Lake Medad

Some people have said that Lake Medad is the basin or crater of some long-extinct volcano, and the formation pretty well justifies the belief. But that must have been in the days even perhaps before Noah had occasion to change his business from farming to navigating. It is a queer fact, however it may be accounted for, that the lake basin is placed away up on the hills behind the valley of the bay, and that by actual measurement the hard bottom is not struck until a depth of nearly 80 feet has been reached. Of course, there is not an 80-foot depth of water. The water at its deepest point is never more than 20 feet deep, but there is a substance below the water that is in many places almost as yielding, and it is through this substance that the greater depth is reached.

All around the lake basin is the marsh or bog land, so soft in places that at this season of the year, when spring dampness prevails, a pole may be thrust down in it to almost any depth with the greatest ease. It gives one a very insecure sensation to walk on the spongy substance, but it is safe enough, there being no record of anyone ever having disappeared beneath its surface.

There is one thing which the traveller to Lake Medad cannot fail to note as he walks or rides towards the lake. A short distance beyond Waterdown he passes over a bridge spanning a swift running creek, the waters of which are tumbling over the stones in a mad race for their final absorption in Hamilton Bay. But a short distance further along the road he crosses another bridge over another creek, whose waters are turned in the opposite direction and seek their outlet in Lake Medad. Somewhere between these two points is the ridge making the fall north and south. The waters that tumble into the bay have this advantage over the waters flowing into the lake—they remain in full view of all the world till they reach the ocean, while the waters that flow into the lake are never seen again. They rush on, dancing over the stones in the creek bed, never thinking of their terrible fate until suddenly they find themselves swallowed up in the lake expanse and can find no way of escape. Other waters come rushing in just as they did, and they give way, sinking to the depths, never to be seen again. For though Lake Medad takes all the waters it can get it never willingly gives up any, so far as mortal eye can see. Down below somewhere there may be an outlet, and in some subterranean passage, some fissure in the foundation rocks of the earth, it may escape, but to where no one knows. The lake takes and takes, but never gives.

It has been a popular delusion with many people that to fall into the lake meant sure disappearance for good. This is not so. Twice in the history of this generation have the waters claimed human victims, but in both cases the bodies have been yielded up again after a brief period. In both cases the drowned ones were skaters—boys who ventured on the ice when it was not safe. In fact, the bog bottom is stable enough to hold tools that have been dropped in by the ice cutters during the winter, and in summer picnic parties go in bathing along the shore without danger of disappearance in the soft bottom.

When the water power for the Waterdown mills began to fall some years ago it was thought that if a canal was dug from the lake to the Waterdown creek a perpetual and efficient supply of water would be assured. The canal was dug and opened, but the vain hope of the men who did the work was never realized. At first there was a great rush of water and everything went well, but very soon the lake level dropped to the level of the canal and no more water came. This showed that though many springs and creeks ran into the lake, sufficient to keep it full, it would stand no large draw off and was quite well able to dispose of all its own surplus in its own way, whatever that way is. And so the Waterdown people were disappointed and had to turn to steam power and later to electric, and the lake saved itself. It has to give up some of itself in winter time, though, for there is no ice to the farmers around these parts like Lake Medad ice, and there are busy scenes there during the ice season.

Some years ago some utilitarian discovered that the bog of the lake was rich with Portland cement marl. A Hamilton company was formed and there was promise that the spot, so long saved in its natural beauty, would become the seat of a great industry; that the hand of the capitalist, careless of everything save wealth, would destroy the last trace of original loveliness about the place and that the Lake Medad of old would live only as a memory. Needless to say, the thriving business to be come to naught, and Lake Medad still holds its old time beauty, a romantic spot for the tourist, but a place very little appreciated by our own people.

About the beginning of June there will be a great meeting in Ottawa to launch formally the public commencement of the Anglican Forward Movement campaign, which is to take place in November. It is hoped that the Governor-General will be and act as Honorary President of the movement. There is also to be an Inter-Church campaign, in which Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists and Congregationalists will act with the Anglicans. The object is to wake up the people of the churches, then great opportunity for service.

The Canadian Government, since the commencement of the war, has issued domestic loans as follows:

1. 1915-1925, 5 per cent., amount of loan, $100,000,000; number of subscribers, 24,862.
2. 1916-1931, 5 per cent., amount of loan, $100,000,000; number of subscribers, 34,526.
3. 1917-1933, 5 per cent., amount of loan, $129,000,000; number of subscribers, 41,900.
4. 1917-1937 (Victory Loan), 5½ per cent., amount of loan, $398,000,000; number of subscribers, 820,035.
5. 1918 (2nd Victory Loan), 5½ per cent., amount of loan, $660,000,000; number of subscribers, 1,057,829.

The Royal Military College has a very distinguished record in connection with the war of the 914 graduates and ex-cadets who have served, 353 were granted commissions direct from the College, and 43 enlisted with a view to obtaining commissions; 138 ex-cadets have been reported as killed in action, died of wounds, or missing.

Ex-cadets of the College have won the following honors and decorations: 1 Victoria Cross and 3 recommendations for the Victoria Cross, 106 D. S. O.'s, 109 M. C.'s, 2 Distinguished Flying Crosses, 62 other decorations of Britain, 42 foreign decorations. The College has had between 1,399 and 1,400 cadets on its rolls since its foundation.

The Canadian troops have captured 45,000 prisoners, 850 artillery guns and 4,200 machine guns, have retaken 130 towns and villages and liberated 310,000 French and Belgian civilians.

Canada is fortunate in the possession of a small but excellent Naval College. More than 50 officers who passed out of the college as cadets are serving in either the Imperial or Canadian navy. Many of them have gained distinction, and four lost their lives in the battle of Coronel.

Harry Lauder Knighted

Knighthood has seldom been bestowed with such general acceptance throughout the Empire as in the case of Harry Lauder. The Scotch comedian is probably better known by sight and voice than any other person of the English-speaking race. His collective audiences number millions, and his admirers as many. Before the war broke out he was regarded by many whose opinion carries weight as the most remarkable entertainer on the stage, one who approaches genius as closely as it has been approached by any comedian in generations. It is doubtful if there is any more magnetic personality before the public in any capacity, a richer, more unctuous voice, a ripier humor.

But it is announced that the knighthood has been conferred in recognition of Lauder's war services to the Empire, and there can be no dissent on that ground. His only son, on whom all hopes were fixed, fell early in the struggle. That bereavement seemed but to deepen the patriotic fervor of the father. Henceforth his concert engagements were regarded merely as a means to an end, the end being to cheer the soldiers and impress upon those who remained at home the tremendous issues at stake and their duty to the men in the trenches. At the front he sang to the soldiers, and we have the testimony of more than one that his visits to France meant more to them than the visits of any other person. At home he sold Victory Bonds, having invested practically all his own savings in the British war loans.

His war speeches were among the most thrilling that local audiences, at least, ever heard. Sir Harry Lauder has deserved well of his country and of the Empire, and it speaks well for the essentially democratic institutions of the British Isles that one who began life as a pit boy should have won world-wide fame, a fortune and a title before he had passed the full vigor of his prime.

The yield of potatoes throughout Canada would be very much increased if every one who grew potatoes used seed of the strongest vitality, free from disease. While the variety used is important the quality of the seed often makes much more difference in the yield than the variety. Seed potatoes from a crop which grew vigorously until the tops were cut down by frost in autumn usually give much better returns than those from a crop where the tops died up in the middle of summer. There are parts in Canada where the former conditions obtain, as a rule, and it is from such places that the most vigorous seed is usually obtained.

The number of V. R. O.'s who have gone overseas is 342, who have served in hospitals in England and France.

Australia is going to begin deporting Germans. The British admiralty recently notified Canada that 109 aliens to be deported could be accommodated aboard ship, but evidently Australia is going to do her own deporting. She has a state merchant fleet that comes in quite handy.

It is the chief purpose of tillage to improve the conditions of the soil in order that it may better minister to the plants, which need moisture, air, warmth, food and proper environment. Perhaps the most important factor in crop production is the proper supply of moisture, for on this depend all the others. If the water is in excess, the soil is cold and germination and growth slow. Air cannot reach the roots and the plants suffocate, grow quickly and refuse to assimilate the food. If on the other hand the water is sufficient no amount of air, warmth or food can avail to produce the crop.

CRADLE SONGS

So Old as to Be Literary Curiosities.

Almost all popular cradle songs are very old, some of them so old that were they not familiar, they might be considered the veriest curiosities of literature. Through all the changes of language they have held their own upon the lips and in the hearts of the people, observes a writer in Kansas City Journal.

From mouth to mouth they have come down through the years with an irresistible swing of rhythm and pattern and jingle of words till they seem to have been rather a natural growth than a human invention.

In all the melodies there is a certain likeness of rhythm with a national, I might say a temperamental, difference of movement and of meter from the slow assured major of the German to the wild plaintive minor of the Scotch, characterized by the short accented notes of the weirdness of the Hungarian with its sudden changes.

That these old songs should have embodied and retained the characteristics of the people among whom they originated gives them an importance which their crude words and the elementary character of their melodies scarcely seem to warrant. The words often seem a mere meaningless jumble the melody is always within the easy compass of home voices. No doubt both express, in some supernally wise way, the one unalterable sentiment of maternal love.

It may be that even the words of these baby songs had originally some significance they have since lost. The mother little thinks that "Bye Baby Bunting" was once a tale full of verity. To her the rabbit skin is indeed a "fairy tale," for she much prefers dainty muslins and silks and laces. While, though, "papa" may be a mighty hunter, it is well known that the game he bags is dollars. But in that time, antedating civilization, when this song was first sung, the rabbit skin was an important part of the baby's wardrobe.

It was then that it became crystallized in song so that muslins and laces have never been able to supersede it, and it has become one of those incantations that set baby off on journeys of his own through dreamland. It is but one of his many illusions.

City of Gotham.

"City of Gotham" is a nickname of foreign origin with no particular applicability. Gotham is the name of an ancient village in England, whose inhabitants, according to tradition, once escaped a burdensome duty about to be put upon them by feigning stupidity. This smart trick in pretending to be fools gave rise to the expression "the wise men of Gotham," and the story of "the three wise men of Gotham who went to sea in a bowl." The name was first applied to New York City in a humorous magazine called "Salmagundi," started in 1807 by Washington Irving and two or three others, in which they made fun of the pretensions of some of the "wise men of Gotham," meaning the New York of that day. The magazine was read, the fun-making approved, and the nickname became apparent.

LONG-LIVED INSECT.

The Cicada, or Tree Cricket, Has an Interesting History.

The longest-lived of American insects and the most persistent of our music makers, is the "tree cricket," usually incorrectly called "the locust." The Latin name is "cicada," meaning "tree cricket," and the insect has an interesting history.

It is the longest-lived of our insects for the reason that it requires seventeen years to attain its growth. If they appeared every year or two in the same locality in great numbers, as do our locusts, also misnamed grasshoppers, fruit and forest trees would suffer from their attacks.

There are several distinct broods of these tree crickets in different parts of the United States, and these appear at different times. Three of these colonies in the Southern States are credited by naturalists with having periods of thirteen years in which to come to maturity instead of the full period of seventeen years.

The cicada has a broad head with short antennae. But look at its eyes. Not only has it a large convex eye on each side of the head, but it has three simple eyes on the crown. It has three joints in the feet and wings, with wing covers in both sexes. The body is black, banded with red on the abdomen. The veins of the wings are red and orange. The eyes are red.

The males are the musicians. That loud, shrill, piercing sound which carries to a great distance, is made by a kind of base fiddle, an apparatus at the lower part of the abdomen across which they drag their wings, and there it is, the fiddle and the bow.

The cicada or tree cricket has short legs and is devoid of the power to leap like the grasshopper or the locust. It lives only a few weeks after arriving at perfection. It then performs the work of reproduction and dies. The eggs are laid by the female in silts cut in the bark of live twigs and by feeding on the twigs and leaves that injury is caused to the trees. The young which are hatched in about six weeks, do not feed on the leaves, but drop to the ground. There they bore down to the root juices. When about to become adult, the insect crawls out of the ground, molts for the last time and flies to the tree top.

The American tree cricket announces his arrival in July. It is a current saying when the cicadean fiddler gives his overture that it is "just six weeks until frost." Fortunately the prediction usually fails.

ISN'T THIS TRUE, TOO?

If you want to live in the kind of a town, Like the kind of a town you like, You needn't slip your clothes in a grip And start on a long, long hike. You'll only find what you've left behind

It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town— It isn't the town, it's you! Real towns are not made by men afraid

Lest someone else gets ahead, When everyone works and nobody shrinks

You can raise a town from the dead. And if, when you make your personal stake, Your neighbors can make one too Your town will be what you want to see

It isn't the town—it's you!

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipated children can find prompt relief through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are mild but thorough laxative, which never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion; colds and simple fevers. Concerning them Mrs. Gaspard Daigle, Demain, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have been of great benefit to my little boy, who was suffering from constipation and indigestion. They quickly relieved him, and now he is in the best of health." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Pope's Title.

The official title of the present Pope of Rome is Benedict XV. His name is Giacomo Della Chiesa, and he was born near Genoa, Nov. 21, 1854. His father, Giuseppe Chiesa, was a nobleman of considerable wealth, and the future Pope began his clerical career with the advantage of the best education money could procure. He is regarded as a scholarly and gifted man of affairs. In his first encyclical, issued Nov. 1, 1914, he said: "The immense spectacle of a general war has struck me with unutterable horror and sadness."

Fish Killed by Cold.

It has been proved that sudden cold sometimes causes the death of thousands of fish in the shallow waters of the tropics and subtropics. Many species are so chilled as to become helpless, and either killed directly by drowning or are washed ashore in a comatose state. The phenomenon is known locally as "freezing," although the temperature of the water may be several degrees above the freezing point.

CATCHING A SPY.

Girl Censor Found Meaning of Incriminating Marks.

The curtain is now lifted in regard to at least one of the dozen spies shot at the Tower of London during the war. He was tracked by the alertness of a woman postal censor.

"One letter," she says, "made me suspicious from the first time I saw it. The writing was in lines half an inch apart. I could discover nothing wrong, however, until I noticed a peculiar little mark, almost indistinguishable, at the bottom of a page. I could not explain it. Experiment proved that it had been made by invisible ink. The visible writing was innocent itself, but the invisible writing told of movements of ships and soldiers, of fortifications and docks. The letter wound up with, 'To-morrow Dublin.'"

"To Dublin the Hun went, and his letter from Ireland was further evidence of his guilt. He was caught on arrival in London and execution followed."

"I'd like to know one thing, pop."

"What is that, son?" "Do they pay the submarine crews from the sinking fund?"—Baltimore American.

PALE AND WEAK DESPONDENT PEOPLE

OWE THEIR CONDITION TO WEAK, WATERY BLOOD—HOW TO REGAIN STRENGTH.

Every woman's health is peculiarly dependent upon the condition of her blood. Far too many women suffer with headaches, pains in the back, poor appetite, weak digestion, palpitation of the heart, a constant feeling of weariness, shortness of breath, pallor and nervousness. Of course all these symptoms may not be present in any particular case. They are merely a warning that the blood is out of order, and that it is thin and watery, and if you note any of these symptoms in your own case, you should lose no time in taking the proper steps to enrich and purify the blood. Anaemia—poverty of the blood—is a most insidious disease and if allowed to run will end in a complete breakdown of the system. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are, beyond doubt, the greatest blood-making tonic offered the public to-day. For more than a quarter of a century they have been the stand-by of hundreds of thousands of people in all parts of the world. No other medicine has ever achieved such world-wide popularity, and the reason is that this medicine does what is claimed for it, enriches and purifies the blood, thus bringing new strength to every organ and every nerve in the body. In this way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills bring new health to weak, despondent people. Among the many who speak highly of this medicine is Mrs. Louis D. Larns, Windsor, Ont., who says:—"It would be impossible for me to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. Some years ago I was very thin and pale; I suffered many of the symptoms of anaemia, and always felt tired, depressed and weak. I had tried several medicines, but they did not seem to help me. Then acting on the advice of a friend, I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had used half a dozen boxes I was actually feeling like a new person and had gained nine pounds in weight. I continued taking the pills until I had taken a dozen boxes, and from that time I have always enjoyed the best of health. I freely write you this letter in the hope that some woman in need as I was, will see it and be benefited as I have been."

Most of the troubles that effect mankind are due to impoverished blood, and will promptly disappear if the blood is built up and renewed. If you are ailing, give this greatest of tonic medicines a fair trial and it will not disappoint you. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be procured through any dealer in medicines, or will be sent by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Flight Negotiated.

Portuguese Capital Gave Great Welcome.

Lisbon cable says: The U. S. seaplane N. C-4 arrived here this evening.

The achievement of the first trans-Atlantic air flight, with Lisbon as the first European stopping point, has aroused the enthusiasm of the Portuguese as no event has stirred them for many years. When the American seaplane N. C-4 came over the Tagus river this evening the populace, crowding all place of vantage, gave full expression to this enthusiasm by cheers of welcome, the booming of guns and the ringing of bells.

Early in the day word was flashed that the NC-4 had started, and at intervals there were bulletins of the progress made. The whole city was in a fever, and during the late hours of the day virtually all business was abandoned by those who crowded everywhere to witness the arrival.

Guided by skillful hands the plane, which had covered the distance between the protecting destroyers along the route with clocklike regularity, swept over Lisbon and settled down gracefully near the cruiser Rochester.

A Pill That Proves Its Value.—Those of weak stomach will find strength in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, because they serve to maintain the healthful action of the stomach and the liver, irregularities in which are most distressing. Dyspepsias are well acquainted with them and value them at their proper worth. They have afforded relief when other preparations have failed, and have effected cures in ailments of long standing where other medicines were found unavailable.

COUNTER-PLANS FROM GERMANY

To the Peace Treaty of the Entente Allies.

Hun Fleet Under International Trust.

Paris cable: A Berlin despatch received in Paris gives in some detail the counter-proposals to the peace treaty of the Allied and associated powers which were agreed on at the last conference of the Germans at Spa. The counter-proposals will make a volume of respectable dimensions.

Concerning the Saar region, Germany will ask France to give up her territorial pretensions to this region and permit economic control over all the coal output there.

It is proposed that the German fleet be transferred to an international trust, managed by the Americans and controlled by the League of Nations. The trust would be given the mercantile fleets of all the other maritime nations, and every nation would be represented in the central administration in a manner corresponding to the nation's tonnage. Germany announces her readiness to deliver up fifty per cent. of her mercantile fleet.

Besides, in conformity with the proposition made by the former director of the Hamburg-American Line, Germany will pledge herself to build at her own expense, in her own dockyards and by her own workmen, the number of ships necessary to compensate for the diminution in the world's tonnage due to Germany's submarine warfare. In return Germany will ask to be allowed large credits for the payment for raw materials required to carry out the undertaking and to be allowed to give in payment some of her own raw or manufactured goods.

As regards the cable lines, Germany will suggest a system of internationalization which would prevent Germany from participating in the general tariff of nations.

Concerning territorial questions in the east of Europe the counter-proposals simply call the attention of the Entente to the state of mind of the German populations in the contested territories of Upper Silesia and East and West Prussia and Danzig. These populations, it says, would be sure to take up arms in their own defence if they were to be annexed to Poland and that this might lead to other wars.

Are Looked On As Old Tried Friends

Dodd's Kidney Pills Have Earned
Their Popularity by Their Cures.

Alberta Lady Who Suffered from Kidney Trouble for Ten Years is now Recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to Her Friends.

Tolland, Alta., June 2.—(Special)—"I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone who needs a remedy for sick kidneys." So says Mrs. Fred. Wolters, a well-known and highly respected lady living here. And Mrs. Wolters gives her reasons for making this statement.

"I suffered from kidney trouble for ten years. I felt sleepy and heavy after meals. I was always tired and nervous, and I had a bitter taste in my mouth, especially in the morning. I was often dizzy, my memory was failing, and I was very irritable. Stiffness in the joints, backache, headache, and finally rheumatism were added to my troubles.

"I finally decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I took two boxes. I found them satisfactory in every way. I do not think they can be excelled."

You will notice that everyone who recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills has tried them and found them good. They are recognized as old and tried friends in thousands of Canadian families. Ask your neighbors about them.

TYPHUS, CHOLERA

Rife in Mid-Europe, and Worse Feared.

Paris cable: One hundred thousand persons in Poland are ill of typhus, according to advices received by the Supreme Economic Council. Typhus is increasing in Poland, and is epidemic. It is epidemic in Hungary and a number of other countries in south-eastern Europe.

The spread of the plague in other parts of Europe is feared during the coming winter, cold being more favorable for its propagation than warmth. The Supreme Council has appointed a committee of British, French and Italian representatives to confer with representatives of the League of Red Cross to prepare definite plans to combat typhus and cholera. These plans to be submitted to the respective Governments.

AN UNKNOWN TONGUE.

DRIVE OUT REDS, FEED PETROGRAD

Allies Prepare to Provision
City at Once.

Fall of Russ Capital Near at Hand.

London cable: The Allied and associated powers have made arrangements to feed Petrograd and render assistance to the starving population after the expulsion of the Bolsheviks. Herbert C. Hoover, the head of the allied relief, has the details in hand. It is hoped that relief will be in the city within thirty-six hours after the Bolshevik withdrawal.

Capture of Peterhof, sixteen miles west of Petrograd, on the Gulf of Finland, by the army of the Northern Russian Government, probably assisted by British naval forces, was reported to the State Department today in Swedish press reports. The Stockholm Tidningen points out that the report presages the fall of Petrograd in the near future.

The loss of Peterhof by the Bolshevik forces means the isolation of Petrograd from Kranstadt, from which the Bolshevik warships have been operating. The town of Krasnaja Gorka has been reported to be in flames in despatches printed by Helsingfors newspapers, which would indicate preparations for a retreat by the Bolsheviks.

Petrograd, according to the report, is in the hands of Chinese, Lett and Finnish Reds, who are said to have mastered the Soviet authorities after heavy street fighting.

The Bolsheviks have placarded the city, threatening to execute the bourgeois class if they are compelled to leave the former capital.

Riga was captured last Thursday through the co-operation of Lettish troops and German Baltic guards.

Spare the children from suffering from worms by using Miller's Worm Powders, the most effective vermifuge that can be got with which to combat these insidious foes of the young and helpless. There is nothing that excels this preparation as a worm destroyer, and when its qualities become known in a household no other will be used. The medicine acts by itself, requiring no purgative to assist it, and so thoroughly that nothing more is desired.

Nature and the Indian

The Indian never liked work but he wanted his squaw to get well as soon as possible so that she could do the work and let him hunt, therefore he dug peaposes root for her, for that was their great remedy for female weakness.

Dr. Pierce uses the same root—called Blue Cohosh—in his "Favorite Prescription" skillfully combined with other agents that make it more effective.

Women who are worn out, who suffer from pain at regular or irregular intervals, who are nervous or dizzy at times, should take that reliable, temperance, herbal tonic which a doctor in active practice prescribed many years ago. Now sold by druggists, in tablets and liquid, as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Home, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package.

Woodstock, Ont.—"I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Medicines. I had nervous prostration and was completely 'down and out.' I was so bad the doctors considered mine a hopeless case. I was much discouraged and was ready to give up when I began taking the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' These medicines put me on my feet again and gave me the only real relief. Being a nurse I have recommended Dr. Pierce's Medicines to many, especially the 'Favorite Prescription.' I know of many a young mother to whom I have recommended 'Favorite Prescription' that has been wonderfully helped."

"I am glad to lend my name in connection with Dr. Pierce's Medicines, knowing how good they are."—Miss J. M. ...

WALES COMING ON VISIT SOON

In Less Than Three Months,
He Hopes.

Gen. Currie Speaks of Canada's Heroes.

London cable says: Speaking at a luncheon given to General Currie, Officer Commanding the Canadian Expeditionary Force, by the Canada Club, the Prince of Wales, responding to a toast of the Royal family, said: "In the name of the younger generation of England I wish Sir Arthur Currie and other ranks in the Canadian Forces the very best of luck. I was almost going to say 'good-bye,' but good-bye would have been a most inappropriate term, because I am very glad to tell you that I am going to Canada very soon. I hope in less than three months' time. Naturally the prospect of this visit to the great Dominion would have delighted me in any circumstances, but now I shall enjoy it all the more because I shall look forward to the pleasure of meeting many old friends again, and, I hope, of making a lot of new friends as well."

General Currie said that the rugged strength of the Canadian was depicted in the manner in which he had been able to adapt himself to conditions which he found confronting him as a soldier. In this connection, he had to pause to consider the merits of the British soldier, who always had enough to eat, but was more often than not cold, wet and lousy. The General spoke of how the senior officers and non-commissioned officers and men would gather around the maps of the area to be attacked.

"If Victoria Crosses were given for saving life at risk of one's own, the sixty-four they now so proudly wear," declared the General. "Selfishness was unknown to our soldiers even when suffering bitterly." "I have tried to point out some characteristics of the Canadian soldier," concluded the Corps Commander. "He is going back to civil life, possessing these qualities while having learned the value of well-organized, collective effort, backed by discipline and self-restraint. The mental readjustment may require time, but I have every confidence that the period of transition will be short."

General Currie was given a luncheon at the Mansion House today by Sir Horace Marshall, the Lord Mayor of London.

An Oil Without Alcohol.—Some of our many medicines have alcohol as a prominent ingredient. A judicious mingling of six essential oils compose the famous Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, and there is no alcohol in it, so that its effects are lasting. There is no medicinal oil compounded that can equal this oil in its preventive and healing power.

Attacked by Asthma. The first fearful sensation is of suffocation, which hour by hour becomes more desperate and hopeless. To such a case the relief afforded by Dr. J. C. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy is nothing less than miraculous. Its effect is quickly apparent and soon the dreadful attack is mastered. The asthmatic who has found out the dependability of this sterling remedy will never be without it. It is sold everywhere.

Maple Sugar.

The maple sugar industry of Canada has increased considerably within the last few years, especially for export, the United States being the principal customer. In this advance a leading part has been taken by the Eastern Townships of the Province of Quebec. The total production in the Dominion is 27,800,000 pounds. Of this amount, the Province of Quebec produces 18,270,000 pounds, or about two-thirds of the whole. Ontario produces 9,046,000, or about half of Quebec's production, and the Maritime Provinces produce about 500,000 pounds.

The production in Quebec brings in a revenue of $1,680,000 a year. Such was the demand for maple syrup for export at the close of last season that carloads of Beauce sugar sold as high as 23 cents to 30 cents and 31 cents. With the encouragement the maple sugar industry is receiving now from the Provincial Government, it is confidently expected that this sum will be trebled in a few years. Model sugar schools have been established throughout the province and these schools, largely visited as they are by the farmers and others interested in producing good maple sugar, have done a great deal of good. Quebec sugar farmers are now after quality in their maple sugar products. A law for the safeguarding of pure maple products was adopted in 1915.

"But Not the Six Hundred."

Well, the Princess Pats are back. The Carmania brought them to Halifax. Only 32 men of the regiment as it now stands were of that body of Canadians who in 1914 corrected the Germans in their queer assumption that the men of the British dominions would not fight for the Mother Country. The rest of them either lie in Flanders or have been invaded home, for the original Pats—but it is not for us to attempt to recount what they did, how they fought and bled and suffered. Their career of battle is a subject to be treated with becoming humility by some gifted historian, one with some poetry and fire in him, who can translate the spirit as well as the deeds. But we could not fail to note the return, if it is only the nominal return, of the Princess Pats. If ever men saw wrong that cried to be righted and rushed to do that thing it was these Canadians who left their farms and their stores and their offices to lay down their lives for something the German fondly believed was merely a name.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson X, June 8, 1919, Obedience.
Matt. 7. 16-29.

Commentary.—1. Abraham's faith and obedience (Gen. 12: 1-4). When God would raise up a people for himself, he called upon a man born in Ur of the Chaldees to be the head of the head of that nation. Abraham was not in the place where he would have him, although he had gone from Ur to Haran, and he called him to leave his country and his kindred and go to the land that he would show him. The Lord gave him most precious and comprehensive promises. He would make of him a great nation. He would bless him and make a blessing to others. He would afford him protection; for he would bless those who blessed him and would curse those who cursed him. He gave him a promise that the Messiah would come through him, for he said that in him all the families of the earth should be blessed. Not only did Abraham believe what God said, but he was obedient, for faith leads to obedience. Abraham took his family and went forth from Haran as the Lord directed. The importance of obedience is seen in the marvelous results of his faith and obedience.

brings forth after its kind, so every man acts according to his prevailing disposition. 19. hewn down—To this day in the East trees are valued only so far as they produce fruit.—Cam. Bib. cast into the fire—Fire is the symbol of utter destruction. As the tree is burned, so the soul that bears no fruit for God is destroyed. Such a soul can not be restored; the destruction is inevitable and final. 20. wherefore—A conclusion is reached by their fruits; he shall know them.—Men's characters are not to be judged by detached doings, but by the general tenor of their lives.—Good men are liable to make mistakes, but are glad to rectify them. Bad men may perform acts that appear good. It is the moral tendency of the life that indicate character.

21. Not every one that saith.—Lord, Lord—Two professions, the false and the true, are here implied. To say, "Lord," indicated that Jesus was accepted as Master. Some were sincere and others stopped with a mere profession of being disciples of Jesus. When Christianity becomes popular in a community, many are tempted to take upon themselves a profession of religion in order to be with the majority. Profession does not determine character, yet a holy character is openly manifested. Enter into the kingdom—Have a part in Christ's spiritual kingdom—be numbered among those in whom Christ lives and reigns. He that doeth—Profession alone does not save, no matter how correct one may be in his creed. It is the doing of God's will that determines one's standing before him. The Lord through his spirit, through the conscience and by his spirit makes known to us what his will is. My Father who is in heaven. (R. V.)—Jesus speaks of God as his Father in a most emphatic way, and shows how affectionate is the relation. 22. Many—Not merely an occasional one, but the number will be astoundingly large. In that day—The judgment day—The day when the final accounts shall be brought in, and when each shall receive his just deserts. See Acts 17: 31; Rom. 14: 10; 2 Cor. 5: 10. Prophesied—As the whole gospel is a real prophecy, foretelling the vast future of the human race—death, judgment and eternity—so every preacher is a prophet. Here then are preachers who plead their ministry in vain in that day.—Whedon. See Paul's definition in 1 Cor. 14: 3. Cast out devils—Through their preaching souls had been converted and devils had actually been cast out of men's hearts. Wonderful works—The Greek word here is also translated miracles. 23. I never knew you—As my disciples. From this we see how easy it is to be deceived. Many are trusting in the church, their good name, their generosity, their great gifts, their employment in the ministry, their self-sacrifice or their devotion to the cause, while at heart they are not right with God, and at the last great day will be cast to the left hand. They are destitute of the love of God, which is the all-essential (1 Cor. 13: 1-3). Depart from me—Such being on the left hand—consigned to the regions of darkness and despair.

24. Hearst these sayings.... doeth them—At this point Jesus further explains and emphasizes the difference between the genuine and the false in religion. Multitudes hear the gospel and know its requirements, but only a few are obedient. 25. Beat upon that house—The storm that had been foreseen at length came with fury. The Christian who has built a character for time and for eternity will be severely tempted and tried. He is subjected to temptation again and again. It fell not—it was built to stand, and it stood. It is no surprise to the child of God that he stands the tests that come upon him. He found the Rock at the outset and continues to build upon him. The structure is serviceable in foul weather as well as in fair. Upon a rock—it was necessary in some places to dig down many feet to find the rock, but wise builders dug until they found it. 26. Doeth them not—They heard, as well as the others, the words of Jesus. They were either careless or wilfully neglectful of their importance and authority. Foolish man—Shortsighted, vainly imagining that all would come out right in the end. 27. It fell—it was subjected to the same rain, floods and winds as the other, but it was ruined while the other stood. 28. These sayings—What he had said in the Sermon on the Mount. Doctrine—Teaching. 29. As one having authority—Both the matter and the manner of Jesus' teaching impressed his hearers deeply. Divine power attended his ministry always.

here and there one meets the obligations it imposes. Wise man—One who is prudent, and puts his knowledge to the best use. Which built his house—The figure was simple and impressive to those who lived in a country subject to sudden and disastrous freshets. To guard against loss, the wise builder was careful to construct his house upon a rock foundation. Each man possesses a house which is his absolutely, and for which he alone is responsible. Notice: "1. All men are building. 2. All builders have a choice of foundations. 3. All foundations will be tried. 4. Only one foundation will stand."—Parker. Upon a rock—Our rock is Jesus Christ (Isa. 28: 16; 1 Cor. 3: 11). He is the sure foundation. As we centre our faith in him, and build according to the principles which he has laid down, we shall be safe. 25. Beat upon that house—The storm that had been foreseen at length came with fury. The Christian who has built a character for time and for eternity will be severely tempted and tried. He is subjected to temptation again and again. It fell not—it was built to stand, and it stood. It is no surprise to the child of God that he stands the tests that come upon him. He found the Rock at the outset and continues to build upon him. Impressed his hearers deeply. Divine power attended his ministry always. III. Obedience and love (John 14: 21-24). The great test of love for Jesus is obedience. Those who know what God would have them do and are obedient to him are the ones who love him. Jesus says that they who love him will be loved by the Father. Jesus and the Father will come to dwell with those who are loving and obedient. On the other hand it is clearly stated that they who do not love Jesus do not keep his commandments. The unconverted are not able to fulfill the requirements of the gospel, but Christ's yoke is easy to those in whose hearts the love of Christ has been shed abroad. Questions.—What are the prominent points in Abraham's character? In what is he an example for us? How is the character of men made known? Who are they that enter Christ's kingdom? How does Jesus illustrate the necessity of obedience? How did Jesus' teaching differ from that of the scribes? What is a simple proof of love to God?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.
Topic.—Obedience a Test of Discipleship.

I. Discipleship.
II. Obedience the true test.
1. Discipleship. A disciple means literally, a taught, or trained one. As ordinarily used the term has a religious significance and means those who attend upon the instructions of a religious teacher and seek a knowledge of the tenets of a religious faith. All great teachers have had their disciples, or followers. John the Baptist gathered about him disciples, two of whom became the first followers of Jesus. These were also known as disciples until at Antioch the name of their Master attached itself permanently to them. Henceforth they became known as Christians. After a night of prayer Jesus selected from the company of his followers twelve, whom he named apostles. These he received into closer fellowship. To them he imparted fuller instruction and to them gave a world-wide commission to "make disciples of all nations" (Matt. 28: 19, R. V.). The name Christian, in modern phraseology, has the original significance of "disciple" with enlarged emphasis. A Christian is a learner of Christ, and both by precept and example a "taught one" in the Christian faith. The teachings of Christ are their illumination, his example their pattern and his spirit their emulation. They are his representatives in the world.

ence of authority. It was the first law established for man. We are born subjects and perfectly liberty is found in loving obedience, than which no principle is more noble and none more holy. Of necessity man's first and supreme obligation is to his Creator. Nothing can be permitted to contravene this. The apostles before the council declared, "We ought to obey God rather than men." Obedience is inseparable from discipleship. Without this it is but mockery. The relation as "Lord and Master," and the terms of friendship did not cancel their obligation. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatever I command you." The friend of the king is not he who admires his person or applauds his pageantry, but he who executes his command. No profession of attachment avails while obedience is withheld. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" The call to labor and self-sacrifice which Jesus heard he makes known to his followers. "All things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." He includes his disciples in his great designs and permits them to share in their execution. The obedience of true discipleship is complete. Jesus demands a whole-hearted service. There can be no partial conscience. It is absolute or nothing. Any intention to disobey at any point violates the whole. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." One discordant string will set the whole instrument ajar. Carnality will obey God as far as it will serve its own ends. A murderous Herod will do "many things," but Paul was in all things willing to live

The Great Frederick's Joke.

The czar's changing of the name of his second and more modern capital from St. Petersburg to Petrograd may be paralleled by the use of the "new palace," Potsdam, which the Emperor Frederick decreed should henceforth be known as Friedrichskron. This new palace had been built by Frederick the Great at the close of his Seven Years' war just to show his enemies that his exchequer was by no means exhausted, and on its cupola are three nude figures, representing his chief female foes—Maria Theresa, Elizabeth of Russia and La Pompadour—with their backs turned toward their respective countries, supporting his crown of glory, hence "Friedrichskron." But one of the first acts of William II. was to restore to the palace its original name.—London Chronicle.

PARADISE OF PACIFIC.

Palm-Clothed Islands Have All Riches Man Need Covet.

The little-known Trobriland group of islands is a cluster of palm-clothed gems that stud the emerald Pacific a hundred-odd miles northeast of Samarai (Papua). They are the real thing in coral romance. The natives are of the Melanesian type, happy people with a fondness (especially on the part of the star-eyed maidens) for Europeans, who have exploited the rich pearl fishery. They are advanced in arts and crafts, and produce a tremendous quantity of carved weapons and ornaments, which are eagerly bought by tourists from curio-dealers in Sydney and Melbourne.

Before competition set in the islanders did not get much for their pearls. Gems worth $50 and $75 were freely bought for as many pence. The group is flat, but is richly clothed in jungle, and produces vast quantities of excellent yams, which are traded. Good climate, gorgeous scenery, blue seas like billowing silk, diamond-dusted beaches and splendid fishing and shooting!

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Beaumont, taking into consideration the circumstances attending poor Jack's infatuation for the Montague family, and armed as he supposed by the intelligence, judged that it might be a propitious time to commence his own wooing, and so the morning after Jack heard that he was a penniless man, with a mountain of debt upon his back instead of twenty thousand a year, the wily barrister paid particular attention to the brushing of his hat, and surveyed his gloves with critical satisfaction.

"Yes," he mused, as the hansom rattled him toward Lady Pacewell's villa; "yes, I will strike while the iron is hot. There can be no doubt that the acting people have thoroughly netted Jack, and Lady Maud's hopes in that quarter are quite wrecked. I'll break it to her, and so gently that at the moment of pique which must follow she shall jump at my offer to show Mr. Hamilton that there is still another man in England."

Arguing thus, with that strange faculty that clings to all who argue with themselves, he alighted from the cab and found Lady Maud at home.

Now if he had been a man of genius in the way of discrimination he would have seen that Lady Maud showed evident disappointment when he entered, having taken his knock for that of a better man. But Mr. Beaumont was so full of his object that he forgot little circumstances, and, nothing daunted by Lady Maud's look of surprise when he entered, took his seat and commenced the usual small nothings which generally open the conventional call.

Lady Maud responded, and Mr. Beaumont began to grow nervous.

"Have you seen Mr. Hamilton lately?" he asked suddenly, thinking it better to plunge than to stand shivering on the bank longer.

Lady Maud flushed, but managed to hide it.

"Yes," she said, with queenly indifference. "Oh, yes, he was here a few days since."

"Ah!" said Mr. Beaumont. "He has grown scarier than ever, quite a rare avis now. I have asked him to sup with me once or twice, but always got a refusal."

"With a good excuse," said Lady Maud, who knew well enough Mr. Beaumont's little game, and all the cards he thought he had to play with.

"No, Jack Hamilton never invents an excuse if he hasn't one, or having one doesn't care to put it forward. But I know what his excuse is—the sly rascal."

This was said with the pleasantest smile possible, but Lady Maud hid a malicious smile behind her handkerchief, and did not reply.

Mr. Beaumont grew more nervous. He had expected a little help from the queenly beauty, but Lady Maud refused to help him.

"By the way," he said, "have you seen the new beauty?"

Which one? asked Lady Maud, placidly. "There are so many, you know."

"Oh, I mean the actress," said Beaumont. "Miss Montague."

"Yes," said Lady Maud.

"What?" he breathed, inaudibly, rising from his chair and confronting her with a face in which mortification and incredulity struggled for predominance. "Going to marry Jack Hamilton?"

She inclined her head and did not try to hide the mockery in her eyes. "But—but—" he stammered, "his engagement with the actress—"

"It has no more foundation than other idle reports," said Lady Maud, unmercifully.

"But—" he argued.

"It is a mistake, sir," she said; "and I must confess that I feel some astonishment at the credence which so able and clever an individual as Mr. Beaumont seems to have given it. Mr. Hamilton has taken some interest in Mr. Montague, it is true, but the motives, far from being those you suppose, spring simply from his benevolence. I trust you will let slip no opportunity that may occur of denying emphatically any repetition of the rumors that may find tongue in your presence."

It was so different an answer to that which the schemer had expected that he started.

"You have!" he said.

"Yes," she said. "Mr. Hamilton took me the other night."

"What?" said Beaumont, astounded at this revelation. "By Jove! he has plenty of courage. And so you approve of the match, Lady Maud?"

"What match?" asked Lady Maud, blandly.

"The—the match between Mr. Hamilton and Miss Montague."

"I have not heard of it," said her ladyship, enjoying his confusion.

"Oh," he said, "I thought you were posted up in the latest intelligence. It's going the rounds that poor old Jack means to marry Miss Montague, the actress of the Signet. He has procured a West End engagement for the father and visits at their house."

Lady Maud shrugged her shoulders.

"I think you are misinformed," she said.

"No," said Beaumont, "I think not. It is a strange affair, and I am not surprised that Jack has kept it from you. Ah! how infatuated he must be, Lady Maud, how infatuated!"

This was accompanied by a glance that said plainly: "To pass over such a pearl as you for such a nettle as she."

Lady Maud understood it and cast down her eyes.

Mr. Beaumont drew a little nearer.

"Lady Maud," he said, in a lower voice, "I did not call this evening to talk of poor old Jack's affairs, but my own."

"Yes," she said, pulling at a hot-house flower, "your own."

"My own, he repeated, "Dear Lady Maud, I am like that flower in your hand. You can pull my life to pieces and scatter it to the winds, or with a word preserve it to love and adore you. Oh, Maud, forgive me if I speak abruptly. I have rehearsed these few words a hundred times. Each time my heart has throbbled near you these words, I love you, have trembled on my lips. If they have not spoken from my lips it is because I dared not offend you by uttering them even in a glance. Maud, I love you. I have loved you ever since the first moment we met. I have worked hard and patiently that I might not bring any love empty-handed. I am a rich man, or nearly so, and I can give you, Maud, a position, far beneath your worth, 'tis true, but one in which you will shine gloriously. I lay my life, my love, all I possess, my ambition, my hopes of future success, at your feet. Will you stoop and take them?"

Now, that was a very pretty speech, and Mr. Beaumont knew it; had he not rehearsed it, as he had said, a hundred times? It was a speech that would have awed a jury to tears; it awed Lady Maud to smiles.

Looking up into the bent face, Mr. Beaumont detected the smile and turned pale.

"Well," he said, huskily, "will you not give me a reply? Say yes, dear Lady Maud! Say yes."

He attempted to take her hand, but with a haughty gesture she drew it from him.

"Mr. Beaumont," she said, "I ought to have stopped you, but I really did not know what you were going to say. How could I? You were so sudden. What you ask is impossible."

"Impossible," he echoed, "why?"

"Because," she said, slowly, fixing her eyes upon him and enjoying his look of consternation and chagrin, "because I am engaged to marry Mr. Hamilton."

"What!" he breathed, inaudibly, rising from his chair and confronting her with a face in which mortification and incredulity struggled for predominance. "Going to marry Jack Hamilton?"

She inclined her head and did not try to hide the mockery in her eyes. "But—but—" he stammered, "his engagement with the actress—"

"It has no more foundation than other idle reports," said Lady Maud, unmercifully.

"But—" he argued.

"It is a mistake, sir," she said; "and I must confess that I feel some astonishment at the credence which so able and clever an individual as Mr. Beaumont seems to have given it. I trust you will let slip no opportunity that may occur of denying emphatically any repetition of the rumors that may find tongue in your presence."

Mr. Beaumont was literally staggered. Her ladyship had no doubt discovered the pretty little plot and turned the tables upon him.

It was a heavy blow for him, and he showed that he felt it. He took up his hat and looked around the room.

"I do not understand it," he said, huskily; "that Jack was hard hit with the Montague girl, I am ready to stake my life. But I congratulate your ladyship. He is a better man than I am."

Lady Maud murmured an audible assent that made his blood boil.

"At any rate," he added, bitterly, "he has the advantage of his twenty thousand a year, and if money is the key to happiness, then, Lady Maud, you may comfort yourself in procuring it."

She inclined her head, with a sweet smile.

"Thank you, very much," she said, as if his congratulations had been most genuine and in the best possible taste. "Lady Pacewell will be down presently."

"Thank you," he said, hurriedly. "I don't think I must wait this morning," and bowing over the tips of her fingers, he hurried from the house, certainly as full of hate as he had been of love when he had entered it.

Poor Lady Maud, she sat down and enjoyed the picture of this gentleman struggling in the pit he had himself dug, but she little contemplated the grave to her own hopes which was or had been already dug.

She waited complacently for Jack's appearance, but he did not come.

The fact was that, although anything but deficient in courage, Jack Hamilton could not summon up fortitude enough to carry him around to the villa and be the bearer of his own bad news. He knew, or had some slight suspicion of the manner in which Lady Maud would take them, and overwhelmed by the prospect before him, our hero sat and stared at the fire, not even venturing to ring for soda and brandy, reflecting that that cheering mixture, with the horses, etc., was really not his to ask for.

So he sat over the fire late into the night, stirring only to get a piece of paper and reckon up the debts which he had incurred in the belief that he was a wealthy man.

The magnitude simply stunned him.

"Why," he groaned, "I can never pay these, and there still remains the accumulation of the interest, which I have spent."

Then he fell to thinking of Montague.

"I wonder how he took it; of course, Shallop told him before now. I'd give half I owe to see how he takes it, and little Pattie, and—and Mary."

At this last word, forgetful of his engagement to the queenly Lady Maud, he sighed.

"Well, well," he muttered, "all the wealth won't wash her white again, poor girl! Perhaps it all came of her poverty. I can't believe that such a sweet little thing as that, with eyes that look as sweet as a child's, would have gone wrong of her own accord!"

Then, with the poor girl's face in his mind's eye—notwithstanding Lady Maud—he went to bed.

CHAPTER XII.

When Jack awoke in the morning it was to find a note upon his table in a strange handwriting.

He opened it, and out tumbled a cheque, which an examination proved to be the cheque for the two hundred pounds.

There was a short note as well, running thus:

"Mr. Pacewell begs to enclose the cheque which Mr. Hamilton was good enough to offer him. Mr. Pacewell would also add his thanks for the loan and the other kindnesses which Mr. Hamilton was good enough to show him; but Mr. Pacewell can only refrain from just censure of the interested motives which prompted Mr. Hamilton's actions."

Jack read this two or three times slowly, then its hidden meaning flashed upon him.

"Great heavens!" he exclaimed, sinking into a chair and staring at the note, "this man thinks I knew of his right to the property and did what I did to get the better of him. 'Interested motives,' of course that's it! This fellow, thinks he, wanted to carve over me by getting me the engagement and the rest of it! Nine people out of ten would say I did it as a stroke of policy! Why, that scamp Shallop actually proposed the very thing, and I was so savage with him that I never saw I had done it."

It was a galling reflection and worried poor old Jack more than the actual loss of his fortune.

But more was to come. Within half an hour a large bouquet came in with another note.

"Sir, your despicable attempt to ingratiate yourself with the family you have kept so long from their own merits and receives my utmost contempt. I return you the flowers you had the audacity to send my daughter, and beg, if you have not usurped the name of gentlemen as well as my fortune, you will refrain from any further attempt to obtrude your existence upon your obedient servant."

"Henry Pacewell."

Jack crushed the note between his fingers and flung it on the fire, to which his face bore a strong resemblance.

"That's mean," he muttered, "to kick a fellow man. Does he think I knew of his existence, or his claims? I'll show him that he is wrong, and that though I relinquish the money, I still cling to the title and nature of a gentleman."

All on fire, he thrust himself into his coat and started for Harleigh street.

The servant told him to go upstairs as before, and Jack, who knew that if he sent up his card he should be refused, ran up the stairs and knocked at the door.

Who should open it but Mary? She flushed, then turned pale.

He bowed, with a sad, reproachful look upon his handsome face, and in a low, and it must be confessed trembling voice, said:

"Miss Montague, I want a word with your father."

Mary murmured something, and the tears came to her eyes.

He took the something as an invitation to walk in, and strode into the room.

Mr. Montague was seated at the table opposite another gentleman, whom Jack recognized as Mr. Shallop. Before them were several heaps of papers, documents and memoranda.

In the chair in the corner was Pattie, who threw off her shawl and uttered an exclamation of what seemed to him delight as he entered.

Mr. Montague arose, trembling, with his hand upon the head of his chair.

"Sir!" he commenced, angrily, but Jack stopped him.

"Allow me, Mr. Pacewell," he said, quickly, but with firm dignity. "This morning you sent me back my cheque and a bouquet of flowers, which I had ventured to offer your daughter—with them came two notes, in which you accuse me of meanness unworthy of a gentleman. Now, sir, you must hear me out. Every accused man has the benefit of a reply. You say that I knew of your right to the property I held, and you insinuate that I employed those little articles to get the better of you. Now, sir, I say that it is false, and I call upon this gentleman to corroborate me. Further, from these piles of documents, I infer that you think that I shall contest your claim—that is, play the villain by attempting to keep you by law from that which I have kept you by accident. Mr. Pacewell, you are wrong in your conclusions. I knew nothing of your existence as other than Mr. Montague, of the Signet, until yesterday; and now being aware of your right to that which I hold, and which, mark you, I gave you some trouble in reclaiming, I am ready to make over all claims to it, and hand it to you, this moment, without hesitation or compromise."

Mr. Shallop, who had hoped there would be quite a nice little lawsuit, sprang to his feet.

"E—er, don't do anything rash, Mr. Hamilton."

"Rash," repeated Jack, with scorn. "Come, sir, give your instructions; let Mr. Shallop draw up the proper kind of deed, either a gift or transfer, and I will sign it here and now."

Mr. Montague sank into his chair.

"Is—is this true? Are you really in earnest?" he said.

"Draw up the deed, Mr. Shallop," was Jack's reply.

Mr. Shallop took a piece of parchment, muttering:

"This is quite irregular; upon my honor, this is most irregular."

Then he drew up a withdrawal of all right to the property, and a promise not to oppose Mr. Montague's claim.

Then he placed it before Jack, who, after reading it aloud, caught up a pen and stooped to sign it.

"There are no witnesses," said Mr. Shallop. "This is most irregular."

"Witnesses," said Jack, who was determined not to leave the room until he had righted himself in the eyes of the old man, and, although he would not confess as much, in Mary's "Witnesses! Here are yourself and Miss Montague."

Women as Brave As the Men

THEIR STRUGGLE SHOWS A REMARKABLE SPIRIT.

Talk of the bravery of men, but where can you find a finer spirit than among the half-sick women who are fighting and struggling to do their duty against the terrible odds of ill-health, and who will not give up.

One woman in every three is struggling against weakness. Most of them are not exactly sick, but, oh, how miserable!

The burden and misery of it all has its foundation in the blood which is thin and watery. The red cells are too few. The very stream of life is reduced in vitality. Weakness and inevitable ill-health are the certain result.

Every ailing or weak woman can quickly regain her health in this very simple way. By filling the system with the nutrition that comes from rich red blood, a quick change for the better will result. To accomplish this, take two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets after each meal. You'll feel better immediately for the simple reason that Ferrozone renews the blood. It gives you vim, vigor, endurance, restores a tired, worn-out system very quickly.

You'll feel like new all over once you get Ferrozone working through your blood. It puts color into faded cheeks, brightens the eye, quickens the step, brings back that wonderful feeling of youth.

One of the finest things Ferrozone does is to make you eat lots and digest it as well. With keen appetite, sound sleep, strong nerves and lots of nourishing blood you're bound to regain robust health. Any sickly girl or ailing woman that Ferrozone won't make well must be incurable. There is a secret power in Ferrozone and it is worth a trial at all events. Fifty cents per box, six for $2.50. At all dealers in medicine or by mail from The Catarrhosone Co., Kingston, O.
