

THE CHRONICLE

Published every Friday afternoon, by DUNN & CO., at their Office in Water Street, over the store of Messrs. Milby & Thomas. Terms—Five shillings per annum, in advance. When sent by mail, 2s. 6d. extra. Papers sent out of the City must be paid for as above.

Any person forwarding the names of six responsible subscribers will be entitled to a copy gratis. All letters, communications, &c. must be put paid for they will not be attended to. No paper discontinued until arrears are paid.

Weekly Almanac.
1st Sunday	5 44 6 15 0 10 24
2nd Sunday	5 46 6 14 2 10 24
3rd Sunday	5 47 6 13 3 10 24
4th Sunday	5 48 6 12 4 10 24
5th Sunday	5 49 6 11 5 10 24
6th Sunday	5 50 6 10 6 10 24
7th Sunday	5 51 6 9 7 10 24
8th Sunday	5 52 6 8 8 10 24

NEW MOON, 15th, 11th, 10th.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Bank of New Brunswick.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Commercial Bank.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of Montreal.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the North-West.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the West.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the East.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the South.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the West.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the East.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the South.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the West.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the East.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the South.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the West.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

Bank of the East.—This Bank, established by Act of Parliament, is authorized to receive deposits of money, and to discount bills of exchange, and to issue bank notes, and to carry on all the ordinary business of a bank.

SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1841.

"Nec Res, Nec Populo, sed utroque."

THE MAID OF MARSEILLES.

"Where can Pauline be?" exclaimed the fair and beautiful Estelle, to her father, "Papa, what have you done with Pauline? I can't find her anywhere."

"Indeed! how that!" asked Durrall, of his daughter; then, turning to Captain Bordier, he continued, "You would scarcely believe it, captain, but Pauline has become my head man in business."

"Oh! she is every body's head man," retorted Estelle, "we can do nothing without Pauline." "It is very true," interrupted Durrall, "when I first knew them they could scarcely procure for themselves the common necessaries of life. I was interested with Pauline, and took her into my house to wait upon my daughter, she has now become my companion. Her attention and affection to her mother would have been a great weight upon my mind; so I gave her a cottage at the bottom of my garden; and there the old woman lives by herself. It is true, for her husband has been a long time at sea; but she is happy and appears contented. In my opinion, if possible, to provide for Pauline's future welfare, without prejudice to her father, I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property."

"Thank Heaven!" exclaimed Durrall, "and Pauline, how can I sufficiently thank you and your mother for this? I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property, but she is happy and appears contented. In my opinion, if possible, to provide for Pauline's future welfare, without prejudice to her father, I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property."

"I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property, but she is happy and appears contented. In my opinion, if possible, to provide for Pauline's future welfare, without prejudice to her father, I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property."

"I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property, but she is happy and appears contented. In my opinion, if possible, to provide for Pauline's future welfare, without prejudice to her father, I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property."

"I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property, but she is happy and appears contented. In my opinion, if possible, to provide for Pauline's future welfare, without prejudice to her father, I have been obliged to give her a small share of my property."

"My son," continued Mr. Durrall, "is a good youth; but I am sorry to say he does not love business. The day, perhaps, the President to Mr. Durrall, some false ideas upon the subject, which must be eradicated—then turning to Edward, he continued, "You don't seem to understand the nature of traffic, or what a real merchant, I will tell you—no merchant is the benefactor of society; all that is good, useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains." "How like the cat!" cried Pauline to herself. "It is founded upon honor; his single name is a current coin in any country; he signs a bit of paper, and he is trusted to the amount of his gains." "It must be the same," again exclaimed Pauline. "It is not the same," continued the President, "the merchant is not the benefactor of society; all that is good, useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I am not mistaken," said Pauline, "it is he who addresses the President, 'Forgive the interference of my daughter, she is a good girl, and she is content to be contented with the amount of her gains.'"

"I am not mistaken," said Pauline, "it is he who addresses the President, 'Forgive the interference of my daughter, she is a good girl, and she is content to be contented with the amount of her gains.'"

"I am not mistaken," said Pauline, "it is he who addresses the President, 'Forgive the interference of my daughter, she is a good girl, and she is content to be contented with the amount of her gains.'"

"I am not mistaken," said Pauline, "it is he who addresses the President, 'Forgive the interference of my daughter, she is a good girl, and she is content to be contented with the amount of her gains.'"

"I am not mistaken," said Pauline, "it is he who addresses the President, 'Forgive the interference of my daughter, she is a good girl, and she is content to be contented with the amount of her gains.'"

"I am not mistaken," said Pauline, "it is he who addresses the President, 'Forgive the interference of my daughter, she is a good girl, and she is content to be contented with the amount of her gains.'"

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

"I have not perpetrated the deed under any delusion of momentary gain, but under a determination to do it for some days to effect a particular object. I obtained the pistol many days ago from Messrs. Tullock and Co., to whom I beg they may be returned. They were, I think, not on inspection only. The powder I purchased from Mr. Thompson a few days later, and having completed a few useful, or necessary he procures for his fellow creatures, and he is content to be contented with the amount of his gains."

