"Haif a dozen kids steadled the thing till Grumpy got aboard and yelled to 'let her go.' He struck boldly out like a scorcher, and within fifty feet had worked up a terrino burst of speed. Then he collided with the curb, flew through the are of a circle, caromed on a maple tree, landed wrong end up, and straightened out like the crack of a whip, bruising his heels so badly that he vowed they would have to be amputated. The wheel was a wreck, the boy was in tears, and the old man swore that someone had maliciously tripped him up. The funniest part of the story came later. He hates old Man Scroggs, so what does Grumpy do but buy another wheel and send it to Scroggs as coming from an 'admiring friend.' Reports which have reached here from the Gulf indicate that our fishermen, who have been accustomed to drying their nets on the Island, have been driven off by Commetant's men and have been forbidden to resort there in future. Although the island has passed into the possession of a subject of France, it is still British territory, and the authority of the Canadian Government is still supreme over it. The foreshores are, within the jurisdiction of the Dominion; and the opinion is held that our fishermen have every right to land upon tem. It is reported that M. Menier intends forbidding our fishermen to fish within the three-mile limit, but if this be so it will be the duty of the Government to bring him to time quickly.

Three Negrees Lynched.

Houston, Texas, June "—Louis Whitehead, George Johnson and Jim Reddick, three negroes, were taken from the jail at Bryan, 100 miles north of here, last night and hanged. Whitehead and Johnson were charged with attempting to crimally assault the 12-year-old daughter of Dr. R. H. Wilson, Sunday night. Reddick had been convicted of a crime on an Italian girl and sentenced to hang, but the decision was reversed by the higher court, and he was held awaiting a new trial. The mob was 300 strong and came from Kurten, nine miles west of Bryan, where Dr. Wilson lives. Three Negroes Lynched.

than a waterfall 500 feet high, with a circus on top of it. Members to the number of almost 100 gathered at Juno Hall at 1 o'clock p.m., and the start was made an hour later.

The president's face wore exactly the same look as Gen. Putnam's did at the battle of Bunker Hill, and every time his machine chased a street car off the track he was greeted with loud and prolonged applause.

his machine chased a street car on the track he was greeted with loud and prolonged applause.

When the members formed up on the street for the start it was discovered that Elder Slipback Davis and Abraham Lincoln Thompson were tied on their machines with clothes lines, and that Happy Jones, Roll On Jordan Green and Gen. Grant Taylor had their dags firmly secured behind. While this was against orders, there was no time to make any changes, and at a signal the parade started amid enthusiastic cheers. The first evolution attempted was one invented by President Tools, and copyrighted at the expense of 75 cents. It is a "front into line" evolution, intended to occupy the width of a street, and give each rider a chance to show off. The only reason it didn't work on this occasion was because the street was partly occupied by three ice wagons, three butcher carts, two street cars and a moving van. The riot lasted about ten minutes, and the spolice and drug stores and ambulance drivers exercised the utmost consideration and patience. Among those who had to return to the hall for repairs were:

He instantly grasped the situation, ordered his command to "Scatteration at will and P.D.Q.," and the various riders sought doorways and got around corners and jumped off their machines to climb lamp posts. The peril passed and no one was touched.

and no one was touched.

Just as the parade had made its successful start. Elder Slipback Davis, one of the two members tied to his machine, undertook to execute what is called "the chicken-wing dodge," with the result that he and his machine rolled over and over on the cobblestones six or seven times, the machine being most of the time on top and working away at the elder's ribs to knock him out. He was finally rescued by a kind-hearted policeman and stood up against a brick wall to recover his wind.

THE HOUSEKEEPER.

Within the catendar of life
Of every human heart.
There shines, a day with beauty rife,
That stands alone, apart—
Distinct from other times and Erles,
The-sorrowtul or gabides,
A rose-crowned, perfect day,
No matter if fast fades the gold
Of other morns to gray,
And angel hands may not have rolled
The stone of grider away—
Bright shining through life's fond regret
Through cloud and tearful hate,
Love's golden sun has never set
Upon that day of days.

Pat was an Irishman, and he was trying to ride a bicycle. "The pesky wheel," as he put it, wuldn't stay straight, but wriggled this way and that, every now and then landing him in a heap on the road. A number of people gathered around to see the fun. At last however, he got started fairly well, and was moving along smoothly, when the wheel gave a lurch, and in attempting to recover himself he made a desperate lunge, and over he went, hitting the curb stone in his downfall. A policeman ran up, and after straightening him out, demanded that he give an account of himself.

"Faith!" said Pat, "Td lolkt to see any man give-an account when he has any man give an account when he has once lost his balance."

A Story of an Artist.

A story is told of a now famous American artist, who was seen, one day during his struggling days in Paris, with his clothes in the last stage of dissolution, and his shoes tied up with twine. But there was a wild gleam in his eye. "I've got a hundred dollars!" he shouted to a friend across the street, quite oblivious of the crowd—"a hundred dollars, and I'm going to buy some shoestrings!"—Argonaut.

THE HOUSEKEEPER.

A KITCHEN TABLE COMBINATION THAT IS INVALUABLE.

The Proportions of the Table and How Is Is Made The Recesses of Its Interfor and What They Will Contain Inil Particulars of Measurements.

Our table is a good size, but we have no pantry. We have to use the cellar and shed in place of it. Something more was necessary. This table was made entirely by a joiner, we furnishing the design. It must speak for itself. The top is covered with sheet zinc, which cleans easily, does not rust, will not cut with ordinary usage, and cannot get wet through and musty. The table is plain wood at present. Some day we shall stain it with the mixed walnut stain that can be bought in small cans and thinned to required color with turpentine. The total cost was 37.

The proportions are: 2 feet 8 in. high, 2 feet wide by 4 feet long. On the right-hand side the two large drawers run on rollers, as when filled they are quite heavy. One is for flour, and the other is divided into two sections, which we use for corn meal and beans. In the next tier are three drawers, respectively 8 in., 9 in. and 10 in. deep. In one we keep the cracker box, Quaker oats and such things; in the next white sugar, and in the 10-in, drawer, which is sub-divided, we have the brown and pulverized sugars. The left-hand row has five drawers. These "Halt!" cried the Colonel. "How is this, sir?" he said to the sergeant.

"Is this the way you secure recruits—by force, sir?"

The red-faced sergeant looked up and down, then at the colnel, and blurted out: "Sure, sir, the only way to get them volunteers is by force, sir."

It was a battered war-scarred veteran that ambled into the pension office one day last week, and slowly approaching the clerk of the office, asked in a quivering voice, where he could get a pension.

"In what company did you serve," asked the clerk.

"Company G, of the Sixth Volunteers."

"Ever injured in battle?"

The veteran drew himself up to his full height, which was distressingly little, and exclaimed, in as loud a voice as he could muster.

"Yes, sir, I was hit by a shell in the battle of Bull Run, and knocked all to pieces."

"Dear me!" said the clerk, smilling.
"You're a wonderful veteran. Where do you lle, and how do you manage to keep alive your many pieces?"

We do not mean a shake of the hands; but a genuine malarial chill. Quinine is the best remedy for this. Yet when the chills have ceased, there remains a debilitated system, with loss of appetite and poor blood. For this condition take Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites. The cod-liver oil is a valuable food, furnishing needed elements to build up the tissues. It also makes rich blood, bringing back color to the cheeks. The Hypophosphites increases the appetite, and gives vigor and strength to the nervous system.

Viten you ask for Scott's Emulsion and your druggist gives you a package in a gener colored wrapper with the picture of the man and fish on it—you can trust that man?

On Saturday last the members of the Methodist Sanday school and their friends picniced at Charleston lake. The conveyances arranged for were all packed within a few moments of arriving at the church, and others had to be engaged in order to accommodate the crowd. As might be expected, owing to the extreme heat and the crowd are the cro to the extreme heat and the crowded and overloaded condition of the vehicles, the trip to Charleston was rather slow however, the juveniles were in good spirits and enjoyed themselves in various ways, as best suited them. Every available boat was procured, and soon a fair proportion of the crowd was on the water, while others enjoyed other acquatic amusements. Dinner was served about one o'clock, when, as police arrest their flight.

Turned-Down Lamp.

When New York was suffering from an epidemic of diphtheria, the board of health decided that its presence was to be attributed to the fumes of a kero sene lamp turned down low more, than to any other single cause. Whether or not this be so, it certainly is a mistaken kindness on the part of an indulgent mother to allow a lamp in a child's bedroom with the flame turned down. A turned down kerosene lamp is a magazine of deadly gas, to which the strongest lungs cannot be safely exposed.
