A FRELING OF DESPONDENCY.

MIDNIGHT.—The president's condition causes a feeling of despondency, and the general situation warrants grave apprehension. The probabilities are that some time will elapse before the president will show substantial improvement. During the past forty-eight hours he has made no progress towards recovery, and for the past twenty four hours there has been a sight but perceptible loss of strength. His condition is such as to put in question his ability to rally from the present exhaustion.

The Burnside Obsequies.

Providence, Sept. 16.—Burnside's remains were escorted to the church to-day, by the military, members of the state and city government and a large number of citizens. Buildings on the line of march were draped, minute guns were fired and bells telled. After service the procession was joined by members of congress and many local associations. The remains were conveyed to Swan Point cemetery and deposited in the family plot with military honors. Business was generally suspended out of respect to the deceased.

MR. BLAKE'S ORATORY.

It must be indeed gratifying to those who desire to elevate the tone of political discussion in Canada to find such a large sec tion of the ministerial press casting aside ries to direct their attention to their the acerbities of party spite, and busying themselves in a discussion of the literary character of Mr. Blake's recent speeches It is complimentary, too, to Mr. Blake > of him is that he is "no orator." good. They will teach aspiring politicians he must be an "orator."

As a matter of fact, we have only one "orator" in Canada—his name is Tupper. The flow of his language is as abundant, as ceaseless, as vehement and as majestic as Niagara: he possesses all the animation he could have spoken of the syndicate contract as the "crown of the pedestal" of Sir John Macdonald's public life ? No, Mr. Blake is no such orator. He prefers to resemble those whom the world in its folly has designated with that great title in the past, whose characteristics were a lofty tone, a symmetrical arrangement of ideas, clearness and accuracy of reasoning. purity and appropriateness of diction—the right words in the right place-and a cumuhorse, foot and artillery, by Hamilton in These, and many more of the traits of what the matter of railway connection with the history calls oratory, Mr. Blake possesses Wellington, Grey and Bruce country must in greater perfection than any other man be somewhat humiliating to the residents of in Canada. But he lacks Tupperian bomthis city. At the first, when the rival lines bast, which is commonly known among -the Wellington, Grey and Bruce and the Canadian Tory editors as oratory. Questionable Work of the Tory Press. Speaking at the dinner given him at Chatham, N. B., Mr. Blake said: While referring to the reception he had met with during his present tour, he would take ochasion to say that he had been very kindly treated by his political opponents—and it was very right that we should differ in regard to pablic questions without disagreeing in personal matters—but, though he had not mentioned the matter before, he must was very right that we should differ in regard to pablic questions without disagreeing in personal matters—but, though he had not mentioned the matter before, he must except the Tory press. It had made very little effort to tell the truth concerning the facts and incidents of his trip. It had included in belittling the meetings he had held to a most unusual degree, and in misrepresentations of almost everything that prevent uttered, and this is what the Times does. The only peint it makes against us, and to this we plead guilty, is that we prefer to judge of the provincial questions now at issue by the principle of utility rather than by mere sentiment. The World has never yet regarded Upper Canada college as "a relic of a barbarous age that "ought to be destroyed." But The World has been reading the signs of the times, and sees that sooner or later the province will insist either on the abolition or the re-divided in opinion as to the merits of the land bill. Some believe that it will work well and largely improve the condition of the tenantry. Others, who view it with less favor, are willing to give it a fair trial. A third party wilfully close their eyes to its merits, and fear it because it may defeat their own objects. They desire above all things the legislative independence of Ireland, and the abolition of landlordism. They are agitating for these changes with great earnestness; they can see no other way to peace and prosperity for the country.

But there is a large class who care less for political changes than for just laws whose main object in life is to succeed in the minister to Athens in 1872, while minister to Berlin, is told by Mr. John M. Francis, who was minister to Greece at the minister to Berlin, is told by Mr. John M. Francis, who was minister to Greece at the time. The two visited the Acropolis by mononlight, and Mr. Francis thus describes the effect produced upon his companion: "Standing in the Parthenon, on the spot where the statue of Minerva in ivory and gold onee had its location, but where only the platform now remains, Mr. Bancroft, with uncovered head and eyes slightly upraised, repeated with spontaneous inspiration a magnificent passage from Homer. The scene was impressive. The moon-light flooding those ancient ruins and gilding the figure of that snowy-bearded pilgrim from our occidental shores, august with official honors, past and present, of a great republic, but more august as a citizen of high rank in the impersandle republic of letters. Whole centure of high achievement and aspiration and prospects, the state. n life is to succeed in sense. word like that."

Ah, little Blanche, it is not the well-considered sentence that does all the harm in this world—it is the idle word!

"Well, after all," said Blanche demurely, "all I wanted was somebody to love and care for, and—""

"And I shall do very well in that capa-"Such a charming day we have had, Mrs. Traine," said Blanche, as she came in smiling and radiant, as if the worm remorse was not gnawing at her heart.

"Yes," said the blooming matron, who was reading in an easy-chair under the shadow of the vines. "But what sent Mr. Evering away in such a hurry?"

A dreary comfort that for a girl of nineteen summers.

She rang the bell with an impatient jet.

"Are there any letters, Sanderson?"

"One, ma'am; it came by the evening post, about five minutes ago."

"Light the gas, then, and give it to me."

Blanche sat down by the fire and opened the letter, suppressing a yawn.

"Black-edged—and black-sealed! So poor Mrs. Marchmont has gone at last.

If was from the executors of Miss Penroy's distant cousin, formally and briefly announcing her death, which had taken place in one of the West India islands some months since, but of which the "melancholy news," as the letter ran, had only just been received, I was not entirely unexpected, as Mrs. Marchmont had been for some years slowly fading out of the world, a victim to hereditary consumption.

"Leaving one child, a son," slowly repeated Blanche, leaning her cheek on her hand and looking down into the fiery quive of the white-hot coals. "Poor little fellow! he must feel nearly as desolate as I do. Only I have one advantage—I have at thrown penniless and alone on his own resources, for, if I remember aright, Mrs. Marchmont forfeited all the wealth of her first marriage by her second alliance with the previty-stricken lawyer, whose death the polyvery stricken lawyer, whose death least to the child, and it because the bounds of the content of the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the best removed at might and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crysing with the exeruciating pain of cutting the polythance of the white-hot coals. "You are not Mrs. Marchmont's son."
"Have I not the right?"
"Be it so, Blanche," he said, in a voice that betrayed how deep the arrow rankled in his bosom. "I give up the right now and henceforward."

Blanche was startled. She would have said more but Walter Birmingham was advancing toward her, and when next she had leisure te look round, Gilbert was gone from her side.
"What have I done!" she thought in dismay. "I'll see him this evening and coax him into good humor once more. He surely can't be vexed with me for an idle word like that."
"You are not Mrs. Marchmont's son."
"I' am—by her first marriage. And although I am by no means the penniless infant you seemed to suppose, as all my father's wealth comes to me, I am quite willing to be adopted—particularly as you are not Mrs. Marchmont's son."

Blanche struggled with team and laught ter, uncertain which would best express her feeling, but Gilbert Evering drew her tenderly toward him.

"If you adopt me, dearest, it must be for life. Nay, do not hesitate—our happiness has already been too much at the mercy of trifles. You will not retract your offer?"

"Well, after all," said Blanche demurely. "You are not Mrs. Marchmont's son

"Well, after all," said Blanche demurely, city, eh?"
And Sanderson, who had been listening earnestly at at the door, crept down stairs to inform Mrs. Brown that "they were going to have a new master!" An Alleged Cure for Smallpox.

Evering away in such a hurry?"

"Sent him away?"

"Yes, by the evening train. He came home, packed his things, and drove away as if there was not a moment to lose. I am very sorry we shall miss him so much."

Blanche went alory upstairs and sat down by her sindow, looking out at the purple glow of the evening landscape as if it were a featureless blank. So he was really gone away; and by her own folly she had lost the priceless treasure of Gilbert Evering's love.

"And I cannot even write to him, for I do not know his address," she thought, with clasped hands and tearless eyes. "Well, it is my own fault, and I must abide the consequences as best I may."

So Blanche Penroy went home from the gay, fashionable place a sadder and wiver woman, and the November mists drooping o'er the brick and mortar wilderness of her city home had never seemed half so dreary to her as they did now.

"I suppose I shall be an old maid," thought Blanche, walking up and down in the fire-lit darkness of her room, her dimpled hands clasped behind her waist. "I never care for anyone as I cared for—for Gilbert; and I dare say I shall keep a cat and grow fond of green peas. Ah, well-aday! life cannot last forever."

INSURANCE

ITEMS.

"THE ETNA" is the name of a quarterly journal new in its thirteents year, published in the interest of life and endowment insurance by the undersigned. A copy will be mailed free of expense, to any one applying for it. From the last number we give a few brief extracts:

ONE OF MANY.—The importance of keeping up policies of life insurance is illustrated forcibly in the case of N. Gobbler, of Plantagenet, One. He took out a policy of $1,000 in the ATNA LIFE. Dec. 16, 1878, When the second premium became due, (Dec. 15, 1889) he had decided not to continue it, believing his prospects for a long life better than the average. The agent used every available argument to have him continue, but without effect. In sixteen days from the lapse of his insurance policy he was killed while felding trees for his employer. His death was nearly instantaneous. By his refusal to pay the Company $19.27, he leaves his family in embarrassed circumstances, in which a thousand dollars would have been a fortune.

MANUFERD AUNA ENDOWMENTS.—The ETNA LIFE is disbursing to its

MATURED ATMA EXPONMENTS.—The ATMA LIFE is distursing to its trons-holders of matured endowments—an average of over two thousand liars per day. The satisfactory results given by the Company are handsomely knowledged in the following letters, to which we invite the attention of our acknowledged in the fellowing letters, to which we invite the attention of our readers.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE FORT EDWARD, N. T., May 28, 1881.

Dear Sir: I deaire to acknowledge with my heartiest tranks the handsome treatment I have received from your neble lafe. Company, the AEINA of Hartford, Conn. The returns for my annual payments received from you last year, and this, on the maturity of my two endowment policies, have more than met my expectations. You have paid me a good interest for all the moneys I have put into your hands: you kept my life insured for the ten years to the full amount of the policies; and now, when I need it most, you pay me the full sum in a lump. I have never made any investment that pleased me more.

Yours very truly,

IPSWORD, MASS, APTIL 24, 1881.

Dear Sir: I have this day received payment of my ten-year endowment policy which I took out in the AEINA. On this policy I paid to the company $3.583.98, and received in return, $4.191.43, leaving a balance as interest on my investment of $632.85. Another policy of $902.00 failing due at the same time, has also been promptly paid. I am so well satisfied with my investment that I have taken out another policy for $5,000.00. Yours truly, (AEO, H. GZ EEN.)

have taken out another policy for $5,000,00. Yours truly. GEO. H. G? EEN.

H. STILSON, General Agent. Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Sir. In May 1866. I insured with your company on a fifteen year endowment plan. I have to day the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of a check for $2,537.07 in payment of my policy. I have pake in the company, $2,217.27, and received in return the amount stated above. It addition to having had insurance for the last fifteen years. I have receipt to interest on my investment $319.30, which satisfies me, that my money has to the element of the company. JAMILS N. HOWLE.

COULD DO BETTER. A centleman in Lake Councy, Ohio, was a few years ago insured in the ETNA LIFE for $10,000. He died in April hast, and his executor found among his papers the policy above referred to, and notified the Company, confidently expecting that there was due the family the above sum. Imagine their feelings when informed that the pelicy was not in force because the incured concluded a few years since that he "could do better with his house. Here is what it says; Judge Mackenzie is everlastingly talking about the "disgraceful" building called the court house, and has not unfrequently stated it was the worst in the province, if not in the Dominion. Constantly repeating the assertion has led the old man to believe in its truthfulness; but the facts are against in thin, and quite the reverse of his tri-annual fullminations. With two or three exceptions there are few court houses in Ontario to be compared with the one in this county, either for convenience or accommodation; and it is not creditable to Mr. Mackenzie's good sense to make such sweeping assertions as is contained in his address this week to the grand jury. * * The county council are representative men, and if Judge Mackenzie had to get his place by a vote of the electors annually, his judgeship occupation would leave him rather suddenly when presenting himself for the ratification of his official connecion.
