Police Magistrate Parke commenced to deal out justice a few minutes before the appointed hour this morning. Two or three cases were called, but the witnesses had not yet arrived. To fill in time Patrick Tynan was asked if he was drunk on Monday. Mr. Tynan, who is a "battle-scarred" pensioner, admitted having two glasses of ale, but scoffed at the idea of that making him Mary Rogers, a widow, was also charged with drunkenness. She wanted to have a private word in the magistrate's ear, but was remanded for a week instead.

FOND OF TOBACCO. John Schultze is a young man who comes from the United States. He found favor with the Grand Trunk Company, and was given work at the G. T. R. freight house. On Thursday last a London grocery firm shipped among other things a small caddy of chewing tobacco to an out-of-town customer. The tobacco did not reach its destination and a search was made for it. It was found by the aid of a search warrant in Schultze's room in a south end boarding house. Mr. Dignan, the prisoner's lawyer, asked for time to prepare the defense and as the company was not prepared to proceed the case was enlarged until Friday.

ERNEST JEBB'S JOB. "That you did unlawfully assault Annie Long by striking her with your fist and knocking her down." This was the indictment read out to Ernest Jebb, an intelligent looking and well dressed young Englishman,

"No. I can't say that I struck her with my fist," replied Jebb candidly. "It was a slap more than anything. In the first place, she came up and slapped me, and I rose in my chair and slapped her, and then she fell down."

"Well, that is an assault, you know," said the magistrate. "Call the witness." The complainant, Annie Long, is dining-room girl at the Western Hotel, where Jebb boards. From the story told by the girl it would appear that Jebb growled about his meals like a regular married man. He not only growled, but the witness swore that he threatened to take her across his knee and chastise her. Miss Long did not feel called upon to four different cases of burglary and also of submit, and made tart reference to his 'black wench" and slapped Jebb when he Harry Fletcher, a young lad, became said she was. He knew the James boys would run if they saw a knife. "Did you slap this man hard in the face?" the magistrate asked of the girl.

"Yes, quite hard." The magistrate further asked if Jebb had cast any imputation upon her character. Miss Long replied that he had. In fact he had accused her of having "traveled through

"I don't feel very much dressed up and hope you are satisfied," rejoined Mr. Bernard. The latter was charged with a breach of the Liquor License Act on Sunday, Sept. 16. David McArthur, the bar-

The Chatham Banner tells of a South Harwick farmer who sold 800 bushels of beans, his season's crop, to a Blenheim dealer for $1 20 per bushel. Last year the farmer could get only $1 05 per bushel for his beans. The difference is accounted for by the recent lowering of the American tariff. SIXTEEN YEARS OF IT. Charles Schryver Had Kidney Disease

All This Time and Didn't Knew It -How He Found Out and How He Was Cured.

TORONTO, Oct. 1 .- Sixteen years ago kidney disease attacked Charles Schryver, a bricklayer in this city, but he did not know it. It showed itself in the form of pains in the small of the back. They did not amount to much at first, but kept growing worse. Within the past six years Mr. Schryver has almost every week had to quit work for one or two days on account of their severity. Doctors ascribed them to the liver and other causes, and prescribed, but their medicines did no good. Last spring a city physician diagnosed the case as one of diabetes and wanted to prescribe, but Mrs. Schryver said, "No, if it's diabetes. I'll use Dodd's Kidney Pills, which I know will cure me." They did cure him, too, and today Mr. Schryver is free from ache or pain and able to do his day's work, week in and week out, with any man in his trade.

How Pay Patients May Aid in Supporting the Institution.

A Good Hospital Needed if We Are to Have a Prosperous Medical School.

Dr. Eccles on Hospital Reform and the Progress of Medicine.

Successful Opening of the Medical Department of the Western University.

The upper assembly room in the Collegiate Institute last night contained an audience of doctors, lawyers, clergymen, medical students, school trustees and ladies—the latter in the majority by two to one. To the doctors and students the event was of importance, as it had a distinct bearing on an institution with which they were directly concerned, while to the average citizen it was of interest as connected with the London Medical College, of which all are proud, as from its class rooms have graduated some of the leading physicians in Ontario. The address of opening was delivered by Dr. F. R. Eccles, a member of the faculty, while there were also present Dr. Moorehouse (dean), Dr. Hodge (treasurer), Dr. Waugh (registrar), and Drs. Arnott, Wishart, Gardiner and McCallum.

Dr. Moorehouse occupied the chair and introduced the lecturer of the evening in an address which dealt chiefly with the history of the London Medical School. In less than a year after the school was first talked of the faculty was organized and began operations. The students in the first year numbered five, but the attendance had been steadily increased until last year 60 young men were in the classes, Difficulties were nobly surmounted. Medical men here had to make long journeys into the rural districts, making it hard to reach classes in the school at appointed hours. Trouble had been experienced also by the faculty in gaining admission to the hospital, but that had been overcome, and the present college could not be excelled in Ontario. The graduates held as high a record as the school, and wherever they went they held

Dr. Eccles' Address,

Dr. Eccles said: I appear before you toight in answer to an invitation from the faculty of the medical department of the Western University, and, though I am their own homes, be they ever so splendid aware it was to speak generally to a gatherand luxurious. They realize that they can conscious of the difficulty of presenting any subject that would be instructive and beneficial and in keeping with the occasion. At one time the sessional opening of a medical university was one of great importance-a sort of a pompous affair-but life is too short, and work too pressing for anything of that kind now. Were it to medical men only, who are now on the eve of a medical election, one could rush into medical politics and discuss some points which require ventilation, and with much greater ease than matters for the general public, but I feel that in my efforts to interest you I can throw myself on your magnanimity, and rely upon your warmest sympathies. Your good will and best wishes for the success of the medical department of the Western University are matters of no small importance to the faculty. Shall we not interpret your presence here tonight as indications of that fact? With this preamble, I immediately introduce my subject-

HOSPITALS AND MEDICAL SCHOOLS. Hospitals are the product of Christianity; they grow out of the teachings of the Bible. By a refined process of evolution, this charity has grown during the last century and a half, and in an almost geometrical ratio during the last half of the nineteenth century. Some would speak of it as the product of civilization, but charity is not the product of civilization, it is the product of Christianity-that which exalts the fraternity of man, and the unity of the race, and carries civilization with it. I do not deny that hospitals (some great, if you please) have been built, equipped, and endowed, for the education of the young, as well as for the sick and suffering, by men who denied the Christian religion, but the environment of their lives has been such that the influences of the Christian if have permeated unknown to themselves their very nature, and demonstrated what they themselves deny. The great Daniel Webster once said, "If charity denies its birth and parentage, if it turns infidel to the doctrines of the great Christian religion, if it turns unbeliever, it is no longer charity. There is no longer charity in a Christian sense, or in the sense of jurisprudence, for it separates itself from the fountain of its own creation." Christianity carries with it civilization, and hospitals are in some sense the measure of the civilization of a people. It is the people educated up to the point of helping others that is largely the essence of the Sermon on the Mount ORIGIN OF HOSPITALS, Hospitals were established in mediaeval times, and were nothing more than the arrangement for the care of the diseased and the poor by the monasteries of that period. whose ecclesiastics were largely responsible for the care of the same. These houses of religious retirement had their hospitals, which embraced a much wider significance than usually determined by the word at the present time. Combine all the various charitable institutions of this city into one, or rather under one governmenthospitals, Old Men's and Old Women's homes, Orphans' Home, the Convalescent Home and the Home for Incurables, and add to this the poorhouse and the Home for the Blind, and you have some idea of the breadth of system, and in some instances exhibited much self-sacrifice. At first a part of the monastery, later on detached, and numbers of cottages linked together like a small village, and special revenues appropriated for their maintenance. We have no accurate knowledge of separate hospitals in England before the end of the eleventh century. They were first established for the reception of persons affected with leprosv (the much-dreaded disease and scourge of England), and later on for other contagious diseases. The word hospital was abbreviated into "'spitals," and Shakespeare refers to it as "'spital house." Spitalfields, now quite a large section of the great metropolis of London, derived its name from the hospital in the fields, then some distance in the country. Leper hospitals were erected for the isolation and care of the lepers, and so protect society. The fear of contagion more than the sympathy with the suffering may have been largely instrumental in the building of these isolated hospitals; but the origin of the infirmaries in connection with the monasteries must have been the great pulse wave of Christianity heating at the doors of the hearts of God's people, and sounding and resounding amidst the darkness and dim twilight of these ages. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." And over the tops of the centuries down to the present we hear the swelling refrain, until in every nation and clime where Christianity has pushed its ever-widening way, its polarizing influnece has been exercised on selfishness and uncharitableness in the erection of these institutions of charity and philanthropy. This charity GROWING OUT OF CHRISTIANITY considers the most useless and abandoned of the race to be more in need of assistance, and so we find the unworthy as well as the worthy poor provided for. Year by year the condition and management of these institutions have occupied the minds of the leading philanthropists of every Christian nation. In protecting society we alleviate human suffering and lengthen life. But if we look at it only from a selfish standpoint, in the protection of ourselves, then the union of many selfish ones presents an organized warfare against siekness and disease more powerful than any single-handed conflict, and nowhere can this be carried on so successfully as in a hospital; so that in a sense the hospital is a great battle ground, and from more motives than one there ought not to be any institution more worthy of support by the municipality or by the voluntary contributions of its citizens.

HOSPITALS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY. Hospitals are now recognized as being absolutely necessary in all centers of population; not only that contagious diseases among the poor, but also amongst the rich, may be prevented; not only that the deserving poor may have a refuge in all times of sickness, but also that the well-to-do and even opulent may, at not a very large cost. have the same skill and ability and good nursing that the deserving poor obtain gratis. For many of the well-to-do and even wealthy are cognizant of the fact that they can have a more skillful treatment in have not only the comforts of home, but skilled attendance and skilled nursing, and the use of many conveniences and appliances specially designed for the ease and well-being of the sick. So that the hospital ought not to be a place to provide for the poor alone, but also for the well-to-do and rich. Why should any of our citizens who are willing and able to pay handsomely for such privileges not have the enjoyment of such when sickness overtakes them? By this means health is sooner restored, mortality is much diminished, and in both these respects

THE MUNICIPALITY IS MADE RICHER. How long it takes to break down preins dice! For many years hospitals and pauperism were linked together, and even now a great many people still think of a hospital as a place for the indigent sick. In the directions of Johns Hopkins for the provision of the great hospital which bears his name, in his letter to the trustees, while he gives direction for the reception of the sick poor, without regard to sex, age or color, he says: "You will also provide for the reception of a limited number of patients who are able to make compensation for the room and attention they may require. The money received from such persons will enable you to appropriate a arger sum for the relief of the suffering of that class which I direct you to admit free of charge, and you will thus be enabled to afford to strangers, and to those of your own people who have no friends or relations to care for them in sickness, and who are not objects of charity, the advantages of careful and skillful treatment."

THE LONDON CITY HOSPITAL. Hospitals are, in general, supplied by the state, the municipality, or by both, by pay patients and by voluntary contributions. Ours obtains maintenance in this four-fold manner. There have been for years some differences of opinion as regards the best form of hospital building; I do not mean for architectural display, but for sanitary reasons. That form of build. ing which contributes most rapidly to the recovery of the patients, as well as lessening the mortality, must obtain. The debatable ground is now between the pavilion style (two or three stories), or the cottage system. In either case you have a hospital, no matter how large, well constructed for ventilation, heating and abundance of fresh air. One large solid building has many disadvantages from a sanitary point of view. Isolation of wards, thorough ventilation, bacteriological investigations, and absolute cleanliness, have largely reduced the mortality in the wards of general hospitals. This is specially so in surgical wards. The construction, the sanitary arrangement and hospital hygiene, including ventilation and heating, are therefore of the highest importance, and without which no highly creditable work can be shown in the book of statistics. For this reason an advisory committee of medical men would be highly beneficial to a board of trustees of any hospital. Repairs, alterations, as well as new building or buildings, would always be a matter for consultation with the advisory committee. BEST TREATMENT OF DISEASE.

charity embraced by the hospital of especially during the last quarter of a centhat day. It was part of a religious tury, specialism has grown with amazing rapidity, and with the growth of specialism the need of special hospitals has been felt. The classification of various diseases, and the special study of their causes and treatment, with a gradual improvement of technique, have demonstrated beyond all question that specialism has come to stay, and popular attention has so been drawn to it, rather than repelied, that we find specia hospitals for the study and treatment of special diseases in all the very large cities of the civilized world-notably in the great centers of nations. No one will pretend to deny the practical benefits that have resulted from this direct and organized effort in the scientific study and treatment of diseases. And so we find many special hospitals for various diseases. Hospitals for diseases of the heart, diseases of the lungs, diseases of the eye, diseases the ear, diseases of the throat, for diseases of the nervous system, for diseases of women, diseases of children, and for deformities, and many more. However, only in very large cities do we find special hospitals for the treatment of special diseases, some of them endowed, some of them largely supported by voluntary contributions, but in general hospitals like our own the necessity of such has been overcome by assigning special cases to special departments under those who have given special attention to such work. For some years the London General Hospital has been working on these lines. and within a radius of from 50 to 80 miles is making its influence felt on a discerning public.

THIS CITY A MEDICAL CENTER. Diseases of the eye, ear and throat, diseases of women and diseases of children, as well as general diseases in the medical and surgical departments, come directly under the care of specialists, so our city is fast becoming a medical center. The good work that has been done in our hospital has been attracting patients not only from all over the western peninsula, but also from the adjoining states of the neighboring republic. These are all pay patients, and many of them of large influence. A large yearly revenue comes from this source, only limited by want of more and better accommodation.

A LARGE HOSPITAL WOULD PAY THE CITY. With increased facilities, the hospital could derive much larger per capita revenue from private patients, and in this manner considerably lessen its expenditure on account of its own sick poor. While the hospital has to be kept up by the city for its sick poor, is it not worth while to inquire how the burden can be lightened? If it can be demonstrated that larger and better facilities, that more and better private rooms, will augment its source of income and enlarge its field for medical science, as well as safeguard and restore more rapidly the health of its citizens, it ought to be a matter for early and serious consideration. Health is better than wealth, and for the municipality to preserve it is surely adding to its wealth. There are not a few cases where health cannot be restored, where the patients, according to all human probability, cannot be else than chronic invalids. They belong, unfortunately, to a class of incurables, and I am glad to know that London has a refuge for such cases.

THE HOME FOR INCURABLES. It overwhelms me with sadness that the limitations of skill are such as to leave so many to become inmates of such a place as the Home for Incurables, but while such is the case, one rejoices that even for them an active philanthrophy in our midst has founded a place for these unfortunates. The General Hospital is not the place for such; it is a place to turn the unproductive and expensive citizen into a productive one; it and "clarify medical knowledge." HOSPITAL EXPERIENCE SHOULD NOT BE LOST. Why should all the experience within our General Hospital be lost? Should it not be tabulated and recorded? and although it is but a little rivulet it can flow into and augment the stream of knowledge. While the work done in the hospital is undoubtedly philanthropic, it also educational and scientific. May I say this—every lecture, whether clinical or didactic, every operation, whether simple or major, breathes the spirit of sacred responsibility to every student, and implies the duty of every practitioner to guard the wealth of our country in the preservation of the health of the great Dominion, of whic. Ontario is an humble province.

THE MEDICAL SCHOOL. One cannot well discuss the London General Hospital and its administration without referring to the Medical School. It is just now entering on its thirteenth session. with what measure of success the citizens know. One can speak more openly without being suspected, as the present staff realizes that the success is not wholly due to their efforts, but is as well the results of the undying influence of confreres, who have now. laid down the wespons of their warfare against disease. The spirit of some who have passed away still lingers about the institution. Their sacrifices of time and labor and means will not soon be forgotten. During the twelve years of the school's existence seven of the staff have passed away. These melancholy events, Burke savs, teach us what shadows we are and what shadows we pursue. A GOOD HOSPITAL ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY. On the continent of Europe, as well as on this continent, a great many of the large hospitals have medical schools attached to them. The hospital can exist without the medical school, but the medical school cannot exist without the hospital. "The hospital is a perpetual flowing stream of medical science." The rich experience obtained there by comparative study, by the observation of predisposing and hereditary influence, by the habits and practices and idiosyncracies, as well as occupation of patients, bears fruit not only within the walls of the hospital itself, but in the homes of the well-to-do and wealthy. All the skilled and best treatment the wellto-do owe to the hospital system. Let me draw your attention to the advantage to the hospital and its patients of having the medical school in connection with it. What is the great object of a medical school? Is it to increase our wealth? Call upon the secretary and treasurer of the faculty for record of the amount of work done, and remuneration therefor, for a very quick disabuse of that thought. Is it with a hope of some sort of electric repulsion that we may hope to lessen our numbers in the city? Why, sir, you will find nearly as many practitioners on Queen's avenue as there were in the whole city of London fifteen years ago, and all in the most vigorous health. The numbers have increased in that time about 300 per cent. OBJECT OF THE MEDICAL SCHOOL.

No, sir; the great object of a medical school is to teach the knowledge of medicine up to the present date-to gather in from every hospital, and college, and laboratory, from every nation over the broad earth the highest perfection of our science and art, and lay it tribute at the feet of the class. To those who are personally acquainted with the subject, there is no question but those patients in a hospital where medical teaching is carried on have a more careful teaching exists. The very act of teaching clears the mind and stimulates the study of the dark and winding paths of obscure diseases. It cultivates precision and the development of sound judgement, and ever puts the teacher on his mettle before the class. Does anyone pretend to say that this must not redound to the interest and welfare of the patient? This is personal labor of no small degree, and must necessarily make great inroads on the teacher's time, but without which the best teacher of the present day would be but a fossil at the end of a quarter of a century. This knowledge is of a practical character, and has to be communicated to the student at the bedside. There at the bedside no symptom nor physical sign must escape his observation. All changes since his last visit have to be commented upon and the present condition noted. With twelve or fourteen fourth year students hungering and thirsting after knowledge, and not slow to criticise omissions and commissions of the professor, I repeat the average hes pital patient has a more careful examination and a more skillful treatment than the average patient in the most luxurious home. His case is written up by the professor's clinical clerk with great care, be cause that clerk knows too well that any carelessness or negligence in this respect will subject him to the reproof of the visiting member of the staff. The secretions, fluids and expectorations, or whatever else is necessary to a thorough examination of the case, are from time to time examined. BENEFITS OF UNITED OBSERVATION.

While this is largely for the benefit of the patient, and bears fruit in the treatment and daily management of the case, it is not without benefit to the senior student or clinical clerk. It puts him through a course of discipline, of daily observing and recording symptoms, and watching carefully the progress of the case, and the influence of remedies in disease. This very training itself bears fruit in the management and treatment of many of you or your friends who are, or may be ill. Especially is this so in an extremely critical illness, where the course is rather a tempestuous one: and to this very hospital training some one of you or your friends may owe his or her RECIPROCITY NEEDED. Seeing, then, the necessity of hospitals for the treatment and care of the sick poor, and the necessity of hospitals for professional training, we believe the more the people understand the reciprocal relations between the two the more will they desire the binding and enlarging and perpetuating of this reciprocity treaty. There have not been wanting indications that the outside public is beginning to appreciate the work done in the London General Hospital, and that this appreciation will work out a tangible expression in affording increased facility for the study of disease, believing that the promotion of medical education in our city is truly promoting the welfare of our citizens. PLEA FOR A PATHOLOGIC LABORATORY.

In the interest of the patients, and at the very earliest possible period, there ought to be a pathological laboratory (a small and inexpensive one would answer). where the examination of all morbid fluids and tissues could be made and recorded. In this manner the hospital authorities would greatly add to our facilities. It would greatly facilitate the diagnosis and study scure cases, and give to the poor that complete and exhaustless examination in our hospital which only the very wealthy can obtain in private. This city has been liberal in the matter of bonuses to railways, factories, and various in-dustries; far too liberal, I am sfeaid. It has been liberal in the provision made for common and higher education, and just lately has given another exhibition of her is a place to cure the sick and crystallize liberality by providing a free library for medical thought; a place to relieve suffering her citizens. We ought not to underestimate the body while we are providing so liberally and commendably for the mental condition-for the intellectual development and improvement of our citizens. While we feed and clothe the intangible let us not forget the tangible in which the intangible resides.

THE TRAINING OF NURSES. by the London General Hospital is the training school for nurses. The nurses are largely from our own city and county, and are provided, by their course of training, with an honorable and noble livelihood. The members of the staff, by lectures and practical training, most cheerfully lend their assistance to the medical and lady superintendents in thus properly preparing them for their life's work. And thus, under a proper system of training, the corest citizen of our city, when illness overtakes him or her, has the most careful and skilled nursing, and in nearly every instance his or her looks bespeak that gratitude which words cannot express. These nurses scatter broadcast wherever they go these principles of personal and house hygiene so thoroughly instilled in them during their pupilage at the London General Hospital. In this way while nursing they become useful in many homes in removing much ignorance and inscituting no small sanitary reform. LONDON'S HOSPITAL PROGRESS.

London can boast of a hospital as far back as '43, extemporized for cases of what was then known as ship fever. Dr. Lee, who was then in attendance, contracted the disease and died. The location was near about where the Grand Trunk roundhouse now stands. Later on a building on the corner of Thames and York streets was utilized, and subsequently rooms in the old barracks north of Dafferin avenue. The new site was then selected, and the central building crected in about the year 1874. The present site, composed of five or six acres of land, some 25 or 30 feet above the river, with a commanding view of the Westminster hills and the intervening valley and the winding of the Thames, is not the ineligible site that some sup pose. With every facility for drainage and sewerage, and ample room for extension. the site looking south is both eligible and picturesque. Any mistakes that may have occurred in its management and administration usually arose from want of experience. That frequently occurred when the hospital was managed some years ago by a committee of aldermen whose tenure of office was as uncertain as the weather probabilities. How could it be expected that these men-very candid, very conscientious, no doubt-could obtain in one year any intelligent conception of the requirements and equipments of a hospital? But the wisdom of the city aldermen and the citizens at large determined that a board of trustees could much more satisfactorily, economically and efficiently look after the hospital interests, and thus since 1888 we have had the hospital managed in this manner. We now have a board of trustees, who take great personal interest in the hospital. They are a liberal board-liberal in thought, in benevolence-often restrained and trammeled, however, in their beneficence by reason of short allowance and condition of the city finances. But nothwithstanding the hospital is administered on the part of the trustees with a liberal consideration for the needs and comforts of the patients, and I believe by the physicians, with all the skill and attention that the latest advances in the science has brought to light.

better attention than in hospitals where no concerns the people, and every question concerning it is the people's question. I wish it were possible, as in the mother country, to have a Hospital Sunday once a year. I believe it would awaken a deeper. wider and more universal interest in its welfare. At first thought it may seem impractical, but aside from the amount realized it would yearly draw the attention f the people to the hospital and its requirements, and if no other object were ecured than the direction of the minds of the citizens to this great charity, no little good would be accomplished.

WONDERFUL PROGRESS. It is in hospitals of this kind that the great problems of deeper insight into the cause of diseases, greater skill and success in the treatment of them, as well as in the prevention, are to be solved. How many problems rolling down the ages unsolved have during the last half contury had their solution? Fifty years ago for a man to talk of communicating with his relatives in London, or Paris, or Berlin in a few minutes would subject himself to the then existing lunacy laws. The last half of the nineteenth century in many ways is the most wonderful period in the world's history. The perfection of the use of steam makes man a citizen of the world, as well as the citizen of a country. The chaining of electricity and the various purposes to which it has been applied are among the marvels of the age, and now by telephone and telegraph man becomes ubiquitous. In almost every department of science giant strides have been made; not less so in medicine. I dare not trespass upon your time in going over the details of the wonders ful advancement and achievements of our art during the last quarter of a century, or I might even say the last decade. A NOBLE PROFESSOR RECOGNIZED.

I am sorry to say in our profession the work of many of the great explorers in hidden fields have had too little recognition. While literature, and art, and naval and military achievements, and even wealth. have had their marked recognition, we find that the Crown until lately has been slow to confer honors upon the great and noble in our profession. Surely we cannot be accused of dipping deeply into the public purse, although that does not seem to be a barrier to recognition. However, the overwhelming verdict of the nations, "Honor to whom honor is due," has at last broken down the barriers to meritorious acknowledgement. Wealth and a hereditary title has fallen to the lot of one who has done more than any living man to put aseptio surgery on a foundation as scientific, I was going to say, as the laws of gravitation. Would that honest worth were always so well rewarded, for without the principles that were inculcated by Sir Joseph Lister abdominal surgery might have remained as the lecturer of surgery in the University of Edinburgh said when I first commenced to study medicine, "that abdominal surgery was abominable sucgery," and which statemet I believe was at that time in accord with the views of Syme, his great confrere. We all know-the civilized world knowsthe rashness of that statement. The tendency to the study of special diseases in general as well as in special hospitals has reaped great rewards. Concentrated effort and intensified thought in the region of original investigation have and are yearly producing facts which read like a romance. but which are the unchangeable truths of ience. Some of the great universities, by their magnificent liberality, have placed their sons in positions far above the perplexities of mere subsistence. Taken out of the struggle for existence with unfettered hands and untrammeled sway, they in many instances are working out those problems which will enable the physician to triumph over ills with which his present armamentarium is unable to cope.

CONSUMPTION MAY BE OVERCOME. Is it too much to expect that in the very near future some monument of fame greater even than that of a Jenner, or a Koch, or a Lister, shall yet be reared, and that ere the last sands of the nineteenth century have run out, that the profession may cope not unsuccessfully with that much-dreaded disease, tuberculosis, commonly called consumption. The tubercular Then another benefit and boon conferred | bacillus (absolutely diagnostic) has been found. Thanks to that great investigator, Dr. Koch, we know something of the origin, propagation and prevention of tubercular disease. And though an over-anxious profession, and a etill more over-anxious public, caused a too precipitate publication of remedies by the investigator, yet professional and lav generosity will not allow that to detract from his fame. And may not cancer. also, another and more dreaded disease, the scourge of humanity, soon find its solution. For some years investigations in various laboratories have been, and are now being prosecuted in reference to the cause of cancer, and although not positively conclusive. sufficient evidence has been found to warrant one in affirming that there is a cancer bacillus or parasite, but no medicine has ever yet been discovered that in any way mitigates the career or arrests the progress of the disease. But with special hospitale on both sides of the Atlantic, where scien. tific men, full of enthusiasm, are daily pouring over the occult problems, may the new century not usher in without the two most deadly foes, consumption and cancer, being subject to the will of science? I am glad to know that in this province some recognition is made for original investigation. The medical department of the Western University is not jealous of state aid. Would that the province could see its way to more encourage original investigation, and to provide for the entire devotion of some of her sons to scientific work. Thus would the stream of knowledge flow on, and the resources of the prefession be augmented, and our facilities for getting good, and doing good, multiplied. Dr. Eccles resumed his seat amid leud

London, Tuesday, October. 2.

FUTURE OF THE CITY HOSPITAL London is becoming an important medical center. The fact that we have here established a well-equipped medical college, affiliated with the Western University, has | year. undoubtedly made its influence felt. The auspicious opening of the winter term, which took place last night, gave Dr. Eccles, the lecturer on the occasion, an opportunity to say some useful words, not only for the medical college, but for the public hospital, with which institution the faculty and students of the college are necessarily intimately associated. In his for good government which has always interesting sketch of the origin and development of hospitals, the lecturer demonstrated that they owe their establishment to Christianity, and that as civilization has advanced so have hospitals in their adaptability to the needs of humanity. census when there was a crowd in town ! Though no earnest friend of the hospital has doubted the benefits that are derivable from the maintenance of such an institution in a center like London is, Dr. Eccles probably made the actual position and interdependence of the hospital and medical school plainer to very many of his hearers than it was before. He proved that as a result of the establishment of the hospital, not only have we provided efficient means for the care of the sick poor, but we have built up a special system of treatment of diseases by expert medical men that has made the hospital and the medical college a direct benefit, in dollars and cents, to the citizens generally. The training of nurses, too, another great benefit arising from the hospital, has been shared not only by the citizens of London but by the whole people of the west. The special point made by Dr. Eccles, however, was that if London is to reap these financial and other advantages to the full extent-if the medical school is to become an effective center of research and of ultimate healing-it is absolutely necessary that there should be a public hospital of corresponding efficiency.

London has a moderately successful and well-managed public hospital as it is, but it does not meet the needs of the community, particularly in the newer branch of the service that comes under the head of treatment of pay patients. The prejudice which at one time existed against public hospitals caused many persons to seek for treatment at home who could better have been cared for in a hospital. But within the last decade scores and hundreds of the best citizens of Western Ontario have flocked to our hospitals as a matter of choice, because they know that in this way can they be best attended to by specialists, and be afforded a better opportunity for recovery. Is it desirable that these paying patients shall be encouraged to enter the hospital, thus adding to its income, and building up, not only that institution, but the medical school as well? If so, then has Dr. Eccles fully proved his case in favor of making a considerable addition and improvement to the city general hospital, and that at the earliest date possible. It is not only a necessity of a medical character, but, as Dr. Eccles points out, it is in the financial interest of the city. Let any skeptic on this point read Dr. Eccles' admirable address.

The recent addition of St. Joseph's Hospital to the institutions of London has proved of great advantage to the city. It fills a want that was felt. What is now required is that the public hospital shall be brought up to its full possibilities of usefulness, Then we shall have London as notable a medical center as it already is a railway, manufacturing, mercantile and exhibition center.

A WILD GOOSE PROJECT.

What object could the Toron to Empire have in recently announcing that the "Patrons contemplate joining in a petition to the Lieutenant-Governor to call the Legislature together without further delay"? There has been no delay in calling the Legislature together. The usual time for assembling is in January or February, and if the Legislature were to meet now the Province would have to pay $50,000 or $60,000 for the extra session. A few months ago the Empire and its allies were arguing that the Legislature should only meet once in two years. Now they pine for two sessions in one year! There is, we have good authority for stating, no truth in the reported action of the Patrons looking to a session of the Legislature this year. The Patrons may have some notions that do not meet with general approbation, but their absolute refusal to be a party to any wild goose chase after anti-Mowat projects reflects credit on their intelligence.

LUXURY ON WHEELS.

A Londoner passing through Toronto the other day saw a large-sized, magnificently fitted up car lateled "Cumberland," with "private" printed in large letters on each entrance door, Inquiry revealed the fact that this car is the property of the Dominion Government, but that it is used to convey the families of Ministers to picnicking and summer pleasuring grounds. In it on the occasion named was the wife of Sir John Thompson and her daughters. Further inquiry reveals the fact that in this matter of private car service the members of the present Administration at Ottawa are most extravagant. It was not so in the days of parlor or sleeping car was good enough

Alexander Mackenzie. That statesman was as worthy a man as any of them, but he believed that an ordinary first-class, for him and his friends, if good enough for those whom he served. And so there were no Government private cars, with their liveried servants, in his days. Why should there be? When Premier Gladstone traveled in Great Britain he had no private car, neither had Premier Salisbury, nor has Lord Rosebery. But what is good enough for the statesmen of Great Britain is not good enough for Canadian mushroom nobility and their fami lies. The Suit of Delves vs. G. T. R. Goes

An Action for Heavy Damages Coming Up-Judge Robertson is Faceticus - The Bowers Witnesses Mere.

Monday Afternoon.

This afternoon, at the conclusion of the udge's address, the doors were thrown open and the large room was soon filled. The grand jury retired to consider a criminal case and the civil list was taken up. Readers of the ADVERTISER will remember the accident to Wm. Delve at the Pottersburg crossing of the G. T. R. one stormy morning last February. Delve brought action against the company, claiming $5,000 damages for injuries sustained. This was the first case called. Plaintiff told of his employment on Feb. 12 last, and how he was proceeding eastward on the Governor's road to the asylum siding to unload a car of coal. Alfred Parker and John Downs were in separate rigs behind witness bound for the same place. Witness said: "When I was about 200 yards west of the track I pulled my horse up and listened for the train. Could hear none, and after going about 150 yards I made the horse trot. Just as I got on the crossing the engine came along at a pretty rapid speed, struck my wagon, threw me out and passed on. I was tossed on the road some distance away, struck on my knees and broke the left cap, constituting an injury from which I shall never recover." Witness was taken to the hospital, and remained there for eight weeks. He never recovered the use of his leg, and instead of being able to earn $7 a week, as efore the accident, he only received $3. Witness had a wife and one child, and now ives in Exeter. A severe storm prevailed at the time of the accident. James Downs, another driver, told Mr. Osler that he had his hat pulled only partly over his ears, and thought if any whistle and blown he would have heard it. He lenied having said to Constable Logan, of the G. T. R., that he never heard the bell or whistle and could not say whether or not they were sounded. Alfred Parker, the other driver, heard no whistle or beli, but admitted that a whistle could not be heard a great distance on account of the storm.

"Cap over your ears?" asked Mr. Osler. "Yes." said Parker. Q .- Your ears were more tender than Downs'? A .- Guess they must have been.

(Laughter.) Q .- And when you turned partly around you saw the train coming? A .- Yes. Q .- Well, three empty coal wagons on a hard frozen road would make an awful noise? A .- Yes.

Q .- How long have you been collecting whistles, so to speak? (Laughter.) A .-Oh, for a long time.

Q .- Ever since you had one presented to you by your grandmother? A .- Yes. Q .- When did you take your last trip?

A. - Last week, to Sarnia. Q .- Now, you are a good hand at noticing whistles; how many were given at the Kingscourt junction? A .- Did not notice.

Q .- How many at Sarnia? A .- Could "Oh, I see," said Mr. Usler, resuming his seat, "you have since gone out of the whistle business." Evidence was given by a physician as to the nature of Delve's injuries. The plaintiff's claim rested on the evi dence of these five witnesses, and Mr.

Osler held that the case should be taken from the jury. It was a case of contributary negligence. Judge Robertson did not feel inclined to do this. The defense was not ready to proceed, and Mr. Osler suggested that the jury visit the crossing in order to more thoroughly acquaint themselves with the location. A special train was run on the G. T. R. for

Two cases have been settled. Wm. E. Morrow, of Ekfrid, brought action against the ex-reeve of that township, A. P. Mc-Dougall, claiming damages for false arrest. Morrow was locked up in 1882 on a charge of embezzlement. A clause was added to the plaintiff's statement of claim, accusing McDougall of trespass. A settlement was made by the defendant paying $1 for the latter offense and costs, $150. McDougall afterwards entered a counter-action against Morrow, accusing him of seducing the plaintiff's servant girl, Martha E. Fieldhouse, who is an orphan. Morrow agreed to pay $100 and costs, and the case was dropped. Macbeth for McDougall.

Tuesday Morning.

The court resumed at 9:30 sharp, and the defense in the case of Delve vs. the Grand Trunk was taken up. The attendance was even larger that yesterday afternoon. The crown witnesses in the Bowers shooting case are in the city and will probably go before the grand jury in the morning.

Engineer Turton, in charge of the train that struck Delve's wagon, said the rate of speed at which the train was moving was about four miles an hour. He was sure that the whistle was blown at the usual place-about 450 yards from the crossing.

The bell was also rung. Fireman Wm. McFadden was in the cab with Turton on Feb. 12 last, and when the engine was about 100 yards from the crossing he yelled to Delve, who was not looking towards the train.

To Mr. Purdom, McFadden said the train could have been brought to a standstill before the crossing was reached had the driver thought of an accident. The usual signals were given. McFadden was under the impression when he first saw Delve that he was going to turn into a gate on the west side of the track, but when it was apparent that he was going to cross it was too late to stop the train.

Wm. E. Mullins, secretary to the assist. ant superintendent of the G. I. R., and G. T. R. Constable Logan, gave nothing new

Mrs. Tremain keeps a store on the north side of Dundas street at Pottersburg, and remembered the morning of the accident because her husband boarded the train which struck Delve, and before it pulled up at Pottersburg she had listened for and remembered hearing the whistle. Several ladies were seated in a jury box when Peter Buchanan, a lad of 12 years, with a very weak voice, took the oath. One of the ladies had in her arms a 1-yearoid which was crowing and kicking at a lively rate. Judge Robertson called the sheriff and said that two witnesses could not be heard at once. "I suppose the child intends studying law," said the court as the woman walked out. "Now, Peter, speak up as though you were playing ball in a ten-acre field," the judge remarked when quiet was restored. Witness said that

Duncan Buchanan, Peter's brother, said that when Delve was near the track he (the witness) warned plaintiff by raising his hands. No notice was taken of the

This closed the case, and after the counsel had concluded their jury addresses, Judge Robertson began. He spoke for about three-quarters of an hour and reviewed almost every point in the evidence. The following questions were submitted to the jury: 1. Were the defendants negligent in run, ing the train on the day of the accident and if so, in what way? 2. If the company was negligent, dld the plaintiff exercise reasonable care to avoid an accident on approaching the crossing? 3. If you find both questions favorable to the praintiff

The jury should also have been informed that the company was supposed to give the signals for 80 rods, and if they had failed to give one of the two the company was responsible.

Judge Robertson claimed to have done this very plainly.

Hourd vs. Hourd, action on a promissory note, has been laid over pending settle ment. The plaintiff is Emma J. Hourd, wife of Arthur E. The Street Railway Company Decline the Council's Terms

In Regard to Substituting Electricity for Horse Power.

A New Industry for London-Victoria Bridge to be Japanned.

The City Council meetings appear, like the days, to grow shorter towards the end of the year. Last night's meeting, which was over at 10:30, was principally devoted to placing correspondence and apportioning it to the various committees. A full board was present, with the exception of Ald. John Heaman.

THE REASON WHY. Mr. H. A. Everett, of the London Street

Railway Company, wrote as follows: We beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of 18th inst. calling for specific response to your amendments to our proposition of 25th of July last, and would respectfully state that, among other serious objections to the proposed amendments, some of the leading objections are as

1. As to routes: As we have always said, we do not think there need be any difficulty as to the final adjustment of this matter, although in the routes as at present O'Donnell, the Australian fighter, traveling | indicated by your honorable body, several streets could not be made to pay operating expenses let alone interest charges, and, besides, even if we were willing to undertake some of them we fear legislative sanction could not be obtained.

2. Sections 7 and 8, dealing particularly with the termination of the franchise, cannot be accepted by the company, as they would entail burdens possibly in the last year of the franchise which would make the property valueless, and this contingency hanging over the entire 31 years would make the present worth nil, owing to the asylum to play a game with a nine of burdens which might be placed upon the cricketers. The boys in blue very kindly property near the expiration of the fran-

3. Section 9 cannot be accepted by the company, and is, we think, unreasonable. 4. Sections 12 and 13 appear to be very unreasonable, inasmuch as the bridges of the city are free for the use of all loaded vehicles coming to the city from any outside point, but by your amended proposition as submitted would be made toll bridges for the most modern of the bridges will not be affected, as vehicular traffic will not be so great, owing to the number of persons patronizing the street railway. 5. In regard to clause 14 of the amendments, there appear to be legal obstacles at present in the way to prevent the construction of a line to Springbank as proposed by you. 6. In reference to paragraph 16 of your proposal. We do not fully understand the import of this, but think in any agreement that is framed in reference thereto our existing rights and contracts should be specifically protected. As we said before, these are some of the ost prominent objections to vour amended

A NEW INDUSTRY. Mr. John McClary addressed the council in support of a request for street privileges on York street. He wished permission to sink a pipe under the surface of the street and to lay a tram track across. The pipe is to lead liquid fuel from the adjoining tracks, and the tram railway to carry coal across on. Mr. McClary stated that he proposed to erect a building 60x100 feet in granite ware. It was an expensive underthe city. The council granted the petition. the work to be done to the satisfaction of stupefied state. the city engineer.

No. 3 had no report. The proposition to "japan" York street evoked a speech from each member of the council. Messrs. Pritchard and Taylor objected to the work because the paint was made in the United States. The balance of the council hesitated between the expense of the work and the necessity. Ald. F. J. Fitzgerald said that the bridge could be painted for much less. As a compromise Victoria bridge only will be japanned. No. 1 committee's report went through unaltered and without discussion.

OTHER BUSINESS. In reply to an enquiry the mayor detailed his visit to the Deep Waterways Convention in Toronto. Ald. O'Meara moved that an artificial stone walk be laid down in front of St. Paul's cathedral, the city to bear the cost. His motion was not seconded. Ald. J. W. Jones moved that the city engineer ascertain the cost of laying two blocks of Dundas street with vitrified brick. Ald, Coo seconded. Carried. Ald. Coo pressed his notice of motion to charge what remained of the cedar block assessment on Dundas street against the general taxation to allow a new pavement to be put down. After a half hour's discussion the motion was referred to No. 2 commitington bridge and operate the same on payment of a license of $50 a car. The bylaw under which the city will pay one-third of the cost of the artificial stone walks of the city was brought up for a third reading, but after a lengthy discussion the third reading was postponed un-tee to be dealt with. Ald. Pritchard gave notice of motion to allow the London

Street Railway Company to extend their electric line from London West over Kenstil next meeting to allow of further information being got. A bylaw to more evenly divide the polling subdivisions of ward 5 was read the usual number of times and carried. The council then adjourned.

Heard of the Glad News of Paine's Celery Compound.

Mr. Church Says: "It Snatched Me From the Grave."

The Cured Man's Honest Testimony.

He Urges All Sufferers to Use the Medicine That Gave Him New Life,

An important arrest in life's journey! A man saved who had traveled far on the road that leads to the silent, dark grave! His trials and sufferings were heavy and severe; he had made many efforts to rid himself of the shackles and chains that bound him, but for long months his endeavors were futile. While on the great highway of disease and suffering Mr. John A. Church, of Coldbrook, N. S., heard the glad news of victories won over disease by Paine's Celery Compound; his heart bounded with joy and fresh hope, and he lost no time in testing the virtues of nature's great healer. The first bottle produced a mighty change, and warranted Mr. Church in continuing proposition as submitted, and if you think with the medicine. After using nine bottles they can be overcome we shall be pleased to of the great Compound a thorough cure have a conference at any time for further was effected, and a new lease of life was obtained.

Before hearing of Paine's Celery Compound Mr. Church was literally robbed of his money, as he bought medicines of all kinds that proved useless and worthless. His experience is of great value to every sick and suffering man and woman in Canada He writes thus:

"It is with pleasure that I give testimony in favor of your Paine's Celery Compound. In the spring of 1892 I had an attack of La order to commence the manufacture of Grippe, which put me into such a condition that I could not sleep or eat. I was comtaking, and would be of much benefit to pletely run down, had extreme nervous prostration, and lay for days in a half-

"After spending all my money for medicine, which did little good, I gave up to die, when one day a paper on Paine's Celery Compound was brought to me. I at once procured the medicine, and derived great relief from the first bottle. I slept better, ate better, and digestion improved. After using nine bottles I feel like a new man. I can truly say that Paine's Celery Compound snatched me from the grave, and gave me a new lease of life.

"I earnestly urge all sufferers to use Paine's Celery Compound, feeling sure it will cure them. Do not spend your money for medicines that cannot cure you."

CHATHAM, Ont., Oct. 1 .- This evening Mrs. Eugene Langtots and her husband had warrants issued for the arrest of two brothers named Harris whom the woman alleges entered her house in Dover township and tried to assault her, chasing her from one room to another. She managed, however, to secure a gun, and, firing twice, wounded John Harris in the breast and right arm. When the Langtots left their home the wounded man was lying outside the house in a critical condition. The magistrate has gone to investigate.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocca, Mr. Epps has provided or our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—[Civil Service Gazette, Made simply with boiling water or milk. Prices have fallen to such an extent as to wipe out the farmers' profit, unless he be working his own lands. Foreign wheats have been sold at 6d lower for California and American red winter, with other grades rather less depressed. Corn has been weak. American October shipment lost 10d. Oats and barley have sold a shade cheaper. Today all the markets were depressed. English wheats on an average lost 1s. Some new Essex (damp) sold at 13s quarter, the lowest price on record, Foreign wheats lost 6d, corn and barley 3d and oats 6d. Flour was irregularly lower; some country makes sold as low as 16s per sack.

Barley Market. BUFFALO, N. Y.. Oct. 1.—Visible supply of barley at principal points of accumulation is 2,265,000 bu, against 1,746,000 last week, and 920,000 for the corresponding week of 1893. The movement so early in the season is phenomenal. The canal shipments from Buffalo this season to date aggregate 1,055,367, or five times season to date aggregate 1,00,501. Or live times the quantity shipped out last year or the year previous to the last up to this date. While no great activity in trade is reported at any point, it seems evident from reports of shipments to interior malt houses that there have been many private and unrecorded transactions, and that maltsters are filling up early.

The representation of the different lines of business was very good. Provisional officers were elected and an adjournment made for two weeks, when all will be in readiness to formally commence the work of organization.

Death of Col. Clark. Col. James M. Clark died in Windsor yesterday. He is well known to many in the city and will be remembered by the public as the man who offered to construct an electric railway in the city. The council declined his proposition. He was born in Richmond, Ind., in 1837, and after engaging in the wholesale drygoods and oil busi nesses, he bought the Sandwich horse car line for a comparatively small sum. People laughed at him when he undertook to equip it with electricity, but he extended the road to Walkerville, electrified it and sold it for $155,000. He was a man of rare enterprise and business sagacity.

The only buildings near the shops were Atkineen's blacksmith's shop, Mr. Percival's and Mr. A. S. Abbott's. How great have the improvements been since then. Now the shops give way to permit the erection of the free library building, which will be an additional adornment on this fine street.

He was a general favorite on account of his good-natured and lively disposition. Throughout his life he maintained that character, and both as a man and a boy he was very companionable. His early education was obtained at the Union school. After leaving, Mr. Wilson went into the establishment of George Burns, clothier, and remained there until he was 21 when, on his own account, he engaged -Miss Dell McDonald of St. Mary's in business as a merchant tailor and dealer in gents' furnishings. In this for many years he had one of the best trades in the city. During the past year his health has been failing, and this morning terminated fatally. A large and enthusiastic meeting of the London branch of the mission to lepers was held in Somerset Hall yesterday (Monday) afternoon, the president, Mrs. Robertson. occupying the chair. The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Talling, and was peculiarly applicable to the work of the mission. A most interesting address was given by Mrs. (Bishop) Baldwin, in which she gave a graphic description of what she saw of the lepers of Jerusalem, and bringing the members of the mission more closely in touch with their work. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Baldwin for her excellent address. Minute and specially interesting reports of the convention held at Guelph were delivered by Misses Gourley and Morris. These were of special interest to the society, as the convention at Guelph, on Sept. 25, was the first convention of the mission to lepers held in Canada. As a result of this convention it is altogether likely that the Canadian societies will unite to support a European home for lepers in India. fore the close of the meeting, Miss Mc-Leod, one of the members of the society, police report of convictions for use of the who shortly leaves to do mission work in India, bade the members farewell. end, and not find the skies raining gold. If Bessy's friends see no risk in it, it is not science at rest? If — wait and let me speak, my son; I understand what you would say; what you have already told me — that you with dread, assailed with reproach, people said the marriage had been the Norths' doings more than his. At any rate, Bessy was first at church, and both were a little at your door, however indirectly it was at your door, however indirectly it was at your door, however indirectly it was But Mr. North was not the only one who caused, to make his sister your wife will be failed them; the other was Mrs. Cumbera thing altogether wrong; little less than sin in the sight of Heaven. I do not accuse you, Oliver; I suggest this as a possible case; and now I leave it with you for your own reflec-

She was gone. Before Oliver Rane in his surprise could answer a word, Mrs. Cumberland was gone. Passing swiftly out at the open window, she stepped across the garden and the wire-fence, and so entered her own home.

CHAPTER XI.

Apparently Dr. Rane found nothing on his conscience that could present an impediment, and the preparation for the wedding went quietly on. Secretly might almost be the better word. In their dread lest the news should reach madam in her retreat over the water, and bring her back to thwart it, those concerned deemed it well to say nothing; and no suspicion of what was affoat transpired to the world in general.

Bessy-upon whom, from her isolated position, having no lady about her, the arrangements fell - was desired to fix a day. She named June, 29 her birthday. After July should come in there was no certanity about madam's movements; she might come home, or she might not, and it was necessary that all should be over by that time, if it was to be gone through in peace. The details of the ceremony were to be of the simplest nature; Edmund North's recent death and the other attendant and peculiar circumstances forbidding the usual gaiety. The bridal party would go to church with as little ceremony as they went to service on Sundays, Bessy in a plain silk dress and a plain bonnet. Mr. North would give his daughter away. if he were well enough: if not, Richard. Ellen Adair was to be bridesmaid: Arthur Bohun had offered himself to Dr. Rane as best man. It might be very undutiful, but Arthur onjoyed stealing a march on madam as much as the best of them.

Mrs. Cumberland was no doubt satisfied with regard to the scruples she had raised, since she intended to countenance the wedding, and go to church. Dr. Rane and his bride would drive away from the churchdoor to the railway-station at Whitborough. The bridal tour was to last one week only. from his patients, and Bessy confessed that e would rather be at home, setting her house in order, than prolonging her stay at small inns in Wales. But for the disconcerting fact of madam's being in Paris, Dr. Rane would have liked to take Bessy across the Channel and give her her first glimpse of the French capital. Under madam's unjust rule, poor Bessy had never gone any-where; Matilda North had been taken half over the world. The new household arrangements at Dr Rane's were to be accomplished during their week's absence; the articles of furniture -that Mr. North choose to consider belonged to Bessy - to be taken there from the Hail; the new carpet, Mrs. Cumberland's present, to be laid pown in the drawing room; Molly Green to enter as helpmate to Paillis. Surely madam would not grumble at that? Moily Green going into a temper one day at some oppression of madam'r, had given warning on the spot. Bessy liked the girl, ank there could be no harm in engaging her as her own housemaid.

One of those taken into the secret had been Mrs. Gass. Richard, who greatly respected her in spite of her grammar, and liked her also, unfolded the news. She received it in silence: a very rare thing for Mrs. Gass to do. Just as it had struck Richard in regard to Mrs. Cumberland, so it struck him now — Mrs. Gass did not quite like the tidings.

"Well, I hope they'll be happy," she said at length, breaking the silence, "and I hope he deserves to be. I hope it with all my heart. Do you think he does, Mr.

"Rane? Deserves to be happy? For all I see, he does. Why should he not?"
"I don't know," answered Mrs. Gass, looking into Richard's face. "Oliver Rane is my late husband's nephew, but he's three parts a stranger to me, except as a doctor; for he attends here, you know, sir, — as is natural — and not Alexander. Is he truthful, Mr. Richard? Is he trustworthy?" "He is, for anything I know to the con-trary," replied Richard North, a little wondering at the turn the conversation was taking. "If I thought he was not, I should be very sorry to give Bessy to him."

"Then let us hope that he is, Mr. Richard, and wish 'em joy with all our

That a doubt was lying on Mrs. Gass's mind, in regard to the scrap of paper found in her room, was certain. Being a sensible woman, it could only be that—when surwoman, it could only be that — when surrounding mists had cleared away — she should see that the only likely place for it to have dropped from was Dr. Rane's pocket-book. Molly Green had been subjected to a cross-examination, very elevals. jected to a cross-examination, very eleverly conducted, as Mrs. Gass thought, which left the matter exactly as it was before. But the girl's surprise was so genuine, at supposing any receipt for making plum-pudding (for thus had Mrs. Gass put it) could have been dropped by her, that Mrs. Gass's mind could only revert to the pocket-book. How far Oliver Rane was guilty, whether guilty at all, she was quite unable to decide. A doubt remained in her mind, though she was glad enough to put it from her. One thing struck her as curious, if not suspicious -that from the hour she had handed him over the paper to this, Dr. Rane had never once seemed to Mrs. Gass that an innocent man would have done so, though it had only been to say, I have found no clue to the writer. And if a little of the same doubt rose to Richard Noeth during his interview with Mrs. Gass, it was due to her manner. But he was upright himself, unsuspicious as the day. The impression faded again; and he Westlake's photo studio, 201 Dundas came away believing that Mrs. Gass, zealous | street. 'Phone 571.

doctor's poverty. And so, there was no one to give a word of warning where it might have been effectual, and the day fixed for the wedding drew on. After all, the programme was not strictly carried out, for Mr. North had one of his nervous attacks, and could not go to

A Man Made Happy.—Gentlemen,-For five years I have been a great sufferer with Dyspepsia; the pain in the pit of my stomach was almost unbearable and life only seemed a drag to me. When I would go to sleep I would have horrible dreams, and my life became very miserable, as there was no rest either day or night. But with the use of only two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY this unhappy state has all been changed and I am a well man. I can assure you, my case was a bad one, and I send you this that it may be the means of convincing others of the wonderful curative qualities possessed by this medicine, that are specially adapted for the cure of Dyspepsia. A lady customer of mine had the Dyspepsia very bad, she could scarcely eat anything, and was troubled with pains similar to those I suffered with; and she cured herself with two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's VEGE-TABLE DISCOVERY. I wish you success with your medicine, as I am fully convinced that it will do all you claim for it.

Looks Like a Swindle. What was possibly the work of the notorious forger, Godfry McTaggart, resulted in a law suit yesterday between the Bank of Toronto and W. H. Bartram, barrister of this city. The plaintiffs sued for $225, the value of four notes discounted, and for which Mr. Bartram gave collateral security. The notes purported to be signed by John Cousins for $35 25, Paul and Wm. Carrothers for $100, Levi and A. Wilsey weeks ago a committee was appointed to consider the matter, and they decided to make the change, and also selected the design for the cup. It holds just a dram of wine, about a teaspoonful, and is made of silver and gold lined. The bottom is whole amount. The paper fell due on the produced the four notes, which were inweighted so as to prevent its being easily lat November, 1893, and the collateral note overturned. The officiating deacon can of the defendant five days later. The bank failed to protest the notes at that time, and defendant asks in consequence that he be relieved from all liability. Mr. Howe, then manager of the bank here, claimed that the whole transaction took place with the defendant, and that the four parties whose names were attached to the notes were unknown to him. Thos. T. Warren disclaimed having ever signed a note of any kind, and swore that he never saw the plaintiff until being notified that a note bearing his (Warren's) name was overdue at the bank. The parties whose names were attached to the notes denied having placed their signatures to them and refused to pay. The onus was laid on Godfrey McTaggart, whose record as a forger is well known in Middlesex and Elgin. Farmers in South Middlesex were swindled to a great extent—especially several in the neighborhood of Belmont. Judge W. Elliot postponed argument. Purdom for plaintiff. Essery for defense.

Miss Willard and Total Abstinence.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER: Will you kindly insert the enclosed letter

MAY R. THORNLEY. National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Office of president, Evanston, Ill., U.S.A., Sept. 27, 1894. My Dear Mrs. Thornley,—Miss Willard thanks you very much for writing her in regard to the newspaper paragraph you inclosed, and asks me to send a brief statement which she would be very glad to have you publish in denial of the charges made, and which have had so wide a circulation, With kind regards, yours, very sincerely. ANNA A. GORDON.

Miss Willard's statement is as follows: "Will you please contradict the two latest misstatements, which are, that I have left the Prohibition party, and that I recently drank wine at Chautauqua. Both are as false as the gambler's word or the drunkard's joy. While it is true that I warmly sympathize with the labor movement, and have done so from the beginning, my efforts have always been to aid in bringing about a better understanding between the two new political movements, which have so much in common that I hope yet to see them more closely united in their work. As to the second witless invention, Lady Henry Somerset and myself each a specimen bottle of grape juice-unfermented wine-as strictly non-alcoholic as so much lemonade would have been, which we tested at a circular table where we were seated with other White Ribbon friends. That is all there is in it, and I feel sure that my comrades will procure the insertion of this brief statement in the local papers of the various communities. Believe me, yours for total abstinence and for total prohibition, FRANCES E. WILLARD. Dated Sept. 8, 1894.

Many pale-faced, drooping, puny and half-dead babies have been made strong, bright, charming and good-natured by Lactated Food, after all other forms of nourishment had failed. Hundreds of mothers have written to the manufacturers of the great Lactated Food, and honestly confessed that their babies would have died if Lactated Food had been wanting.

Today the attention of the whole medical world is directed to this wonderful healthproducing food, and our ablest doctors gladly advise mothers to adopt its use. Why will mothers and nurses use inferior and dangerous foods when the Lactated saves life, gives health, strength and heartiness? Baby's life is always protected when Lactated Food is used.
