THE SUIT QUESTION?

FIRST—You must have good material.
SECOND—You must have it well trimmed.
THIRD—You must have a good fit.
LAST BUT NOT LEAST—It must be well made, well finished, and well suited to its shape. This can only be achieved by a suit made by a woman. Perhaps you have tried a dozen dollar suit at shop, but expecting to save a few dollars, but found after wearing it a short time it was all out of shape. You might expect to find it so if you understood the cheap way they are rushed through. Passing through so many different hands, they lose this individual appearance. A garment to be well made, must be made entirely by one man; then you know you are getting the best value that is to be got anywhere for your money.

See my Blue and Black Worsted Suitings at $18, $20 and $22.

FRANKVILLE FAIR

The annual meeting of the members of Kitley Agricultural Society, held on Wednesday last, was one of the most successful in its history. Not only was the attendance exceptionally large but the spirit of unanimity in thought, method and aim that prevailed augurs well for the success of this year's operations.

The first item was the annual dinner, and this prepared in the best style of the Central, proved a veritable feast of rich and skilfully prepared viands. Following this, adjournment was made to the hall where Mr N. H. Beecher was elected to preside and Rev. W. E. Kidd was appointed secretary.

The reports of the treasurer and auditors were first presented and these proved of a highly satisfactory character. The total receipts amounted to $1,267.66, with total disbursements of $1,058.80, leaving a balance on hand of $198.86. To this balance must be added $24 of cash donations not yet collected, $16 of new member's fees, and contributions of $25 by A. E. Donovan, M.P.P. and $5 by E. S. Clow, manager of the Merchants Bank, Athens.

The election of officers followed the adoption of these reports and resulted as follows:—

Pres.—A. E. Crummy.
1st Vice-Pres.—W. G. Richards
2nd Vice-Pres.—W. J. Reynolds
Directors—E. Barber, A. R. Han-ton, W. Davidson, Nelson Jones, J.
Mitchell, W. Hause, A. Ireland, H.
Moran, J. I. Smith

On motion, it was decided to endorse the government's proposal re unfavorable weather insurance for the fair, and also to have the Frankville Fair affiliated with the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions.

About the time the business of the day was concluded, a large number of ladies added the charm of their presence to the meeting. Rev. W. E. Kidd was elected chairman of the afternoon and ably preside. over a very entertaining and instructive programme.

Rev. Geo. Snell was the first speaker and he dealt in a clear way with the object and beneficial character of agricultural societies. At the close, he spoke of the outlook for railway connection for Frankville and urged that a move be made towards inducing the surveyors of the projected lines (steam and electric) to consider the advantages to be gained by touching at Frankville. Later, Rev Mr Kidd spoke along this same line, endorsing what had been said, and suggesting that the initiative in the matter be taken by the agricultural society.

Mr A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., was warmly received on rising to speak after a neat introduction by the chairman. He expressed the pleasure it gave him to meet his Kitley friends, congratulated the fair board on their surplus and on the fact that they had been able to retain the loyal allegiance of such boys of the old brigade as N. H. Beecher, and David Dowsley. He then gave a brilliant address, characteristically patriotic, in which he pointed out Ontario's record as a producing province, our growing national sentiment, and the richness of Canada's natural resources. He cited our great waterways and water-powers, our timber wealth, our coal deposits, our fisheries, and the immense area of land still offered free to settlers.

It was a strictly non political address and was much enjoyed by all. The veteran ex-president, Mr David Dowsley was invited to speak but declined on the ground that Mr Donovan had said all the good things he had prepared for the meeting.

Brief addresses were also given by Mr E. S. Clow, D. Bourne, President Crummy and G. F. Donnelly. At the close of this meeting the new board met and appointed W. H. Montgomery, secretary and E. S. Clow, treasurer.

It was decided that the fair should be held on the same days of the same week as last year, which will be Sept. 28 and 29.

The wedding is announced of Miss Arley Z. Dier, Calgary, but formerly of Westport, to Gordon Goddison, formerly of Fairfield but now of Calgary, the wedding to take place this month.

MISSIONARY ANNIVERSARY

The missionary services in the Methodist Church last Sunday were very interesting and helpful. The devotional exercises were conducted by the pastor, and the missionary addresses were given by Mr Irwin Hilliard, barrister and solicitor, of Morrisburg. In the morning he spoke of the rise and progress of the Laymen's Movement, and showed it to be a unique child of providence, having been born into the world at a very important juncture in the history of both church and state. He also showed what an interest the movement had awakened amongst the business men of the church and what it has done for them by calling their latent powers into practical sympathy with world-wide evangelism. He also pointed out the vital relation of this movement to our national life, and urged his auditors to fall into line.

His subject for the evening was "Our responsibility in relation to world wide evangelism, and how to discharge it." He showed that God designed the Gospel for all men, that the angels apprehended it to be for all men; and that St. Paul felt that what it had done for him, personally, made him a debtor to all men. He then showed by forceful reasoning and practical illustrations that the measure of our responsibility is the measure of our ability. The recognition of the truth presented is seen in the splendid offerings of the day amounting to over $320 with more to follow.

A FIRE SALE

Among those who attended the big fire salvage sale at the warehouses of the W. R. Brook Co at Montreal last week were Robert Wright and R. L. Wright of "Brockville's Greatest Store". The stock of $300,000.00 worth of Dry Goods was damaged by water and smoke from fire in the adjoining building.

The sale was advertised to start at 9 a.m. and at that hour about two hundred merchant bargain hunters scrambled pell-mell through the door each one eager to secure the best plums for their customers.

Fortunately Mr Wright was in Montreal the day before the sale and visited the warehouse and made lists of the best lots to be offered. By securing another man to help, the Brockville store had three buyers hard at work when the sale opened yesterday and they were fortunate in securing a lot of the best bargains offered. In many cases the goods were only smoked or slightly wet on the edges and the values were extraordinary.

The big purchase will of course be placed on sale in Brockville in a few days, and a sale of unusual interest is promised.

AN A. H. S. VICTORY

Encouraged, apparently, by the victory at hockey achieved by Westport in Athens, a bunch of hockeyists representing the Maple Leaf Club of Brockville came here on Tuesday of last week to try conclusions with the A.H.S. team. This was the first match played by the students this season, but they had been practicing diligently and the game they put up surprised and delighted their friends. It may be presumed that the Brockville boys thought they knew how to play the game, else they would hardly have undertaken the long drive, but how they reached such a conclusion would be hard to say; for they were outplayed at every point of the game.

At the end of first half the score stood 1—0 in favor of Athens. In the second half the visitors failed to break their goose-egg and the students added 5 more to their score, giving them the victory by 6—0.

Mr R. DeWolfe refereed the game in an impartial but rather lenient manner. Following was the line-up:—

A.H.S. goal Maple Leafs
G. Cannon point L. Mead
E. Sly point F. Ryan
K. Rappel c. point E. Johnson
R. Layng rover M. Simmons
W. Biss-1 centre J. Reynolds
V. Fahey 1 wing W. Sutherland
W. Lockwood rt. wing C. Haskings

This match, as reported in the sporting column of the Brockville Times, gives the result as 5 to 2, and states that the Athens team was composed of students and senior hockey players. There was absolutely no ground for this erroneous report. Every boy on the Athens team is at present in attendance at the A. H. S. and the score of 6—0 was undisputed.

"And if we don't, the public will" said Emily. "I wonder how it is," she added, with her head on one side, "that everything you put on seems to become you? Now that color would try half the women I know, but it seems as if it were made for you."

"I have turned Miss Montessor out, Miss Jones," said Joan, "or shall I turn my head?" and Emily ran out laughing. Mr. Giffard came once, but said little beyond, "A great triumph before you tonight, Miss Trevelyan!"

"Or a great failure!" said Joan. "But I will not fail, for your sake, Mr. Giffard," she added, with the smile which won people's hearts more than anything else about her.

The house could be heard from where she sat, patiently waiting, and she recalled the night when she had sat and waited in the same fashion. But then she was a nobody, and now she was—

The orchestra commenced, and the actors in the first scene were called. Joan did not make her appearance until near the end of the first act, and she stood as the wings and watched. One of the best romantic actors of the day had been engaged to play lover to her, and she received a pleasant welcome from the audience, which encouraged the rest. The house was crammed; Joan thought that she had never seen it so full before, and certainly never with so brilliant an audience.

Presently her time came. She gave just one glance, womanlike, at the small girls that hung at the wings, then glided on. There was an instant's pause—the audience was struck dumb by her beauty, and more than all else by the exquisite refinement of her presence—then there came an ovation. She paused for a moment, inclined her head slightly, and with a slight tremor in her voice went on with her part.

"She was playing carefully, takingly, but she was reserving herself."

The drop went down amidst considerable applause, and they wanted to call her back, but she refused. "No," she said, "let me wait until the end. They may be sorry that they have called me if I go on now and fall afterwards."

There was nothing else to do in the first act.

She went down, and changed her dress to a fresh, bright morning gown, and went on in the second act.

It was in this that one of her opportunities came. Her lover was led to believe her false by his disappointed rival, the villain in the piece, and Joan was called upon to display indignation, tenderness, despair, all, as it were, in a breath.

For a time she played with reserved force, as is called, then, at the proper moment, not a moment too soon or too late, she "let herself go."

The words seemed to spring from her parted lips like flames of lightning, then well and glow like fire, and lastly, as if wail as the first sign of the devastating storm.

The house listened and watched, spell-bound and enraptured. This was acting which they had not seen for many a year, since the past and some moments of comedy had faded from the garish lights, and left until now no one to replace them.

Her voice fascinated them, and the pale face, glowing with genius and reflecting every emotion proper to the difficult part, stole upon their hearts and moved them now to sympathetic wrath and again to tears.

As the drop fell, leaving her alone upon the stage in her misery, a loud roar of approval, admiration, awe, delight, rose from the excited house, and it did not cease until Mr. Giffard led her, almost by force, before the curtain.

Then, after bowing over and over again, she glanced up at the box in which Mordant Royce usually sat.

He was sitting there now; his face was pale and set, his lips drawn across his chest tightly, his lips drawn together as if with suppressed excitement.

He had watched her with his passionate love heightened by admiration into a fever. He could have killed the roaring poling house that dared to applaud.

"He was jealous of every eye that rested upon her, every lip that spoke her name. The theatre seemed stifling and choking him."

He could bear it no longer, so great were the pangs of jealousy which mingled with the passionate love with which he watched her.

To share her with those fools—those idiots! He would not, could not endure it much longer. He would force her to leave him before the week was out.

Half choking with rage, and almost fighting his way through the crowd that thronged the refreshment saloon, and lobbies, he went into the open air.

But even the noise of the theatre seemed to follow him, and with a muttered curse, he buttoned his coat across his chest and strode off at a rapid pace.

"My darling, my queen, be started at a yelling herd!" he groaned. "Soon, soon, she shall be mine—mine alone! Strange, I never felt it so much as I have done tonight—to-night I cannot bear to watch her and to know that others are watching and admiring her too! Great Heaven, Mordant Royce, what a slave love has made of you!"

There was tremendous excitement behind the scenery.

That a great, magnificent success would be scored was certain, and already they pressed around Joan, eager to speak a word of praise and flattery; but Joan stopped them all, and went to her own room quietly.

Wait until she had succeeded in that and completed her triumph, and then they might praise her if they saw fit.

Meanwhile one of those curious incidents which people persist in calling coincidences, and which are really the work of fate and fortune, was preparing outside the theatre, and all unknown to Joan.

That evening Bertie had arranged to join a small party at the club, but the day before he had received a note saying that his host was going to the Coronet to see the new play, and that no doubt Bertie would like to go also, there fore the dinner was postponed.

Bertie didn't mind the least. There was one thing he enjoyed more than a dinner with "cards to follow," and that was going to the play, and that was a quiet evening at home, where he would be free to take out his portrait, and setting it over the mantle-shelf, smoke a cigar and gaze at the beautiful face.

This evening he dined alone, and, dismissing his man, lit a cigar, and, unrolling the cabinet, put the portrait in its accustomed place.

He had got into the habit, unconsciously, of talking to the lovely face as it smiled down at him, and as he leaned in his chair and looked up at it he murmured:

"Well, beautiful one! I wonder what you are thinking about to-night? I wonder why you always smile so sadly? Yours is an unhappy life, I know, for you smile so bravely. I suppose you would laugh outright if you knew all that I have said to you; if you knew that a young man was idiot enough to fall in love with you because you look like a girl he once saw for half an hour and then lost sight of forever!"

"Would you laugh, though, or would you pity? There is a tender heart behind those soft, half-smiling eyes of yours, my queen, and perhaps you would pity! Only for half an hour I saw your living likeness, and then she vanished out of my life like a dream! I wonder where she is now? Could you tell me, if you could speak, my queen, about her than you tell? Why are you so like her? Who are you? What is your history? Ah, no, you won't speak, will you? No, not you. You will only smile and smile at the young fool who lost his heart to the girl whose face is so like yours, sweet one!"

"And yet I'd like to know where she is; whether she is alive or dead, miserable or happy. I'd give something to know that, I hope she is happy!"

"Poor child, she was wretched enough when I parted from her! So wretched that she could not endure to face me, even me who saved her! What brutes men are, the best of us, where women are concerned! But what a fond Stuart Villiers must have been to plot the ruin of that beautiful girl who was so like you, my picture, that I have fallen in love with you, with your sad, smiling eyes, for lack of her?"

He nodded and smiled at the sad eyes, and puffed at his cigar for a moment in silence, then he rose with an impatient, self-mocking sigh.

"What a fool I am becoming! I am rapidly taking leave of the small amount of sense nature bestowed upon me! What would the fellows say if they knew that I had fallen in love with a picture and spent hours talking to it? I must break myself of this idiotic habit, my dear creature. You must go into the cupboard and get a couple of months and see if I can forget you, and her whom you are like yes, that's my only chance. In you get 'good night,' and taking the picture down from its perch, he locked it up. "For two months!" he said.

Then he began to stroll about the room, presently he yawned.

The evening was young; hours and hours stretched between him and bed; he didn't feel inclined to go to the club; besides, all the men had gone to see the girl at the theatre whom all the world was raving about.

"George?" he exclaimed. "I'll go and see my myself."

He rang the bell, and his man helped him into his overcoat, and he strolled down to the Coronet.

He noticed as he entered that there seemed to be a great deal of bustle and excitement about, and he went up to the box office and asked for a stall.

The man in charge laughed respectfully.

"A stall, my lord?" He knew Lord Bertie, as did most people. "There hasn't been such a thing to be had for the last fortnight."

"Oh," said Bertie. "Well, it doesn't matter."

"I daresay you might find standing room, my lord," said the man; "but the drama is half over, all but the last act. A tremendous success up to now, my lord; tremendous! Never saw anything like it! They say that she's the greatest actress on the boards."

"And who's she?" asked Lord Bertie, carelessly.

The man stared. "My lord, my lord," he said. "Why, Miss Trevelyan, my lord."

"Oh," said Bertie, "well, give me a stall, or something! I don't suppose I shall stay longer than five or ten minutes."

Bertie got his ticket, and walked in. The stall-keeper shook his head.

"There's not an inch of room here, sir," he said. "Go upstairs, sir, you might find standing room in the circle! If you make haste you'll be up before the commencement of the last act."

There were a great many people in the stalls when Bertie knew, and he exchanged nods.

"Wonderful success!" said a man, a critic on one of the principal papers. "Quite a genius! What a glorious career before her!"

Bertie, only feeling the faintest interest in it, went up stairs.

The box-keeper received him with a cold welcome.

"Not a seat, scarcely standing room, my lord," he said.

"Not a box?" inquired Bertie, listlessly.

The man laughed.

"Look around, my lord," he said, "all the boxes are full and crammed."

"There is one box empty," said Bertie. "Oh, that's Mr. Royce's box," said the man. "He's got his for the season. Comes here most nights."

"Comes here every night?" exclaimed Bertie.

The man smiled with respectful ingenuity.

"Yes, my lord, most every night. He is here to-night, leastways he was, but he's gone out. He'll be back directly, sure to be."

"No matter," said Bertie, "put me in that. I am a friend of Mr. Royce's, and there is plenty of room."

The man led him to the box, and Bertie made himself comfortable.

The act commenced, but Royce had not returned.

Bertie, thinking more of the strange fact that Mordant Royce should visit the Coronet every night than of the play, leaned over the box edge and watched the scene.

In this act the villain of the play, who has, or thinks he has, the hero and Joan's lover in his power, offers to free the hero if Joan will give her hand to him, the villain.

The play was well written, the scene a strong one. Joan did not make her appearance for some time, and Bertie was trying to make out who it was, meant, and get a clue to the plot, while the well-dressed villain was indulging in the soliloquy which stage villains, whether well or ill dressed, always indulge in, when Joan, in a plain black dress, with her face worn by poverty and sorrow, came upon the stage.

A faint roar of welcome, instantly suppressed, greeted her, and Bertie leant forward to look at her, for she had come on upon his side of the stage and was not easy to see.

"You here!" she said to the villain, and at the voice, more than at the face, Bertie fell back as if knocked down by a sudden blow.

Merciful Heaven! it was the picture come to life! It was the beautiful girl whom he had seen in the rooms above his own, the girl he had rescued from Stuart Villiers!

For a moment his brain whirled and the blood rushed to his face, then he laughed.

"Mad indeed!" he muttered. "I've got to the pass when I take a girl on the stage for her! I had better choose a comfortable asylum while there's time!"

And he leant back and would not look at her, just to cure himself of his mad craze.

But as Joan went on speaking, and her voice continued knocking at the door of his memory, his face grew paler and his breath came quicker.

He took up his glasses, very much as Royce had done when first he had recognized her in the same way, and with trembling hands held them to his eyes.

Slowly, surely, the fact—not to be laughed away, not to be argued out of existence—bore in upon him.

The girl on the stage, Ida Trevelyan, the girl he had saved from Stuart Villiers, the girl who was like the picture looked up in his cabinet.

He dropped the glasses; he was so near the stage that he did not need them, and keeping behind the curtains, watched her with feverish, burning intensity.

She was playing magnificently, but he took no note of that. If she had been talking "double Dutch" and dancing a cellar-flap, it would have been all the same to him.

The house hung enraptured upon every word; they sat there with breathless interest, while the villain tempted her, and when at last, maddened and tortured by his insidious sophistry, she raised her hand and struck him across the lips, the huge audience rose at her with a wild roar of approval and delight.

The play was stopped for a second or two; Joan stood first making no sign. She would not take any notice of applause in the middle of the act, and after a second or two the play proceeded.

Bertie watched, stunned and bewildered.

This magnificent, beautiful creature, with the men and bearing of an empress, the helpless, tearful girl he had rescued from Stuart Villiers! He could scarcely believe his eyes, his ears! And yet it was true. He could not be mistaken.

Suddenly, as he sat, his gaze riveted to her face, he saw a thin streak of misty vapor rise from one of the wings opposite him.

He watched it absently, unconsciously for a moment or two, then, as it grew in size and density, his attention woke to it.

What was it?

While he asked himself this question, a yellow tongue of flame shot out of the files, and he knew that what he was looking at was—fire!

Nobody else seemed to see it but himself; it grew and expanded with devilish rapidity, noiseless as yet, but persistent.

It reached the top of the fringe under the proscenium and caught there.

And in another instant it glided into the sight of the crammed and packed audience, in a second the awful cry arose: "Fire!"

In another second everyone, every man and woman, seemed to rise as if moved by one impulse, and the wild cry "Fire!" rose from a thousand throats.

In yet another second the tongue of flame had licked round the proscenium and gained the scenery, and the whole of the back of the stage was a sheet of flame.

It was awful to see how quickly it spread! There was a wild yell of terror and despair.

Men sprang on to their seats and, waving their hands, women fainted; a panic made for the doors, which becoming rapidly choked, blocked the exit as surely as if every entrance was masked with iron. Yells, imprecations, prayers, rose in wild confusion.

And in the midst of the uproar, in front of the now blazing scenery, stood the exquisite figure of Joan—of Ida Trevelyan—her face pale but calm, her white hands lifted imploringly.

"Keep your seats! Keep your seats and you are safe!" Bertie heard her cry; the pure, clear voice ringing out like that of a bell across the din.

It mattered him.

Then she shook her head. "Save them! Make them keep their seats!"

As she spoke a tongue of flame shot out towards her, and seemed to touch her.

Bertie, with a cry of warning, leaped to the edge of the box, and, jumping down, seized her in his arms.

"Come!" he said. "Come, or you are lost!"

She struggled with him for a moment or a minute—which—then she let him take her in his arms and carry her off the stage!

CHAPTER XXXIII.
Joan struggled for a moment or two in Bertie's arms, still calling to the people to keep their seats and all would be well; then, in sheer desperation, he raised her to his shoulder and rushed to the wings.

There he was met by a sheet of flame which seemed to strike from end to end and bar his progress. He turned and made for the other side, but a wing had fallen across and here again was a barrier.

At the back of the stage the flames were rapidly making their way round, and columns of smoke rose and floated towards him.

He glanced frantically at the front of the house, but the sight presented by the struggling people, madly endeavoring to force their way through the exits, made it evident that to carry his burden in that direction meant death, or at least broken limbs.

There was nothing for it but to make his way through the back of the stage before they were enveloped in a fiery and deadly ring.

He had faintly felt the faintness of death, and he felt almost glad, for if he had still struggled time would be lost and their case hopeless.

SHE CURED HER HEART DISEASE

When She Cured Her Kidneys With Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Henry J. Jacques Found a Speedy Relief for All Her Troubles, and Now Enjoys the Best of Health.

St. Rose du Lac, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special.)—Heart Disease is one of the results of disordered kidneys, and is consequently easily cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, as the experience of Mrs. Henry J. Jacques, of this place.

"My heart troubled me all the time," said Mrs. Jacques in an interview, "and I knew what terrible results might follow. The fact that my limbs would swell and my back ache led me to believe that I also suffered from Kidney Disease. I determined to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought four boxes, and before I had finished the third box the swelling was gone, my back was well, and my heart no longer troubled me. I am now in the best of health, and I owe it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Heart Disease is one of the troubles that come from unhealthy kidneys. They fail to strain the impurities out of the blood, and these impurities are bound to affect the heart, which is the engine that propels the blood through the body. To cure a heart Disease cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills to prevent Heart Disease keep the kidneys toned up and healthy by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

CONCRETE STATUE.

Memorial of Black Hawk 48 Feet High and Three Years in the Making.

A concrete statue of the famous Indian Chief Black Hawk has been erected by the State of Illinois. The statue stands above Eagle's Nest, across the river from Oregon, Ill. It was in process of making three years.

The statue's great size, forty-eight feet without counting either the artificial base, the natural rock foundation, 20 feet high, on which it is placed, puts it on a scale with the Goddess of Liberty, in New York Harbor, and the great statue from the Pilgrim on the New England coast.

The third and greatest claim to fame is that it is built to be permanent. It is believed that it will outlast the Sphinx, the Pyramids, and even the stones of the Druids, says the Cement Age. The sculptor was Lorado Taft. Mr. Taft had noted the remarkable time-proof qualities of concrete in ancient European structures, and there came to him the great idea for the means of making an enduring statue.

With this process in mind, it was not long before an adequate subject presented itself. For thirteen years he had his summer home and studio at 225 West 87th St., New York City. Standing for the hundredth time at the highest point of the cliff, and looking south at the land and river, he never failed to remember that it was the Indian hunting grounds from which he had taken the name of his studio.

They AGREE TO DISAGREE.

An editor and his wife disagreed with each other materially. She sets things to rights, and he writes things to set her wrong. Others write, and he sets the devil out of the house as much as possible, and he retains him and could not go to press without him; she knows more than he knows, and he writes more than she knows.

JOSEPHINE'S WILL.

Napoleon's Divorced Wife Did Not Blame Her Husband for Ambition.

Count Leopold Palle has just published in Italy the text of the will made by Josephine de Beauharnais, the first wife of Napoleon. This document has hitherto been unknown, as the original disappeared from Malmaison the day after the ex-Emperor died, in May, 1814.

An authentic copy remained in the hands of a Corsican named Fabrizio, from whom it has passed from father to son until to-day it belongs to Paul Fabrizio, an Italian Senator, who has given a copy to Count Palle.

The will is a profession of faith by Napoleon's repudiated wife rather than a disposition of her property, of which it speaks only vaguely. She declares that she has always believed in God and religion, despite the efforts of Bonaparte to destroy her faith, she does not blame her husband: "If he was an unbeliever and atheist the fault lies on the vile courtiers who by their sycophancy made him believe there was no God above him. They have made him a god, how then could he retain any Christian humility?"

The ex-Empress swears before God and the Bourbon royal family that she was innocent of the Duke d'Enghien's death. She did all she could, she declares, to save the unfortunate prince.

She recommends her children, Queen Hortense and Prince Eugene-Napoleon, to the kindness of the Bourbon family, and concludes by expressing the hope that the Emperor will come to recognize how great the difference was between herself and Marie Louise, for whom he sacrificed her.

A NEW OCEAN GIANT.

About once in a decade a new fleet of ocean liners is launched, setting a new standard for size, luxury and safety at sea. The great ships which are thought to express the "last word" in boat building are suddenly found to be dwarfed by their new sisters and relegated to second place. Always the new fleet, now under construction, surpasses all the great ships that have gone before. Scarcely has the world become accustomed to using the Mauretania as a synonym for the great ships which are thought to express the "last word" in boat building are suddenly found to be dwarfed by their new sisters and relegated to second place. VARICOSE VEINS CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and told him my condition. I was advised to consult Dr. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had been treated from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW MERRON TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

CONVICT A POET?

William Huckle Claims to Have Written Hymn in Anglican Hymnal.

William Huckle, now serving a seven-year sentence in Kingston Penitentiary for alleged blackmail while engaged in the private detective business in Hamilton, has written the Anglican Archbishop of Ottawa, claiming authorship of hymn 676, "Just for To-Day," in the book of common praise. He says:

"In July, 1878, I was addressing an open-air meeting in Hyde Park, England, my subject being 'Infidelity versus Christianity.' During my remarks I referred to the love of God as exemplified in the provision He had made for man's sustenance. An infidel in the audience interrupted me, asking why we prayed to God for 'daily bread,' why not ask for a year's supply? In reply I told a story of a little girl, who upon being asked the same question replied, 'Because we do not want stale bread, we want fresh bread each day.' Upon reaching my home and thinking about the incident, I composed a leaflet entitled 'Just for To-Day,' which I recited the following Sunday at an open-air meeting in Hyde Park. A gentleman named Counsel, an Australian, who was present, asked me after the meeting if I would have the verses printed, offering to have 20,000 printed if I would agree with him to do so. A printer named Frederick Crawley printed them, and my name was attached. Another 20,000 were printed in 1883, 10,000 were printed in Passaic in 1887, and in 1898 10,000 were printed in Toronto. Each time my name was attached.

"It has also been published in several religious papers, I understand. The hymn 676 in 'The Book of Common Praise' is my leaflet, 'Just for To-Day.' The last two verses have been altered. In the original they were rendered as follows:

"Cleanse and receive my parting soul,
Be Thou my stay;
Bid me, if to-day I die
Go home to-day.

"So for to-morrow and its needs
I do not pray—
But keep me, guide me; hold me,
Lord
Just for to-day."

"My wife has copies of the original, also of others which I have composed—which you may obtain from her, her address being 1200 North Goodman street, Rochester, U.S.A.

"I would esteem it a favor if you will enquire into the facts as given above, and communicate with me as to the result. My object in writing to you is that credit may be given where it is due, and I am confident you will feel that if my verses are considered worthy of a place in the 'Book of Common Praise,' the authorship should at least be acknowledged. Mr. Dawson, the inspector, has seen one of the original copies of 'Just for To-Day,' published in 1878 with my name attached."

The letter was forwarded to J. Edmund Jones, Toronto, who acted as secretary of the compilation committee of the hymnal, who will make an enquiry. Although the composition appears as anonymous in the new Anglican hymn book, it has often been attributed to the Right Rev. Samuel Wilberforce, a bishop in the Church of England, who is dead some time.

Huckle may be hoping that his claims to authorship may assist in shortening his prison term, as was the case of a young English poet in St. Paul, Minn., penitentiary recently.

Mr. Butler Talks On St. John.

Mr. M. J. Butler, Dominion Iron & Steel Co., made some important remarks at the Canadian Club in St. John on the night of the 19th. Butler thinks that city ought to be the model port of America. He says Montreal is to be Canada's summer port and St. John the haven of the winter mariner. He commented on the facilities of St. John—the right English port in the best of any town in the Dominion to-day. Courtenay Bay on the east of the harbor gave the ex-railroader an idea. Why does not enterprise get a spade and dredge the bay and knock a few more wharves into shape? Another point of Mr. Butler's:

"With proper freight handling mechanism between the wharves and steamers, your port, figuratively speaking, would be on an average of at 250 or 300 miles inland." He held out a map during his lecture to the club, and traced the future of St. John. He reminded the diners that they would be sure of roping in the transcontinental roads. St. John would be a big terminal point in five years. He also referred to the Hudson Bay dream fast approaching reality. Mr. Butler set out to prove that if Hudson Bay and Straits are navigable, the Maritime Provinces will find it much easier to ship their stuff up to Port Nelson, across the Bay to the West. And where does St. John come in if this is so? Mr. Butler's answer: "St. John is the natural port of the Maritime Provinces."

Portugal and Canada.

Portugal's population is given at 5,423,132, slightly less than Canada's, but crowded into an area of 35,400 square miles, being a little more than half that of Canada's postage stamp Province of Manitoba. In trade Portugal falls away below Canada. Her annual total exports and imports amounting to less than 100,000,000 mill. reis being slightly more than Canada's, whose trade amounts to over $600,000,000. Portugal's population is entirely Roman in religion, the figures of 1900 showing only 4,491 Protestants and 481 Jews. Lisbon is about the same size as Toronto, having a population of 356,000.

Its Reflected Glory.

The relative importance of places is sometimes confusingly stated. For instance, Dr. A. S. Vogt was once asked in New York if "Toronto were not the town where you changed cars for Cobalt?" A woman innocently aroused the ire of a resident of St. Catharines by saying about that picturesque spot, "Oh, yes, that's where our automobile broke down on the way from Buffalo to Toronto."

IN MEMORY

Of Albert Howarth, Who Died on Dec. 25th, 1910

God has taken home our darling
And our heart received a thrill—
For he left a vacant place,
That no earthly hope can fill.

He had been with us fourteen past years—
And it hardly seems like one year,
When the angels came from heaven
Our darling for to take.

And they found him well attended
With the earthly sickness bore,
And they said, "Come, Albert darling,
Thou shalt suffer never more."

Like an arrow from his body,
His spirit to Heaven fled—
Oh, how dreadful the moment
When we found our son was dead.

All the light and rays of sunshine
Quickly left our happy home,
When we found our precious darling
Left us sorrow and alone.

God had need of one more flower
In his garden up above,
So he called our darling Albert
To His Home of light and love.

Composed by Mrs Benjamin Livingston Athens, Jan. 14th, 1911.

BEEES AND HONEY

UNION VALLEY APIARY

The above apiary is owned and run by Mr Oliver Hayes. The Hayes family have had bees for about one hundred years.

This apiary in 1909 yielded one ton of honey, with little or no increase, from twenty-five colonies and no winter loss reported. This apiary in 1910 is reliably reported to have yielded two tons of honey from twenty-five colonies spring count, or fifty colonies fall count. Mr Hayes did this work without help or advice from any one, and he does not think that he did any more or as much as any experienced and attentive bee-keeper might do.

ATHENS APIARY

Mr M. B. Holmes, proprietor and sole manager of this apiary, which must take rank among the most profitable and best directed apiaries in the country. There was a lucid description in detail by a clever, level-headed writer last season and so inclusive that it left little for me to say concerning Mr Holmes' apiary, the reputation of which is well and favorably known.

Mr Holmes' phenomenal yield from 150 colonies is in evidence of his consummate skill and attention.

It is well known that he is a retired gentleman, having the leisure, ability and inclination to employ part of his time along this line, and he deserves high credit for the manner in which he had done this.

Lumber is increasing in price and will so continue except as substitutes check it for a while. Any common genius could mould a trough from cement if he had a form which a common mechanic could readily make, engaged with decorations if desired—and it would be just as easy to mould a brood hive from cement.

The brood-hive is rarely moved more than twice a year—out of the cellar in spring, and into the cellar in fall. Its weight— $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch thick—may not be a serious objection, as it is likely fibre may soon be mixed with it, which will greatly lighten it. I have just been shown a piece of $\frac{1}{2}$ inch mesh steel wire, sometimes called metal lath. I feel quite certain that this well embedded in a half inch board (in centre) would reinforce sufficient to resist a heavy blow, or side pressure. A box could be made light, lasting and strong, just the thing for a brood hive. One mould or form would do a thousand hives in time, giving us a sun-proof, frost-proof, rain-proof, moisture-proof, decay-proof pure hive. It will come to the surface some day. This view has been in my mind several years.

TOLEDO

Mr Fred Seward is quite ill at his home near Toledo with what threatens to be typhoid-pneumonia. Mr Seward's children have only just recovered from a rather protracted illness, and now Mr Seward is down.

News has come to hand of the death of Dr. Charles Dunham of Frankville, formerly a Toledo boy. His Toledo friends regret very much to hear of his untimely end and much sympathy is felt for friends in their trouble.

We are glad to learn that Mrs Lydia Stratton, who met with an accident recently by falling down a cellar stairs, is rapidly recovering and we hope soon to hear that she is entirely well.

Mr R. J. Seymour and family were the guests recently of Mr and Mrs Richard Cromley.

Farmers are busy now hauling logs to the saw mill, cutting ice, getting up wood, etc.

Toledo rink is doing a rushing business now under the management of Mr C. Eaton.

Mr H. N. Stinson leaves next Tuesday for Brockville to attend the Counties Council.

Mrs L. Stratton is at the present time visiting her daughter, Mrs W. Seymour.

A ROYAL BOY FIGHTER.

A Clever Game by Which He Outwitted His Keepers.

You have all heard of King Edward VII, who died a few weeks ago. Do you know anything of King Edward I?

There never was a more famous warrior than that King Edward, for he began to win battles when he was only 15 years old.

But once, at a place called Lewes, in England, he lost a battle, and, what was worse still, he was taken by the soldiers belonging to the other side.

These soldiers kept Prince Edward—for he had not got to be King then, remember—with them and watched him all ways, so that he could not run away.

Prince Edward, however, made a plan one day. He said to the attendants who were keeping watch over him: "This is such a fine afternoon that I should like to have a ride into the country."

The attendants were quite willing to go, so the horses were got from the stables, and away the party merrily rode across the fields and over the hedges.

By and by they came to a field which was very flat, and Prince Edward said: "Let us stop here and have some races with our horses."

For the remainder of the afternoon, therefore, race after race was run, and the attendants got very excited, and each was eager to show that the horse which he had was better than any of the others.

Now, during all this time Prince Edward did not race his horse at all, but he just sat quietly on its back and watched the others race their horses.

And when at last the party began to ride back home again the horses of the attendants were very, very tired, and could only go slowly.

But Prince Edward's horse was not tired, and all at once he dashed away as fast as his horse could gallop. He met a party of his friends, who were waiting for him behind some trees, and they all galloped away.

The attendants went in pursuit, but could not catch them. Indeed, the attendants could do nothing but look at one another and pull long faces, and think how clever Prince Edward had been.

LA MODE.

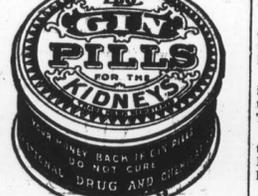

It is Short Step From the Original to the Bizarre.

We are driven to ask ourselves sometimes, both in our theatres and in the fashionable gatherings where the leaders of the Mode must do congregate, how far our love of originality eccentricity will lead us, writes our Paris correspondent.

The other day I saw a very elegant woman wearing a hat with aigrette of which came down over her shoulder, and twisted itself round her neck and fastened under her chin. Some toilettes we see are truly excessive in their fancifulness and seem to have been designed by a caricaturist rather than a couturier.

Certainly originality has been designated but between tasteful individuality and "get-up" which makes the wearer resemble an African, there is a wide step.

The other evening at a rehearsal at the Folies Bergeres one of our most popular actresses appeared with a head-dress consisting of four green feathers stuck in her hair a la sauvage and falling down to her eyes in front.

BILL AND HIS WIFE.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.) Now, this is a true story. Bill is known everywhere as a "good fellow." He has his faults, but his heart is in the right place—that's what everybody says. Nobody ever came to him for help and got turned down. He had a family; none of our crowd had ever seen his family, but we knew he must be good to them, even though he never did appear to go home.

One evening five or six good fellows were sitting in the back room of a downtown saloon, and Bill was telling a story. A woman entered. She had a dark shawl over her head, and we couldn't see her face, but she came directly to our table. "Gentlemen," she said, "Christmas is coming, and I have nothing for the little ones. Can you help?"

Of course it was Bill who responded first. He jumped up and plunged his hand into his pocket. We could hear the rattle of bills, and we knew that something more than mere silver had found its way into the trembling hand. Bill was blushing when he came back to us. We were shamed into offering something, but he would have none of it. He seemed confused—a little ashamed of his charity—but he wouldn't let us help. And it was just like Bill to change the subject and go right on with his story.

And the woman? Oh, that was Bill's wife. We found out later that that was the only way she could ever get any money out of him.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria. (Buffalo News.) Mayor Whitlock in an address in Toledo, said of a proposed law: "New laws must be made to fit new conditions."

Mayor Whitlock smiled. "You know how," he said, "as the frigid winter season congeals the streams and ravages the woods, tramps are apt to commit some trifling offense in order to be locked up in a snug, warm jail until the time of the singing of birds is come again, and the voice of the turtle is once heard in the land."

"Well," a Toledo policeman arrested one of these tramps the other day, and on the way to the station house the captive was so delighted that he danced, waved his arms and sang.

"But the policeman said to him very sternly: 'Here, keep quiet, or I'll let you go.'"

RHEUMATISM

13 Months' Suffering

Paris, Ont., Oct. 21st, 1909.

Dear Sir: I wish you to put my letter on record for the sake of suffering humanity. I have suffered 13 months with Muscular Rheumatism in my back. I have spent at least $20.00 on pills and liniments during that time, but nothing would ease me of the pain—in fact it was a chronic pain. For those long 13 months it stayed right with me, sometimes "convulsive and cramp-like, causing me to groan and cry aloud. Every moment was torture. I could not turn in bed without yelling out. Now I will always bless the day when I first started to rub in, and to take internally "Nerviline" After using four bottles, my pains have left me. I shall always take off my hat to "Nerviline" and can honestly say it's the poor man's best friend, because it will always drive away from you the Demon—Pain.

Yours faithfully, Thomas Coas.

Use only Nerviline! Sold in 25c and 50c bottles of the world over.

DROPPING REAL DROPS. (New York Sun.)

Medicine so strong that a dose must be limited to seven drops had been prescribed for the man with unsteady hands. His family also had shaky hands, and as there was no medicine dropper in the house it looked as if somebody would have to make a midnight trip to the drug store. But a visiting relative that they had put up for the night suggested an alternative.

"Take that half of that raw egg shell—raw, mind you; cooked egg shell is too brittle and crumbles too easily—so, lay it on a saucer in the cupboard, drill a hole in it the size of a pin head and let the medicine trickle through that. It will be sure to fall out in drops of the required size and you couldn't make a mistake if you wanted to."

That the getting of wealth is a very different thing from the getting of wisdom has been shown once again, and once again by Mr. Andrew Carnegie. He has placed in the hands of twenty-four American trustees, with Senator Elihu Root at their head, the sum of two millions in 5 per cent. bonds, with the general instruction that the annual interest, a hundred thousand pounds—is to be devoted to hastening the abolition of international war. Mr. Carnegie does not say how it is to be done; the twenty-four trustees are left to invent methods. And that is not all. When international war has been abolished (when, not if) the revenue is to be applied to alleviating and eliminating the "next most dreaded evil" suffered by man. Might we suggest that future Carnegie trustees, "when war has been abolished," will do quite as wisely to attempt to "abolish" the war between the sexes or to eliminate the taste for blood from carnivora, or to train mermaids to believe that man cannot live but succumb only? Futility can not further go. O that men should put dollars in their pockets to steal away their brains!—From the Saturday Review.

Are Your Bowels Stagnant? Many a person carries around in their system a cesspool composed of half-digested, putrid, decaying food that the overloaded stomach can't get rid of because of constipation. No wonder that in anaemia, blood rashes, headaches and rheumatism are so common. No better cure is known than DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS OF MANDRAKE AND BUTTER-NUT. Taken at night, you're well next morning. They flush out the system, soothe and tone the stomach, improve digestion, filter and purify the blood, restore lost complexion, give vim, buoyancy and robust good health to young and old. To look, feel and always be at your best, use DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS regularly. 25c per box, doctors or the Catarrhison Co., Kingston, Ont.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper. Progress of Nitrate Industry. Considerable progress has been made in the nitrate industry in Chile during the current year. The production of nitrates to the first nine months was 3,942,648 tons, as against 3,200,039 tons in the corresponding months of last year; while the quantities exported during these periods were respectively 3,082,560 tons and 2,847,564 tons. It is reported that several of the works are now controlled from the United States, and that negotiations are in progress for the acquisition of others. The outlook for the industry is considered to be promising, even at the present prices for nitrates.

MOTHERS APPRECIATE BABY'S OWN TABLETS. Because they are the only medicine which gives the guarantee of a Government analyst to contain no opium, morphine or other harmful narcotic. This means the mother can give this medicine to her youngest baby with absolute safety. Thousands of mothers know this and will give no other medicine to their little ones. The Tablets cannot do harm—they always do good. When the little one has a cold, baby colic, or colic, when he has worms or his teeth are troubling him, Baby's Own Tablets will prove their worth. Concerning them Mrs. E. Merriam, Stratford, Ont., writes: "I use Baby's Own Tablets for my three little ones and consider them the very best medicine during the teething period. The Tablets are sold at 25 cents a box by all medicine dealers or direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

HE WAS CONSIDERATE. (Lippincott's Magazine.) Four old Scotchmen, the remnant of a club formed some 30 years ago, were seated around the table in the club room. It was 2 a. m., and Douglas looked across at Donald and said: "In a thick, slippy voice: 'Donald, I've notice what an awful peculiar expression there is on Jack's face.' 'Aye,' said Donald: 'I notice that. He's dead!—he's been dead these four hours.' 'What! Dead! Why did ye no' tell me?' 'Ah, no, no, no,' said Donald: 'Am not that kind of man to disturb a convivial evening.'"

CHINESE HONESTY.

Paid for Being Smuggled Into This Country Even if Sent Back. "A talk with any smuggler who ever engaged in the business of bringing Chinese into the United States contrary to the immigration laws will suffice to establish the Chinaman's proverbial honesty in business transactions," said Guy B. Runyan, of Detroit.

"I know of one old French Canadian who in his younger days was a professional smuggler and operated on the Canadian border. He did not deal in furs or any articles of commerce; he made a practice of smuggling Chinamen across the border, and according to his own statement amassed enough money to set himself up in a comfortable business.

"He has often said that the duty of a professional smuggler ended when the Chinaman was landed on the soil of the United States. Then it was that the smuggler got his money. After that it did not fall to him to look out for the Chinaman who had been his charge. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the Chinaman was appraised and sent back to his former abode by the immigration authorities.

"Nevertheless the smuggler received his pay. Never, according to the story told me by the old man, did any Chinaman who has been connected in different ways with the smuggling of Chinamen, has there been known an instance where the smuggler was defrauded of the price promised him. This illustrates the predominant trait of honesty in the Chinese character."

AMERICAN ROBINS IN ENGLAND. An attempt has been made this past summer to introduce the American robin into Surrey, with apparent success. Six pairs turned loose last June near Guildford have reared about forty nestlings. The name of our robin was given by the Pilgrim Fathers to the largest and most numerous of the American thrushes (turdus migratorius), because of its red breast and friendly association with man.

The American robin is closely related to our blackbird, and has a sweet, melodious song. Its introduction to Surrey will be regarded by market gardeners with much misgiving, for though his food consists chiefly of worms or insects, he works sad havoc among the cherries. —Westminster Gazette.

THOROUGHbred ANIMALS AND PLANTS.

"There is as much difference between thoroughbreds and ordinary plants as between thoroughbreds and ordinary animals." This statement is made by D. M. Ferry & Co. of Detroit, the greatest flower and vegetable breeders in the country, and appears in their 1911 annual catalog. It is a fact that they are thorough for the great value and economy of thoroughbred seeds. "Any garden soil natural law which applies to animals applies equally to plants." A good cow (i.e. a thoroughbred) eats no more than a poor one, but may give twice as much butterfat. "Good blood" makes as much difference with corn as with cows. But thoroughbred plants, like thoroughbred animals, are not produced in one or two generations, for no matter how superior an individual of common origin may be, its progeny are as a rule like the general run of its antecedents. Hence the need for seedmen like D. M. Ferry & Co. They have experience, the best plant breeding equipment in the United States, and the business common to sell only such seeds as have been bred from the choicest stocks for many generations.

D. M. Ferry & Co.'s seed annual for 1911 may be had free of charge by writing to them at Windsor, Ontario. It contains much of interest for those who think.

A JAPANESE ESTIMATE OF MISSIONS. A statesman of Japan said recently in a conversation I had with him: "Four missionaries undoubtedly have done good for the morals of our people, but they have done far more for our health and strength as a nation. They come to us with doctors and nurses, and hospitals and schools. Before Perry's arrival 2,000,000 infants were born every year in Japan, and for lack of proper sanitary measures they died. Now with the hospitals and sanitary and hygienic methods introduced by the missionaries, the 2,000,000 children are born yet they do not die." This is true of every other Oriental country. NO SYMPATHY WITH DUMMIES

The Monetary Times Deals With Farmers Bank Smash.

Ex-Manager Travers Declared to be Brutally Dishonest.

Criticises the Government Department of Finance.

Toronto despatch says: The Monetary Times in a leading article on the Farmers Bank smash, will say:

There are two outstanding considerations arising from the failure of the Farmers Bank. The first is that it is imperative that sympathy with dummy figures who ought to have been active should be cast to the four winds and a new standard of managerial and directorial conduct be created.

The second consideration is the relation of the Farmers Bank failure to the general banking system and the coming revision of the bank act.

Mr. W. R. Travers, the general manager of the bank, went to jail this week for six years. He was brutally dishonest. No legitimate sympathy can be offered him, except it be perhaps that he might have had the company of other Farmers Bank associates.

Mr. Travers made known that the Keeley mine transaction would work out to the advantage of the bank. Another excuse was that his improper acts were solely for the purpose of trying to clear the bank; and another respecting the theft of $10,000 that Travers meant to transfer stock in the Keeley mine to cover that amount and was greatly surprised to find that he had forgotten to do so.

They came the paradox, "his intention was good, but he was unaccountably negligent."

Colonel Munroe, the bank's president, says he knew "absolutely nothing" of the advances made to the Keeley mine. Did the president and the directors of the bank never hear rumors of what was being done in the Farmers Bank head office, and as a consequence, investigate the channels into which the Farmers Bank loans were being directed?

The lack of directorial responsibility in bank matters has become proverbial. But the day is approaching when the director will be compelled to do his duty, or be held responsible in the event of failure.

Mr. Fitzgibbon, in whom the president placed complete confidence, told Magistrate Dennis at Toronto a week ago that he was inspector of the bank, only in name, and that he had learned from his forty years' experience in banking that it is not good policy for an accountant to differ with his general manager in regard to the status of his bank's assets.

"I learned," said the witness, "during my former connection with a larger bank in which I was associated with Mr. Travers that it is not the function of a chief accountant to question the valuation of a bank's assets. I admit that at times I did agree with Mr. Travers."

"You remember the trial at Lindsay?" asked Mr. Dewar, "where you were witness and you swore that the 'agreement' between you and the condition of the Farmers Bank was correct. Did you not?"

"It was correct from our viewpoint," said Mr. Fitzgibbon.

"According to the books of the bank?"

"Yes."

"But now you swear the statement was deceptive?"

"Yes, in part as I have explained," said Mr. Fitzgibbon.

"This is virtually an admission that Mr. Fitzgibbon knew the Farmers Bank was being conducted dishonestly month by month."

Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, the former president of the bank, is required by the court to give some information respecting the bank's affairs. He is charged with making false statements to the Government. The more that is learned of the failure, the more it seems that the bank was started chiefly for the purpose of financing mining enterprises.

It is true that Dr. Nesbitt may be false returns to the Government, but it is equally true that the Government was misled by incorrect statements which were sent to the Government for more than three years.

This leads to the question as to what value is the Government bank statement for the detection of fraud.

"We think that the Department of Finance must share the responsibility of the failure of the Farmers Bank unless later explanations prove otherwise," said the letters which passed between the Department of Finance and the State Insurance Department of New York last week respecting the Farmers Bank transactions with a fraternal insurance company make a sorry exhibit.

Mr. Hotchkiss, the Insurance Superintendent, knows that something was radically wrong with the Farmers Bank, and communicated as much to the Finance Department at Ottawa. The reply was that they could not take action.

"Probably the bank, on application from you," wrote Mr. Fielding to Mr. Hotchkiss, "would explain the whole matter."

legitimate business, and action must be taken." The Bankers' Association have more than once stepped in and prevented an inevitable disaster becoming too ruinous. In the case of the Farmers Bank the well-informed public, the Finance Department and the bankers allowed the bank officials all the rope and time needed for that institution to hang itself.

The revision of the Bank Act should be carefully and quietly considered by the Government, the bankers and the public. The Canadian Bank Act must not be legislation founded on the fire ashes and lava of the Farmers Bank eruption; although at the same time that disaster presents lessons which cannot be ignored. And in the meantime the bank director must learn his duties.

AHAB ARCHIVES

Remarkable Find of Moulded Clay Tablets in Samara.

One Inscription a Letter to Ahab From the King of Assyria.

New York, Jan. 23.—A special cable to the Tribune from London says: A discovery of vast importance for Biblical history is reported from Berlin by the Daily Telegraph. It appears that Professor Reiser, who has been carrying out the excavations on the site of the Israelitish capital in Samara, has unearthed moulded clay tablets covered with inscriptions, which are believed to form a portion of the archives of King Ahab, a contemporary of the prophet Elijah.

These inscriptions, which merely in quantity constitute the most remarkable archaeological find that has been made in Palestine, are not cut into the tablets, but are written in old Hebrew characters with the intensely black ink found on the Egyptian papyrus between one thousand two thousand years before Christ.

One of them is a letter to Ahab from the King of Assyria, who, Dr. Yahuda believes, was either Assurbanipal or his son, Salmanasser II. Another tablet contains a detailed inventory of the furniture in the royal palace, but further particulars of the find have not yet become known.

Nevertheless it is evidently destined to provide convincing confirmation of certain phases of Old Testament history which some of the modern critics have been in the habit of treating as altogether mythical.

P-A-Y-E-CARS

Platform of Cars Must be Larger, Says Railway Board.

Commissioners Differ and Appeal to the Courts may be Made.

Toronto despatch: With Chairman Leitch reaching out to the Court of Appeal for a settlement of the trouble on a basis of law, and Commissioners Kittson and Ingram dissenting on a question of fact, the meeting of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, called to further discuss the installation of the P-A-Y-E system in the street cars of this city, broke up in confusion yesterday.

The rock upon which the Board split into three sections was that of the right of the Toronto Railway Company to decide in the event of an equal division of expert opinion, whether they should have two doors or one at the rear of all the cars which they may in future operate on the P-A-Y-E principle.

Chairman Leitch, despite powerful argument by Corporation Counsel H. L. Drayton, K. C., held the opinion that the company had the right. Both of his colleagues, however, offered dissenting judgment to the effect that the cars should have two doors on the rear platform, and that the board had the power to compel them to be installed before the cars could be operated as P-A-Y-E.

According to the ruling of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board the cars of the Toronto Railway Company must conform to the following table of measurements before they can be operated under the pay-as-you-enter system:

Minimum Minimum Minimum rear step platform length. Length of cars. 18 to 22 ft. 56 inches 39 inches 18 to 28 ft. 62 inches 44 inches 28 to 32 ft. 68 inches 48 inches 32 feet 74 inches 54 inches

As will be readily seen, this type classification will eliminate all but the newer class of cars.

The experts gave to the board the opinion that the cars should all have a platform dividing the step space; that at the discretion of the company a grab-railing can be placed on the fare-box; that all cars to be operated under two doors at the rear, providing for entrance and exit, or one large door on the rear platform, that the system now in operation of entering cars at the rear door and leaving by the front should be continued.

Mr. G. D. Peters, Chief of Co-operation of State and private owners, United States Forest Service, spoke along similar lines.

HOTEL MEN FINED.

First Batch of 28 Liquor Cases Tried at Haileybury.

Haileybury, Ont., despatch: The first batch of 28 cases of alleged infractions of the liquor law were tried here to-day before Magistrate Atkinson, and convictions registered in each case. There were two charges against C. W. Knapp, of the Maple Leaf Hotel, one on Dec. 17 and the other Dec. 28, and sentence was reserved in both. J. J. Day's of the Matabanick Hotel, was fined $20 and costs on a charge of Dec. 23, a second charge being dismissed. Charles E. Eagan, proprietor of the Vendome Hotel, was debarred in two charges, one of which was dismissed and on the other he was fined $20 and costs. The defendants were represented by Mr. James Haverston, K. C.

In order to secure evidence the two Hinkerton men purchased three quart bottles of whiskey from each of the different hotels and the main argument of Mr. Haverston was that "he quantity purchased divided between the two men was not sufficient to prove a breach of the law which permits a man purchasing one quart only."

FAR FROM HOME.

Scotch Millionaire Dies at Richmond, Va.—Cut Off With $1.

New York, Jan. 23.—A despatch to the Tribune from Richmond, Va., says the body of a man found dead yesterday at the door of a Richmond hotel was identified to-day as that of Eno Whytehal, a Scotchman, millionaire, owner of stocks in the street railways of Hamburg, Germany, philanthropist and traveler. He came to Richmond from New York on Monday. Death resulted from a sudden physical collapse.

An examination of Mr. Whytehal's effects revealed a will telling of a story of an unhappy domestic life. He married twenty-five years ago, and had three children, two of whom survive him. He and his family quarrelled fifteen years ago, and he killed himself. The will says: "With my own hand, free will and special choice, I do hereby most emphatically disinherit and cut out my wife, Sophie, and my two children, namely, my son, Benjamin, and my daughter, Maud, with $1 each, and $1 only."

DROPPED ON HIM.

Farmer Fell Down Cellar on Top of Another Man.

Smith's Falls despatch: Andrew Moodie, a farmer, residing near the town, went to visit a neighbor, John Telford, last night. As he opened the door leading into the house he fell through the trap door of the cellar, which was open. At the moment Mr. Telford, was ascending the cellar stairs and Moodie dropped astride his neck.

Both men were at the bottom in the darkness, Telford escaping unhurt, but Moodie sustaining a fracture of three ribs and other painful injuries. He will recover.

HOME BURNED.

Two Hundred Barrels of Oil Also Consumed in Onondaga.

Brantford, Ont., despatch: Fire, which started from a gas stove, completely destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Merrill, two miles north of Onondaga, yesterday. The owner was absent at the time and the neighbors were able to save only part of the contents. Shortly after, in the same district, known as the Onondaga or Belt, the oil tanks of John Allan caught fire and made a blaze which lasted all night. About 200 barrels of oil were consumed. A fire had been started in order to prevent the oil from congealing from frost and the oil ignited from this.

GOLD MEDAL FOR MISS TERRY

New York, Jan. 23.—In recognition of distinguished services to dramatic art, Miss Ellen Terry, the English actress, was presented with a gold medal in New York by the founders of the New Theatre. To Miss Terry falls the distinction of being the first woman and the first British subject so honored.

LOCAL OPTION.

Inspector Was Disappointed—Laws Better Observed.

Ottawa despatch: Provincial License Inspector J. W. Gordon, of Toronto, who has been here officially inspecting the work of the local inspector here, in an interview this morning, said "he was greatly disappointed at the result of the local option vote in some municipalities of the Province on January 1."

"I anticipated a more sweeping victory for local option," he said. "I think, however, the license laws are being more generally and closely observed by license holders all over the Province."

OUR FORESTS

Hon. Mr. Fisher Speaks on Conservation of Trees.

Care Taken Along the Line of the G. T. P. to Prevent Fires.

Quebec despatch: Speaking in French at the Dominion Forestry Convention this morning, Hon. Sydney Fisher congratulated the Provincial Government for the efforts made for the conservation of forest and other natural resources. In order to show the progress that had been made in the past twenty-five years, the speaker said that when the first transcontinental railway, the C. P. R., was under construction there were almost constant fires along its line, causing consternation throughout the country. When the G. T. P. was started instructions were given that all possible care be taken to prevent forest fires, and it had had excellent results. Mr. Fisher suggested that the Province follow the example of the State of Massachusetts by voting $10,000 annually and creating reserves for the cultivation of trees.

Quebec had an expert forester in the Hon. Jules Allard and an excellent staff in the Forestry Department, and he felt certain that if his suggestion were adopted it would prove as successful as it did in Massachusetts.

Mr. G. D. Peters, Chief of Co-operation of State and private owners, United States Forest Service, spoke along similar lines.

BEAVERS BUSY.

Have Located on a Small Lake Near Renfrew.

Renfrew, Ont., Jan. 23.—The discovery has just been made of a colony of beavers on a small lake in Horton Township, four miles from Renfrew. The valuable game animal has returned to haunts from which it has chased fifty or sixty years ago.

On the lake, which is located on some waste land not much frequented by man, the beavers have built a house for themselves, and erected on the outlets of the creek a couple of small dams, which have had the effect of raising the level of the water in the lake.

Several trees along the shore of the lake have been cut down by the beavers, either as food or for building purposes, and in addition to soft woods they have actually gnawed down some small oak and maple trees.

The land on which the interesting colony is located is owned by Messrs. Alexander & Robert Leitch, who have notified John Downie, of Renfrew, game and fishery overseer, of the presence of the animals.

BUBONIC PLAGUE.

One Death in Peking—Missionary Doctors Fighting With Disease.

Pekin, Jan. 23.—The first death in Peking since the outbreak of the present epidemic of bubonic plague occurred in a missionary hospital to-day. There have been earlier reports that the disease has entered the capital, but not until to-day had a fatality been directly due to the plague.

In Manchuria and Northern China the plague is slowly extending. A number of foreigners, most of them women and children, are leaving the country. The Chinese officials have to a large extent surrendered command of the fight to the missionary physicians.

FIRED JAIL.

Illinois Girls Preferred Death to Disgrace of Imprisonment for Stealing.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Death resulted to-day from the fire started last night in the Lemont, Ill., jail by two girls, who attempted to commit suicide because of humiliation over their arrest. Stella Maxwell, 22 years old, died to-day in the hospital at Joliet, where they were taken when rescued by firemen who broke into the jail. The other girl, Freda Kampka, is dying.

They had been arrested on charges of stealing furs at Lemont, where they had gone from Joliet to attend a dance. The furs were recovered.

A SOCIETY SURPRISE.

Heir of Earl Cadogan, Who Married a Week Ago, is Engaged.

London, Jan. 23.—Another society surprise has been given by the unexpected engagement of Viscount Chelsea to Miss Marie Oxon, a pretty girl of 21, and niece of Lady Jardine. Viscount Jardine last May passed through the bankruptcy court. He became heir to the earldom of Cadogan and an income of $500,000 yearly on the recent death of his seven-year-old nephew. Only a week ago Earl Cadogan, who is 70 years of age, married Countess Palagi at Florence.

One of our exchanges advertises a cow for sale as follows: "Full blooded cow for sale, giving milk, tons of hay, a lot of chickens and several stoves." While we have always had the greatest respect for meek-eyed gentle bossy, we never suspected for a moment that she would branch out into the junk-shop business. And she full-blooded too!

The Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals has been having a busy time lately listening to deputations who knew just where the C.N.R. should cross the B.W. & N.W. And, in the final analysis, should not the interests of the whole province and of the railway be the determining factors? It is no small matter to cause a line of railway to deviate from the course that its engineers decide to be the best.

Honey at Sweet's Corners

Mr James Berry, a boy beekeeper at Sweet's Corners, from 50 hives of bees (fall count) harvested over 5,000 lbs. of honey, for which, at the extracting room, from local sales, he received $500. No mistake about the truth of the above.—W.S.H.
