

CZAR'S ARMY PRESSING ENEMY HARD IN RUSSIAN POLAND; FEW WORDS FROM BATTLELINE IN FRANCE

Curtain Still Drawn Around Action Along Aisne-- Nothing New to Report Except Lively Engagement in Region of Roye, Paris War Office Announces --- Varying Reports From Antwerp -- French Squadron Appears Before Gravosa and Ragusa, in Adriatic -- Russians Take Ten Thousand Prisoners and 40 Cannon in Fight on East Prussian Frontier.

Paris, Oct. 9, 11.09 p. m.—The following official communication was issued here this evening:—

"There is nothing new to report except that there has been a lively engagement in the region of Roye, where in the last two days we have captured 1,600 prisoners.

The war chancelleries of the allies and the Germans have not seen fit to lift the curtain of secrecy high enough for the public to obtain an insight into the conditions which prevail along the battle line in France. "There is nothing to report," says the French war office, "except that there has been a lively engagement in the region of Roye, where in the last two days we have captured 1,600 prisoners." That is all. From the British and the Germans came nothing.

Of the situation in the east the Russians declare that near the East Prussian frontier in Russian Poland they are still pressing the Germans hard and at several points have obtained successes over them.

While one morning newspaper in London has been informed "on good authority" that Antwerp has fallen, neither the British official press bureau, nor the Belgian minister, are able to confirm the report.

The last advices from Belgium had the Germans still hammering away with their artillery against Antwerp. One despatch said 200 big German guns were in operation there. Ostend advices reported thousands of refugees arriving in that city.

A Berlin despatch says that King Albert of Belgium, who has been reported to have left Antwerp at the head of a portion of his troops, has been slightly wounded.

British aeroplanes have visited Dusseldorf, Germany. A British official report says an aerial squadron succeeded in blowing up a Zeppelin airship shed in Dusseldorf, and destroying dirigible balloon in it. The three aviators engaged in the raid escaped, but lost their machines.

Austria has temporarily lifted the customs duties on corn, flour and vegetables.

Belgium has protested to the Washington government against Germany's alleged action in commandeering all food supplies in Brussels, and "reducing the native population to famine."

German's Depriving Population of Their Food Supply—Protest Filed by Belgian Minister at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 9.—The Belgian minister filed with the State Department today a protest from his government against the threatened famine in Brussels, claimed to be due to the ravages caused by the German army. The message from the Belgian Foreign Office, and filed with the department, says: "The civil authorities of Brussels inform the Government that Brussels faces famine. Violating, once more, the rights of mankind, and namely, article 43 of the fourth convention of the Hague, the German army, after having taken away from the population an important part of its resources, is getting ready to let it starve. The same information is coming from Namur and Luxembourg. "The Belgian government protests with the utmost indignation against this revolting act of barbarism and brings it to the knowledge and the appreciation of the civilized nations. "The 'Brussels agglomeration' is the name given to the city proper and the surrounding suburbs, which are formed into one civil community.

Canadian Red Cross Leader Dies of Angina Pectoris—Well-Known Montreal Manufacturer.

London, Oct. 9, 9.35 p. m.—Col. Jeffrey Hale Burland, who arrived here a few days ago in charge of the Red Cross work in connection with the Canadian troops, died suddenly today. Col. Burland was born in Montreal in 1861. He was a well known manufacturer. Lieut. Colonel Jeffrey Hale Burland left Montreal on September 29 for England to look after the work of the Red Cross Society of Canada, in London, and at the front. His death came unexpectedly. So far the only word that has been received is that he died of angina pectoris. Colonel Burland was nominated to look after the work of the Red Cross less than two weeks ago. He arrived in London on Tuesday of this week. At the time of his appointment he was also made a Knight of Grace of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, by the King.

USING GUNS WITH RANGE OF EIGHT MILES

Germans Using Two Hundred of the Most Powerful Siege Guns in Bombardment of Antwerp.

London, Oct. 9 (10 p. m.)—"Thousands of refugees are arriving here, and the steamers for England are packed," says Reuter's Ostend correspondent.

"In the siege operations against Antwerp the Germans are using no less than 200 guns of 11, 12 and 16-inch calibre, some of them having a range of over eight miles.

"The bombardment of Antwerp yesterday began at half past nine o'clock at night and stopped at ten, only to be renewed with increasing violence at midnight.

"The British, French and Russian ministers were the last of the diplomatic body to quit Antwerp. They departed by boat at eleven o'clock last night, after experiencing the first part of the bombardment."

Vienna, Oct. 9.—(By way of Amsterdam and London)—5.30 p. m.—The government today gave notice that the collection of duties on corn, flour and vegetables entering Austria had been temporarily suspended.

REPORTS FROM ANTWERP ARE CONFUSING

London, Oct. 9 (2.37 a. m.)—The Morning Post says that it has been informed by a good authority that Antwerp has fallen. The official press bureau says it is unable to confirm the foregoing.

Count De Lalaing, Belgian minister of Great Britain, says he has received confirmation of the reported fall of Antwerp.

The Daily Telegraph's Rotterdam correspondent, telegraphing Friday, says: "A more hopeful view prevails here regarding Antwerp. Refugees from that city declare that not a single German soldier has yet entered Antwerp."

By sharp and timely hitting the Braves piled up a lead which, coupled with Rudolph's sterling box work, and the general defensive of his team-mates, left no opening through which the Philadelphia club's attack could penetrate. Weather conditions were ideal for play, the field being dry and fast, while a warm sun shone overhead.

THREE FRENCH SOLDIERS ALONE PUT TWO GERMAN COMPANIES TO FLIGHT

Crawled Within Ten Yards of Enemy's Trenches While Latter Were Preparing Dinner—Turned Guns on Unsuspecting Germans Who Fled Precipitately.

Bordeaux, Oct. 9 (11.05 p. m.)—The story of how three French soldiers captured two German quick-firers, and put to flight two companies of the German infantry, is related in a letter sent here by the captain of a company of infantry which is fighting on the Aisne.

Two corporals and a private, in reconnoitering, crawled within ten yards of the German trenches. Most of the German soldiers were away for the purpose of fetching dinner, and the officers were some distance back of the guns.

The three Frenchmen sprang into the trenches and turned the guns on the unsuspecting Germans who fled, communicating the panic to two companies. French artillerymen, who had been watching the proceedings, then opened fire and exterminated the Germans.

THE RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT IN EAST PRUSSIA CONTINUES

Petrograd, Oct. 9.—Emperor Nicholas returned today to Tsarskoe Selo from his trip of inspection of the Russian armies at the front. While at Rovno and Vilna, His Majesty made a personal inspection of the military and red cross hospitals, and spoke with the wounded.

The following official statement has been given out by the general staff: "On October 8 our troops on the East Prussian border continued to press the enemy who had formed two fighting groups.

"The first group was operating in the region of Vladislavovt and Wirballen (both towns in the government of Russian Poland). Our troops dislodged them from Vladislavovt, and surrounded them on the north.

"On October 8, however, this group still maintained its position east by south of Wirballen, all its attempts to take the offensive at that point failed, and they sustained heavy losses.

"The second group of the enemy, a very strong one, commenced an energetic attack in the vicinity of Rakchka Lake and Bakalarzewo (East Prussia). Towards morning on October 8 we assumed a vigorous offensive against their front. The enemy covered by strong rear guards, tried, it seems, to get out of the sphere of the battle. Our troops captured by successful assaults the positions which the enemy was trying to hold. We finally occupied Lyck (East Prussia).

"Our offensive all along the front continues energetically."

HALIFAX MAN A PRISONER IN GERMANY

Bell, a Halifax student, imprisoned at Gottagen, Germany. The foreign office made representations to the American ambassador in connection with the scheme for the exchange of prisoners, and the ambassador has promised to try and secure the release of Bell at an early date.

Nova Scotia had already offered a supply of coal, but as its view of the resources in England it was decided to change the form of the province's generosity. It is understood that the money will be handed to the local government board, which is looking after all relief problems.

Belgium Again Scene of Violent Fighting and Plucky Soldiers of Little Kingdom Putting Up Stubborn Resistance Behind Forts of Antwerp—Driven From First Line of Forts Belgians Are Making Desperate Stand to Hold Back Besiegers.

London, Oct. 9, 10.30 p. m.—Belgium once again is the center of military interest, for not only is her army battling for its life behind the fortress of Antwerp but the long battle line in France has struggled northward until it has crossed her frontier at Armentieres and may yet form with that around the fortress.

According to a German report received by wireless from Berlin this evening, railway and telegraphic communication with Antwerp is interrupted.

It was reported also that the King of the Belgians had been slightly wounded.

The severing of communication had been expected, for, from the start, the Germans had been directing their attacks at points of ingress and egress from the city, and at the same time dropping shells into the town itself. A portion of the town is reported to have been destroyed. The 43-centimetre guns made short work of the great brailmont forts, and lesser ones are now engaged in destroying the city which, under the provisions of The Hague convention, was given due notice before the bombardment commenced.

The extent of the damage done in the city is not known definitely, for the only accounts available concerning the bombardment are those from people who watch the fight at a distance.

Fighting is desperate there is no doubt, for the Belgian army, driven from the first line of forts, took up good positions behind the second line, prepared to offer desperate opposition to the advance of the besiegers.

The defenders, however, even in their well-protected entrenchments, are said to be unable to avoid the shell fire which is described as terrific, and which is said to fall always in the right spot. The Zeppelin airships have played their part in the fray and bombs from them add to the terror.

It is reported that one of these airships was brought down last night but the statement originated from a person who said he saw it from a distance.

The German advance through the gap which they had opened in the southeastern section of the outer line of forts has been likened to a prairie fire, which devoured every village and building in its path. The Germans have also forced three passages of the River Scheldt, between Ghent and Termonde, their object in doing this being to prevent the Belgian army from breaking through and escaping by the narrow strip of Belgian territory between the Scheldt and that portion of Holland which stretches along the coast west of the estuary.

How long the Belgians can hold out against this attack from two sides, which has continued since Wednesday night, no one offers to conjecture. The Belgian hope, however, that their field army can withstand the German until the allied armies, advancing from the south, force the Germans to withdraw.

CARNAGE AT MONS WAS TERRIBLE

American Physician Says Men Were Torn to Pieces in Few Seconds by German Artillery Fire.

New York, Oct. 8.—A vivid description of the battle before Mons was given here today by Dr. Neville M. Hopkins of Washington, upon his arrival on the steamship Kroonland from Liverpool.

Dr. Hopkins was in Moscow, Russia, with his family when the war broke out. He immediately offered his services to the Red Cross division of the French Army and they were accepted. He went to the front Aug. 24. From that time until two weeks ago, he said, he was constantly under fire.

"I was first under fire while I had the head of a wounded French soldier on my lap, dressing a gaping wound in his jaw," said Dr. Hopkins. "A shrapnel burst overhead, but none of the missiles hit either of us. For an hour after that I was under fire, and the noise and the sights of the battlefield almost resulted in my complete physical collapse.

Hundreds Torn to Pieces in Second. "I saw hundreds of men torn to pieces in a few seconds. Horses were wiped out from sight by the terrific artillery fire of the Germans, and wagons containing ammunition and provisions were blown into fragments. "It was like the work of an unseen hand. I could see the ranks filled one moment and in the next a gaping hole had been torn out and 50 men had disappeared.

"In the retreat from Mons the French made a stand at Le Cateau. They set up a masked field battery and awaited the onslaught of the Germans. The place chosen was a large open field.

"Ten regiments of German cavalry harrying the rear of the allied forces, charged across the field. When they got near enough the French batteries opened fire. The slaughter was terrible. Fully 5,000 Germans were killed in the charge. Riders and wounded horses dashed in all directions.

"During the retreat from Mons, at a place near Cambrai, I saw the English cavalry ride up to support their

OFFICIALS QUIT TOWN AT SIGHT OF FRENCH FLEET

Squadron of French Warships Appear in Adriatic Before Ragusa and Grovosa and Authorities of Former Place Make Hasty Exit.

Bordeaux, Oct. 9.—According to an official announcement made by the French government today, the French fleet, commanded by Vice-Admiral Boue De Lapeyere after reevictualing the garrison at the Montenegrin seaport of Antivari, visited the islands in the Adriatic, between Cattaro and Lissa. Later the French warships appeared before Ragusa and Grovosa.

The Austrian authorities and other notables at Ragusa fled precipitately on two special trains as soon as the battleships were sighted.

"The Italian and Slav population," the official announcement says, "remained calm. It would have been easy to reduce Ragusa to cinders if our fleet had been willing to follow the example of the Germans. The sight of the authorities was sufficient."

"The French squadron merely destroyed the lighthouses and the wireless apparatus at Grovosa.

infantry. It was a wonderful sight. The men seemed to be part of the horses. They galloped like mad and hundreds of the brave fellows were killed. But they drove back the Germans.

"Nothing can describe what a battlefield is like under such conditions. The dead bodies of men and horses lie everywhere, piled on top of each other. The noise is so great that it is impossible to make yourself heard, even if you shout at the top of your lungs into a man's ear. The only way to communicate is by signs.

"I witnessed one charge of the Death's Head Hussars. They were gallant and daring riders, but scores of them were shot from their horses."

Dr. Hopkins exhibited a lance, on the pointed end of which fluttered a black and white pennant. He picked it up before Mons, he said. Part of the pennant was covered with blood.

Dr. Hopkins said he was arrested 17 times as a spy by one side or the other. His credentials, however, always secured him his liberty.

NEWSPAPERS IN GERMANY SAY WAR AGAINST BRITAIN BEGINS AFTER ANTWERP HAS BEEN TAKEN

Kaiser's Navy to Take a Chance in Open Fight? Use of French Signs and Inscriptions in Saarburg, Lorraine, Tabooed by German Military Authorities.

Rome via Paris, Oct. 9, 8.13 p. m.—The war against Great Britain, according to German newspapers, received here, will commence at the end of October, after Antwerp has fallen. Belgium then will become the base of operations against Great Britain, the newspapers say. They add that Admiral Von Tirpitz, the minister of the navy, who is now at special headquarters with Emperor William, has announced that he will go aboard the flagship of the German fleet, and direct the operations of the navy.

London, Oct. 10, 2.55 a. m.—The Daily Chronicle's Rosendahl, Holland, correspondent, under date of Berlin, says the situation in Antwerp is critical, and that the town is virtually deserted, except for the Belgian troops. "Every house here," the correspondent continues, "is packed to the roof with refugees, and other refugees are camping around the railroad stations. Antwerp's civil guard was disbanded Wednesday."

London, Oct. 9, 4 p. m.—The German military commandant at Saarburg, Lorraine, has issued a proclamation ordering the removal of all French signs and inscriptions from the shops, buildings and schools, according to a despatch to the Reuters Telegram Company from Saarburg by way of Amsterdam. The German commander also forbids the use of envelopes, letters and bills with French headings.

London, Oct. 10, 3.10 a. m.—"Every sign indicates that Antwerp is falling," says the Daily Chronicle's Antwerp correspondent, in a despatch dated Thursday. "It is possible the town will be surrendered."

"The main streets are deserted, but there are 20,000 panicky people on the quays and around the railroad station waiting to leave."

"The town is in flames throughout the southern section, and no attempt is being made to quench them."

THE NON-SUPPORT CASE OF O. S. BROWN

To the Editor of The Standard.

Sir—Regarding the case of the King vs. Otto S. Brown for non-support under an amended section of the Criminal Code much more has appeared in the press than would be a case of very great importance. It is obvious that the correspondence was inspired.

Brown was fined $500 or a year in jail by R. J. Ritchie, Counsel for him, thought well of an appeal which was argued, J. A. Barry representing Brown. The conviction by the magistrate was quashed and the columns of the Times. Later an "American" lady (?) gave vent to her feelings through the columns of the Globe. The lecturer who has been converted to the cause of the suffragette, How dreadful!

Now, who does the little bad feel so badly? Here are a few facts:

Brown was arrested, charged with seduction.

To escape imprisonment he married Jean Walsh.

Before the marriage a written agreement drawn by the solicitor for the accused Otto Brown and his father to support her for two years and to pay her solicitor's costs to that date, the girl's father, George G. Walsh, being a party to the agreement. The agreement was exacted because all knew that Otto Brown being a clerk and not earning enough to marry according to the bank rules, would be dismissed. Hence knowing that he could not support her, preparations were made to compel Brown, Sr., to do so. Nevertheless Brown, Jr., out of work, was arrested for non-support.

When the case of non-support began there were two suits pending in Chancery, one to annul the agreement, and other to set aside the agreement. And in her defence both the girl and her father contended that the agreement is binding on Brown, Sr. Therefore all the monies the girl's father pays out for her support during the next two years his claim to be able to recover from Brown, Sr. This was why he and why he swore that the girl was not in destitute and necessitous circumstances. He had both suits carrying out the agreement himself.

Brown was adjudged guilty. He had neither a job nor money to pay that small fine of $500. He would have had to go to jail. A fine means supporting the girl.

It was shown in the Police Court—

- (a) Otto Brown was a minor. (b) He had lost his position by marrying. (c) He repudiated the marriage. (d) He had not cohabited with his wife since the marriage. (e) That the agreement was still in force. (f) That the girl wanted for nothing. (g) That two suits were pending in Chancery. In due course the appeal was heard. The amended law required that in order to support a conviction the wife must be in destitute and necessitous circumstances. The father's evidence clearly showed that his daughter was not in want. It was no new law that exacted a husband to support his wife. The Wilks case was referred to simply to define legally "destitute and necessitous circumstances." It is still good law. It did not overrule the amended section. To say so is tommy rot. If a husband were out of work and had no means to support his wife, who had a private income sufficient to support her, could he succeed in a case of non-support? I hardly think so, since the law steps in and says that she must be in destitute and necessitous circumstances. Had the girl been in want at the time the information was laid the conviction would doubtless have had to stand. Perhaps they intended to remedy the mistake after the conviction was quashed and that is the reason for so many weeks delay in publishing the letters, but they could not find Brown, so they leaned on the phrase, "The pen is mightier than the sword."

If there was so much dissatisfaction in the little camp, it is a wonder that some effort was not made to appeal from the decision of the Judge of the County Court to the Supreme Court.

The Brown case is a little different from the class of cases the amended law was framed for. But, even if it was framed for that class of case, the element of want must be present.

I thank you, Mr. Editor, for giving me the space to correct the erroneous statements made in connection with this case.

Yours truly,
ST. JOHN BRADY
PAUL LONGLEY, Manager
Bank of British North America
Building, Market Square, St. John.

His wife was in court and when her husband was ordered remanded, she asked the court that some provision should be made for herself and her five children, as she said they were in want. The magistrate asked her what church she belonged to and said she would have to look to the church for support, the state made no provision for such cases. Gilbert Laucher, charged with using profane language and interfering with the police in Mill street, said this morning he supposed he was guilty, but did not remember anything about it. Policeman Dykeman said he saw the prisoner talking to pedestrians and advised him to go home, but said Laucher swore at him and he arrested him. He did not think the prisoner had been drinking. The magistrate said he let Laucher out of jail the day before and that anyone who was supplying rum to him was liable to a heavy fine. The prisoner was remanded until Tuesday. Fred Muse, charged with indecency was sent to jail for nine months.

Preparations for the big sham fight to take place at Red Head or thereabouts on Monday, Thanksgiving Day, are proceeding apace, and if the plans of the local militia officers materialize it will be one of the most spectacular affairs pulled off around St. John for some time, and will show beyond a doubt how well the militia has been trained to defend the city from the assaults of the Germans or any other warriors. Col. J. A. McAvity will be umpire-in-chief for the day, and will determine whether the soldiers are shot or not. Captain McAvity, of the permanent company of the 62nd, will have charge of the manoeuvres. All the companies of the Fusiliers are expected to send out men for the fight, and it is hoped the dragoons and artillery will be represented, as work in the tactical manoeuvres can be provided for all comers. The training school being conducted by the officers and twenty-nine N. C. O.'s are taking the courses and all show great interest in their work. So far no instructors from the regular forces have been available to teach the classes of the infantry here, but it is hoped that permanent instructors may be sent here later. There is need of training officers and non-coms, as well as of men for a second contingent. The men who are to take part in the sham fight on Monday will assemble at 9.30. Following the battle there will be a lecture on tactics. Modern Ideas. The Grouch—Ten red and just one man killed—and you call this a play!

Laxative for Old People—'Cascarets'. Salts, Calomel, Pills, Act on Bowels Like Pepper Acts in Nostrils. Get a 10-cent box now. Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is just perfectly natural, but as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic, and the bowels are weaker. So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty. Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is gentle and natural. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

More German Outrages. Paris, Oct. 9.—The Figaro prints a story of the actions of the Germans when they passed through Luxembourg as told by a refugee from that country who has returned to France. The man says the Germans made the Grand Duchess Adelaide a prisoner and placed her in a castle at Nuremberg. He also declares that the German shot the commander and twelve officers of the army of the Grand Duchy and took the 250 men composing it to Germany. The refugee says that factories and villages were razed and the population left in a starving condition. Ostend to Fight to Last. London, Oct. 9.—The communal council of Ostend has passed unanimously a declaration that the town will resist to the last every effort to resist the German advance to the last moment. Rome, Oct. 9.—A despatch from Petrograd says the Italian cabinet is now fighting between German and Austrian prisoners, who accuse each other's generals of responsibility for Russian victories. German Sunk by German Mine. Copenhagen, Oct. 9.—A German fishing vessel has been blown up by a German mine in the Langeland belt north of the coast of Denmark. The captain was killed but the rest of the crew were saved. German Guns at Dardanelles? London, Oct. 9.—A despatch to Reuters from Athens says that it is asserted there that German officers have placed forty-two millimetre guns in a fort in the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus. Italian War Minister Resigns. London, Oct. 9.—General Grandi, minister of war in the Italian cabinet, has resigned, according to a Rome despatch to Reuters. The resignation was the result of newspaper criticism concerning the administration of the department. Australia to Give. Melbourne, Oct. 9.—At the opening of the federal parliament today, the government announced that parliament would be invited to make Belgium a free gift of half a million dollars in recognition of her sacrifices. War Long Drawn Out. Petrograd, via London, Oct. 9.—The Bourse Gazette learns that owing to favorable news from the seat of war subscriptions will be invited for an internal loan of 500,000,000 roubles ($250,000,000) at five per cent. A writer in the Army Gazette estimates that the war with Germany will drag on for a year, because the winter campaign cannot have an intensive character. The fighting will, however, break out again in the spring, he says, with its previous fury. Isaacstein—Ah, yes, madam, here is one of our latest Paris creations. Mrs. Catterson—Paris? Rev. J. E. Shanklin and Miss Kyle Married at Alma Yesterday. Alma, N. B., October 8.—A very pretty wedding took place in the Alma Methodist church at 2.30 o'clock p. m. yesterday when the Rev. Thos. Stebbings of Albert, assisted by the Rev. T. B. Wetmore of Alma, united in marriage Miss Ethel Kyle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Kyle of Alma, and Rev. J. Edward Shanklin of St. Martins. The bride was attended by Miss Myrtle Alexander and the groom by his brother, Robert Shanklin. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, excellently rendered by Miss Greta Conley of Apohaig and their position under an elaborate arch and wedding bell. The bride, who was given away by her father, was beautifully gowned in white crepe de chene, with Princess lace trimmings. She wore a veil and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of cream roses and maiden hair ferns. The bridesmaid was dressed in sky blue voile with satin finish and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and matrimony. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the prevailing colors being white and sky blue. The ushers were Messrs. W. Fenton and Ernest Aitorn. The bride's travelling suite was mahogany voile and hat to match. After the ceremony was over the guests repaired to the home of the bride where a dainty luncheon was served. The popularity of the young couple was testified to by a large number of beautiful presents. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch and to the bridesmaid a pendant. About 2 p. m. the happy couple left by auto for Sussex, thence by rail to some of the beauty spots in Malino and New Brunswick. They will return about the 17th inst, and soon after will take up the active duties of life in the Methodist parsonage at Kingston, N. B. Two Ways of Looking at it. "My farewell appearance was an occasion of the greatest enthusiasm," said one prima donna. "Yes," replied the other. "Isn't it remarkable that such a large number of people should have seemed so delighted to hear you for the last time?"

Funerals. From his late residence, Sand Cove Road, the funeral of Mr. William Bogie took place yesterday afternoon. The funeral was very largely attended and the floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The obsequies were conducted by the Revs. G. Earle and W. M. Townsend. Burial was in Greenwood. The funeral of Mrs. William Mayble took place from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. E. J. Smith, Gullford street, Carleton, to St. George's church, where the funeral service was conducted by the Rev. W. H. Sampson. Interment in Greenwood.

THE ODDS WITH THE ALLIES.

Encouraging information came from the war zone yesterday, in unofficial, though censored despatches. It is that at least the allied armies, operating on the Aisne, have succeeded in gaining success over the enemy, which are believed to be sufficiently important to have a decisive effect upon the battle which has now waged almost four weeks.

The first stage of the European campaign ended with the checking of the German advance upon Paris. Up to that time the Kaiser's armies had been always on the aggressive, steadily going forward to their goal, while the allies, fighting stubbornly and contesting every foot of the ground, were being slowly but surely beaten back. When it was felt that repeated reinforcements had given to Britain and France sufficient strength to oppose the German attack, and there was no chance in not sooner changing the policy, the word was passed to advance and the second stage of the campaign opened with the Germans retreating and the allies gradually regaining the lost ground. That stage of the struggle is still unfinished and it will not conclude until the Germans have been completely driven out of Belgium and back across the German boundary.

During the past ten days the German forces must have been heavily reinforced, for, although opposed by a tremendous allied army, they were able to detach men in sufficiently large numbers to make an attack upon Antwerp, a proceeding the reason for which does not readily appear, unless it be the more or less fanciful one that Germany desires to use Antwerp as a base from which to make aerial attacks upon Great Britain. If such attacks could be made successfully, Britain would probably be placed in a serious predicament, especially if the combined efforts of Zeppelins, submarines and warships of increased armament should prevail against the British fleet. But it is not expected that success would rest with the Germans in such an effort. The British fleet in the North Sea is greatly superior to that of Germany, and if the two should come into general conflict it would be next to impossible to seriously imagine any outcome save a sweeping victory for the more powerful fleet. Man for man the British sailor is at least the equal of his German foe. We believe, and with reason, that the British tar is the finest in the world, but even supposing the German sailor to be his equal, Britain still has an enormous advantage.

It is easier to measure the fighting ability of ships than of men. In comparison of that sort the weight of armament and the offensive power of each unit in the war fleets, can be accurately computed and compared. There is no psychological element to consider; comparison becomes a mere placing side by side of masses of iron and steel, high power engines and devices of war. The strength of the British fleet in the North Sea in numbers, tonnage and weight of armament, is almost three times that of Germany; in other words, Britain could lose two ships to every German ship lost and still have sufficient left after the Kaiser's navy was absolutely accounted for to ravage the German coasts and make it certain that sea-going commerce was completely wiped away. Thus there is absolutely no reason to view with alarm the result of an encounter between the British and German sea power.

On land the situation has been somewhat different. Britain has been handicapped by reason of her inability to quickly assemble, from all quarters of the world, the full force of her army. France has done nobly, but Germany's advantage of being close to the scene of action has proven of much value to her in the early stages of the campaign. In practically every battle she has been able to show a numerical superiority and in operations covering an area so great as the lines along the Marne, or Aisne, weight of numbers is bound to have an effect. It was purely numerical superiority which enabled Germany to get as close to Paris as she did.

Now, however, the situation has changed. Germany has called into service practically every man capable of bearing arms. That she is fighting at her greatest strength is the opinion of most military experts. If these opinions are well founded one does not require to be a military expert or a strategist to conclude that Germany's case must soon become more serious even than it is now. On the eastern frontier the Germans and Austrians are flanked by armies of Russians numerically their superior, and in equipment at least their equal. No matter how slowly the time must come when the weight of the Russian advance will force Germany to face the necessity of either reinforcing the armies or retreating. The situation on the Aisne is very similar. With the allied armies being strengthened practically every day the Germans must be compelled to withdraw under the force of the attack. In fact it would not be surprising if the reports of yesterday prove to refer to the first of the retreating movements they will find imperative. It may be that the conflict on the Aisne will yet last for many days, but in the end victory must rest with the heavier force, for other things being equal, weight will always tell, and the war has not shown that, in any department, the allies are not the equal of their enemies.

As with the Battle of the Aisne, so it is likely to be with future conflicts. The allied forces may meet with reverses, such as are to be expected; there may be occasions and times when the enemy, through superior position or other temporary advantage, will succeed in checking the tide, but such check can be but temporary. All the indications to date go to show that this will be a war of resources, of reserve power. Germany's time of advantage expired the minute the allies were able to match her numerical strength with their own. From now on the odds in favor of the allies must increase. It may be a lengthy war, there is at least no indication that the end is near in sight, but, at least, there is no longer room for doubt as to the ultimate result. That fact alone should inspire complete and abiding confidence.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

That the European war will eventually have a good effect upon conditions in Canada, and that it will precipitate a readjustment which should have come before, is the opinion of W. R. Brock, one of the leaders in the Canadian business life. Mr. Brock, interviewed by the Montreal Gazette, presents the opinion of a man of wide business experience. He does not see blue ruin ahead, but, on the contrary, is inclined to cautious optimism. He is quoted as saying that while the war will mean a squeezing of inflation out of values in Canada, it will eventually prove to the great benefit of this country. The Gazette quotes its informant as follows:

"This is going to be a very hard winter for business generally," said Mr. Brock, "but we cannot blame the war for it altogether. The settling down process was coming anyway, but it was precipitated by the war. During the past few years the wave of prosperity in Canada had led to an inflation of stocks and real estate prices which had led to speculation and a jumping of prices far beyond real values. Those of us who could see ahead realized that a reaction was bound to come, and it was about due when the war brought it on with a rush. While the general settling down meant some present hardships, Mr. Brock considered that it would ultimately prove of benefit, since the forces at the back of Canadian progress were too real to be permanently affected by any readjustment of speculative values."

"This war is going to mean that all this artificial forcing of prices will be stopped," said Mr. Brock. "But when the war is ended there will be a natural rebound, and then Canada's time will come, because we have the resources and the values which the world must recognize. I look for quiet times in business for some time to come. But when the return to normal conditions arrives Canadian business will go ahead on a more solid and healthy basis than ever. This will be helped by the fact that as soon as the nations stop warring and settle down to the pursuit of prosperity there will inevitably be a turning of people toward Canada, with the result that the tide of immigration which is just now stopped, will resume its trend with redoubled vigor. These two factors will undoubtedly mean a considerable reumpirement of prosperity for the Dominion as soon as peace is restored."

INTERESTING TURN IN ALBERT CO. CASE

Albert, N. B., Oct. 9.—The alleged poisoning case was continued today in the police court. At the close of the case Thursday Chief of Police Rideout said:

The best quality at a reasonable price.
A Dutch Child On The Orange River
A ruddy faced, stout-shouldered youngster, playing along the banks of that stream picked up a pretty stone. It was the first South African Diamond. Three years later the Kimberly fields were discovered.
Men and Women in St. John are daily making surprising Diamond discoveries. They find by visiting Sharpe's, that, instead of being jewels for the wealthy only, genuine Diamonds in many exquisite ornaments can be purchased at prices people of moderate means can afford to pay.
The fact that we have not increased prices on Diamonds since the war began is not a surprise for we have stated that welcome information repeatedly in the past 2 months.

Fall In.

(By Harold Begbie in the London Daily Chronicle)
What will you lack, sonny, what will you lack
When the girls line up the street,
Shouting their love to the lads come back
From the foe they rushed to beat?
Will you send a stranger cheer to the sky
And grin till your cheeks are red?
But what will you lack when your mate goes back
With a girl that cuts you dead?
Where will you look, sonny, where will you look
When your children yet to be clamor to learn of the part you took
In the war that kept men free?
Will you say it was naught to you if France
Stood up to her foe or bunked?
But where will you look when they give the glance
That tells you they know you funk'd?
How will you fare, sonny, how will you fare
In the far-off winter nights
When you sit by the fire in an old chair
And your neighbors talk of the fight?
Will you slink away, as it were from a blow,
Your old head shamed and bent?
Or say—I was not with the first to go,
But I went, thank God, I went.
Why do they call, sonny, why do they call
For men who are brave and strong?
Is it naught to you if your country fall
And red is smashed by wrong?
Is it football still and the picture show,
The pub and the betting odds,
When your brothers stand to the ty-rant's blow,
And England's call is God's.

The Modern Submarine.

The recent sensational performance of a submarine in the North Sea, when it within a few minutes totally destroyed three great fighting ships, has aroused great interest in this type of craft that is only now establishing its practicality, and of which but little of a descriptive nature has yet appeared. In an article in the war issue of the Scientific American of October 3rd, an expert on the subject gives the following brief but clear description of this new factor in the supremacy of the seas:

"The following description of the construction and operation of the submarine will apply in its principles to most of the various types employed in the present war."
The form of the hull is generally described as cigar shaped. It is built of the very best quality of mild steel and the workmanship is of the highest order, for the reason that every seam and rivet must be perfectly tight. View of its service which the boat is called upon to perform. Not only do vessels of this type undergo all the stresses of sea and weather which other vessels are subjected to, but in addition they are required to navigate at considerable depths below the surface of the water. At these depths the pressure of the water is great, so that the hull must be made sufficiently strong to withstand it.
For submerged work large storage batteries are provided, which furnish energy sufficient to drive the boat from ten to eleven knots for a period of over an hour. The same electrical energy will drive her at a lower speed for a much longer time.
There are two distinct conditions in which the boat may be used. In the first, commonly known as the surface condition, the boat is prepared for cruising. A considerable portion of her hull is above water, a removable navigating bridge is in place, and she is driven by large powerful internal-combustion engines. Under these conditions she is managed in about the same way as any vessel built to run upon the surface. As for sea-going qualities, the submarines of our own service have been found in practice to be excellent in ordinary weather they are fully as comfortable as any surface craft of the same dimensions, and even in the heaviest weather they are entirely seaworthy.

The second distinct condition exists when the boat is submerged. To pass from the surface to the submerged condition, certain valves in the interior of the boat are opened. This allows the water from the sea to run into great tanks built within the boat, and thus virtually sink her. These tanks are closely gaged, so that just the required amount of water is taken in. Under normal conditions, when the boat is at rest with the ballast tanks filled, she will have a few hundred pounds reserve buoyancy, which is represented by the top of her conning tower protruding above the water. If desired, this buoyancy may be entirely destroyed by admitting a small additional amount of water, equal in volume to the volume of that part of the conning tower above water. While in the submerged condition, all communication with the outside atmosphere is necessarily cut off. The crew then breathes the air contained in the body of the boat. The amount of air originally contained within the hull is sufficient to support life with comfort for about twenty-four hours. But, in addition to the air thus contained, the boat carries a large supply of compressed air in steel tanks, which, if used for breathing purposes, would be sufficient for a number of days.
After having brought the boat to the submerged condition in the manner above described, powerful electric motors are started by throwing in a switch. These motors derive their energy from storage batteries contained in the boat, and drive the propellers. The same storage batteries furnish current for numerous auxiliary motors used for pumping steering, handling torpedoes, etc.

had been examined as to the arrest of the accused and the search of the premises for incriminating evidence at that time and of his finding of a large bundle of letters at that date, Sept. 14th. The chief went yesterday with Mrs. Johnson, the wife of the informant, to Downing's premises and found another package of letters and also a small vial containing a small powder or white crystals which were brought to court.
Dr. Murray of Albert was the first witness today and brought with him into the court a small bottle which he swore contained strychnine. He also examined the contents of the two bottles on white paper in the presence of the court the doctor gave it as his opinion that the powder contained in the vial found at Downing's was strychnine. He said that the texture of the taste was identical with that of strychnine, but that in order to be absolutely certain a chemical analysis will be necessary.
Mrs. Johnson, the wife of the informant in the case, was the next witness and told of how by degree the accused had come into her home and life. She was on the stand at the closing of the court tonight. A letter that she had stated she had received from the accused and had torn up and hidden beneath the chamber floor, was produced in court and is one of the sensations of the trial.

IS MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY SOLVED?
The Finding of the Cabinet Containing the Fortune Has Great Significance.
The night is still, save for the twittering of a robin and the hoot of an owl, silence reigns supreme. Instead of among the rocks that incline toward a brook, the old well stands plainly visible in the moonlight. The branches of the large elm tree that grows majestically near by, are quietly parted, a long pointed hand reaches out, bearing a large sized house cabinet on the cover of which can plainly be seen the name of Stanley Hargreaves. Cautiously and quietly the box is lifted to the edge of the well and a splash in the water indicates that it has found a new hiding place. As mysteriously as he came, so the owner of the uncanny hand departs, with the result that the solution of the Million Dollar Mystery seems further away than ever. Far off in the Atlantic one of the crew of the good ship the Alice B. stares silently at the great moon in the heavens and wonders how that box, he was fortunate or unfortunate enough to lose from the anchor of the ship, just prior to the departure from the Hundred, are seated around a table their thoughts on the mysterious disappearance of that same box from their keeping, and trying in vain to solve a burning problem. In the Hargreaves' home the butler watches Florence and Norton until at an opportune moment he will call upon the latter, and the follower of the Million Dollar Mystery is inclined to wonder, what will happen next. The manner in which the box was found, and the incidents that led up to its being placed in the well will be pictured in the twelfth chapter of the Thanhouser serial, "The Elusive Treasure Box" at the Unique Theatre and Tuesday.

UNIQUE AND LYRIC BILLS NEXT WEEK
Holiday specials will rule in the Lyric the first of the week. The vaudeville bill supplied by Myers and Ford in singing and talking specialties with Jimmie Cowper in black face fun. In the picture department, the Weekly News with a two-part drama, "Shorty in Mexico," will hold feature position.
The holiday bill of fare at the Unique will include the twelfth chapter of the Million Dollar Mystery, "The Elusive Treasure Box," which is claimed to be a budget of surprises. Comedy gags will be found in the two part Keystone fun maker, "The Alarm" and a pretty study of nature will be offered in "The North American Timber Trade."
In the twenty-seventh chapter of "Our Mutual Girl" at the Unique next Wednesday and Thursday, Margaret has her fortune told, and then seeks a person wearing a red rose, she becomes locked in a large tower and after some thrilling experience is released by Dunbar the man of mystery. "Those Happy Days" a brilliant Keystone farce is listed for the same program.
Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the Lyric will present the European novelty illusion act of Previtt and Merrill. Artistic posing is included in their program, and the entire act is dressed in special stage fixtures. The bill of pictures for the latter part of the week will consist of "A Song at Twilight," a Majestic home drama, and a Keystone farce, "The Great Toe Mystery."
Next Friday and Saturday in the showing of the two part Kay Bee act is dressed in special stage fixtures. Scenes showing how dogs are pounded in the larger cities will be presented making this feature a combination of education and amusement as the story itself is a decidedly interesting one.

PATRIOTIC HITS AT THE LYRIC
"Its a Long Way to Tipperary" with all the up-to-date lighting effects.
A decidedly pretty novelty and a distinct departure from anything seen in local amusement circles for some time is being presented at the Lyric Theatre in today's program. This is a special rendition of the popular British marching song, "Its a Long Way to Tipperary." The song is nicely handled by the Hinkley of the vaudeville team of Kendall and Hinkley, whose sweet voice is heard to excellent advantage in this number.
The stage settings and lighting effects are most spectacular and pretty. Two large bars of lights, one red, the other blue, form an angled arch over which is a painting of His Majesty the King set between the French and Russian flags surmounted by a large Union Jack. Beneath this is a large lion set on top of the British flag, and on either side are two lighted shamrocks.
On either side of the stage mounted half way to the ceiling are two more shamrocks in green and gold set off with tiny electric bulbs giving a very pleasing effect. The greatest enthusiasm has been aroused by the audiences at each showing of the setting and apart from the other excellent features on the program is alone worth going to see. The costume worn by Miss Hinkley also calls for much praise. It is a pretty creation of soft pink satin, overdressed with a bodice of heavy Irish lace, in which is set sparkling brilliants. This in turn is set off with a dull shade of pea green. The dress was designed for this special occasion.
Miss Hinkley also offered a pleasing diversion by singing Mabel Godfrey's latest flirtation song, "Just a Whistlin'." It is a bright catchy number and with the incidental whistling of the talented pianist of the Lyric makes a very dainty and odd offering. Miss Godfrey adds another triumph to her already long list in the winning of this effort and leaves no room for doubt as to her ability as a song writer and composer.

EUROPEAN PICTURES AT GEM THEATRE
Next week's features for the Waterloo Street Theatre of intense interest.
When her sweetheart, Lieut. Gibson turned away from her upon seeing her in the garb of a cabaret dancer in a public cafe, Lucille Love became discouraged. Still she roused herself and determined to do her best to outwit her enemy Loubique and secure possession of important documents relative to her father's interests, which he controlled. It was in trying to get these that she was arrested through an error in police orders and taken to prison. She was greatly surprised in being released through orders of Loubique, but realizes the significance of his move later. This is in brief a partial synopsis of the fourteenth chapter of "Lucille Love" to be shown at the Gem Theatre on Monday and Tuesday next, heading a big holiday programme. There is only one further instalment of this splendid series, so that all who have been following the chapters should endeavor to see the last two. A few fleeting glimpses of affairs in troubled Europe are presented in the Sells-Hearst News pictorial for Wednesday and Thursday, among the features to be shown being "Belgian Refugees enjoying British Hospitality," "Germans Entering Brussels," German Artillery in Belgian Capital," and other interesting scenes. For the same show there is a thrilling two-part drama of the Canadian Nor West "The Wilderness Mail" presented with a talented cast, and showing the exciting adventures of the French-Canadian pioneers in that vast prairie. A captivating story of the sacrifice made by a woman in love is told most cleverly in a two-part Essanay feature "The Chasm" to be presented on Friday and Saturday. It is a dramatic love story with a novel theme, in which the shallowness of the man's love is compared to the worth of the woman's.

PICTURE PLAYERS GIVE TO CHARITY
Mutual Stars seen in Wild West Show in Staten Island.
James Durkin's company of Thanhouser-Mutual players recently gave a wild west show in Staten Island a touch of western life. Durkin has been engaged in producing a picture called "Old Jackson's Girl," a drama of the Arnoval days.
His cavalcade of cowmen and cowgirls created something more than a sensation among the commuters' families in this smallest of New York's five boroughs, but it failed to excite the curiosity of a part of the real native Staten Islanders. They stuck to their jobs, paying not half as much attention to the rough riding and shooting as they would to a corncrib fire.

BACK TO NATURE.
Margarita Fischer, star of the Beauty-Mutual motion pictures, usually is seen in evening garb or fashionable morning or afternoon attire. She is so very pretty that her personality is associated with the delicate things of life rather than the rugged. But she has a habit of doing the unexpected and doing it so well that one suspects that, after all, it is just what one had expected.
Now her pretty pink arms are scratched and her ankles and toes are scarred because Harry Pollard, director of the Beauty-Mutual Company, has staged a one-reel picture in which Miss Fischer appears as a child of the rocky waste. Under the name of "Nedra," which gives the play its title, the charming little woman plays opposite Mr. Pollard, with Joseph Harris as an old man of the mountains.
When she returned to the calm and comparative ease of the Santa Barbara studios Miss Fischer vowed that whatever back to nature work she henceforward would do would be done in a Persian garden or on a terraced lawn or on one of those million dollar play toys that superficially are known as country estates. No more barefoot mountain work for her!

PARISH INSTITUTE FOR TEACHERS FORMED AT SACKVILLE
Special to The Standard.
Sackville, N. B., Oct. 3.—One of the most successful institutes ever held in Westmorland County was concluded this afternoon when the greater number of visiting teachers returned to their homes. The morning session was taken up with a very interesting paper which was read and prepared by Miss Maise Ryan, and another by Miss E. Robinson, editor of the Educational Review, after which Inspector O'Brien addressed the meeting.
The afternoon session was not as well attended as might be desired, as many of the teachers wished to reach their homes in the evening. The session was a most profitable one as many interesting talks were given by visiting teachers. The program called for a divided institute, but owing to the absence of some of the teachers this course was not pursued. The election of officers for the ensuing year was dispensed with and at the conclusion a Sackville Parish Institute was formed with the hope that the teachers will set together more frequently and have a freer exchange of ideas.

WIRELESS TELEPHONE.
A real wireless telephone plant is introduced in "The Wireless Voice," a two-reel picture which is now being produced by Fred A. Kelsey at the Mutual studios in Los Angeles.
The complete workings of a wireless telephone outfit are realistically shown in this production, together with a gripping love story in which Irene Hunt, Frank Bennett and Vester Perry are the principals. "The Wireless Voice" will be released by the Reliance as part of the Mutual programme.

THE MONEY FROM THE WORLD OF FINANCE

FOREIGN EXCHANGE PLANS FOR THE ORGANIZATION OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

Good Effect of "Gold Pool" Evidenced—London Market Getting Ready for Normal Trading in Exchange.

New York, Oct. 7.—The most interesting development on yesterday's markets was the very substantial transactions in foreign exchange, at prices close to the recent level. This activity reflected busy trading outside, as well as inside, the scope of the "gold pool" operations, and it suggested that one genuinely good result of the gold-fund plan may have been to cause greater freedom of action in the foreign exchange market generally. This is a necessary preliminary to the creation of conditions under which our export trade will no longer be handicapped through the difficulty of financing it. Figures of last week's exports from New York, published today, were disappointing; they decreased $8,700,000 from the high figures of the week preceding, thus suggesting that some more or less temporary influences may have operated in the earlier week. But that remains to be seen.

Taken as a whole, and excepting the decline in wheat—commonly ascribed to the usual October accumulation of supplies at interior distributing points—the financial situation was at a standstill. In the main, it has been so during a fortnight past. It may be said to have had some points of resemblance to the military situation in France, and there is possibly more than mere fancied analogy in the matter. There was, at all events, a period of financial obfuscation and confusion while the Germans were swinging down toward Paris, followed by a period of distinct improvement and reviving hopefulness when the invaders withdrew toward the Belgian border. The military deadlock which ensued, during the next two or three weeks, was fairly duplicated in the financial status; for the response even to the high remedial measures in the market for exchange, and to the better results in the export situation generally, has been very slow. The financial obstacles have seemed to yield only by inches—the now familiar "von Kluck's right flank."

Whether this means that positive and wide-reaching improvement must depend on the further dislodging of the German forces from their French intrenchments, or whether it signifies an unreserved answer cannot now be given. In so far as our own financial position depends on restoration of credit and confidence, however, it does so depend in large degree on the course of events at the western battlefronts of Europe, and the significance to us of what happens there is a market does not entirely grasp the real influence of such phases in a situation which is not only of world-wide importance, but which has been the cause of our disordered markets of that year had not been primarily the effect of financial matters, but of law prosecutions, but of the highly critical relations, during four weeks of the summer, between France, Germany, and Great Britain, relations which we now can see meant the easy possibility of a "general European" war three years ago.

One development of the day, which excited interest, was the action of London banks in advising correspondents in this city that they could draw upon them for a sum of £100,000, and that they were prepared to advance amounts. This word came from some of the largest banks in Great Britain, and showed that the London market was getting into a position again for normal trading in exchange. A considerable business was done, and some important transactions were put through by interested parties, for the first time of the market for some time. A deal of business was done with the $100,000,000 gold pool, and with brokers direct. In this respect the situation showed decided improvement, since exchange on London was more available than it has been at any time for several weeks.

So far as quotations went, most of the business was done on the basis of 4.95% for sight drafts on London and 4.95% for cable remittances to which the rates were adhered to most of the day, although the demand for cable remittances was at one time broad enough to advance the rate to 4.97%. The rates in general, however, were not materially changed since yesterday, but the situation was easier in that there was more exchange in the market and merchants could buy larger amounts than were previously available. There was larger trading in cable remittances for the simple reason that there was an increased supply of exchange to deal with since the gold fund committee began to sell cable remittances as well as sight drafts.

Some of the out-of-town banks arranged to pay into the sub-treasuries at Chicago and other places considerable contributions of gold certificates for the account of the $100,000,000 gold pool committee, New York. These payments will be available here in a few days, when it is expected that the last banks which have been invited to join the pool will send in their subscriptions. A feature of the selling by the pool so far has been the number of orders executed for buyers at out-of-town points. There has been a large business done with mercantile interests, and it is probable that before the end of the week there will be more business transacted of the sort that is ordinarily done in a normal market.

Some arrangements made by some municipalities to offer long-term loans in the near future. These negotiations were largely tentative, but one or two loans were definitely arranged for, and it is probable that various cities like New Haven and others of similar size will make an offering of long-term bonds, paying 4 1/2 per cent interest before long. The issues will not be large, but they will afford an interesting test of the market for long-term bonds put out by

New York, Oct. 8.—Temporary offices for the new Federal Reserve Bank for this district have been engaged. The general council of the operating officers of the twelve regional or district banks is to be called in Washington in about three weeks to discuss a scheme of organization for the new system as set forth in a comprehensive report by the preliminary committee on organization. This committee was appointed by the Reserve Bank Organization Committee, which now is embodied in the Federal Reserve Board.

The preliminary committee consisted of H. Parker Willis, who drew the original draft of the new Banking and Currency law; Edmund D. Fisher, Deputy Controller of the city of New York; Andrew A. Benton, of the firm of Marwick, Mitchell, Peat & Co., accountants; O. Howard Wolfe, of the American Bankers' Association; Joseph A. Broderick, of the New York State Banking Department; Ralph Dawson, assistant manager of the foreign exchange department of the Guaranty Trust Company; and Stephen H. Farnham, of the Remington Typewriter Company.

In formulating its report this preliminary committee has received advice and suggestions from Mr. Max May, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Company, and from Harry E. Ward and C. C. Robinson, of the Irving National Bank, as well as from Ralph Van Vechten, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago.

Members of the board of directors of the New York district bank said the committee's report was of great value to them in organizing their bank. Instead of having to evolve all the details of organization themselves, they would be presented with a draft which they could accept or change to suit the needs of their particular district.

In its report the committee recommends that a uniform system be adopted for all banks. It presents a set of proposed by-laws and outlines a scheme for accounting that undoubtedly will be accepted, it was said, by all the subject banks.

On the subject of commercial paper for rediscounting, the committee declares the federal reserve act distinctly contemplates and provides for the use of single name as well as of two name paper, on the condition that the single name paper arises from purely commercial classes and not out of speculative transactions in which undue inducements to non-members to enter the system.

Domestic exchange business of the federal reserve system must be so arranged as to be constant and induce members to non-members to enter the system. Federal reserve banks will not handle items of non-member banks there does not appear to be any necessity for a federal reserve bank joining the clearing house in the city in which it is located. It is earnestly recommended that all federal reserve banks be simultaneously opened and not until their functions are as nearly complete and as fully developed as possible.

The governing committee of the Boston curb exchange has voted to reopen the exchange on Wednesday, Oct. 14. Negotiations for reopening the curb exchange have been in progress for some time. It is believed that business can be resumed without disturbing the local banking position in any degree. It is believed that other exchanges closed considerable activity will be experienced.

THE WOOLEN TRADE IN GREAT BRITAIN

In heavy wool district boom has come since war owing to great number of Government orders.

New York, Oct. 8.—Mail advices have been received from England which speak enthusiastically of the condition and immediate prospects of the wool textile industry, which is practically on a war basis. Most every branch of the West Riding trade now feels the impetus of government orders. War requirements are the sole cause of the improvement. A Leeds correspondent says that there is "great briskness everywhere, and the outlook for the winter is decidedly improved." A trade boom is being experienced in the heavy wool district where many mills are running night shifts. The most important work for Great Britain or France, in Huddersfield, the Colne Valley, Dewsbury and Bailley the large orders received from the War Office for khaki and blankets have so changed conditions that many mills are now working overtime. "Consequently," adds the writer, "recruiting has practically ceased in some neighborhoods. Many of the mill hands are Socialists, and others when asked to join the army reply: 'We pay soldiers to do the fighting.'"

The goods now keeping the mills employed have not been wanted in near such quantities for a decade or more. The ordinary wearing apparel for the majority in times of peace is diversified. Almost every man clothes himself as he likes and can afford. Now the millions of men that England is sending to the front have to be clothed all alike. The cloth wanted is heavy stuff, that for riding trousers is some of the strongest cloth made. An ordinary suiting is considered good wearing stuff if it tests 350 to 390 pounds. Khaki serge tests 450 pounds and 388 weight, while Bedford cord tests 527 pounds warp, but only 285 pounds weft. Very little cotton is used in khaki cloths. In the Bedford cord, slight percentages are allowed, but in others, none. To make the worsted yarns employed in manufacturing these goods, New Zealand crooked wools of from 40s to 60s qualities are largely used, and for the woolen yarns the short alped wools of New Zealand and English pulled lambs wools are mostly employed.

Private Enterprises Very Busy It is calculated that approximately 2,000,000 yards of fabrics (khaki cloths for uniforms and overcoats) have been ordered by the British government, and almost as much again is expected. But how many blankets have been ordered is not known. They have been taken in contracts of 100,000 each and the total is immense. Manufacturers have been busy, night and day, in some cases, overtime in others, while large quantities of socks and hosiery goods have been ordered.

This gives an idea of what the West Riding mills and others interested in the work are obliged to take care of for the British government. In addition, a vast number of private enterprises are knitting footwear, underwear, gloves, etc. Every hamlet has its club or society engaged in this volunteer work. All of this semi-public and private activity is due to the demands occasioned by the English army in France. But aside from this the demand of the French government for similar war material has been large and big orders from that country for blue-gray cloth and blankets are now being filled by West Riding manufacturers and merchants.

Certain Materials Scarce and High Tops and yarns of suitable, or popular qualities are scarce, and are rising. Crossbred tops around 40s to 60s qualities become dearer with every fresh demand from the government for manufactured goods to be made from them.

slightly by smashing a two-bagger to the right field wall. He took third on Murphy's out. Maraville to Schmidt, and was left there as Oldring struck out and Collins fled to Doolally.

Boston went out in the ninth on grounders. Deal was out, Baker to McInnis, and Rudoiph who was handsomely applauded by the crowd for the fine game he pitched, was retired, Barry to McInnis, and McInnis to McInnis. Baker's only hit of the game came in the ninth, it was a two-base smash against the right field wall. The game came to an end when Barry was thrown out, Maraville to Schmidt.

JOHNSON FORFEITS BAIL BOND

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The $55,000 bail bonds of Jack Johnson, the prize fighter, was forfeited in the United States District Court, but the government is said to have a poor chance of collecting. The bonds were provided by the late Matthew Baldwin, whose estate is insolvent, and Johnson's mother also said to be unable to pay.

Happenings between now and the day set for the series to open will have some effect on the betting. If the Braves continue at their recent sensational clip during the nine games to be played at the Polo grounds and Brooklyn the wagering will not be far from even money. Within the past month the idea of any National League Philadelphia walkover gradually disappeared, and now there are plenty who like Boston's chances. More money is likely to be wagered this year than was the case a year ago.

Around the City

U. N. B. Student Shoots a Moose. Frank C. Jewett, son of Road Commissioner H. C. Jewett, and a student at the University of New Brunswick, shot a fine moose on the back road near the York county and Sunbury county line yesterday, the head having a spread of forty-five inches.—Fredericton Gleaner.

Social Service

C. D. Howard, superintendent of the social center work for St. John has returned from New York where he studied social center and playground methods. During the winter he will perfect plans for next summer's activities and it is also likely that some work will be carried on during the winter months.

Fifty Skunks

A shipment of about fifty skunks passed through the city last night for Truro. They were captured in the northern part of the province and were being sent through to a ranch in Nova Scotia. The little animals were in boxes but remained quiet while being transferred from the Boston to the Halifax express, the presence was (was) detected by the sense of smell.

Seams on Crepe Dresses

Since the "crepe" materials have come into such general use, especially with the silk "crepes," it brings out the question of how to press the seam without leaving a crease on each side. Take a rolling-pin and pad it well. Place the seam lengthwise on the rolling-pin, face downwards, of course, and press with a hot iron. You will find that the goods will fall away from the seam on the rolling-pin, thus leaving no streak and a much smoother seam than can be secured otherwise.

Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving day will be generally observed here on Monday. Many citizens have arranged to spend the day in the haunts of the woods, deer and ducks, and many have already booked their passage to points close to the woods. In the city all the theatres have arranged for holiday bills, and the horsemen decided to have a grand field day at Moosepath on Monday afternoon when all the best horses of the section may be seen in action. Other outdoor features will likely be announced for Monday.

PERSONAL.

George Bogue Smart, chief inspector of child immigration for the Dominion, is at the Royal. The many friends of Col. B. R. Armstrong will regret to learn that no hope is entertained of the recovery of his young child who has been in an unconscious condition for some days. Hon. John E. Wilson, M.L.A., came into the city last evening from Fredericton, where he was attending the meeting of the provincial government. Mr. R. D. McA. Law (nee Sunderland) will receive for the first time since her marriage on Thursday afternoon, October 15th, at her home, 73 Stanley street, city. Richard O'Leary of Richibucto was in the city yesterday. George McDade has returned from Dalhousie College to spend Thanksgiving at his home here. PARLIAMEN- TARIANS MAY ASSIST IN THE RECRUITING

Sir George Foster and Sir Wilfred Laurier will probably visit province—Local military situation.

Although local officers of the militia are making preparations for starting recruiting for the second expeditionary force which Canada intends to send to the defence of the Empire, they have not yet received definite instructions as to the number of men in the different arms of the service which may be required, though they have been informed that the quota which New Brunswick is expected to contribute will be 1,000 men.

Recruiting officers may be found at the armory, but as yet no special arrangements have been made to enlist men for the second contingent. It is said that practically all the officers and men of the artillery and infantry have expressed a desire to volunteer for foreign service, but pending definite orders from the militia department government officials, but he had an informal talk with the members of the government assembled in Fredericton, and when seen by a reporter yesterday expressed himself as well pleased with the attitude of the provincial ministers to the idea of having New Brunswick represented on the Empire's battle line by a regiment composed of men from this province.

MOVEMENTS TO BRING BELGIAN FARMERS TO NEW BRUNSWICK

Question is engaging attention of immigration authorities and plan may be carried out—Would prove of great advantage to strife ridden country.

The question of bringing Belgian families, turned adrift by the German invasion of their native land, to the Province of New Brunswick, is now engaging the attention of the local immigration authorities. The idea of the authorities is that they may be able to bring out a colony of Belgian people whose names have been placed on the land in New Brunswick. The Belgians are a very intelligent and hard working people, and would make good settlers. Their recent experiences in the maelstrom of war will tend to make many of the Belgians glad of an opportunity to come to this country, and settle on the land.

Assistance now given on cash basis. Result of organization of Dominion Patriotic Fund—Several alleged single soldiers turned out married.

Goods of all descriptions pouring into Relief Depot—Will be appreciated by stricken people.

Belgian aid warehouse is busy place. The Belgian Relief Committee met yesterday afternoon with Mayor Frink in the chair. It was reported that the sum of $1,600 in cash had been received exclusive of the money voted by the county council and city council, and that the indications were that a much larger sum in cash would be realized. It was also reported that the appeal for clothing and provisions to aid the brave Belgians was met with a splendid response, and that a large quantity of clothing and provisions would be shipped next week.

SHIPPERS SHOULD BEAR THIS IN MIND

Provision in War Risks Insurance Scheme re Routes, etc., is for Protection of cargoes as well as of ships.

Special to The Standard
Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Further advice received by the government from the imperial authorities show the importance of shippers bearing in mind that the provisions of the war risks insurance scheme that ships must conform to the orders of the admiralty as to routes, ports of call, stoppages, etc., is designed to be and is in fact a protection for cargoes as well as for the ships.

The following announcement has been made by the war insurance office of the Board of Trade:

"It is an essential feature of the government war risks insurance scheme that all insured ships must obey implicitly orders and directions by the admiralty as to routes, ports of call, stoppages, etc. To avoid misapprehension on this point, the Board of Trade wish it to be clearly understood that this provision is intended to secure the safety of both ship and cargoes, and that any deviation which may be rendered necessary in consequence of admiralty orders or directions is in the interest of the cargo as well as of the ship. It is important that this fact should be borne in mind by all parties concerned in the shipment or carriage of goods on insured ships and that in contracts of carriage the ship owners' obligation to comply with the admiralty requirements should be fully recognized."

JOFFRE BELIEVES IN ACTION, NOT WORDS

Under the heading "Napoleon's Understudy" a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post publishes this sketch of General Joffre, the gallant leader of the French troops in the allied army.

"The greatest general of all time—Napoleon—was a little, squat, fat man, and a Frenchman; and I have the honor to report that the present French general—Joffre—is also a little, squat, fat man. That means what it may mean as the event will show; but so far as patch and equanimity are concerned, there is the resemblance. 'Tres bien' as the French would say.

"And, as has been remarked frequently, the French are a versatile as well as a volatile people; likewise loquacious. Wherefore, being versatile, these same French have versatilely pulled an anomaly in the crisis now existing—that is to say, being a volatile and a loquacious—not to say loquacious—nation, the French have put at the head of their army the only living Frenchman who never says a word.

"They have a President who shoots a passionate declaration on every occasion and a War Minister who weeps for, with and over the children of the country each time a French soldier stabs a German with a bayonet; but they have wisely confined these exhibitions and exhibitions to the rear. The man in front for France—Joffre—says nothing in every patois of the educated warrior, he can say nothing in English and German and Italian—and does just that.

"Barring the heavy mustache that decorates him in company with numerous orders and insignia, Joffre is truly Napoleonic in form and figure. He is short and fat, full of eye and congested of speech; but he is harder than any nails ever made by any nail-maker. He has been at the head of every minute of that time he has been preparing for the struggle in which he is now engaged. And he has made personal parades or ridden abroad on any prancing horse.

"Instead, for example, after the army manoeuvres last year in France Joffre came to his headquarters, and calling for his secretary, issued an order of about thirty words in which he dismissed, without recourse, five of the sandest leading generals of France. He then—give them the sack, as the English put it. He watched their work and it did not suit him.

"Boys," he said, in a manner of speaking, "you wear your epaulettes with exceeding grace, and you look well on horseback; but as spiders you are back in ten days when they fought with the rapier and the rondel. You are herewith discharged. Do you get me?"

"A Non-Gallic General
"They got him and they got out. Likewise, numerous other antiquated things have left the French army in the three years that Joffre has been at its head. You see, though intensely French, he is totally non-Gallic. No sympathies run away with Joffre. He always has his enthusiasms and his temperament under double wraps. When he gives an order he wants that order executed exactly as he gives it, and when he does not give an order he wants that not executed in the same manner. There is none of the Mon cher camarade! business about him. His comrades are dear enough, mayhap; but if they do not do their work they need not come around.

"Joffre was a youngster of eighteen at the Polytechnique when the Franco-Prussian war began. He joined the artillery and was put on fortification work. After the disastrous close of the war he was set to reconstructing the fortifications of Paris and the works at Epinette. Marshal MacMahon went out to inspect these forts one day and was pleased. He called Lieutenant Joffre to him, put his hand on the youth's shoulder and said: 'I congratulate you, Captain Joffre.' And Joffre was but twenty-two.

"They sent him to Pontarlier to assist in the defenses. The soldier in him came out. 'It is excellent,' he said, 'this fortification business, but I don't want to be making forts all my life. I want to command soldiers.'

"Presently his opportunity came. He was put into the field in the Franco-Prussian wars, and he won many victories. After that he saw service in Dahomey, in Madagascar, in Formosa and at Timbuktu, where he reformed and led the shattered columns of Colonel Bonnier and turned defeat into victory.

"So far as actual fighting goes, all his experience, until the present, has been in colonial wars, but when he returned to France, late in the '90's, he attacked with such vigor and with such intelligence the army problems that presented themselves that in 1914 he was made generalissimo, and now the success or failure of the French campaign is up to his empty sleeve, but if Joffre should visit the boulevards when not in uniform he could sit for hours unnoticed in any cafe.

Brooks No Interference.
"He is the protagonist of silence. If you have been watching the despatches from the front up to the time this was written, which was before the great battles in Belgium, you may have observed that the despatches say, 'The French troops,' and that the despatches do not say, except in rare instances, 'The French under the command of General Chapeau or General Favori.' Joffre is not letting on where his brigades are or who they are, for he knows the Germans have accurate tabs on every French commander and know his weaknesses or his strength.

"As Sir John French, under the direction of Lord Kitchener, has done with the English troops, so Joffre has done with the French troops. He is fighting them to the extent where he is fighting them, how he has disposed them, what troops are at any particular place or what generals direct them. Silence is Joffre's policy, as it is England's. If a Frenchman is killed in battle Joffre's aide telegraph to the stricken mother: 'Your son has fallen. That is all. There is no word to tell her where her son fell or what were the circumstances of his death.'

"Joffre is absolute master. So long as he is in command he will be in command. The French Minister of War was quoted the other day as saying: 'I assure you, if I were to take a motor car and drive into the zone of operations without General Joffre's permission General Joffre would turn me out.' 'Joffre will not share responsibility or power in the field or at the front. He will be the boss so long as he is boss, and his one idea is that in war neither fear nor favor, neither politics nor pull nor pity, should influence any action of his. He is a Frenchman who operates along harsh Anglo-Saxon lines. So it has come about that the French soldiers, having been for years extremely communicative, have now reversed themselves under the direction of this thoughtful, tactful, almost meditative man, and are fighting without any flummery and without any fireworks; for Joffre is no political soldier—no warrior of the boulevard. He is a real fighter; and believe me, he has some real fighting to do, as Weber and Fields might say.

SQUIFFLES.

When meat is at such a premium as it is this season, the appetizing and nourishing dishes which may be made from left-overs are well worth considering as items whereby some small saving may be effected.

Beef, Lamb or Veal Souffle

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter with two tablespoonfuls of flour, one scant teaspoonful of salt, two dashes of white pepper, and one teaspoonful of onion juice.

Potato Souffle

Boil until tender six medium-sized potatoes. When done, press through a colander; add one gill of hot milk or cream, one teaspoonful of salt, and the unbroken yolks of three eggs.

Asparagus Souffle

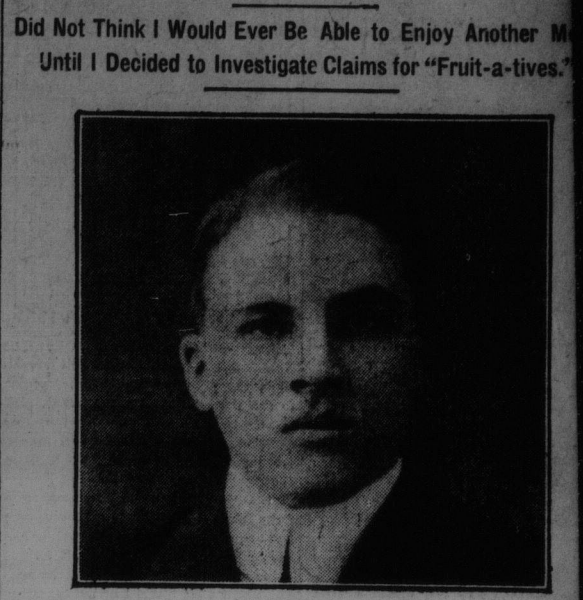

Cook until smooth and clear, one tablespoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of butter, and one and a half cups of milk.

Fish Souffle

For this, use one medium canful of salmon or two teaspoonfuls of any cold boiled fish left over from a meal, except trout; salmon and plain white fish are particularly nice for souffle.

ENGLISH DIPLOMACY IN 1814 RECALLED BY PRESENT WAR

When Napoleon One Hundred Years Ago Was Seeking Terms with Austria English Statesmanship Blocked the Project by Inducing Foes of France to Stand Together to the End and Waterloo Was the Result.

When Sir Edward Grey recently induced Russia and France to sign with Great Britain an agreement whereby peace terms were to be made separate with Germany, and no treaty entered into except as agreed to by the Allies, the British Foreign Secretary nearly put into effect again the same arrangement which at the conference at Chatillon in 1814 bound the Allies in their relations toward Napoleon.

When Napoleon one hundred years ago was seeking terms with Austria, English statesmanship blocked the project by inducing France's enemies to stand together to the end, and Waterloo was the result.

London, Oct. 9.—How the people of Siberia took the news that war had been declared and their action in preparing for it is told in a despatch from Omsk, Siberia, to the Daily Telegraph under date of September 15. The despatch follows:—

"Here in the heart of Siberia the most striking feature to a foreigner of the early stages of the war was the remarkably businesslike fashion in which the country tackled the grim realities of war."

It will be, it means an opportunity for the solution of the much mixed Jewish problem.

"At Semipalatinsk the breweries and vodka shops were closed as soon as war was declared. As soon as the reservists began to pour in with the regularity of a well oiled machine they were sent in one door of the low building which housed military headquarters and sent out promptly, with instructions where to report for service with warrants for steamer and railway travel and with an allowance

Agreement Blow to Napoleon.

The binding of the Allies in 1814 under agreement to enter into no treaty separately completely upset the calculations of Napoleon. Austria was on the point of being detached from the coalition, and only for the intervention of England this result would probably have occurred.

Commencement of the year 1814 found Napoleon in consequence of the reverse at Leipzig, compelled to draw to the westward of the Rhine. The Empire of France at the beginning of that year had the Rhine for its eastern boundary, and included the present countries of Belgium and Holland.

When Napoleon took the field on January 25, 1814, the Allies were approaching Paris; they were directly in France, with a total force of 150,000 men.

RUSSIAN ATTITUDE IN REGARD TO THE EUROPEAN WAR

Hour of Trial Has Appealed to Best Elements of Nation and Is Drawing All Parties More Closely Together.

London, Oct. 9.—An article appearing in the Times in the shape of a letter from Prof. Paul Vinogradoff, corporate professor of jurisprudence at Oxford, is useful in giving the point of view of a Russian towards the present war and towards the conflict of cultures embodied in the Germanic and Muscovite civilizations.

On the subject of Russia, of her civilization, of her army, of the point of view of multitudes of her people as regards the present war, there has been a wide curiosity which it has been impossible adequately to satisfy owing to the general ignorance which obtains in the present war, the subject of the Muscovite empire.

Great Britain's ally is to her a greater stranger than Germany. Everything which is done to dispel this ignorance, for a correct understanding of Russia will be valuable in the great change in national relationships which must follow the present war.

Professor Vinogradoff, as he says himself, cannot be suspected of subservience to the Russian bureaucracy since he had to give up an honorable position in Russia for the sake of his opinions.

Call it a Duty to Speak.

He writes to the Times in the conviction that "in this time of crisis, when the clash of ideas seems as fierce as the struggle of hosts, it is the duty of those who possess authentic information on one or the other point in dispute, to speak out firmly and clearly."

To the claim of Germany that she is fighting in the name of civilization against Muscovite barbarism, Professor Vinogradoff quotes many facts from the period of the war of independence which resulted in the formation of the Germany of the present day, which show that Germany then welcomed the aid of Russia who then denounced the professor also shows that what he describes as the concept of the Germans since 1870 has produced a "magnificent vision which has been manifested in the stupendous blunders" of German diplomacy.

From these considerations Professor Vinogradoff turns to the effect of the present crisis on the Russian people. He says: "But the hour of trial has revealed other things which are appealed to the best feelings and the best elements of the Russian nation. It has brought out in a striking manner the fundamental ideas of Russian political life and the essence of Russian culture, which so many people have been unable to perceive on account of the chaff of the success. Russia has been going through a painful crisis."

Outward Casing Too Narrow.

"In the words of the manifesto of October 17-30, 1905, the outward casing of her administration has become too narrow and oppressive for the development of society with its growing needs, its altered perceptions of rights and duties, its changed relations between government and people. The result was that deep-seated political malaise, which made itself felt during the Japanese war, when society at large refused to take any interest in the fate of the army; the feverish rush for 'liberties' after the defeat; the subsequent reign of reaction and repression, which has cast such a gloom over Russian life during these last years."

"But the effort of the national struggle has dwarfed all these misunderstandings and misfortunes, as in Great Britain the call of the common motherland has dwarfed the dispute between Unionists and Liberals. Russian parties have not renounced their aspirations; Russian Liberals, in particular, believe in self-government and the rule of law as firmly as ever. They have, however, realized as one man that this war is not an adventure, engineered by unscrupulous ambition, but a decisive struggle for independence and existence; and they are glad to be arrayed in close ranks with their opponents from the Conservative side."

"A friend, a Liberal like myself, writes to me from Moscow: 'It is a great unforgettable time; we are happy to be all at one.' And from the ranks of the most unfortunate of Russia's children, from the haunts of the political exiles in Paris, comes the news that Bourget, one of the most prominent among the revolutionary leaders, has addressed an appeal to his comrades urging them to stand by their country to the utmost of their power."

Centre of Authority.

"I may add that whatever may have been the shortcomings and the blunders of the Russian government, it is a blessing in this decisive crisis that Russians should have a firmly knit organization and a traditional center of authority in the power of the Czar. The present Emperor stands as the national leader, not in the historic attitude of a war lord, but in the quiet dignity of his office."

"He has said and done the right thing, and his subjects will follow him to a man. We are sure he will remember in the hour of victory the unstinted devotion and sacrifices of all the nationalities and parties of his vast empire. It is our firm conviction that the sad tale of reaction and oppression is at an end in Russia, and that our country will issue from this momentous crisis with the insight and strength required for the constructive and progressive statecraft of which it stands in need."

"Apart from the details of political and social reform," continues Professor Vinogradoff, "is the regeneration of Russia a boon or a peril to European civilization? The declarations of the Germans have been as misleading in this respect as in all others. The master works of Russian literature are accessible in translation nowadays, and the cheap taunts of men like Bernhardi recoil on their own heads."

"A nation represented by Pushkin,

The Clique Who Surround The Kaiser

On his return from Europe the other day Mr. Andrew Carnegie, said in a report that the war was not the Kaiser's doing, but the work of "the military clique, the caste that overrules the really great men of Germany, the philosophers, scholars and those who did not want war."

This remark quite naturally leads to the inquiry as to the membership of this clique and no better portrait of these wicked partners are to be found than those penned by Mr. Fredrick William Wille in "Men Around the Kaiser; the Makers of Modern Germany." This book was reviewed in the Herald a year ago, when it was first published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company, of Indianapolis, but the war has given it a new interest as it has been given a new review in the "Pan-Germans," reviewed in this column recently. Its author was for many years a newspaper correspondent in Berlin and is obviously familiar with his theme.

In his new preface he explains how the Kaiser within the brief period of two months created a war party which now contains nearly the whole of the population and the Kaiser himself, many a late of blighted hopes and innumerable aspirations, but none of its dramatic outbursts the story of Count Zepelin's triumph over failure and disaster. No man ever climbed to greatness over obstacles more relentlessly. Few have survived such blows as fate rained on his snow white head mercifully for twenty years. The portrait of Count Zepelin shows his marked resemblance to the late John Gibson, of Boston and Broadway.

Count Zepelin, whom the Kaiser proclaimed as the greatest German of the twentieth century, did not become famous until his seventeenth year. "The scroll of the world's inventors holds many a tale of blighted hopes and innumerable aspirations, but none of its dramatic outbursts the story of Count Zepelin's triumph over failure and disaster. No man ever climbed to greatness over obstacles more relentlessly. Few have survived such blows as fate rained on his snow white head mercifully for twenty years. The portrait of Count Zepelin shows his marked resemblance to the late John Gibson, of Boston and Broadway."

What Von Tirpitz has done for the German fleet Albert Ballin, director general of the Hamburg-American, has done for the German mercantile marine. He has made it. Historians of the German empire of today, when they write of the race which storied in battalions, battle ships and business, will give high place, if they have read the signs of the time aright, to the unassuming Hamburg Jew, who has renounced titles, honors and office, but not his creed. He stands in the same relation to the Kaiser as did Rothschild of Paris to Napoleon III, and Bleichroder of Berlin to William I. The secret of his success lies in his indexed mind, which leads him to lay stress on the unconsidered trifles and store them up systematically. Even when he was a shipping clerk in England he developed a fabulous memory for trifles. As soon as he learned a thing he numbered, labelled and filed it away in the well ordered archives which serve him as a brain.

A strong power behind the throne is Prince Furstenberg, a German-Austrian grand seigneur and multi-millionaire, the head of the "princes trust" and the holder of hereditary seats in four different kingdoms. "Soldier, poet, artist, musician, sportsman and archaeologist, he presents the kaleidoscope of nature surest of enduring itself to the versatile William." It is to his castle in the Black Forest that the Kaiser goes when most in need of rest and recreation.

The author describes Count von Bernstorff as a German diplomat of the highest type—the kind of envoy who believes in laying his cards on the table. There is nothing Machiavelian in his methods. He does not transact diplomatic business with a dark lantern. He is not afraid to talk. Directness is the chief by which he says the most. He thinks the Kaiser who said that tariffs in Rome ought to do as the Romans had done, was cutting his cloth to the American measure from the hour he set foot on Massachusetts avenue.

Count Zepelin, whom the Kaiser proclaimed as the greatest German of the twentieth century, did not become famous until his seventeenth year. "The scroll of the world's inventors holds many a tale of blighted hopes and innumerable aspirations, but none of its dramatic outbursts the story of Count Zepelin's triumph over failure and disaster. No man ever climbed to greatness over obstacles more relentlessly. Few have survived such blows as fate rained on his snow white head mercifully for twenty years. The portrait of Count Zepelin shows his marked resemblance to the late John Gibson, of Boston and Broadway."

When the nerve force expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Maxton, Sask., writes: "I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning, I am strong and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

HOG CHOLERA

Outbreaks of hog cholera are being dealt with in several of the provinces, but it has been possible, through the enforcement of the policy of the department of agriculture at Ottawa, to check the infected areas.

Policy.—The policy followed is one of compulsory slaughter and compensation. Directly a suspected outbreak is reported, an inspector is sent to the premises to make an investigation. A post mortem examination is made of any carcasses which may be found, and, if lesions of this disease are detected, all the hogs on the premises are immediately slaughtered, the carcasses are deeply buried, together with the scrapings of the yard, and other inoperative, contaminated material. The hog pens and yard fences are then disinfected under official supervision, and the yards are sprinkled with lime and ploughed under.

In dealing with outbreaks during severe weather when it is quite impracticable to make a thorough cleaning and disinfection is delayed until conditions are suitable.

The yards are, however, tightly fenced so as to prevent access to all stock. Adjoining premises on which hogs are kept, but which have not been in direct contact with the diseased herd, are quarantined, and the owners advised to slaughter all hogs which are fit for the block.

By reducing the hog population in the vicinity of an outbreak, the work of eradication is simplified, and the owners do not lose as heavily in case the disease breaks out on their premises.

Sources of Infection.

Hog cholera is a most highly infectious malarial, and the infection is easily carried by very many different channels. An infected hog is, of course, the most dangerous source of infection, but infected matter from his pen can be carried by inquisitive neighbors, dogs, or other animals, which may come in contact with him or his surroundings by carrying the germs which are found in the soil and litter upon their feet and hooves.

The experience of this branch in dealing with this disease in recent years points very strongly to the infection being introduced on the premises through the feeding of garbage.

This material is, under the best conditions, a very unsuitable food. It is most important, therefore, that the feeding of garbage to hogs should be strongly discouraged.

Upon visiting premises upon which garbage is fed, it is not unusual to find hog shanks, pieces of spoiled hams, and bacon, as well as quantities of musty sausage. In view of the fact that large quantities of American pork is consumed in this country, and of the further fact, that this disease is prevalent in the United States, it is quite possible that the infection is brought on to premises through this means.

Amendment to Regulations

Very thorough and careful investigations from time to time into the actual source of infection of outbreaks of this disease have shown very clearly that many of our outbreaks have been started through feeding garbage. It was therefore necessary, in view of the compensation policy of this branch to amend the hog cholera regulations. The following section was therefore added, which reads as follows:

"Compensation may be withheld in the case of hogs fed on uncooked garbage or kitchen refuse, or on any raw animal flesh or similar food likely to convey the infection of hog cholera or swine plague."

It has, however, been found that although some hog raisers collect city garbage, and have appliances for cooking it, that this material is not sufficiently cooked to destroy the virus, and consequently, outbreaks have occurred. In such cases the Department withholds compensation, unless another source of infection is clearly demonstrated.

The disease may also be introduced on to any premises by means of contaminated food.

It has been suggested that outbreaks have occurred through feeding American corn.

The virus of this disease can be so easily introduced that individuals, who expect to make the hog raising industry a profitable one, would do well to seriously consider the source of all feeding material used on their premises.

Rate of Compensation

Although the Department pays compensation at the rate of $10.00 per mature hog for grades, and $35.00 for mature pure bred animals, an owner, who is unfortunate enough to experience an outbreak of this disease, is a heavy loser. Compensation can only be paid under the Act for hogs which are actually destroyed under the supervision of a veterinary inspector, and, as this disease is in many cases extremely fatal, it is not at all unusual to find a large number of hogs lying before an inspector arrives on the premises.

It is also necessary to prohibit an

Excess of Water in Butter

In Canada, as in most countries, it is not legal to manufacture, import or sell butter which contains more than 16 per cent of water and as a rule the butter manufactured in this country is safely within this limit. Occasionally, however, either by accident or design, butter made in creameries is found to contain water in excess of the above standard. In Montreal, within the last year unscrupulous dealers have developed the fraudulent practice of adding as much as 30 to 40 per cent of water to butter by means of re-churning, re-working, etc. Inspectors of Dairy Products employed under the direction of this Branch, discovered what was going on and in November last proceedings were taken against 12 dealers. The cases were first heard on November 11th, and on the 14th of that month one of the defendants pleaded guilty to two charges on which he was fined $10 and costs in one case and $200 and costs in the other. Three more cases were postponed from time to time for various reasons, but on March 30th and April 3rd, fines were imposed with costs on all the defendants.

This year the number of inspectors of Dairy Products has been increased to six and a vigorous campaign against the sale of butter containing more than 16 per cent of water is in progress. Two of the inspectors are paying particular attention to the prairie provinces and within the last month they have instituted proceedings in eight cases, namely at Brandon, Melita, Regina and Medicine Hat; a case is also pending at Toronto.

Made in Canada.

That the Canadian public, in this time of disturbed conditions, should, whenever possible, insist on purchasing goods "Made in Canada" is nothing more than a simple duty. It has been repeatedly pointed out that one of the great necessities of the day is to keep business conditions in Canada as near as can be at the normal standard. To do this it is necessary to prevent undue diminution of production in our manufacturing, to keep the wheels of industry in operation and our workmen employed. The war in Europe will not mean the crippling of any line of Canadian industry. It may mean a readjustment until the world situation changes but there is no reason why it should add to commercial or financial depression if our own people mark out for themselves a policy which will assist in bringing about the condition we all desire.

In times of peace, the Canadian manufacturer, with world wide markets to choose from, can cater to his export business but at present conditions are not as usual. Many foreign markets are temporarily closed, and if we would prevent stagnation and curtailment of industry with the accompanying depreciation of wages and lack of employment we should take steps to develop the home market. The manufacturers in Canada are doing their part. Some plants are being kept in operation merely to provide employment to faithful workers, but with foreign markets cut off there must be surplus stocks unless the home market is developed to a point where it can absorb the goods produced here.

One of the steps most likely to lead to the stage where the home market is sufficiently profitable to allow the manufacturers to keep their looms busy and their furnace fires lighted is to demand "Made in Canada" goods, and be satisfied with none other. Such a course does not entail a sacrifice, for the Canadian workman and the Canadian plant in all lines can produce as good an article as can be made elsewhere. The workman himself will be the first to make this claim and if he is justified in it it is not too much to expect that he will purchase the product of his fellow workmen.
