The Lost Will; OR LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST.

CHAPTER XXVII.

AN autumnal drizzle fell on the pit and gallery queues waiting outside the Theatres. They were doing good business at the Theatres; the queues were long, and, notwithstanding the police regulations, straggled somewhat over the pavement; a man who was slouching along, with a hangdog expression and his hands thrust into his pockets, was forced into the roadway. He muttered an oath, looked up to see the cause of the obstruction, and, pausing in his progress, gazed vacantly at the gaily-lit theatre entrance; then, in an undecided way, joined the long line of waiters for the gallery. When the doors opened he got a place in the back row, and sat hunched up, gazing before him with the same vacant expression, which still remained unchanged when the curtain was raised. Indeed, judging by the lack of interest he displayed in the performance, the man might have been dead. But suddenly—in fact, when Miss Grace Lawless made her entrance and her first speech—his manner altered. He started, stared with wild interest, and even rose to his feet. Slowly there mounted to his ugly and yet haggard face an unhealthy flush, his eyes became alive, his swollen lips moved excitedly, and the time Miss Lawless was on the stage his eyes were fixed on her with a feverish eagerness, and when she left it he sank back and lost all interest in the play.

At the dropping of the curtain he shuffled down the stairs and, making his way to the stage door, stood a little way from it and waited. In about a quarter of an hour the actors began to emerge, and presently Maud appeared, throwing a "Good-night" over her shoulder to someone behind her. A taxi-cab was waiting, and she was going towards it when the man who was watching slouched forward, and, laying his hand on her arm, said thickly:

"Maud!"

Maud started slightly, drew back, and eyed the man at first without recognition—for, indeed, this seedy, disipated-looking wretch was very different from the old Stephen Fleming, even on his worst days. She reddened angrily, flung off his hand, and went on her way to the taxi; but Fleming followed her, muttering:

"Don't go. I want to speak to you. I tell you I want to speak to you, and you'd better hear me," he went on, with a threatening note in his husky voice. "I've got something to tell you about—him."

Maud was acute naturally, and the practice of her profession had trained that acuteness. She stopped short, looked at him, and then said, with a forced cheerfulness:

"Who is it? Oh, it's you, Steve! You took me by surprise. You're looking in a pretty state. What have you been doing to yourself?"

"I'm all right," he replied, impatiently, sullenly. "Are you going to listen to me? Is there any place where we can go?"

"I don't know," she replied, thoughtfully, but quickly; for some of her fellow-actors were coming out, and, not unnaturally, were regarding her disreputable-looking companion curiously. "Yes, there's a coffee-shop over the way. Follow me—but not too close."

She walked towards the narrow street behind the Theatres and entered a fifth-rate restaurant, and Fleming followed her.

"Now, then," she said, seating herself with an air of resolution. "Why were you waiting outside there for me? What do you want to say? Here, you look as if something to eat wouldn't hurt you."

She beckoned to the waiter, but Fleming said shortly:

"I don't want anything to eat; I'm not hungry. I'd like something to drink—brandy, if they've got it."

"Looks to me as if you'd had too much already," said Maud, with barely veiled contempt. "You'd better have coffee."

The waiter brought coffee for them both. Maud made pretence of sipping hers, but Fleming thrust his aside.

"So that's what you are—an actress," he said, his dulled eyes wandering over her; "and a swell one."

"Yes, I'm an actress, and doing very well, thank you," said Maud, fighting with her disgust and speaking as pleasantly as she could, for the words, "I've got something to tell you about him," were ringing in her ears, and she knew she would have to humor the man.

"An actress with plenty of money," he said, eyeing the rather expensive jacket of fur, the diamond ornament glittering at her throat. "You've turned him off."

The colour rose to Maud's face and faded slowly, as she forced a smile and shrugged her shoulders.

"Who told you?" she asked lightly.

"And whom do you mean?"

"You know who I mean well enough," he said, with rising anger. "The man you went off with. What did you send him away for? Did you get tired of him?"

Maud shrugged her shoulders again and laughed.

"That's not a nice way of putting it," she said. "But suppose I did?"

He leant forward and eyed her with a strange mixture of desire and distrust.

"I suppose you left him because he couldn't give you any money—because he was poor? That's the way with you women; you're all alike."

"Oh, we're none of us angels," said Maud, with an affectation of cynicism, and, leaning back in her chair, she surveyed the pale, bloated face opposite her through half-closed eyes.

"How did you know he was poor and hadn't any money?"

"Ah!" he said, with the cunning displayed by the habitual drunkard in his sober moments, "you'd like to know, I dare say. But no; I don't suppose you care. You're the sort, Maud, that don't care what happens to a man when you've done with him."

"Oh, don't be so disagreeable," said Maud, playfully. "You're talking like an old friend, I don't think. What's the matter with you? Here, you're right; that stuff's too horrid to drink. Better have some brandy after all."

She beckoned the waiter and gave the order. It was a non-licensed house, and she paid for the liquor in advance. When it came Stephen clutched at the glass with his unsteady hand and drained it. The neat spirit went straight to his head, his face flushed and his eyes brightened with an alcoholic glare.

"You're right," he said. "I'm an old friend, the best you ever had—a true friend, mind you—not one as would lead a girl astray. It's no fault of his, but owing to your own cleverness that you ain't lying in the gutter."

Maud's face went red, her eyes flashed, and her hands gripped each other under the table; for the longing to strike him was almost irresistible.

"Oh, you're a friend all right enough, I dare say," she said.

"Yes, and more—I'm your own true lover still," said Fleming, leaning forward, his lips working. "Maud, I don't take no account of what's happened. I'm willing to forget all that's passed between you and him. I'm ready to marry you, even now."

She leant back, her teeth clenched to restrain the torrent of scorn and indignation which threatened to escape her.

"You're very kind, Stephen," she said, "and—and we'll talk about it. After all, an actress's life is a very hard one, and uncertain, too, and I don't know but what I should like to go back to the country, to the old place."

"Aye," he said, eagerly. "Come back with me, Maud. There's the farm—you shall be mistress of it. The old man will be only too glad to have you there. No one shall dare say a word against you. As for him—"

His hands clenched, and he grinned, showing his teeth, like a dog that has come off victorious in a fight, and left the vanquished one lying in the gutter. At his concluding words Maud's restraint nearly gave way. She had almost sprung to her feet and overwhelmed him with her contempt; but, with an effort, she mastered herself, and with downcast eyes, and bosom still heaving with the struggle, she murmured:

"We'll talk about it some other time. You've seen him, then, Steve?" she asked, with an air of indifference, as she took up her gloves and began to put it on.

"Aye, I've seen him," he replied, with a chuckle of malignant satisfaction.

"Down at Chertson?" she said, casually. As she did so she beckoned to the waiter and signed to Fleming's glass; and the little motion was made so covertly that Stephen did not notice it, but, when the waiter had refilled the glass, took it up "half mechanically and drained it as before."

"No, not at Chertson," he said, with a laugh. "I reckon he won't go back there; he durstn't."

"Why?" almost sprang from Maud's lips; but she checked herself, and said, instead, and with the same air of indifference, "Ah, I dare say not."

"No," said Stephen, emphatically. "I up and told Miss Norton what he'd done; how he'd misled you."

It was almost too much for Maud. She rose, with the movement of a tigress; but, battling with herself, she sank down again, and even forced a laugh.

"Oh, you told her that I'd gone off with him! And what did she say?"

"She said 'naught,'" replied Steve, blinking, and evidently struggling against the effects of the raw spirit on an empty stomach. "She said she wouldn't interfere; 'twas no business of hers."

"No more it was. She was right there," said Maud; and there was a note of spite in her voice.

"But it was business of mine," said Fleming, shaking his head with drunken gravity; "and I interfered right enough. Don't you be afraid that he's gone unpunished, Maud. I've made up old scores with him, on your account and my own too. Don't you be afraid; he's had cause to rue the day he ever played you false, my girl!"

Maud's heart beat so hard and fast that she was almost suffocated; but she managed to laugh, as she was, and, leaning across the table and fighting against the loathing which possessed her, she patted the arm in the dirty sleeve approvingly.

"You would, Steve," she said, between her teeth. "You're a true friend. Where did you find him?"

Her heart, which had been racing a moment before, almost stopped beating as she waited for the answer. Would he reply—would he tell her? Jack Chalfonte had not left England, had not gone abroad; he was in England still, and this drunken wretch knew where. The temptation to seize him by the shoulders and shake the truth from him was almost irresistible; but yet again she controlled herself and laughed and nodded at him with a pleasant approval.

"I suppose you came across him in London here?" she asked.

Fleming shook his head and half closed his eyes with a cunning smile.

"No; 'twasn't here," he replied, gloatingly. "I had him at a better advantage than I should have had him here; 'twas more lonesome like; a place where a man could meet him face to face and have it out with him. I've given him cause to remember the way he treated you—and me too; that is, if he ain't beyond remembering anything, which is more than likely."

There was silence for a moment; Maud stared, her face grown suddenly pale, stared above his head, her hands gripped each other again under the table, and something seemed to grip her heart—a deadly fear, a terror beyond words. She moistened her lips and forcing her voice, which threatened to desert her, she said, lightly:

"So that's where you met him?"

"Aye," said Fleming, with a nod and a tipsy, complacent smile. "Twas a surprise to meet him, I own; for the first minute or two I thought I was dreaming. There he was, dressed like a navy, with his boots all over clay and gravel, and his hands all big and hard, looking just like a common labouring man—him, 'twas used to be such a swell! It took me by surprise—and, come to think of it, Maud, not without cause—for even now I don't understand what had brought him so low, or why he was a-working there, at the embankment, like a labourer."

"Oh, it was on the Embankment?" she said, as slowly as she could, and waving her gloves to and fro; she had taken them off again, for their pressure seemed to add to the sensation of choking which threatened to overcome her. "On the Embankment here in London? I don't understand."

"No; not here in London," he replied, slowly and thickly, as if the spirit were finishing its work and actually stupefying him. "No, not here; but over there."

He paused for a moment; then, with a vacant expression, as if he were turning over his tongue the sweet morsel of his revenge, he wandered on, in a sleepy voice:

"I looked him up and down. He was as surprised to see me, and, with that cursed free-and-easy way of his, he give me 'Good-day;—but I wasn't to be soft-sawdred—not me, Maud! I thought of you. I said nothing; but I bided my time. And it came; it allus does, if you wait long enough. I watched on him, day by day, night by night, as you might say; and at last I come upon him all alone, when there was no one to help him."

HERE IS AN IDEAL SUIT FOR THE GROWING GIRL.

2484—You may have this in nainsook, dimity, batiste, crepe or silk, or in muslin, cambric, longcloth or flannel. The shaped yoke is a new feature. The gown may be finished with openings at the shoulders, if the slip-on-style is not preferred.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 22-24; Medium, 26-28; Large, 30-32; Extra Large, 34-36 inches bust measure. Size Medium requires 7 1/2 yards of 27-inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

2588—As portrayed, velvet and satin are used for the coat, and plaid suitings for the skirt. The coat may be of the same material as the skirt, with the vest of contrasting goods. Plain serge for the coat, with plaid in blue and green for skirt and vest would be very nice.

The Pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 14 will require 3 1/2 yards for the skirt, 3 1/8 yards for the coat and 3/4 yard for the vest, of 27-inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Answer This!

When you have indigestion you never take a lung medicine. Why, then, when you have cough, a cold or bronchitis (lung troubles) do you swallow things down into your stomach? It is a mistake, and the Peps treatment for colds, bronchitis and asthma, etc., corrects this mistake. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not alling.

Peps

Hun Fiends and Our Prisoners.

SAVE OUR MEN. The Government to-day (Oct. 15) publishes a report by Mr. Justice Younger upon the treatment by the Germans of the British prisoners taken during the enemy's offensives this year. It is a terrible document and it contains evidence of bestial cruelty. What it shows is that the Germans when they thought they were winning deliberately and systematically set to work as one of them said to a British prisoner, "to break your brave English hearts." Our men were deprived of medical treatment, savagely assaulted by German doctors, starved, placed close to the firing line, stabbed, beaten, and tortured till many of them died. Two of them came to men who meant to escape with the piteous cry to them, "For God's sake try and get England to do something to help us to get out of this hell."

La Cateau.

Lord, it was a long road, a long road and a dreary. From Mons unto La Cateau all on a summer's day. An overwhelming flood behind and we so faint and weary. That men were sleeping as they walked or drooping by the way. How we stuck it, goodness knows, that nightmare of retreating. Sorted by divisions when we halted for a spell. Still the Old Comrades they took a lot of beating. It was here, La Cateau, that we turned and gave 'em hell! Fifty months of war, no less! Fifty months of striving. Now the time has come for us to make the Boches run. If there's any left of old von Kluck's command surviving. Let 'em try conclusions now it isn't ten to one.

A Damning Document.

Dr. Solf, the German "Colonial" Secretary, recently cited as one of the reasons why the Germans must recover their colonies at the end of the War "the merits which they have shown in history in the protection of the coloured races entrusted to their care," and also spoke of Germans "respecting humanity in the coloured races." Some insight into the manner of Germany's "protection" can now be obtained from a Report on the Natives of South-West Africa and their treatment by Germany, issued as a Blue Book. The German administrators and German practices stand convicted by the statements of Germans themselves; and the details brought out, by the evidence of some of those who survived their regime of organised barbarism, complete the picture. To those who know neither Germany nor the Germans, but are inclined to imagine that colonies are indispensable to Germany and that she must, therefore, be allowed to retain some of her former overseas possessions, we would commend this trenchant narrative. Germany's surplus population has of late been absorbed in her home industries, and the volume of "voluntary" emigration to her colonies has always been negligible. Her African empire was an artificial in its growth as her attempted colonisation of Pacific islands. Europe may have been ignorant, at that time, of what was taking place in German South-West Africa, but it can plead this excuse no longer. To hand back to Germany a square mile of territory, which would entail the return of a single native to German jurisdiction, would make the Allied Powers partners in German guilt, and would be tantamount to condoning, let us say, the massacre of 60,000 Hereros.—United Empire.

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor
C. T. JAMES, Editor
TUESDAY, November 5, 1918.

German Hypocrisy.

Mysterious are the workings of the German mind, but there is no mystery about the outward and visible actions of that depraved nation. From Hans the peasant to Wilhelm the Kaiser there is nothing from which to choose. Cruelness oozes from every pore of their being, and the many clumsy attempts made to shift responsibility for the present war only serve to further betray the lack of truth, which in Germany is considered a virtue and esteemed as a Divine attribute. But apart from what others may think, the German, with an energy worthy of a better cause, steadily pursues his hypocritical course, and ceases not his futile endeavours to prove the justice of his cause to an unbelieving world. Witness the new move, in the appointment of Von Bethmann-Hollweg, scragged Chancellor, and Von Jagow, tattered Foreign Minister, both of whom now form a commission officially charged with the task of classifying certain documents dated July 1914, and of preparing an official document on the events leading to the outbreak of the war. No surprise need be manifested if this precious pair succeeds in bringing out a statement proving to their own satisfaction that Germany has not been engaged in the war at all, or if they should, by that process of reasoning peculiar to the German, endeavour to represent that Germany was driven into a declaration of hostilities at the instance of Switzerland, which territory threatened to invade German territory if war was not made on France and Russia. The world has by this time set a value on all German professions, and is getting fed up with "Geffinn" hypocrisy. A country which has permitted a licentious soldiery to commit the crimes perpetrated in Belgium, France, Serbia, Roumania, Lithuania, Armenia and Russia has no standing among civilized nations; neither has it any future, excepting such as the victorious Allies allow it.

The Kaiser's latest message is another example of the most transparent of camouflage. By a stroke of his imperial pen he transfers all authority to the people, whom doubtless his advisers will make the scapegoats for all that German militarism has done. "The Kaiser's office is one of service to the people." Could anything be more rank? Now that the deluge is upon him the cunning Wilhelm turns to his people with promises of a free and happy future. In the making of that future the Allies will have a hand, and neither the Kaiser, his advisers and his people can escape from the awful consequences which their lust for conquest and dominion brought upon the world. It will be noticeable that Wilhelm does not offer a promise to abdicate. His agreement to the Constitutional Amendment carries with it the Kaiser-like flourish of previous declarations, and it is not to be thought for a moment that he has any intention whatever of laying aside the Imperial Crown. Nothing is farther from his thoughts, for Wilhelm would see Germany drenched in blood ere he resigned or laid down the imper-

al prerogatives. The megalomaniac of Europe is not likely to voluntarily surrender his regal privileges. A revolution in Germany might possibly bring it about, but nothing short of the complete occupation of his Capital by the Allies and their decree of banishment, subject to his compulsory abdication will have the effect of removing the imperial diadem from the brow of the bloodstained Emperor of Germany.

No plaints or protestations; no shifting of responsibility; no claims for a compromise peace; no claims for a future place in the sun, must be heeded by them who will eventually dictate terms to guilty Germany. By her profanation of everything sacred she has placed herself outside the pale, and humanity may well join in chanting a Jubilate of thankfulness when the menace of Attila's heirs of destruction has been removed forever from the earth.

Gunpowder Plot

A conspiracy to blow up both Houses of Parliament on November 5th, 1605, when the King was present at the opening of the session, was commemorated by the annual searching of the vaults of the Houses of Parliament at the seasonal openings; by November 5th procession of boys carrying a scarecrow figure representing Guy Fawkes, which is eventually burned in a great bonfire. In the outskirts of Newfoundland great preparations are made by the boys for the celebration of this anniversary and piles of tar barrels, boughs and other combustible material are erected on the hill tops, and fired as evening closes. The more ingenious set up a figure of Guy Fawkes in the centre of the bonfire, his throne being a small keg containing gunpowder, which, upon the fire reaching it, explodes, blowing the effigy to bits.

Sergeant Furlong vs. The Star Candy Manufacturing Co., Ltd.

This is a prosecution taken upon the complaint of Edward Furlong, Police Sergeant, against the Star Candy Manufacturing Company Limited, for a breach of Section 5 of the Intoxicating Liquors Prohibition Act, 1916, on the 26th of September last. The section is as follows:—

"If anyone has in his possession any 'intoxicating liquors' at any place in 'the Colony' after the first day of January, 1917, manufactured or imported in or into the Colony after the first day of January, 1917, except in accordance with the provisions of Sections 27 of the Prohibition (Penalties) Act, 1916, he shall be liable to a penalty, &c."

The Defendant is a Company Limited, incorporated under the "Companies Act." The Company's office and premises are situate on Dickworth Street in St. John's, and Arthur Hiltz is Managing Director in charge of the premises.

The principal business of this Company is the manufacturing of Confectionery, and amongst other objects, to carry on the business of Warehousemen.

Arthur Hiltz, who was called as a witness for the Prosecution, swore: On the evening of the 26th of September last, he took in upon the Company's premises a package given him in charge by one Simon Levitz, who stated he had no room to store it on his own premises. The package arrived during business hours and was hoisted by Hiltz, assisted by the Company's servants, using the Company's tackle, on to the factory flat.

He visited the factory again that evening between eight and nine o'clock. The package which Hiltz took possession of was placed by him on the factory flat. It was a kerosene oil barrel, and when afterwards opened by him, was found to contain a keg with stuffing around it. He broached the keg and found it contained Rum, a portion of which he drank and he afterwards fell asleep on a counter. In this condition he was found by the Complainant early on the morning of the 26th of September last.

Edward Flynn, a witness for the Prosecution swore between nine and ten o'clock on the night previous, he went to the Star Candy Factory with Hiltz. He was a friend of Hiltz's. Hiltz gave him a few drinks from a bottle that was on a counter.

Shortly before Flynn left, he saw a keg containing liquor in the Company's storeroom. It had been taken there by Hiltz. He put some of the liquor from the keg into a bucket and from the bucket he filled two glass jars. Hiltz at this time was asleep. Water Street. Flynn left the factory bringing the jars with him, and was arrested by Sergeant Furlong, the Complainant, on New Gower Street.

Sergeant Furlong, the Complainant, on New Gower Street, seized the keg of rum and had it taken to the Police Station. Simon Levitz, a witness for the Prosecution, stated, he asked Hiltz, the Manager of the Star Candy Factory, to store a barrel of liquor. The barrel contained a keg of rum. He did not remember exactly the date when he sent the package. He sent it from his place on Water Street where he had it stored. He had the liquor in his possession before prohibition came in force. He did not remember who he had purchased it from. He had put the keg of rum in the oil barrel so that it could not be known there was rum in it—no hide it. He had some barrels on Franklyn's wharf, but this keg had not been in one of these barrels. He had recently been convicted of a breach of the Intoxicating Liquors Prohibition Act.

Sergeant Furlong was called and proved the arid who had in his possession two jars of rum, and afterwards seized the keg of rum at the Company's factory.

On behalf of the defence, two witnesses were called, Frederick Moore, President, and Thomas Soper, Vice-President of the Defendant Company. They swore they had no knowledge of any kind was used in the manufacturing business of the Company. They had no knowledge whatever of the sending of this barrel by Levitz to the Star Candy Factory, or the taking possession of it by Hiltz, or of the storing of it by him upon the Company's premises. Mr. Moore first heard of the transaction at Carboner. Mr. Higgins, K.C., with him Mr. Hunt, B.L., Counsel for the Defendant Company moved for the dismissal of the charge on the following grounds:—

The Defendant Company never had this intoxicating liquor in its possession. This liquor, if it was in the possession of any one, was clearly in the possession of Hiltz. He had not the custody of it for the Defendant Company; he did not receive it for the Defendant Company, therefore the Defendant Company had no possession of it.

As to the liability of a Company for the wrongs of its Agent or Director, it is a well known principle of law, in order to make a Company liable for a tort, the Agent of the Company must be acting within the scope of his authority and in the course of his business. In support of these principles, he quoted from Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 5, Palmer's Company's Law, 5 Ed., and Smith on Master and Servant, Canadian Ed. 1916.

Mr. Morine, K.C., for the Prosecution, is summing up, said, whilst accepting the evidence of the Directors, and he had no doubt of their bona fides, still that did not dispose of the question involved in this prosecution. This class of case is distinguished from ordinary criminal cases. The mens rea of the Company had nothing at all to do with the charge upon which the Company is being tried. In this case a duty is imposed on the Company by statute and a breach of that duty is a disobedience of the law and the breach of the statute is an offence for which the Company is held responsible.

In support of this conviction, he cited from Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 8, 2 Law Reports, K.B.D. 1902, 3 Law Reports, K.B.D. 1913 and also from the Customs Act 1888. Under the facts submitted in evidence by the Prosecution in this case, I have no doubt whatever the Director, seized by Sergeant Furlong on the premises of the Defendant Company, was there in violation of Section 5 of the Intoxicating Liquors Prohibition Act 1916.

As to the legal liability of the Company for the act of its managing director, in taking possession of this liquor from Levitz and storing it on the Company's premises, I am of opinion he was acting for the Company and within the scope of his authority, and his possession of the liquor, was the Company's possession. The principle of the law involved in this case is laid down by Justice Channell and affirmed by Justice Darling in the case of "Hennan versus The Southern Counties Dairies Company" reported in Vol. 2, K.B.D. 1902. The dictum of the learned Judge in that case is:—

"By the general principles of criminal law, if a matter is made a criminal offence, it is essential that there should be something in the nature of mens rea, and, therefore, in ordinary cases a corporation cannot be guilty of a criminal offence, nor can a master be liable criminally for an offence committed by his servant. There are exceptions to this rule in the case of quasi criminal offences, as they may be termed, that is to say, where certain acts are forbidden by law under a penalty, possibly even under a personal penalty, such as imprisonment, at any rate in default of payment of a fine; and the reason for this is, that the Legislature has thought it so important to prevent the particular act from being committed that it absolutely forbids it by its servant. This is done the offender is liable to a penalty whether he had any mens rea or not, and whether or not he intended to commit a breach of the law. Where the act is of this character then the master, who, in fact, has done the forbidden thing through his servant, is responsible and is liable to a penalty. The very effect of the Legislature was to forbid the thing absolutely. The same principle applies in the case of a corporation."

The Interpretation Act 1889, Sec. 2, Sub. Sec. 1 enacts:—

"In the construction of every enactment relating to an offence punishable on indictment or on summary conviction, the expression 'person' shall, unless the contrary intention appears, include a body corporate."

I find under the facts and the law the Defendant is guilty of a breach of Section 5 of the Intoxicating Liquors Act, 1916. I therefore give judgment against the Defendant Company and impose a fine of $100.00 and costs.

Mr. Higgins, K.C., and Mr. Hunt, B.L., Counsel for Defendant.

Dated this 4th day of November, A.D. 1918.

The British War Pictorial.

We have before us a copy of the latest issue of the British War Pictorial, which now has taken on a new form. Formerly, it was entirely a pictorial magazine, but a corps of writers have been engaged, and this issue contains many articles of variety and much interest. Especially those from the facile pens of Geo. R. Sims, the veteran British Journalist, and F. A. McKenzie, well-known and appreciated here from his writings on the Newfoundland Regiment, are fascinating and absorbing, and will repay perusal. The issue is replete with illustrations by famous illustrators, and the war scenes, reproduced by lithographic process, are resplendent in tone, and vividly portray the war in all its horror and humor, in pictures that can be understood. Among the latter is a thrilling photo of a German submarine crew, surrendering to an American battleship. Both in typographic effect and literary worth, the magazine is one of the best we have seen for some time, and true lovers of literature may rest assured that in it they will find a treasure of delight. The British War Pictorial, which henceforth will be issued monthly, contains 52 pages, sells for 15 cents, and is represented in Canada by Gordon & Gotch, 136 Bay St., Toronto.

TERMS OF ARMISTICE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4. The terms of the armistice under which the land and sea forces of what was the Austro-Hungarian empire have laid down their arms, were announced to-day simultaneously in Washington and the Allied capitals, and open Austria and Hungary territory for American and Allied operations against Germany. From Versailles, under which Germany was to be gloomed an accurate outline of the conditions near completion in the Supreme War Council may be gleaned as the armistice terms of the Austrian armistice with parenthetical explanations of minor errors in cable transmission were announced by the State Department to-day as follows:—

- 1.—The immediate cessation of hostilities by land and sea and air.
- 2.—The total demobilization of the Austro-Hungarian army and immediate withdrawal of all Austro-Hungarian forces operating on the front from the North Sea to Switzerland within a narrow zone.
- 3.—The evacuation of all territories held by Austria-Hungary since the signing of the war, and the withdrawal within such periods, as shall be determined by the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces on this front of the Austro-Hungarian armies be-

War Review

With Germany's Allies vanquished and forced to accept terms for a cessation of hostilities against them tantamount to abject surrender, the die now to be cast in front of the Hohenzollern dynasty. The inter-Allied conference sitting in Versailles has now up the terms under which Germany may have peace and the indications are that those terms will be no harder than those imposed upon Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey. Forsaken by all her champions, Germany the power that had hoped to be able to dominate the world by force is at the threshold of a humiliating defeat by capitulation continuing a struggle which means immediate utter defeat. The terms accepted by Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey have shown all these states

The Two-ness Of Us.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Do you sometimes marvel at the two-ness of yourself? You know what I mean, that extraordinarily distinct cleavage of one's personality into two selves, whose instincts are at war.

For instance, there is one self that exults whenever it hears that some friend who has been too successful has come a cropper.

"Guess he isn't so much smarter than other folks, after all," thinks this self. And then the other self rises up within one and says, "You make me sick, you ought to be ashamed of yourself—being glad when someone who has always treated you as he has, loses money."

The Under Self is Shamefully Greedy.

Again, this part of one sometimes surrounds the other half by its greediness. It hears guests coming and wants to put away that specially nice box of candy for private consumption. The other part catches it at this trick and blushes for it.

The greedy self is also a lazy self. It never really wants to work, and the other self is kept constantly busy whipping it into line. And what makes this whipping into line harder, is that this under self is tremendously facile at making excuses. It never admits that it doesn't want to work because it is lazy. Oh, no, that isn't the reason at all. It's because it feels that it ought to do something else—make that telephone call or do that little errand—first. Sometimes it even deceives the upper self by its cleverness, unless the upper self is very strict and very clear-eyed.

The Under Self Is To Blame For In-Law Troubles.

It is this under ego which is usually to blame for the jealousy and dislike between in-laws which mars so many married lives. The upper self knows that it will have tolerance and a real desire to be friendly, it can get on with its in-laws reasonably well. But alas, the under self is always there suggesting jealousies, misrepresenting motives, storing up grievances to make trouble out of.

These are but a few of the activities of the under self. In some people, of course, it is kept in such subjection by the upper self that it cannot do as much, but in many of us it does much more.

At Least, So It Seems To Me.

On looking back I see that I have slipped into calling the self of ugly instincts, the under self; and the self that wants to do right, the upper self. I did that unconsciously but I stand by it with all my heart. There are, to be sure, some cases where a pretty even running fight goes on between the two, and some cases where the under self gets a permanent upper hand. But I cannot and will not believe that there are many such Mr. Hydes in the world.

A druggist can obtain an imitation of MINARD'S LINIMENT from a TORONTO house at a very low price, and have it labeled his own product. This greasy imitation is the poorest one we have yet seen of the many that every Tom, Dick and Harry has tried to introduce.

THE CHANGED PRUSSIAN.

He isn't jolting women off the sidewalk any more. His chest's a trifle flatter than it's ever been before. There are smiles upon the faces of the humble folks he's kicked. And the world is feeling better now the Prussian knows he's locked.

His head is most deflated since we've brought him to his milk. He isn't loudly bragging that he's of the royal ilk. He's willing now to listen to what others have to say.

And the Prussian isn't strutting in his high and mighty way. He's dodging private soldiers that for years he has abused. He is taking off forever that old clanking sword he's used. Oh, the time was imagined all the world to him must bow. But the Prussian's had his lesson and he's very humble now.

It's a very different Prussian that men look upon to-day. Than the one that used to jostle other people from his way. Do not fear him, little children. Without hitching he will stand. Since the Allied boys have tamed him he will eat out of your hand.

THE NEW WORLD.

WILHELM

When Wilhelm's hosts embattled have ceased their course of crime, no sabres shall be rattled, I hope till end of time; no helmets will be gleaming, no tyrants will be scheming, no futile prizes dreaming of victory's sublime.

For all the world is weary of war and all its work; of Prussians red and black, of Austrians and Turks; of war lords grim and haughty of faithless men and naughty, of princelings punk and doty—their presence pains andirks. And all the world is yearning to get to work once more; to do the weekly churning, and every useful chore; to paint the northwest gable, repair the kitchen table, to renovate the stable, and fix the cellar door. And if, when we are toiling at useful tasks like these, we find some princeling spilling for swords and snickerness, before he's one hour older we'll seize him by the shoulder and soak him with a boiler, until some stars he sees. This long war must be ended by rules laid down by Hoyle; a triumph great and splendid must finish the turmoil; and then we'll bust the bezel of any sceptered gezer, of any tin horn Caesar who'd interrupt our toil.

We all are sick with sorrow, with mourning for our dead; yet there is a to-morrow when this sad day is fled, when war lords won't be kinging, and workers will be singing, while doves of peace are winging in gladness overhead.

The Outstanding Fact.

(From the Chicago Canadian-American.)

When the Hun began to fight in 1914, his grand object was not Paris or London, but New York and Chicago. What saved us from destruction and death, and our women from ravishment in those days of terrible crisis? The British Fleet! What made possible our present methodical preparation for war and the training and transport of our troops to the battle front? The British Fleet! What kept watch day and night over the sacred principles for which we gladly give our sons to duty that may mean death, and in comparison with which our dollars seem but dross? The British Fleet! Let us muzzle with outspoken contempt fatheads like Hearst, who, at this solemn hour, rush into print with cheap blarney about our military prowess, and let us remember and celebrate with thankful hearts the second savior of the world—the British Fleet.

Let Americans teach their children that, but for the British Navy the goddess of Bedloe's Island, whose everlasting torch has beaconed the way to happiness for millions, might have been yanked from her pedestal by bloody hands and her light put out forever. "Getting back to brass tacks," is a famous American attitude. It means stripping realities to the bone, and stating with Abe Lincoln: Facts, Franklin bluntness outstanding facts.

Here is the outstanding fact of the greatest war in history: The British Fleet Won It.

A Tank at Bay.

The tank commander knew from his map that it was a passable stream, running at times in a bed so narrow as to be insignificant. What he did not know was that he was heading for a bend where the steep bank on the near side had fallen in or been washed away, making the bed of the burn not only deep but also wide. It happened to be the shortest route to the nest of Boche machine guns, so he pushed on, "all-out" at three miles an hour.

Pin-ping-ping! rang the bullets on the steel plates of the tank. The Hunns were loosing belt after belt, forgetting in their excitement and "wind up" that they might as well try to stop a mad bull with tennis balls. But the tank stumbled on relentlessly, a demon of brute strength. Now she was very close to the bank. Inside, the gunners were jammed against her sponsons ready to open fire as soon as she should drop across the stream.

Suddenly the driver turned from peering in front of him. He whistled orders to the gearsman behind. The commander sitting beside him hauled at his lever. The danger had been seen and they had made a quick retreat. He swung his turret round to the obstacle. Too late this time! Round she came obediently, but even as she swung she felt the ground give way beneath her, and down she slid sideways into the hollow.

Ditched—with four or five snappy machine guns twenty yards off and no friendly infantry near enough to give a helping hand! To unloose the unditching gear in such a position was absurd. Then that "second-loot" did some quick thinking. It was just possible to scramble out with a couple of Lewis guns, run along the bed of the stream and wipe out that machine gun post from the flank. He gave the order, and opening one of the revolver loopholes peeped out to see if Fritz were near.

And what a spectacle was there! Seven bullet-headed Hunns stood on the bank, and seven pairs of grimy hands were stretched to heaven. Perhaps they were right. It is not wise to be too upish when you are close to a tank, even if it is ditched!—S. C. P. in Daily Mail.

Do This Each Morning, You Won't

Great exercise! Keeps Stomach active. Nothing like it! But if you insist upon taking an easy chair you simply must occasionally. The very, very best—10 cents a box. "They work" of the Mysteries That Have Puzzled the World.

Nothing else works the bile, sour ferment, bowels like harmless Cascarets. When Health is Tainted, Complexion Sallow, Stomach Sluggish, Wake up next morning looking over ripe or sick. Cause no inconvenience.

The Tragedy in the Forest.

On January 9th, 1888, the Emperor Francis Joseph, and several other members of the Austrian Royal Family were skating together on the ornamental waters in the grounds of the Imperial Palace, or Hofburg, in Vienna, when a white-faced orderly was running up with an open telegram in his hand.

The telegram fluttered downwards, and the Emperor, who was leaning over the railing, caught it. It contained the news that the Crown Prince had been killed.

in the Public. The Evening Telegram.

This Each Morning, You Won't Need Cascarets. Great exercise! Keeps Stomach, Liver and Bowels active. Nothing like it! Splendid!

When the works the bile, four fermentations and poison from the liver... Cascarets cause no inconvenience!

The Tragedy in the Forest.

The Mystery That Fanned the World. On January 29th, 1888, the Emperor of Austria, Franz Joseph, and several other members of the Austrian Royal Family were staying together on the grounds of the Imperial Palace, or Hofburg, in Vienna.

The tragedy in the history of this... The table-cloth had been dragged off the table, and lay in a heap in a corner. Dreading he knew not what, the gamekeeper approached and lifted it, disclosing to view the body of a beautiful young woman. The corpse was entirely nude and was literally riddled with pistol shots.

Men's Bellows Tongue Boots

people from seeing the awful disfigurement. Such are the facts, so far as they are known, concerning this most strange affair. It is unlikely now that the real truth will ever be made public.

Beirut's Welcome.

Perfume on General's Car. (From W. T. Massey.) Beirut (Syria), Oct. 9.—Of all the scenes in the war that I have witnessed nothing has impressed me more than the extraordinary demonstrations of welcome accorded to the infantry advance on the coast to Beirut.

The division of Scottish, English and Indian troops which was first in Baghdad was the first infantry in Beirut. Hottel and Lancashire Yeomanry entered the town yesterday. They had in 7 days marched 100 miles from Haifa.

Thick, Glossy Hair. No More Dandruff.

Girls! Beautify your hair! Make it soft, shiny and luxuriant—Try the moist cloth. Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair.

Luncheon to Overseas Press Representatives.

A special luncheon, at which the Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, was present; was given by the Royal Colonial Institute on September 16, at the Savoy Hotel, to the Imperial Press Representatives visiting Great Britain.

The toast of "Our Guests" was proposed in a characteristically happy vein by Sir Charles Lucas. Mr. Falfour seconded the toast and availed himself of the opportunity afforded to reply to the "Peace" Note which the Austro-Hungarian Government a few days previously had caused to be sent to belligerent and neutral Governments.

Poppies Caused a War.

HOW POPPIES MAKE HISTORY. The poppy has made history in the United Kingdom this year in going to do as much to win the war as many divisions of picked troops. We shall have enough home-grown flour to last us for nearly forty weeks as against about twelve weeks in 1914.

Fads & Fashions.

Sporting Coats have long tails. Collars and apsons are charmingly irregular. Panels are oftentimes shirred across the tops. A black velvet gown has a tunic of birch color chiffon, which is hemmed with a band of brick color duvetyne.

The Ghost of Nurse Cavell.

(From the New York Sun.) The appointment of Baron von der Lancken, civil governor of Brussels under the German occupation, to direct the commission of neutral residents of that city which is to investigate charges of unnecessary destruction, condemns the commission to failure and proclaims its inquiry a farce.

Channel Notes.

Since the appearance of the last notes in your columns, another of our noblest and best has passed to the Great Beyond, in the person of Pte. Walter H. MacKay, who has paid the supreme sacrifice for King and Country. He was a young lad, but possessed the spirit of true bravery and patriotism.

He Cannot Sleep

It isn't the body that craves rest, but the mind. When you are bodily tired you can usually fall to sleep at the first opportunity. But when the nerves are irritated by anxiety and worry rest and sleep seem to be impossible.

Parcel Post for Mfld. Expeditionary Forces!

The attention of the public is drawn to the very urgent necessity of strictly observing the regulations published by this Department from time to time concerning the despatch of parcels to members of the Regiment overseas and the following particulars should be strictly observed:

- (1) Parcels must not exceed eleven pounds.
- (2) Parcels should be addressed with the Regimental number, rank, name and surname of addressee, followed by the last known address of the Unit with which the individual was serving; for example:
No. 0978 Cpl. John J. Kent,
2nd Battalion
The Royal Newfoundland Regt.,
Hazeley Down Camp,
Winchester,
Hant's Camp,
England.
- (3) Parcels should bear the name and address of a second addressee to whom the parcel may be delivered or forwarded, if it should prove impossible to deliver to the first. The Original address should be written on the FRONT of the parcel where the postage stamps and customs declaration are affixed, and the second or alternative address should be written on the BACK of the parcel.
- (4) If second address is not furnished at the time of posting and delivery cannot be effected, the contents of the parcel, unless of exceptional value or of a personal nature, will be turned over to the Military Authorities for distribution.
- (5) Parcels containing articles of personal nature or of special value will be returned if request for their return, in case of non-delivery, is made by the sender, such request to be written on the cover of the parcel at the time of posting.
- (6) The procedure outlined in (4) and (5) is adopted at the suggestion of the British Post Office, to prevent the waste of a large quantity of perishable food stuffs which form the contents of 90 per cent. of parcels sent to soldiers.
- (7) Parcels should be packed securely.
- (8) Attention is drawn to the Notice concerning Christmas parcels recently published by the Postmaster General. All Christmas mail for B. E. F. should be posted in time to arrive at the Pay and Record Office, London, not later than the end of November.
