After the guests made merry with music and dancing, and social chat, the wedding presents were very numerous, and were, of course, much admired. We must congratulate the groom upon acquiring one of our fairest flowers, and taking unto himself the substance after taking so many shadows. The young couple have a host of "sons" in the town and township.

Dunhamton.

No new cases of typhoid fever have occurred, and those of Mr. Whyard's family, who were sick, are recovering, under the care of a professional nurse from London. The funeral sermon of Annie, who died with the fever, was preached last Sabbath evening, in the Methodist church, by the Rev. E. Crompton; the young folks seemed to be deeply affected, and not without cause. The friends of the afflicted family have shown, in very tangible form, their heartfelt sympathy for them; on Saturday Mr. Whyard received a registered letter containing $144, with an accompanying note, saying, "A token of sympathy from your friends." This speaks volumes for the family, and for the public sentiment of the village; verbal expressions of sympathy are often plentiful, but rarely does the feeling of friends, under such circumstances reach so deep as their pockets.

Stanley.

The Methodists of Goshen Line, Stanley, are engaged in special services just before the close of the year. Their church has been very much improved, of late.

AGRICULTURAL MEETING.—On Saturday the 24th inst. a meeting of the officers and directors of the Stanley Branch Agricultural Society was held in the village of Bayfield. After the usual business, the meeting had been some over, the directors discussed the advisability of a union between Stanley, Goderich township and the village of Bayfield, and to have permanent ground located in that village. It was resolved to contact with the Hon. Lamont, indigent, (deceased), $17. The council adjourned to meet again on the first Monday in December.

Dunlop.

The young men of this place instead of pulling down gates and climbing trees with farm implements, etc., had a social gathering, and a try with the children in learning to make tally, and read fortunes for Halloween amusements last Saturday night. The result was that only one gate was removed from its hinges.

Miss Sara Corbett visited friends at Benmilier last week.

Miss Kate Cumming returned home after a four months' visit to her aunt, Mrs. Buthwell, at Sable, Mich.

Leoburg.

The foolish custom of moving other people's property was not forgotten here on Saturday night, the 31st inst. They carried off the heavy farm gate of Hope farm, a distance of a quarter of a mile. Several cattle were then able to make an entrance and do much damage to the plot of clover and brood on some fine young trees belonging to its owner. Several other farmers had to hunt for missing property; while others who had removed theirs from reach, were busy putting to rights on Monday morning.

Mrs. McConnell and daughter have gone to Goderich to reside.

Wife Hawkins has returned from Port Frank.

T. A. Hawkins has returned from a five months' sojourn in Hullett.

Francis Badore has rented his farm to his son Henry for a term of seven years, and has gone to Wallaceburg to reside.

Mrs. William Given, of Tustin, Mich., is on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hawkins. Mrs. Given, who is accompanied by her two children, is very regret to state, in very delicate health.

Mr. Mahaffy shipped a carload of flour to Goderich on his schooner Enterprise last week. This gentleman has done a good business in four this season, having shipped upwards of thirty carloads to Halifax, N.S.

Miss Elizabeth McMillan and Miss Matilda Quaid left on Tuesday for St. John, N.B., where they intend spending the winter. They were accompanied by their cousins, Mr. and Miss Holmes, of St. John, who have been visiting friends and relatives in and around this village during the past two months.

HALLOWEEN.—There are a number of snook thieves in this neighborhood, who make the above occasion answer their purpose to good effect, as it is generally supposed that all deceptions are committed by small boys for sport. James Dunbar is, however, of a different opinion, and has, we understand, a very strong suspicion of the person or persons who appropriated to their own use five of his turkeys on Saturday night last. It is to be hoped Mr. Dunbar's suspicions are well founded, and that the scoundrels may get a richly deserved term in the C.P.

Benmilier.

Wellington Troyer is visiting his sister, Mrs. E. Mohring.

Last Sunday a colt belonging to Jno. Stevens reared up and struck him with his front foot, fracturing his arm near the elbow.

We are informed that George Church has purchased C. Crabb's farm on the Bayfield Road, and does not intend moving to Dakota as was formerly stated.

Thos. Elliott, formerly a school teacher in this neighborhood, has purchased the business of Jonathan Miller, and will conduct the post-office and general store in the future. We believe Mr. Elliott will give satisfaction in his new line, as he is steady and square dealing. We wish him success in his mercantile venture.

SCHOOL OPENING.—The new school house of section No. 7, Colborne, recently erected by J. B. Durst, will be formally opened by a concert on Wednesday evening next. The programme will be in charge of F. Oakes of Clinton, a well-known vocalist. Mr. Durst has put up a neat building, 25x28, with a portico, and it will be crowded on Wednesday next.

The following is a list of the officers of Court Benmilier No. 81, C. O. F. for the ensuing term:—Dr. Taylor, W. C. R.; A. Robertson, V. C. R.; T. Elliott, Ch.; T. Geddie, R. S.; Wm. Vanstone, Fin. Treas.; Thos. Gunn, Treas.; J. Breene, Sr. W. W. Hascke, Jr. W.; E. Mohring, Sr. B. J. Miller, Jr. B.; G. W. Handy, P. C. R.

Goderich Township.

Holmesville, Nov. 2, 1885. Council met today pursuant to adjournment. Members all present except Mr. Achewin, who is still unable to attend. Minutes of last meeting read and passed. Moved by John Beacom, seconded by J. Lathwait, that the nomination of candidates for township councilors for 1886, be held in Knox's hall, Holmesville, on the last Monday in the month of present year, at 12 o'clock noon.—Carried. Moved by J. Beacom, seconded by James H. Elliott, that the municipal elections for this township for the year 1886, be held in the following places, viz.: No. 1, sub-division, Orange hall, 4th con.; No. 2, house of Nixon Sturdy; No. 3, house of Thomas Harrison; No. 4, house of Wm. Herbison, sr.; No. 5, house of Herbert Elford; No. 6, house of Wm. Crooks, and that the following persons be deputy returning officers, viz.:—No. 1, S. D., Samuel Johnston; No. 2, Nixon Sturdy; No. 3, Thos. Harrison; No. 4, Wm. Herbison, sr.; No. 5, H. Elford; No. 6, W. Crooks. Carried. Moved by J. Beacom, seconded by J. H. Elliott, that medical practitioners are hereby notified not to pay more than one visit to any indigent patient in Goderich township without a written order from one of the council, as the latter will not be responsible for anything other than the above.—Carried. The following accounts were paid, viz.:—Rowell & Hutchinson, Toronto, election papers, $7; clerk, part salary, $40; selection of jury, clerk $4, rent $3, auction $3; clerk, posting up notices and going to Goderich in regard to road to Holmesville bridge, $5; treasurer, borrowing and paying loans from bank, $12; harness & board for one Lamont, indigent, (deceased), $17. The council adjourned to meet again on the first Monday in December. JAMES PATTON, clerk.

A DISGUSTING SPECTACLE. The Naked Body of a Man Exposed to View in a Butcher Shop.

From the Toronto News. Saturday night, when on his beat up Parliament street, constable Jenkinson perceived dangling from a hook in front of Langrill's butcher shop what seemed very like a human figure, and which, on closer inspection, he discovered to be, indeed, the body of a man; one who is known among medical men as a subject. He had no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that it had been taken from one of the medical schools, and that in putting it there the students had been perpetrating what they meant to be a joke. The body was suspended from a hook by means of a handkerchief tied around the neck, and was placed in such a position that all the loathsomeness attending such a spectacle might be seen to the greatest advantage. The head hung in strips from the bones, and some of the fingers had been severed from the hand, and altogether it was so sickening and so disgusting that probably only a medical student could look at it with serene composure. The horrified policeman at once informed Sergeant Gregory, of No. 4 station, and the medical colleges were visited. The caretaker of Trinity college on Spruce street, when he had been aroused, and had inspected his vats, found three subjects missing, and at once commenced a search about the premises with the result that he discovered two of the bodies in the yard. A wheelbarrow was procured, and on going back to the scene of the outrage on Parliament street, the body was deposited in the barrow, and transferred once more to the school. The police express the liveliest indignation at the occurrence, and it is probable an investigation will be instituted, and the perpetrators of the shocking outrage will be punished.

Mr. Baird, of Kincairdine, has been notified that two thirty two pounder guns, with carriages, are about to be shipped there for defence. Customs officer A. M. Williamson it is expected will be appointed Head Artilleryman.

PRESENTATION.—On Friday evening the employees of the Doherty Organ Co. met in the large warehouse of the firm and the spokesman presented Mr. W. D. Stewart, the retiring book-keeper, with a handsome diamond ring and locket on behalf of the working men of the institution. Mr. Stewart leaves many friends in Clinton.

Mrs. Brewer, of Harpurhay, now in her 86th year, has during the last few months accomplished a piece of work which very few young ladies one quarter her age would accomplish in as many years. Between the first of May and the first of October, Mrs. Brewer cut and pieced a quilt containing 1,337 pieces. This she did in addition to her ordinary house work and garden work, and what is most remarkable of all, without the aid of glasses.

Miss Annie Gottschalk left her parents' home, about a mile from Zurich, six weeks ago, to visit her sister, Mrs. R. Winter, at Seaford, being in her usual health. She was taken suddenly ill while there, of inflammation, which turned to fever, and after five days of prostration sufficiently strong of such a ghoul-like deed, and hoped that, the students would show their abhorrence of it by word and deed.

The Toronto school, although in no way connected with the occurrence, is keenly alive to the fact that it reflects upon the whole body of students, and in a more remote degree upon the profession, and in consequence an indignation meeting was called by them yesterday afternoon. The students have so taken the thing to heart that they will make the utmost endeavors to discover the culprits, and if they should succeed in doing so these half dozen or so of practical joking gentlemen will have a severe reprimand. They will suffer all the contempt and indignation which the students can inflict, and will then probably be expelled by the faculty. It is years since anything of the kind happened before, and from the honor and shame which it has brought upon the school, it will be decades before it happens again.

[Since the above was in type, Richard Stone, a Parliament-street butcher, and four assistants have been arrested, charged with stealing the dead body and hanging it up at Langrill's shop door. If the charge against Stone be true it will exonerate the students.—Ed.]

BOILER EXPLOSION. A Steamboat Calamity on the St. Clair River.

SOVERA, Ont., Nov. 2.—The tug Frank Moffat, owned by the Moffat line of Port Huron, while coming along side of the dock at Sombra village, on Sunday morning at about 1 o'clock, her boiler exploded with great violence, instantly killing James Ward, first engineer, and William Miller, second engineer, and both firemen, whose names are unknown. Frank Furtak, wheelman, was so badly scalded that he died this morning. Captain T. Currie had his leg dislocated and is otherwise badly bruised. Harry Morris, dockhand, had his shoulder dislocated and is badly scalded about the neck and arms. The mate, one wheelman and one deckhand, and a lady steward escaped without being dangerously hurt. Had the boat been far from the dock when the accident occurred it is likely that any lives would have been saved. The bodies of the two firemen and two engineers have not been recovered yet. The boat is a total wreck, and Mr. A. Smith's dock is badly damaged.

TIED OF LIFE. A Perth Farmer Hangs Himself With a Plowline.

ST. MARYS, Nov. 23.—Last night James McQuirk, a farmer living on the 10th concession of East Nisoury, hanged himself to a beam in his barn with a rope plowline. He was in St. Marys during the day and visited the Catholic Church, to which he belonged. He returned home in the afternoon, and attended to his usual work at night. About 8:30 he went out, and was seen no more alive. His brother Richard, shortly after 10 o'clock, went to see what was the matter, and found the man hanging to a beam quite dead. He was an unmarried man, between 38 and 40 years of age, and lived on a farm with his brother, sister and cousin, left them by their parents. The cause of the man's act is said to have been financial difficulties.

THE PRINCESS ROYAL. Wreck of a Hudson Bay Company's Vessel. How the News was Brought.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—It seems that the first news of the loss of the Hudson Bay Company's ship, Princess Royal, was received by Mr. Colin Rankin, the Company's factor at Mattawa, the intelligence being brought across the country from Moose Factory, on Lakes Abitibi and Temisaming, by a crew of Indians in canoes. The wreck occurred about twenty miles from Moose Factory on the 4th of October. The Princess Royal delivered her cargo of supplies for the Company's posts, branches in England, and at once re-loaded with the usual cargo of furs. The day previous to the wreck, having completed loading, she crossed the bay at high tide and anchored outside. The furs were sprung up in the same day and three cables were indispensable to hold her against it. In consequence she was driven on to the bar and the violence of the storm was so great that she was quickly broke in two. Afterwards she drifted inside the bar, and sank after being partially broken up. The crew fortunately all escaped with their lives, but the vessel and cargo were a total loss. The latter Mr. Rankin estimates, was fully worth a quarter million dollars. It is probable, however, that a fair proportion of it was covered by insurance. The captain of the last vessel has been sailing the Bay for twenty-five years without a previous accident. The storm have been exceedingly severe in that region this fall. Last year the vessel that made the same voyage had to be up in the Bay all winter, owing to the pack of ice in the Straits, and was only driven in England about three weeks before her companion vessel was lost. Another crew of Indians had arrived at Mattawa only three days before the vessel was wrecked. The Princess Royal was a sailing ship.

Specialist Visit to Goderich. To sufferers from catarrh, deafness, bronchitis, asthma, consumption, and all diseases of the head, throat and lungs. The successful treatment of the International Throat and Lung Institute, 173 Church St., Toronto, will be at the Albion Hotel Goderich, Saturday, November 14th. For the special treatment of the above named diseases which are cured by the Spirometer, the invention of Dr. Souville, of Paris. Marvellous success has been achieved in the cure of all nasal, throat and lung diseases. It is the best known treatment in the world for diseases of the respiratory organs, and is a positive cure for consumption in its early stages. The surgeons are experts and specialists and are restoring to health and vigor scores of sufferers who have been pronounced incurable. Consultation free.

Public School Board. What Was Done at Last Meeting by the Educationists. The regular meeting of the school board was held on Monday evening. All the members were present, except Mr. J. C. Dettlor, of Clinton. The minutes of last meeting and of special meeting were read and confirmed. The usual monthly report of the principal for the month of October was read, showing the average attendance at the public schools to be 742, or 77 per cent. The contingent committee was instructed to procure models for drawing. A number of small accounts, certified to, were ordered to be paid. A communication was read from John Russell re J. R. Miller and Knox church session's action in his (Mr. Russell's) case. In the discussion that followed this rather unusual kind of communication, Mr. Crabb and others pointed out that the moment such a communication was seriously entertained, it opened the door for any number of such matters. It was a question for the church courts to decide, and the school board had nothing to do with it. The matter of the communication was not received as carried on the following division: Yeas—Crabb, Swanson, Morton. Nays—Ball, Butler. Several accounts were presented and referred to the finance committee. The matter of the principal's special report then came up. Mr. Embury, who was present, offered to withdraw the report. Mr. Crabb objected to the report being withdrawn, as it might yet be needed for reference. On motion the report was received and filed. Mr. Crabb said there was a motion on the minutes that during recess one of the teachers should be on the playground. This had not been carried out. None of the teachers made their appearance there now. Some boys recently had been subjected to great indignities, and he thought the principal should see to it that this matter was attended to in the future. The teachers should also be in their rooms at a quarter to nine to receive their pupils. The chairman said it was just as necessary that they should be there early in the afternoon. Some of the members—That's the law. The chairman—It certainly ought to be carried out. Swanson—Last winter some of the pupils complained that they were not allowed to come in when they arrived only five minutes before the hour. The chairman—I heard that, too. Mr. and Mrs. George should be allowed in the hall on cold days. Butler—Last winter there was much complaint because the children found the school too cold when they got in. Ball—The teachers ought to be informed of these complaints. Moved by Ball, seconded by Nicholson, that Miss Henderson be appointed teacher of the third room at a salary of $320. Crabb moved in amendment, seconded by Butler, that Miss Henderson be engaged at a salary of $300. Ball withdrew his motion. Crabb's amendment was carried. Morton moved, seconded by Butler, that Miss Sherman get the third room at $300, in the event of Miss Henderson refusing, and that Miss Robertson be second choice. Yeas—Nicholson, Morton, Ball, Swanson, Butler. Nays—Crabb, Malcolmson. Moved by Ball, seconded by Butler, that Miss Sherman get Miss Harrier's room at $275, in the event of Miss Henderson accepting the higher room. Carried. Moved by Nicholson, seconded by Crabb, that Miss Robertson get the fifth room at $250. Moved by Nicholson, seconded by Ball, that Miss March be re-engaged for her present room at her present salary. RIEL STILL PROPHESES.

He Expects Nothing From John Bull, But Thinks He Will Not Be Hanged.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 31.—When Riel was told his case had been referred to the privy council he said it was absurd. "What," he said, "has this English council to do with me? I look only to the Canadian Government for leniency."

He continues to prophesy daily in his cell, and writes out daily volumes of alleged communications from the spirit world. His last prophetic vision is that the halfbreeds will be surprised to see how soon things will turn in their favor, and that halfbreed women will experience the change first. Halfbreeds will progress fast, but they must not lead a roving life any longer. They must get on to land and take up homesteads.

There is great diversity of opinion here as to Riel's future. Many believe that he will not be hanged, but that his life will be spared in exchange for French votes to secure the passage of some measure in the interest of the Canadian Pacific. "You will find," said a gentleman today, "that they will dangle Riel with a rope around his neck before the French members of Parliament until they have been compelled to swallow a good dose of Canadian Pacific medicine."

Singing for a New Railway.

The following from the Toronto News is at least a good joke, and perhaps the incident may be remembered by some citizens who lived there before the railway was built:

"When the T. G. & B. railway was in contemplation, Ald. Baxter and Geo. Laidlaw went up to Kincardine to address a meeting. They reached the town on Saturday, only to find that the meeting had been advertised for Monday. During Saturday they went about the town, and though Ald. Baxter, of Toronto, was considered quite a big man, every hat was doffed to the great railway magnate, Geo. Laidlaw. But the Methodists of the town found that John was a choir singer and invited him into their choir. He sang so well on Sunday morning that they insisted upon a solo at night, and he gave 'In Native Worth' in his best style. Laidlaw, like a good Scotchman, had attended the Presbyterian church. Next morning he was surprised to find that every hat was doffed to Ald. Baxter, while he was a comparatively unimportant personage. When an explanation was given, coupled with the assurance that it would all be for the good of the cause, he burst out in strong disgust: 'That's the difference between the Presbyterian and a Methodist. No Presbyterian would go to the House of God to sing the praise of a narrow gauge railway.'

An Orange Manifesto.

At the meeting of Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 1,466, of Morris, Man., on Oct. 22, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted: "That we call upon our Government to stand firm and have the law faithfully executed and no longer trifle with the patience of an outraged people, and as Orangemen we pledge ourselves to maintain our traditional loyalty, and pledge our lives to stand by them in supporting the throne and maintaining the laws."

"That should the Government yield to French rule and draw upon itself the contempt of all civilized society, we can only say: 'What portion have we with such a Government?' To thy tents, oh Israel. 'Now see to thy house.' No loyal man can ever again rush to the rescue of such a despicable body, unworthy the name of Government."

The Toronto Grand Jury attributed several of the serious cases coming to their attention to drunkenness.

The child that is taught to observe and to think is educated. The child that is taught to remember only is merely loaded as a pack-horse. He carries a great deal, but it does him little good.

Maloney, who was acquitted because of insanity for murdering Dr. McGeachie, was not allowed to go at large. He will remain in jail. There are now two criminal lunatics in jail who will not be admitted to asylums, and for whom no law can admit them to the penitentiary asylum. The government will be urged to erect a criminal wing to an asylum for such classes of lunatics.

And Fancy.

An Irishman remarked that it is a great pleasure to be alone—especially when your watchman is wide awake. "I am afraid," said a lady to her husband, "that I am going to have a stiff neck." "Not at all impossible, my dear," replied her spouse. "I have been strong symptoms of it ever since we were married."

They were out driving. Said Theodore: "What tree, Angelina, bears the most precious fruit? Angelina: "Oh, Dory, I can't tell unless it's a cherry-tree." Theodore looked unattentively at her as she gazed into Angelina's eyes, and said: "The axe tree, darling."

Why is a lady's hair like the latest news? Because in the morning we always find it in papers. Why is an oration delivered from the deck of a ship like a necklace? Because it is a decoration. An Irish student was once asked what was meant by posthumous work. "They are such works," says Paddy, "as a man writes after he is dead."

The man with new tight shoes and an ingrowing nail seems to be the one who is always selected by fate to be compelled to run for a train. A crowded horse car. Enter Mrs. Muleshey with a jug. Mr. Maloney, who is seated, facetiously—"Wud I hold the whiskey for yez, Mrs. Muleshey?" Mrs. M. (with withering sarcasm)—"Thank yez kindly, nor; but yer have all ye can hold now, I'm thinkin'."

Pain in the Side, from whatever cause, may be quickly relieved by Hagar's Yellow Oil, which cures all manner of aches and pains, and all soreness and lameness of the flesh—applied and taken inwardly. "What a story teller Mirandy's got to be since she went to their 'academy,'" remarked Mrs. Homepan to her husband. "Wye, wot's the gal been doin' now?" asked Daniel. "Doin'!" exclaimed Mrs. Homepan; "she's wot she should be, goin' to her room to dretch, as she wished to retire early."

Few men have accomplished the same amount of work and good in this world as the celebrated Dr. Chase. Over 500,000 of his works have been sold in Canada alone. We want every person troubled with Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Headache, Kidney or Urinary Troubles, to call in at J. Wilson's drug store, and buy a bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, it will cure you. Medicine and Recipe Book $1.

Seeing is believing. Read the testimonials in the pamphlet on Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure, then buy a bottle and relieve yourself of all those distressing pains. Your Druggist can tell you all about it. Sold by J. Wilson Goderich 2m.

The Mail announces that Baring Brothers will take the whole of the Canadian Pacific Bonds, and that the Company will return to the Government the $30,000,000 advanced last year. This would be very satisfactory but for the fact the C. P. R. bonds are guaranteed by the Government, and if the Company makes default in the interest the Government will have to step into the breach. There is every reason to fear that the $45,000,000 of bonds will become an integral part of the Canadian public debt.—[Hamilton Times.]

Relieve Salt Rheum Cured. Are you troubled with Salt Rheum, Rough Skin, Pimples or Canker Sores; if so, go at once to Geo. Rhynas' Drug Store and get a package of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cure. Price 25 cents. It was never known to fail. A REWARD—Of one dozen "TEABERY" to any one sending the best four luncheon to "TEABERY," the remarkable little gem for the Teeth and Gums. Ask your druggist or address. In the history of medicines no preparation has received such universal commendation, for the alleviation it affords and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by J. Wilson.

Bishop Cameron's Circular.

For the information and benefit of our electors I am submitting to you a copy of the circular letter respecting the existence of such a document, we reproduce the circular letter respecting the Antigonish election issued to his priests by Bishop Cameron.

ASTONISH, Sept. 30, 1885. Dear Rev. Father, Owing to the elevation of Judge McLean to the county court bench, the election of the county is offered the rare privilege of choosing for their representative in the Commons a Catholic gentleman eminent for his private virtues, social standing and commanding abilities. A Catholic who is at the same time an honored member of the Dominion Cabinet, and therefore in a better position to guard the rights and promote the interests of the diocese and every other county in the diocese than any available candidate; a Catholic who, because he is a fervent convert to the Catholic church, and so highly gifted, has incurred the enmity, not indeed of liberal minded Protestants, but of bigots and near-sighted men. Hon. J. S. D. Thompson, Minister of Justice. Were he still a Protestant, there is not a Protestant constituency in the province which would not feel proud of being represented by him, but because he is a convert to Catholicity it is morally certain that there is not a county in Nova Scotia that would elect him wherever bigots—not liberal minded Protestants, but fanatical bigots—could turn the scales against him. It would in consequence be both a lack of public spirit, patriotism and honor on our part, an indelible disgrace to oppose or even not to support his candidature on the present occasion. Never, I trust, will any native county, the most Catholic county in the Maritime Provinces, be guilty of such blind and suicidal policy as the present cry of unreasoning and unprovoked feeling and ill-disguised bigotry urges it to follow, a policy that would sacrifice our honor and our interests both as Catholics and citizens. The objection to the election of non-residents must be regarded, at best, as purely sentimental. Only when the respective merits and usefulness of candidates are exactly equal can such an objection be for a moment entertained with regard to the employment of servants, whether public or private. Such is the self-evident principle upheld and acted upon by the most intelligent constituencies in England, Ireland, Scotland, the United States and the Dominion of Canada. Such is the principle followed by all of us in our dealings with our fellowmen in every other relation of life. Why not, therefore, in politics as well? Besides, a cabinet minister, who is not a representative of Ottawa, is necessarily a non-resident, because his office and his home must be at Ottawa throughout his incumbency. I trust then and pray that if a cautious opposition to the triumphant election of the hon. minister of justice is persisted in, both you and your parishioners will inflict merited punishment upon it at the polls. This is the request and earnest entreaty of you and their devoted friend and father,

J. B. CAMERON, Bishop of Arichat. P. S.—Be pleased to read and if necessary explain the foregoing letter to your parishioners as soon as possible. J. C.

No person can read the above circular without being satisfied as to whom the credit for the election of Mr. Thompson is due! These journals which have attempted a mild defence of Bishop Cameron's course by saying that a citizen has a perfect right to entertain an advocate political opinion, need no consideration. If their mental condition is such that they fail to recognize a distinction between Bishop Cameron's attitude and procedure and the mere holding and advocating of political opinions as individuals by clergymen, then no amount of argument will convince them.

TWO TRAMPS. And Their Widely Different Modes of Leading Lazy Lives—Candor and Cleanliness, vs. Dirt and Deception. In the bustle and strife of this busy world we can scarcely venture upon any undertaking without meeting with more or less opposition. This is an acknowledged fact by all who have cast their lot and faced Dame Fortune. A very great deal of our troubles may be avoided, however, if we take things as they come, and with truth on our side make the best of them. We can give no clearer illustration of this than the one presented to Chief Windred a few nights ago. Early in the evening two "Tramps" loomed up before the chief and asked for a night's lodging in the "glory hole." There was a very striking contrast between the "pair." The one whom we shall call "Tom" was a great tall, strong, burly fellow, with dark complexion. "Jim" the other one, was a short, slim, light complexion chap, who looked as though he could hide behind a fence post and not be discovered. This request was granted, but before giving them a "sleep" for the night the chief proceeded to search them. He noticed during this operation that Tom was exceedingly filthy about his person, his clothes being almost to rags. His shirt seemed as if it had done service in a coal mine for a century while the toes of his boots looked upward and gaped like a dying fish. Jim was the very reverse. His clothes and person displayed marked cleanliness, which at once impressed the chief with the idea that he was not long a tramp, so he remarked,

"I could get plenty to do, said Jim, but it is heavy work and you see chief I don't wish to do that kind of work. How I got upon these hands of mine would look anything like a star's running wheelbarrow. I suppose you find it pretty hard getting enough to eat, when going around this way I remarked the chief. "Hard I guess we do, was Tom's response. "Have I got any hungry many a time; to say nothing about climbing wire fences or fighting bull dogs with an occasional cussing throw in. Its easy enough, remarked Jim. When I am hungry I go to a farm house and don't disguise the fact that I am a tramp, but ask right out for something to eat, and I generally get it. Of course I offer to work for it. You see I keep myself clean and people don't often refuse me. I see, said the chief. But what do you do for a change of clothes? You are clean and tidy while your "chum" is the very opposite. That is easy enough. You see opening the bosom of his shirt I have two white ones. There is a clean shirt under it each. Well, when the outside one becomes dirty, I cast it off. I then go to some house and ask for a piece of soap. I tell them what it is for and they give me one. There is no trouble finding water and after I have washed it I put it on underneath the other one. Kind of a duplex adjustable ways coming to the top. Now, you see it and now you don't."

At this point the chief was called away by his wife and their pleasant dreams departed. Liver Complaint. A faint, weary, sick and listless feeling, with aching back and shoulders, and irregular bowels, proclaim a diseased condition of the liver. Bitters which cures all forms of liver complaint. 2 The Muskoka Review. We are sorry that we cannot say anything in favor of Sir John's appointee as reviser of the Muskoka voters lists, Mr. W. C. Malahy, of Bracebridge. That such an appointment be made is a disgrace to any civilized nation. During the Maritime Campaign, the Hon. J. D. Campbell in Muskoka, Mr. Malahy acted as best man for John Shields, in the management of his notorious gang. As Mr. Malahy no doubt lost the business of every decent client by this, he thinks the record of his conduct in some way. Accordingly he has been appointed reviser of the Muskoka voters lists. The record of the famous campaign is quite fresh in the memory of our readers. Malahy swore that he was a member of the Muskoka voters list, and that he had five hundred dollars, for what purpose may be imagined. In their judgment the judges who tried the petition severely commented on the part Malahy took in the campaign. As the riding very close his appointment is still more disgraceful, and is an insult to the whole riding. Our friends in Muskoka must be on their guard or they will be in a greater minority there at the next election than at the last.—[Orillia Times.]

The Pains of Lumbago, aching back and hips, with all weakness and soreness, will speedily vanish under the treatment of Hagar's Yellow Oil, a remedy which will act internally and applied externally. It is a positive cure for pain. 2 Killed on Her Way to Dinner. DUTTON, Oct. 20.—Maggie McAlpine, of Cowal, North Dunwich, a tailor's in the employ of Mr. Wilton, of Dutton, was killed instantly at noon today. She was riding on the horse, Mr. Wilton, the track, and was on her way to dinner, when she was struck by the pilot and hurled a distance of ten rods. Her body presented a horrible sight. Her skull was split open and the brain struck along the track. Her clothes were stripped from her body, which was horribly mangled.

As the riding very close his appointment is still more disgraceful, and is an insult to the whole riding. Our friends in Muskoka must be on their guard or they will be in a greater minority there at the next election than at the last.—[Orillia Times.]

The Pains of Lumbago, aching back and hips, with all weakness and soreness, will speedily vanish under the treatment of Hagar's Yellow Oil, a remedy which will act internally and applied externally. It is a positive cure for pain. 2 Killed on Her Way to Dinner. DUTTON, Oct. 20.—Maggie McAlpine, of Cowal, North Dunwich, a tailor's in the employ of Mr. Wilton, of Dutton, was killed instantly at noon today. She was riding on the horse, Mr. Wilton, the track, and was on her way to dinner, when she was struck by the pilot and hurled a distance of ten rods. Her body presented a horrible sight. Her skull was split open and the brain struck along the track. Her clothes were stripped from her body, which was horribly mangled.

COMMUNICATIONS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. Contributors to this department must confine themselves to public questions, and be brief.

Piano Tuning.

To the Editor of the Signal. Dear Sir,--Regarding the letter to you on piano tuning from M. M. Wynn dated Oct. 7th, I desire to correct a gross misrepresentation of what I said to Mr. Wynn (as I did in the letter) and am glad if you will kindly do me the justice to insert this letter. Mr. Wynn says in his letter:--"Messrs. Kelk, Williams & Raymond gave it up (i.e. the piano) saying they could not do anything with it." In the first place I never tuned Mr. Wynn's piano. I only examined the piano and told Mrs. Wynn, that simply tuning would do it, and that it needed a thorough re-tuning, that I did not care to undertake long repairing jobs while traveling but she shopped it to Bradford I would undertake it. I then stated my price and Mrs. Wynn told me she thought she would ship it at a convenient time. But the words in Mr. Wynn's letter would be very apt to mislead the unwary public, and it is not used to such advertising mediums. Apologizing for occupying so much of your valuable space. I have the honor to be, dear sir, yours truly, MONTAGU RAYMOND.

[We insert the above reply in justice to Mr. Raymond. If Messrs. Brown and Raymond wish to continue this controversy, it must be carried on in the advertising columns at advertising rates. --Ed.]

Tupperisms.

One high commissioner keeps his wines in a twenty dollar refrigerator. I don't see the vouchers sent to the people of Canada as guarantees of payment say! Two hundred and ten dollars for a bottle of wine. There is a man about Sir Charles Tupper, especially when the Canadian taxpayer foots the bill! The blankets which our commissioner keeps under at London are free of taxes, but they are paid for by taxes sprung through a protective tariff out of the people of Canada! There is nothing like patronizing home industries.

As Sir Charles Tupper purchased three dozen each of port, sherry, claret and champagne, he is to be commended. He is Sir Charles Tupper's table favors meat! But then there were four dozen of the democratic tumbler! They are useful for beer! There is one thing in Sir Charles Tupper's favor respecting his forty-three thousand dollar palace and contents in London, which is commendable. The Sir Charles spends the money and sends the bills in boldly to the Canadian taxpayers! There are some cabinet ministers who get the same through the medium of a gift from public contractors having unsettled accounts with the Government!

When the over-taxed Canadian farmer exercises thrift by melting down the waste tallow to make candles this winter, he finds that his protected coal oil doesn't give as good light as oil, let him think of the soft subdued light which is shed over Sir Charles Tupper's London dining room through the ruby cups, the opaline cups, the opal comets and the pink jet-moons for which this country paid an enormous sum! --[Ottawa Free Press.]

A Fallacious Argument.

The Toronto Mail is trying to make it appear that Mr. Blake has not been a successful leader, and it bases its conclusion not upon any evidence that Mr. Blake has not the entire confidence of the Liberal party, but because Mr. Blake has not had more largely the confidence of his opponents, and because the Tory party happen at the present time to have the majority in Parliament. Mr. Blake cannot have been a successful leader. This is a very extraordinary line of argument. Some of the cleverest men that have taken part in Parliamentary discussions have on many questions, for the time stood almost alone. We have very great respect for the opinion of the people, but our respect does not reach to the point of holding that the majority are necessarily right, and especially when that majority has been secured by means that serve rather to stifle than to elicit a fair expression of public opinion.

Mr. Blake enjoys the confidence, not only of the Liberal party, but the confidence and esteem of the larger portion of the opposite party, more largely perhaps than any other man who has at any time in the history of this country sat in Parliament. Nearly one-half of Sir John Macdonald's supporters today would prefer being followers of Mr. Blake; they have not for the time being the courage of their convictions; they do not for the present see their way to withdraw their support from one whose leadership they have so long recognized but of whose lead they have become weary; but that they are anxious to do so, that they would rejoice at a favorable opportunity, must be known before this time to Sir John Macdonald himself. That a large section of the Tory party would not accept Mr. Blake we can well understand; the methods by which they get into Parliament, the purpose for which they use their Parliamentary position, they know would not meet with Mr. Blake's approval, and therefore they say, "Not this man, but Barrabas!" --[London Advertiser.]

Voting by Ballot.

The Berlin News says "Every man who marks his ballot for a local member knows that there is no difficulty to find out how he voted. In this Reform or Liberality! The Tories at Ottawa have an entirely different law. Any man voting for a Dominion member may defy the world to find out how he marked his ballot. All this shows which is the truly liberal party in this country. Perhaps the Berlin News is not aware that the Dominion ballot system which it praises to much was the work of Sir A. A. Dornan, the present chief justice of Quebec, and it was opposed by Sir John Macdonald and the English men."

bers of the Tory party, who prefer the English ballot system which has been adopted in Ontario, so that the allusion to the Dominion system in connection with the present Administration is a blunder of the News. But we deny the material statement of the News altogether. It is not true that there is no difficulty in finding out how a man votes. There is great difficulty, and unless the News is prepared to affirm that the clerk of the Crown in Chancery is constantly guilty of perjury, it can no more be found out how a man votes in the one case than in the other. There is a possibility of ascertaining with certainty in the one case where the court puts the necessary machinery in operation for the purpose; in the other it is impossible. So that when a contested election takes place in the one case full and complete justice may be done, in the other case the impossibility of ascertaining how a man voted frequently renders absolute redress impossible, and makes it necessary sometimes to subject an innocent party to a new election, which under the other system can be avoided.

Our "Voting Indians."

Senator Plumb visited the Indian exhibition at Bradford, and took the opportunity of making a political speech, although at the time he denied his intention of doing so. He praised the Dominion Government for having enfranchised the Indians, and he assured the Indians that they now enjoyed under the Franchise Act equal rights with all other men. Senator Plumb rather overrated his case. He must have informed himself very badly, or he would have known that the Indian population are not upon a footing of equality with all other men; on the contrary, the Indians are still the wards of the Government as before; they have as little control over their own affairs as they ever had. The only change in their condition is that they are now at liberty to go to the polls and vote for the Administration; but they are no more free to buy or sell, they are in no larger degree responsible for their debts, they are still as exempt from tax and service as they were before the election. The franchise was conferred upon them. --[London Advertiser.]

The Whisky Head Must Go.

The young man who takes to whisky discounts his future to a much greater extent than did his father, who took to strong liquor thirty years ago. There is now no room for whisky-heads in positions of trust or where nerve and care are required. The only place where he has any slow but sure back to some one else. Everyone takes advantage of him, overworks him, gives him poor pay, and ill-treats him. Even a smell of beer nowaday for a bank manager in refusing him a small accommodation, or for a wholesale man refusing him a small line of credit. The old idea that fellows who took to drink were good-souled chaps is a delusion. They may be so when sober, but more mean and low acts are done by men under liquor than when free of a dozen times over. People no longer take stock in the chivalry of whisky; they are, however, convinced of the beastliness of the habit. It is in the air that the whisky-head must go. --[Toronto World.]

HOUSE DECORATION AND FRESCO PAINTING. A CARD.

Mr. and Mrs. PROCTOR, the veteran Decorative Artists and Fresco Painters, avail themselves of this means to tender their heartfelt thanks to the farmers and others, resident in the County of Huron, for the liberal patronage and courteous hospitality so generally extended to them during their short sojourn in this beautiful section of Canada about a year, and would most respectfully intimate that they purpose to continue their canvass through the County of Huron in the interests of their business. That by an honorable course of conduct, and the accomplishment of superior work, to merit an extension of that patronage and confidence which they will use every effort to secure and maintain. The Townships of Colborne, Goderich, and Huron, will be their first field of action during the coming winter. Their Decorations being in Oil, are impervious to damp, and the most brilliant and durable colors may be freely used without risk of the emission of that poisonous and unhealthy exhalation known as "green sickness" in even the most expensive paper decorations. Their style is pleasing, attractive and diversified, and the walls of Parlors, Drawing Rooms, Parlors, Halls, Dining Rooms and Libraries can be permanently and beautifully embellished at really moderate expense. MR. & MRS. PROCTOR. 2018-1m Oct. 22nd, 1885.

THOSE OPEN I. A good deal of space are ready to admit is filled up with "open" letters, spirit of fair play, insert the irate teacher exactly in the Star, and we also of about the same length; think anybody can compare fair play; although nowers have been treated to Mr. Embury's extraordinary hints they may be anxious from any further infliction. There will like need of "open letters."

We have long held back with manner of man it principal of our public ac his has invited reply, an Mr. Embury didn't, kr ed.

But what shall be said of the Star in connection with? Time and again he has personally abusing one o proprietors of THE STAR he knew to be false--to his journal. He has all correspondents to write he dared not write him. We care not that he c is not responsible for the his communication column available. If he cannot of what goes into his coil reign his position, and I nerve take the guidance: How does Mr. Mitche's publication of Embury's Mr. Thos. McGillicuddy cummies he has paid the again on public platf where?

Mr. Mitchell has plac false position, and we h repeat his error. If there is to be a fight let it be a square fight, b hoodlum and the Thug, assassin and backstabber

That has been furd Monday, Nov. 16th. S to put off the evil day, b will have to face the b with it squarely.
