Notes from Millville.

Our Millville correspondent writes—On Thursday Nov. 17th, quite a large number of our village folk drove to Millville, five miles distant to witness the marriage of Mr. Wm. P. Smith and Miss Annie Johnston.

Miss Johnston has been carrying on a general dry goods and grocery business in this place for about a year, but having a change of heart, she has decided to marry.

A very large number of friends were present, and the marriage service was conducted by the Rev. B. Traflet, pastor of the B. F. church in this place. After the congratulations of the friends had been paid, the bride and groom gathered around a well spread table, laden with many good things which were taken care of. Many good wishes were taken care of. Many good wishes were taken care of.

Mr. J. Gilman was here Saturday gathering up men and teams for the lumber works in Quebec. Mr. Gilman has for a few years carried on business in this place, and is missing the winter very much. Church services were conducted on Sunday by Rev. B. Traflet in the morning, and Rev. A. Traflet, F. R. in the afternoon. The weather for a few days has been very warm, and the snow has again been very much.

Under an Assumed Name.

Says the Charlottetown Examiner: "The St. John Telegraph, a short time ago, stated that it was believed there that the black mare Nellie T. which trotted and took good positions in the 3-minute and 2500 races at Woodstock and other places, was none other than the black mare Maud R., record 2:40, owned by W. F. Robins, of Charlottetown. Mr. Robins informs us that the Telegraph was correct in supposing that Nellie T. and Maud R. were one and the same, but says he was not in any way responsible for the contemptible trick. He only wrote the story as he placed his mare in the hands of 'Al' Slipp and Lee of Truro for training, and that during the summer they wrote him repeatedly about the mare's success at Fredericton and Woodstock, but never so much as to hint that they were selling under false colors—that the mare was trotting under an assumed name. Had they done so he would have called a halt and exposed the whole proceeding. He only wrote the story as the contemptible business and will probably give Mr. Slipp a piece of his mind at the first opportunity."

A Question of Wine Sauce.

Somebody played a mean trick on Mr. Pitts the other day. While he was absent in the St. John's Telegraph, the Editor of which is editor and proprietor was issued to his patrons, who were horrified to find in a prominent position in the paper, a recipe for making wine sauce. The recipe was a straightened matter out. He entirely repudiated the recipe, and wishes it understood that he "does not indulge in puddings or pies, or any other kind of pastry favored with liquor." We can readily understand Mr. Pitts' annoyance at the occurrence, but the mistake was quite a reasonable one. Mr. Pitts prints four papers at his establishment, and it is not probable that he made the clipping for the Reporter, or the Zealous Investigator, or the University Monthly, all of which come from his printing office. We do not think Mr. Pitts is a very bad fellow, but his offense seems singular to be the recipe. His offense seems singular to be the recipe. His offense seems singular to be the recipe.

Nashwaaksis Doings.

Our Nashwaaksis correspondent writes—The young people of Nashwaaksis have organized a sort of Mutual Improvement Society. It is well attended and promises to fulfill the requirements of such a society. A very efficient executive committee have the matter of arrangements in hand, and although the society has only been in existence two weeks, there are quite a number of members in attendance, besides a larger number of visitors. The society meets on Friday evenings in the hall. Mr. McFarlane's Carriage Factory which has turned out during the summer quite a large number of carriages with a large number of good heavy wagons, is now making extensive preparations for winter work. Mr. McFarlane intends making up a single number of eight and ten horse teams. The work is of superior quality, as well as the material used. Thompson's Grist and Sawing mill is doing a very heavy business, and is making a considerable amount of money. There has been a good supply of water, and the mills have been going every day and part of the night. A large quantity of grain is being milled, and a considerable amount of cord of wood. In addition to the grist and sawing, there is a department for falling and the management of a gentleman from Nova Scotia.

A Queen Hotel Incident.

There was intense excitement around the Queen Hotel this morning, when it was discovered that the stay cook of the hotel, who had been in the kitchen for many years, had been found dead in the cellar, the cause of death being a severe fall. It is in this department that Mr. James Christie, who is an enthusiastic hunter, has got his stock, and when the flooding was discovered, the first thought of Mr. Edwards, Mr. Christie was very particular, and the entire hotel staff, was for the safety of the swine. Donning a pair of long rubber boots and an improved diving apparatus, Mr. Edwards made his way to the flooded cellar, and went prospecting for pigs, while Mr. Christie and his assistants stood high to receive the corpse. The pigs were thoroughly saturated, so was Mr. Edwards, before he got through the job, but his wife, who was a large amount of vigorous paddling around the cellar, closely followed by Mr. Edwards, was a water works, and the Queen Hotel boardroom from an indefinite quantity of premature pork. Mr. Burchill, the Water Works Superintendent, whose assistance was called in to restore the water pipe to its original condition, says it was great fun to see Mr. Edwards on the trail of the swine. The only disaster was the loss of one rubber boot.

The University Lecture Course.

To the Editor of the Farmer.
SIR—In an item which appeared in the Glenora-Saturday last, we, or the students generally, are given for suggesting to announce the postponement of the lecture, which (according to the Glenora) ought to have been delivered last Friday night. It also states that many citizens were inconvenienced thereby. Now Mr. Editor, while we do not, as a rule, make any excuses, however plausible, which appears in that paper, we feel that in this matter it is but just to ourselves and the public, that the facts of the case should be known. Any inconvenience which may have happened to the public on this occasion was not caused by us, but by the action of the water works. The lecture was postponed, and the lecture was postponed, and the lecture was postponed.

Fredericton Choral Society.

The members of the Choral Society met on Tuesday evening in the Council Chamber of the City Hall, for the transaction of business. The members present were: Messrs. S. Thompson, E. R. Moore and Alex. Thompson of St. John, Hon. A. G. Blair, Hon. F. P. Thompson, Wm. Wilson, M. P. for St. John, and others. The remains were interred in the Methodist cemetery.

THE GRAND LACE TRAGEDY.

The uncertainty surrounding the deaths of Tower and Elliott.
Capt. Sypher says he was at the Grand Lake on the 10th inst., and the funeral of the late Wm. Elliott and Wm. Tower took place and was present, and he found the real cause of the men's death apparent. He was about a mile from the boat. The boat which contained the dead bodies of the men was found in the vicinity of the Grand Lake. The boat was found in the vicinity of the Grand Lake. The boat was found in the vicinity of the Grand Lake.

A LOVER'S STRATAGEM.

How a rural swain disposed of a rival.
A young countryman who had long loved a girl who lived a mile or two from him was nearly in despair about winning her hand, and was on the eve of selling her to a rich farmer. The girl had refused him three times, and it was out that she was engaged to another fellow. Our hero had heard of this, and he was determined to win her. He went to the girl's house, and he found her sitting in a room. He went to the girl's house, and he found her sitting in a room. He went to the girl's house, and he found her sitting in a room.

A NEW RIFLE NECESSARY.

The German Army forced to discard the recently adopted repeater.
Hardly had the vast army of Germany completed its armament with its new repeating rifle than it was found that the latter was so completely inferior to weapons of another calibre that an immediate change was imperative. A new pattern was decided upon, and the manufacture of the new rifle is being carried on with the utmost haste. The magazine rifle now in use is discarded, and is being replaced by the new rifle. The new rifle is being replaced by the new rifle.

The Greatest Art Publishers.

A word about Raphael Tuck & Sons, whose famous publications go all over the world.
(New York World.)
If a dozen ordinary men were asked to name the greatest painter now living, the chances are that they would name Raphael Tuck & Sons. Their publications are all over the world. Their publications are all over the world.
