The Girl of the Cloisters

CHAPTER XXXI
IN SWEET CONTENT.

"And break Mary's heart." Mary was the landlady's niece. "Lela, you are the sort of woman who brings about revolutions. Already you have cut Lovel to the quick by insisting that he shall not wait at breakfast."

"And listen to every word we say," she put in, with a smile.

"My darling, Lovel is deaf and dumb; he is faithfulness itself. If he heard you confess that you had committed a forgery, he would carry the secret to his tomb."

"I know; but, all the same, it is nicer to be by ourselves. I don't want to be waited on, and if you do, why, I'll wait on you; I'm quite as pretty as Mary, and I can hand the coffee and toast as well as Lovel."

"Ah!" he said, comfortably; "I see, I am to be a henpecked husband! All right, have it your own way! With that fond smile which sits so well on his handsome face. "And what's that letter about? I see it comes from the professor."

"Yes, dear grandpapa! He is so happy! They are making quite a fuss about him over there, and insist upon that he has been wasting all his learning on the desert air all these years! He sends his best wishes to you, Edgar, and— But there's the letter," and she held it out.

"No, you shall tell me," he said. "Dear old fellow! He is awfully good, and I'll try and make him admit that I'm not such a bad sort of fellow when he comes back. But as to reading his letter, my dear child, I couldn't read a line of it to save my life!"

Lela laughed and slipped the letter in her pocket.

"And what have you got?" she asked, peering prettily round the coffee urn.

"Oh, bills and, yes, a letter from the marquis."

"Ah!" and she grew suddenly grave.

"Yes," he looked at it. "There's not a kind word in it. I send you a check for the amount you ask— Ah, yes!" and he sighed. "Any amount of money he will send me, but not one word such as most fathers have to say to their sons! Ah! what's this?" and he stared at the postscript, written on the last page. "Why—" and he flushed and smiled.

"What is it, Edgar?" anxiously.

"No; don't tell me if you don't wish to!"

"But I do! I'll have no secrets from you!" he said. "And— and— besides, it is about you!"

"About me!" exclaimed Lela, turning pale as the vision of that awful meeting in the garden rose before her.

"Y—es! I can't understand it. Shall I read it? I wish to mention a subject that I had hoped would never be referred to again by either of us. I refer to my late librarian and his granddaughter, Miss Lela Temple."

Lela drew a long breath and came gliding round to him.

"Why should he speak of me? Ah, Edgar, he has found out that we are married!" and she trembled.

"No, no! Don't be frightened, my darling! Listen. Though I have made enquiries, I have failed to discover the whereabouts of these two persons. You, who, no doubt, have made enquiries on your own behalf, though I am convinced that you would not be so unwise as to ruin yourself by disobeying me, may have found them. If so, I shall be glad if you will let me know in what position they may be. I do not wish that any servant of mine should be in a condition of poverty, and shall be glad to be assured that such is not the case. That is all!" said Edgar, staring at the note.

"What does it mean?" faltered Lela.

"I don't know. I can't conjecture. If he were any one else, I should say that he was anxious that you should not be suffering from his cruel injustice and oppression, but—well, I never knew him to be pitiful or merciful before."

There was silence for a moment, then she said, in a low voice:

"What will you say?"

"What shall I say? Why—why, I shall say that I know where you are, and that you are certainly not in want."

And he smiled.

"I wish—I wish he could know, Edgar!" she whispered.

He frowned and bit his lip. It was a perpetual remorse to him—this life of deception—the one thorn in the bed of roses.

"So he shall!" he said, firmly. "Nothing but dire necessity has kept me silent. He shall know, and very soon. If—he stopped suddenly, for he was going to say—"If Assassin wins the race, I shall be able to send this check back and have money enough to enable me to tell my father that I have lost the right to take money from his hands." But he stopped in time. He had just said that he would have no secrets from her, but he did not mean to ride this race without telling her.

He knew that the dread with which she would regard the idea of his riding a steeple-chase would be almost more than he could bear to see her suffering from.

"If a little event that I am hoping for comes off satisfactorily, Lela, I will tell him, and end this deception. There, don't say any more about it!"

And he soothed her with a kiss, and took up his time.

Luckily for him, Lela never thought of glancing at a newspaper, or she would not have failed to have caught sight of his name in the sporting column, which was full of a coming race, and had a great deal to say about the wonderful horse Assassin—its bad temper, and the pluck and racing capabilities of its noble owner.

It was full of it this morning, and Lord Edgar saw that the horse was a greater favorite than it had been—why, he knew not. With a little impatient sigh, he folded the paper and thrust it out of sight, and got his cigarette-case.

"And what's it to be to-day?" he asked. "London's delights are not nearly exhausted yet."

She smiled up at him, half ashamed of her delight in the sights and amusements. They had been up to town now nearly a week, and Lord Edgar had made those days a round of pleasure for her. After breakfast he would take her for a drive in the park in his tall dog-cart, with the much-beloved chestnut. Then they would lunch at home, or sometimes at Blanchard's or Verey's. In the afternoon they would go to some concert, or perhaps wander round a picture-gallery; then home to dinner—that delightful little dinner, so beautifully cooked and served, with Lovel to wait, not like a machine, but like a wizard guessing what they wanted before they asked for it. Ah, those little dinners! with Lord Edgar all to herself, sitting opposite her in his evening dress, so near that by stretching across the table they could touch hands, which they did often when Lovel had left the room for a moment; with the sweet little room softly glowing in the light of the wax candles reflected in the Venetian mirrors and ancient brass repoussé work; with the old china and antique bronzes; with the beautiful cabinet pictures, and the odor of crushed roses in the Etruscan vases.

She was his Lady Fane; in the future time—Lord Edgar talked of it sometimes, and she thought of it now and again as something vague and indistinct—in the coming future she might have, would have to preside at grand dinners, banquets, social and political; but would any of them be so perfect and delicious as those which were eaten in the dainty Albany chambers, with her darling, her lover, her husband, for sole companion?

Then, the dinner over, they would go into the little drawing-room—her boudoir, he called it—and she would insist upon his smoking a cigar, and as sure and certain as day followed day, she would find herself seated at his feet, with her head upon his knee.

"Nothing is better, I well know. Than Love; no amber in cold sea Or gathered berries under snow," sings Swinburne, and he is right.

Then Lovel would, after knocking discreetly, come in noiselessly with the tea; and it would be:

"Lela, I've got a box for the theatre in my pocket! What do you say?"

And she, after artfully ascertaining whether he wanted to go, would say "Yes."

He would always place her behind the curtains of the box, and more often than not would watch her face rather than the stage, reveling in the delight depicted in her eyes and on her lips. The face was always fairer to him than that of any one behind the footlights.

Sometimes, but not often, he would see some friend or acquaintance; but he never spoke, and would give them a bow and pass on.

The time had not come when he could introduce her as his wife. Heaven knows what they thought; he cared not.

Then, the theatre over, the miniature brougham would roll off to one of the best of the restaurants, and he would choose some dainty little dish for her; he had a fixed idea that, being so slim and fairy-like, she needed a great deal of keeping up and nourishment; an idea which caused Lela no inconsiderable amount of amusement; and they would go home to the pretty rooms again and talk over the evening.

Happy! How could they, loving each other as they did, be otherwise?

"What shall it be? Any shopping to do?"

Lela shook her head laughingly.

"No! Why, there is nothing left for me to buy!" she said. "Besides, do you think I have no pity, you poor, dear boy? The hours you have waited about in the brougham for me! Oh, by the way, Edgar, I forgot to tell you. Whom do you think I saw yesterday?"

"Can't guess. Who was it?"

"Why," and she blushed a deep crimson, "the Reverend Mr. Browne."

"The Reverend Mr. Browne? Oh, ah, yes! Did you? Where?"

"Fancy you forgetting his name!" she said with a pout. "In Pall Mall. I was sitting in the brougham outside your club, waiting for you, when I saw him walking along with a man—such a peculiar-looking man! It was the man with him who attracted my attention, or else I should not have noticed Mr. Browne. He was a man with a face like those children, dear—do you know what I mean?—without any expression. Just as if he were blind or deaf. But he was neither, for when I leaned forward and called to Mr. Browne—Did I do wrong, dear?"

"Wrong! Bless my soul, no!" responded Lord Edgar, frankly, and with a look of pleasure. "I wish I'd been there! What did he say? Did you ask him to come and see us?"

"No; I should have done so, but though he looked round—and so did the other man—he merely raised his hat, and they hurried on."

"George! that's strange! I wish he had stopped. I'll ask Clifford where I can find him. It struck me at the wedding that he was rather eccentric, but I took a great fancy to him."

"So did I," said Lela, softly. "He looked so pale and unhappy, as if he had some great trouble on his mind."

"Poor fellow! Perhaps he is poor. I wish I'd asked Clifford how much he gave him."

"It is not too late now," said Lela, gently. "But I haven't finished, Edgar. I told you I noticed the man who was with him; well, in the afternoon, while I was standing at the window here, I saw the same man waiting on the other side of the road, and when he came opposite he stopped and looked up at the window; but directly he saw me he pretended that he—she stopped and laughed—"wanted to get something out of his eyes, and they went on."

"Oh, come!" laughed Lord Edgar.

"Why should he do that? Why shouldn't he look up?"

"I don't know," she answered, laughing, too; "but I am sure he did not want me to see him. It was just the sort of thing a woman would do."

"Oh, indeed! What artful creatures women must be!"

Good Roads a Paying Investment.

(E. COLLISHAW, SECRETARY N. F. MOTOR ASSOCIATION.)

Governments of every Country are awake to-day to the great possibilities of large dividends being returned on their "good roads" expenditure, which is not considered an expense, but an investment.

In the United States motor taxes are collected by the Secretary of each state, and an equitable division made between the state and incorporated Towns.

New York State paid the largest amount last year $4,207,228.50 California next paying $3,536,072.28. The total amount collected from all the states for 1918 being $44,486,262.32.

When we hear the United States are spending $500,000,000 on "good roads" this year, the figure almost staggers us, until we look into the returns. Forty-four millions paid in motor taxes, will pay interest on this outlay, and leave a large sinking fund which makes the expenditure a paying investment instead of an expense.

Some may argue conditions in United States are different to Newfoundland, and that the American Policy will not apply here. This may be so in sections where we have practically no motor roads, but it is not so from St. John's to Carbonear, where conditions will warrant more cars per thousand of population than in the average 80 miles in United States or Canada.

New York State owns one motor car for every 20 inhabitants, other states average one car for every 25 to 50 people; at the latter rate of 50 we should have 2,500 cars between St. John's and Carbonear inclusive.

Admitting this figure too high for Newfoundland, we may safely take Canada for comparison, with a population of 50,000 about the same number as we have between St. John's and Carbonear. Halifax has 1,200 cars for her 50,000 people, St. John's to Carbonear has about 300 for their 50,000.

People in this (Newfoundland) district are just as well off as in Halifax, and will own just as many cars if given "good roads".

I am pleased to hear Newfoundland is about to join in the march of progress, and that at the last session of the House, "half a million dollars was voted for road improvement. The Nova Scotia Legislature recently voted a similar amount, also $1,500,000 for up-to-date road making machinery. Whilst Halifax City, just recovering from the great explosion, is spending $1,000,000 on street improvement this year.

About ten days ago a meeting was held at Quebec known as the "good roads convention." I have no report yet of what was done at this meeting, but many say it was held in the Parliament Building, and opened by Lieut. Governor Sir Charles Kirkpatrick, Sir Wm. Hearst, Prime Minister of Ontario, and every Minister of highways and public works from Atlantic to Pacific was to be present, as also many other leading public men. This Congress, recognizing the advantage of working along with the motor associations, invited representatives of every Canadian Automobile Association and Municipalities belonging to the "Canadian good roads Association" to consider a proposal from the Dominion Government of spending $25,000,000 this year on an International Highway from Halifax to Vancouver.

All these vast sums are not being spent simply to provide good roads for the benefit of motorists; these sums are being spent as a business proposition which returns handsome profits.

The Ontario Government sent to the "good roads" Convention 30 models of different types of roads, and moving pictures showing the operation of different classes of work.

At least $100,000 of the half million voted by our Government should be spent in opening up a proper motor highway from St. John's to Carbonear and also roads around St. John's and to Ferryland District.

This amount spent on "good roads" would soon bring our motor owners up to 1,000. An increase of 700 cars at an average duty of $500 per car would enrich the Government by $350,000. The annual motor tax would be around $20,000 and the Government share of this will pay the interest on $200,000. Then in renewals, if a car lasts five years 200 would be imported yearly, to replace worn out cars, the revenue from which would be $100,000 annually.

These are not fancy figures, they are based on what our next door neighbor Halifax has done, and are not half of what is being done all over the United States.

Any Private Corporation that would be given the increase in motor taxes and tariff which would accrue through an expenditure of one hundred thousand dollars would not hesitate a moment to make the outlay immediately.

$100,000 spent this year would put the roads referred to in good condition, after which $20,000 yearly for ten years would keep them good. A total of $200,000 based on the increase I have mentioned in tariff and motor taxes, through this $200,000 being spent, will give the Government in ten years about $2,000,000 over and above their outlay.

This is why Washington is spending five hundred million dollars this year on good roads and why Ottawa is spending twenty-five millions. I believe the shrewd business men in the Executive Council at present will see the force of spending $300,000 to get back over $2,000,000 in ten years. Let us "Do it now!" Others are doing it, why not Newfoundland?

"This year a local Boulevard is being built from New York to Long Island (in the state of N. Y.) which will cost $1,750,000. New York City will pay $1,000,000 toward this road and the State $750,000.

This class of work gives the reason why New York State has one motor car to every twenty people, and collects over four million dollars yearly in motor taxes.

It pays to build good motor roads.

A BOOK WHICH
If I were asked to tell the half dozen books which have had the most influence on my life I should name one which I am sure would be a surprise to any one. It is a little leather book only three inches; it was given me by my insurance agent, and its contents are about a hundred blank pages, each of which is detachable and is supposed to come out when its work is done. And its work is, as the title indicates, to carry a list of the things I intend to do each day. I make that list in the morning and at night I look it over and cross out those which are done and transfer those which are not done to the next page. Perhaps it seems absurd, but the help that book gives me in conquering my cardinal sin of procrastination, and in keeping after the things that need most to be done, is enormous. Nothing gives definiteness to a purpose like writing it down. What was formerly a nebulous good intention, something that you mean to do to-day, but that you may perhaps put off until to-morrow or the next day, becomes a part of your day's routine when you get it written down, and it is perfectly wonderful how you can find time to do the things you thus plan to do.

How To Give Definiteness To An Idea.
Did you by any chance see in the current number of a well known magazine the advice of a famous business man "What to do when you get an idea. The first thing was "Make your plan in writing." "Most of us carry our plans in our head," he says. "At night in bed they seem particularly marvelous. The reason that they seem so splendid

A Late Season.

Messages from points along the North East Coast continue to advise that the bays are still filled with ice, and consequently the movements of shipping are impossible. The extent of the ice blockade is considerable, reaching well down toward the Straits, thus preventing the Labrador fleet from getting along, thereby delaying the time of arrival and shortening the period of the voyage. The season, so far as marine conditions are concerned, has been very backward, and sailing craft have been handicapped in getting to and fro for the loading of the various supplies necessary for the prosecution of the chief industry. Stocks of provisions, North, and particularly on the Labrador Coast, must be growing alarmingly small, as ordinarily there is but sufficient kept ahead to last until the end of May, or at the farthest to the middle of June. The northern portion of St. Barbe and the Straits and Southern Labrador, must therefore be running short of provisions, and when the ice barrier is removed, there will be such a demand for stocks that the sailing vessels will be unable to meet it. This is where the advantage of having regular steam connection comes in, but at the present moment there is much doubt as to whether or not there is to be a properly constituted service, carried out along the lines of former contracts and schedules. Had conditions North been normal this year, and navigation opening at the usual time, the situation would have been rendered extremely acute, because of the lack of provision made for steamers to take the route. We say "lack of provision," for the reason that the renewal of the Bowring Contract, or the opening up of negotiations for a fresh agreement should have begun as early as compatible with the expiration of the 1904 Contract. The need for a renewal was evident, and an agreement should have been prepared and submitted to the House of Assembly for ratification, as one of the first items of business following the opening in April. As a matter of fact that was not done and the late Government are as equally responsible for the lack of attention given this vitally necessary matter, as those whom they now charge with neglect in failing to get a new contract through. Meanwhile the country waits in patience, but the moment everything is clear and shipping can proceed, there will be such a roar of indignation and protest if there is not some adequate transportation provided for the quantities of freight which are accumulating for Northern points daily.

The prevention of schooners from reaching the Labrador will have the effect of increasing trade and commerce difficulties, for the season will be so short that there will be no time to spare in the getting along of supplies, and everything available will be requisitioned to carry the articles and commodities required for the short season. Much delay can be counted upon in getting stocks to destinations in sailing vessels, and unless steam can be availed of to supply immediate needs, there is going to be a dearth of necessities at some points. The demand is now imperative and something must be done, at once, to relieve a situation which promises to become more and more tense as the days go on.

STEAMER REACHED BY CAPTAIN - CREW SAFE.
Special to Evening Telegram.
KING'S COVE, To-day.
The s.s. Fern, 2,500 tons, Captain Lindop, laden with pitch-pine, bound from Alabama to Rotterdam, was put ashore yesterday at four o'clock, between Knight's Cove Point and Long Point, in Blackhead Bay. The ship struck heavy ice Sunday night, in Conception Bay, and became very leaky, which forced the captain to beach her. The vessel is now laying pretty steady about half filled with water. Crew have been safely landed at King's Cove.—Cor.

Tagged Salmon.

Mr. R. Mosdell, Port aux Basques, has wired the Game and Inland Fisheries Board that a salmon was captured in a net at Chazel last week, weighing 36 pounds, and attached to its dorsal fin was a silver tag bearing the No. A. 1124. The fish is thought to be one of those marked for observation purposes by the Canadian Fishery Bureau, and that it escaped from a hatchery on the St. Lawrence River. Instructions have been forwarded to have the tag sent to St. John's.

Cumberland Not Arrived

Methodist Educational Campaign

Opened in Form --- Last Night's Banquet a Signal Success.

The Methodist Educational Campaign was formally opened last evening in the College Hall, when practically every one of the sixteen teams were in attendance. Each team occupied its own table and was presided over by the Captain. The Executive Committee occupied the head table. Last night's report had to do only with the initial gifts and the pledges made by the workers themselves. Each team selected sufficient prospects to be seen to-day, and the actual campaign of solicitation began this morning.

Considerable rivalry has already developed among the divisions and will be one of the most interesting features of the Campaign, aside from the raising of the money itself. Pennants were awarded to one team in each division reporting the largest amount of money as follows:

Very Successful Trial

Vickers - Vimy Biplane day Afternoon

Capt. J. Alcock, D.S.C., pilot, and Lieut. A. W. Brown, navigator of the Vickers-Vimy biplane, made a most successful trial flight from Pleasantville yesterday afternoon. The start was made from near the place where disaster overtook the Martinsyde plane on May 18th, at 4.30 and the take-off occurred after a run of about 150 feet, the machine rising gracefully in the air and flying through Quidi Vidi Valley, the altitude being gradually increased until a height of 100 feet over Signal Hill was reached. Turning westward the plane made a circle over the city and then straightened out for the real flight, winging a station Bay at a speed which approximated 95 miles an hour. When the start was made but few people were present, as it was not generally known that an attempt would take place, but the roar of the twin Rolls-Royce engines quickly reached the ears of hundreds of people who were at once attracted by the sound, and the movements of the machine were followed with interest as it flew magnificently over the town and out towards Holyrood. On returning, Capt. Alcock again circled the city and took the bomber out over the South Side Hills and beyond Cape Spear, thoroughly testing out every part of the plane. When everything was found to be satisfactory the machine was headed for Lester's Field, and a perfect landing made, the plane being brought to a stop ere it had covered fifty yards of ground.

The results of the flight highly pleased the aviators, no trouble being experienced in any way during the 47 minutes in the air. Before starting the over-ocean route it will, however, be necessary to make some few adjustments and tunings-up, and to

Very Successful Trial Flight.

Vickers - Vimy Biplane Went Up Yesterday Afternoon.

Capt. J. Alcock, D.S.C., pilot, and Lieut. A. W. Brown, navigator, of the Vickers-Vimy biplane, made a most successful trial flight from Pleasantville yesterday afternoon. The start was made from near the place where the biplane overtook the Martinsyde plane on May 18th. At 4.30 and the take-off occurred after a run of about 100 feet, the machine rising gracefully into the air and flying through Guidi Valley, the altitude being gradually increased until a height of 100 feet over Signal Hill was reached. Turning westward the plane made a wide circle over the town and out towards the Holyrood. On returning, Capt. Alcock again circled the city and took the bomber out over the South Side Hills and beyond Cape Spear, thoroughly testing out every part of the plane. When everything was found to be satisfactory the machine was headed for Lester's Field, and a perfect landing made, the plane being brought to a stop ere it had covered fifty yards of ground.

The results of the flight highly pleased the aviators, no trouble being experienced in any way during the 45 minutes in the air. Before starting the over-ocean route it will, however, be necessary to make some few adjustments and tuning-up, and to load the petrol and oil supplies and other equipment. The fuel supply will take some 870 gallons and the work of preparation and loading will occupy the whole of to-day, which means that the start on the long journey cannot be made before to-morrow. Lester's Field, where the plane now is, has been chosen as the spot from which the long flight take-off will be made, and it is in first class condition for the purpose. The ground is quite solid and has the necessary gentle slope, which will give the machine the right impetus for the rise. Both the pilot and navigator have the utmost confidence in pulling off the flight without accident, but they will not leave until conditions are thoroughly favorable. No decision as to what point will be their landfall on the other side has been reached, though it is quite possible that Galway Bay, Ireland, will be the objective. After the first landing the continuation of the journey will be a matter of option. The desire of the aviators is to demonstrate the qualities of their own machine and win the Daily Mail Prize. They are not interested in the movements of competitors, other than not allowing them any extra advantages in the matter of starting, and if at all possible, they will be the first away.

Some thousands of people visited the aerodrome last evening, and were courteously received, but while not being permitted too near the "bird," they were granted all the privileges possible. The citizens of St. John's are deeply interested in the Vickers-Vimy attempt, and one and all hope that the daring fliers will realize their ambition and successfully make the point which brings fame and honor to them and adds new glories to the flying record of British airmen.

The other Victoria Cross winner was Lance Corporal Sayer, Royal West Surrey, who on March 21, 1918, held the flank of a small isolated post at Laveropol for two hours, despite incessant attacks. Owing to the mist the enemy had approached within 30 yards before being discovered. Though attacked by rifle and machine gun fire, bayonet and bombs, Sayer repulsed the attacks and killed many and wounded others. Though continuously exposed to fire, he skillfully held the post until nearly all the garrison were killed and himself wounded and captured. Sayer subsequently died as a result of his wounds.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR NORTH RUSSIA.

LONDON, June 9. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Seven hundred British, Canadian and Australian troops left Leth to-day for Murmansk, North Russia, on board the former German merchantman Steigerwald. The Scots Greys band played selections on the quay, where a great crowd sang Auld Lang Syne as the ship left the dock.

WINNIPEG, June 10. The re-organization of the Winni-

CONGRESS HAS TREATY.

WASHINGTON, June 10. Each member of Congress to-day had a copy of the Peace Treaty with Germany. Who Am I?

I am your worst enemy. I am warned against me, but you heed not. I lurk in unseen places, and do most of my work silently. I destroy, crush or maim. I give nothing, but take all. I have destroyed more men than all the wars of the world. I am more powerful than the combined armies of the universe. I massacre thousands upon thousands of wage earners in a year. I bring sickness, degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me. I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest siege guns. I am relentless. I am everywhere; in the home, on the street, in the factory, at the railroad crossings and on the sea. I loom up to such proportions that I cast my shadow over every field of labor, from the turning of the grindstone to the moving of every train. I spare no one, and find my victims among the rich and poor alike; the young and old; the strong and the weak. Widows and orphans know me. I AM CARELESSNESS. —American Machinist.

He Fooled His Friends.

When the Americans drove the Germans out of the St. Mihiel salient the job was done so quickly and cleverly that a lot of booty fell into their hands. There was one private at Tiliacourt who took a chance, says Stars and Stripes, the soldiers' newspaper, but he could not resist the temptation. When his mates first saw him they were uncertain whether he was the Kaiser or the crown prince as they rushed forward to make the capture. He was riding a German officer's horse, he had a German officer's helmet, and on his chest was pinned the Iron cross, all left by German officers in their rush to safety. The squad of Americans bent upon making an important capture were tremendously disgusted to find that it was only Private Jones of the Infantry.

Handley-Page Trial To-Day.

EVERY PREPARATION COMPLETE. Special to Evening Telegram.

HARBOR GRACE, To-day. Yesterday's contemplated trial flight of the Handley-Page biplane had to be postponed, as by the time all the small parts were affixed, it was too dark to be worth while making a try. The assembled crowds waited until the very last moment and dispersed with many evidences of disappointment, though they had the pleasure of seeing the fliers decked out for the ascent in full uniform. This morning the mechanics began at 8 o'clock to put the finishing touches on the big machine. The Rolls-Royce expert arrived from St. John's by motor car and made a thorough examination, declaring himself perfectly satisfied, that the plane could have flown without his inspection. Yesterday, R. G. Reid and wife with some friends came over and are living in special car on railway siding near Hr. Grace station. Capt. Memory, of the London Daily Mail is the only foreigner here and he arrived this morning. The interest in flight, locally, is feverish and every person is taken up with it. Princess Mary's Union Jack was attached to stern rudder strut this morning, and blew gallantly on the breeze. Last night the small box kite for testing aerial currents, broke its attaching line and drifted over the harbor. A small army of boys chased after it, eventually recovering and towing it back triumphantly. Nothing more remains to be done before trial flight but the tuning up of engines which will take about half an hour. Ascent will then be made. The examining expert has just placed his official seal of approval on the machine and engines, and everything but waits for the word to "let go."

Omsk.

At that time, Omsk and Siberia deserved it, of course, but whether they did or not, it is to Omsk, through the terrible conditions depicted by Dostoevsky in his "Recollections of the House of the Dead," that the world owed, and still owes, its strangely obstinate misconceptions of the country which Nansen has described as "the land of the future." Very many people, it may safely be ventured, still picture Siberia as a land of more or less eternal snow, of frozen wastes and frozen rivers, of bleak, forbidding uplands and treeless valleys, given over, at any rate until quite recently, to convict settlements.

The idea is breaking down, it is true, even more rapidly, but such convictions are obstinate things, and the novelist or the playwright in search of sensation, or the superficial traveler in search of a public, has had a long lead. The real Siberia emerges slowly into the popular estimate, whilst the city of Omsk, placed by the wonderful pen of Dostoevsky in a category all by itself, finds that its bad name does indeed stick.

Now the Omsk of Dostoevsky has disappeared. Even the House of the Dead exists no longer. In his day the whole place was little more than a one village, but for a considerable time now it has been a large and prosperous city. Indeed it is generally at Omsk that the newcomer to Siberia, as he travels along the great Trans-Siberian Railway, receives his first decisive "shock," if he has crossed the frontier with the old misconceptions strong upon him. For Omsk is the first city he comes to, and, behold, there is nothing strange about it, but, on the contrary, very much that is familiar. Everything is very western and very civilized. As one writer illustrates the point, speaking of the Omsk of the days before the war, "the waters at the hotels are garbed in the same conventional style as at the Ritz or the Carlton." There are theatres and music halls, public gardens and public fetes, fireworks displays, bands, and so forth.

In winter, of course, there is snow, tremendous snow very often, and frost, but the climate is like the climate of western Canada, and Omsk is as modern and, in many ways, as up-to-date as any western Canadian city. There are still many streets in a sorry state of upkeep or lack of it, and long rows of the nondescript one story houses of an older town. But side by side with the ramshackle dwelling, in the true incongruity of a new country, there stands complete or in course of erection some beautiful building, which would be a credit to any city anywhere. As to excites, the town used to be the halting place for the convict bands on their march to Sakhalin, but no convicts have marched through Omsk for nearly twenty-five years. Then the Omsk of the present hour is again a different city. For Omsk has had greatness thrust upon it, and as the seat of the one really stable government in the Russian Empire it has attracted to itself a vast population. In normal times its population was about 100,000; to-day, according to the latest reports, it reckons its inhabitants at nearly half a million. But Omsk is ENGLAND'S FIGHTING MEN — Veterans of Mons, of the Somme, of Lemburg, are back in civilian clothes again—in British Workshops, Factories, in Lancaster Mills, with a great purpose—to Build Up Britain's Commerce.

"We are going into this thing wholeheartedly, sir! We've got our trained men back again, with fingers nimble and brains active from years of military training. We've finished with the War, but Germany is still an enemy. We must beat her in trade as we have done on the fighting field—AND WE'LL DO IT! We are going to make British trade-marks famous—FAMOUS FOR QUALITY."

That's what Ward Brothers, who make our Caps, say; that's what the Jaeger Woollen Company, part of whose output commandeered for the Army kept our fighting men warm and healthy, tell us; that's what Christy's are striving for.

And there are our friends the Sammies—back from the hell at Chateau-Thierry—and they say the same.

Thus we have two great Nations striving to beat a pre-war standard—to oust Germany from the ports of the world—and from these markets have come our stock.

When you buy these trade-marks you help the cause: Ward Caps, Christy Hats, Jaeger Woollen Goods, Eagle Shirts, Cheever Neckwear, Cinett-Peabody Collars—all these are in it!

You have done your part in the War—NOW, CARRY ON!

SPORT AND SPORTSMANSHIP.

Now that the war is over and the men who fought the battle will come home again.

What is this thing called "sport," of which was made So much? Where they but idling when they played? At ball, or standing stripped and mitted, gave Resounding blow for blow, while slept the brave— New fall'n in battle—close beside, beneath The soldier's cross and rudely woven wreath? Who knows what sport is? Why we all must play? And yet the embattled millions in array Against us fought a few brief weeks and fled; And now we succor them, and give them bread.

WE WONDER!

If the Cubs could win a pennant with Billy Orr toying 3000 miles away with fuses, calissons, limbers and the like, where will they be inclined to

"Not the Gift But the Giving."

A very pleasing event took place in Freshwater Church recently. The Organists of the church, Miss M. Vatcher and Miss W. Moores, have been plodding along for some considerable time, in fair weather and foul, charming and aiding in worship, by their consecrated skill in connection with the positions of Organists. It is no light task to play that organ, but that has not daunted the faith and service of the ladies referred to. They did their work for the love of it, not thinking of a reward, a noble motive. The Trustees, however, thought to show their appreciation and that of the congregation in some small way, for services rendered. A small committee was appointed consisting of the Pastor and Messrs. Francis Davis, Sr., and Reuben Pike; who on a bright Sunday morning in April, made a surprise visit and presentation of addresses and brooches, in behalf of the Trustee Board and congregation. Miss Vatcher and Miss Moores replied very feelingly to the addresses and presentation. One thing they were both grateful for, and that was, the indication of appreciation of their services. The small gift was indeed appreciated, but that which was prized the most, was the finish with William shooting at the Lions, Wanderers, and Irish rather than at the Hun.

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

If all the pennants won by the Red Lions were sewn together there would be almost enough material to clothe a Hawaiian dancer in a Broadway cabaret?

THE BALL GAME.

Here end the sorrows of the race— All want, all wretchedness, and Where care must seek another place. Where sin must hide another time.

A hospital unit from "John Hopkins" University and hospital at Baltimore, Maryland, passed through the city on Tuesday, 8th inst, enroute to Battle Harbor, Labrador, where they will take up work as members of the staff of Dr. Grenfell's hospital at that place. The Unit consisted of Dr. L. T. Webster, Dr. C. E. Parsons, Miss Dorothy Dohme, Miss Catherine Anderson and Miss Olive Marshall. Two of the young women are graduate nurses, while the other will teach in the schools at Battle Harbor.—Sydney Record.

Britain's Losses.

The British Ministry of Shipping has now given the precise figures of the distribution of tonnage losses as between the Allies in the war. They are, in gross tons:

Great Britain	7,638,020
France	696,845
Italy	745,365
Japan	129,176
United States	841,512

Great Britain presented the biggest target, but it is surprising to learn that her losses in shipping were four times those of all the Allies combined.

Edith Cavell.

What dead Queen takes the homage of the Straits And enters England by the English gates And with a Royal escort? Who is she That passes through the land so splendidly? An Eleanor, above whose halted bier A Cross is set to tell a queen lay here? A Mary, borne from Fotheringay to rest Where earth is kinder than a sister's breast? Nay! 'tis no queen for whom two summer skies O'er silent streets of myriad moist, and eyes In two great capitals a love proclaim Scornful of death and innocent of fame; Slaughtered between a challenge and a curse Who learned her duty where she learned to pray, And died as truly as she lives to-day. All that she had—and that was life—she gave, All that she valued—other lives—to save; All that we praise, and all we vain would be, Is summed in her and her simplicity.—J. M. D., in the Westminster Gazette. May 15th, 1919.

HIGH PRICES.

The prices still are higher than any thrifty buyer can meet without a sigh; and when I make a payment for groceries or whatnot, I think I'd like to die. To earn my meager dollars I will down many collars, and toll like old Sam Hill; what wonder I'm disgusted if week-ends find me busted when I have paid my bill? They say we ought to pickle the dime and groat the nickel, against the rainy day; but when we've paid the baker, and squared the undertaker, there's naught to put away. I stand around doggoning; my savings bank is yawning; there are no nickels there, in spite of all endeavour it seems that I will never have fifty cents to spare. When I have paid the grocer the wolf seems that much closer to my cheap cottage door; when I have paid the hatter I feel it wouldn't matter if I should breathe no more. When I have paid the shoeman, I say, "No being human could stand the stress and strain;" when I have paid the plumber, his bill, which is a hummer, gives me an oblong pain. And yet we keep on striving, still hustling, still surviving, and hope to see the day when one may heed the sages, and take some from his wages to put in brine away.

Famous St. Paul's.

HISTORIC EDIFICE BELOVED BY ALL LONDONERS.
"Even the war could not stop work on St. Paul's cathedral in London. The famous church, like the English constitution, represents a growth of centuries and not a definite period of construction."
This statement is made in a bulletin of the National Geographic society in connection with a London dispatch which notes a request for additional funds to complete repair work on St. Paul's.
"England's esteem for the historic edifice is shown by the continuation of the restoration work throughout the war, despite the interruption to practically all other building," the bulletin says. "Still fresh in public memory is the notable service of consecration, attended by royalty and distinguished Americans in London, held in St. Paul's April 29, 1917, to commemorate the entry of the United States into the war."
"St. Paul's is the largest Protestant church in the world. Its dome is one of the most beautiful. The church embodies architectural ideas of many periods, because it is not the product of a generation, or even a century. True, Sir Christopher Wren is credited with the structure as it stands today, but he embodied many features of the famous "Old St. Paul's" razed in the Great London fire, 1666. Wren did not wish the restoration to be after the "Gothick Rudeness of the Old Design." But he was compelled to modify his own plans to a considerable extent. Said he, of the balustrade added over his veto: "Ladies think nothing well without an edging."
"To this famous mathematician, astronomer and architect the London fire blew much good. He had commissions to draw plans for rebuilding half a hundred churches. From these were modeled many of the American churches of colonial days. For his masterpiece, St. Paul's, Sir Christopher is said to have received less than the equivalent of $1,000 a year, an amount which might engage the attention of a modern architect of his standing for an afternoon's consultation. The building was paid for by a tax on sea-borne coal to London."
"The motto was appropriate. Some historians believe the cramped Ludgate Hill site originally was that of a Roman shrine of Diana. A Christian church is known to have been built there in the early seventh century. It was burned two decades after William the Conqueror came to England. From the ruins emerged "Old St. Paul's." Fire destroyed that building, too, but it was restored on an even more pretentious scale.
"At the 'Old St. Paul's' John Wycliffe faced the charge of heresy, Tyndale's New Testament was burned. Wolsey heard the reading of the papal condemnation of Luther and, under "Powe's cross," now marked by a memorial, heretics were forced to recant and witches to confess.
"Even before the great fire 'Old St. Paul's' was crumbling, partly from a succession of lightning strokes and partly from neglect. Wine cellars and workshops were to be found beneath its lengthy corridors. The old building was nearly as long as the union station at Washington. The nave became "Paul's Walk," a promenade.
"Two towers, as well as the dome, make the new St. Paul's conspicuous.

"Tombs of Wellington and Nelson, Turner and Reynolds and of other famous men are to be found in St. Paul's. Over Wren's grave is a plain tablet bearing a Latin inscription counselling the visitor to look about him if he would find the architect's monument.
"Sir Christopher should have become renowned as a city planner as well as a church builder. After the fire he prepared a plan that would have made London a city of wide streets and radiating avenues. But Londoners had become reluctant to relinquish property in family tenure for years, unlike citizens of such newer cities as Baltimore and Chicago. St. Paul's itself had owned a farm in Essex since the seventh century.

RED-TAPIESM.

A young detective was enthusiastic but inexperienced. Rushing into his chief's office, in great excitement, he cried, "I've found the murdered! I've got him cornered so that he can't escape!" The chief regarded him with withering scorn. "Allow me," he said, "to draw your attention to the fact that at present we are looking, not for the murdered, but for clues!"

Nineteenth Century

Superstitions.

On Sunday, June 10, 1832, a singular case was tried before Mr. William Ballantine, a London barrister, who lived from 1812 till 1887, and was magistrate of the Thames Police Court from 1821 till 1848. A woman named Blucher, a tall, muscular native of Prussia, and said to be distantly related to the late Marshal Blucher, the Duke of Wellington's supporter in the Battle of Waterloo, was charged with assaulting a woman named White. Both lived in the same court at Ratcliffe, and Mrs. White, having lost several articles from the yard, suspected the defendant. She and her neighbors, after a consultation, agreed to have resort to the "key and Bible" to discover the thief. They placed the street door key on the fiftieth psalm, closed the sacred volume, and fastened it very tightly with the garter of a female. The Bible and key were then suspended to a nail, and the accused person's name was then repeated three times by one of the women, while another recited the words

"If it turns to thee thou art the thief, And we all are free."
This incantation being concluded, the key turned—or these women thought it did—and it was unanimously agreed upon in the neighbourhood that Blucher had stolen two pairs of trousers that belonged to Mrs. White's husband, and they therefore severely beat her; but she attacked Mrs. White in return, and therefore was prosecuted. The Vestry Clerk of St. John's, Wexham, later on discovered his servant trying in the same way the faithfulness of her sweetheart who was then at sea. This same magistrate, Mr. Ballantine, said that he should have the key turned on her without the Bible and ordered her to be locked up until some person would come forward and be responsible for her future good conduct.

CONVALESCENCE!

Its high food value, ease of assimilation and attractive flavour make "Ovaltine" invaluable during convalescence. It is largely used in hospitals for that condition, and in cases of Sleeplessness, Nervous Breakdown and Shell-shock, throughout the war "Ovaltine" has been included in the official standard parcel sent to invalid prisoners.

"Ovaltine" is a highly concentrated extract of the vitalizing and building up properties of Malt, Milk and Eggs, flavoured with Cocoa, and provides the most nourishing and sustaining food-drink possible.

During the whole process of manufacture "Ovaltine" is by hand.

German Listeners Heard Capt. White.

Because he attempted to divulge military secrets of the enemy, Capt. White, master of the S. S. "Somersby" now in port, was placed in solitary confinement in a German prison camp for a month and given no other food than the peelings from carrots and potatoes.

Capt. White's ship was torpedoed off the Irish Coast in March, 1918, and he was taken on board the famous "U-60" one of the enemy's most up-to-date undersea craft.

While on board, Capt. White learned from members of the crew that the British depth charges were ineffective at any depth greater than 50 metres.

Landing at Wilhelmshaven he found a number of British bluejackets there who were taken prisoners in the Jutland battle. They were on their way to Holland, being exchanged, and he told them of what he had learned on board the pirate craft.

A German in mufti, standing close by, heard the conversation and in a few minutes an escort arrived and the captain was placed under close arrest.

During his nine months' stay in various prison camps he was never allowed to mingle or speak with men of his own race.

The news he had learned however found its way to the authorities who made use of it and our depth charges were soon made to do their work in greater depths of water.—Sydney Record.

Change of Name.

RESOLUTION BEFORE TORONTO SYNOD.

Toronto, June 3—Many important subjects will occupy the time of the 67th annual meeting of the synod of the Anglican diocese of Toronto, which opened here to-day. Among them is a resolution calling for the alteration of the present name of the "Church of England in Canada" to the "Anglican Church of Canada." The old name is thought cumbersome and on a motion of Rev. Archdeacon Ingles, of Toronto, the synod will be asked to approve and recommend to the general synod the alteration of the name to "The Anglican Church of Canada."

Strong Assets for Jess Willard.

Here are five reasons suggested by Tex O'Rourke which give Willard an advantage over Jack Dempsey:
First—While there are cases where little men have beaten big men, there has always been some reason. The big men in question have either lacked Willard's skill or his ability to resist punishment.

Second—Willard's great reach will make it impossible for Dempsey to hit him at anything but short range. Johnson got inside Willard's arms and Dempsey must do likewise.

Third—If Willard can keep the fighting at close range he can land with his left at a distance where Dempsey cannot land at all.

Fourth—At long range Willard can hit with either hand without moving his feet, whereas Dempsey must take a step in first.

Fifth—If Dempsey gets inside Willard's guard he must do all the damage he can with his first punch as Willard is so big and strong that he can smother following punches or push Jack away.

Female Yahoos.

Miss Corelli's Indictment---Modern Women Are Ruining Men and Destroying the Nation---A Generation of Vipers.

(By MARIE CORELLI)

Not woman—not man! What, then, is the strange, uncouth, and unlovely being which, like another Frankenstein's monster, is the detestable product of type evolved from the bitter travail of war? A brainless creature, scantily clothed in fantastic garments of ridiculous cut and flaring color, that capers aimlessly about like a monkey, swinging from tree to tree, chattering without sense or meaning and laughing loudly like a hyena on the prowl.

Better Babies

A constipated infant begins life heavily handicapped. Constipation means infinitely more than mere failure of the bowels to move regularly and thoroughly. It means stagnation of waste matter, production of irritant and poisonous substances, and their absorption into the blood by which they are carried all over the body. Cells are poisoned, growth interfered with, and a soil prepared in which germs of disease easily take root and develop. Constipation in infancy is a bad habit, but giving an infant drugs to force the bowels to move is a crime. A baby is like a bud—both may easily be blasted.

The Nujol Treatment for Constipation is not only absolutely harmless, but is in the highest degree efficient.

Nujol is not a drug, does not act like any drug. Nujol helps Nature to overcome the bad habits by re-establishing natural, easy, thorough bowel evacuation, as regular as clockwork.

Every drop of Nujol taken into the body comes out of the body. But in its passage through the intestinal canal, it keeps the bowel contents soft and moist, makes it easier for the intestinal muscles to act, absorbs poisons and helps to discourage germ growth. Get Nujol of your druggist and give it according to directions.

Warning: NUJOL is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Insist on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes.

ment, while truly a primitive savage has finer notions of chastity! "Oh! the pity of it! the pity of it. Iago!"

Time was when Britain was renowned above all other Nations for the dignity, modesty, and graceful behaviour of its women; now it has gained, and is still gaining, an unenviable notoriety for the loud vulgarity, effrontery, coarse language, and deplorable manners of its "new sex," who have ceased to be women in the true sense of the word, and are simply "creatures" of unbridled lust and avarice, who openly offer themselves to the passions of men without shame and without remorse.

Girls in their teens, women in their forties, maids and matrons alike all join in the "barry" dance of disgrace and degradation. Indecent in their dress, conversation and gestures, they resemble Swift's female "yahoos" more than any other imaginative type. They are ugly in form and feature, and apparently, by their manner of attire and untidy hairdressing, they take a wild pleasure in their ugliness; while all the paint and powder with which they besmirch their hard faces is engendered by a daily life of stupidity and vicious man-hunting.

"A female yahoo," writes Dean Swift, "would often stand behind a bush, or a bank, to gaze on the males passing by, and then appear to them using many antic gestures and grimaces."

Antic gestures and grimaces are quite the stock-in-trade of the "new" sex, combined with raucous voices, shrill laughter, tobacco smoking, and as much bodily nudity as can be risked without intervention of the police.

"Is THIS what we have fought for?" an officer asked as he gazed in pained bewilderment at a "Jazz" dance in one of the popular restaurants and saw several of the "Yahoos" stripped bare down to the waist, and bare up to the knees.

"Where are the real women of England?"

Where, indeed! where are the sweet matrons of tender looks and graceful movement, proud of and devoted to their children? Where are the lovely maidens of dainty manners and delicate breeding, modest, chaste, and refined in speech and conduct—they who were devout and pure in thought and feeling, and whose pure stand for God and home built the foundations of Britain's fame? If tears availed, one might weep for the downfall of such sacred womanhood, for it means much more than the downfall of womanhood alone—it means the ultimate ruin of our Empire. For GOD HELP THE CHILDREN BORN OF FEMALE "YAHOOOS" they can only be that "generation of vipers" which Our Lord prophesied "should not escape damnation." Vipers to sting the parent nest—vipers to trail their poisonous slime over the rose of England and blight its blossom!

Is it too late to ask women to remember their womanhood, and all the privileges to which that womanhood may aspire? The privilege of loving loyally and faithfully—inspiring men to the best that is in them—of silently influencing the whole world by the spirit of goodness and beauty, by showing such a high and bright example of nobleness and purity in themselves and their lives that wherever evil exists it may shrink and wither in their presence. Is this too much to ask or to expect? Utterly disabled in God, and the eternal working of the divine law, is at the root of all the evil, and we need to beware how we carry our heresies too far. The woman whose reckless levity and immorality are destroying the better life and aspirations of men will not escape punishment. They are sowing the wind—they will reap the whirlwind!

The Hoodo Plane Wins.

The N. C. 4 had the reputation of being a hoodo ship. For some unknown cause she seemed fated to have bad luck. Because of delay in receiving parts of the machine, there was not time for the full preliminary flights. She narrowly escaped being destroyed by fire at Rockaway. Then came the accident that cost her engineer his right hand, points out the New York World. After the three naval planes were well on their way to Halifax, it was N. C. 4 that was forced by engine trouble to descend off Cape Cod. She was held up by bad weather at Chatham, Mass., and again at Halifax, and before she could reach Trepassey N. C. 1 and N. C. 3 started overseas. That day her luck changed and the "Jonah" she had carried as extra passenger was lost overboard. The two companion planes were compelled to put back to Trepassey, and Commander Reed arrived in time for the trans-Atlantic flight. It is useless to reason against that sort of thing. Sailors are not the only people who are superstitious. Something was wrong with her. Misfortune lay in wait for her. Her chances of reaching the Azores were hardly worth considering.

As it turned out, N. C. 4 was the only one of the three naval planes that reached the Azores in safety. The other two would have made port if they had not run into heavy fogs. But it was N. C. 4 that won out, that went alone to Lisbon. It was to the "hoodo" ship that fell the honor of being first to span the Atlantic on wings—Sydney Record.

Death Penalty for Child Slayer.

Walter Edward Bromley, who murdered his five children at Moose Jaw on Sept. 17th last, was on May 15th, sentenced to be hanged by Justice Lamont, the death sentence to be carried out on August 21st next. Justice Lamont's words to the accused were: "Bromley, stand up. You have been found guilty by the jury of the charge of the murder on September 17th last, of your five little children. Have you anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be assed upon you?"

"Nothing," replied Bromley, in a clear, firm voice. "The crime you have committed," continued Justice Lamont, "is a most atrocious one, and the evidence satisfies me as it has satisfied the jury that you are guilty. There was no evidence to justify a verdict that you were insane. With but one option and cannot deal with the jury's recommendation for mercy, the code compelling the judge to pass sentence of death. Any clemency that may be extended to you will have to come from the Department of Justice, Ottawa."

"The sentence of the court, therefore, is that you shall be taken from here to the Regina jail, and there imprisoned until the 21st day of August, when you shall be taken forth and hanged by the neck until dead. And may God have mercy on your soul."

With but one gasp of horror, the accused sank to his seat, and was shortly afterward led away.

BROMLEY'S CONFESSION.

"About 8.30 on the evening of the 17th of September, 1918, my wife put all the children to bed except Norman and went down town to a picture show. I was sitting in the kitchen reading. The boy was annoying me as he would not go to bed. He was upstairs, and I was afraid he would wake the other children. I shouted to him several times to be quiet, but he still kept on. Then before I realized what I was doing I grabbed my razor which was in the kitchen (my razor had got it here) and rushed upstairs and took hold of my boy while he was in the centre bedroom and cut his throat and then covered him up with the bedclothes. I felt then I could not leave my other four children with my wife, so I took the twins and placed them on top of the boy and cut their throats. I then went into the other bedroom and did the same with the other two children. I intended to destroy myself, but I got sick and had to leave the room. I then went to meet my wife and told her."

The unanimous verdict of the jury was "Guilty," with a recommendation for mercy, and their consideration of the evidence took but one hour and forty minutes.

Praise for Printers.

"Publicity itself, the first bond of a corporate life, is the fruit of the printer's art," says the Observer. "Daily or nightly he performs a public service in conveying to every home the news and views of the world. The tradition of his craft, as of other public services, is non-partizan. He works serenely detached from the combative or expository purpose of the editorial columns. He prints that the public may read."

TO-DAY

In medicines, as in every other necessity, the public is satisfied with nothing but the best! This explains the ever-increasing demand for Zam-Buk. Not only is this great balsam the best household remedy to-day, but it is also the most economical. Zam-Buk's superiority is due to the fact that it is all medicine, containing none of the coarse animal fats or harsh mineral drugs found in ordinary ointments. Again, the medicinal properties are so highly concentrated that they contain the maximum amount of healing, soothing and antiseptic power, so that a little of this balsam goes a long way. Another reason why Zam-Buk is most economical. It will keep indefinitely and retain to the last its strength and purity. Best for skin diseases, cuts, burns, insect-biting and piles. Assassination of Prince Michael of Serbia.

The summer residence of Prince Michael of Serbia was in the beautiful park of Topidere, Belgrade, and it was his usual custom on hot afternoons to walk with his family along a shady path which he had had cut through the woods. All Belgrade knew his favorite walk and the Karageorgiev conspirators had no difficulty in laying their plans accordingly. On the afternoon of June 10, 1888, the Prince set out for the park with his aunt, her daughter, and granddaughter, his only retinue consisting of a single aide-de-campe and a groom. As the little party were walking along the narrow path under the trees, four men came suddenly round the corner, and, with a respectful salute, stood aside to allow the Prince to pass. Scarcely had he done so than four pistol shots were heard from behind, and the Prince fell, expiring in a few moments. His cousin, who was mortally wounded, died two hours later; her daughter was severely wounded, the aide-de-campe fainting, and the Prince's aunt and the groom alone escaped unhurt.

In order to make certain of their victim's death the assassins drew their knives and plunged them repeatedly into his prostrate body. It was owing to this delay, and the breakdown of their carriage on the way back to Belgrade, that the murderers—two brothers named Radovanovic, a woman named Marie and a desperado named Rogic—were balked of the results which they had confidently anticipated from their horrid deed. The proclamation of Peter Karageorgiev, son of the ex-Prince Alexander. When at last their carriage reached Belgrade, the tidings had preceded them. The garrison were under arms. The energetic Ministry of War—Peter vic Blackavio—was master of the situation, and the chief conspirators were speedily arrested. The Assembly proclaimed Michael's nearest relative—his cousin Milan then barely sixteen—as hereditary Prince of Serbia under the title of Milan Obrenovic.

The Making of Glass.

The National Geographic Magazine of May, in a lengthy illustrated article on the industrial wonders of Pennsylvania has an interesting chapter on The Making of Glass, which we summarize.

The process of manufacturing glass are extremely interesting. To see sand, soda and lime mixed, subjected to heat and turned into glass transparent as the clearest water, or even as the very air itself, shows what liberties man has learned to take with Nature. Now as free-flowing as water, now as sticky as warm taffy, now as hard as flint, it lends itself to the manipulation of human hands, and the purposes of man with astonishing versatility.

The mixed materials, technically known as the "batch" consist of white sand and such bases as potash, soda, lime, and lead. Small quantities of other materials are added as auxiliaries to change the color or nature of the glass. Manganese and arsenic are among the agents employed to make it colorless. For window glass a batch may be made up of 8,000 parts sand, 2,200 of soda sulphate, 2,500 parts of lime, 50 of arsenic, and 40 of powdered coal; or the amount of lime may be cut down and carbonate of soda substituted.

Window glass is of two kinds—cast and blown. The cast is the plate-glass of commerce. In making it the process is not dissimilar to the rolling of dough on a dough-board. A huge flat table with a rim around the edge is filled with a pile of hot, putty-thick glass. A big mechanical rolling pin spreads it out, after which it hardens. Then it is sent to the annealing (tempering) furnace, heated, and allowed to cool gradually, for cooling either too fast or too slow would be ruinous. Finally it is ground down and is polished and is ready for shipment.

The process of making blown window glass is entirely different. In hand-blowing, after the batch has been melted, the "gatherer" takes a pipe about five feet long, with a bell-shaped head at one end and a mouth-piece at the other, and dips the bell-shaped end into the molten glass. A small ball of the glass adheres. He blows slowly through the pipe and transforms this ball into a thick-skinned bubble. When this cools sufficiently it is dipped into the molten glass again, and more adheres. The process is usually repeated five times, the bubble growing thicker with each successive time.

The pipe, with its adhering plastic bubble, is then given to a "snapper," or helper, who carries it to the "blower's block," where the "blower" takes it. The latter workman is the king of the glass industry—big of body, powerful of lung, and deft of hand. He places the bubble in the "block," which is an iron mold set in water to prevent its becoming too hot, and lined with charcoal to prevent the iron from discoloring the glass.

By turning the bubble in the block, blowing air into it as he does so, and gradually drawing the pipe upward, he slowly transforms it into a pear-shaped affair. The lower part gradually becomes solid and too hard to be workable even with his powerful lungs. The snapper puts it into the work furnace, and when it is properly heated he gives it back to the blower. Standing over the "swing-hole," the blower allows the weight of the plastic glass to elongate the pear into a cylinder, which he gives the desired diameter by blowing into it intermittently.

But, although it has reached the desired diameter, the cylinder is not long enough to suit his purpose. So he reheats it and blows it over and over again until it reaches the prescribed length.

At this stage the cylinder is completed, but the free end is closed and the other end still adheres to the blow pipe. It is put back into the blow furnace and the free end heated until it is soft enough to permit the blowing of a hole through it. The resulting imperfect end is cut away by wrapping a hot glass thread around the cylinder above the imperfection, at the point of severance. Touched with a piece of cold iron, the imperfect section breaks off. The cylinder is freed from the blowpipe in a similar manner.

We have now a perfect hollow cylinder of regulation window glass. But before it can be used in a window it must be flattened. To accomplish this it must first be split open. A hot iron or a charged electric wire, passed up and down the line of cleavage, plays the role of a pair of shears. It causes a strain-line to form from one end of the cylinder to the other, and when this is touched with a piece of cold iron the big roll breaks open as perfectly as though it were cut open with a diamond cutter and straight edge.

After this the roll of glass is sent to the annealing furnace. Heated to a proper degree, the glass becomes soft enough to permit the roll to be flattened. It is then carefully cooled and stored, ready for market.

Annual Meeting of C. of E. Orphanage.

The annual meeting of the friends and supporters of the C. of E. Orphanage was held at Canon Wood Hall last night. His Excellency Sir C. Alex. Harris presiding, supported by His Lordship Bishop White. His Excellency who was accompanied by Capt. Hamilton, his newly-appointed Private Secretary, was received by a guard of honor composed of the lads of the orphanage who presented a very pleasing appearance in their C. L. B. uniforms. The girl inmates of the institution, neatly dressed and looked the picture of health, were also present under charge of Mrs. White, the lady Superintendent. His Excellency addressed the children at some length, after which they were dismissed, and the business of the evening taken up. The reports of the secretary and treasurer, presented by Mrs. Gosling and Mr. R. B. Job, respectively, proved very satisfactory and were adopted. On motion of Mr. B. E. S. Dunfield, seconded by Mayor Gosling, last year's directors and managers were re-elected for the current year. Votes of thanks were passed the officers, also the Hon. Physician, Dr. Anderson, and the collectors for services during the past year and to His Excellency the Governor for presiding at the meeting. On behalf of those present and all connected with the orphanage, a hearty welcome to Newfoundland was extended Lady Harris by Rev. Canon Bolt, seconded by His Lordship Bishop White.

Prospero Arrives.

The s.s. Prospero, Capt. Couch, arrived from Newcastle-on-Tyne at 9 o'clock last night, to Bowling Bros., Ltd., after a fine passage of 9 1/2 days. The Prospero has been on the other side for nearly three months, receiving repairs, both about the hull and in the engine-room, and is now in first class condition. The engines on the way out worked as satisfactorily as on her trial trip, when she was launched fifteen years ago, a high speed being maintained practically the whole passage out. The ship's cabins have been re-painted and re-furnished and other improvements made. She brought a cargo of Tyneside coal.

Transplanting in Mid-air.

Until the idea was suggested by the news that airmen were about to prove that it could be done, probably few persons had ever thought of the necessity that might arise in the air for changing passengers or cargo from one aeroplane to another. But even with this amazingly rapid machine, time would be saved on long distance flights if mail, for example, could be transferred from one plane another without the need of landing, and making a fresh start; and this change would repeat, in the case of the aeroplane, the early methods of mail transportation, in which the rider at the end of one relay leaped from his horse to a fresh mount that was held waiting for him. That the aviator must be able to climb all over his machine and make repairs without coming to earth is another astonishing thing to hear of, simply as a desperate "stunt" in mid-air, it is not so surprising to learn that aviators have already leaped from one machine to another.—Christian Science Monitor.

CREW RESCUED.

The Deputy Minister of Customs, last night had the following wire from the Sub-Collector at Stone's Cove, N.B.: "Schr. 'Stanley Frank' arrived from the Mizen Bank with 600 quintals fish. Reports taking Capt. James Scott and crew off the schooner 'Kitchener,' coal laden. 'Kitchener' sank after the crew had been rescued. Landed at Belleoram to-day." (Sgd.) Sub-Collector.

Bantams Captured Giants.

Among the accumulating accounts of incidents of the war comes one that set the observers laughing as they plunged into battle. It occurred on the Somme, when the troops going into action met a company of the "Bantams," so called, coming back with prisoners from the front. The "Bantams" were a picked division, chosen not for their size but for their lack of it, little men under the regulation five feet one inch of the British standard for recruits, who had been rejected by the recruiting agents but had volunteered for service and been organized into a division of their own. The prisoners they had captured had been taken from the Prussian Guards, composed of exceptionally big men whose minimum height of six feet made them look like downcast giants as they marched in with the "Bantams." The contrast made a humorous war picture that reminds one of the American Negro private who captured a German major, and decorated his own cheerful countenance with the major's monocle as he escorted his disgraced captive to the rear.—Christian Science Monitor.
