PENNY A WORD CABLES FAIR SETTLEMENT

Henniker Heaton's Solution of Problem Between Government and Companies

PAYING FOR TOO MUCH

Says Abandoned Cables, Superfluous Cables, Watered Stock and Plundering and Blundering of the Past Are Included in the Charges

(Canadian Press)

London, Sept. 10.—Sir J. Henniker Heaton speaks in the highest terms in praise of Hon. L. P. Pelletier for the determination with which he sought here for settlement of the cable rates.

The British government for some reason or other, does not see its way to adopt the proposal, but instead has joined in making overtures to the companies, in consequence of which the three-penny deferred telegram rate has been agreed upon.

Mr. Pelletier pressed for more signifi- cantly, he will gain the point, very soon.

To show the absurdity of the so-called deferred messages, Sir Henniker pointed out that the carrying capacity of cables to America was 250,000,000 words per annum and only 25,000,000 words were sent. It was true there was a great rush of messages during a few hours every day, but one of the eleven lines to the United States and Canada should be placed at the disposal of the non-code or non-urgent messages.

Delay should never exceed a few hours. If all the cables of the world were destroyed tomorrow, they would be reconstructed at a third of the cost. We were paying for abandoned cables, superfluous cables, watered stock, and all the plundering and blundering of the past.

Mr. Pelletier is a fair settlement with the cable companies would come to the establishment of penny a word telegrams, with a minimum of one penny per message throughout the world. With the active support of the British empire League, his dream would be realized in less than ten years.

CONSIDER EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN TO COVER CONFERENCE TERRITORY

Methodist District Meetings Opened Here This Morning—Visiting Clergymen

A meeting of the St. John district of the New Brunswick and P. E. Island Methodist Conference is being held today in the school room of Portland Methodist church, and is quite well attended.

Rev. Neil MacLachlan of Fredericton, president of the conference, arrived in the city at noon. Concerning the district meeting he said that there was a probability that the matter of conducting an evangelistic campaign simultaneously throughout the territory included in the conference would probably be one of the matters to occupy the attention of the clergymen. Financial matters would also be discussed and reports received.

Besides the local Methodist clergymen the following from outside the city are in attendance:—Rev. Messrs. J. S. Gregg, Waldford; H. S. Young, Springfield; G. W. Tilly, St. Martin; J. F. Estey, Kingston; H. S. Somers, New Jerusalem, and H. C. Wright, Hampton.

THE PATIENTS IN HOSPITAL FOR ANIMALS

"Who Cares?" "Three Cheers For The King," Says The Sick Parrot

DOG SWALLOWED HAT PIN

Another Case is of a Parakeet That Went Without Water for Three Years—London's Infirmary For Birds and Beasts

(Times Special Correspondence.)
London, Aug. 31.—"Who cares?" demanded a large grey parrot, yesterday, waking up suddenly when a visitor halted in front of its cage. "Who cares?" it repeated, truculently. "Kiss your master! Kiss your master! Three cheers for the king! Who cares?"

As it spoke, this reckless bird deftly pulled out one of its own tail feathers, and tossed it carelessly on the floor of its cage. It is because of this propensity to deposit itself its plumage that the parrot, which comes from the West Coast of Africa, is now an inmate of the Animals' Hospital in Belgrave Road, S. W., which is carried on by the "Dumb Friends' League," and which is one of the most interesting places of its kind going, and nearly 10,000 animal patients last year—and it had to deal with some uncommonly funny cases.

Birds bulk largely among them—parrots especially. Most of them, like our West African friend, are "in" for feather-picking, the cure for which consists in keeping Polly on a special diet. In spite of being ill, however, the parrot is a bit of a show for the king from moon until dewy eve. Most of these silling parrots are laid up as the result of being allowed by their humble owners to gorge on all sorts of things. One bird from the Amazon arrived at the hospital almost in a state of starvation and its owner's explanation was: "It do so love hot roast pork, and my husband he see on Sunday in the market, and I have as much as it likes, but I thought it was give too much, and it has been like this all night."

An unfortunate green parakeet was brought in. It had been kept without water for three days, and its only means of getting water at the hospital it is generally that it made itself sick, so the "nurses" had to accustom it gradually to a few spoonfuls at a time. "I had a job," said the matron, "to persuade the woman who owned it, when it went home, that she might as well give the poor thing some of water morning and night."

All the animals brought to the hospital are the property of poor folk, and a big percentage of them are suffering through the ignorance of their owners. No end of lame horses are brought in, and it was discovered, a while ago, that many of the folk who owned them begged or begged slightly worn shoes, which, being mostly cast by carriage horses, were not suitable for a different animal. In one case, a false idea of economy, the horse's feet were cut down to fit the shoes. The ingenious person who did this, and who had a new set of shoes cut too much, and a good farrier cut into profits.

Then there was a case where a brought a chestnut cob in for treatment, the animal's feet being in an awful condition. He said he had bought the horse in the market three days beforehand, and when he came to clean his feet the next day found that deep sand-cracks had been filled up with putty and blacked over.

"We have hundreds of donkeys as patients, too," said the matron, "and it was a lacerated mouth and a general air of debility and depression was brought in the other day by a most interesting case, who said to our superintendent:—

"She don't look up to much, guv'nor, but you can't expect to come out top always. It was like this. Me and my mate went to market last week and there was a pair of donkeys for 11l. So we clubbed together and tossed for pick, and this an' that."

"A dog named 'Cassar' proved one of our queerest cases," the matron went on. "He came in suffering from what the man who owned him described as 'stiff neck.' He was supposed to have been run over by a taxi, but when the usual remedies for sprained muscles and so on had no effect, we put him under the X-rays. Then a hat pin twelve inches long showed up clearly in the body, the black knob being in the intestines and the point right up at the back of the neck. Swallowed, of course! Well, we operated, and Cassar went home much relieved."

Another canine patient also brought about his own troubles. His master explained: "Jack can't make out what's inside them motor 'saunders,' and he rushes after them until he drops."

It was a fact that excitement and violent exercise had misplaced the heart, and it was enlarged abnormally until it nearly filled the chest cavity.

The hospital treats hundreds of cats, too, one of which was brought in, recently, with its head firmly fixed in an empty lobster tin. The operation which released Puss was performed with a can-opener.

Her Serene Highness the Duchess of Teck is president of the Animals' Hospital, and there are two marchionesses, sixteen countesses, and no end of "ladyships" among the vice-presidents.

A New Principle in Complexion Treatment

(From Society World.)

Most creams are injurious when used habitually. They clog the pores and eventually form a permanent, soggy, stifling film which interferes with eliminative action and makes the skin sickly and pasty. There is an application—mercolized wax—which acts upon an entirely different principle. While perfectly harmless, it contains active ingredients which remove by absorption the dead and half-dead particles of soot skin, as well as unhealthy matter in the pores. Thus it takes away from instead of adding to the complexion, differing in this respect from cosmetics. The result is a perfectly natural and healthy young complexion. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store (one ounce is sufficient), is applied at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

The correct principle in the treatment of wrinkles is to tighten the skin, which naturally frons out the lines. A face bath, remarkably effective in this direction, may be made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saalolite in 1 1/2 pint witch hazel.

COUNCIL MEETING

Adoption of Recommendations as Published Yesterday — Haymarket Square

At the meeting of the city commission-ers yesterday afternoon the arrangements whereby the city is to give the Partington interests the fee simple in the Green Bay property, was confirmed. Six city debentures lost on the steamer Titanic will be paid by the city as the Bank of Montreal has agreed to stand any loss if the bonds should ever be presented for payment. Tenders will be called for renewing the platform at the face of No. 3 shed, Sand Point, east of the portion damaged by the Empress of Britain last winter. It was decided to consider the contract in connection with the renewing of the water main in Princess street finished as it was believed that the section of pipe from Sydney to Westworth street is in good condition.

The matter of Sunday band concerts was also brought up but no action was taken.

Those at the meeting were the mayor, Commissioners Agar, McLellan, Schofield, Wigmore and the common clerk.

It was explained that the bonds were $500 each and that it was considered a good bargain to buy them at this rate.

The letter from the minister of public works saying that suggestions in regard to the closing of the street in connection with the opening of spring. Negotiations will be opened with Mr. McDonald, the owner of the horse which were said to be responsible for the destruction of the fountain, to find out just what he is willing to do towards repairing the fountain in the square.

The New York World

UP from the banks of Kentucky River, Gray Knob rose rugged and unsmooth. Two lone cabins stood upon the clearing on its summit, stood and gazed at each other in fair weather and foul, as if determined to stare each other out of countenance. The larger cabin was evidently getting the advantage of it; it stood forth clean, firm, and aggressive, while the smaller one leaned shiftily against the hillside, apparently indifferent as to what supported it, the floors on the dilapidated sill as important as a penny in the bottomhole of a banker.

In these dwellings lived the Skittles, Mrs. Skittles in the self-respecting cabin, and Mr. Skittles in the shiftless one, and between them lay fifty feet of hillside and an ambush of silence. One blustery day Mrs. Skittles was carrying on a vigorous cleaning campaign; she charged down the middle of the kitchen floor with her broom, then made a left oblique, and a right oblique, coming to a position of rest at the cabin door. She was large and imposing, with a figure that had made no concessions to forty years of hard work. She was a veteran in the army of labor, but not from the ranks; Mrs. Skittles had ever been in command. Her communications to the world were still issued in the form of orders, and she marched through life on scheduled time, wanting to court-martial all who failed to follow instructions.

In her small emporium upon the clearing, there was but one deserter. Two years ago Mr. Skittles had found the martial life too strenuous, and, failing in his duties, had been condemned to solitary confinement in the cabin adjoining that of his superior officer. For a living he stripped tobacco, for a diversion he chewed it. He still accepted his ration daily, in a tin bucket, which was carried to him from the mess-room by one of the little Skittles, in return for which he was expected to render obedience to Mrs. Skittles, who, though no word was spoken, used a code of signals at once coercive and harassing.

through. But if his mouth smiled his eyes balled it, for a more pathetic pair of appealing eyes were never raised to an irate master. He stood now hunched and disbarbed, as guilty as the children at being caught in mischief. "Presty, gosh, on," sniffed Mrs. Skittles to the ceiling. "Here I be, hustlin' round from sun up to the steamboat whistle, an' you onary children, widd of beta' down yer der strips' tobacco, a fooler' round here. Clear out ev'ryone of you 'cept Jinnie; she ken stay and clean up this here pigsty." Whereupon, slowly directing her searchlight from the ceiling, she pointed with a long and rigid finger to the unmade bed, to the soiled dishes in the corner, coming to an awful and accusing halt at Mrs. Skittles' stooping feet. Then, with a snort of indignation, she backed herself out of the doorway, the children scattering before her like leaves before a whirlwind.

Mr. Skittles, left alone with the plump Jinnie, cautiously closed the door, and sank dejectedly into the plunk rocker. Back fresh reprimand from Mrs. Skittles added to his burden of censure, for, real as he had been in other duties, he had never falsified in loyal allegiance to his leader. Jinnie let herself down from the table and, going to him, put her arms about his neck. "Don't you care," she said recklessly; "I love you heap better than I do maw." This blasphemous remark Mr. Skittles protested. "Oh, no you der, Jinnie; yer maw's a wonderful woman. I never was good enough for her; her family all said so when we was married. She deserved to get a first-class husband, widd of em." "I love you best," insisted Jinnie, hugging his head to her breast. He patted her cheek tenderly and drew her down in the chair beside him. She snuggled up close and, holding tight to his hand, tried to direct his thoughts to a more pleasant subject. "Ain't you got any secrets to tell me today?" she asked slyly. Mr. Skittles's face underwent a transformation. The look of dejection gave way to one of sudden interest. "Well, if I ain't clean forgot to tell you!" he exclaimed. Jinnie clasped her hands in delight. "Cross my heart and body, make a big ring and a spot in the middle, I won't tell!" "Well," said Mr. Skittles, peering anxiously around the side of the chair to see that the door was secure, and sinking his voice to a whisper, "I'm making a new investment."

"It is a melon," he said. "No," said Mr. Skittles, purring up his lips with some show of importance, "I can't say it's a melon, Jinnie. I was a-changin' between a melon, an' a widdin', as you know. But this here is a new offer; it's a patent an' a combination." "What is this, Mr. Skittles, gainin' time and courage, 'tis a widdin' article that a melon; it is to be used in the field and in the house, to fetch and carry in the day time and to set on at night." Mr. Skittles counted off these attractions on Jinnie's fat fingers. "A bucket," said Jinnie incredulously. "No, maw!" said Mr. Skittles; "it's a guarantee patent, eat-cheer an' wheelbarrow." "But the easy, Jinnie! It sorter feels up inside itself an' looks jes' like a natural cheer, then you turn a peg an' the 'rut' thing you know 'tween a patient wheelbarrow, easy runnin' light as a feather, an' as strong as—anythin'." "Where's it at?" "Mr. Skittles again surveyed the closed door and winked significantly at the woodshed. Jinnie was silent a moment, wrestling with a new thought. "Well, Pa, she asked, 'have you got through payin' for the clock?' Mr. Skittles's face fell. "Well, no, I ain't quite," he confessed. "But that's a-bout another company. It ain't the same thing at all; this here is a new concern, twenty cents a week till you pay up." "Will they take it going to be punkin' or apple, maw?" "Oh, no. This here is a good, honest concern. The agent said so."

who baked it, but Sally Woodruff is a-blowin' mighty pink over there in the corner. What! Twenty-five? Going, going, gone! at twenty-five cents to Mr. Zack Wilson. Here's your number and you can send your partner and eat your pie." Zack, with pleased embarrassment, turned confidently to Sally, only to find that old Mrs. Duffy had his number. The company laughed uproariously while Zack shared his pie with his stout companion, the coo-coo turning to sward under Sally's scolding glance. In the midst of the uproar a head was thrust in at the door. It was a shaggy head, and the ragged body that followed it was cut of keeping with the gait of the rest of the company. But a chorus of welcoming shouts arose nevertheless. "Hello, Jenk Skittles! Where did you come from?" "Did you blow down from your roof, Jenk?" "Come right along in and get in the game." Mr. Skittles, smiling apologetically and trying to smooth down his flying locks, edged forward. A hurried glance had failed to reveal Mrs. Skittles, sitting bolt upright in solemn state at the far end of the room. "Did one on a pie, Jenk!" cried some one in the crowd. "Put up a good one, Zim, and we'll make him buy it." Mr. Skittles, laughing and weakly protesting, briskly, and soon the fun was, once more, at high tide. But the light had failed for Mr. Skittles. He twisted his legs nervously about the legs of the chair, apparently seeking to gain strength therefrom, as he cast pained glances in every direction. Presently his eyes fell on the pie still clasped in his hands. A new question presented itself, a question of such overwhelming significance that it caused him to groan in spirit. Should he eat the pie? Years of experience had taught him that no greater hazard could be offered him, whether half than to fail to appreciate her cooking. With this past knowledge he felt it incumbent upon him to eat the pie, though his spirit was crushed and his appetite languid. So bravely did he desire to ingratiate himself with Mrs. Skittles and to prove his utter contrition for having broken in upon her evening's pleasure, that he ate also after some heroic fortitude. Fortunately Eddie Jo and Jinnie came to his assistance, and by the end of the evening the truth of the maxim that "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," had been amply verified, and Mrs. Skittles could find no ground for complaint. But the first link in the chain of disaster having been forged, others followed swiftly. On the harbor ward march Eddie Jo was taken violently ill. Mr. Skittles carried him nearly to the clearing, when he was seized with an indisposition himself. Mrs. Skittles, oversteering them, ordered a halt. She glanced at the other children sardoniously. "Well," she said, shortly, "Rhoda, Ray, I s'pose you've got the backache, and Bud the headache, and somebody else the toothache! A person would think it was Sunday mornin'!" The children stoutly disclaimed these ailments, all except Jinnie and Eddie Jo—day pleaded guilty to them all. Mrs. Skittles, never one to encourage ailments, took the limp and dejected Jinnie by the hand and, leaving Mr. Skittles to bring the little boy, hurried on to the cabin.

Mr. Skittles, a few moments later, obediently deposited his burden on the doorstep and stepped away. To his surprise his knees began to wobble, and before he knew it he too, was repeating on Mrs. Skittles's front steps. That woe-begone, bustling about within, was becoming seriously alarmed about Jinnie. The child was alternating between paroxysms of pain and heavy stupor. Nothing could arouse her. "Oh, the mustard, quick!" called her mother to Rhoda Ray, who had just clustered over her prostrate forms in the doorway. Rhoda Ray, with an unsuccessful effort to collect her chronically scattered wits, took a tin can from the end of the shelf. "This here is the all-purpose," chuckled Mrs. Skittles; "ain't you got more sense than to stick a tin short and sniffle the can suspiciously. 'Why this ain't spite at all!" "It's mustard," urged Rhoda Ray feebly. "It ain't!" cried Mrs. Skittles in piercing tones; "it's insect powder, and I put it in the pie!" A scene of utter confusion followed, with Eddie Jo voting his anguish in piercing screams, and poor Jinnie lying limp and unconscious on the bed. "She's gittin' warmer all the time!" Mr. Skittles, rubbing the child's hands and arms and trying in vain to rouse her, "Somebody go for the doctor, quick! But she's dead, gettin' dead, it's a half hour to get there and a half hour back. Lord help me! Lord help me, what must I do?" As it is unwise to her prayer an ambulance appeared in the doorway. Mr. Skittles, white of cheek and wild of eye, holding feebly to the case, addressed the carrier. "I'll let her to the doctor," he said, earnestly; "git it, wrapped up, an' I'll take her."

vanished from the doorway only to appear a moment later with the guarantee patent combined easy chair and wheelbarrow. Mrs. Skittles stopped not to question; she knew too well the importance of a doctor. She laid the heavy, unconscious child in the wheelbarrow, roughly pushing aside the wretched child that tried to help her. Then, with an anxious shake of the head, and never a glance at the blanched face opposite, she hastened back to attend to the less desperate case within.

Mr. Skittles, gathering up his load, started bravely forth into the night. The deathly nausea that had overcome him gave place to excruciating pain, but he pushed forward with straining muscles and anxious eyes. The narrow path down the mountain side ascended abruptly at times; the thick trees overhead shut out the starlight, and under foot a tangle of grasses and vines caught his feet as he hurried along. Heads of perspiration stood out on his forehead, and his hands and feet grew numb. Presently he sank to his knees, then to the ground. "Jinnie!" he called, piteously; "Jinnie! yer ain't dead yet, air ye? Yer pa's tryin' to git you there, Jinnie! Don't you hear me? His weak, inefficient hands tumbled about until they found her, when she staggered to his feet. "My God, she's getting cold!" he cried, as he stumbled forward again. The trees seemed to be dancing around him in a great circle that would not let him through, the lights in the village moved farther and farther away as he approached. When he reached the turnpike he fell again, his face in the dust and his hands clutched at the rocks. For a while he lay so, then the pain made him remember. "O God!" he prayed, "don't pay me no mind, but jest help me get Jinnie to the doctor's. He stumped to his feet, but he could not move his burden. In despair he sank upon his knees and burst into violent weeping. "Poor little girl!" he cried, his trembling arms across the child; "pa's tryin' to help you, but he never could help nobody. He never was no good, but he'll try agin'—he'll try." Pitching and lurching he staggered forward; sight and hearing left him; one thought only remained. At the doctor's door the strange equipage halted. Mr. Skittles began his story, but he never finished it. At daybreak when Mrs. Skittles hurried to the village, she found Jinnie out of danger, but lying in the darkened office was the slight form of Mr. Skittles. For hours she bent over him, desperately striving with the doctor to bring back consciousness. Her husband, hovering on the borderland of eternity assumed a strange dignity and importance. At noon he stirred. "Jenk," she said to her most commanding tone, "speak to me this mornin'."

and Jenk spoke.

all traditions galley west in the scramble for honors in Ban Johnson's league. Clyde Milan a real star, whose worth is sometimes underestimated, announced with all seriousness that he proposed to steal 100 bases this season. In the first 114 games he got away with sixty-seven and it really looks like he had more than an even chance to turn the trick. It is likely he will break the American league record of 85, made last year by Ty Cobb. Walter Johnson, than whom no better pitcher can be found anywhere, watched "Hohe" Marquard go out and win nineteen straight games at the start of the season. That record by the Giant southpaw gave the big Swede an idea. He didn't say much until his recent one-hit shutout against the Chicago White Sox gave him fourteen straight wins and tied the American league for consecutive wins. Then he naively remarked he wouldn't be a bit surprised if he cracked Marquard's wonderful record.

His fifteenth win was at the expense of the Cleveland Naps. Once in the immanent ranks, Griffith has thrown conventionality to the winds. Other clubs have at various times carried one of his "joke-mith" to keep the players "polled up," but Griffith is carrying around a pair them in "Germany" Schaefer and Nick Altrock.

"Grid" didn't do the ethical thing when he went out and paid $15,000 for First Base, as the third round Burns proved himself up to snuff by numerous big league managers. Gandil has proved one of the best in the west Washington team.

Washington was not supposed to pick up any promising youngsters in the minor league crop but in Foster a third baseman was snatched who is regarded by many as the best young prospect to break into the American league this season.

Raymond's Death. Chicago, Sept. 9.—Fred Cigars, twenty-three years old, was arrested today and confessed to smothering Arthur L. Ray, former pitcher of the New York National Baseball Club, Sunday, Sept. 1, at a sleazy professional ball game.

Raymond was a spectator at the game, and some one threw a piece of potato which struck the pitcher on the face. Raymond picked up the missile and struck Cigars with it and in the fight that followed Raymond was knocked down and kicked on the head a number of times.

Cigars said he had no idea that Raymond was seriously injured. He told the police he had known the pitcher fifteen years.

At the coroner's inquest which began today, Dr. Springer reported that Raymond died from hemorrhages due to a fracture of the skull. Cigars' arrest followed. He will be held pending the outcome of the inquest.

Raymond was found dead in a downtown hotel Saturday and it was at first reported that his death was due to heart failure aggravated by the heat.

White Goes Home. Steve White, the ex-Marathon baseball pitcher, died on the Boston train yesterday afternoon for his home and eventually for the opening of Princeton University. White expects that he will be back in November for the baseball in his seat for salary, which he maintains is due him by the Marathon management.

Another Series. Washington, Sept. 9.—The Washington club of the American League, and the Pittsburgh Nationals, will in all probability play a post-season series following the close of the two major league pennant races. Manager Clark Griffith of the Nationals has wired President Barney Dreyfus asking for the games. It is thought here that Dreyfus will accept the challenge. The Nationals are second in the league and the Pirates third in the National League chase.

The World's Series. If the Giants, as Boston has seen them, are to be the same Giants who will likely play the Red Sox for the world's championship, Boston might count on a runaway race for the Sox. The Giants do not play the snappy game in Boston that they played last year, and the Red Sox seem to play faster the farther they go. It may be that the long strain of holding their lead in the National League race has staled the Giants, while the young Red Sox, freed from the cares of shaking off competitors, are able to play without thinking of the result. They have no "nerves" now. In a world's series, this condition may benefit the Giants, since they are accustomed to such short dashes, and consequently are not likely to "go to pieces," while the Red Sox will be.

THE RING. Kansas Won on a Foil. Aix les Bains, France, Sept. 9.—Frank Klaus, middleweight boxer, of Pittsburgh, was awarded the decision over Marcel Moreau, a French middleweight pugilist, in the fourth round of a scheduled twenty-round match here today. Moreau was disqualified for striking low.

Burns Knocked Out Hogan. San Francisco, Sept. 9.—In a contest characterized by great gamesomeness on the part of the defeated man, Frankie Burns of Oakland eliminated "One Round" Hogan in the fourth round of his fight today. As early as the third round Burns proved himself Hogan's master, sending him to the mat four times in this round.

Easy for Jeannette. New York, Sept. 10.—Tony Row, of Newcastle, Pa., was disqualified for hitting low in the seventh round of his fight with Joe Jeannette, challenger for the heavyweight title last night. Jeannette had the advantage throughout the fight, jabbing Row continually and reaching him with lefts to the face. Row was bleeding from the third round on, and was often cautioned by the referee for hitting low. It was not until the seventh that Jeannette opened up. Finally, when there was a particular flagrant violation of the rules as Row landed a low right hand blow the referee disqualified him.

George Kirkwood, of St. Louis, virtually knocked out Frankie Fleming, Canadian featherweight champion, in the first round of their bout. Kirkwood floored Fleming in six seconds for counts of nine and seven when the bell saved him. He did not continue.

AL PALZER, BEST OF THE WHITE HOPES, ISSUES CHALLENGE TO ANY HEAVYWEIGHT

New York, Sept. 9.—Al Palzer, the best of all white hopes, is out with a challenge to any heavyweight in the world. Albert says he would like nothing better than a chance at Joe Jeannette, the colored heavyweight of Hoboken, who has claimed Jack Johnson's title. Palzer has been in strict training for some time and is now in the trim for a fight. According to fight experts, Palzer has a fine chance of succeeding Johnson as champion if he is properly handled. His most recent battle was with Bombardier Wells, the English champion, whom he knocked out in three rounds.

FOR NEXT SEASON
The Fredericton Outlook—Hughes and Joe Neptune to Lynn
Fredericton Gleaser.—As to how many of the champions will be on hand next season nobody can tell. The general impression is, however, that about as many of this year's players as are available will be asked to wear the blue and gray once more.

Unless present plans fail, Bob Ganley will be back on the job again as field leader and Frank Harrington, Frank Hale, Charlie Sharkey and Charlie Martin the latter of this year's Houlton club, make up a pitching staff that looks good to the local club.

Several of this year's team are to go higher up next season, and with that idea in view are already out for the new men necessary to fill the vacancies. With such an early start and the foundation already laid for a successful club it is hoped that Fredericton will have another championship team in 1912.

Frank Hughes, of St. Mary's, who was with the Houlton club this season, and Joe Neptune, the Indian shortstop, also with last year's team, are to join the Lynn club of the New England League.

Frank I. Leonard, veteran Lynn manager, was impressed with Hughes' hard-hitting and Neptune's all round work when he took a whirl around the N. B. and Maine circuit a few days ago. Word has now come here that both players are to

A Growing Town
A recent letter in the Winnipeg Telegram from the town of Rivers, Manitoba, in which a number of New Brunswick people are interested, says:
"The recent civic census of Rivers showed a population of 1,500, being an increase of over 200 since the census of 1911. The building activity at the present time is chiefly confined to residences to meet the rapid increase of population. A number of cottages are being erected by local contractors for an English investor. The agricultural society has purchased sixteen acres immediately adjoining the town on the west, and is proceeding with the erection of suitable buildings. The G. T. L. has completed its large dock at this point and is starting its new freight sheds. The grounds at the station have been laid out into large gardens, which much improves the appearance of the town. This new Manitoba town with ideal townsite and unlimited water supply has experienced a steady growth in past and bids fair to continue at a more rapid rate in the future."

NOVELTY SHOWER.
The home of Miss Floy Hayes in Charles street was invaded last evening by young friends who showered upon her gifts of various kinds for use in the parlor or the kitchen, and which will be of value to her in the future after a happy nuptial event soon to occur. She was greatly surprised and heartily thanked her friends for so kindly remembering her. A pleasant time was spent by all, refreshments were served about midnight, and a little later the gathering dispersed after wishing Miss Hayes every happiness.

WEDDINGS IN THE CITY TODAY

Nuptial Events of Interest To Many Friends of Brides and Grooms

Horgan-White.
At nuptial high mass at eight o'clock in Holy Trinity church this morning, Rev. J. J. White, the pastor, solemnized an interesting matrimonial event in the marriage of Miss Frances Ethel White, daughter of Mrs. Johanna White of City road, and Michael Ambrose Horgan, formerly of St. John's, but now engaged in contracting in Brownville, Ont. The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, J. J. White, and wore a large picture hat with white trimmings and carried white roses for her bouquet. Her sister, Miss Zetta White, as bridesmaid, was attired in navy blue with white trimmings, and wore a large white hat and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The groom was supported by his brother, William Horgan. His present to his bride was a valuable sterling silver watch, and to the bridesmaid a pretty stick pin. Mr. and Mrs. Horgan were the recipients of many beautiful and useful remembrances from many friends as souvenirs of the occasion which they are both after the wedding a tempting breakfast was served at the home of the bride, and this evening on the 11th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Horgan will leave on a honeymoon trip to Upper Canada, on their way to their new home in Brownville, Ont. They will visit Montreal, Toronto, Niagara Falls and other centres of interest. The bride's traveling gown was a blue broadcloth with hat to correspond.

Semple-Ingraham.
Miss Nellie Wyman Ingraham, daughter of Hugh Ingraham, of Becker street, and James M. Semple, son of Policeman Semple, were married this afternoon at four o'clock by Rev. B. E. Hooper. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents where there were pretty floral decorations in honor of the event. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a handsome dress of cream silk with pearl trimmings. She was unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Semple will leave this evening for Boston and New York on a wedding trip, the bride wearing a dress of white with hat to match.

Both received many fine presents. The bride's father and uncle each presented a check, the groom's gift to the bride was a handsome set of mink furs, while there was a china dinner set from the office staff and men of the Fowler axe factory, where the groom is employed, and the Gnd. Band, of which he is a member, sent a parlor clock. Many friends wish Mr. and Mrs. Semple a long and happy life.

PRESBYTERY IN SESSION

Matter of Assisting Old Country Clergymen to Canada

LOCAL CASE IN POINT

A Call to Rev. James Colhoun of Ireland From Glaswegian Congregation - Fort Kent and St. Francis to Remain Under This Presbytery

The quarterly session of the Presbytery of St. John was held in St. Andrew's church this morning. In the absence of the moderator, Rev. James Ross, Dr. Smith of Fredericton presided. Rev. Frank Baird acted as clerk. There were in attendance Rev. Messrs. J. J. MacKay, Dr. McVicar, Gordon Dickie, J. A. MacKeigan, W. H. Townsend, J. H. A. Anderson and L. A. McLean of this city, Rev. J. Miller of Richmond, Rev. W. Girdwood of Prince William, Rev. M. S. McKay of Waverly, Rev. G. Farquhar of Hampton, Rev. E. Smith of Chipman, Rev. T. A. Mitchell of Sussex, Rev. A. W. Mahan of St. Andrews, Rev. M. H. Mansel of Florenceville, Rev. M. J. Macpherson of Harville and Rev. W. W. Malcolm of Lorneville. Elders James Forbes, Peter Chisholm and W. S. Clawson were also present.

Rev. Mr. MacKay, on behalf of Rev. J. Ross, reported that he had visited Fort Kent and St. Francis with a view to ascertaining if the congregations preferred to remain under this presbytery or be transferred to the care of the Congregational Church of Maine. He reported that the people preferred to remain under this presbytery, provided that a regular pastor be sent to them. It was agreed to express satisfaction with the attitude of the people, and it was agreed that steps be taken to provide them with a regular pastor.

Rev. Mr. Dickie reported on home missions, and recommended that Messrs. Quigley and Kerr, two students, be given employment during the winter. Rev. Frank Baird resigned as moderator of the presbytery, his resignation to take place on Oct. 1, and Rev. J. J. Miller of Richmond was appointed to take his place.

Rev. Mr. Mansel of Florenceville presented a call from the congregation at Glaswegian to Rev. James Colhoun of Ireland. Rev. Mr. Colhoun was visiting in Glaswegian some time ago and preached there on several occasions. Rev. Mr. Mansel read a letter from him stating that he would very likely accept the call. Considerable discussion took place over the matter of assisting pastors from the old country and other places in moving their homes to Canada, and a resolution was passed this afternoon asking that the home mission fund and the augmentation fund be called upon for assistance in helping to pay the expenses of such clergymen.

Rev. J. W. Miller reported that it took nearly $600 to move his family to this country and that a clergyman in the old country did not feel like coming out to this country where his expenses were so high and particularly when they had to work all the expenses of the call to Rev. Mr. Colhoun was estimated and arrangements made for his induction.

The meeting adjourned until this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

YESTERDAY RECORD ONE AT COURTENAY BAY

More Material Handled Than on any Day Since Beginning Work

"We reached highwater mark yesterday," said Superintendent Puffer of the Courtenay construction company, who is building the breakwater and excavating the site of the new dry dock at Courtenay Bay, continuing his report on the work progressing splendidly and with the additional equipment we are moving larger quantities of material all the time. Yesterday was the best yet and it was estimated that the material handled was sixty per cent greater than on any preceding day.

Notwithstanding the large amount of equipment already in use there is still room for more and another locomotive is being brought to the city. As the work expands still more machinery will be brought in. Speaking of the prospects for winter work Mr. Puffer said that they had worked with the thermometer at sixty degrees below zero and he did not see anything to prevent them proceeding at full speed right through the winter here.

PROGRESS ON C.P.R. WORK AT SAND POINT

Sea Wall at Blue Rock About Completed and Elevator Foundation Begun

The construction of the sea-wall at Blue Rock for the protection of the site of the new elevator has been practically completed and the entire contract for the preliminary work, which is being done by the Courtenay Construction Company, will be completed within a month.

The Metcalf Construction Company, which has the contract for the construction of the elevator, has commenced work on the site for the foundations and will rush the construction of the elevator as rapidly as possible.

PORTUNE IN N. B. APPLES.
Kentville Chronicle.—The "Crimson Beauty" is a new early apple for Nova Scotia. S. E.
