ROYAL YEAST CAKES

Royal Yeast Cakes have been used and recommended by Canadian housewives for over 50 years.

Time is the test of quality. Insist on "the kind that mother used."

Lady Wyvernes' Daughter.

He had vowed that he would see her again; let him discover the means. Yet she could not quite give up the pleasure of looking sometimes into the high road, and she even went in the morning, when it was not likely he would be passing by.

There was a change in the beautiful restless face that looked over the shrubs; there was a new brightness, a deeper beauty; the old scornful weariness had passed away as a cloud before the sun. She watched the gaily-dressed ladies now with a smile. Who amongst them had won such love as she had done?

At the very moment a voice near her murmured a thousand apologies for the intrusion. There was no horse, and it was morning, so that he must have been watching and waiting to see her.

"I have longed so much to see you, signorina," he said, bowing almost to the ground as he spoke. "I wish to apologize. I fear I alarmed you the other day by my bad horsemanship. I did not know that you were near."

She hardly knew, in the confusion of the moment, what he said or what replies she made to him. He found the face that had enchanted him so lovely, so radiant, that he was lost as he looked upon it. The fresh, musical voice completed the charm, and Count Rinaldo Montaldi, who had laughed all his life at love and lovers, found himself enslaved by the first smiles of that beautiful face.

He was too wise and wary to alarm her. When he had offered his apology he said how beautiful the grounds of Serranto were, how much at some future time he should like to walk down that grove of orange-trees he saw in the distance; and then, bowing still more profoundly, he took his leave. She saw no great wrong in it, poor child! At first she did think of telling Madame Monteleone, her heart was so full of triumph. She must tell some one; but then, if she did so, it would be all ended. Instinct told her that this stern lady would never allow her to speak to a stranger in the grounds of Serranto. She would simply be forbidden to leave the flower-garden, and her brief, bright dream of happiness would be over. No, she must not tell. After all, her grandmother was old; she probably knew nothing of love or romance, she would not understand her; and, besides, it was no harm, because he loved her.

He made no apology the evening after that, seeing Inez in the distance, he sprang lightly over the shrubs, and stood by her side. He simply bade her good-evening, and asked her if she would show him those beautiful orange-trees.

She walked by his side as one in a blissful dream. Something in his accent caught her attention, and looking up at him, she said, "You are not a Spaniard, signor. You do not speak like one."

Then he drew forth a richly embroidered card-case, and taking a card, offered it to her with a courteous bow.

"I must ask permission," he said, "to introduce myself. I am an Italian, as my name shows."

She read the name, and thought to herself how beautiful and musical it was—"The Count Rinaldo Montaldi."

"Do you like Spain?" she asked, half-timidly.

"It is my Eden," he replied quickly; "I have found here my Eve."

Then he stopped abruptly, for he saw something like an expression of fear upon the beautiful young face.

"I did hope," he continued more gravely and courteously, "to have the honor of seeing Madame Monteleone; but I am told she is still an invalid. I must wait for better fortune."

A look of great relief showed the young man he had spoken wisely.

"Do you know Madame Monteleone," she cried. "I am so glad."

"I do not know her," he replied; "but I hope to see her as soon as she is able to receive visitors."

Those few words removed the only shadow that had veiled the brightness of her joy. He was so skillful, so wary, he would have deceived a far more world-wise girl than Inez, who only knew life from books and dreams. He did not even go as far as the orange-trees, but left her in a few minutes, saying that if he were so fortunate as to see the signorina another evening in the grounds when he had more leisure, he should pray to be allowed the happiness of speaking to her.

CHAPTER XVIII.

It was the old, old story—told sometimes under the shade of Italian vines, among the myrtle trees of Spain, or in the green lanes of old England—always the same—full of music, poetry, and romance—always making the earth fairer, and life a golden dream.

And now the beautiful, gifted, imaginative Inez was listening to the familiar rhyme of loving words. Life had grown so bright and clear, she wondered at times if the world could be the same—had the skies been always as smiling, the sunshine always as bright? What was this golden radiance that had fallen around her, dazzling her eyes with its beauty? Only the glamour of love, that had fallen upon thousands of innocent hearts before, and will so fall until human hearts grow cold and beat no more.

There was no monotony now. The bright summer days were not long enough for her dreams. She had to hush over every loving word, every sigh, every admiring look bent upon her. For it had now become a regular and established rule, after the great heat of the afternoon had passed, for Inez to take her book and read in the orange grove; but the book was rarely opened, for before she had been there long she heard the sound of footsteps, and she knew that he was come. He sat by her side through the long summer evenings, and he wooed her with grace and skill beyond words. He said nothing to her at first of love; he talked to her of the past grandeur and chivalry of Spain; of her gay knights, her brave cavaliers, and her beautiful daughters. He spoke to her of his own Italy, the land of music and song, of the grand old city of Venice, where his race, the Montaltis, had lived and died. They talked of music, of poetry, and of flowers of what was fairest and most lovely on earth; but as yet he said not a word of love.

Inez had long since ceased to remember that there was anything wrong in meeting every day a stranger unknown to her friends. She forgot that she had even fancied it to be ever so slightly wrong. What harm could there be in it? She was happy now—life had some interest; before, it had been a living death. Each day now brought its accomplished wishes, its happiness, its hopes. The time was gone forever when she dreamed among the trees. The reality had come, and she welcomed it warmly.

But not always was Count Rinaldo willing to sit by her, to look in her beautiful face, and talk of fair cities and grand poems. He was growing impatient to speak of his love. Yet, imprudent as she was, there was something in her child-like innocence that awed him. Day by day he grew more charmed and fascinated with her beauty, and found that life without her would be dreary, rapid, and unprofitable. He knew the simple record of her life. He had heard the story from her own lips; and better perhaps than any one else could have done did he understand and sympathize with her. He knew that a return to that dreary monotony would be simply unendurable, that she would never willingly again lose sight of one who had given her some interest in living. He laid his plans accordingly. From her he heard the history of the English father, who had, to use her own language, "given her away," when she was a few weeks old, and had never seen her since. But she did not tell him—for she did not know—that the same father was a rich English "mildred." The count concluded that Bianca Monteleone had married beneath her, and that the father, unable and unwilling to support his child, had abandoned her. Had he known the truth, this story of Inez Lynne would never have been written.

He was determined to win her; for the first and only time in his life Count Rinaldo was deeply and truly in love. He determined to win her, even if he gave up for that purpose all the most cherished plans and schemes of his life.

One bright evening, when they met as usual among the orange-trees, the count looked sad and pensive. He seemed to speak with difficulty, as though some great grief burdened his mind. He sighed deeply, and his dark eyes wore a dreamy look of sorrow.

"Is anything the matter?" asked Inez, gently. "You do not seem cheerful this evening."

He evaded the question; but in a few minutes she asked it again.

"Tell me, count," she said, "are you grieving or troubled?"

Then he told her that the deepest sorrow of his life was upon him; his heart was torn, for he found that he must leave this sunny Spain, where he had found his Eden, and return to Venice.

Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Wedding Gifts

A SLIGHT difference in cost is of little moment to those who cherish quality and utility and beauty in equal proportion. For such folk, "Holmes & Edwards" Silverplate is made—and is especially suitable as wedding gifts.

Its extra quality is assured because silver is used generously in its making. Its utility, because the pieces most used are actually protected where the wear comes—either by solid blocks of sterling silver fused in at the back of the bowl and handle before plating (SILVER INLAIN), or by a heavy extra deposit of silver at these points (SUPER PLATE).

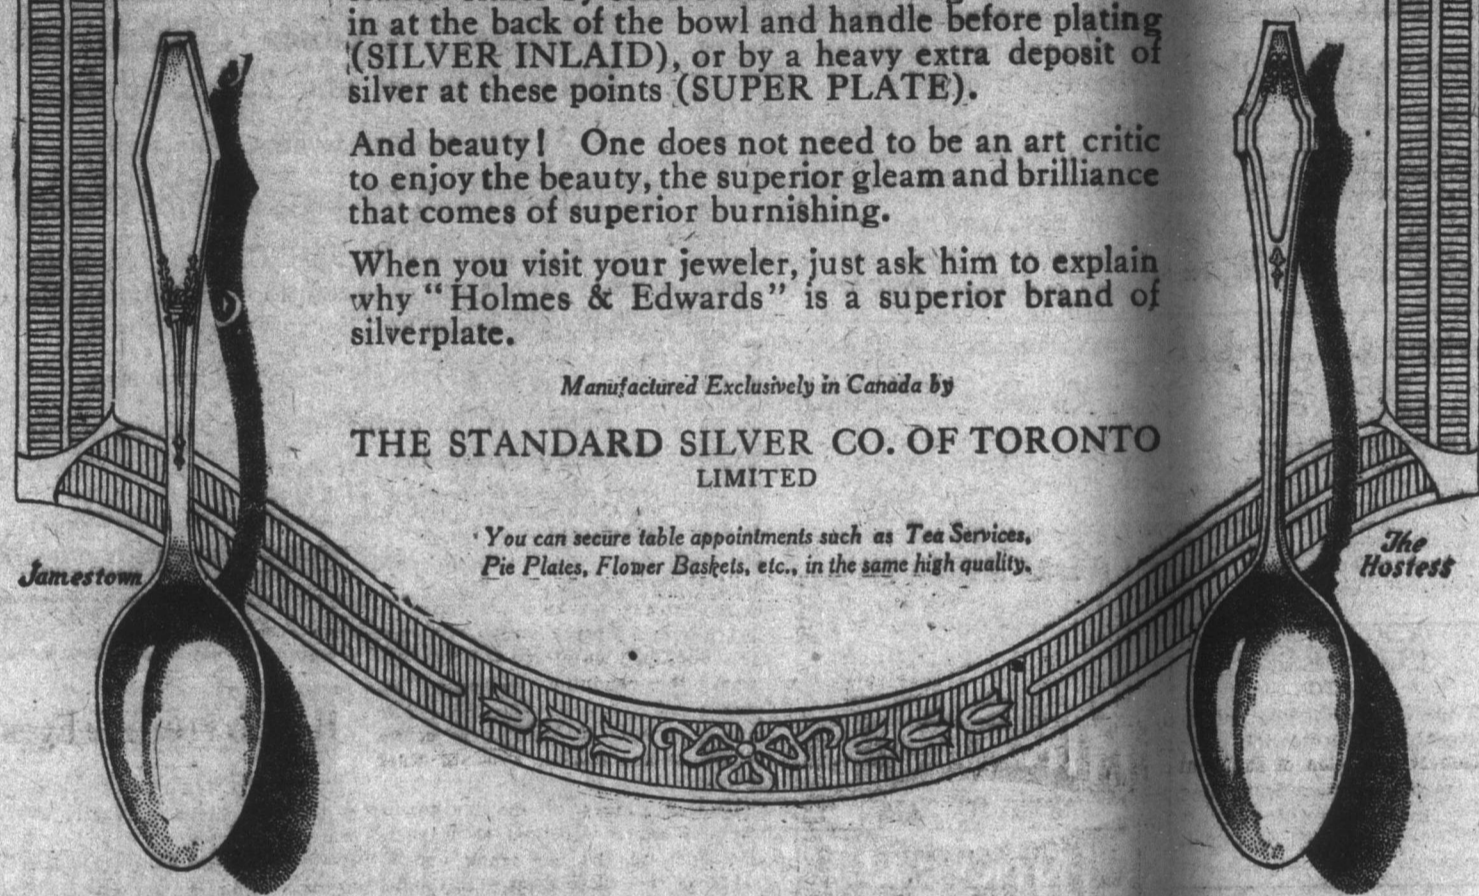

And beauty! One does not need to be an art critic to enjoy the beauty, the superior gleam and brilliance that comes of superior burnishing.

When you visit your jeweler, just ask him to explain why "Holmes & Edwards" is a superior brand of silverplate.

Murdered Envoy

BURIED BESIDE HISTORIC KREMLIN.

The body of Vaslav Vorovsky, the Soviet representative at the Lausanne conference, who was assassinated recently was laid to rest beside the walls of the historic Kremlin. A crowd, so large that it packed the great square and overflowed into the streets beyond, gathered in the bright sunshine of the summer evening to witness the simple Communist ceremony.

Vorovsky's remains were interred beside the grave of John Reed, former leader of the Communist party of America. There was no religious note to the ceremony, but when the interment was completed the tomb of the murdered man was heaped high with wreaths given by the Russian Government institutions and many of the foreign nations represented at Moscow.

Tributes to the dead were paid by Acting Premier Kameneff, Foreign Minister Chicherin and M. Zinovieff, chairman of the executive committee of the Third Internationale. The speakers in brief addresses pledged Russia to carry on the struggle for the proletariat. There was no hint of vengeance either in the speeches or in the peaceful good nature of the typical Moscow summer crowd of soldiers and civilians.

More than 100,000 persons escorted the body from the railroad station to the square. The oak casket rested on a brilliant white catafalque drawn by black horses in red harness and followed by three carts heaped with flowers, about which marched footmen clad in white and wearing red armlets.

"Here we take the oath to carry on the same struggle for the interests of the proletariat that Vorovsky carried on during his life," said M. Chicherin. M. Kameneff asserted that the actual assassin was unknown, but that the responsibility was on those who placed the weapons in his hands.

Double Cropping.

"We will use all our power," the acting premier continued, "to prevent the blood of Vorovsky from turning into the river of blood of the proletariat the imperialists are craving. We want peace, but we are ready to repulse anyone coming to deprive us of independence and liberty."

There were no anti-foreign demonstrations while the procession was in progress. The flags on the British mission and other foreign agencies were flown at half-mast.

The Crosbie Letter.

The bold, candid and fearless letter of Sir John Crosbie in our issue of yesterday was in these days of venality like a refreshing summer breeze. Its publication wrought consternation in the Government camp and disturbed the prospects of any other four years' comfortable term in office for Sir Richard Squires. There is a certain idea of unpopularity that always goes with the filing of election petitions and the party against which they are filed usually wins out when a new election is called. Sir John Crosbie no doubt takes this into consideration and is evidently prepared to accept all the consequences. His letter is a bold, open and manly protest against the outrageous tactics that, in his opinion, were made use of in the Bay de Verde election by the Government candidates. There is an Election Act on the Statute Book and unless it is conformed to it would be more honest to have it deleted altogether and let the man who could spend the most money win out. It is a well known fact that infringements of that Act have been going from bad to worse every election, and if the reports that we hear are correct, the climax was reached in the late election.

As we said before in these columns, it may be that somebody has to sacrifice himself politically to bring about the much needed reform. And maybe the time has come and the abuse is so patently injurious that the man who does it may not sacrifice himself at all but will have a sufficiently large number of right-thinking men behind him to endorse and applaud his attempt at reform, and in return will elect him to Parliament with a sweeping majority. We do not venture to say that this is so, but we will say that in the general interest of the public it ought to be so. The money spent to bribe voters, if they have been bribed, comes from the taxpayers. We all want to see things done right, and if the moral sentiment does not back up the man who tries to have them done right, then it is a bad sign. Be that as it may, Sir John Crosbie has burnt his boats, has crossed the Rubicon and likely will file a petition for the unseating and disqualifying of Messrs. Cave and Cramm.

Successful Student.

Miss Roberta Bond in her recent medical examination at Dalhousie University has completed the third year of the five year course and has won distinction in Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, and Medicine. In these subjects only 23 were awarded. Miss Bond having won four. In addition she passed in Bacteriology, Materia Medica, Surgery, Clinical Microscopy, and Clinical Chemistry, a record very rarely equalled. The brilliant student referred to is the daughter of Rev. Dr. Bond, and niece of Sir Robert Bond, after whom the clever Miss Roberta Bond is named. We extend our heartiest congratulations to Miss Bond for her series of successes, and hope that in her studies in the future she will gain even more distinction.

Departmental Changes.

According to an announcement in yesterday's Daily Mail, Mr. W. H. Cave heretofore Minister of Shipping, has been appointed Minister of Finance, whilst Capt. Thomas Bonia, who has been acting Minister of Finance, is now given the position of Minister of Posts and Telegraphs. The Mail expresses the opinion that the country generally will applaud the rearrangement of departmental services made by the Prime Minister, Sir Richard Squires, and adds that both Ministers are men who possess the confidence of the electorate.

New Appointments.

It is reported that Capt. George Gosse, former M.H.A. for Harbor Grace, is to be given the position of Outport Road Inspector in place of Capt. T. Bonia. It is also reported that Mr. A. Targett, member for Trinity District in 1919, has been appointed Sergeant at Arms in the House of Assembly in place of Mr. R. Walsh who is to be retired shortly after the House opens.

Sailing From Montreal.

The sailings from Montreal and arrive here during the next week include the S. S. Canadian Stepper, scheduled to leave there on the 9th for this port via Charlottetown. The Maple Dawn left Montreal on Friday last, and is calling at Charlottetown en route. She is not due here before Friday. The Winona, of the Canada Steamship Line was expected to leave Montreal for here direct on Monday, but no word of her sailing has been received.

Operetta "Flowerland."

The Operetta "Flowerland," in three acts, delighted a large and appreciative audience at St. Joseph's Hall last night. The pupils of the Convent who played the different roles, were beautifully costumed. The performance was one of exceptional merit. The graceful dancing, and the bright catchy choruses were heard to advantage, and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. In addition to the Operetta, specialties were rendered between the acts, consisting of ballads and solos by Misses Howlett and Hayes; Messrs. Dillon, Canham, Neary and Lawrence, which added greatly to the general enjoyment. The affair was an unqualified success and a goodly sum was realized, which goes to the aid of the new Convent of St. Joseph's Parish.

Susu Sails.

S. S. Susu, Capt. Roberts, sailed on the Fogo mail service route at 2.30 p.m. The ship took a full cargo of freight and the following passengers: Messdames G. Moulard, Mary Brien, V. J. Ghy, Moore; Misses Dyke, Davis; Messrs. E. Keen, A. R. Rendell, C. Carter, C. Churchill, R. Owen, J. B. Arn, W. Clarke, G. Wellon, John B. Payne, Jos. Robbins and Stewart Wellon. The body of Mrs. Richard Owen, who died at the General Hospital yesterday, was sent home for burial at Joe Batt's Arm. Mr. Owen accompanied the remains.

Articles Believed to be Stolen.

A COLLECTION HELD BY POLICE.
The police have in their possession a large collection of articles, such as carpenter's tools, vices, troutling outfit, bicycle pump, etc. Some of the articles were never used. They are believed to be stolen and the police are anxious that any one missing such property would apply at the lock-up and identify their articles so that they can be returned.

Small Codfish Taken.

A few small codfish were caught by local fishermen this morning and quickly disposed of in the markets. Some of the fishermen state that they have been trying on the grounds since early in May without any success up to this morning, and one motor boat owner avers that he has used up a barrel of gasoline so far.

Coastal Boats.

Kyle left Port aux Basques 1.25 a.m. for North Sydney.
Sagana left Humbermouth 6 p.m. yesterday.
Malakoff left Port Union 6 a.m. yesterday on Bay route.
GOVERNMENT.
Fortis left Tilt Cove early this morning, going north.
Wren left Great Harbor at 11.30 a.m. yesterday, coming east.

Political.

Captain Thos. Bonia, the defeated candidate is now Minister of Posts with a seat in the Executive.

Dr. Campbell who has been twice defeated in St. John's West, still holds his seat in the Executive and the Ministership of Agriculture and Mines.

Mr. George Shea, who refused to contest St. John's East in the interests of the Coaker-Squires Party is also awarded a seat in the Executive.

Messrs. Downey, the elected representative of St. George's and Hawco, who was elected by the voters of Mr. Main are turned down because Sir William Coaker hasly refused to favour their demands for Executive seats and the positions now held by Mr. Bonia and Doctor Campbell.

The only hope of satisfaction held out to them, however, is that the present executive is only a provisional one.

It is reported that Sir William is also demanding a big appointment for Mr. Mews, late editor of the Advocate.

The trials and troubles of the government are great and many since the appointment of Mr. Jennings to a safe berth in the Post Office. Messrs. Guppy and Targett who were induced to drop out are in town.

Mr. Targett has his eye on the "Sergeant at Arms" who, it is said, will be asked to give up his sword after the first week of this session.

Mr. Guppy is ready to make his future home in St. John's and keep out of Sir William Coaker's way if he is appointed to a vacancy in the night boat.

Sir John Crosbie's letter in our issue of yesterday was a strong comeback on the Squires' newspapers who seem to know more of sectarianism than they do of practical politics and clean journalism.

Sir William Coaker will arrive in the city from Port Union to-night when he will make known his wishes respecting certain proposed appointments on the part of his Prime Minister.

Sir William's demand for four executive seats and three departmental heads must be of necessity sanctioned.

The President of the F. P. U. for many years was strongly opposed to giving executive seats and portfolios to defeated candidates.

During the last three conventions of the F. P. U. he bluffed those present with the belief that never again would such appointments be granted at least while he had a say in the matter.

When Sir Edward Morris formed his cabinet giving the heads of two important departments to two of his defeated colleagues, R. A. Squires and D. Morison, Mr. Coaker raised a "riot."

In 1921 he stated in the Advocate in his address to the convention that he felt certain when the time was come Doctor Campbell would be man enough to resign his position as Minister of Agriculture and Mines.

Dr. Campbell did not resign and notwithstanding his second defeat is still holding down the job with a seat in the cabinet.

Sir William Coaker is just about as consistent in this matter as he was when he denounced "Titles."

Sir William when he was plain Mr. Coaker sporting a guernsey with the letters "F.P.U." marked across his chest said, "if he had a dog he had no use for he would have him knighted and then shot."

Poor "Mutt," he must have seen what was coming.

Magistrate's Court.

A 30 year old laborer, residing on Flower Hill, stood charged with the larceny of a lady's costume on the 2nd inst., valued at $50.00, the property of the U. S. Picture & Portrait Co. The accused, who was represented by counsel, pleaded guilty to the charge, but as the police are investigating other reported larcenies in which the prisoner might be implicated, the further hearing was postponed until the Crown is ready to proceed and the accused was remanded to the Penitentiary.

A 34 year old laborer, of Water St. West was charged with obtaining money under false pretences from a man named Wm. Norris. The case was postponed, and the accused was remanded for eight days.

A 44 year old laborer of the Battery, arrested for being drunk, was fined $1 or 5 days.

A 50 year old laborer of Trout River, taken in for safe-keeping was discharged.

A resident of Flatrock appeared in court this morning, charged with unlawfully assaulting and beating an elderly man named Kennedy on the 29th May last. The altercation, it appears, arose over a piece of disputed land, and the defendant without any provocation whatever deliberately struck the plaintiff two heavy blows on the shoulder and the back of his head with a rake and then threatened to do him bodily harm with the use of another and more dangerous weapon if he did not stop trespassing on the land. The accused was convicted and fined $10 and costs and also bound over to keep the peace on his own recognizance in the sum of $100. The plaintiff was also bound over to keep the peace in the same amount.

Completing Water Main.

LAYING A NEW 20 INCH SECTION.
Work on the completion of the 20 inch main which runs to Rawlin's Cross is now being undertaken by the Municipality of St. John's under the supervision of Engineer W. Ryan. The new section which replaces a corroded 18 inch section runs from Mulwines Hill to the Venturi Meter House. When finished there will be a twenty inch line all the way from the screen house to Rawlin's Cross and a much better pressure than heretofore may be expected from this main. In addition to the 20 inch line there are two sixteen inch supply pipes running to the city. Between the three about 9 million gallons of water are daily carried to the city during the winter and between 5 and 6 million gallons in summer time.

Painful Accident.

MR. P. J. WHITTEN MAY LOSE SIGHT OF BOTH EYES.
While working at the Majestic Theatre, last night, Mr. Peter J. Whitten suffered what may turn out to be a very serious accident. Whilst doing some work a splinter from one of the tools he was using, entered his eye taking away the sight of both eyes completely. He was rushed to a doctor's surgery for treatment, and with careful attention and plenty of rest, it is hoped that Mr. Whitten will regain his sight.

Billiard Tournament Terminates.

INSTITUTE PLAYERS WIN HONORS BY 149 POINTS.

The Billiard Tournament between the C. E. I. and Guards' Club was terminated last night in the C. E. I. Rooms before a large and interested gathering of spectators. The two final games were won by the Guards players with comfortable majorities, but the Institute team had too big a lead to be overtaken and the result was a victory for the C.E.I. by 149 points. The first game last night was played between G. Freeman (Guards) and W. Reid (C.E.I.) and Reid was defeated by 75 points. The breaks were—

Freeman (900)—14, 22, 14, 10, 16, 13, 10, 13, 10, 10—137.

Reid (227)—14, 12, 10, 12, 11, 21—50.

The C. E. I. were then leading by 201 points and the outcome of the final game between Angel (Guards) and Moore (C.E.I.) was awaited with keen interest. Both players were in good form and an exciting game was played. Angel, however, defeated Moore by 43 points and reduced the winning margin to 149 points. The breaks were—

Angel (300)—13, 15, 10, 12, 13, 10, 16, 11, 14—123.

Moore (248)—10, 11, 13, 10—44.

Throughout the entire series the games have been played in a very friendly manner and at the close last night the losers heartily congratulated the winners who in turn cheered the losers. Both Clubs are looking forward to another such tournament in the fall, commencing about the first week in October. It is also hoped that an open tournament similar to that held by Padre Nangle can be arranged.

700 Miles by Dog Team.

POLICEMAN'S JOURNEY WITH A PRISONER—DOUBLE ARCTIC MURDER.

Edmonton, Alberta.—More than 700 miles by dog team, over Arctic trails, and a further 125 miles by Eskimo schooner, was the trip made by Constable F. Stevenson, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, in bringing into Aklavik for trial an Eskimo charged with the murder of two men—a mounted policeman and a white trader.

The murders took place in the summer of 1921. The Eskimo, Alakooniak, shot the trader during a dispute and got away with provisions sufficient for a long trip to far-off tribes in the eastern Arctic. He was arrested by Constable Noak and was being brought into Aklavik for trial when he secured Noak's revolver and shot the constable through the heart, again making his escape.

On April 22, 1922, Constable Stevenson left the Tree River detachment on Coronation Gulf, with a native sledge and 6 dogs for the divisional post at Herschel Island, off the coast opposite the Mackenzie delta, having re-captured Alakooniak.

The trip was a hazardous one, with 3 feet of crusted snow on the surface of the icy hummocks, and a dangerous prisoner on the sledge. One stage, across Cape Lyons into Darnley Bay, 8 miles, occupied 10 hours of killing work for man and dogs.

The prisoner is now safely lodged at the northern post, where his trial for the double murder will take place this summer. The trial will be the second one to be held in the extreme north, the first taking place some three years ago, when a native was sentenced to a long term of imprisonment for manslaughter, a judge of the Alberta courts, with a Crown prosecutor, stenographer, and the necessary orderlies, making the 3,000 miles trip in six months.

Revolt of Convicts.

A Little War in a Prussian Prison. Brandenburg Prison, the principal penal establishment in Prussia, has been the scene for several hours of a revolt on the part of its 800 inmates, says a Berlin correspondent.

Late on Monday night, evidently acting on a concerted plan, they overwhelmed the warders, wrought great destruction, and gained control of the interior of the building.

Scores of armed police summoned to the scene had to lay regular siege to the quarters held by the convicts. Only by intermittent rifle fire from the courtyard against the upper storeys where the rebels were congregated was the rebellion partially subdued.

It was a pitch-dark night, and not until dawn were the police able to take the offensive against the convict held citadel. Then, after an officer had shouted a warning, the police directed rifle fire against the cells. This quelled the inmates' spirits, though not until one of them was hit did they disappear from the roof and cell windows.

The Turks and Marriage.

It looks as though the Turks may one day have the biggest population in the world!

The Turkish religious lights—acted by military aspirations, one is bound to consider—have approved a bill making it compulsory for all Turks who reach the age of 25 to marry, if they have not already married by that time.

Thus, you must not remain a bachelor if you are a Turk, and if you would keep on the right side of the law you must not even refuse to be a father. The bill provides that you are responsible to the State for giving it one child every two years.

Even that is not all. Rich Turks of over fifty are obliged, by this extraordinary bill, to take a second wife, as an alternative to supporting one or more orphans.

It has been proved that milk keeps sweet for quite a long time if it is exposed to a red light. During the brighter months of the year it is an excellent plan to tie red paper round the bottles in which milk is kept. If jugs are used a cap of red paper can be put over the top to screen the contents from the strong white light. Even in close, staid weather it will be found that milk will not turn sour readily when treated in this way.

"Fever Girl" Shows Astonishing Pluck.

MILWAUKEE, May 17.—To live through two years of fever, running from 107 to 116—

To live two years without a mouthful of food or a glass of water—

To be kept alive two years by forced liquid feeding—

To undergo ten operations.

That takes grit.

And it is plenty of grit that Anna Manthle, 25, has here with her aged mother at the home of her brother, Edward Manthle, has.

"No, indeed I'm not going to die—not yet awhile," said Anna when seen in her little bedroom where she sat propped up on seven pillows—to make breathing easier.

BETTER, SHE THINKS.

"You see I've stuck it out this far, and I really believe I'm a little improved because the fever has gone down in the last few weeks, so why should I give up now?"

"Oh, yes, I've been ready to die several times, but each time I pulled through. I've made my peace with God and am prepared. But I do want to get well. So I just determine to live on, and I do."

Anna has her brown eyes that stand out startlingly against the pallor of her skin. She continually has a cold compress or an ice pack on her head to keep the fever down.

Lying on her bed, not able to move from one side to the other, she keeps in touch with the outside world through newspapers and her many friends.

With wonderful clarity of memory Anna tells of the oncoming of illness.

She was a girl of 17, working in a town store as a clerk, when she was first taken ill, she said, though she had never been strong.

FIRST OPERATION.

Then followed an operation and but little improvement. Then came another operation and another and another. This continued up to two years ago when she suddenly grew worse and took to her bed.

Her fever mounted rapidly and

Quebec Premier Warns Public Against Buying Stock in Labrador or Mining Companies

Have Labrador Mining Companies Good Title?

Under the above caption a Montreal newspaper in its financial column states Quebec Province is not to give up its claim to Labrador without a fight, according to a statement credited to Premier Taschereau. The Premier warned the public against buying stock in companies claiming to have mining concessions on the Labrador coast. These concessions have been given by the Newfoundland Government. Quebec claims ownership of Labrador for Canada. Newfoundland at present exercises jurisdiction on the coast. How far back the coast line goes is a question for the Privy Council to decide this summer, and the inference of the Quebec Premier's remarks, is that the concessions granted by Newfoundland will be affected by the Privy Council's judgment.

Canada to Test Out Gold Fields of Labrador.

MINING DEPARTMENT OF MINES ARRANGES TO SEND EXPEDITION.

Montreal.—The question of ownership and the gold possibilities of the Labrador coast has been the subject of the decision, understood to have been reached by the Department of the Interior, to send a party of geologists into the country this summer. It is stated in a recent issue of The Montreal Post, Quebec and Newfoundland are playing the leading roles in the drama of Labrador ownership. Quebec, because it has governed and policed Labrador for a number of years back; Quebec, because of a traditional belief that Labrador is theirs. Government sources at Ottawa, questioned as to this matter of ownership, advised that it is generally accepted that Newfoundland owns the coast of Labrador through an arrangement made long since that gave the coastal fishing rights and the implied ownership of the coast to Newfoundland. The direct issue hinges, therefore, on how far the coast may be said to extend inland, and here Quebec enters the scene. It has been understood that Newfoundland owns from the main watersheds to the sea, though this understanding doubtless will find itself contested by Quebec. With the matter of ownership uncertain, it is obvious that the three gold mining companies that have holdings in Labrador leased from the Newfoundland Government have a very precarious title to their lands.

Grand Falls Catholic Cadet Corps.

The public of Newfoundland may be interested in the Brigade movements that are now maturing in Grand Falls. There is a branch of the C.C.B. which has been growing steadily in size and smartness during the past eighteen months; the Methodist Church has a troop of Boy Scouts and the Catholic Cadet Corps has just made its first official appearance in a church parade on Sunday last, May 27th.

Rumour has it that there is a possibility of still another Brigade being established here, so that between them all there will be ample opportunity for widespread physical development of the boys and young men. Last winter the hockey schedule was composed of Brigade teams, and for the football and baseball fixtures for the coming summer the greater number of teams are Brigades; we are looking forward to a very successful season, and feel confident that a two-fold benefit will be felt. There will be greater interest in athletics, keener competition and rivalry with a better understanding of sportsmanship, and the various Brigade movements will undoubtedly derive more encouragement, even now there is certainly evident a note of enthusiasm, which if maintained, will have lasting effect.

The Catholic Cadet Corps was organized last August and immediately evoked a response that was most gratifying in its spontaneity. Almost at once there were enlistments in excess of what could be handled with the means prepared, and a generous proportion of ex-service men and officers were amongst the first-comers. The O.C. is Lt. M. Nugent, of "Ours," his Adj. is Capt. P. A. Edwards, who will no doubt be recognized as an old Cadet of St. John's, where he held the rank of Bat. Sergeant-Major. The other officers are Lieutenants, P. Connors, Jas. Delaney, D. Baird, S. Foran and A. Crowley, all of whom are from the Newfoundland Regt. In addition there is Sergeant-Major M. Foran and Sergeant T. Griffin.

The governing body is Rev. W. Finn, Chairman, Major G. M. Emerson, Secretary, and Messrs. Jas. H. Judge and Jos. Edwards.

Sunday, May 27th, was set for the first Church Parade and although a little cool, was a good day for marching. Everyone was prepared for a good showing but it was beyond doubt that a feeling of surprise was general. For not one did the Brigades acquit themselves well as a boy's brigade, but their soldierly bearing and excellent discipline would have been a credit to professionals, while their marching was perfect. The impression created at the time was really too deep to be fully realized at once, and, contrary to the usual way of these things, waxed stronger on further consideration.

Public appreciation seemed to grow and grow with each commendation until at last it reached a point when it was apparently beyond the power of mere words. A standard has been set. The Brigade has already justified its formation. Judicious encouragement will lead to still greater things, the difficulties are still with us, but the ideal is nearer. This splendid exhibition was not done with enthusiasm alone, it meant hard work, and a lot of hard work. Credit cannot be too generous to those who give so freely and so devotedly. The officers and non-commissioned officers deserve the highest praise for their success, the boys have earned a reputation that will be hard to beat, and Major Emerson, to whose efforts the organization and financial launching of the Brigades are mainly due, has achieved a success that will not be soon forgotten.

After this parade the following promotions were read:—Pte. J. Winslow, to be Drum Sergeant; Lance Corporal, Jas. Nugent, P. Mullenway, A. Shallow, P. Byrne, to be Corporals; Acting Lance Corporal, Jas. Ryan, and Pte. McCormack to be acting Corporals, and Ptes. G. Byrne, T. Blackmore and Jas. Hannaford to be Lance Corporals.

The following Good Conduct Stripes were awarded, Pte. Jno. Stapleton and Drummer Jno. Kelly.

The uniforms were made by the Nfld. Clothing Factory and are smart and effective looking. The number of rifles at present in thirty and one hundred and twenty are expected on the first boat from England.

It goes without saying that the future of the Catholic Cadet Corps in Grand Falls, but whatever success crowns their efforts, it will not be greater than we wish them.

Red stains, etc., discolor it. First it forms cloudy coats. Then it turns on film. That's why teeth look dingy.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid.

It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That's why tooth troubles were almost universal.

Germs breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea, now so alarmingly common.

So dental science sought for film combatants, and eventually found two. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Thus a new type tooth paste was created, based

That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. Now it has come into world-wide use, largely by dental advice.

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digester in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Those are vital tooth protectors. Soapy tooth pastes weaken them. That's one reason why they failed. Pepsodent multiplies their power.

GETTING IN YOUR OWN WAY.
Do you get in your own way? Some people do just that. They are so eager to get something they want that they get in their own way and stumble over themselves and then fall to get it.

Take sleep, for instance. There is nothing more fatal to getting sleep than wanting it too much and trying too hard to get it. Nothing will keep anyone awake more unprofitably than saying to oneself: "I must get to sleep. If I don't I never shall be able to do my work to-morrow. I wonder what time it is now." (Business of consulting radium wrist watch, or worse still, snapping on a light and looking at clock.) "Oh, dear, here it is almost half-past twelve. I must get to sleep before the clock strikes one."

To Be Popular.
Or, again, take the matter of pleasing other people. If you try too hard to please you are almost sure to defeat your own end. It is all right to want to please, to want (like all human beings) to be popular. It is even better, for your purposes, to be willing to make some sacrifice for the sake of pleasing, to make some definite study of what helps to make friends and what keeps friends away. But if you get your heart too much bent on being popular, if you strain too hard, the result of the strain will show itself in your manner—you won't be natural, you won't be relaxed, you won't be yourself, and you will find it hard to please.

Scientists to Explore
"GARDEN OF EDEN."

PEKING—Believing that the Garden of Eden existed at one time in the land where the desolate Gobi desert is to-day, the third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, under leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews, has left Peking to explore the so-called "gold mine of fossils." Armed with implements ranging from picks and shovels to the most delicate of scientific instruments and with supplies sufficient to last the big exploring party for at least six months, the expedition is regarded as the best equipped that has so far penetrated the Mongolian wilderness. The six American scientists in the party expect to travel most of the way in automobiles. They will be supported by a caravan of 75 camels. Their plan is to explore what their confident believe was once the Garden of Eden, the tropical valley in which the first man and his ancestors reamed many thousands of years ago. It is also believed that the party may discover the remains of an ancient form of civilization antedating that of the Egyptian pharaohs, about which so much data has been obtained as a result of the exploration of Tutankhamen's tomb. Having spent one summer in reconnaissance, during which they proved to their own satisfaction at least that the theory which brought them to Asia was correct, the members of the expedition feel that they will be very lucky if they do not find this summer fossil remains of the earliest forms of human life. A theory was conceived a few years ago by Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, President of the American Museum, that the source from which the world's animal life spread was somewhere in Central Asia. Bones discovered and preserved by scientists showed the same forms of prehistoric animals and reptiles—mastodon, woolly rhinoceros, dinosaur rursall monsters of ages long past—existed both in America and in Europe. It was probable that they have a common home in Central Asia and from there wandered across a land barrier that once connected Alaska and the Asian continent. Prior to the expedition last summer Prof. Osborn's theory was established on the ground that no fossils had been found in Mongolia, the part of Asia designated as the probable source of animal life. The expedition, however, supported the theory because vast fossil deposits were discovered. This year's expedition plans to make a more thorough exploration of the territory than has ever been attempted before. One of the most interesting "finds" last year was that of the bones of a Baluchitherium, probably the biggest land animal the remains of which have not yet been found. This gigantic animal is believed to have been fairly common in Asia four or five million years ago.

Says Women Are to Blame.

New York, May 31.—(By Canadian Press).—That women were responsible for the passing of the prohibition law and consequently are to blame for the enormous increase in crime which has had clared, followed in its wake and that therefore it is up to them to right matters, is the conviction of B. Ogden Chisolm, of the Executive Board of the New York Prison Association. "If arrests for violation of prohibition laws increase at the present rate," he declared, "we will have to build a wall around the United States and put everybody in prison. When they are converted we will have no more prohibition."

Wicked women make attractive "partners" for the summer heat.

Keeping Britain's Balance.

UNFAMILIAR SOURCES OF REVENUE.

How do we pay our way as a nation? "By the proceeds of the income-tax, the duties on beer and spirits, and Customs dues," replies the average man. He does not realize the extraordinary variety of rivers and brooks and rivulets by which the stream of money flows into the National Exchequer. Over half a million a year comes as a dividend from our shares in the Suez Canal, and well over £100,000 from the dividends paid us by the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. We get a few pounds from cabbage-grown on convict prison farms and a thousand or two from Brompton Cemetery burial fees.

Wrecks and Derelicts.
Also, we get a few hundreds from the sale of wrecks and derelicts that drive ashore around our coasts, and half a million or more from seagoing ships (duty) on the Mint's silver purchased for coinage.

The sale of photographs in the National Gallery brings in a few hundreds more, as do remittances of "Conscience Money" to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Tower of London contributes a few bags of small silver (its gate-money profits), and many thousands come in in the form of Colonial defence contributions.

The Mint sends in a few £5 notes as "fees on trial of diet," an elusive phenomenon conjuring up visions of portly officials paying something to the nation for the privilege of tasting really exquisite Government cookery. The diet in question, however, is a highly technical term, comprising metal scraped or cut from gold and silver plate, assayed daily at the Mint and retained for testing.

A more welcome contribution from the Mint is the several hundreds of thousands of pounds a year profit from bronze coinage. The bulk of a thousand pounds is derived from the Mint's floor sweepings of silver and gold.

PILLS.

Before I had the Spanish flu, that worst of modern ills, I used to go through the long year through and never call for pills. I scoffed at people who would blow their coin for such a fake, who to the pharmacist would go whenever they had an ache. But when the flu had disappeared it left me full of pain, and I had chilblains in my beard and fantods in my brain. And of the doctor I would beg relief from anguish dire; he gave me pills to heal my leg, and squelch my inward fire. He saw that I was but a wreck, containing many woes, and gave me pills to soothe my neck, and pills to bleach my nose. The habit fastened on me then, as habits fire will do, and now I spend my iron pen for pills of every hue. And some of them have sugar coats, and some of them are bare, and some are good for aching throats, and some for falling hair. And some are sour and some are sweet, some green, some pink, some red; I take a dozen when I eat, and when I go to bed. My thoughts were once of things sublime, of birds, and babbling rills, but now I'm thinking all the time of new designs in pills. I used to talk of books and art and rainbows o'er the hills, but now I wander in the mart and price the latest pills. I'm taking piebald pills and pink, and pills of dappled gray, and still my health is on the blink. I'm getting worse each day.

Liquor to be Thrown into the Sea From Liners.

Sir Ashley Sparks, a director of the Cunard Steamship Line, and head of that line in the United States, accompanied by Lady Sparks, arrived in New York from Southampton on the Aquitania. On his arrival he discussed the recent action of the U.S. Supreme Court in sustaining that part of the Daugherty ruling which stipulated that foreign ships could not legally enter American ports if they carried liquor, sealed or unsealed, on board. He made it plain that the Cunard Line would live up strictly to the letter of the law. Here summarized is the attitude of the Cunard Line so far as this matter is concerned, according to Sir Ashley Sparks:

"With the highest court having ruled on the question, the matter now becomes one for international discussion. It is a matter between your Government and mine.

"We are going to live up to the letter of the law. The people on the other side think it a gross violation of rights, however. The Supreme Court was the last resort within the nation. Now it becomes an affair between your country and mine—an affair between foreign Governments and the United States. The cure is the passage by Congress of a new law.

"Cunard Line Boats headed westward will carry a supply of liquors estimated as sufficient to fill the needs of passengers until the three-mile limit has been reached off the American shores. If the stewards have been too generous in their estimates, the remaining liquors will be thrown overboard when the three-mile limit is reached.

Nothing Could Keep This Boy Down.

In Poverty, forced as a Child to sell matches and Newspapers on the Streets, for six years in a badly run Orphan Asylum, Aaron Sapiro lived to reorganize the Asylum, and to fight His way to Leadership of the Greatest Agricultural movement of Present Times.

By MERLE CROWELL, in the American Magazine.

It would get up at half past five in the morning and sell newspapers on the street until school time. At school, we would rush for loads of matches and bring from house to house and walk out as far as we could and back to the dormitory—a distance of six or eight blocks—before our goods were sold.

At night so tired that I could not sleep, I would come outside the house for a few minutes to get some fresh air. I remember the fear we had that I did not think I could go through, but I have and sweet and open only did she have to protect us, but we were as well as we were simply frightened to go once in a while she would cry over us, and had to work all the time at school, and couldn't go to the way the other children gave us more love than all the rest of the children.

My father's little hand had been, and that threw an extra weight on me. We were not allowed to work, but we could from our own hands.

our coats—which is the modern adaptation of the ancient practice of rendering garments. Phil and I both ran away and when they caught us they had a terrible time trying to persuade us to submit to the mutilation of our new clothes.

"The funeral gave us our first carriage drive—another wonderful event. And after it was over a custom required that we stay at home for a mourning period of seven days. The neighbours brought us food, and we had the blessed privilege of eating all we wanted.

"When father was brought home dead there was less than twenty cents in the house—and seven children—the youngest a babe in arms. Now the burden of supporting the family fell even more heavily on Phil and me. At once we doubled our daily stock of papers and sold them to the last one. We had to, because we couldn't return them and get our money back if there were any left over. We would start in at six in the morning, and at eight-thirty Phil would go to school, because he was the elder and had a more immediate prospect of needing education. Passing by corner, he would pass over to me what papers he had left, and I would stick on the street until I had sold them all. Sometimes I wouldn't get to school until after eleven o'clock.

"Before long my teacher got very indignant at my tardiness and would not accept my excuses. So she reported me to the principal of the school, who was Edwin Maricham, the poet. Mr. Maricham called me into his office, and extracted from me the whole story. Then the dear old man sent me back with a note to the effect that I could come late whenever I wanted to, and he would trust me not to arrive a minute later than was necessary. Moreover, he assigned a teacher to spend each noon hour helping me, so that I could make up for the work I had missed in my classes.

"Phil and I managed to make about fifty dollars a month, and the whole family lived on this amount, supplemented by such money as mother earned by hemming towels for the linen department of one of the large stores. She got a few cents a dozen for this work, and usually she would sew late after we children were sound asleep. I remember one morning when we were particularly hard pressed, I got up earlier than usual to go for my papers and found her still sitting in her chair, with the first slant rays of sunshine setting off the blue circles under her weary eyes. She had been working the livelong night!

"In the meantime, the constant hard work was telling on Phil and me. I was much underfed and not any too well. In addition to selling papers I had to study hard to keep up in school. 'You boys are going to kill yourselves,' mother would say with tears in her eyes. And she worried more and more about us. Moreover, she was fearful that we would learn bad habits from mingling with the tough boys on the streets. In the meantime she took a step that almost broke her heart. She went to San Francisco and made arrangements with an orphan asylum to take four out of the seven children. So Phil and myself, one sister and a brother, who has since died, went to the institution. Mother figured she could support the other three youngsters by taking in more towels than ever.

"I was ten years old when I went to the orphanage, and I stayed there six years. Those years are seared into my very soul. I was no longer Aaron Sapiro; I was 'Number 58'—a puppet in a cold, unfeeling system that tended to squeeze the joy of living and the individuality out of my child. They fed us enough, such as the food was, but if someone could have come in to give us an occasional good-night kiss, or speak a kind word now and then, it would have meant more to us than all the food in the world.

"Dressed in regulation uniforms that stamped us as 'charity children,' we started off for school every morning with a slice of bread and an apple in a tin can on which our number was stamped. That was our lunch. The other children could tell as far as they could see us that we were orphan waifs, and they used to taunt us with the fact. After a while we developed the habit of eating our meager lunches after we had gone a few blocks and hiding the cans under a building.

until we came back at night. Before noon we were hungry, of course, and we went hungry the rest of the day. Even that substitute, however, didn't do much, if any, good.

"The food at the orphanage was always the same for every day in the week. We could tell on January first what we were going to have for every meal of every day in the year. We knew that for dinner on Sunday we would have veal, which was frequently had, that on Thursday night we would have roast of beef, which was usually pretty good; and that on Friday we would have fish, which more often than not, was stale and unpalatable.

"The bowls and cups were so thick that one could drop them out of a window onto the cement walk, and they wouldn't break. I know—because I have tried it. The dining-room was dark, and the long board tables, around each of which twenty-five boys or girls would be crowded, were covered with red cotton tablecloths—the kind that can be used a long time without showing too noticeably the dirt and stains.

"But the great, thick cups had one saving grace: Every evening those of us whose actions during the day had not suited our custodians would be called into the office and whipped on the hands with rattan switches. As soon as one of us came out of the office, with his hands puffed and red and smarting, he made a bee line for the dining-room and soothed the sting by clasping tightly the cool cups. We had an unwritten law that no one should block the narrow passageway from the office to the dining-room between seven and eight o'clock. A kid didn't have to do much to get a whipping, and I was one of those frequently singled out. I have seen as many as seven or eight fellows in the dining-room at a time, all blinking back the tears as we held the cups between our bruised hands.

"The orphanage had the most extraordinary system of bathing I ever heard of. The boys always took their weekly bath on the same night in a big tank that would hold about twenty at a time. A delegation of the biggest boys would enter the tank first and be scrubbed off with soap and a rough brush. Then part of the water would be let out, and the group of boys next in size would be herded in. I belonged to the last and smallest group, and we had to wash in the water that all the others had bathed in.

"We were never given a physical examination. Some of the fellows had running sores; many of them were tubercular; and nearly all had bad teeth. Nobody seemed to care. The whole system was a dull routine, without a touch of life or color.

"The fighting that Phil and I had done as newsboys stood us in good stead, for the bigger boys were always picking on the smaller ones. The first night I was there an oversized bully thrashed the life out of me because I wouldn't pull off his stockings. He left me all in a heap—but he had to take off his own socks! A few experiences like this gave me an idea that resulted in my first experiment at co-operative organization.

"I got all the smaller boys together and outlined my plan. We took a solemn vow in the dark of the moon that the first time one of the bigger boys started to pick on one of us we would all pitch into him together. We drew up an agreement on paper, picked our thumbs with pins, squeezed out the blood and signed our names with it—in accordance with the procedure followed in a pirate boat I had been reading. We called ourselves 'Aaron's Gang' or 'The Bidding Roses.' It was a darn fool name, and I can't remember whether I was responsible for it or not.

"The very next day one of the big fellows took an awful wallop at one of our band—an inoffensive little duck whom we called 'Stoek.' A moment later thirteen infuriated 'Rosebuds' grabbed each arm; two or three clung to his legs; and the rest of us proceeded to punch the living daylight out of him. After a few experiences like this we enjoyed a welcome immunity.

Nfld. Fishermen Get Roumanian Interest.

Montreal.—The recent arrangement made by Roumania to pay interest on its foreign debts is of substantial benefit to the Dominion of Newfoundland as well as to Canada. During recent years Roumania has been a large purchaser of Newfoundland codfish, and these purchases were paid for in bonds. When these bonds depreciated in value and Roumania seemed indifferent about its obligations, many of the Newfoundland holders of these bonds considered them a total loss. Advice has been received in St. John's, however, that Roumania has arranged to pay this month four per cent. interest upon the bonds, and several million dollars' worth held in Newfoundland are thus going to bring some return to their holders.—Financial Post.

When you are "waiting around again" or at functions where full dress is usually worn, don't you feel out of place with a jacket on? Now is the time to leave your order for Full Dress or Tuxedo. Our prices for these Suits are remarkably reasonable. For special parades, or social calls, we can give you something within your means in a Prince Albert, or Morning Coat. We specialize in these garments.
