HEARST MASQUERADES IN NEW YORK STATE AS A JEFFERSON DEMOCRAT

In His Formal Acceptance He Denounces the "Plutocratic Trust Element," and Professes His Adherence to the Principles of True Democracy---Ranges Himself up Alongside of Jefferson and Tilden.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Wm. Randolph Hearst today formally accepted the Democratic nomination for governor of New York State in a letter addressed to W. J. Conners, of the Democratic State Committee, and made public here late this afternoon. The letter in part follows: "I accept the nomination of the Democratic party bearing in mind the record of that great party in the past and knowing that the membership of the party is determined still to be ruled by the principles of Jefferson and Jackson and guided by Democracy's ideal. The greatest good of the greatest number. "To study the work, the beliefs and the faithful efforts of the Democracy's great leaders is an inspiration to all men sincerely in accord with the American theory of government. True Democracy must stand with Jefferson and Jackson for the best interests of the whole citizenship rather than for the selfish interests of any party, class or individual seeking for special privileges. "It cannot be denied that certain individuals and classes have at times secured control of the machinery of the Democratic party and attempted to use it for their personal or class profit. The duty of true Democracy is to deprive of all authority within the party those who try to promote special interests at the expense of the general welfare. "The Democratic convention at Buffalo did this thing in a most conspicuous and effective manner. Democrats, so-called, but seeking after special privilege in reality, were driven over into the Republican party where those of their class flourish. "Already in the time of Jefferson the so-called aristocracy had begun to look upon the Declaration of Independence as a theoretical expression of sentiment not to be considered practical or actually binding. Already in Jefferson's day this self-chosen aristocracy expressed doubt of the people's capacity for self-government. "Today we see again the effort to deprive the people of self-government and to vest the powers of government in the hands of corporation attorneys representing special interests. "This un-American condition reached its climax in the state of New York, as illustrated in the New York city election last year. Upon that occasion, the disbelievers of the trusts in the ability or the right of the people to govern themselves extended even to taking away from the people the right to vote and to have their votes counted. "It is clear that there is urgent need of strong, determined, united action by the people of this country when the corporations reach such a degree of hardness in which they actually order their employes in office to forbid the counting of the people's votes and then reward these public officials, faithless to the people, by again nominating them for office. "The people may again be betrayed.

"The people have not only a right to self-government, but they have also the capacity for self-government on a permanent, just, enduring basis. Just government shall be carried on in accordance with the needs of the mass of the people. How can a self-chosen aristocracy understand the needs of a nation? "The attitude that the democracy should take toward great capitalist organizations now is precisely that of Jackson toward the United Bank, which appeared as a menace in his day. "The property rights of every man and of every organization of any kind must be respected, but today, as in the days of Jackson, it is necessary to declare that no power shall rise up greater than the government or menacing to the government. "The activity of trusts in politics and their power in government has been unfortunately great and very plain to all in recent years. The trusts absolutely dominate the public welfare have been able to dominate in both parties by giving special rewards to unscrupulous bases and then nominating on both sides candidates subsequently controlled by the trusts. "The enforcement of the eight hour law in government work, the enforcement of the law concerning the prevailing rate of wages is demanded by the people, and it is demanded by democratic principles at large for the nation as a whole. DORCHESTER AFTER MONCTON INDUSTRY

The Railway Town to Have More Lights --- First Baptist Church Troubles --- Many Game Licenses--The Westward Trend--Personal and Other News.

MONCTON, Oct. 12.—(Special)—Porter, which raged in Coverdale, Albert county, the first part of the week burned over two hundred acres of wood-land on the McDonald farm, causing considerable loss. While Joe Wilson, Lover Turtle Creek, was out fighting fire on the McDonald farm, the flames swept down upon his place and burned his home. He lost his house and all furniture; no insurance. "The city light department has decided to install a large number of additional street lights. For some time the need of more electric lights has been felt in different parts of the city, but until the city greatly increased the capacity of the electric light station, the demands could not be complied with. Some twelve or fifteen lights have now been decided upon and it has also been decided to increase the number of water hydrants in the more remote parts of the city for fire purposes. "A number of changes are being made in the staff of the local Royal Bank. W. J. Green, who has been accountant here for the past year or two has been transferred to Newcastle and leaves Moncton on Monday next. Yesterday afternoon the staff of the Royal Bank presented Mr. Green with an address and travelling dress suit. Gordon Bowser, of the local staff, is promoted to accountant and J. L. Sheridan is promoted to teller, while two of three of the junior clerks have been advanced in rank. "The probabilities are that the Moncton First Baptist church will soon again be the pastor. Since Mr. Whitehouse, the present pastor, tendered his resignation and reconsidered it, all has not been harmonious in the church. The chief point of difference is the question of the pastor's summer vacation. Mr. Whitehouse desired two months holidays during summer and some of the members of the church thought this was too long a time for pastor and congregation to be separated. At a business meeting held Thursday night it was proposed to test the question, but an intimation came from Mr. Whitehouse to the effect that he would probably not be here by the time the next vacant period came around, and the congregation taking this hint that the reverend gentleman would press his resignation, dropped the subject. Mr. Whitehouse has many strong admirers in the church who do not yet despair of holding him in Moncton, but the general impression is that a definite resignation will shortly be in the hands of the church. "Dorchester, which has recently taken an industrial boom, after a Moncton industry. The Stratton Rabbit and Car Boring Co., which was recently organized here and has been operating on an increasing scale, has received inducements from Dorchester in the shape of offers for stock to assist the company in launching out, and unless more financial interest is taken by the citizens of Moncton, in the concern the shareholders may secure the industry. "Thursday was the first full in applications for big game licenses expected by Game Warden M. S. Keith, since the opening of the hunting season. Game Warden Keith issued a much larger number of permits this year than in any previous year and the local hunters have been more successful than in the past. "A few of the defunct Bank of Westmorland bills appear to be still in circulation. A couple of days ago a five dollar Bank of Westmorland bill was presented to a hotel clerk in payment of an account, but, of course, was declined. "Andrew Macgowan, a former I. C. R. civil engineer, who has been working on railway construction in Maine for the Somerset railway during the summer, has returned home. (Continued on page 6.)

THE WATER MAIN STANDS PRESSURE

The testing of the water main was resumed this morning and the full two inch water was still on at two o'clock. No breaks had been reported up to that time and Engineer Clark said he felt very hopeful that the trouble was over. He was about starting out to go over the route of the pipe to make an examination to see that all was well. There will be a certain amount of anxiety until after tonight, however, as the pressure during the night increases about five or six pounds. Mr. Clark, however, is inclined to think that the pipe will stand all right.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE ST. JOHN HOLDERS OF GOLD PRINCE STOCK

The following article, from the Boston Financial News, will be of special interest and afford satisfaction to many persons in St. John who hold stock in Gold Prince mines: "The new $100,000 stamp mill at Gold Prince Mines being constructed at Animas Forks, Colorado, is rapidly nearing completion, and is expected to go into commission within the next 30 days. This plant, built of steel structure, with concrete foundations, and four-inch concrete floors throughout, is the largest, most modern and best-equipped plant in Colorado. The mines have been developed on very broad lines, and the ore bodies already opened up have made it imperative that a plant of this magnitude be erected in a most substantial manner for many years continuous operation. "A cross-section tunnel was driven to the intersection of the main vein of the mountain, and then drifting on the vein itself was

OFFICER CRAWFORD SEEKS DAMAGES

As the result of the arrest of two small boys, one of whom was the son of J. Daly, barber, Dock street, by Officer Crawford some time ago, for annoying an old man named Andrews, the officer named has started a suit for damages of $100 against the father of the Daly boy, A. W. Macrae is representing Crawford and H. A. McKewen, K. C., is acting for the father of the boy. "It will be remembered that when the case came before Judge Ritchie, his honor dismissed the charge, as the old man stated that the two boys arrested were not the ones that annoyed him. Officer Crawford alleged that he had been informed by an American tourist that Mr. Daly had given Andrews five drinks the morning just before the hearing of the case. Officer Crawford also alleged that he had the right boys. "It is understood that the defence are prepared to prove that as soon as the boys were arrested Andrews stated to bystanders that Crawford had arrested the wrong boys and also that Andrews was not given five drinks as alleged.

THE TIMES NEW REPORTER

VERY SAD CASE. The many friends of Mr. Peter Binks are somewhat concerned over the mental condition of our esteemed fellow citizen. It appears that last night the gas supply suddenly failed in the Binks' residence, and the lights went out. Mr. Binks had to spend some time fussing about for lamps, and was finally compelled to go out to the store for oil. This morning Mr. Binks rose as usual to take his bath, and found that the water supply had failed. He had to dress himself, go out to a neighbor's house, and carry a supply of water for family use. Having at length got his breakfast, Mr. Binks decided to give the telephone a twist, and say a few things to the gas

This morning Saunders, who it is said belongs to Apolonia, and is 35 years old, was fined $20 or two months and $8 or 30 days additional; and Boudreau, who is 30 and belongs to Digby, got $20 or thirty days. THEY WANT THE MONEY

The men of the 62nd Regiment feel very much dissatisfied that their pay checks have not arrived. The annual inspection was held on the 28th of July and the pay has usually been forthcoming right after that. This year, however, there has been a delay, for some reason and the men are still awaiting the receipt of their money. Colonel Edwards when seen this morning said he could not understand when the delay was; all the papers had been sent forward promptly and some misunderstanding regarding the efficiency pay has been straggled out some time ago. He said he thought that Major S. J. R. Siroon, the paymaster at Halifax, was away on leave of absence and the night account for the delay. However 300 men are anxiously awaiting the money.

THE MAYOR'S MELON

The mayor received today an interesting specimen of agriculture from George Harding of Nepesic. It is a citron melon, and some little time back while the melon was growing, the following lines were scratched upon its surface, evidently with a nail or a sharp pointed instrument. The spelling, it will be noticed, follows the Rooseveltian method: "Will I remain Mair Sears, one seed shall make a flowing trade for Canada's winter port." The mayor has placed the specimen on exhibition on the clerk's desk.

MORE PETTY THEFTERY

Hardly a day goes by now without the announcement of some cases of petty thefting. Last evening an express wagon used by a young lad employed with Burpee Brown, the Princess street druggist, to deliver parcels, was stolen from in front of the store and no trace of it has yet been found. The boy had left the wagon outside the door of the establishment while he went inside to get a parcel, and when he came out the vehicle had disappeared.

Review of the Conditions in the Fruit, Grocery and Provision and Fish Markets.

In the early part of the season, both fruit growers and fruit merchants anticipated an abundant crop and good business; but, within the last few weeks have been generally disappointed, as, owing to unfavorable weather conditions their hopes have not been realized, which means higher prices and shorter supply.

A local fruit dealer, talking with the Times said that the high winds and dry weather, and especially the high gales which have swept Canada and the United States, have played havoc with the apple trees, knocking the fruit to the ground.

During the past month or two, lemons have been very high, but within the next thirty days should be considerably cheaper.

In point of quality, Ontario apples are cleaner and better than last year, being less affected with spots and scabs.

According to a local grocer the season's outlook for the wholesale trade is bright and encouraging.

THE REV. HUNTER BOYD TALKS ON BRITISH AFFAIRS

(Montreal Witness) The Rev. Hunter Boyd, of Wawoit, Charlotte Co. N. B., arrived in Montreal yesterday by the R. M. S. Victoria, after a three months' trip through Great Britain. He called at the Witness office and had much of interest to tell regarding the great changes which that country had undergone since his last visit four years ago.

Mr. Boyd is an agriculturist of considerable experience and in his journey through England and Scotland he took occasion to note the increasingly progressive spirit among the farmers. The various agricultural colleges, and especially Wye College, which came under his observation, are being more largely attended than at any other stage of their history, while many of the farms were particularly notable for their beautiful and splendidly arranged exhibits.

In his travels Mr. Boyd paid a visit to the extensive nurseries of the Drummonds, at Stirling, and studied the methods and processes by which forests are raised from the seedling. He also visited a farm which is known as the Sir Walter Scott district.

From his study of the tariff question, and especially his observations on this trip, Mr. Boyd does not believe that the tariff system of railways, with its perfect close relations between Canada and the mother land, it is his opinion that both the Canadian farmer and the manufacturer should strive after the production of such a perfect commodity, that it could compete successfully in any market on its own merits without being given preference. Imperialism was unlikely to receive any lasting impetus from mere sentiment; in this material age monetary considerations were again a factor. A cheaper rate of postage between Canada and Great Britain, the removal of protective tariffs, as far as possible, and the freest interchange of goods between the two countries, were Mr. Boyd's opinion as the greatest things in binding Canada and the mother country more closely together.

London had made many progressive strides since Mr. Boyd's former visit. Thoroughness had been widened, and the tariff system of railways, with their cheaper fares, introduced. The increasing noise in the city, however, and the great nervous strain, were being viewed with much concern, and it seemed not unlikely that some practical steps would be taken with a view to lessening the trouble of the poor continued to occupy no small share of the attention of the people, all of whom regarded the prospect of winter with considerable apprehension. To this problem John Burns, M. P., and his associates were addressing themselves with great enthusiasm, and in many cases had already afforded temporary relief.

A HOME RULER IS SIR WILFRID

T. P. O'Connor Gets Hearty Welcome in Ottawa—Ministers Attend Meeting.

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—(Special)—T. P. O'Connor addressed a meeting in St. Patrick's hall last night. There was a large attendance. Mr. O'Connor, president, and among those present were Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Mr. Templeman and many other leading citizens. There was a good contribution to the Home Rule fund.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in proposing a vote of thanks to T. P. O'Connor, said that he was an ardent Home Rule man and he did not know the true Canadian who was not. As Mr. O'Connor said, the best means of paving the way to imperial independence was by granting Home Rule. Seven hundred dollars was raised. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Chas. Fitzgerald and Hon. D. Ross gave $50 each and Hon. R. W. Scott, $25.

Dr. Savanne, for attempting to murder his wife and mother-in-law, was commuted today by the magistrate of the county of Carleton.

The Canada Lands and a million dollars, with a total capital of $10,000,000, has been incorporated. Hill, Fulton and J. B. Kenney, barristers, and two or three clerks are the incorporators.

ABOUT THE DREDGING Captain Wright, government inspector of dredges for the maritime provinces, left last evening for Boston to inspect the dredge Bothwell and others for the purpose of preparing a report as to their suitability for the needs of this port. Inspector Dalton will probably have for his inspection today the dredges of the Boston and the dredges of the Boston and the dredges of the Boston.

FOR PURE MILK The board of health is experiencing some little trouble with some of the milk dealers, and yesterday Secretary P. M. Burns notified fourteen of them that unless they take out their licenses within five days he will proceed against them in the police court.

A GREAT WEEK At the Opera House the Elia Co. will return on Monday and give three days of progressive the coming week, viz. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday matinee, and night. "The Red Rose" Special Thanksgiving matinee. Thursday afternoon at 2:30 of "A Battle Scoured Hero," and Thursday night another change of bill. "Turned up," a great comedy will run the rest of the week, including Saturday matinee. "Zera" will be announced soon, with Miss Andrey as the heroine.

Lung Rest ing themselves by hard coughing, come to their relief. Give them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If it heats, soothes, cures. Your doctor will explain its action to you. Ask him all about it.

Conservatives Declare by Resolution in Favor of a Clean Campaign.

The following resolution of thanks was tendered to J. J. Ritchie, K. C., C. for his splendid services to the party in this constituency, both as a candidate, and as counsel in exposing the corrupt methods by which the election was won from us in 1904.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

BASE BALL

WHY SCORES WERE LARGE. There has been quite a change in baseball of today and baseball of two or three decades past.

So different now—you can't get it where you wish it and the pitcher endeavors to throw to any other place than where it is desired.

The rules in older days must be the reason why Casey never struck out—and when he did fan three times it was because the curves went around his neck instead of over the plate.

Then there was a time, especially in the South, when the balls were rubber. Yes, rubber—solid rubber. But then every one had a chance to punch it with the bat and knock it a mile.

In those days it was called "town ball." The sphere was thrown at the runner instead of his being gently touched by the base runner.

The boys who lived in and about Atlanta during and after the war were able to testify how they used to steal beneath railroad passenger cars at dead of night and chisel rubber from the spring bearings.

That was carried into a ball. Talk to a pioneer who engaged in the national sport 40 years. He will tell you that the players secured a field four or five times as large as the fields in which the game is now played.

When the batter struck the ball it would go half or three-quarters of a mile more or less. On many occasions the ball was lost in the woods.

It was nothing then to secure a home run. Sometimes a ball was knocked for enough into the distance to allow the runner to make three or four home runs.

Scores! Yes, in the older days (according to antediluvian players), they were something like this, "100 to 125," "100 to 75" or "50 to 40."

The bats used were long, keen, hickory sticks cut from a small sapling. A batter could reach several yards with the bats, just like a cattle drover with a lengthy whip.

OWNERS OF BOSTON NATLS. LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 10.—George B. Doney will be president of the Boston National League club. The owners of the club are George B. Doney and John S. Doney of Central City, Ky. Fred Tenney and two other men whose names are kept secret. By the terms of the deal the capital stock of the club, with a par value of $100,000, changes hands at a price close to $275,000.

Chicago Teams Two Each. Chicago, Oct. 12.—The world's championship baseball series is again even, the local National League team today defeating the Americans, 1 to 0. Each team has now won two games. Curiously enough, both National victories have been on the American grounds, while the White Stockings have secured success on their rival's field. Astoria, for the Americans, and Brown, for the Nationals, the pitchers who opposed each other in the opening game which was won by Brown's team, again contested today. Brown was at his best. He gave only two hits, and allowed only two runs.

The weather was by far the best of the series, and although heavy wraps were worn the attendance reflected the improved weather. The official count shows 13,366 paid admissions. This was the last game in which the players shared the gate money. Total receipts for the four games were $1,166, of which $275 goes to the players. Of this sum 75 per cent will go to the members of the winning team.

DIAMOND NOTES. Connie Mack is taking in the world's series in Chicago, while on his way to California.

The Chicago Nationals were the first club to break into the 110 column in victories. It was a grand showing.

Fitcher Medcalf Brown of the Chicago Nationals maimed his fingers by getting caught by a hay cutter when a child.

Last season the New Yorks each netted $1,142 from the receipts of the world's series. The Athletics each took away $882.

Pitcher "Rube" Kisinger, once with Detroit, landed 11 out of his first 13 games for Buffalo, and that work put the use holders. At this juncture there was some itching. The ball was thrown swift enough to tag the runner on the fly and he was out when struck.

The boys who lived in and about Atlanta during and after the war were able to testify how they used to steal beneath railroad passenger cars at dead of night and chisel rubber from the spring bearings.

That was carried into a ball. Talk to a pioneer who engaged in the national sport 40 years. He will tell you that the players secured a field four or five times as large as the fields in which the game is now played.

The Mooney Biscuit and Candy Company, Limited, Stratford, Canada, is the fastest growing business in the Dominion.

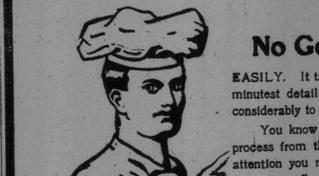

Started in 1903, more ovens were necessary in nine months. In eighteen months, another wing was added to the original building, increasing the floor space by 18,000 square feet.

Building operations now under way will double the size of the Mooney Bakeries and Candy Manufactories, and give a total floor space of over 150,000 to 200,000 square feet. The illustration in the upper left corner shows the enlarged works when the addition is completed.

No Good Flour Can Be Made

EASILY. It takes time, trouble, and the closest attention to the minutest detail of every milling process, to say nothing of adding considerably to the cost of production, to make good flour.

You know you must watch your bread carefully during every process from the mixing to the baking, but however close the attention you may give it your trouble will be wasted unless you are using a flour which has been made with corresponding care.

No brands on the market today are made more carefully than our "FIVE ROSES" and "HARVEST QUEEN." The grain itself is cleaned by the newest and most perfect machinery before being ground, and the flour is sifted and tested by experts at every stage of the milling in order to insure the nearest approach to perfection it is possible to obtain by modern methods.

If you use these brands and give corresponding attention to the details of your baking, you will have as a result bread which cannot be equalled for quality and nourishing value.

PREMIERS CONFERENCE

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The provincial conference is unable to meet the demands of the premier of British Columbia and an adjournment was made at an early hour this afternoon to see if Mr. McBride would be more reasonable tomorrow. If not his province cannot have the endorsement of the only tribunal which he can appeal for aid and support.

To put the matter plainly it should be said that all the provinces have agreed to the financial resolutions. The other provinces take a similar view but Mr. McBride refuses to accept anything except what he lays down himself.

He wants a subsidy more than double the other provinces. In addition to the subsidy in the financial resolutions of 80 cents a head he asks a special subsidy of 25 cents a head, which would be reduced gradually on a sliding scale until it reached 95 cents when the population was 2,500,000 and there it would remain.

The other provinces would not stand for either of these propositions but they are willing to put through a resolution admitting the desirability of giving British Columbia an increase and including the amount which it should have. Mr. McBride would take the first half of this resolution if the last half, that is the money, were left out. In other words, he would get the sympathy of the provinces and would then go home with his grievance.

An special subsidy of about $100,000 a year for ten years would pass the conference today. Tomorrow the conference may end without any reference to the special claims of British Columbia. For this Mr. McBride will be to blame. He should take Mr. Whitney's advice and pocket his grievance, notwithstanding that he sees a political contest in the near future.

Dete the Peddler or A Boy's Start in Life

CHAPTER IX.

It was 1 o'clock in the afternoon when Pete reached the railroad curve. After a long look around him and seeing no one in sight he disappeared among the bushes and began his search. He found the deep ditch at once, but though he hunted every foot of it there was no sign of the trunk.

After leaving the ditch the boy began searching the bushes. He did not believe that the trunk could be thrown over forty feet from the railroad tracks, but before he got through searching he was hunting a hundred feet away. He searched for a long two hours, but he was no better off than when he began.

Then he sat down and thought how silly he had been to hope that he might find it. The farmer who had and he saw that she was motherly and good-natured.

"Are you a peddler?" she asked as he came up and made her a bow.

"Yes'm."

"And do you right past houses where they want to buy?"

"You must excuse me, ma'am, but I was thinking about something else. I have got pins, needles, thread, buttons and lots of other things."

"La me, but you are a small boy to be peddling around the country. I want half a dozen things. I've got 'em a every time he's gone to town, but he is a great hand to forge."

"While she was selecting what she wanted she was also talking, and by the time she had made her purchases she knew all about Pete.

When he told her about being in jail she exclaimed:

"Why, that jailor's wife is my own sister Martha! How curious! So she was good to you? Of course she was. It runs in the family. Now, I want to show you that I can be good to you too. It's almost night and you might as well stop with us. I shan't charge you a cent for supper, lodgings and breakfast, and I think that father and hired man will each buy a pair of suspenders and a knife of you. It's no use for you to say no, for you've got to stay. I want father to hear about Constable Lukens and the jail from your own lips."

Hunting about in the ditch and bushes for the lost trunk had been fatiguing for Pete, and as it was late in the afternoon he was very glad to accept the invitation to stay all night. After a bit the woman said to him:

THERE WAS THE LOST HAIR TRUNK.

been called to assist the tramp would have naturally come back afterward to look about, or if he hadn't he had told many people about the accident, and they had stopped to look the ground over. The trunk might have been well hidden by the bushes in Summer, but when Winter came to take the leaves off it would certainly be exposed.

The question now was who was most likely to have taken the trunk away? As there was no one but farmers living around there it was natural to conclude that one of them had. If so, what excuse could the boy make to buy it or overhaul it? He could think of none, and the chances of Miss Mims getting his papers back and getting the best of the gang of land speculators appeared pretty slim.

Pete did not give up the search until he had put in another hour. Then he picked up his tin box and moved on, very much disappointed and thinking the only thing to do was to hurry back to Johnsonville and notify Mr. Mims and come back with him. He was passing a farmhouse without calling when a woman shouted and beckoned to him. She was standing on the steps as he came up.

"I never saw a boy yet that didn't like custard pie, and if you'll help me a little I'll have one for supper. You go to the barn and hunt the eggs and I'll make the pie."

Pete set off laughing and entered the barn. The door stood open, and as he entered a hen jumped off her nest with a cackle and fed between his feet. When he looked up there was the lost hair trunk before him. It stood on a barrel and was full of hay and the hens had made a nest there. There was the calico cover, there was the star made of brass-headed tacks—there was the thing that Miss Mims had told him of and which had given him so much trouble. One corner was broken, and the lid hung down by one thing, but the body of the trunk was all right. Pete stood and stared as if seeing a ghost.

It was five minutes before the lad could pluck up courage to advance, and then it was on tip-toe. There was a nest in the trunk, and in the nest were three fresh eggs. The hay was soon lifted out, and Mr. Mims had told him how the false bottom could be lifted out, and presently it was clear of the trunk and the boy had the precious maps and papers in his hands. He crept up to its very steps.

One late September evening there were two boys all alone in the signal station, twin nephews of the officer in charge, for in those days the signal service was under army regulations. Their uncle had taken a hurried trip to town on the little government boat, the Ordnance, and had promised to be back on the return trip, but here to it was eight o'clock, with no sign of him, and hands. They were almost as clean and new as when deposited there some time before.

"Can't you find any a-g's?" called the woman from the house.

"Yes, here they are!" replied Pete as he stepped to the door and held up the three eggs.

He hustled around for a minute and found three more, and then taking off his cap he carried them to the house and ran back as if for more.

"These will be enough, boy," called the woman, but he was after something more precious than eggs and did not seem to hear her.

The false bottom was thickly replaced in the trunk and the hay restored, but the papers were placed in an inside pocket of Pete's coat. When he realized how the search was over at last, and how queerly everything had come about, he grew weak in the knees and had to be supported. He knew that he must look pale and he strolled in the orchard for half an hour before returning to the house.

HOW THE HEAD APPRENTICE STARTED HIS GARDEN.

BY SARAH NOBLE-IVES.

Illustrated by the Author.

The Head Apprentice finally had all the parts of the Earth adjusted and in running order. It moved gracefully around the sun on its elliptical orbit; it had its day and night, and the sun, moon and stars to light it. Its axis was well greased, its lateral fires banked so they could pop to the surface only through certain chimneys called volcanoes. Its water system was near perfection, its winds were modulated and tamed so they only ran riot occasionally; the whole machinery was ready—for something.

ed in the top of the box. Then he strode wrathfully away. He said the Earth and the seeds and everything else might go hang for all he cared. On he walked, and pretty soon he came to the valley where the chest had first loitered open. He rubbed his eyes and stared with all his might! Could this be the same bare brown mold where the lonesome little springs trickled and lost themselves and came together again to form lonesome little rivers? Everywhere a soft green carpet was spreading; tiny green sprigs poked their heads above the brown soil or struggled out of

HE SAT ON THE CHEST AND PONDERED.

But for what? The Head Apprentice got out his diary that he always kept, and looked back over his notes at some instructions given him several ages ago, and found a word, blurred and yellowed: "Seeds. What he was to do with them had become obliterated, but he knew at once that this was the key to the situation—he must get some seeds.

So he made a trip to that dear old place where he could find everything he needed—the Garret of the Universe—and poked around in the Chamber of Forgotten Things until he came upon a great chest labeled "Assorted Seeds." Swinging this over his shoulder by a rope he returned to Earth. He landed with a thump which made the lid burst over a trifle, and some of the seeds dropped out into the hands of a curious little wind who happened near. He caught the tiny things, and with a roguish laugh sent them flying broadcast just before the Head Apprentice could give him a sound box on the ear.

The chest was locked fast again, and the Head Apprentice realized that the time had come for him to decide what he should do with the seeds. He sat on the chest and pondered, and tried to remember his instructions, but they had gone from him long ago.

He decided to experiment. First he carried the chest to the far side of a great brown valley and hid it in a deep cave, but nothing came of it. Then he set it on the top of a high mountain where it rocked back and forth with the breath of the east, but nothing came of that either. Then he lowered it deep into the ocean, and still nothing came of it. The seeds hid away in the great chest were dry and safe, and they budded their red, white and brown bodies together, and did nothing.

Then the Head Apprentice lost his patience with the apparently good-for-nothing things, and with one stroke of his ponderous fist he smashed rock crevices; they buried their feet deep in the welcoming mold and washed their slender toes-lets in the brooks; here and there taller green things shot up, brave with a crown of feathery fronds.

The Head Apprentice stood as if in a dream. He never took his eyes off the spot for two years. By that time the valley was hidden by a promising young forest. Then all at once it came to him. That resally young wind had scattered the seeds that had fallen out of the chest and the soil they were transformed into the forest. He was only a Head Apprentice after all, following the instructions given him; to what end he had never known before.

But now he knew. With a bound he started back to the despised chest of seeds. He called all the winds from the North, South, East and West, and with laden hands he sent them forth all over the land.

And the scattered seeds, obedient to the voice of nature, hid in the earth and drank of its moisture. They germinated, sprouted and came forth, living, green and beautiful. They grew, blossomed and perfected new seed. Great trees rose, tall and wonderful, there was a lavishness of production such as we shall never see in this age—for the earth was still warm, tropical, lavish. Forests were found deep under the soil, blackened and hardened and turned into coal.

But that was afterwards. In the meanwhile the Head Apprentice rejoiced in the beauty of the blooming earth, and the earth rejoiced in her own loveliness.

THE TREASURE OF THE LOST BARK.

This is a story of Sandy Hook, which, along with other things, is a very important signal station for the city of New York. There are also a ship in it, a lighthouse that stood dark one night, and a little yellow, rickety building, which was a school for the boys of the station. The yellow house was the signal station, and the cables were there because of the fierce sea which, in time of storm crept up to its very steps.

One late September evening there were two boys all alone in the signal station, twin nephews of the officer in charge, for in those days the signal service was under army regulations. Their uncle had taken a hurried trip to town on the little government boat, the Ordnance, and had promised to be back on the return trip, but here to it was eight o'clock, with no sign of him, and hands. there were indications of a furious storm to come. . . . of the boys watching a fast creeping blanket of black cloud from a window. "It's going to be a corker."

"You bet," returned the other, and then they both hoped that a vessel laden with treasure would be wrecked right in front of the station, and had been a little fishing smack one

"GUY, I SEE SOMETHING!"

DICKEY AND THE OLD-FASHIONED GIANT

"No," roared Dickey. "I won't read nasty Jack the Giant Killer. It's an old-fashioned, baby book. I want that." And Dickey made a desperate effort to snatch the Automobile Demon out of his twin sister's hands.

Mabel protested loudly, holding fast to the new book. Dickey had read a chapter of the Automobile Demon, and it was now her turn.

"It was for both of us," she cried at last—for Dickey had the book now. "Uncle George said so," and finding this serious argument useless, Mabel's lamentations woke the house.

Hearing the dreadful noise mamma came in, and the testimony bearing against him, Dickey was soon lying in bed, which, very properly, the prison cell of little boys who snatch and pinch sisters.

But to put on hateful calico pajamas and go to bed in broad afternoon is very painful. And when you feel that the world is full of injustice, really heart-breaking.

Dickey went softly for a long time, thinking mamma should remember he was an hour older than Mabel. Then he began to hope the pinch wouldn't leave a black and blue mark. And then—it seemed curious—he began thinking about giant books. Jack the Giant Killer had always seemed very nice before. Even the bad giants had been nice, really delicious.

"Oh, wish," thought Dickey suddenly, "I wish—"

He stopped thinking, with his mouth open, for there at the foot of the bed was the nicest, biggest giant in the whole world.

"Good morning," he said very pleasantly, though it was afternoon. "Do you like my new automobile clothes?"

"Chaufeurs," guessed Dickey, sure and Dickey began to fear he had been indiscreet, to acknowledge intimacy with Jack, who had been the greatest giant slayer the world had ever known.

"New mind," said the visitor who plainly read his feelings. "Jack had his good points. He begged too much and made all my family out towards; but if it hadn't been for him Posterity would never have heard of us. Do you know what Posterity is?"

Dickey shook his head, blushing painfully, for he was ashamed to acknowledge that he didn't always understand the big words even after he had spelled them out.

"It's something to eat," said the giant gravely. "All the demon automobiles carry it in their lunch baskets. Oh, that reminds me, I haven't had my supper."

He jumped up, and hauling out a great hamper Dickey hadn't seen before, took out a huge plate and piled it full of wiggling things that looked, somehow, familiar.

"Just wait," he said then, and after he had tucked a napkin as big as twelve sheets under his chin he put all the wiggling things in his mouth at once and swallowed them at a gulp. It was a splendid sight; really magisterially still. Dickey looked shocked. For at last he had seen them were chauffeurs—live chauffeurs, and leather coats and goggles and boots all went down.

"Can't you cough 'em up again?" he asked anxiously. The giant shook his head, he sighed. He sat silent for a moment, and then, with another wink—still a very gloomy wink somehow—"Do you know what they were?" he inquired.

"Chaufeurs," guessed Dickey, sure

"No," returned Dickey very frankly, for it seemed dreadful to see giants without blue tunics, and bare red heads and strapped sandals and spiked clubs.

"Why did you do it?" he asked reproachfully at last.

"You see," explained the guest, coming back to the bed, "we've got to pretend to get in any sort of a book now. Npbody will buy stories with bad old-fashioned giants any more, and nobody cares a cent about magic harps and seven-league boots and hens that lay golden eggs. Even the children turn against us. There was a boy named Dickey, an intimate friend of mine, who—"

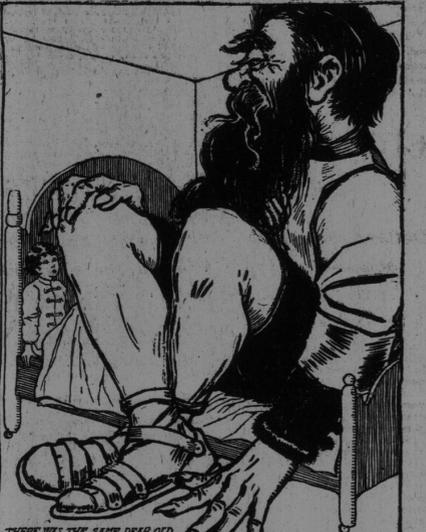

Here the giant gave a sob of such intense misery, and Dickey's own emotions were so great, that (the truth must be told) Dickey awoke. Only Mabel was there, sitting in the giant's old place, and sweetly holding up the Automobile Demon at the second chapter. But Dickey said very politely that he didn't wish it just yet. He wanted to think a minute more of poor, lonely, old-fashioned giants, that nobody would put in books any more, and that could only sneak around in dreams pitifully disguised as chauffeurs.

marvelous revelation, for the bundle was a baby, a tiny dimpled child of perhaps a year old, lashed to a bit of plank and covered with white sail-cloth, one end of which the sturdy kick had displaced. Moreover, it was a baby little the worse for its salt voyage. The little face, quickly uncovered, wrinkled up as if for a burst of tears, then blue eyes, fat cheeks and rosy mouth all smiled. It was a very nice baby—and it seemed to think it saw two very nice boys.

The next morning, at break of day, Uncle Louis returned wild with anxiety for his nephews, to find the piratical pair feeding a fat, laughing baby girl hot water and condensed milk quite neatly from a spoon.

He scolded tremendously when he heard of the perilous night spent outside the Signal Station, and told of a little German bark which had gone down in the very sight of the life-savers with every soul on board.

"All but the treasure," said Lawrence a little bashfully. "And since it's live treasure," but in Guy generously, "we can't have it."

They were the proudest in Christendom when the story of their dangerous feat went the rounds of the Hook.

"Only," said Uncle Louis peremptorily, "don't repeat it, for there isn't any chance in the world that the sea will cast up another baby."

As for the little storm-wait itself, it proved to be a passenger on the very bark that had gone down. Whoever lashed it to the plank and so saved its life will never be known; but the little German mother who came to claim it from New York, declared that the holy being must have been her sister, who was bringing the child to her from Germany. Lawrence and Guy shared in her tearful blessings, and kissed the baby quite sadly with the last good-bye.

"It was just as good as a box of doubloons," said Lawrence.

"Better," said Guy.

GEORGE W. FOWLER M. P. ON STAND YESTERDAY

Declares Investigation Was Inspired by Political Spite—He Will Tell Who Got the $55,000—Lively Attack on Mr. Shepley—The Kings M. P. is Defiant.

Toronto, Oct. 12—How George W. Fowler, M. P., and other men with whom he was associated, Pope and Bennett, obtained possession of valuable lands in the northwest was an important feature of the evidence before the insurance commission this morning. Geo. W. Fowler, M. P., was called and Mr. Shepley explained that the witness had been absent at great inconvenience to the investigation. He moved for a writ of attachment, indicating such punishment as might be thought proper by the court. A summons had been issued on September 5 and served on September 10. Mr. Fowler made a lengthy reply, explaining that his private business was pressing. He did not think he would be called upon so early, but in any event he had sacrificed private interests to get to Toronto as soon as possible. Then again he had been delayed from time to time on the return trip. Chairman MacTavish, of the commission, intimated that he would make no order at present. Mr. Fowler was instructed to remain in court. Dr. Cronhyatka was again called and allowed a seat in front of the commission during his testimony. Mr. Shepley said it had been stated by Mr. Fowler that 100 shares of Great West Land Company's stock was invested in witness' name. However, the doctor replied that such a statement was erroneous. McGilivray had asked him to attend a meeting of the company, but the doctor said he had stated that he could not do so, not being a member. It was then he had been told that he was a shareholder. He had never attended a meeting. Mr. Shepley then asked about two payments received by Cronhyatka in respect of certain Ontario lands, these payments being $1,250 and $2,000 respectively. He had not been informed of such receipts until he had returned from abroad in April, 1914, when Dr. Montague intimated that such payments had been made from the Montague estate. Witness said he gave instructions that this amount go to the Forsters' Home. That year they had not thought it advisable to draw any money from the order for the home, but there were private sums sent. He had never inquired into the $1,250 from the Union Trust Company. "I was assured by Dr. Montague that these moneys were profits from my share in the Montague land deal," said Cronhyatka. The doctor desired to make a statement refuting the allegation that he was an exceedingly wealthy man. He said he had spent $100,000 in improvement to Forsters' Island. Last year he had decided the whole property over to give the management absolute isolation for children. He had a house on the island, as had also his son and daughter. After their deaths the whole property became absolutely the property of the I. O. F. "My income today is just my salary," said the doctor. "Everything outside of that when a piece of property was sold, the vendor did not require to tell about everything he owned. He said the Forsters made a good deal of money out of it all, anyway. Mr. Fowler said if he had represented the schedule presented as the original one it would have been improper, but such had not been done. Shepley produced the opinion given by Fowler to the syndicate, together with the schedule of lands, which was revised in Fowler's handwriting. Mr. Fowler said he did not know that the Union Trust Company was interested until the assignment was made. Pope and he had bought out the other people whom they had to finance, but he could not say whether this was before or after the transfer of June 23. Personally he knew nothing about the payment of any commission, to officers of the C. P. R. Mr. Fowler said there was no truth in the statement that he was an agent of the Union Trust Company in the purchase of the Kamloops Lumber Company. He had taken over the Shields-Ryan property before the bargain was made with the Union Trust Company. He admitted that Ryan had given him two options—one at $200,000 and another at $200,000 for the property. Later the price for the property, which was eventually sold to the Union Trust Company, was agreed upon between Ryan and himself at $170,000. There was a second option on the property at $225,000, which was above to the Union Trust Company. When asked regarding the property of this procedure, Mr. Fowler said that he put the property before the purchaser at a certain price, the purchaser had it examined and was satisfied to take it at that price. That this price was justified was shown by the fact that the property has since been sold at a large profit. "Would you believe it to be proper if you were approaching a man with an offer of partnership in a property you owned to lead him to believe that you paid more for the property than it actually cost you?" "I say I believe it perfectly right to approach a man if I owned this property and put it in at any figure which was reasonable and which would allow a margin and that it would not be necessary to state what I gave for the property." "Did you tell them you had an option for a greater figure?" "Of course they saw it." "Would you tell them you were getting it at a less figure than named in that option?" "Of course I did not." "Did you intend them to believe you were paying a higher figure?" "I did not care what they thought. If they had asked me I would have told them I expected them to pay a higher figure, certainly." Mr. Fowler, who protested that he was answering Mr. Shepley's questions truthfully, he was required to admit that he did not show the contract with Ryan at the lower figure to the Union Trust Company. Mr. Fowler refused to say whether Ryan had paid over to him $50,000 difference between two options and whether that was a private matter between them. Ultimately Fowler bowed to the ruling of the Commission and agreed to look at the matter up and give the information Mr. Shepley asked for. When Mr. Shepley asked for details regarding the disposition of the $55,000, Mr. Fowler made another vigorous protest against being compelled to discuss private affairs, and emphatically denied that he was the agent of the Trust Company in the transaction. Shepley read the evidence of Fowler and Bennett, who stated that they regarded Fowler as the agent for the Trust Company. Mr. Fowler persisted that his statements were entirely true and that he did not intend to discuss the matter with anyone. Mr. Fowler persisted in his refusal and complained with some indignation that the conduct of the general manager of the bank had been examined and it had been found that he was the person who had bought a trifling present for his family. This present was a watch and a pair of cufflinks. "We appeared to have got back to the days of the six chambers and the subpoenaed witness had come here when subpoenaed and given us the information to which we are entitled," said Mr. Shepley's comment. "I have perfectly well I would be here. The whole thing was a grand stand play, so far as we are concerned. I want Mr. Shepley to understand that the end of this is that the whole truth with reference to the investigation of the I. O. F. has been found on because, forthwith, there were some Conservative members of parliament connected with this thing. That is why lands at less than $3.50, because of taking such a large block of land. Afterwards they made a formal application for the land, this being done by the C. P. R. Mr. Fowler said Pope had introduced him. The reply to the application was raised from $3.50 an acre to $5. After that they saw Sir Thomas Shaughnessy again about the price, saying they didn't see why they should have been turned down. Sir Thomas said in a short while Griffin would be in Montreal, and the matter would then be discussed. Mr. Fowler wanted the terms changed from six payments to ten payments, but Sir Thomas would not change the terms. Witness knew of no formal agreement. There were 300,000 acres out of which they had right to select 200,000. Afterwards Griffin became possessed of a knowledge of the route of the Canadian Northern, and took away a portion of the option, but there still were 200,000 acres left. Mr. Fowler stated that during their interview with the C. P. R. president they felt under no obligation to tell of the Canadian Northern route. It was before the beginning of the year 1903 that they (Pope and witness) went west to select the lands. They did not go up to the lands themselves, but the selection was made from other information. About 200,000 acres were selected and Fowler thought the marked map had been sent to the C. P. R. officials. Again witness stated he had no knowledge of a written contract. Mr. Fowler said when they were called upon to make the first payment of $20,000 each, he and Bennett, each put up $20,000 as preliminary expenses. They were brought into the original syndicate during the time the negotiations were being made. "We expected to dispose of this land before we had fully paid for it," remarked Mr. Fowler. When the first payment of $20,000 was made by the ten men, Peachen was away and Bennett assumed a knowledge of the $20,000. They "financed" Peachen's portion. MacKenzie & Mann endorsed notes near the prospective Canadian Northern railway as possible, and they saw D. D. Mann shortly afterwards in Toronto. The latter told them the better way was to go up there and see the survey. However, the map was produced, and the route indicated, though not in their presence. They subsequently received the map, though they did not know who marked the route upon it. He knew of no suggestion as to this meeting of any proffered help at the hands of MacKenzie & Mann. "Tell me of the arrangement with MacKenzie & Mann," said Mr. Shepley. Fowler, however, gave an indirect answer, hinting that he knew of no arrangement. Then we went to Montreal and saw the president of the C. P. R., Sir Thomas Shaughnessy," said Fowler. They told him that they wanted to purchase C. P. R. lands, and he referred them to Land Commissioner Griffin. "He said he would take a hand in the arrangement of the price," said Mr. Fowler. Mr. Shepley called this a "threat," but Fowler thought it better defined an "intimidation." They understood this was a threat, but Fowler could not remember none. After luncheon Mr. Fowler told of negotiations for the sale of the land with a syndicate composed of Wilson and Foster. He did not remember any dealings with McGilivray. Though this property sold at a profit of $1 an acre, he did not tell the purchasers that he and his partners had retained a portion. Mr. Shepley pressed for an answer as to whether this keeping the purchases separate was done for the purpose of the syndicate or not, but Mr. Fowler said so far as he was concerned he had no intention in the matter. He refused to differentiate between the comparative values of the lands sold and those retained. Mr. Fowler did not recall but one set of agreements between the syndicate and the C. P. R., and Mr. Shepley produced a document to which was attached a schedule of lands totalling 150,000 acres out of the original 200,000 acres purchased from the C. P. R. Then there followed a heated argument between Messrs. Fowler and Shepley regarding the purpose of the Pope-Fowler syndicate in keeping the holdings separate. Schedule shown the purchases some 7,000 acres of land originally bought from the C. P. R. Mr. Fowler thought the transaction had been fair, and he advanced the argument you (shaking his finger at Shepley) are making this a social issue, I am not finding fault with your honors respecting the matter. The public are talking and commenting on the difference between the conduct of the officers in carrying on the principal financial backer of the Liberal party in this country. At this point Chairman MacTavish interposed with the suggestion that it would be better to go back to the question before the commission and Fowler resumed his argument why Shepley should not press the question. He expressed doubt whether the commission could punish him for refusing to answer under the circumstances. The commission ruled finally that Mr. Fowler must give the information to which Mr. Shepley was entitled. It was impossible for Mr. Fowler to give it off hand his promise was accepted to attend at Ottawa on 24 hours' notice and give full information in reference to the matter in connection with the Kamloops Shuswap and Okanagan Lumber Companies. The commission adjourned to meet in Montreal Monday at noon.

ONTARIO BANK FORCED TO THE WALL

Toronto, Oct. 12—A financial sensation this evening is the announcement that the Bank of Montreal has purchased the business of the Ontario Bank in Canada, and the larger bank has assumed to pay all the liabilities, depositors and note holders, and also to continue the business. If, after the administration of the assets there is still a surplus it will be divided among the shareholders. The present position of the Ontario Bank forcing them to sell out is the result of stock speculations by the general manager, Charles McGill, who is reported to have been involved in Wall Street. The bank has a capital stock of $1,500,000, and a rest fund of $700,000. It is suggested that there will be no rest fund left on liquidation. The city newspaper offices have been besieged by anxious depositors, who have been pleased to assure them that their money is safe. The matter of prosecutions is entirely in the hands of the bank's solicitors. It is absolutely impossible to secure details tonight. Mr. McGill cannot be located by the reporter, and has not been seen at his room at the King Edward. The total loss can at best be only conjectured, but to force the bank into its present condition for the good of the business. If it is gone, as is feared, the figures may run out to $1,000,000. Some time ago, it is understood, negotiations were opened for the purchase of the Ontario Bank by the Bank of Montreal, which came to no result. Later the Royal Bank opened negotiations, and it was understood that in the course of the latter bank's examination of the Ontario Bank's affairs the irregularities were discovered. The president of the Ontario Bank, G. R. R. Cookburn, who was then in England, was called to return, and arrived home about a fortnight ago. At his home the directors of the Ontario Bank appear to have been entirely ignorant of the extensive speculation with the bank's funds, the conduct of the general manager in brokerage and financial circles. But what the bank's funds were involved to the extent, now suspected, did not seem possible.

Sold Everywhere in The Great Dominion WESTERN CANADA FLOUR MILLS CO., Limited Mills at Winnipeg, Oshawa and Brandon.

So far as can be learned the speculation was mostly in New York stock market. That under the recent market conditions any speculation should have lost the sums now talked of seems so improbable to the onlooker that the belief is current that these speculations have extended down a term of years. That the directors themselves, who are honorable men, have been completely deceived about the bank's position is shown by their actions in increasing the dividend rate last spring from six to seven per cent. Halifax, Oct. 12—(Special)—Nova Scotians hold 782 shares of the Ontario Bank which is reported to be in difficulties. At a par valuation these would be worth $78,200 and at the recent market price of 12 1/2 the value would be $100,000. Ten shares were sold in Halifax yesterday. The Tariff Changes (Montreal Star) "The 'Street' continues to discuss tariff changes, and while it is extremely doubtful if there is any authentic information floating around on the subject the feeling is that there will be a few changes in a higher direction. The Dominion Textile interests are anxious to get a little more protection on white and grey cottons. It is not needed now so much, because English and U. S. concerns are busy supplying the home demand. But when the lean edge is off the present boom it is believed that Canada will again figure as a substantial market. The Steel Companies, on the other hand, are well satisfied with the duty on rails, which eliminates the foreign article. But they want an extension of the bounties to put them more firmly on their feet, and the Dominion Steel Co. could stand some protection on the articles manufactured from tods, which would give the rail mill a new lease of life. The feeling is that the bounties will be extended for at least two years. Robert Wisely, the director of the public works department, has purchased Hillcrest, on Mount Pleasant, which was formerly the residence of the late Fred T. Stephens.
