A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER VII.

He stood behind some bales on the quay and watched Josiah go on board and saw that he was presently joined by a tall, stalwart man with a big watch-chain and a diamond scarf-pin—Gilmore. Then the vessel got under way, Josiah waving his handkerchief till quite the last moment. Carrington waved his until Josiah was out of sight; then he sank on to a bale and mopped his forehead. He was trembling in every limb. He felt weak almost to faintness—for the reaction of the strain of the last forty-eight hours promptly set in. He got back to his office at last, took the shares from the safe, and sinking into a chair stared at them in a kind of stupor. He wasn't quite sure that it wasn't a dream, and that he shouldn't wake presently to find himself surrounded by all his old difficulties. Presently he got up, and, walking as if he were stiff with weariness, went down to his stock-brokers', and cautiously introduced the subject of the Roaring Jane. Of course they had heard of the mine; everyone was talking about it; everyone was still higher, and no one knew where they were.

"I've got some," said Carrington, in a matter-of-fact way. "In fact, I've got a great many."

The stock-brokers were amazed, and congratulated him, and he gave them instructions to sell a few—only a few; but they represented a large sum of money.

He hovered about the city, feeling as if it belonged to him, as if he had bought it, then forced himself to go home. He took a bus as usual; habit is strong. Besides, the man was far away from realising the great change that had come to his fortunes, and in addition he had an idea that it would be well to be cautious. As he climbed the stairs, holding on to the balustrade, he tried to pull himself together for he felt dazed and confused, and he had a suspicion that he was looking ill and strange.

CHAPTER VIII.

Maida was at the piano; she was not singing, even in the low monotone in which she practised and rehearsed, for she had caught a cold on the preceding night and it had affected her voice. She was very strong; but her throat like that of most speakers and singers, was sensitive and now and again was attacked by a chill. Whenever this was the case she was nervous—for to her, her voice was her fortune; not only hers, but Carrie's and her father's. She had a suspicion that things were not going well with Mr. Carrington, and she felt that all the family depended on her. There was a little sad and anxious look in her eyes as she sat at the piano.

Carrie was making the tea. Whenever Maida was visited by what Carrie called "artistic depression," Carrie compelled herself to be more than usually cheerful; and this afternoon she had been amusing Maida by mimicking some of the persons she had seen at Lady Dorrington's, but she broke off in the middle of a sentence as Mr. Carrington entered, and she involuntarily exclaimed:

"Why, father, what is the matter? How ill you look!"

He sank into a chair, and tried to smile; but actually his great fortune weighed upon him more heavily than his threatened ruin had done.

"I'm not very well, and I'm very tired," he said. "I had to go into the country with a friend—on business."

"I hope it was 'good business,' as Ricky would say," Carrie said, as she took his hat and bag. "Have your tea before you go upstairs, father."

He shook his head dolefully and glanced at her furtively.

"I'm—I'm afraid not. Can't tell yet. It may be good; on the other hand—or it mayn't. It's very important business, and it may make me or mar me. I shall be a man or a mouse. What would you girls do if I—I if I lost all my money and were ruined?" he asked, looking, in the same furtive way, from one to the other.

Maida turned round on the music-stool and her hand instinctively went to her throat.

"We should do as you sometimes do on the Stock Exchange, father—bear it," said Carrie, promptly, with a light-hearted laugh. "That's almost bad enough for Ricky. Why, father, what do you think we should do, sit down and cry? I should open a milliner's shop on the front first-floor-room—what lovely bonnets I could make! There'd be a mob of women outside all day, and strings of carriages. And then there's Maida here; she is going to make a large fortune, going to be a celebrity. Be ruined, if you like, father; it might amuse you and it wouldn't hurt us."

She spoke with all her usual audacity, but she stroked his hair soothingly as she brought him his cup of tea.

"What would you do if I were rich, very rich?" he asked, stirring his tea noisily and glancing at them in the same covert way.

"I should buy you a new hat," she replied, promptly. "This one is shockingly shabby."

He forced a sigh and shook his head.

It will have to do for the present. We must wait for better times," he said, dolefully, but with an insane desire to shout out aloud and toss the old hat up to the ceiling.

The door opened and Ricky entered—he generally dropped in about tea-time, on his way from the office.

"Good-evening, Mr. Carrington. Good-evening, girls. Thank you, Carrie; I think I will sit down and take a cup of tea."

"You might wait till you are asked," retorted Carrie.

"I think not. I have always regarded the waiter with a kind of good-natured contempt. Just come back from the city, Mr. Carrington. Don't often go there, but had business to do for the gov'nor. Nice state of excitement it's in over this new boom, isn't it? People seemed half-mad at the office I went to."

"You must have found yourself in congenial company, then," remarked Carrie.

"I wonder whether it will last," continued Ricky, pointedly ignoring Carrie's taunt. "I'm always suspicious about mines; they're up to-day and down to-morrow."

"Strange mines!" commented Carrie. "Those I've heard about are generally down all the time—under the earth."

"Carrie, don't be frivolous when two gentlemen are talking business," adured Ricky, severely. "I suppose you've heard about it, Mr. Carrington? They say it's the biggest thing they've had for years."

Carrington's face had grown pale, and he was regarding the lad with an almost savage glare which rather puzzled Ricky.

"I mean this mine in Klondike, the Roaring Jane," he went on. "They say she is running over with gold—"

Mr. Carrington rose and grabbed at his hat.

"It's a pity you're not running over with sense," he snapped, savagely. "What do you know about the Roaring Jane? Why don't you attend to your own business instead of bothering yourself and worrying other people with stupid rumours about things you don't understand. You ought to have more sense."

With something like a snarl and an angry glance at the lad, he flung himself out of the room.

Ricky looked from one girl to the other aghast.

"What have I said, what have I done?" he demanded in a hushed

Drinking Tea Upset Nerves

Mr. Burroughs Compares Canadian Customs With Those in Old Land, and Tells How Nerves Were Set Right.

Orillia, Ont., June 14th.—"How to be well and strong?" is the question many are asking at this time of year, and in this letter you will find the answer.

It tells something of the blood-forming, nerve-invigorating influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great restorative which is causing so much talk here just now.

Nature's way of curing disease is by building up the vitality of the body, and this is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does. The blood is made rich and red, and it nourishes the exhausted nerves back to health and vigor.

The experience of Mr. Burroughs as described in this letter is similar to that of hundreds of others in this country who have recently put this well-known food cure to the test.

Mr. George Burroughs, 23 Peter street, Orillia, Ont., writes: "A few years ago, after coming out to this country from England, the change of customs seemed to have some effect on me. In the old country the habit of drinking strong tea was prevalent, and after arriving here I suffered very much from nervousness. If I put my arm down on the table it would shake very noticeably, and while performing my work I would easily tire, and want to sit down and rest. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I secured some and took a treatment. It built me up and made me strong and healthy. I have not had a trace of the nervousness since. I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment also, and find that it heals the skin very quickly. In fact I find all of Dr. Chase's medicines good."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

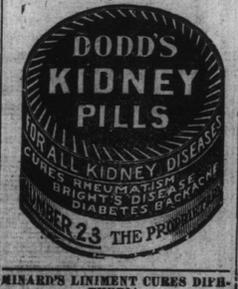

voice. "What did I say to make Mr. Carrington lose his hair? I don't know; do either of you? I only told him about this new boom. Oh, I say! I'd better go out and drown myself in the nearest water-but. Just say I'm sorry, will you, and that I won't do it again if he'll tell me what it was."

Carrie forced him down and thrust a piece of bread and butter into his hand.

"You just sit down and take your tea quietly," she commanded. "Father didn't mean anything. He's not well, and he's worried and anxious. He didn't want to talk business."

"So I've gleaned," said Ricky. "Well, it's the last time I shall venture a remark on stocks and shares in this room. 'The rest is silence,' as Hamlet says. But, oh, girls, don't you wish you'd a few shares in the Roaring Jane?"

Carrington spent a restless night and went down to his office early the next morning. The shares were still rising; his stock-brokers were full of the Roaring Jane, wanted to know how many he had, advised him to keep them. Their reports were eminently satisfactory; the thing promised to be a lasting, solid thing. But Carrington was nervous. He could not realise, could not believe in his stupendous good fortune. He sold some more shares and paid the cheque in his bank. The bank-manager received him, not with effusion, because bank-managers are never effusive, but in a very different manner to that with which he received him a couple of days ago—for the sum which Carrington was placing at deposit was a very large one. He drew a cheque on account, put the notes in his trousers-pocket, and walked about the city holding his hand over them, as he stopped at the jewellers, and started absently at the glittering gems which were displayed in their windows. After awhile he went into one shop and made some purchases, and put the cases in his pocket, holding his hand over them as he held it over the notes. And all the time he was trying to realize that he was a millionaire—more than a millionaire! (To be Continued.)

Grand Headquarters of the French

—A marvellous regiment, animated are used in the official army order in conferring the fifth palm on the flag of the famous foreign legion for gallantry in the recent fighting in Champagne. The regiment is unique in the number of times mentioned and decorated.

Fifty-one Nations Represented.
The staff correspondent of the Associated Press visited the legionaries in their rest camps, where they were recuperating and filling their ranks, and heard personal narratives from officers and men whose conduct is so highly praised. No matter what the men's nationality—and citizens of no fewer than fifty-one nations are represented among the legionaries—after joining them immediately become imbued with the regiment's glorious traditions. They have been always where the fighting was hottest.

When the war started, six battalions, forming two regiments, were sent to the front; now only three battalions remain, fused into one regiment. Among them are still Americans from various states of the Union, as well as from all the republics of Central and South America.
There are men from every British colony, from all the countries in Europe, Asia and Africa, and also a number of Frenchmen who have been attracted to the legion on account of its adventurous career. Many Russians, Belgians, Italians, British and Roumanians have recently been transferred to their own armies, reducing the legion's strength, but Spaniards, Swiss and South Americans are joining.

The legion's task, for the successful achievement of which it was honored to-day, was the most difficult in the recent French offensive. Its front stretched westward from Auberive, the capture of which was included in the objective aimed at. For five days and nights the legionaries fought continuously, without a moment's sleep.
They accomplished the task set them, but at the cost of the life of their colonel D— and many other gaps in their ranks.

At the end their commander was Major D—, Auberive was entered and carried by a lieutenant with a non-commissioned officer and ten men with unbelievable daring. The non-commissioned officer, single-handed, attacked a machine gun emplacement and killed twelve Germans. The advance of the battalion operating to the west of Auberive was retarded for some time by the opposition of an unknown series of German entrenchments, formidably armed, in what is known as the Gulf. It was impossible to attack frontally across the half mile of open ground, but the legionaries succeeded in outflanking the position and made their way, fighting for every foot, along a communication trench until they had carried the whole position. They threw fifty thousand of their own hand grenades in the course of the five days, besides many thousands of German grenades they discovered in the dumps on the enemy territory. When the fighting was over many of the exhausted leg-ionaries slept as they stood.

The brigadier-general told the correspondent that so many of the leg-ionaries were entitled to decorations that he was unable to give all. Several Americans, however, obtained the war cross. Sergeant Edgar Bouigny, of New Orleans, who was wounded, has already been awarded the war cross for bravery.

He has served since the beginning of the war.

The divisions captured for the five days eleven hundred German prisoners, twenty-two cannons, fifty-eight trench mortars and forty-seven machine guns.

tongues wagging. The department suggests the postponement of the demolition of houses in Whitehallplace until July, 1921, which is the nearest estimate the department can make, as being "two years and nine months from the quarter day next following the declaration of peace." I was talking yesterday with one of our greatest military experts, a man whose opinion is really worth knowing, and his view was that the German would crumble in the autumn, but that fighting would go on in more or less half-hearted fashion until next spring, when the enemy would be finally and decisively beaten.

THE HAIR-CUT.

The hair-cut is the unimpeded effort of a care-free barber to cause a customer to look like a human being.
Sometimes the effort falls short of the intended effect by several two-mile laps and causes coldness to arise between the husband and wife. This is not always the fault of the barber, however, who has to overcome peculiar structural difficulties without a set of blue-prints.

The hair-cut is both a simple and pleasing process. The first thing necessary is to stuff several yards of starched apron down the neck of the customer, which allows the hair that is removed to fall down the back of his neck, where it cannot be gotten at with anything but a shower bath.
The apron, properly applied, also prevents the customer from breathing in a natural tone of voice for several minutes. The barber then starts on the south side of the chair and works due north without allowing the customer's ears to interfere with his itinerary. On reaching the other ear he pauses long enough to brush a few more handfuls of hair down the customer's neck after which he steps back and takes a cold, unfeeling squint at the ruins.

The shingle style, which removes all of the hair that can be gotten at without the use of an emery-wheel.

There are various popular styles of hair-cuts, all of which cause a man to be subjected to some very free comment on returning to the office.
The small boy prefers the shingle style, which removes all of the hair that can be gotten at without the use of an emery-wheel, while the clergy cling fondly to the side-whisker effect. The hair-cut which parts the hair in the middle and allows it to loop gracefully over the ear lobe has been supplanted by the low, rakish side part, which starts at the southwest corner of a bald spot and winds up in a defiant cow-lick. Then there is the upstanding pompadour, which cannot be slept on with any degree of success and therefore retains its shape.

There would be a better quality of hair-cutting done in this country if the customer would not put off a visit to the barber until driven to it by an approaching wedding or the appeals of a wife who objects to sitting across the table from a human mop.
When a barber is asked to restore a look of intelligence to a man who has not had his hair cut since the last presidential election, he has a task which should excite both our sympathy and awe.

Not Satisfied.

(From the Manchester Guardian.) The lady had heard a stranger in a railway carriage say that if any man could see himself intoxicated he would never be intoxicated again, and having a husband addicted to alcoholism, and also plenty of money, she thought of experimenting. The cinematograph operator whom she engaged was not kept waiting long for an opportunity of filming the errant husband, and in the presence of relations the subject was privileged to behold himself on the screen. He was very quiet throughout, and gravely left the room, which the others thought a good sign. Finding he had also left the house, his brother set out to find him, running him to earth eventually in the club, busy—as an attendant stated—with his fifteenth cocktail.

"Look here," said the brother. "I didn't think I'd find you back at this game!"
"Didn't you?" innocently asked the subject. "Well, the fact of the matter is, I'm not satisfied with that film!"

TO MAKE YOUR FIGURE FINE.

Some woman have an idea that fat may be eliminated by wearing tight corsets. This may be true to a certain extent provided the corset is especially designed and fitted to one's figure for that purpose. The average corset only succeeds in changing the position of the fat and does not get rid of it. The looser the corset is laced the easier it is to keep the weight down, for the woman who tightly laces her waist accumulates fat.

To hop is not only a fine thing for the hips but benefits the entire figure.
First lift one foot from the floor and hop about the room, first on one foot and then on the other. When one has learned to balance the body, raise the foot until the hand may grasp the heel, and then in this position hop about on either foot. When this exercise has been perfected place a ball on the floor, then hold the heel of one shoe, hop about the room and kick the ball with the other foot.
Each leg must be exercised in like manner.

In the last exercise the wand is used as an assistant. The wand is held at the back by both hands. Begin exercising by bending the arms and sliding the wand up the back as high as possible, then lowering it.
Repeat this ten times and then change the position of the hands, palms out, and repeat an equal number of times.
The effect of this movement is to reduce the fat on back and shoulders, also invigorate the lungs and increase their capacity. Improper respiration is the cause of inactivity, and inactivity results in the accumulation of fat.

ROTHERMERE MAY SUCCEED DEVONPORT.

LONDON, To-day.
Harold Sidney Harmsworth, first Baron Rothermere, and brother of Lord Northcliffe, it is understood, has been chosen as Food Controller. Lord Rothermere, if the above is correct, will succeed Viscount Devonport, who recently resigned the post of Food Controller on account of ill health. Lord Rothermere like his brother is well known as a newspaper man. Born in 1868, he was educated at Eton and Oxford. He is a son of the late Alfred Harmsworth and was created Baron in 1910.

THE AIR RAID.

LONDON, To-day.
The following supplementary report of the air raid was given out officially this afternoon: The first bombs were dropped in the eastern outskirts of London about 11.30 a.m. Numerous bombs fell in rapid succession in various districts of the east end. One bomb fell in a railway station, hitting an incoming train, seven persons were killed and seventeen injured here. Another bomb fell on a school, killing ten and injuring about fifty children. A number of warehouses were damaged and fires caused. Up to the present the casualties recorded in the London raid are 41 killed and 121 injured. The lists are at present incomplete and the final figures may be greater. A few bombs were also dropped near the north Foreland opposite the banks of the Thames, four persons being injured. The air raid over London lasted about fifteen minutes. The raiders were engaged by the guns of the East London defences and a large number of airplanes of the Royal Flying Corps and Royal Air Service were sent up as soon as the enemy was reported off the coast. Several engagements took place in the air, but the result at present is not known.

CALLS ON BRITISHERS IN U. S. TO ENLIST.

NEW YORK, To-day.
A cable message from Earl Derby, British Secretary of War, calling on British subjects in the United States to enlist was received here to-day by Brigadier General White, head of the British Recruiting Mission: "Thanks to the Government of the United States, the message said, the United States recruiting organization is open to receiving British subjects resident in the States as recruits for the British Army. The path of duty now lies clear ahead for every British subject of military age who is resident in the United States and is physically fit to serve. It is his duty to enlist and not to ignore the urgent call to the colors, standstill in many sections for a few minutes. Great throngs gathered about the wrecked buildings, but they were orderly crowds bent on seeing what damage the Germans had done. There was plenty of damage to see, for scores of buildings suffered; more than one was still smoldering from the fires which the engines were working upon. In some sections of the city where bombs had been dropped traffic was held up almost entirely owing to the dense crowds and to the work being done by the police and firemen in the damaged buildings. Every available policeman was called to the scene, even the night policemen being routed out to assist in holding the situation. Throughout the bombed area there was a steady movement of ambulances collecting the injured and rushing them to the hospitals. One hospital, which partly supported by donations from New York, and had been used largely for wounded soldiers, probably got more patients than any other in this section. These soldiers did yeoman's work as injured arrived, not caring for their hurts but giving comfort to the relatives who gathered about the building to learn the fate of those being carried within. In and out among the crowd of women, many of them with infants in their arms, the soldiers, with crutches to stop here and there and drop a word of sympathy and encouragement. While the damage done in the East End was widespread, it is probable the monetary loss will not be heavy, for many of the buildings wrecked were those of small business men. The raid had been over but a short time when the King, having heard of the damage to the East End, motored into, and through the district. His promptitude in thus manifesting his sympathy with the sufferers appeared to be deeply appreciated and he was warmly cheered as he rode slowly around. Later the King visited the hospitals. The main result of to-day's raid, as in past cases, has been the killing of civilians, including many children. No military damage was done, as there was no military objectives in the section visited. It was not a case of accurate dropping of bombs when once the planes were over the city in the East End; for instance, bombs couldn't have dropped without doing damage. The bombs cut a wide circular path through the eastern part of the city. While the raid was short, quite a number of explosives dropped in rapid succession. The course the raiders took can easily be traced by the damaged buildings, which in many cases are close together. In some places a whole block of buildings is lacking every window and much other damage was done. One school in the district had a lucky escape. There are thousands of pupils in that school. Fifteen minutes after the little ones had returned to the building, the bomb fell where hundreds of them had been gathered. There were many evidences of the coolness with which the people greeted the appearance of the raiders over London. For instance, despite reports that the raid was in progress, King George proceeded with an investiture at Buckingham Palace, and the recipients of honors walking in and out of the Palace grounds without a trace of nervousness being apparent. For an hour after the raid the telephone system in London was swamped with calls from business men who were anxious to learn the fate of their families in the suburbs. Despite the loud reports of the explosions the telephone girls stuck to their posts. There were only a few instances of any of them deserting their posts, and these only left for a brief period during the height of the excitement. A case was being heard in court when explosions were heard in the vicinity. Understand there is an air raid going on and bombs being dropped," said the Justice presiding, "but I think we are safer here than anywhere else." After a few minutes the Justice announced "I understand the raid has come as far as this but now has gone away," so we will proceed with the case unless it returns."

MURDER FROM THE SKIES.
LONDON, To-day.
Three hostile airplanes appeared over the busiest part of the town section of London at half-past eleven this morning and worked a rapid transformation in the busy streets. The sound of the explosions of bombs in the east end and anti-aircraft guns from posts around the business districts gave the public warning of the dangers. Vehicular traffic stopped instantly. Omnibus drivers ordered all passengers to alight. Buses, taxis, wagons, and lorries were left stranded in the streets until the danger was past. Shop keepers and their patrons, barbers and their customers, bankers and lawyers and their clients quietly and promptly adjourned their business and hurried to such places of safety as the mental state of each particular person demanded. Special constables appeared by the hundreds as if by magic in every nook and corner and narrow lane in the down town district and ordered pedestrians within doors. It was difficult, however, to keep the populace under cover. Many people were more interested in getting a glimpse of the battle overhead than in escaping danger. There was no way to keep crowds off the flat roofs in the down town buildings, where presumably the danger of falling shrapnel was greatest, but where a superb view of the raiders could be obtained. From the roof of the Associated Press Office the air planes could be distinctly seen at a height of at least two miles in triangular formations, which is a familiar sight to anyone who has visited the western front. The trio were so high that they appeared like three shiny flakes of snow against the bright sky. Anti-aircraft gunners were doing fairly creditable work in this their first battle practice in many months. The raiders apparently were a little too high for the guns, which nevertheless were very useful for forcing the enemy to an altitude where it was impossible to locate any objectives. The flaky smoke from 30 or 40 shrapnel bursts, sent in repeated salvos from a dozen or more eager guns, for long minutes in the sky, outlining the three aviators in a frame of white puffs. It was plain to see the snarling bursts were too close to the visitors for their comfort, calling forth a frantic series of machine gun signals from the squadron leader directing his brood to retreat quickly. The little squadron's route over London as viewed from below was like a great hairpin; a straight arrow flight into the city, then a wide curve and a straight arrow flight out again. The whole visit of this trio occupied less than five minutes. No other raiders were visible from this observation point. Three times the explosion of bombs shook the roof with a slightly different tremor from the rocking of the earth under the anti-craft guns, but the bombs, evidently some distance from this point of vista over the city roofs, showed no effect of their explosion. The East End stood the strain of the raid well. There was no panic such as one might expect to find among people of this class, which is largely foreign. Business was at a

STRANGE INTERPRETATION.
AMSTERDAM, To-day.
The Cologne Gazette sees in the British reply to the Russian note a readiness on the part of Britain to return Germany's colonies. The paper says: "Great Britain's offer to revise her engagements with her Allies indicates a recognition of the great difference between Russia's war aims and the previous rapacious Entente programme."

TO KEEP THE ARMY OUT OF POLITICS.

The new Spanish Minister of War, General Fernando Primo Rivera announces that he expects to settle the controversy which has arisen over military associations exercising political influence, according to Havas despatch from Madrid. If he fails to secure an adjustment, the despatch adds, he will resign.

SMUTS FOR WAR CABINET.
LONDON, To-day.
The newspapers say that General Smuts has been invited to join the War Cabinet. Such a step is mooted, it is known, as the Government have been anxious to retain the South African's services here, having the highest opinion of his military and administrative ability. Smuts has been acting as an unofficial adviser of State and the War Office since his arrival in England, and the papers express the hope that he will accept Cabinet office. It is understood he is quite willing to do so, providing the South African Government consents.

THE REPUBLIC CRAZE IN RUSSIA.
LONDON, To-day.
A Petrograd despatch to the Mail says that there seems to be a reign of terror in Tzaritin, where a separatist republic has been declared. The town is entirely in the hands of the extremists. The despatch says the situation is serious, because Tzaritin is a great railroad centre and an important point for traffic on the Volga River. Separate republics have also been declared at Kherson and Keranovna, but the situation is said not to be serious at either place.

CONSTANTINE'S FAREWELL.
ATHENS, To-day.
The proclamation of King Constantine announcing his abdication was posted throughout the streets to-day. It says: "Obeying the necessity of fulfilling my duty, despite the fact that the President issued a long mandate attempting to justify his action in issuing the annunciation mandate, I beg you to accept my resignation as the only possible chief of police at Peking under accepting the post of acting Premier."

A GOOD RESOLUTION.
OTTAWA, To-day.
In anticipation of the motion for the second reading of the Compulsory Military Service Bill which the Prime Minister has promised for Monday next, Hon. Geo. Graham has given notice of the following resolution, that, in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that steps should be taken forthwith by the Government to provide that accumulated wealth should contribute immediately and effectively to the cost of the war, and that all agricultural and industrial transportation (transformation) of the natural resources of Canada should be organized forthwith so as to ensure the greatest possible assistance to the Empire in war and reduce the cost of living to the Canadian people.

CIVIL WAR IMMINENT IN CHINA.
PEKING, To-day.
A Presidential mandate dissolving Parliament has been signed by Chiang Chao Chung as Acting Premier, having accepted the post which Dr. Wang Ting Fang, former Ambassador to the United States, resigned. It is believed the dissolution of Parliament will bring about civil war, as the leaders of the southern provinces have telegraphed the President that they no longer recognize his authority, despite the fact that the President issued a long mandate attempting to justify his action in issuing the annunciation mandate. Chiang Chao Chung was chief of police at Peking before accepting the post of acting Premier.

HARBOURING U-BOATS.
PARIS, To-day.
A naval attaché from the German embassy arrived at Cadiz to-day and made an examination of the submarine the U-52, which is tied up to the arsenal dock, says a Havas despatch from Cadiz. The vessel will remain in port for a month for repairs. The Expeditionary Force, against Spain permitting the U-52 an asylum for repairs. The Temps points out that her sister submarine the U-52 visited an American port last October and was also allowed to proceed seaward and sank six ships, the route of which she had learned while in port. This, says the Temps, shows the danger of granting an asylum to submarines.

COMMENT ON GREEK SITUATION.
LONDON, To-day.
The announcement of Constantine's abdication made in the Commons by the Chancellor of the Exchequer yesterday was received with cheers, but less favorable reception was given to his statement that Prince Alexander had succeeded his father. The Chancellor said that Alexander had taken the oath of the King of Greece. "We hope," said the Chancellor, "that this change may make for a restoration of Constitutional Government of that country." Bonar Law was asked by Arthur Lynch, member for West Clare, "what does the Government expect to gain by the abdication of the King when it is perpetuating the same abuses under another name?" Law replied, "What we hope to gain is a Constitutional Government representing the whole of Greece." John Gordon MacNeill, member for South Down, asked if in fact Constantine had been given permission to abdicate, and if in regard to the fact that he had practically been expelled from the throne, he should be allowed to nominate his successor.

The Chancellor replied that it would not be in the public interest to give any more information at present, but that Mr. MacNeill was wrong in saying that his successor had been nominated by Constantine. "It comes nearly two years too late," says the Evening Standard, "that King Constantine's abdication. However, the news is welcomed as a sign of new vigor in dealing with the Eastern situation and as giving promise of justice. If William 2nd is the vilest character of the war, his brother-in-law, Tino, is certainly the most contemptible. All the newspapers express the hope that the Allies have not agreed to the succession of Prince Alexander without the approval of former Premier Venizelos.

The Hardest Lesson.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"If a string is in a knot Patience will untie it. Patience will do many things, did you ever try it? If I were sold in any shop I should surely buy it. But you and I must buy our own, no other can supply it."

RUTH CAMERON

"And when can you hear?" I asked the Lady-who-always-knows-somewhat. She had just told me of a tremendously important letter which she knew by subsequent developments must have been lost in the mails. She had written and asked for a second letter and now she was waiting the results.

"Not for five days at the soonest," she said.

"You must be just crazy!"

"What good would that do?"

The Two Virtues One Learns With the Years.

"My dear," said the Lady-who-always-knows-somewhat with her gentle smile, "as one grows older there are two things one learns—patience and the power to put things out of our mind in these waiting times."

"I didn't quite agree with her."

"Those are surely two things one ought to learn if one doesn't want to be made miserable by the inevitabilities of life, but alas they are not things 'one' always does learn."

I know at least one person who finds them very difficult lessons.

Impatience is Like Hunger.

Impatience is almost as primitive an instinct as hunger.

So also is the desire to worry over things when the issue is uncertain.

It is only the people who really grow and develop as they grow older who detach themselves to subdue these instincts. Of course, with age there is a certain blunting of the edge of many things—worry and pain and happiness and impatience and all kinds of easinesses.

But the control of an instinct is something more than its enfeeblement by age.

True patience is an active virtue not a mere dull acquiescence.

"They Also Serve—"

I often say over to myself when I am trying to teach myself to wait patiently and serenely, that beautiful line from Milton's "Ode On His Blindness"—"They also serve who only stand and wait."

Theodore Parker's, "I know what the trouble is, God isn't in a hurry and I am," also helps, especially when I am impatient about existing evils.

And just the other day in some of Mark Twain's recent letters I came upon a line that both amuses and helps. He had been writing about a puzzling mix-up in some lecture dates.

Most irritably and then he ended up with a funny little flash of sunshine:

"Now let's leave this thing to Providence for twenty-four hours, you bet it will come out all right."

Good advice, isn't it?

At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp, held at Tuskett Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn, an immediate relief for colic and toothache.

The Girl in the Office

VERY AGREEABLE CHANGES.

In this spring of 1917 the office that a year ago knew no relief from a monotonous aggregation of masculine morning suits and subdued colours is under the gentle stimulus of a mounting sun and the influx of women, a dazzling pattern of all the colours in the universe. We have become like the blouse-window in a Bond-street shop. But very much more so.

And all the tricks, the artifices, that experienced women employ so adroitly are utilized in the general scheme of attraction. But of that I say no more.

No longer does the acrid smell of tobacco smoke pervade my office. It is now fragrant with perfumes of expensive essences and distillations.

The modest lily of the valley, the violet, white heather, cherry-blossom, lavender—all these fight for the supremacy of the air. I mourn sometimes when these decoctions of the chemists in unholy alliance subjugate that divine fragrance issuing from newly plucked blooms clinging to some sympathetic bosom. But I fear I am "singing the vision of May" unutterably.

I can, however, lift my voice once more in praise of wonderful collures, of rippling hair that the sun seems to caress. Missie, on the right, has hair which would set the soul of a painter aflame. And Jones before she "joined up" used to sit there exhibiting a few dreary strands which clung to his scalp by force of will-power. What a contrast!

A commercial environment transformed since 1916! And a change that even a curmudgeonly fellow like me can appreciate and enjoy. These girls who have come to the aid of their country are of good courage and high spirits. They rob themselves in bright raincoat and the earth is glad. And when I hear them humming merrily a snatch from a song of the moment I forgive them the "art curtains" they have placed at my window and the use of my drinking-glass for their newly gathered blossoms.

True, I fear that one of these bright mornings all the office stools will have disappeared under flowery chintzes and that my ink carrier will be perched upon a woolly mat. And I expect to find photograph frames on the desks in place of table calendars. (They are sure to ensnare khaki-wearing figures.) But these are harmless anarchies. Nay, they are good for me. They brighten, exalt, and energise—and, thus have women solved the secret of success.

My fellow-scribes call my office "The Nest." Admittedly, it is becoming rather like a drawing-room. But the work goes on merrily. We are all seeking victory.

What matters it, then, if Cynthia troops in rather late in the morning, if Amelia is too much addicted to tea-drinking and admiring her pretty face in the mirror?

Vive Cynthia! Vive Amelia! And my devotions to Arabella. Vive la femme!

Strong Feeling in Japan

TOWARD MORE WAR ACTION.

London, June 5.—Private advices from British travellers in Japan report a strong and growing public sentiment there in favor of more active participation in the war on land as well as on sea.

The Japanese want to see the war ended as quickly as possible, and this desire for a fuller share in it has become accentuated since America's entry. Special circumstances have, in the natural course of events, enabled Japan to profit from the war; but the time has now come when her leading men are beginning to think peace is still more to be desired in every way.

If Japan should proffer military help, it would probably be readily accepted, but whether the desire that undoubtedly exists will take that shape cannot be said, at present, as the whole subject is still in a tentative stage.

ANOTHER AIR RAID ON LONDON.

LONDON, June 13.—The East End of London was bombed to-day by fifteen heavy planes. A large number of German aeroplanes pursued the British planes over Essex to London. German aeroplanes appeared over London shortly before noon.

The battle occurred in the air. The aeroplanes were attacked by anti-aircraft guns as well as by British fighters. One aeroplane is reported to have been brought down. A bomb fell on a school house, killing ten children and injuring fifty.

The deaths of 49 persons, including 200 in to-day's raid, were announced in the House of Commons by Earl Derby, Secretary of State for War. The Secretary of State feared these figures would be exceeded when fuller reports had been received. Earl Derby said that 100 were killed and 50 injured were reported.

The casualties of the air raid were officially announced, according to the latest police report, to number 100 killed and 437 wounded. The 100 comprise 55 men, 16 women, 10 children; the injured comprise 122 women and 94 children. Damage of a military or mercantile nature was done. The raid had been a short time when the King, King Edward and the Queen, who had been in the district, were notified of the raid. He was warmly cheered as he slowly moved. Later the King visited the hospitals.

BIG SHIP TORPEDOED AND LOST.

PARIS, June 13.—The South Atlantic liner Aqueduct with 550 passengers on board, been torpedoed and sunk within a matter of 150 men. Among the survivors was a detachment of Senegalese Rifles. The Aqueduct, formerly the City of Corinth, was owned by the South Atlantic Navigation Co. of England. Her gross tonnage was 5,557, and her length 430 feet long and was built in 1898.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER

In Memoriam.

BRIDGET O'ROURKE.

On Saturday evening the angel of death visited the home of Mr. James O'Rourke, Holyrood, and carried away his beloved wife, Bridget, in the 53rd year of her age. Deceased enjoyed good health till last November when she was stricken down with sickness and symptoms of cancer of the tongue were diagnosed by Dr. Jones who ordered her to the hospital for treatment. She underwent an operation there with temporary success but later, on the disease developed itself to such an alarming extent it was pronounced incurable and her end only a question of a few short months. In the later stages of her fatal disease she was perfectly resigned to the inevitable, and death seemed to be welcomed by her as a relief from the terrible sufferings. Rev. Father Finn was in constant attendance on the sick woman, cheered her up and consoled her to the last, and so resigned was she to her fate and so well prepared for death that in speaking at her bier he thought her soul to be in heaven. The late Mrs. O'Rourke was of a happy, entertaining and humorous disposition and her presence would cause merriment, good feeling and a genial ray of sunshine in any company. When she calmly and peacefully passed off on Saturday not a few were touched with grief on hearing of her sad demise.
Her funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker Dunphy who had prepared a handsome casket to enclose the remains, and took place from her late residence on Monday morning to the Church of Holy Cross where Requiem Mass was sung for the repose of her soul by the Rev. W. P. Finn, P.
P. After the final prayers were recited at the bier the funeral continued its route to the Central Cemetery where interment took place in the family plot surrounded by sorrowing and sympathizing friends. The deceased lady leaves a husband and three sons, one, John, overseas in the Nfld. Regiment; Francis, in Sydney; James at home; a mother, two brothers and four sisters to all of whom we offer our sincere sympathy in their sad bereavement and pray that Almighty God comfort them one and all and have mercy on the soul of their dear departed soul.—Com.

Your Boys and Girls.

Almost invariably the child who is reared in an atmosphere of patient, understanding love, but with a firm and unmistakable kindness, grows to manhood or womanhood in excellent health. Almost never do adults who have had such a guarded childhood suffer with "nerves". Nerves is a menace and a criminal assault on the finely strung nervous system of any child.

When it is teeth cleaning time, diplomacy and a piece of candy for a reward will make such duty a pleasure. With a tooth brush in one hand and a welcome bit of sweet in the other she will be glad to clean her teeth.

However, do not get into the mistaken habit of giving rewards. Make the candy a part of the teeth-cleaning ceremony and do not speak of it as a reward for duty well done.

The Messiah.

Interest to-night is centered on the performance of the Messiah given by Mr. A. H. Allen, in the College Hall, at 8.30.

The character of the theme, and the reverent and compelling music which Handel has put to it, makes the oratorio one that should be familiar to every one. It is unlikely we shall hear it again for many years to come, and so the opportunity should be availed of by all who can possibly attend.

Household Notes.

Salt dissolved in alcohol will remove grease spots.
A few drops of chloroform will remove machine oil.
Rock salt broken into bits is a good bottle cleaner.
Bruising vegetables will cause them to spoil rapidly.

W. P. A.

An appeal has been received by the Women's Patriotic Association from the Blue Cross League and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals—the two English Organizations which care for sick and wounded horses at the Front. They ask for funds to carry on their merciful work. It has been estimated that five million horses have been destroyed in this war, accompanied with such suffering, as our imagination, happily for us, can not picture. One of the many ghastly phases of war is the terrible strain, overwork and suffering endured by the horses sacrificed in the strife of Nations. A vast, voiceless army, forged into battle and utterly helpless, but spending their best energies without question, and giving their lives without complaint. It must be borne in mind what invaluable services horses render to their country in time of war. Without them no nation can fight. Mechanical haulage, though it has done much to relieve the draught horse in modern warfare, has by no means superseded him. Cavalry horses and artillery horses and mules, are still absolutely essential when ploughed land, ditches and hedges are to be negotiated, and it is equally essential to have an adequate supply of them.

It is for the relief of these much enduring animals that such organizations as the "Blue Cross" and the "Veterinary Corps" of the R.S.P.C.A. exist. What the Red Cross does for soldiers, they do, most efficiently and humanely, for horses. Hospitals for them are established every twenty miles or so along the lines in France and Belgium, where are to be found skilled surgeons who operate on injured horses, using anaesthetics, and treating the dumb sufferers with as much care as though they were human. When the patients recover sufficiently, they are sent to Rest Camps to complete the work of recuperation, and of the vast number of horses, amounting to hundreds of thousands, which pass through these hospitals, 80 per cent. have been discharged completely cured and fit for further service. Those too seriously disabled to recover are always painlessly destroyed.

This is the fund for which our help is asked. There is a constant demand for medicines, bandages, and all manner of hospital and surgical supplies, and an urgent need for more horse-ambulances. Contributions are also asked for rugs and comforts for horses at the Front, and for the sick and wounded Red Cross dogs, whose heroism and intelligent devotion to duty during this campaign, have saved many lives.

An attempt has been made to interest the school children of the community in this humane work, but on account of the many deserving war funds now claiming attention, the Women's Patriotic Association does not intend to make any appeal to the general public. At the same time, it believes there are in St. John's many sympathizers with animal suffering who would be glad of an opportunity to contribute to a fund of this nature, and to enable them to do so, the Hon.
Secretary of the Association, Mrs. W.
G. Gosling, will gratefully receive contributions for this purpose.

There's a Reason

AT THE HOUSE.

Increase of Pay for Civil Servants.
The first and main business at yesterday afternoon's sitting of the House of Assembly was the introduction of Supply and the tabling of the Estimates for 1917-18. The Finance Minister read to the House a lengthy statement, explaining the different votes in the Estimates. The total expenditure for the coming year is estimated at $4,556,222.68 or an increase of $391,250.33 over the year just closing. Out of this proposed extra expenditure provision was made for increases to the salaries of civil servants to the extent of nearly $12, 000; charities, $75,000; education, $73,000; soldiers' pensions, $60,000; maintenance of lighthouses, $20,000 maintenance of telegraphs, $23,000; game and fishery boards, cod oil expenses, $12,000; Customs refunds, $10,000. The Minister pointed out that owing to the enormously increased cost of living the raising of the pay of civil servants was perfectly justifiable, as everyone was aware.
In some cases the salaries were entirely inadequate to provide the common necessities of life. The proportionate increases are: On salaries of $200, 50 per cent.; $300, 35 per cent.; $400, 30 per cent.; $500, 23 per cent.;
$600, 18 per cent.; $700, 14 per cent.;
$800, 10 per cent.; $900, 7 per cent.; $1,000 to $1,200 inclusive, 5 per cent.
Thus it is apparent that civil servants whose salaries are at present more than $1,200 a year, are not provided with increases in the Estimates.

The votes under the heading of charities are to increase the dole of widows and old people, and the vote for the upkeep of the orphanages is increased $6,250, the cost being increased from $40 to $52 a year for each inmate.
The increased grant for education is made following a memorial presented to the Government by a delegation of teachers from the different denominations. This brings the Education grant to $446,000.
Another large item is $60,000 for Soldiers' Pensions. These have hitherto been paid out of War Loans, but since they represent a permanent charge, they will in future be included in the annual estimates of the country. It is estimated that this amount will be necessary to meet the liability for 1917-18 to the dependents of those who gave their life's blood for their country.

Other increases in the Estimates were briefly explained, after which the Committee rose to sit again today when members will be more familiar with the increased votes, etc.
In reply to a question asked by Mr.
Grimes as to how much the compiler of the outport messages receives, the Colonial Secretary stated that Mr.
P. T. McGrath was paid $200 a year for doing it. He said Mr. McGrath also compiled a printed message which was sent daily to places where there were no telegraph offices. He (the Col. Secy.) did not know what that was costing, as his department was not yet in receipt of a bill from Mr. McGrath.

The Trustees, Fire Insurance, Copyright and Steam Contract Bills were read a third time.
The agreements with the Woolen and Knitting Mills were again discussed by the House in Committee and some amendments submitted by the Colonial Secretary. On motion of the Leader of the Opposition the Committee rose and discussion on the amendments was deferred till today.

The Bill giving power to the R. C.
Episcopal Corporation to mortgage land through Committee stage, and the Bill respecting Bonds issued under the 1916 Loan Act was read a second time. The House then adjourned.

Billy Sunday Scores Dress.

New York, May 31.—The Rev. William A. Sunday closed his sermon in the tabernacle last evening before 22,000 people by making an attack upon the way modern women dress.

"Thank God, we still have a few old fashioned mothers," shouted Mr. Sunday, in the course of a sermon on "Behold He Hath Hid Himself Among the Stuff." But if they were to see the low cut waists, the short skirts and the few if any underclothes hundreds of women wear they would drop dead.

"We want girls who think more of decency than they do of dress, who think more of cradles than they do of cards, who can wash dishes as well as they can shine in society, who can make bread as well as they can fudge. We need girls who prefer a working man with calloused hands for a husband to some good-for-nothing libertine of a so-called 'gentleman'."

"The quiet paths of domestic life or the grasp of a baby's arms have no attractions to thousands of women to-day."

Terrifying increase in Newspaperer costs.

Baltimore, June 3.—The Baltimore News, one of Baltimore's leading afternoon papers, has passed into the hands of Frank A. Munsey, its former owner. Stuart Olivier, who bought the paper and the sixteen storey building here in 1915 from Mr. Munsey, has the following to say editorially to-day:

"Nothing could have given me greater pleasure than to continue as owner of the News, but the war has created entirely new conditions—terrifying costs of production—and it seemed to me the wiser course to lodge the ownership of a rich and influential property, an institution like the News, in the strongest possible hands."

"No one business has had to bear a heavier increase in cost of production, as the result of the world-wide war, than the daily newspapers. Mr. Munsey's willingness, under the circumstances, to re-purchase the property is in every way characteristic of his generosity and kindness."

"Nothing short of the terrific increases in the cost of all materials entering into newspaper publication would have induced me to part with the property, for the News was never on a firmer basis. War conditions have become such, however, as to make it imperative that newspapers should have the advantage of the strongest possible ownership."

Germans prepare for Blow by Russia;

Expect Combined Attack on All Fronts.

The Hague, May 31.—The Germans undoubtedly expect heavy fighting on the Russian front. The fact that naval guns are being moved eastward with heavy reinforcements of troops appears to indicate a shortage of heavy high-angle field artillery.

The latest German communiques continue to refer to the increasing artillery duel along the whole Eastern front, and the Frankfurter Gazette this morning published a leading article emphatically warning the public that the so-called unofficial truce with Russia is now over, and the Entente apparently has succeeded in arranging for a simultaneous offensive on all fronts. The paper says the Kaiser's warning to the troops on the Western front that a decision is now at hand referred to this coming combined offensive.

It is significant that Theodor Wolff in the Tagblatt again warns the German public to abandon all hope of a separate peace with Russia, while the Dutch pacifist press to-night accuses the German Chancellor of clumsiness in his treatment of the Russian situation. The New York Times correspondent learns from very well-informed sources that the German military party was anxious to deal a smashing blow on the Russian front during the crisis of the revolution, but was prevented owing to the impossibility of withdrawing men and guns from the western front.

Fads and Fashions.

Both coat and dress collars are made of satin and detachable. New frocks lace instead of fastening with either buttons or snaps.

Jet and iridescent beads are still used on dark serge or gabardine. Cherry-red ribbons tie the collars and cuffs of a pretty ecur dress.

The general tendency continues to be for simple and straight dresses.

Foulards with polka dots and small squares are especially in favor.

Sheer black muslin embroidered with red dots makes the most effective hat.

For seashore wear there are pretty beach capes in dainty evening shades.

Very wide and softly folded girdles are used on the filmy summer frocks.
