How Patry Helped.

By SOPHIE E. ANTON.

Our Patrick saved his earnings; His wife by frequent earnings; Had kept her little mermaid fresh for gala days for years;

At last he bought the dwelling, Mike Flanagan was willing, Although he had to run in debt and waken Nora's fears.

So now they worked the harder; More fragrant grew the larder, For John O'Rourke to loan her The money, though he did it could conceivably be spared.

She thought to help by raising The ducks that all were praising (Nora, I think the same was, though Her little flock of turkeys, Of Indian meal had plenty,

"Henry is a brack!" cried the judge, "Here, give him this," and he tossed his wife a 250 bill.

"I don't think Henry would take it if he thought it was given him as a reward," she said, as she folded the bill, "but I will use it to make his room more attractive. I have asked him to occupy it right along."

One day early in December the president of the college called upon the judge and asked him to see one of the judges in an introductory debating contest that was to take place in the college hall the following Saturday night. The judge would represent the house college, and Albin, the competing college, would bring its own judge, the two to select a third. Judge Bingham consented to act and was glad to oblige his aid friend, the college president.

"You're an honorable man, I know," laughed the president as he arose to go, "or I shouldn't have dared to select you. You might be prejudiced, you see."

"Heat all right, the childer!" - Her voice was never milder. Then when she told our Patrick, but her eyes were strangely dim— "Sure I'd use for after Latin!"

"And change his love to Latin!" For I thought the Lord might deal with us just as we dealt with him."

How the Judge Lost His Stable Boy.

BY W. R. HOSSE.

The judge stood on his front porch lighting a cigar. The iron door clinked and a boy came up the walk. He was a boy just veering on citizenship—20 perhaps, tall, strongly built, sunburned and clear eyed. His clothes were very plain, his hat a decent soft one, his shoes cheap and shiny.

"Good morning, judge," he said with a respectful nod.

He passed for an answering nod.

The judge looked down on...

up a paper and read of the daring robberies all over the neighborhood I thought of you alone here.

"I didn't want to startle or distress you after it was all over," said his wife, "but we did have a visit from burglars, my dear."

"What?" cried the judge. "Did they get anything?"

"They got something they didn't bargain for," laughed the lady.

"But really, Edward, it wasn't so terrible. I didn't for a moment lose my nerve—though the shooting did seem a little startling."

"Shooting?" cried the judge. "Was there shooting? And when did this happen?"

"Last Wednesday night," replied his wife. "I was awakened by a slight noise in the hall. I slipped from bed and ran to the door and opened it. By the dim light I saw Henry stealing down the stairway with a stout stick in his hand. He shook his head when he saw me and waved me back. I listened and could hear faint noises from the floor below. Henry disappeared down the stairway. A moment or two later there was the sound of a fierce struggle, a pistol shot and the noise of running feet. Then Henry called to me. 'It's all right, ma'am,' he said. 'They're gone, and nothing is missing.' I dressed and went down. It appears that there were three of the ruffians. They had entered through one of the picture windows. They had the silver packed in a basket and were ready to go, when Henry pointed out them. He had been reading with the door of his room open and fortunately heard them."

"And the shot?" said the judge.

"The hall just grazed Henry's shoulder and buried itself up there in the door casing. But Henry managed to batter one of the robbers pretty thoroughly, he says, and I guess he is right. For the morning paper says, the police found a well known burglar early Thursday morning lying behind a hedge on Congress street in a helpless condition."

"Henry is a brack!" cried the judge.

"Here, give him this," and he tossed his wife a 250 bill.

"I don't think Henry would take it if he thought it was given him as a reward," she said, as she folded the bill, "but I will use it to make his room more attractive. I have asked him to occupy it right along."

you, struggling my way up, discouraged at times, but never ready to quit. How I used to long sometimes for a kindly word, or the cheer of a sympathetic hand!" The judge paused again. "Well," he finally said, "it is quite evident I must look for a new stable boy." He smiled faintly. "The bounds of Albin's enmity can never be compressed within the narrow limits of a stall." He took a step forward. "God bless you, my dear," he cried, as he pressed the lady's hand. "I'm proud of you! He wheeled toward his wife. "I begin to think," he said "that you know more about this ambitious youth than you ever let me come to the surface."

"It was a confidential matter," laughed the lady.

"Never mind," said the judge. "We'll start in anew. What profession have you decided upon my lad?"

"I want to be a lawyer," replied the boy.

"God bless you! Will you enroll yourself in my office tomorrow. When you graduate in June you will come direct to me. In the meantime you will remain my guest. We'll not get a word. Any arrangements you can make with your fellow conspirator across the bank will meet with my approval. In the meantime I shall look upon you as being your banker. Each week you will receive an advance on your future salary. Stop, stop. You must let me have my way in this. What are we on earth for. Can a childless old man have a little satisfaction out of his money? I tell you, my lad, it's all settled. Let's drop the subject. You are tired. You have had a busy day. Good night, and God bless you."

Dear, Dumb and Blind.
A SKETCH OF LITTLE TOMMY STRENGER'S SCHOOL LIFE.

"Tommy" Stringer, the deaf, dumb and blind boy at the Perkins Institution and Massachusetts School for the Blind, Boston, took part in an entertainment at that institution on Washington's Birthday by reciting a poem through the medium of the manual alphabet. It was interpreted to the audience by one of his blind companions.

Tommy entered the school when he was six years old. That was seven years ago. His condition at that time was described by one who knew him as "a bundle of human flesh wrapped about with perpetual darkness."

The methods employed in Tommy's education have been similar to those which were devised by Dr. Samuel G. Howe for the benefit of Laura Bridgman. The first six months of his school career were without apparent encouragement to his instructors. The child was stolidly indolent and obstinate. At last, however, a ray of light penetrated his darkness, and he understood that things had names, which could be represented by arbitrary signs or letters of the manual alphabet formed upon his fingers.

Tommy did not take kindly to talking, and could with difficulty be induced to speak. During this stage of his education he was required to ask at table for everything that was given him. This he would sometimes do, and would be called upon to do, but when his instructor said, "Please give me your soup, please give me your soup, please give me your soup," Tommy would begin to cry and make no reply.

There was a great concourse of friends of both sides in attendance upon the debate. The hall was crowded. The judge and his fellow employees, seated on the platform, looked on over a sea of eager faces. He and his conferees from Albin, Dr. Richard, were quickly selected Congressmen.

It was a splendid applause as they qualified upon questions. It was a splendid applause as they qualified upon questions. It was a splendid applause as they qualified upon questions. It was a splendid applause as they qualified upon questions. It was a splendid applause as they qualified upon questions.

Several stormy afternoons were spent in cutting checks from brown paper in exact imitation of the transfer checks given on the street cars. These were to be used in the bars during the summer, each check writing the holder to a five minute swing. In return for some little unusual attention and assistance upon the part of the conductor when leaving a car one day Tommy bestowed upon him one of these checks as a high mark of gratitude and appreciation. At another time he made a flag for his new flag pole, measuring the dimensions which he deemed best suited to the height of the pole with the greatest care, and doing the necessary sewing himself. Even the smallest detail of any work must be absolutely correct before Tommy is satisfied, and he will labor with infinite patience to make it so—a trait of character which is quite an unusual contradiction to his quick, impulsive nature.

He is still the same trusting little fellow whose "word is as good as his bond." During certain hours in the week he was often necessarily left to his own devices, and frequently some occupation in the line of definite work or reading was provided for this time. No matter how fascinating his play or how loath he was to leave it, he never failed to turn to the allotted task when the hour came, even though no teacher was at hand to enforce the law. One afternoon a great temptation came to him in the form of a visit from a little friend whose call had long been anticipated with pleasure. Some compensation claimed the attention of all the older members of the family, and no one realized that Tommy's duties as host and pupil conflicted. The idea of being released from his promise never occurred to him, so being too honorable to stoop to deception, he left his little guest to entertain himself, while Tommy, like a stock, accepted the inevitable and seated himself for the reading which had been assigned for this half hour.

Canada's Fisheries.
Ottawa Correspondence Halifax "Chronicle".

Ottawa, March 31.—Nova Scotia has a Klondike in her fisheries! Millions of gold are annually taken from the waters on the rock-bound Atlantic, not by any magic or seragony process of extracting the precious metal from sea salt, but by the honest and vigorous toil of Blonness fishermen. A whole continent has gone wild over a plaster deposit in the far north gold fields, but last year the value of the catch of food fishes in Nova Scotia was over seven million dollars. Half the amount of the output of the fabulously rich Yukon—and only an average catch!

I will go further and I find that since 1870 the fisheries of our little Province totalled the enormous value of nearly two hundred million dollars, or about $400 for every man, woman and child in Nova Scotia. There are 600,000 people in the West and in the East, but few so surpassingly rich as Nova Scotia's marine mines of wealth.

In view therefore of these facts which are stated on the authority of a report laid before Parliament a few days ago by Sir Louis Davies, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, I think I am justified in stating that the starchy Blonness sailors who, exploit the Atlantic, are the greatest wealth-producers in the country. No other industry has reached this magnitude of hundreds of millions.

The fishing industry is far and away the greatest in the Province—not perhaps in the capital or even employed, but if I may so style it, in the value of the output.

The returns are rich, but the fisherman's calling is perilous and hazardous beyond compare. These modern Vikings who sail from the ports of Nova Scotia, are trained to hardship, sufferings and even privation. They are the finest men in the world. Stout of heart and strong of arm, they patrol the wild and stormy North Atlantic, from January to December, they navigate their craft through fog, icebergs and mid-winter storms that might well claim the bravest mariner; they ride out the fiercest gales at all seasons in craft that few of us would care to employ on a pleasure trip. Their life is a life of tragedy and romance.

Mills, residence; Union Bank. A basket ball team from Acadia University will play conclusion with the Y. M. C. A. picked team here next Wednesday evening. A grand game may be expected, as our boys are anxious to retrieve the honors lost at Acadia last year. Outlook: Mr. Chas. Shaw the well known hunter, made a capture yesterday. He caught a black fox and her six young ones in T. R. Jones pasture at Nictaux West. Mr. Shaw now has the whole seven foxes in a cage at his home. Mrs. Edward Chesley died very suddenly at the residence of her son, Mr. Byron Chesley, West Clarence, last Wednesday evening. She was apparently in good health up to within a few hours of her death, which was caused by heart failure. Hon. Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, has decided that in the event of any further drafts of men being needed to fill the vacancies in the Canadian regiments in South Africa, the preference will be given to volunteers from the Halifax Garrison battalions.

Local and Special News.

A. D. Brown's stock classified for April. The provincial legislature was prorogued last Friday. J. W. Dockwile's Spring Stock is now about complete. It is simply immense. There will be an ice cream social held at the Salvation Army barracks on Saturday evening next. To Let - A dwelling house on Pleasant Street, Motors Square; nicely situated. Apply F. E. McNeil. Hicks & Sons, who purchased the wood working machinery of the Curry Bros. & Best Co., have rented the factory from Messrs. Hicks & White, and now have the plant in operation. The school children are rehearsing patriotic choruses for the concert to be given shortly in aid of the India Families Fund. Some other interesting features will be a flag drill by twelve young ladies. The young people of Round Hill will give an entertainment in the ballroom Thursday evening, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and the drama "Among the Breakers". The proceeds will be devoted to the famine fund. We have received a somewhat lengthy communication from Mayor Engle on "Town Sewerage - Side for Legislation and That Sort of Thing" too late for publication in this issue of the Monitor. It will be published next week. The basket ball games scheduled for last Monday night were postponed, and will be played tonight. The game between the Mechanics and Shamrocks will be of particular interest, these teams now holding equal position in the league. Mr. Arthur Hall of Boston, who spent the winter in Bridgetown has purchased the well known Crowell farm in Clarence, from Mr. Arthur Russell. The sale was closed some weeks ago. Mr. James Marshall securing the property for Mr. Hall. Messrs. Stan Thurston, Arthur Robbins Ernest Parle, Murray Bailey and Mack Miller composed the team of Vermont boys which played basket ball here last Saturday night. They were accompanied by Mr. Stokes, secretary of the Vermont Y. M. C. A., who also addressed the Y. M. C. A. meeting here Sunday afternoon. Before the Supreme Court at Halifax last week, Messrs. v. Town of Bridgetown, was argued, and judgment rendered. The applicant is asking for a new trial. Miller vs. Green is also an appeal for a new trial, judgment reserved. To state Whittell is an appeal from the Court of Probate. Judgment reserved. Messinger vs. Messinger, was an appeal from the County Court. The appeal was dismissed without calling upon the respondent. Acadia vs. Benson, was also an appeal from the County Court on a matter of costs. The appeal was allowed. The long standing differences between the Town and County, as to the amount the Town should pay the County for the Town's proportion of the joint expenditures, have at length been adjusted, and the Town pays the County for balance due for the years 1898 and 1899 the sum of $700. His Worship, the Mayor, read a lengthy report before the Town Council last Monday evening. The report was a new one between the Town and County and had been referred to the arbitrator W. E. Benson, Esq., Q. C., for settlement. The arbitrator, however, had several minor matters still to be settled, and these have caused a great deal of difficulty, and a great deal of time and labor has been spent in getting the matter amicably arranged. A satisfactory basis has, however, been arrived at, and the work in future years should be comparatively light.

A Paradise Bay at the Front

Mr. E. Hart Nichols, barrister of Bigby, received the following letter from Mr. Dredgford K. Daniels, of Paradise, last week and we copy it from the Courier.

Dear Sir, I have got used to the horrors of war—men with holes punched through them in all parts of the body, and yet they are alive.

One poor fellow from Toronto (he had been in the Post Office) has five bullet holes in his body. He was wounded a week ago Sunday.

A Nova Scotian's Impressions of Boston

Boston is pretty much like the rest of the world only more so. Does humanity think well of himself? Boston more so. Does the world go to heaven, read the latest novel, and then go to bed?

Cause of Great Britain in the Struggle with the Boers.

The following address was delivered by Rev. Marion Law at a concert held at Parkview, Rhode Island, on Feb. 24th, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the British soldiers who have fallen or may fall in the South African war.

I mention it here as a greeting to take part in this meeting tonight, a meeting whose object is to aid the widows and orphans of the brave men who have paid the full and noble sacrifice of their country's welfare, and willingly laid down their lives on the scorching battlefields of southern Africa to save their country's honor and their beloved Queen.

A few weeks ago we had all interested to read of a meeting similar to this, to be held in London, and we were glad to see that the same object was in view.

The Rage For Clippings.

Emperor William is much too busy to read the papers, yet he needs to know what is going on in the world. So he has a staff of clerks who clip the news for him.

Queen Victoria subscribes to more than one newspaper, but never sees the clippings. She has a staff of clerks who clip the news for her.

Lord Randolph Churchill is a great collector of clippings. He has a large collection of them in his study.

Lord Salisbury is a great collector of clippings. He has a large collection of them in his study.

Children's Earnings.

"I shall be glad if they ever become able to bring in something." "My dear," was the wife's reply, "what do you suppose these children earn for us now?"

"I just watch them, John, to see if they are doing anything, and will not for many a year." "I just watch them, John, to see if they are doing anything, and will not for many a year."

It is the best cod-liver oil, partly digested, and combined with the hypophosphites and glycerine. What will it do? It will make the poor blood of the anemic rich and red.

It will give nervous energy to the overworked brain and nerves. It will add flesh to the thin form of a child, wasted from fat-starvation.
