Village Council Meeting

The inaugural meeting of the village council elect took place on Monday Jan. 12th at 11 a. m. according to the statutes.

The Reeve and Councillors elect made and subscribed to the Declaration of Qualification and took the oath of office.

After the members had been pronounced a council for 1920 the reeve took the chair.

It was moved and duly seconded that the council adjourn to 8 o'clock p. m. the same day for general business.

Pursuant to adjournment the new council met at 8 o'clock with Reeve Richard Smith in the chair and Councillors F. W. Crooker, Jas. V. Markle, Wm. A. Drummond and David S. Atkins present.

The minutes of December 15 were read and adopted.

The following communications were read.

A communication from Mr. Alex Davidson resigning as School Attendance Officer.

A communication from the C. P. R. re fence on Mill street.

A communication from William Attridge, secretary of High school asking the village to finance the High school during 1920 until the taxes are available.

A communication from Mr. J. B. Robinson regard School Attendance Officer for the Waterdown Public school for 1920.

An application for the position of Assessor from P. H. Metzger. Also one from R. C. Griffin asking for the position of Collector of Taxes for 1920.

Moved by D. S. Atkins, seconded by J. V. Markle that Mr. R. C. Griffin be appointed High School Trustee for the years 1920-1921.

Moved by councillors Crooker and Drummond that this council meet on the second Monday of each month and every month during 1920 for general business at 8 o'clock p. m.

Moved by councillors Crooker and Markle that the special printing contract for 1920 be awarded the Waterdown Review for the sum of $50.

On motion of councillors Crooker and Drummond, the By-law which was assented to on Jan. 5th by a vote of the people re the issuance of Debentures for $20,000 for building a Memorial Hall, was given its third reading and passed, signed by the Reeve and Clerk and the corporate seal attached and numbered 222.

On motion of councillors Markle and Drummond, the By-law authorizing the borrowing of money from the Royal Bank to finance the High school and for current expenses of the corporation until the taxes are available, was introduced and given three readings and passed.

On motion of councillors Atkins and Markle, Reeve Smith and the clerk were appointed signing officers for the corporation.

On motion of councillors Crooker and Atkins, a by-law was passed appointing municipal officers for the year 1920. The officers appointed were:

Auditors—R. Sparks and John J. Green at allowance of $8 each Assessor, P. H. Metzger at a salary

Choral Club Concert

Those who have heard the men's section of the Choral Club assure us that a treat is in store for those who attend their first concert which will be given next Thursday evening in the Methodist church here at 8.15 p. m.

A program of male part songs, solos, duets etc. will be given.

The Club will be assisted by Miss Ruth Weaver, whose readings are always delightful, and Mr. Chas. Galivan, violinist.

The concert is under the direction of Miss E. Dale Sinclair with Miss Ruby Church at the piano. Admission will be 25c and the proceeds are to go toward Memorial hall furnishings.

This is the first of a series of three concerts to be given by the club in aid of the same worthy and most necessary object and should have the patronage of every Waterdown citizen. Keep the date in mind, Jan. 22nd.

Forward Movement

Matters pertaining to this great undertaking and beginning to take form in Waterdown and surrounding country and great enthusiasm is in evidence in all the churches.

A union committee met on Tuesday evening and arranged the preliminaries of a series of special services to be held in March, for which good talent will be supplied.

There will be meetings in the local churches during the latter part of this month to talk over and explain the objects of the movement to which everyone is invited to attend, the first of these will be held in the Presbyterian church on Friday, Jan. 23. At this meeting short addresses will be given by a number of Laymen

The following are the members of the union committee, James Eager, John Mitchell, Richard Smith, A. Hemingway, C. P. McGregor, J. J. Green, Robert Spence Sr., Robert Griffin, Geo. B. Stock, Mrs. Albert Slater, Rev. J. F. Weidernburn, Rev. R. A. Facey, Wm. Attridge, and A. W. Palmer.

Hampton Court

It was just before he became a cardinal that Thomas Wolsey, on Jan. 11th, 1515, took a ninety-nine years' lease of the manor of Hampton Court from the Knights Hospitaller of St. John of Jerusalem, and at once set about building the magnificent pile which remains his most enduring monument. There appears to have been here an earlier manor house or mansion, for there is a record of Henry the Seventh visiting it a few years before the lease was granted; but probably Wolsey did away entirely with the older building and planned the whole place anew. Rapidly rising in royal favor, the Cardinal designed a lordly pleasure house on the banks of the Thames, where he could worthily entertain his pleasure-loving sovereign, and where he could hold state in a manner that should prove impressive in the eyes of ambassadors and other important visitors from foreign courts.

Having acquired his new manor, Wolsey lost no time in getting his designs carried into execution, and the magnificent edifice, built about five courts or quadrangles, grew so rapidly that in 1516 he was already able to entertain Henry the Eighth here. The whole palace was of red brick, and surmounted by many castellated turrets topped by ornamental lead cupolas. The western portion of the buildings probably gives a very fair idea of the whole as it was planned, though all the turrets from this aspect are wanting their cupolas, though the gatehouse is less lofty than it was originally and though some more westerly buildings have disappeared. A foreign duke visiting Hampton Court during Elizabeth's reign described it as the most splendid, most magnificent royal palace of any to be found in England or any other kingdom, and the details which he gives seem to bear this out. More especial was he struck by what a later verse writer described as "that most pompous room called 'Paradise,' a room which, according to the ducal description, 'captivates the eyes of all who enter by the dazzling of pearls of all kinds,' and 'in particular there is one apartment belonging to the Queen, in which she is accustomed to sit in state, costly beyond everything; the tapestries are garnished with gold, pearls and precious stones—one table cover alone is valued at above fifty thousand crowns—not to mention the royal throne which is studded with very large diamonds, rubies, sapphires and the like that glitter among other precious stones and pearls as the sun among the stars.'

The Nova Scotia "Lumber King" says: "I consider MINARD'S LINIMENT the best LINIMENT in use. I got my foot badly jammed lately. I bathed it with MINARD'S LINIMENT and it was as well as ever next day. Yours very truly, T. G. McMULLEN."

The casual visitor to Hampton Court probably carries away two or three definite impressions of the place, of a medley of decorated chimneystacks, of warm red bricks, of cool quadrangles, of broad lawns and blazing flower beds, of an outlook over a boat-dotted river, of galleries filled with a bewildering succession of old paintings, of tapestried walls—and of the whole set amid stretching tree-growth levels. It is, however, necessary to know the place closely to appreciate it fully—it grows upon one as the saying is; we should have seen the homely court of the Master Carpenter as well as the stately Fountain Court, the sculptures in the gardens as well as the encyclopaedic clock, the kitchen as well as the picture galleries, to have lingered about the wilderness in the spring as well as to have seen the Broad Walk in the blaze of summer, to have visited in some of the residences as well as to have passed through the public galleries, to have been about it at all seasons and not merely to have scoured through it as the central incident in a half-day's excursion. It is, indeed, properly a place for restful enjoyment rather than for hurried sight-seeing, though a hurried glimpse may well prove a provocation to further visits and more leisurely inspection.

The beautiful red brickwork, the various castellated turrets, and the clusters of decorated chimneys, with the quaintly carved beasts seemingly tobogganing down the gables of the wings, together form a fine example of Tudor architecture, though the appearance would have been still better had the gatehouse, when restored in the eighteenth century, been kept to its original proportions, and had the leaden cupolas not been removed from the many turrets. Two or three of those turrets that remain in other parts of the buildings retain their cupolas, to indicate how fine must have been the whole effect before any had been removed.—Walter Jerrild.

HEALTH FOR THE BABY

The baby of to-day is the man or woman of to-morrow. Thus the success of the future man or woman depends upon the baby's present welfare. If the baby is sickly and ill-nourished it is not to be expected that he will grow into a strong, active man who will hold his own in the business world a few years hence. Mothers, it is a duty you owe the future to keep your little ones well now. This can be easily done if Baby's Own Tablets are kept in the house. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative, which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, and thus make baby healthy and strong. Concerning them Mrs. W. Orser, Elginburg, Ont., writes: "I have a fine, healthy boy three years, and have used Baby's Own Tablets for him ever since he was a small baby. I certainly think them a splendid medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE ARCTIC TERN.

Birds Are Greatest Daylight Savers in the World.

The greatest daylight saver in the world—the Arctic tern! Many years before the Clumsy Mortal began to puzzle his brain with a scheme to utilize the extra hour of daylight, the Arctic tern had discovered how it was possible to spend over half the year in regions where the sun never sets. Could the above mentioned C. M. follow his example, the lighting problem would vanish into nothingness. And this is how the ingenious bird manages:

He has his summer home in the Arctic circle, the Land of the Midnight Sun, where, for many weeks, darkness is unknown. When he sees the sun making his way alarmingly near the horizon, finally dipping for a few hours each day out of sight, he begins to think of his winter home in the Antarctic circle, even though twilight and dawn still overlap so that it is never dark.

"This is God's own country in the summer, but it belongs to the Prince of Darkness in the winter," he says to himself, and bids Mrs. Tern and the children prepare for their yearly trip south.

Nor do they stop at Palm Beach, for the tern is one who does everything thoroughly. If he wants daylight and sunlight, it is not for an eight-hour day, but for the whole twenty-four hours. If he goes south, he stops barely short of the South Pole. It is an eleven thousand mile trip, but the Tern family are good fliers, and can easily make two or three hundred miles a day without motor trouble.

By the time he reaches the Antarctic, he finds his home basking in the sunlight for virtually the whole day. About June 15 he is back in his Arctic home. His summer estate is on the most northern land in the world, as far north as he can find anything stable on which to construct his nest. So arctic are the conditions under which the terns breed that the first nest found by man in this region, only seven and a half degrees from the pole, contained a downy chick surrounded by a wall of newly-fallen snow that had been scooped out of the nest by the parent.

About fourteen weeks later, Aug 25, when the little terns are full grown, and have become experienced aviators, the entire family start out for that long journey to the regions of greatest heat, across the equator, and then on to the southern edge of the Antarctic continent. They probably spend a few weeks longer in their winter than in their summer home, and this would leave scarcely twenty weeks for the round trip of 22,000 miles.

In the north, the midnight sun, which has already appeared before their arrival in the middle of June, never sets during their entire stay at the breeding grounds. In their Antarctic sojourn the birds do not see a sunset for two months, and the sun dips only a little way below the horizon during the rest of the time, while broad daylight during the winter and summer, and with more daylight than dark during the spring and fall.

A second record they hold, as champion migrants of the world. In order to cover 22,000 miles of their round trip in twenty weeks, 150 miles in a straight line must be their daily task, and this is undoubtedly multiplied several times by their zig-zag twistings in pursuit of food. What their track is over this great distance no one knows. The great flocks of thousands and thousands of these terns which range from pole to pole have never been noted by ornithologists competent to indicate their preferred route and their time schedule. They are slender and graceful, long-winged, and with irregular and hovering flight. First cousins to the gull, they are gray sea birds with red bills.

Minard's Liniment Cures Cargot in Cows.

Looking Out for Himself. Pat was one day driving cattle through a country town, accompanied by a collie. The dog, unknown to him, bolted into a butcher's shop and ran off with a leg of mutton. Whereupon the butcher issued forth, demanding of Pat if that was his dog. "No," replied Pat, slyly eyeing the erring dog, which by this time was almost out of sight, "he was once mine, but he seems to be doing for himself now."

Don't Hawk, Blow, Sneeze, or Cough Use "Catarrhzone"

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup? You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhzone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrhzone disappear. Not difficult for Catarrhzone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00 and contains two months' treatment; smaller sizes 25c and 50c, all druggists and storekeepers.

NOTHING SERIOUS. (Birmingham Age-Herald.) "Is this patient violent?" "No," replied the asylum attendant. "He merely thinks the walls of the room are papered with Chinese money and he's an American adding machine trying to strike a balance."

SAUSAGE RECIPES.

Nothing so quite fills the bill on a cold winter morning as nicely browned sausage in some shape or form. If you are one of those who disapprove of meat for breakfast then apply these sausage suggestions to your winter luncheon menus. They are suitable for either.

PIGS IN BLANKETS. Roll each link of sausage in either a thin slice of bacon or of cold boiled ham, fasten it with a toothpick and fry slowly, turning continually until the bacon or ham is crisp. There is just enough difference in the flavor of the two to give the dish piquancy.

SAUSAGE BAKED IN APPLES. Baked half a dozen small apples with the skins on, extricating all of the core and leaving the hole in the centre quite large. Now fry your sausages, not too brown, put one link in the centre of each apple, set all into the oven for a few minutes, sprinkling the apple with just, the very smallest amount of sugar, and cover them with the sausage gravy.

SAUSAGE CROQUETTES. This is a nice way to use left-over cooked sausage. Roll the small pieces in left-over mashed potatoes into which a little milk and an egg have been mixed. Shape into croquettes and fry shallow in deep fat.

SAUSAGE OMELET. This is also a suggestion for sausage left-over. Make your omelet as usual, and just before you turn it, scatter over it your sausage sliced into very thin pieces. Season with a little parsley, if you like, but the beauty of all sausage dishes is that they need very little seasoning because of the highly seasoned forcement in the sausages themselves.

VIENNA'S IMPERIAL PLAYHOUSES.

Occupying a full square block on the famous Ringstrasse in Vienna stands the Imperial Opera House. Two bronze figures, symbolic of music, adorn the left and right wings of the building. These and the ornamental candelabrae at the entrance were designed by Fritz Zeitzsch. The opera house, erected in 1861-9, is four storeys high, with five front entrances and six side ones, built entirely of white stone. It is of Venetian style, principally of the Renaissance period, with a mixture of French architecture of the same time. Directly on the main avenue is a balcony above the entrance over which are five arches, each having a statue of a renowned musician. At the extreme sides, slightly higher, are two imposing bronze figures seated upon a horse. This section, therefore, projects outward over the leading doorway. The opera house itself seeming like a distinct building. One of the attractive features of the interior are the 138 windows of French style which are latticed above by smaller round openings and railed in completely by white bars. Scenes depicted from "The Magic Flute" form frescoes in the loggia. The foyer is resplendent in a color scheme of red and gold. Many heavy bronze doors lead into the foyer, some being draped with red plush curtains. An old marble mantelpiece stands at one end, with a carved and gilded grating. The ceiling is ornamented by rare paintings; at the sides are busts of composers. The walls are enriched with wreaths of flowers and fruits chiseled in stone, making a decidedly brilliant showing against a black marble background.

The auditorium, one of the finest anywhere abroad, was finished by Bitterlich, while the drop curtain used in gay operas was painted by Laufberger, that for tragic purposes being designed by Rahl. The imperial box is located in the centre, with a seating capacity of two dozen persons, for the royal family and guests of nobility. It protrudes slightly beyond the other boxes, and bears the Austrian seal and flag. The Imperial Theatre, on the Lower-bau section of the Ringstrasse, is equally magnificent. The exterior has statues of Phaedra, Don Juan, Falstaff and Hanswurst. The surrounding niches contain the busts of poets. A feature of singular note is the grand staircase of 100 steps. Tall lamps at the base and head illuminate the wide ascent, and the sides are framed in open pillars, colonial in style. On the left and right wings are small balconies for promenaders who can get views of the wonderful frescoes.

The auditorium, from which the steps of the grand staircase lead upward, is unique, and the foyer is equally attractive, built in semi-circular lines and extending the entire length of the facade. The ceiling is formed in high and low graded arches, with paintings by Charlemont. An interesting room just off one of the side corridors is used as a picture gallery; it has a collection of water colors and oil paintings of the leading actors and actresses from the year 1780.

Timely Items and Practical Information to Be Put Into Effect

At the beginning of the New Year everyone has great resolutions and plans for what they are going to do in the ensuing months. Too often, it is true, these same plans and resolutions are never realized, and as the days slip by, they pass again into oblivion like many before them. It is very pleasant to sit by the fire and build "castles in the air," but remuneration comes only by the realization of the project, which, in turn, is brought about only by direct action. It is better to plan one thing well and carry it through, than to let fancy run on a score or more, which are born only to die again.

This may sound like a sermon, and the practical farmer may say, "What has this to do with me?" But do farmers not have plans? We are sure good ones do, because no man can accomplish anything worth while who does not plan ahead. The "slip-and-go" farmer who does things the easiest way, or as father did even twenty years ago, will certainly never need to worry as to the probability of his being inconvenienced by the income tax, for large salaries. His trouble will be a lot closer to home than that, and he will find that the hired man is better off than his master.

Last year the war was just over, and we were not just sure what would happen concerning the H. C. of L. and prices in general. One thing is certain, however, they are still with us and bid fair to stay for some time yet, unless our new Government can do something more than simply investigate, as has been too often the case in the past.

The farmer, like everyone else, must in making his plans for the coming year take into account the existing circumstances, and also, as far as possible, figure out what is likely to develop in the near future. Will feeds go down in price more than hogs or beef cattle; if so, he will aim to raise more. Will concentrates for dairy cattle be cheaper? Will wool remain at remunerative figures? These and many more, are questions that many have been pondering over, and their resultant action is dependent on the solution they come to.

One way to keep in touch with affairs, is to take some good papers, because it is noticeable that the men who make a success of farming are, in the majority of cases, those who read well and keep posted on affairs. Every farmer should at least take one daily for news, and one weekly, as a farm paper, for farm topics. If you haven't sent in your subscriptions for the year, now is a good time to do so, while it is on your mind.

Then there is also the matter of commencing that system of farm bookkeeping, which is so convenient in helping you to figure out just what operations are paying you and which ones are not. Too often the farmer keeps tab in his head of expenses, etc. However, now, when everything is so dear, it is necessary to figure more closely in order to realize a profit on each operation.

One of the easiest yet comprehensive forms of bookkeeping yet arranged for the farmer was worked out some years ago by A. Letich, now head of the Farm Survey Department at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Anyone wishing these forms can obtain them by applying either there or to the Department of Agriculture at Toronto. Directions are sent with them and a sample form also, so that anyone can understand it. Now is a good time to start when you are not extra busy on work outdoors.

With increased amount of milk being sent to creameries, condenseries, etc., the value of good supply of ice for hot summer weather also increases. It does not cost much, outside the labor of harvesting it, and will save you much milk and other produce when the hot days come round again. January is a good month to haul it in, as the cold weather then generally makes a thick, clean, good quality of ice-cake.

If a farmer is not near a stream or body of water, he can make his ice at home if he has a sufficiency of well water. In some instances a cement reservoir of small size is built with sloping sides, and the ice is made in this. When this is done, the clean well water makes a finer quality of ice than when taken from many streams.

An expensive building is not necessary for the storing of ice, although the permanent one is best. Many combine a milk house with it. If sufficient sawdust is used ice can be kept in a very crude building, provided it will keep out rain, the sun and has good drainage. A space of twelve inches between walls and ice is necessary for good insulation. If hay or cut straw is used, a depth of 24 inches is necessary on all sides. Pack ice-cakes slowly, so as to prevent any air circulation among the blocks.

It is well to keep an eye on the roots and vegetables to see that they are keeping in good shape. At times roots kept in the same stable as the stock commence to spoil because of the warm air, and the dampness caused by the moisture from the breath of the stock. Slatted ventilator pipes through the bins will prevent and tendency toward heating and rotting, by allowing air circulation. A cool atmosphere, around 40 degrees, is best for most roots.

The straw in many sections of Ontario was very short this year, which, in many cases, will limit the quantity of feed at the farmer's disposal. He, therefore, will need to make as good use of it as possible, especially if he hadn't an extra large crop of hay to help out.

As much straw often contains good feeding value, it is often used to lend bulk to the ration. In order, however, to get the stock to relish it, some means must be taken to make it more palatable. This can be done by cutting it up fine and mixing it with other feeds, such as ensilage and pulped roots. At the Ontario Agricultural College, for the beef cattle, all the feeds are mixed together some time before feeding. The hay and straw are cut, and a certain amount of salt is sprinkled over the mixture. In this way the whole is made palatable, and much straw can be made good use of.

If the feeder hasn't a cutting box, he will find that if he mixes the hay and straw together and sprinkles them with fatty water some time before feeding, the stock will relish their feed much better. A little chop can also be sprinkled on it after it is put in the manger.

Outside of the dairy cow, last spring's calves should receive perhaps more attention than any of the other cattle. It may save a little feed to allow them to rough it during their first winter, but it is a poor way to mature them into good sized animals that will be able to return a profit in the future for the feed given to them.

Each year the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa sends out samples of feed of which was made in a recent issue. It will pay you to send in your name early if you wish a sample. By joining the Experimental Union, the annual convention of which is held in January at Guelph each year, you can secure samples for feed also.

If you have good varieties already, it will pay you to pick out enough to sow an acre for the following year's seed. In this way, by using the best seed, you will get much greater yields.

Seed grown and handled by members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, in accordance with the regulations of the Association, and which is up to the required standard of purity, quality and vitality, may be registered in the records of the association as "Registered Seed," and certificates of registration may be issued for such quantities if this seed as may be offered for sale. The names of members having much seed for sale are published each year in a catalogue, and in this way buyers are found, and the seller gets much better prices than he otherwise would. It will pay you to write for information to Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Canadian Building, Ottawa.

Quite a number of cows will be refreshing this month and the following one. They need good care and feeding. The cow that is carrying a calf should be fed well, else she cannot be expected to give a good flow of milk. Breeding may be necessary for a large yield, but no cow, no matter how well-bred, can produce abundantly if she is not given the required feed. Don't stint, it doesn't pay.

Cows that give a large flow of milk need to be carefully handled at time of calving, in order to obviate the danger of milk-fever, and injury to the udder. Do not milk completely for the first few days, but draw a little frequently, as this will help to prevent milk-fever. It is at times also necessary to milk before the calf arrives if the udder becomes too distended and is causing pain to the cow.

The care of the calf also is important. With dairy cattle especially, the best plan is to take it away from the mother at once, as it will learn to drink much easier from the pail if never allowed to suck. It may be left 12 hours before feeding, and will then be hungry enough to take some food from the pail.

About the best way yet devised to teach the youngster to drink is to give it the end of your finger to suck, while its nose is in the milk. In this way it soon learns, and will drink quite readily. Like putting up stovepipes, the job is often a trial to one's temper, but if gone about correctly it generally is accomplished in a few lessons. At the same time, experience inclines us to think that the "drinking habit" is inherited in calves as well as humans, as some calves learn much easier than others.

Don't neglect hogs during the cold weather. Their bedding needs renewing frequently to keep them comfortable, especially if their quarters are anyway cold. While pigs of any size will do well in a house that is not frost proof, they, at the same time, need dryness and freedom from draught.

In cold weather it is often hard to get brood sows and stock boars to take the exercise that is so necessary for their health and vigor. This can be done by feeding them at a distance from their house, which compels them to take a certain amount at each meal time.

A noted horseman once said that "idleness and fat" were the two greatest enemies of the horse, and experience of others proves it to be quite so. No horse can retain his health and appearance if forced to stand in a stall day after day during the winter months.

The brood mare and colts may be turned out into the yard during the day, and the work horses which are shod should be hitched up frequently. The grain ration of each should be suited to their respective needs. Thus the brood mare and growing colts will need more than the idle mature horse.

The truth is mighty, and some fellows only tell it to the highest bidder.

and to keep Martens and Nourteva from appearing before the sub-committee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee next Friday. Nourteva, who is a Finn, accused "official forces" of trying to suppress "the truth about Russia."

He said that, if afforded an opportunity to appear before the sub-committee which will investigate Bolshevist activities in the United States, he and Martens could prove entirely "the hysterical lies" told about their work in this country. At the same time, he charged that Government officials have feared an expose of the Bakmetieff Embassy, which he said, had "squandered $50,000,000 loaned by the American Government."

Direct charges were made by Nourteva that Department of Justice agents had become "agents provocateur," such as abound in Europe, and that in this capacity the Department of Justice detectives had even gone to the extent of having planks inserted in the Communist party platform, so that that organization could be prosecuted. Nourteva said he could "prove this to the Senate sub-committee."

Further, he charged that American secret service men had helped to "plant" what he called "celebrated bomb plots." Nourteva again swore he was ready to prove this, and added that "some officials" were anxious to keep "these facts" from being known.

They also correct the unhealthy conditions in the digestive organs that invite and encourage worms, setting up reactions that are most beneficial to the growth of the child. They have attested their power in hundreds of cases and at all times are thoroughly trustworthy.

STATE CORPORATION

On Giant Scale, to Restore Germany.

A Berlin cable: The Saxon state railways show a deficit of 300,000,000 marks for the past year.

The Government is contemplating the organization of a giant corporation, in which the nation and private individuals can participate, for the purpose of taking over the military, naval and industrial plants, and for the conversion of available army supplies into marketable commodities. A plan has been proposed to give the federated states and individual communities an active interest in the operations of the proposed organization, which promises to become one of the most gigantic enterprises in Europe.

The production of sugar in Germany in the past year shows a decrease of 30-20 per cent, as compared with 1918. Vast quantities of beets have not yet been uncovered. The number still buried in Silesia is estimated at 100,000,000 pounds.

Don't Submit to Asthma. If you suffer without hope of breaking the chains which bind you do not put off another day the purchase of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Remedy. A trial will drive away all doubt as to its efficiency. The sure relief that comes will convince you more than anything that can be written. When help is so sure, why suffer? This matchless remedy is sold by dealers everywhere.

30,000,000 DIED IN THREE YEARS

From Violence, Famine, Disease, in Russia,

Exclusive of 5,000,000 Slain in War.

New York despatch: Thirty million men, women and children have died in Russia from violence, famine and disease during the last three years, according to a statement on present conditions in the once great empire, which was made to-day by Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky, granddaughter of Ulysses Grant, in an appeal in behalf of the American Central Committee for Russian Relief. The tremendous death toll mentioned by the princess was exclusive, she said, of five million men who had laid down their lives on the Russian front fighting for the Allies.

Princess Cantacuzene, whose husband is a former commander of the Czar's Bodyguard, was an eyewitness to many of the terrible scenes which resulted in the establishment of the Soviet regime in Russia. She described how hundreds of German spies and agents poured into Russia following the revolution and industriously spread Bolshevik propaganda among the peasants.

They will regulate the action of a deranged stomach and a disordered liver, and make you feel like a new man. No one need suffer a day from debilitated digestion when so simple and effective a pill can be got at any drug store.

NOTHING SERIOUS. "Is this patient violent?" "No," replied the asylum attendant. "He merely thinks the walls of the room are papered with 'Chinese money and he's an American adding machine trying to strike a balance.'"

PRINTERS' FUN. "There never is any variety in this bill of fare," growled the pessimistic patron. "You forget the typographical errors, sir," replied the facetious waiter. "What?" "We have a new lot every day, sir, and upon my word, some of them are most amusing."

DR. WARD The Specialist

79 NIAGARA SQUARE, BUFFALO, NEW YORK.

Men, Are You In Doubt

As to your trouble? Have you some skin eruption that is stubborn, has resisted treatment? Is there a nervous condition which does not improve in spite of rest, diet and medicine. Are you going down hill steadily? ARE YOU NERVOUS and dependent, weak and debilitated; tired mornings; no ambition—lifeless; memory gone; easily fatigued; excitable and irritable; lack of energy and confidence? Is there falling power, a drain on the system? Consult the old reliable specialists.

SYMPTOMS OF VARIOUS AILMENTS

Weak and relaxed state of the body, nervousness, dependency, poor memory, lack of will power, timid, irritable disposition, diminished power of application, energy and concentration, fear of impending danger or misfortune, drowsiness and tendency to sleep, restless sleep, dark rings under eyes, weakness or pain in back, lameness, dyspepsia, constipation, lead-ache, loss of weight, insomnia. Dr. Ward gives you the benefit of 23 years' continuous practice in the treatment of all chronic, nervous, blood and skin diseases. The above symptoms, and many others not mentioned, show plainly that something is wrong with your physical condition and that you need expert attention.

Men, why suffer longer? Let me make you a vigorous man. Let me restore your physical condition to full manhood. Don't be a weakling any longer. Make up your mind to come to me and I will give the best treatment known to science—the one successful treatment based on the experience of 23 years in treating men and their ailments.

Dr. Ward's Methods Unrivalled, Thorough and Permanent

Do you realize that you have only one life to live—do you realize that you are missing most of that life by ill health? A life worth living is a healthy life. Neglect of one's health has put many a man in his grave.

I have been telling men these things for many years but still there are thousands of victims who, for various reasons, have not had the good sense to come and get well. Specialist in the treatment of nervous conditions, nervous exhaustion, back-ache, lumbago, rheumatism, stomach and liver troubles, acne, skin diseases, catarrh, asthma, rectal troubles, piles, flatula and blood conditions.

Sixth Italian Loan is Record Breaker.

A Rome special cable: Subscriptions received on the first day of the sixth loan since the beginning of the war indicate it will be a great success. The people responded with great enthusiasm, and banks were besieged by all classes, who were anxious to give their savings for the financial reconstruction of Italy. Banking experts estimate the day's total to be 1,000,000,000 lire, which surpasses all previous loans.

KEEP AFTER "REDS."

No Let-Up in the Round-Up in U. S.

Washington despatch: New appropriations, aggregating $1,150,000, have been asked by Congress by the Department of Labor for use in furthering the Government's campaign to cleanse the United States of violent radicalism. With 2,500 members of the communist and communist labor parties now awaiting deportation proceedings, the department stated additional funds will be needed to offset the stubborn legal resistance which the radicals are expected to set up. In the meantime the Department of Justice agents had orders to push the round-up of "reds," and proceedings against the prisoners in several cities were set to begin to-day.

Soviet Bureau Secretary in U. S. Makes Charge.

Wants to Give Evidence Before Senate.

Washington despatch: Santeri Nourteva, "Secretary of the Russian Soviet Government Bureau," declared tonight that Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the so-called "Soviet Ambassador to the United States," was hiding in Washington. While Nourteva was making this statement on the second floor of a hotel, agents of the Department of Justice sat waiting in the lobby. It is anticipated that Martens will be arrested and held, subject to deportation proceedings.

In a defiant and bitter statement, Nourteva asserted that "the frantic man-hunt" carried on by the Department of Justice was an attempt to prevent peace with Soviet Russia.

A. FEATHERSTON

METHODISM IN ONTARIO.

Important Anniversary Observed at Lundy's Lane.

Dr. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist Church, was the speaker at the 125th anniversary celebrations of Lundy's Lane Church which was celebrated on November 16.

On the Niagara frontier the first preacher was a soldier, Major George Neal, who preached and formed the first class meeting in 1788. The first preacher of the gospel was not kindly received, but was pelted with stones until the blood flowed down his face. But as a soldier he stood his ground bravely and the only success that is known of his ministry was the conversion of one Christian, Warner, who lived near where St. David's now stands. The Methodism of Upper Canada at this time and for a number of years afterwards, was connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States, as established by Wesley at the close of the revolutionary war.

In the year 1791 is found the name of William Lozee, the first itinerant preacher appointed to Upper Canada, as no circuit had yet been formed. He was commissioned to range at large, preaching where he could find hearers and form his converts into classes. At the end of the year the first circuit was formed, including this Niagara County and reaching as far east as Kingston.

A class was formed, meeting at the home of Christian Warner, and attended by persons from far and near, including the immediate neighborhood of Lundy's Lane. Methodism, then, in this locality dates from 1788, when this Niagara County became a central point of Methodism for the greater part of Upper Canada. William Lozee, the first itinerant, at the time of his arrival in Canada, was a young man, tall, active and strong, and called "One-armed Lozee," on account of the shrivelled state of one arm, caused by an accident. He was a fearless preacher as well as a fearless horseman, his usual pace being a gallop. In the year 1795 there were three circuits in Canada, one being the Niagara circuit. That year Niagara circuit appears for the first time in the minutes of the conference, with the name of Darius Dunham for its first minister. Darius Dunham was a man of good talents as a preacher, but was so plain and blunt in speech that his name has come down as "Scolding Dunham." He never failed to denounce sin or any appearance of vanity or conformity to the world. And brave was the woman or girl who appeared in meeting decorated with either frill or flower. One pretty little blue-eyed, flaxen-haired woman was daring enough to go to meeting one summer afternoon wearing a chintz print dress with a frill at the neck and front. She left the meeting at its close a sadder and a "much madder" woman for having had the finger of scorn pointed at her, coupled with words of strong condemnation for her vanity in dress.

Won by Sweden.

A competitive test of milking machines in England, open to the world, was won by one of Swedish invention.

A National Highway.

The Rotary clubs of Northern Ontario have joined forces with the Canadian Automobile Association in urging the construction of the important link of the trans-Canada Victory Highway lying between the great lakes and Winnipeg.

Recently eighty delegates representing the district extending from Fort William to Winnipeg met in conference at Dryden and formed the Canada Colonization and Highway Association. It was pointed out that the only difficult new construction necessary to the completion of the Fort William-Winnipeg highway will be encountered in the rocky, broken country between Sevel and Vermilion. It is said that the proposed trunk road will open up some fifty thousand acres of rich arable country and induce settlement and development. Lateral roads would rapidly be constructed. While the trunk road, it is estimated, would cost approximately five million dollars, it would do for this great country what the Assouan dam has done for the Nile basin — make it not only habitable, but richly tributary to the nation. With the completion of this road, but one considerable gap will remain to be closed in the trans-Canada Victory Highway — that on the north shore of Lake Superior, Port Arthur and Fort William, and the "Soo," the western terminus of the Great Northern Highway.

Money for Imperials.

Some 50,000 residents of Canada who served in the Imperial forces during the war will be entitled to share in the appropriation voted by the Canadian Parliament to supplement the gratuities they receive from the British Government and bring them up to the Canadian scale. Some of the Imperial veterans are enquiring when they may expect a distribution of the fund. The Government is now engaged in the preparation of an order-in-Council setting forth the manner in which the gratuities will be distributed. Furthermore, the Government will need as a guide in the distribution of the money a concise record of each soldier's service. This, it is stated, is not available in Canada. An Imperial soldier with three years' service, it is understood, receives from the British Government about $160 as a gratuity. He would be entitled to about $400 additional from the sum appropriated by the Canadian Parliament at its last session.

Monkey-talk.

Prof. Garner reports that the female ape says "moo-hoo," and the male ape replies "Wahoo." Evolution doesn't appear to have carried us very far. A chap on the moonlit beach last night said, "Who is oo?" and the girl replied, "It's oo's."

Belgians Decorate Graves.

For the first time since the war the Belgians were allowed to commemorate the death of their fallen heroes on November 1st. All Saints' Day was celebrated with great pomp in Brussels. Burgomaster Max deposited flowers on the graves of Belgians, Canadians, British, French and Russians. Wreaths were also deposited on the grave of Van Campenhout, the composer of La Brabaconne, the Belgium national anthem.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON III. Jan. 18th, 1920. The Boldness of Peter and John. Print 4: 8-21.

Commentary.—1. Peter and John under arrest (vs. 1-4). Peter's address in Solomon's porch, in which he declared the resurrection of Christ, aroused the opposition of the priests, the official in charge of the temple guard and the Sadducees. The Sadducees were an influential Jewish sect at this time. They rejected the doctrine of the resurrection and did not believe in the existence of angels. Peter must have continued his discourse for two hours, since he and John went up to the temple at about three o'clock in the afternoon and he began to speak shortly after that and it was "eventide" when they were arrested and placed in prison. It was then too late for them to be brought before the Sanhedrin, for that body could sit as a deliberative body only by daylight, therefore the apostles were placed "in hold until the next day." The preaching was by no means in vain, for the people believed the message.

II. Peter's Defence (vs. 5-12). 5-7. The next morning the Sanhedrin assembled and care was taken to have the prominent members present, for the case to come before it was an important one. Annas was an ex-high priest and Calaphas the acting high priest, the same officials who had participated in the trial of Jesus. 8. Filled with the Holy Ghost—As he and the rest of the one hundred twenty were on the day of Pentecost. An occasion had arisen of special importance and he was prepared by the Spirit for it. The promise of Jesus to his disciples (Mark 13: 11) was about to have a fulfillment. rulers—The heads of the twenty-four courses of priests, elders—Twenty-four leading citizens, heads of families, elected to places in the Sanhedrin. In addition to these twenty-two scribes or professional teachers of the law were added. These rulers, elders and scribes together with the high priest constituted the Sanhedrin. Peter addressed this body with becoming respect. 9. The good deed—The apostle was not slow to declare that it was for a good deed that he and John were arrested. Both the healing of the cripple and the preaching of the gospel were good deeds. Important—Helpless. 10. He it known unto you all—Peter was ready to answer the question that was asked him and bold in making the declaration. by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth—Through the authority and power of him who was of Nazareth, a despised city, the miracle was wrought, whom ye crucified—Peter was standing before the very body that had a few weeks before condemned Jesus on a false testimony and caused him to be put to death. He had the opportunity to preach Jesus to this company of high officials, and he told them with Spirit-inspired courage the truths they needed to hear.

11. The stone which was set at nought—Reference is made Psalms 118: 22. The figure is that of a stone being judged by the builders as unfit for a place in the structure, but later found to be the very one needed for the most important and prominent place in it. 12. Neither in one sentence Peter declared the inefficiency of the forms and ceremonies of the Jewish system to save any one. Jesus in the Messianic economy, none other name—It must have pierced his hearers' hearts deeply when Peter told them that Jesus whom they had crucified was the only one who could save them or any one else.

13. The Apostles Released (vs. 13-22). 13. Unlearned and ignorant men—Peter and John had not studied under the great Jewish teachers of the day, and they were ordinary laymen, as the original of the word "ignorant" implies. They marvelled—Peter and John, filled with the Holy Spirit, spoke with a power that astonished even the learned members of the ruling body of the Jews. Took knowledge of them—They recognized the fact that they had been with Jesus and had been influenced and empowered by him. They had received his spirit and spoke as he had spoken. 14. Could say nothing against it—They and all the people of Jerusalem had known the cripple who had lain at the temple gate for years, and object of pity and charity, and they saw him before them completely healed.

15. Confirmed among themselves—Peter had fully answered their question and had done it with a boldness born of conviction and certainty. The testimony was all given and, in order that the members of the Sanhedrin might freely discuss the weighty question as to what was to be done with the apostles, Peter and John were taken outside. 16. What shall we do to these men—The question was a serious one. Thousands of persons had believed in Jesus and this miracle would greatly increase the influence of the apostles. 17. That is spread no further—They had a more difficult task than they imagined to keep the gospel and the report of the miracle from spreading further. Let us straightly threaten them—The Sanhedrin had no real cause against Peter and John and they stood in fear of the people, therefore they could simply try to intimidate them. 18. Called them—Brought them before the Sanhedrin again to warn them against the further preaching of Jesus. 19. Judge ye—Peter and John were not to be intimidated. They had received the Holy Ghost and they had a commission from Jesus to preach the gospel. Even the members of the Sanhedrin must admit that one should obey God rather than man. 20. The things which we have seen and heard—The apostles were sure of their ground. They had definite knowledge of the truths they were proclaiming. They had conviction as to duty, and they could not keep their consciences clear and not continue to testify to the fact of Christ's resurrection. 21. Find nothing—The apostles were triumphant. No true cause was found against them, and for fear of the people they could not bring false charges. The multitudes in Jerusalem believed that the healing of the lame man was the work of God. 22. The healed man had long been known and the miracle was a notable one.

IV. A Notable Prayer Meeting (vs. 23-31). The apostles went at once, when they were released, to their fellow Christians. They took the matter of the threatnings to the Lord in prayer. While they prayed, there was a striking physical manifestation of the Lord's presence, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. They had no thought of turning back from the work assigned them. They prayed for help to preach the word of God with boldness and their prayer was answered.

QUESTIONS—Who preached to the people after the lame man was healed? Why were the rulers troubled? What did they do with the apostles? How many converts did they have that day? What great council was called together? Why did they wait till morning? What question was asked the apostles? Give the main points in Peter's reply. Why did the people marvel? What did the Sanhedrin decide to do? Why did they not punish the apostles? Who glorified God? Why?

PRACTICAL SURVEY. Topic—The need and source of Christian courage.

I. The first persecution.

II. A noble defence.

III. Christian courage and unity.

The incidents of the lesson including the imprisonment of the apostles constitute the official answer to what precedes. We have studied the first conquests of the Christian church. We now proceed to its first conflict with the preestablished, but degenerate Judaism of its day. I. The first persecution. It is a striking fact that all reforms have their origin and greatest opposition within the church. At the moment when the usefulness of the apostles seemed to be at its height and their words and works were effecting an entrance into the hearts of the people, they were apprehended. Two motives may have entered into the opposition. The miracle was acknowledged to be undeniable. Its subject was well known, was present in person, and by voice and action attested the reality of his restoration. The first cause of complaint was that "they taught the people." The miracle gave a strong leverage for the gospel message. A consciousness of priestly neglect may have rendered the priests uneasy. The influence of the Sadducees, a rival sect of the Pharisees, who denied the resurrection, is apparent. The preaching of the resurrection of Jesus with its attendant truths threatened their favorite dogma. This was head and front of their offence in the eyes of the Sadducees.

II. A noble defence. The second Christian apology is not second in clearness or courage to that of Pentecost. The source and secret were the same. Now, as then, the speaker was "filled with the Holy Ghost." This made the difference between Peter before the ascension and Peter after it. It was not mere natural courage, of which he had given evidence that he possessed but little. The boldness of these "unlearned and ignorant men" attested their former companionship with Jesus and perplexed their persecutors. They were confounded by their prisoners' eloquence. Both had greatly changed since they had deserted and denied the Master in the hour of his apprehension. Things had greatly changed since the transactions in Gethsemane both with themselves and with the Master. He had risen and ascended and had given his almighty Spirit, by which they were instructed and sustained. They were superhumanly inspired and empowered. The Sanhedrists were in perplexity. The miracle could not be disputed, nor the argument of the apostles overthrown. The glory of the miracle was distinctly ascribed to Christ and his saving truth and power reasserted.

III. Christian courage and unity. Contrary to the expectation of its investigators, the hostility directed against the Christians resulted in uniting them more closely together. They "were of one heart and of one soul." One common purpose possessed them. Intellectually in the truths believed, emotionally in the supreme affection cherished they were "of one accord, of one mind" (Phil. 2: 2). Instead of being intimidated, the apostles were inspired (v. 33). Fresh attestations of divine approval were received. The spirit of consecration was deepened.

Women of Canada Who Testify

Tilsburg, Ont.—"Ever since I can remember, Dr. Pierce's medicines were used in our family at home and they never failed to give good results. The Golden Medical Discovery was used as a tonic and blood purifier and for bronchial trouble, and it proved excellent. I have personally taken Golden Medical Discovery for bronchial trouble, and the Favorite Prescription to build me up when I was run-down and they both were very beneficial. Mother always used Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed for pain; it also was very good. I feel safe in recommending all of Dr. Pierce's medicines knowing them to be good."—MRS. CLIFFORD MITCHELL.

Central Butte, Sask.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery for a number of years and am pleased to recommend it as a blood purifier. I know it has no equal, as I used it for my boy for tuberculosis of the knee joint. My neighbors and friends were surprised with the results; in fact, I do not think he would be alive today had it not been for the 'Medical Discovery.' I also keep it on hand for coughs as it differs so from other cough medicines, instead of upsetting the stomach, as most cough syrups do it is good for the stomach. I only wish I had known about Dr. Pierce's medicines sooner."—MRS. PERCY WOOD.

When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth. Still more, you get a temperance medicine that contains not a drop of alcohol or narcotic of any kind. Long ago Dr. Pierce combined certain valuable vegetable ingredients—without the use of alcohol—so that his remedies always have been strictly temperance medicines.

BRITISH WIT AND HUMOR

"Whiskey, my friend, has killed more men than bullets." "That may be, sir; but, bejabbers, I'd rather be full of whiskey than bullets."

"Miss Y—I frankly admit I am looking for a husband. Mrs. G.—So am I. Miss Y.—But I thought you had one. Mrs. G.—So I have, and I spend most of my time looking for him."

Doctor (to farmer's wife)—Your husband is not getting on as well as he should, Mrs. Brown. Are you giving him plenty of animal food, as I told you? Mrs. B.—Oh, yes, sir; but I think that's it. He gets the oats down all right, but he can't get the chaff down no-how!

"I used to think you were not a man of your word, John, but I've changed my mind." "Ah, you understand me now, friend Smith. But what led you to change your mind?" "You remember that two pounds you borrowed from me?" "Yes." "Well, you are keeping your word like a man."

"Here, waiter, this steak is positively burned black." "Yes, sir. Mark of respect, sir. Our head cook died yesterday."

"Yes, he had some rare trouble with his eyes," said the celebrated oculist. "Every time he started to read he would read double." "Poor fellow!" remarked the sympathetic person. "I suppose he can't get work?" "Not at all. The gas company pay him well to read gas meters."

A teacher in a big elementary school had given a lesson in an infants' class on the ten commandments. In order to test their memories, she asked: "Can any little child give me a commandment with only four words in it?" A hand was raised immediately. "Well," said the teacher. "Keep off the grass," was the reply.

They were very fine pearls, but somehow Jones' friend seemed half-hearted in his appreciation of them. "Man," he cried, when Mrs. Jones had gone from the room, "why did you give your wife a pearl necklace for her birthday? Do you know that pearls means tears?" "Should think I do!" was the answer. "She cried till she got 'em."

The son of the family was home on his first vacation since he had attained to the dignity of college prefect. He and his father were discussing affairs of the day, and finally the boy remarked: "Dad, I hope when I am as old as you I'll know more than you do." "I'll go one better, my boy," the father replied. "I hope that when you are that old you will know as much as you think you do now."

Miss Wilson said in an elementary talk upon architecture. "Now," said she, "can any-tone in the class tell me what a 'but-tress' is?" Little Walter arose, his face beaming with a quick flash of intelligence. "I know," he shouted; "a buttress is a nanny goat."

"If," said the teacher, "A starts for a twenty-mile walk at the rate of four miles an hour, and B starts half an hour later at the rate of five miles per hour, at what point on the journey will B catch up with A?" "At the first public-house," yelled one of the scholars.

The proprietor of a greengrocery shop chanced to glance out of the plate-glass window and saw a small boy lingering around a barrel of apples exhibited on the pavement. "Hey, there, boy!" exclaimed the greengrocer, going to the door. "What are you doing?" "Nothing," laconically answered the boy, with his eyes still fixed on the barrel. "Nothing, eh?" doubtfully returned the man. "Aren't you trying to steal some of those apples?" "No, sir," responded the youngster, "I'm trying not to."

After the concert certain of the artists were relating former experiences. "I was singing a pretty song once," said one. It was called "Row, Brothers, Row; the Stream Runs Fast," and when I was half-way through the audience were bending backwards and forwards, and 'pulling' for all they were worth. "That's nothing," said another vocalist. "Why, at my last concert I sang The Last Post, and the whole house began to lick imaginary postage-stamps, and rushed out to the first pillar-box so as to be sure not to miss the last collection."

Miss Muffit had recently joined the "Band of Sisters for Befriending Burglars," and was being snown over a prison for the first time. One prisoner, evidently a man of education, interested her more than the others. He rose and bowed to her when she entered his cell, apologizing for the poverty of his apartment. Miss Muffit could not help wondering how this refined man came within the clutches of the law. In fact, as she was leaving his cell, she said: "May I ask why you are in this distressing place?" "Madam," he replied, "I am here for robbery at a seaside hotel!" "Oh, how very interesting," said Miss Muffit. "Were you—or—the proprietor?"

General Smuts tells with gusto the following story against himself. "I was once at a social gathering with my distinguished friend and colleague, General Botha," he says, "when two pretty flappers of sixteen or so came up and asked me for my autograph. I haven't got a fountain pen," I said, much flattered. "Will pencil do?" "Yes," said the other flapper; so I took out my pencil and signed my name in the daintily bound little book that she had given me. The flapper studied the signature with a frown. Then she looked up and said, 'Aren't you General Botha?' 'No,' I said, 'I'm General Smuts.' The flapper turned to her friend with a shrug of disgust, said, 'I haven't got a fountain pen.'"

RAIDERS DRIVEN OFF AT GALWAY

Police Barrack Garrison Wounds Two Attackers.

Magistrate Drives Off Masked Gang.

London cable says: Rumors of a fusillade of shots shortly after Sunday night in Phoenix Park, Dublin, reported in news despatches Monday night, are explained by the press association to-day as having been caused by a sentry firing at a soldier cook, who was seen scaling a wall.

James Hoey, a prominent Sinn Feiner, was arrested this morning. Hoey superintended newly formed insurance society, the object of which was to prevent Irish money from going into English insurance companies. The offices of the society were raided last Friday.

Bartley Kelley, brother of the proprietor of the Halfway saloon at Ashdown, near the spot where Viscount French, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was recently ambushed, was arrested to-day. He was removed in a military lorry.

Forty Sinn Fein prisoners in the Cork jail began a hunger strike to-day as a protest against the discrimination shown by the authorities in the ameliorative treatment promised them. Some of these prisoners have already been tried, while others are awaiting trial.

At Scariff, County Clare, Magistrate Hubbert's house was raided by armed men last night. A maid was wounded. The magistrate carried on a duel with the raiders, wounding one, who later was arrested. The police barracks at Galway was attacked last night, but the raiders were repulsed with two wounded.

WHEAT CONTROL IS PROFITABLE

Council of Agriculture Favours Its Continuance

While Principal Countries Retain It.

Winnipeg, Report—A recommendation that the national marketing of wheat be continued "at least so long as the principal countries importing Canadian wheat retain Government control of their imports and distribution," was adopted to-day at a meeting here of the Canadian Council of Agriculture. The Council was in secret session all day, and most of the discussion was upon the grain policy of the Dominion Government. The resolution as reported reads: "Whereas the abnormal conditions of the war have rendered it necessary for the Governments of importing and exporting countries to exercise measures of control over shipments of foodstuffs, particularly wheat; and whereas possibilities of continued Governmental control over the grain markets of the principal importing countries of Europe, including Great Britain, still exists; therefore, be it resolved that the Canadian Council of Agriculture, while not at this time declaring upon the principle of Governmental control as a permanent policy, believe it desirable to continue national marketing of Canada wheat products at least so long as the principal countries importing Canadian wheat retain Governmental control of their imports and distribution."

SIR WILLIAM'S WILL

CHAPTER XXVI.

When Jack dashed from the cottage Millie was too overwhelmed to do anything but rock herself to and fro and cry—and accuse herself of having destroyed Clytie's happiness. She was still sobbing when the door opened and Clytie came into the room. She looked round, then hurried to Mollie.

"Mollie! What is the matter? Where is—where is he?"

Mollie clutched Clytie excitedly.

"He has gone!" she gasped. "He has gone forever. And it was all my fault! I called him by—by his right name; it slipped out, and—he was furious. He declared we had tricked him, that you had married him so that he should have Bramley and the money, that you didn't love him, but had sacrificed yourself for the sake of an idea; and he swore that he would not claim you. It was all my fault! But I told him—I told him over and over again—that you loved him. And you do, don't you, Clytie?"

Clytie sank into a chair and looked straight before her.

"So he has gone," she said, almost to herself.

"Yes, gone!" repeated Mollie. Then she stopped and stared at Clytie's pale but calm face. "Don't you understand? He means never to come back. Don't you care? You look like a stone image. We mustn't sit here; we must go after him, find him!"

Clytie shook her head. "No," she said, in a low voice. "It is better that he should go."

"Better that—?" Mollie flew to her and shook her by the shoulder. "What are you talking about? Clytie, wake up! Do something, or I shall go mad! Do you mean to say that you don't mind whether he comes back or not? Do you mean to tell me that you are not in love with him? If not—but I don't believe it—why did you marry him, and so suddenly and in secret?"

A faint color stole over Clytie's face and she looked at Mollie tenderly.

"You know," she said, almost inaudibly, "I wanted him to have that which belonged to him. And—and, Mollie dear, life is uncertain. I have been ill—I am afraid—"

Mollie sprang at her again, and, gripping her by the shoulders, stared affrightedly into her sad eyes.

"What do you mean?" she demanded hysterically. She gave Clytie a little shake. "You don't mean that you think you're afraid that there is anything serious the matter with you, that you are going to die? You know there isn't, you wicked girl!"

"I don't know," said Clytie. "Be calm, Millie dear. Sometimes lately, since I've had these attacks, I have feared that there is something the matter with my heart—ah, he calm, dear! It palpitates, and I am faint and weak. What else can it be? And think, Millie dear, if I had died before—"

White as a ghost, Mollie gazed at her.

"I see now," she said, under her breath. "I understand. But I don't believe it! I—I feel as if I should know if you were as ill as you think, if you were going to—I won't speak the word! I tell you, I don't believe it. No; I am not afraid. I'm not trembling because of what you said, but because of poor Jack! Clytie, don't you realize how cruel you have been to him? And you, who are so tender-hearted and gentle, who wouldn't kill a fly! You've broken his heart; and all for an idea, though it wasn't the same idea he thought. Something must be done at once. We must bring him back. But," she uttered a little cry of dismay, "we don't know where he's gone, don't know where he is staying. Idiot that I am, I never asked him! Stay there, or go and lie down; do nothing, say nothing. I'll come back."

She flew from the room, seized her tam-o'-shanter, and ran to the station. The platform was empty, a train had just gone; Jack had disappeared—indeed, into the Ewigkeit. On her way back she saw a gentleman coming from a gate with a brass plate on it, and he was about to enter the brougham that was waiting for him, when Mollie caught his arm.

"You are the doctor, aren't you?" she said, hurriedly, and glancing at the brass plate to see the name. "Will you please come round and see my sister, at Rose Cottage, at once? She is very ill, Doctor Marsden."

"Certainly," he said. "You had better come with me, had you not?"

In a minute or two the brougham drew up at the gate, and Mollie ran in to prepare Clytie, who, much to Mollie's surprise, uttered no remonstrance and displayed no reluctance. The doctor looked for one brief instant rather surprised at the sight of Clytie.

"Is this my patient?" he said, with a smile. "She does not look very bad, at any rate. Let us see what is the matter. Now, tell me all about it."

Between them, the two girls told the story of Clytie's attacks of illness, and he made a careful examination; then he sat down and pondered; he did not look surprised or puzzled, because no doctor who is worth his salt ever does look surprised or puzzled. At last he said:

"I suppose you think it is your heart?"

"Yes," said Clytie.

"Well, you're wrong," he retorted, with a smile. "There is nothing whatever the matter with it. It is a little weak, perhaps; that is accounted for by these attacks; but that it is perfectly sound I will stake my professional reputation." Mollie drew a long breath of relief, and he glanced at her and nodded comprehendingly.

"It's a very strange thing," he remarked, "but whenever any one is at a loss to ascribe their illness, certain symptoms, to any cause, they immediately pitch upon the heart. It is the most long-suffering and deeply injured organ we've got, and in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases there is nothing the matter with it, though the thousand patients are firmly convinced that they are going to die of heart-disease."

"There!" exclaimed Mollie, reproachfully and yet joyously. "Then what is the matter with her?"

"Nothing," he said, calmly and deliberately.

"But people don't faint and grow suddenly weak without a cause," retorted Mollie, impatiently.

"Quite so," he admitted. "What I say is, my dear young lady, that there is nothing the matter with your sister at this present moment, excepting a little general weakness. She is perfectly sound, in fact, she is one of the healthiest subjects I have examined for a long while; but she is very highly strung, and she appears to me to be suffering from the effects of some severe mental strain, or—"

He broke off and demanded sharply: "Do you take drugs?"

"No," said Clytie. "I have a horror of them. The only medicine I have taken is a tonic prescribed by my doctor at home."

"Quite right," he said, emphatically. "This drug-taking is, from our point of view, one of the great curses of the day, and I am quite certain that sooner or later the legislature will have to deal with it. At the present moment it is quite possible to walk into the nearest chemist, and buy one of those charming little bottles which, though its contents may appear so harmless—and, mind you, really are harmless—when taken at the proper time and in a proper quantity—will quite possibly prove fatal if taken to excess or under certain conditions. I'd like to see that bottle of tonic."

Mollie brought it to him, and he smelled and tasted it.

"That is all right," he said, approvingly. "It is what I myself should have prescribed for you, and you can't do better than go on with it. For the rest, I can only advise you to take plenty of exercise, plenty of nourishing food—Oh, but my dear young lady, I can see that you are possessed of common sense, and that these professional platitudes are not necessary. There is one thing more, a rather important one—if this weakness of yours, these attacks, arise from undue excitement, or mental strain, you must guard against it. Oh, yes, I will come in again to-morrow, he would up in answer to Mollie's fervent request.

"He's right; I'm sure he is!" exclaimed Mollie, when he had gone. "There is nothing the matter with you; you are not going to die; you are going to live to make poor Jack happy. And we've got to find him." she said, between her teeth. "And until we do we must keep the marriage secret. We don't want to set every old gossip in the county scandal-mongering; don't want to start your married life with a—a newspaper romance. Now, let me think. Yes; that's it! An advertisement! Help me draw it up, Clytie, and I'll go up to town by the next train and insert it in the papers."

She sprang to the writing-table, and, thrusting her fingers through the tangles of her red hair, presently evolved

CUTICURA HEALED BABY'S RINGWORM

On Head. Cross and Fretful.
Hair Fell Out.

"When my baby was three months old her head broke out in little red pimples and then in a week it broke out in ringworms. The ringworms were very large and there were several on her head, and her scalp would bleed. She was very cross and fretful at times, and her hair was falling out.

"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after I had used one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Lelah Sargent, Nampa, Idaho, Feb. 24, 1919.

the following:

"J. D. is implored to return to C. All will be explained. M."

Clytie flushed hotly as this "agonizing advertisement" was read out to her.

"Must you say that, Mollie dear?" she faltered; "isn't it too—too impugning?"

"Not a bit," retorted Mollie emphatically. "And you'd say so if you'd seen him and heard him. Oh, I know what you feel; that it isn't becoming of you, that it's imminent to implore him to come back to you; but let me tell you what I think you deserve to feel badly. You've treated him very cruelly. Oh, Clytie, forgive me!" she broke off, as Clytie's eyes filled with tears.

"There—there! I'll take it back but it's true, all the same. Don't cry, dear; don't be unhappy; I'll find him, and everything will come right. Oh, how hungry I am!"

She snatched up a roll as she left the house with the advertisement in her pocket.

It appeared in due course, but no answer came. The days dragged their weary length, and the two girls waited, hoping against hope; sometimes they went to London, and, riding in hansom-cabs, or walking through streets likely or unlikely, sought vainly for the missing man. Now and again some passing figure or face which bore some resemblance to those of Jack made Mollie exclaim those clutch Clytie's arm; but as the figure drew near he brought disappointment with him, for it was a stranger, not Jack. It was Clytie who hit upon the way, and who, when one evening they had returned from their fruitless search, said, in a low voice:

"He has left England, Mollie. We shall not find him."

Presently there came a letter from Lady Mervyn. Percy had been in too great a hurry to get well, had gone out on the terrace in a devastating east wind, had caught a chill, and was thrown back. Lady Mervyn hinted, almost said plainly, that if the two girls were absent from him much longer Percy would work himself into a fever.

"We must go, Mollie dear," said Clytie, with a sigh.

"Yes, I suppose so," admitted Mollie half-reluctantly, though her heart was drawn toward the fretting Percy; reluctantly because she knew that while Clytie remained at the cottage she would find it easier to cherish and keep alive the frail hope of Jack's return. Clytie said very little about him, but her thoughts were centred upon him day and night; indeed, oftentimes the work in the night with the unspoken words, "My Husband!" throbbing in her heart. It was weeks since his departure, and she had learned during the dragging, wearisome time how deeply she loved him; and, so realizing, came to learn and understand what he must have suffered by the loss of her. To return to Bramley with the secret of her marriage smouldering like a hidden fire in her bosom would be an ordeal, but it had to be faced.

They arrived on a lovely evening, in which Bramley, lightened and glorified by the sunset, looked at its best. Strangely enough, Mr. Hesketh Carton happened to be at the station when they arrived, catching sight of them, he came to help them to alight from the train. He shot a quick, keen glance at Clytie, of which she was half-conscious, and which she remembered afterward—it haunted her, after a fashion, during the evening—but his eyelids were lowered like a screen almost immediately, and he said, with friendly interest:

"You are looking well, Miss Bramley; you are both looking well. Need I say how glad I am to welcome you back? I have good news of our invalid of the Towers; he is much better—in fact, progressing rapidly, and Lady Mervyn assures me that he is displaying all the irritability which accompanies convalescence."

He escorted them to their carriage, and stood looking after them, with a smile on his thin, pale face.

"I wonder whether Mr. Hesketh Carton could help us?" said Mollie, but doubtfully.

Clytie shook her head. "Oh, no!" she said decidedly; Mollie looked relieved.

"I am glad you think that, dear, for I should hate to have to ask him."

The two girls drove over to the Towers next morning, and Lady Mervyn welcomed them with open arms. "You'll find Percy on the terrace," she said to Mollie when she had kissed her; but the information was not necessary, for he had heard their voices and was yelling for them.

Mollie went out to him, and the boy gripped her hand and pressed it to his. His face was flushed, his eyes bright; but the flush died away and he looked thin and peaky, so that Mollie's voice was not so sarcastic and aggressive as usual.

"You look quite the interesting invalid, Lord Stanton," she began; but he broke in with a voice that was rather trepidulous in its eagerness:

"Oh, Mollie, what a time you've been away! And how I've missed you! I've been bored to death, I'm so jolly glad you've come back! I don't know what I should have done if you hadn't come soon. But, I say! You're not looking very bright!"

"Oh, I'm all right," Mollie assured him evasively, as she drew a chair beside him. "Now, tell me all the news. What a stupid boy you are—you've let your run slip down, and you've caught cold."

She drew it up, and he caught her hand and held it; and Mollie let it remain in his grasp for a little while——you see he had been so ill.

Worth Knowing

A wise woman who finds herself without barley or rice for the soup, or who has a chance from these cereals, substitutes oatmeal, with excellent results. The meal thickens the soup readily as the white grains do, and impart a healthy, subtle flavor of its own which to many palates is epicurean.

Starch should be used for washing greasy things, for the alkali added to the grease practically makes soap, which does the work of denaturing.

When cleaning metal washcloths do not stand the cloths in the stove water, the grease will be gone often for an extra wash. It is better to fill them with clean water. Don't allow it to stand any time; pour it off and dry the cloths. Wash well with a dry cloth. Washed and dried in a well-ventilated room should be ready for use.

THOSE WHO WEAR

It is said that Frederick II, of England, used to wear a necklace of diamonds and pearls, and a coronation robe worth twice as much as he. Henry III, of France, the king who used to wear a tassel of pearls hanging from his neck, had diamond collars on the pups and fairly blazed with a diamond collar himself.

But of all the van men of history the vainest was old Prince Nicholas Esterhazy, excepting perhaps, his son, Paul, whose uniform of general in the Hungarian army was ornamented with 50,000 diamonds besides many fine rubies, topazes, emeralds and sapphires. His cap was encircled by a band of pearls and bore a plume of 5,000 diamonds, and every time he wore his general's coat it cost him $500 to repair the wear and tear. His son, Prince Paul, was, if anything, more extravagant and when he died a bankrupt in 1876 his uniform had to be sold to pay his debts.

AN IDEAL TONIC FOR WEAK PEOPLE

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Act Directly on the Blood and Nerves.

Food is as important to the sick person as medicine, more so in most cases. A badly chosen diet may retard recovery. In health, the natural appetite is the best guide to follow; in sickness the appetite is often fickle and depraved.

Proper food and a good tonic will keep most people in good health. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the most popular tonic medicine in the world, harmless and certain in their action, which is to build up the blood and restore the vitality to the run-down system. For growing girls who become thin and pale, for pale, tired women, and for old people who fall in strength, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic. Thousands of people have testified to the health-giving qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in many homes they are the only medicine used. Among the homes in which the benefit of this medicine has been proved is that of Mr. E. A. Underwood, Kingston, Ont., who says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most beneficial results. As the result of hard work I was very much run down, and my appetite was very poor. I got a supply of these pills, which I used regularly for some weeks, with the result that they restored me to my old time strength. They also proved a blessing to my daughter, who was in a very anemic condition, and who seemed not to get more than temporary relief from any medicine until she took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She took the pills for about three months, and is now enjoying the best of health. For these reasons I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

At the first sign that the blood is out of order take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and note the speedy improvement they make in the appetite, health and spirits. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
