NURSERY REMINISCENCES.

“I cannot but remember such things were!”
I remember, I remember,
When I was a little boy,
One fine morning in September,
Uncle brought me home a toy;
I remember how he patted
Both my cheeks in kindest mood;
“There,” said he, “you little fat-head,
There’s a top because you’re good!”
Grandmamma—a shrewd observer—
I remember gazed upon
My new top, and said with fervour,
“Oh! how kind of Uncle John!”
While Mamma, my form caressing,
In her eye the tear-drop stood—
Read me this fine moral lesson,
“See what comes of being good!”
I remember, I remember,
On a wet and windy day,
One cold morning in December,
I stole out and went to play;
I remember Billy Hawkins
Came, and, with his plover stick,
Squibb’d my pantaloons and stockings
Till they were all over dirt!
To my mother for protection
I ran, quaking every limb;
She exclaimed, with fond affection,
“Gracious Goodness! look at Jim!”
Pa cried, when he saw my garments,
—“Twas a newly purchased dress—
“Oh! you nasty little warner,
How came you in such a mess?”
Then he caught me by the collar,
—“Cruel only to be kind—
And to my exceeding dolour,
Gave me several slaps behind.
Grandmamma, while yet I smarted,
As she saw my evil plight,
Said—“twas rather stoney-hearted—
“Little rascal! save him right!”
I remember, I remember,
From that sad and solemn day,
Never more in dark December
Did I venture out to play!
And the moral which they taught, I
Well remember—Thus they said,
“Little boys, when they are naughty,
Must be whipp’d and sent to bed.”

Miscellaneous.

Mrs. Lane: A Sketch.—Prosperous, most prosperous, has Stephen Lane been through life; but by far the best part of his good fortune (setting pecuniary advantages quite out of the question) was his gaining the heart and hand of such a woman as Margaret Jackson. In her youth she was splendidly beautiful—the luxuriant and gorgeous beauty in which Giorgione revelled; and now, in the autumn of her days, amplified, not like her husband, but so as to suit her matronly character, she seems to be almost as delightful to look upon as she could have been in her earliest spring. I do not know a prettier picture than to see her sitting at her own door, on a summer afternoon, surrounded by her children and her grand children,—all of them handsome, gay, and cheerful,—with her knitting on her knee, and her sweet face beaming with benevolence and affection, smiling on all around, and seeming as if it were her sole desire to make every one about her as good and as happy as herself. One cause of the long endurance of her beauty is undoubtedly its delightful expression. The sunshine and harmony of mind depicted in her countenance would have made plain features pleasing; and there was an intelligence, an enlargement of intellect, in the bright eyes and the fair expanded forehead, which mingled well with the sweetness that dimpled round her lips. Butcher’s wife and butcher’s daughter though she were, yet was she a graceful and gracious woman,—one of nature’s gentlewomen in look and in thought. All her words were candid—all her actions liberal—all her pleasures unselfish,—though, in her great pleasure of giving, I am not quite sure that she was so—she took such extreme delight in it. All the poor of the parish and of the town came to her as a matter of course—that is always the case with the eminently charitable; but children also applied to her for their little indulgences, as if by instinct. All the boys in the street used to come to her to supply their several desires; to lend them knives and give them string for kites, or pencils for drawing, or balls for cricket, as the case might be. Those huge pockets of hers were a perfect toy-shop, and so the urchins knew. And the little damsels, their sisters, came to her also for materials for dolls’ dresses or odd bits of ribbon for pin-cushions, or coloured silks to embroider their needle-cases, or any of the thousand-and-one knick-knacks which young girls fancy they want. However out of the way the demand might seem, there was the article in Mrs. Lane’s great pocket. She knew the tastes of her clients, and was never unprovided. And in the same ample receptacle, mixed with knives, and balls, and pencils for the boys, and doll’s dresses, and sometimes even a doll itself, for the girls, might be found sugar-plums and cakes, and apples, and gingerbread-nuts for the “toddling wee things,” for whom even dolls have no charms. There was no limit to Mrs. Lane’s bounty, or to the good-humoured alacrity with which she would interrupt a serious occupation to satisfy the claims of the small people. Oh, how they all loved Mrs. Lane!—Miss Mitford’s Sketches of a Country Town.

ORIENTAL BREEDING.—I Samuel xxv. 5. “Go to Nabal and greet him in my name.” Job xxix. 8. “The aged rose and stood up.” Acts xxviii. 10. “Who also honoured me with many honours.” In the Old and New Testaments we have some striking examples of what may be termed good breeding. Look at the patriarchs and others in their denunciation of self, their anxiety to please, to show respect to the aged, the learned, the dignified, or those of the sacerdotal character: listen to their affecting eulogies and their touching appeals, and then say, have we not in them some of the most pleasing instances of gentility and good breeding? On their great anniversary festivals the Hindoos always send to “greet” each other. Has a son or a daughter got married; has a “male child” been born; has prosperity attended the merchant in his pursuits; does a traveller pass through a town or village where some of his friends or acquaintances reside; then, those concerned send greeting expressive of their joy and best wishes for their future prosperity. See them on receiving company. A servant, or friend, stands at the gate to watch for the approach of the guests, and to give notice to the master of the house. When they approach the premises the host goes out to meet them, and bows and expresses his joy at seeing them; he then puts his arm over their shoulders, or takes them by the hand, and conducts them into the house. When they retire, also, he always accompanies them to the gate, and expresses the great joy he has had in their company. Before people take their food they always wash their hands, feet, and mouth; and, when they sit down, they take their places according to rank and seniority. Should any man presume to sit down “in the highest” place if he has not a title to it, he will be sure (as in the parable) to hear the master say to him, in respect to “a more honourable man,” “Give this man place;” and then, “with shame,” he will be compelled “to take the lowest” place. In supplying the guests, the chief person present is always served the first, and generally by the hands of the host himself. They are also particular as to the order of serving up their viands and condiments; to set on the table certain articles first would be considered as much out of place as is in England to set on the dessert before the more substantial dishes. Epicures at home would smile, and pout the lip, at the vegetable feast of a Saiva man. His first course consists of pulse, green gram, rice, and ghee, or butter; the second, of numerous curries, and pickles made of half-ripe fruits, vegetables, and spices; the third, an acid kind of broth; the fourth, curds, honey, and rice; the fifth, a rich supply of mellow fruits. From this humble repast the guests arise with pleasure, and at less expense of health, than the luxurious Englishman does from his half-medicated meal, to which science is now the footman, and a few French terms its fashionable vocabulary. When the visitors have taken what they require, the principal person arises from his seat, and all present follow his example.—Roberts’ Oriental Illustrations of the Scriptures.

SCENE IN GREECE: MONTH, AUGUST.—The pleasantest way of spending the evenings in this terrible month is, to lie down on the sofa, with a volume of Byron in one’s hand and a glass of ice within reach; yet we do sometimes, in defiance of the innumerable armies of fleas quartered on the esplanade, take a stroll round it, and then we see a sight we should never see in England; for, between the hours of nine and ten, most of the people come out of their hot crowded houses in the town; and, if we venture a little way down the Strada Reale, we see them seated, in happy little family groups, round tables under the piazzas;—the women laughing, chatting, and drinking lemonade; the men smoking cigars, or singing to the guitar. The Greek ladies have no idea of finery; they do not dream of its being vulgar to sit out of doors in company with their husbands and fathers,—happily for them: so they sit, in their happy ignorance, the first Signoras of the place, enjoying themselves right rationally, while the English ladies parade slowly up and down, longing to rest for a few minutes, yet not daring to do so, lest they should offend the tyrant custom; and casting, from time to time, glances of pity and contempt on the denizens of the soil,—scornful eye and curling lip exclaiming, in silent eloquence, “Poor things! they know no better!” It must be confessed, that although this extreme heat is very disagreeable, it brings also with it its peculiar luxuries. It is a luxury to bathe in the early morning, between the hours of five and six, which you good people in England, who shudder involuntarily the moment the water touches you, yet persist in taking your annual pickle, because it is recommended, cannot even imagine; and the half-hour’s saunter through the trelliced graperies, in the palace garden, is still more delicious. One side of the broad terrace lies open to the sea, defended only by a low parapet-wall. Along the other side, and over head, runs a trellice, covered with grapes;—such grapes! each bunch will fill a large dish, and each individual grape is as large as a bantam’s egg! bright and clear! and, as the sun glances through them, glowing like amber refined by fire! and, to crown all, they hang within reach! Nay, you need not always be at the trouble of raising even your hand to gather them. To hide the unsightly aspect of the rough stems which, for two or three feet above ground, are bare of leaves, the Cape jessamine is planted, and wreaths itself in rich luxuriance, mingling its large white flowers with the clusters of fruit, and impregnating the atmosphere with fragrance. Verily, this were a dwelling-place for Hours! for, that every sense may be regaled at once, the soft tones of a flute, rendered still softer by its passage over the waters, is wafted gently over to the officers’ quarters, in the old fort;—some indefatigable subaltern, I suppose, who amuses himself and myself, by practising before breakfast.—A Lady’s Sketches of Corfu.

A BEAUTIFUL REFLECTION.—It cannot be that the earth is man’s only abiding place. It cannot be that our life, cast up by the ocean of eternity, to float a moment upon its waves, and sink into nothingness. Else why is it, that the high and glorious aspirations, which leap like angels from the temple of our heart, are forever wandering about unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and the cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off and leave us to muse upon their faded loveliness? Why is it that the stars, which “hold their festival around the midnight throne,” are set above the grasp of our limited faculties; forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And finally, why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and then taken from us? leaving the thousand streams of our affections to flow back in Alpine torrents upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades—where the stars will spread out before us, like islands that slumber on the ocean; and where the beautiful beings which here pass before us like shadows, will stay in our presence forever.—Bulwer.

Look backwards, and time was when souls were not; look forward, and our souls will be when time shall not. Who will not deny himself for a time, that he may enjoy himself forever. God counts all the steps we take to the throne of grace, and all the minutes of waiting. They who spend their days in faith and prayer, shall end their days in peace and comfort. A wicked man is like one that hangs over a deep pit by a slender cord with one hand, and is cutting it with the other. The scorners’ seat stands next to hell’s gate. Death shuts in the light of this world, and is the daybreak of eternity. Christ did not die for sin, that we might live to sin.

A Beggar’s Advantages.—If a beggar has a fortunate position for getting money in the street, his advantages in the way of saving his money are enormous. In the first place, he is the only man in the universe who is not obliged to study appearances;—then the ups and downs of the world concern him no longer. The price of stocks or land affecteth him not. The fluctuations of agricultural or commercial prosperity touch him not, or at worst change his customers;—besides he is not under the measure of property. “He confessedly hath none any more than a dog or a sheep;” but so much the rather is it his. Then his safety from annoyance is amazing. “No wealthy neighbour seeketh to eject him from his tenement—no man sues him—no man goes to law with him. He is not expected to become bail or surety for any one. No man troubleth him with questioning his religion or politics.”

MUTINY AT SEA.

A mutiny of a most serious character broke out in the month of November last, on board the barque Manly, Capt. John Davies master, while at sea, which was put down in a most extraordinary manner. The vessel sailed from London on a whaling expedition to the South Seas in August last, with a crew of 25 men, but in consequence of the mutiny was obliged to put into Buenos Ayres, from whence she arrived last week in the St. Katherine’s Dock. The dissatisfaction of the crew was originally excited by the captain refusing them a double allowance of grog. On the 21st, the steward informed the captain that the crew were only waiting a favourable opportunity to seize the ship. On the 22nd, the spirits were again refused by the crew, and the captain prepared for the worst, and secretly removed six barrels of gunpowder and 1500 rounds of cartridges into his state-room, and then loaded his pistols. At 8 P. M., White, the chief officer, who, it appears, was one of the mutineers, entered the cabin, and was told by the captain, that if any attempt was made to take the ship, he would blow up every soul on board. White advised him not to be rash, and said he would stand by him. On Sunday, White told the crew the captain would blow up the ship the next day if he did not find land, and they had better secure him. It was afterwards resolved that White should go below and seize the captain, and that on a given signal the second and third mates should proceed to his assistance, secure his hands and feet, and throw him overboard. The captain, having full information of what was going on from the steward, determined, rather than the ship should be taken, to perish with all on board. After recommending his soul to God, he looked up the companion, and observed the three mates, one of whom had a rope in his hand ready to secure him. The captain then, holding the muzzle of one pistol into a barrel of powder, and the other in his right hand, prepared to meet them. White first came down, but appeared thunder-struck when the captain directing his pistols towards him declared that if he moved an inch he would blow his brains out, and discharge the other pistol into the powder. White appeared petrified with fear, and the captain remained in this position several minutes, with the pistol ready cocked, observing that the slightest pressure on the trigger would send them all into the air. White begged for mercy, and the captain drove him with the muzzle of the pistol into a state room, where he locked him in. The second mate came down soon after to look for White, and on receiving a similar reception ran up the companion and fell against his brother, who was standing on the hatchway. The captain finding the ship out of her course, went on the deck with the steward, well armed, and found some of the men inclined to relent. He threatened to shoot the first man that disobeyed orders, and restricted the crew to a particular part of the vessel. Hearing, however, that the crew were still disposed to seize the ship, he thought it best to run her into Buenos Ayres. White, in the interim, was released. The captain, carpenter, and steward, kept watch, well armed. Burwood, the second mate, made a confession of his guilt, which tended to implicate White, as the ringleader of the mutiny. On the 7th of December the vessel arrived in the river Plata, and anchored close to his Majesty’s ship North Star, Captain Vernon Harcourt, commander. An inquiry then took place, from which it appeared that the mutineers intended to have taken the vessel to Tristan d’A-cunha. The depositions were taken before the British Consul at Buenos Ayres, and Captain Harcourt; and the three officers, George White, William Burwood, together with John Breyman, boat-steerer, and Henry Best, were instantly placed under arrest on board the North Star, from whence they are expected shortly to arrive in custody to take their trial at the Admiralty Sessions.—London Paper.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

The contrast between New South Wales and Van Dieman’s Land in the press appears in favour of the latter.—A new paper to be called the Colonist, was to be published at Sydney, on the 1st of January, making in all six journals in New South Wales; viz.:—the Government Gazette, the Sydney Gazette, the Australian, the Sydney Herald, the Times, (a two penny one) and the Colonist. The other periodical works—magazines and scientific journals—appear to have ceased. In Van Dieman’s Land we have eleven journals, viz.:—the Hobart Town Gazette, the Hobart Town Courier, the Tasmanian, the Colonial Times, the Colonist, the Horn Boy, the Trumpeter, the Trumpeter

General, the Morning Star, and the Launceston Advertiser and Launceston Independent, to say nothing of the projected Colonial Advocate, Wreath, and several others. Other contrasts between the Colonies tell better for New South Wales. Thus wool of the value of £200,000 was exported from one clip, and a farm of 1280 acres in Bathurst county, was sold lately for £180, while in Van Dieman’s Land wool is comparatively dear. Among the other articles of colonial produce that are enriching Sydney, the growth of tobacco for the use of the cigar makers affords a considerable return. The manufacturers tall upon the settlers to extend the cultivation of tobacco, for this purpose. On every Tuesday, Friday and Saturday evening, the band plays several popular airs on the barrack-square, which has in consequence become quite a fashionable promenade.—Australian Dec. 12.

The Bar.

In Spain the bar holds a high and privileged position in society, which it is almost difficult to reconcile with the despotic character of the government. As a proof of the rank yielded to it, it may be mentioned that a member of the bar is privileged from arrest for debt, and is also entitled to claim to die the death of one of the nobility, in the event of his having incurred a capital punishment.

More Barristers than Briefs.

There are no less than 461 Barristers who attend and profess to practice in the Court of King’s Bench, exclusive of 25 King’s Counsel who attend that Court, and 18 Sergeants-at-Law.

NOBLE EXAMPLE.

HAPPY FRUITS OF SUCCESSFUL SPECULATION.

A young man belonging to Portland, whose name we shall make known, and which ought every where to be proclaimed as an incentive to good deeds, and honorable conduct, established himself a few years since in New York in some sort of Mercantile business, which proved unfortunate, and he failed. He returned to Portland, and has supported himself and family by a clerkship for two or three years past.—About four months ago he caught the Speculation fever which has so extensively prevailed in Portland and other places, and by an operation on a small scale, in the purchase of Eastern lands, cleared 1000 dollars. A portion of the money he appropriated to buying up his own obligations at ten per cent. of their par value, and with the rest made another purchase, by which he cleared $3000. About this time, believing that he should prosper in this new line of business, he entered into a voluntary obligation in writing, binding himself to his conscience, that he would devote one tenth part of all his gains to Benevolent and Charitable purposes. He has continued his land speculations so successfully, that he has already realized a fortune of $200,000! The tenth of this ($20,000) he has of course disposed of according to his voluntary obligation. The first object of his kindness and regard, was the estimable widow of a reverend and honored clergyman (the Rev. Dr. PAYSON) under whose ministry he had become a professor of Religion, and of whose church he was a member. He has sent this lady who had been left almost destitute, with a large family of children, a check for TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS—he has given $2000 to the Seaman’s Bethel, Portland—$100 to aid a feeble society in building a church in Illinois—and other large sums for various charitable purposes. The gentleman who called upon him in behalf of the Illinois church, informs us, that on the day he saw him, he had given $1700 for a variety of benevolent objects.—American paper.

YANKEE CONTRIVANCE.

Yankee Pedlars are fruitful in expedients to attract customers. One of the craft passed through our village last week, with a wagon load of wooden ware drawn by a nice looking steer, harnessed in horse fashion. This rather novel mode of travelling attracts as many gazers around the wagon, as if a dancing bear was attached to it, and it is a great chance if some of them are not metamorphosed into purchasers. A year or two since, this same character passed through here with a cow attached to his wagon. When hungry, he was in the habit of milking mully and regaling himself with a bowl of bread and milk. At that time we could not but be struck with the manifold advantages of a travelling concern of this description. We can’t conceive why the fellow has substituted a steer for his cow, unless he has got married and is thus enabled to keep his provision chest well stocked.—Greenfield Gazette.

A BOATMAN’S PANEGYRIC.

No, stranger, there’s no place on the universal ‘arth like old Kaaintuck: she whips all “Out-west” in prettiness; and you might bide down cr’ation and not get such another state out of it.—Hoffman’s Winter in the Far West.

RECIPE.

It may not be amiss to advise, as a preventive of sea-sickness, to pass a broad belt round the body, and place within it, on the region of the stomach, a pad stuffed with wool or horse-hair; this, tightly braced, has been recommended, and often found useful, as it in a great measure restrains the involuntary motion of the stomach occasioned by the lurching of the vessel. During sickness, very weak cold brandy and water will be found the best means of allaying the heat and irritation which sickness occasions.—Brockedon’s Road-book.

How to Ensure Success.—The surest way not to fail is to determine to succeed.—Sheridan.
