What About the Hartland and Miramichi Railway

DEAR EDITOR: Permit me to direct your attention to a matter of no small importance to the people of this section and the county generally. I refer to a line of railway from Hartland to meet the G. T. P. at the Miramichi river.

It is appalling to one interested in the prosperity of the country to visit the settlements more remote from the river and notice the absence of so many of the leading men who have left for the west taking capital the accumulations of a lifetime and weakening to that extent the financial status of the county, beside the loss of the produce of their own labor.

There is here a spirit of discontent so great that unless something is done speedily to restrain this migration one of the most naturally valuable sections of the province is bound to become again a wilderness where the former generation, with stoic fortitude, prepared the excellent farms and pleasant homes of the present.

The children of those pioneers bear an entirely different attitude.
The universal advancement of man has seized them. Where the old folks were content to live and die for a promise they seek those conveniences the age has produced, and when denied them, take themselves to lands where such are provided. It is necessity rather than style that commands the change.

The business of the farmer is essentially that of barter and exchange. Hence the market is the most important factor.

In the day of our fathers less produce was raised, higher prices were maintained, there was less traffic to the river for the same amount of cash value, and those were palmy days for markets.
They had the lumber camps of the Nashwaak and Miramichi to supply with remuneration sufficient to pay for the long distance.

In our own recollection we know of instances when 120 loaded teams passed Foreston in one day for the lumber region of the Miramichi. That market is gone.
The building of the G. T. P. has wiped out the possibility even if former conditions prevailed; and today when the prices are low with increased products to haul the distance takes all the profit coming to the farmer and his produce about pays for the raising and he and his family have to live on the promise of a better scheme of things.

It was from a promise to build a line of railway that induced the early settlers to penetrate the wilderness and we may say, unfortunately, that railway project since known as the Intercolonial, was constructed where it has caused successive Governments no small deficit each year, excepting
two. Mr. James R. Hartley whose name is revered in this province was the chief promoter of the Central and under his direction a survey was made from Fredericton through this territory to the Tobique river and any engineer is challenged to produce a better natural route for a railway for the same length in miles in this province. It might have been feasible agitation when conflicting minds met concerning the location of the route of the G.
T. P. to have taken a route between the present one and the St. John valley by the Hartley survey into the Capitol of the province and into St. John.

To have such extensive connection is past forever, yet there is no reason since a portion of the valley of the Becaguimac is within the Hartley survey, to follow that stream with an equally even descent to the town of Hartland.

The old question has been repeated: Will it pay? I would ask does a railway develop the country, or the country the railway traffic? One may answer both affirmatively, and as the country develops the traffic will develop and we cannot reason the amount of traffic on the present production. It will be more than doubled. There is from an agricultural view-point, thousands of acres of the best land under the sun yet unbroken. Vacant land to the rear of these settlements to provide farms for hundreds of families; settlements deserted, to say nothing of the miles of forest land suitable for agriculture.

The product of the forest within reach of the line is enough to pay for the cost of the road (an electric road as contemplated in the scheme.)

What benefit do you think the town of Hartland would derive?
I think it would be so brisk that no one would criticize you for printing a T. Eaton ad; and if this railway does not become a warped fact before five years you will see a branch line built from the G. T. P. to Glassville and the trade of this back country directed into other channels.

If the people stand together
this scheme may yet materialize.
One man in the county of York built and equipped ten miles of railway with only the aid received from the Government subsidies.
That road today is earning $1000 of a surplus annually.

I would ask you why the scheme was dropped? If the charter of incorporation was passed upon, why cannot the survey be made; and if there are no funds for the two or three thousand dollars it will cost, cannot some arrangements be made with the local government whereby sufficient security may be given to induce men of capital?

When the people of the St.
John Valley with the advantage one railway can secure, guarantee funds for another, surely the people of this back country are entitled to some means of transportation. At least for shame sake give us the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table.

On Friday last, at noon, lightning struck a barn belonging to Albright Belyea of Ashland. One rafter and a beam were split and the bolt killed a fine horse and rendered another stone deaf.
Three children were swinging in the barn and the swing-rope was severed, but fortunately the children were no more than slightly shocked. Their escape was miraculous.

The horse killed was six years old and highly valued, while one may not recover from the shock.
The building did not catch fire.

From reliable sources reports come that Grand Falls is soon to have its hopes realized in the de-

Negotiations are being made for the transfer of the Grand

It is believed that a number of place the work of development will soon follow on a very large scale, and pushed to early completion.

TO PROLONG HUMAN LIFE

THE ASSERTION OF A FAMOUS FRENCH SURGEON.

Mycology is the Staff—Promises to Control Three Classes of Diseases.

Dr. Doyen, the eminent Paris surgeon, has just given to the world his great discovery which, he claims, will prolong human life. It was at the international congress of medicine at Budapest a few weeks ago that he made the announcement.

"This discovery," said Dr. Doyen, "was not a happy accident. It is the result of a quarter of a century of labor, obstinately directed along one line. I believe that I was born with a great aptitude for the exact sciences and with a passion for experiment. The experiments that seemed greatest and most impossible always attracted me."

"The surgeon and doctor are placed face to face with the 'microbe' diseases, of which we had only begun to perceive the origin when I was graduated. Among the best-known of these diseases are boils, suppurations, erysipelas and puerperal fever, the microbes of all of which were isolated between 1876 and 1883. I was working hard with other searchers at the period, and in 1882 I went to see Pasteur and confided to him what I had done."

HE WAS IMPRESSED.

and proposed that I should enter his laboratory, but on one condition: 'You will give up surgery and medicine,' he said, 'and send in your resignation to the hospitals.'"

"I did not accept. I had already the fixed opinion that it is from the living invalid that one must seek the cause of infection. I was sure that in the practice of surgery opportunities would present themselves in which I could study the truth much better than I could in a laboratory, where the specimens for study are taken from the contents of tubes and jars and often come from a great distance. Experience proves in many cases that instead of making the researcher immediately in the operating-room, one waits three or four hours, he will learn to his dismay that he can find nothing."

"I had proof from the first day that my method was the right one. I began my researches in 1889 in a little laboratory that I had installed in the Hospital Tenon. Afterward I continued at the Hospital Beaujon. The great object at that time was the discovery of the germ of Asiatic cholera. One day I presented myself to Professor Cornil and said to him: 'Here is a segment of an intestine that seems to me to contain the bacillus virgule of Koch.' The professor examined the contents and found of the bacillus for which he was then seeking. This important step made it possible for me to enter his bacteriological laboratory."

"It was at this time that I resolved not to allow myself to be carried away by a specialty, for observation had taught me that most specialists see through eyes of prejudice, to the great detriment of medical science. My plan to prepare myself for dealing with the particular infections which surgeons meet was to make a serious study of the infections called medical. These medical infections are due to numerous varieties of microbes which have a close relationship to the agents of fermentation of inferior vegetable matter, so I applied myself to the study of alcoholic fermentations, traveling extensively in the beer country of Denmark and the wine-producing country of France."

"In 1900 I held the scientific and practical solution of the problem of curing carbuncles and tumors. It was in the course of these researches that I was able to convince myself that I had discovered the method of preventing and curing almost

ALL KNOWN INFECTIONS.

My therapeutic agent I have named mycologyne—that which dissolves germs—a composite of colloids, the name given to substances that are not really soluble. They remain suspended in liquids in such infinitesimal particles that they are invisible. The therapeutic colloids are extracted from ferments; they are not substances that one can class in chemical nomenclature. The colloids of mycologyne had the curious property of causing the rapid destruction of toxins and microbes. Their study is one of rare difficulty. According to my discoveries, there are only about 30 drugs in the old pharmacopoeia that are useful."

Again Dr. Doyen reiterated his statement made at Budapest. "I promise, first, the definite disappearance of most diseases of the respiratory organs; the digestive tract and the skin, by the ingestion and injection of mycologyne; secondly, the disappearance of cancers of the skin and of the accessible cavities by electro-coagulation and vaccination combined—that is to say by the physical agent and the medicine derived from colloids capable of stimulating the phagocytosis."

The concluding words of the doctor were: "I give my discovery free to all civilization."

POLITE JAPANESE POLICE.

Rebuke to Tourists—Originally a Most Aristocratic Body.

The Japanese police, one of whose chiefs has been studying English methods at Scotland Yard with a view to improvements in his own force, was originally the most aristocratic body of the kind in the world, says the London Chronicle.

Its establishment was almost coincident with the Emperor's decree forbidding the wearing of swords. By a stroke of the imperial pen the samurai were deprived of cherished weapons, by which the gentlemen of Japan had been accustomed from immemorial times to advertise their rank. So they went into the police, where it was still possible to carry a sword, and a very formidable weapon it was, being of the two-handed variety.

Perhaps the police twenty years ago were rather ~~too~~ of chopping a prisoner in half instead of arresting him, but they were very expert, and there was seldom any evidence to contradict their own version of the incident.

To people of their own rank and to foreigners they are polite in a degree which would have seemed ludicrous anywhere except in the land of horrors. The writer remembers an incident which illustrates this trait well enough. It was at Osaka during a water festival, and the bridges were kept clear of passengers much in the same way as our own boat race day. A rope at either end guarded by a policeman was sufficient for the purpose.

With the contempt for authority which distinguishes the Englishman abroad, two or three tourists stood on the wrong side of the rope out of the crowd, so as to get a better view, but the policeman was equal to the occasion. With apologetic bows he untied one end of the rope and then fastened it again in front of the foreigners, and they had the good sense to accept the rebuke.

WOOD PAVING DANGERS.

Its Introduction May Explain Increase of Lockjaw Cases.

"Lockjaw has greatly increased since the introduction of wood paving," says the comment recently made by a doctor from the London, England, Hospital, when giving evidence at an inquest concerning a man who fell and cut his nose on a wood-paved street and subsequently died of lockjaw.

"During the last nine or ten years the number of cases of tetanus—or lockjaw—has doubled," this doctor told the London Daily Mirror. "This enormous increase is coincident with the introduction and popularity of wood paving. Tetanus is a very old disease, known in the time of the Greeks, and it emanates from horses. The germs are chiefly found in dust, dry manure, and on the surface of the earth, and will live and thrive under these conditions for many months."

"This is where the wood paving comes in. Wood-paved streets, especially when wet, are extremely slippery, and more productive of falls than the ordinary road surface, for pedestrians as well as for cyclists."

"Again, wood paving, by reason of its powers of absorption, is more likely to harbor tetanus germs than hard stone-faced surfaces."

"Cuts and abrasions caused by falls in the street have become much more common during the last ten years. In many cases tetanus has resulted. A very large percentage of these accidents have occurred on wet, slippery wood paving."

"Tetanus is not absolutely incurable, although quite 90 per cent. of such cases terminate fatally. 'It usually sets in four or five days after the cut or wound has been received; occasionally it does not occur until a fortnight afterwards. In the former case, death almost always ensues; in the latter, the prognosis is more favorable, and some hope of recovery can be entertained."

Somehow we can't see the taint on money that comes our way.

A servant recently sought permission of her mistress to take an afternoon off for the purpose of consulting a dentist with regard to a hollow tooth. Upon her return the mistress said: "Well, Jane, did you have the tooth filled?" "I did, mum." "And what did the dentist fill it with—gold or amalgam?" "I don't know just what it was, mum; but from the way I felt I should think it was thunder and lightning, mum!"

ONE GREAT DAIRY FARM

THE FARMERS OF DENMARK ARE ALL EXPERTS.

Entire Community Co-Operates on Extensive Scale and Get All They Produce.

The Dane has made his land a dairy farm. Denmark is cultivated like a market garden. The chief products are butter, eggs, bacon, poultry and fine stock. Denmark is now exporting to Germany, to England, to South America, and even to the Philippines. Most of the horses and cattle go to Germany. The bulk of the balance of the exports goes to England. The total export trade is approximately $380 for every farm, of which 133,000 of the 250,000 are of less than 13½ acres in extent and have an average size of but 3.6 acres, the average of all the farms being but 43 acres for the entire country. The export business alone amounts to $9 an acre, in addition to the domestic consumption, as well as the support of the farmer himself.

HOW IT IS DONE.

How has this been accomplished? By making agriculture a business of the most technical kind. The Danish farmer is an expert. He is also a student. He has studied the breed of horses until he knows what can be raised to the best advantage, and what the German most wants. The same is true of cattle, hogs and chickens. He knows to a nicety just how a cow should be fed to produce the best butter. He knows how to breed the best hogs. He makes his butter and produces his eggs of a uniform quality. And he packs them so that they will please. He insists upon the most exact kind of Government supervision over the slaughter-houses, in order that the reputation of the country may not suffer from an indifferent producer and follows up the least complaint from a foreign market. He has ceased to feed his cattle in the stall all the year round. He has studied their food and uses oil cakes from New Orleans and Japan, and maize from the Continent. Each week there arrives at Copenhagen a steamer from New Orleans laden with oil cakes for feeding. He collects his manure with the greatest care, and saves all the refuse from the co-operative dairy and other establishments for the enrichment of his farm. He is aided in this in countless ways by the State. The State is always at his service. Commissions are sent abroad to study foreign markets and foreign methods. Stock is bred from the best studs and bulls. Chickens are selected for their qualities as egg producers. Soil is studied, and the latest agricultural and dairy implements are bought, either co-operatively or by groups of men in the same village.

RESULTS OF CO-OPERATION.

The other great factor is co-operation. The Danish farmer gets all that he produces—absolutely all. The State owns the railways and protects the farmer from exploitation. And he himself protects all of the processes of production, distribution and exchange. He has eliminated one middleman after another until he is almost as self-contained as was his ancestor of 300 years ago, whose only knowledge of the outside world was gained at the local village fair, where he went to barter his goods. The co-operative movement began with dairying. Up to about 1880 each farmer made his own butter. It was very costly and there was no uniformity in the product. About this time a new device was invented for butter-making. A number of farmers got together and purchased one of the machines. Its success was immediate. Other villages followed. To-day there are 1,087 co-operative dairies, with a membership of 158,000 farmers. There are also 800 other private dairies. Nearly 95 per cent. of the farmers are members of the co-operative dairies, which ship near $1,000,000 worth of butter a week to England. Then the farmers began to use skim milk for feeding their hogs. The bacon business became a by-product. Then they organized co-operative slaughter-houses, which are located in districts. There are now 34 of these co-operative abattoirs, with a membership of 90,000 and an annual business of 1,100,000 hogs.

STAMPED EACH DAY

The Danish co-operative egg export society was the next organization. It was organized in 1895. It now has 57,000 members. The eggs are collected and in a local circle. Then they are sent to larger circles for export. In 1905 the export egg business amounted to $6,600,000. Danish eggs bring fancy prices for they are always fresh. They are better packed than any others, and are carefully graded. By these means the Dane has more than doubled the price which he receives for his butter. He saves the profits which formerly went to the jobber. The same is true of bacon and eggs.

Some years ago there was formed in London a trust to control the bacon industry. It fixed the price to the farmer and the price to the consumer as well. This spelled disaster to the Danish farmer. But he met this danger as he had his former difficulties, by co-operation. He formed a selling agency of his own. The Danish bacon company of London not only destroyed the trust—it insured to the Danish farmer a secure market for his produce. Thus the farmer gets all that his labor produces. He is not despoiled by warehousemen, by railway or other monopoly charges. He gets the full value of his product in dividends at the end of the year, the profits refunded to him being measured by the amount of his output.

The peasant is also his own banker. There are 536 co-operative savings banks in the country. Here the farmer places his savings. Here he goes when he wants a loan. The deposits in 1906 amounted to $208,500,000, and the number of depositors to 1,352,000 (over half of the population), with an average deposit of $154. Now the peasant is talking of organizing a great central bank which will include all of the co-operative societies and all of the LABOR UNIONS AS WELL.

But the co-operative story does not end here. The farmer does his own buying at wholesale. Through these purchasing societies he buys food for his cattle. Almost everything that he consumes comes to him at cost. It is bought by central agencies made up from representatives of local agencies. The goods are then distributed to the stores, one of which is to be found in every village. Thus he gets his agricultural implements. Thus he buys his food and all his supplies. He saves the profits of the jobber and the retail dealer for himself. The turnover of the purchasing societies in 1907 was $17,500,000.

As was before stated, there is no illiteracy in Denmark. School attendance is compulsory up to the age of 14. This is usually followed by a period of from three to four years, when the children work on the farm. Above the elementary schools are the high schools. They are privately organized, but practically all of them receive aid from the State. The courses are of five months' duration. The boys attend in the Winter and the girls in the Summer. The tuition is small and the students live in the schools. The schools are very eclectic, and there is no necessary uniformity in the courses. And there are no examinations. All of them emphasize history, especially Danish history. Literature is taught, as are bookkeeping, business and everything of value on the farm. There are 48 of such schools in the country. They are in a sense patriotic institutions. They cannot be compared to the American high school or the German gymnasium. They are an indigenous product.

Along with these high schools are the agricultural colleges, of which there are 20. They give a very thorough course in all of the things that relate to Danish agriculture. They also are aided by the State. It is through these high schools and agricultural colleges that the Dane is educated. There are over 6,000 students in attendance. The boys are trained in agricultural chemistry, in stock breeding, in seeds, in the management of co-operative establishments. In addition, an immense amount of what might be termed extension work is going on all of the time. There are lectures and circle work. Excursions are made to Copenhagen and elsewhere, while the co-operative societies have special text-books for the use of the farmers. The papers and the magazines are universally read, while constant political and agricultural meetings are being held.

GIPSIES LEAVE GOOD SCENT

Easy for Bloodhound to Run Them Down.

Bloodhounds are not always successful in the chase of criminals. The truth is their powers have been foolishly exaggerated, but a story comes from Marlborough, England, of a dog of this breed, who is evidently all that has ever been written of his type.

THE NUMBER SEVEN.

The Numerous Queer Beliefs Concerning It.

Numerous are the queer beliefs concerning the number seven. From the very earliest ages the seven great planets were known and ruled this world and the dwellers in it, and their number entered into every conceivable matter that concerned man. There are seven days in the week, "seven holes in the head, for the master stars are seven," seven ages both for man and the world in which he lives. There are seven colors in the spectrum and seven notes in the diatonic octave, and the "leading" note of the scale is the seventh. Be it noted that the seventh son is not always gifted with beneficent powers. In Portugal he is believed to be subject to the powers of darkness and to be compelled every Saturday evening to assume the likeness of an ass.

A BOND OF SYMPATHY.

"Mr. Gidsmore," began the young man, "when you proposed to your wife—or to the estimable lady who is now Mrs. Gidsmore—did she tell you to ask her for this?"

"She did, my boy," affably replied Mr. Gidsmore.

"And did you try to shirk the job?"

"Well, come to think of it, I did. I—I believe I tried to get her to do the asking. Ha, ha."

"And when you did ask him—of course, you had to speak to him finally—"

"Of course, I did—of course."

"And when you did ask him, did your knees shake, and was your tongue dry, and did you have stage fright generally?"

"It was scared to death."

"Well, that's the way I feel. I told Gladys I knew I could find some mutual bond of sympathy between us when I came to tell you that she has promised to marry me!"

VOICES GOING UP.

Noise and Chatter of Streets Cause of High Pitch.

There are evidences that the high pitched voices supposed to be characteristic of America are becoming equally characteristic of London. A retired colonel, who has just returned to London after an absence of thirty years, declares that the Englishman's voice has changed from a deep, heavy tone to a shrill whistling. Men who are hale and hearty, deep chested and bearded, charged with authority and carrying enormous responsibilities, surprise him by talking in high, raspy tones which do not in the least match their appearance.

He attributes the gradual change in voice to the present noise and clatter of London streets, the roar of underground and tube trains and traces it to the law of evolution, or mankind adapting itself to its environment. He admits that perhaps his ear is particularly keen as he has been living among the people of the mountains and of the plains in both India and Africa, where the male voice is always deep and resonant.

As recently as 1887 forgery was punishable by death in Great Britain.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-stove will do anything, from heating a kettle of water to cooking a course dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down—and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

GOOD BLOOD GOOD HEALTH

Just a Little More Rich, Red Blood
Cures Most Ailments.

The lack of sufficient red, healthy blood doesn't end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are the tired, languid, run down folk who never have a bit of enjoyment in life. Food does not nourish; there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache, sometimes fainting fits and always nervousness. If anaemia or bloodlessness be neglected too long a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more blood cures all these troubles. Just more rich, red blood; then, abundant health and vitality and pleasure in life. To get more blood the remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. No other medicine increases the blood supply so quickly or so surely. The cure actually begins with the first dose, though naturally it is not noticeable. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been doing this over and over again in Canada for years. This is why thousands of people always have a good word to say about this medicine. The following is the experience of one of the many who praise this medicine. Mrs. J. J. Thibodeau, Bathurst Village, N. B., says: "Some years ago while teaching school I became so run down that I could hardly walk. My breath was short and I had failed in weight and lost color. I had to rest several times on my way to school and during school hours it took more than all my strength to fulfill my duty. My doctor advised me to give up teaching and take a long rest. But at this time a friend persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got six boxes. I hadn't finished the first box when I felt a little better and by the time I had used the six boxes I was fully recovered and enjoying the best of health. At a later date I was troubled with eczema and my faith in Pink Pills led me to try them again, and I was not disappointed, as they cured this trouble also. I can't praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too much for they have done me a power of good."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LONDON ORGAN GRINDERS.

One pound a day is said to be the most that an organ-grinder ever takes, while, with some exceptions, 5s is about the least, so that a London organ-grinder may be regarded as a fairly prosperous man. An organ can be hired from the makers for 1s. 6d. a day, while the price of a new organ is £25. The cost of setting an organ to new tunes is about £4, and, since novelty is essential, this is a frequent source of expense.

ANOTHER QUEER SMOKE.

The Potato Stem a Source of Danger to Those Addicted to It.

"Even worse than opium smoking is the smoking of the dried stems of the ordinary field potato," said the doctor. "The potato vine is a poisonous growth. The apple, or seed, which grows on the potato and looks like a small, underground green tomato, which it is in fact, for the potato and tomato are blood cousins, is especially potent in its baleful effects if one smokes it. Usually the vice starts in boyhood days on the farm, when the youngster of the family steals his father's pipe and hides with it and some matches down behind the garden fence or behind the barn next to the field potatoes. He doesn't dare to take up the straight tobacco, but he tries out some dried potato stem in the pipe.

"The smoke sets the experimenter into a delicious dreamy state at first, but the heart action accelerates in a minute or two in an effort to throw off the poison through the lungs and skin. The dreamy state quickly disappears, the face gets flushed and the heart action rapidly increases to severe palpitation.

"If the dose has been large the victim feels a wild, fierce elation that impels him to action of any kind. In this state he may do anything, but the stage is reached much more quickly than with alcoholic liquors.

"The eyes become blind and clouded. The pupil dilates as though belladonna had been applied. The motor centres are affected and there is paralysis of the lower limbs, and the smoker's face gets pale, while drops of sweat stand out.

"At this stage the heart action weakens and there is either stupor or syncope, in which the victim of the potato poison lies practically paralyzed and unable to move, while his brain is in an insane whirl. This represents the height of the intoxication, and it is followed by acute depression and melancholia and a slow return of the physical powers.

"The potato stem smoke speedily draws a victim down. He grows pale, is gaunt and emaciated, ends up with violent acute mania, usually with homicidal tendencies.

"I only had one case of the kind. A lad of 16 caught the habit trying to find a substitute for tobacco. He only lasted about three years. There wasn't anything that could be done for him.

"This young chap couldn't be restrained or changed from the potato stem craving, by any of the usual drugs. He was kept in bed, roped down, during the maniacal stage that he went through. Morphine didn't seem to do any good. The moment he was freed, after recovering somewhat, he would make a rush for the nearest potato vines, trying to get and smoke the stems, which he secreted in many places cunningly hidden."

HARDEST FOR HIM.

"What was the hardest question the teacher asked you to-day?" asked the serious-minded pupil.

"Whether I preferred to take a licking or a note home," answered the scapegoat.

Baby's Own Tablets are good for all children, from the feeble baby whose life seems to hang by a thread to the sturdy well-grown child whose digestive organs occasionally get out of order. These Tablets promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles and make sickly, ailing children, well and strong. Mrs. H. LONDON'S WATER SUPPLY.

The Metropolitan Water Board of London, Eng., is considering a scheme to extend the water supply as a cost of thirty million dollars. It is proposed to construct enormous reservoirs in the Upper Thames Valley. These works when completed will afford thirty-five gallons per head per day for a population of twelve million souls, which London is expected to reach in 1941.

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM.

Yarmouth, N.S., June 2, 1908. "I have been bothered with Rheumatism for the past year and have taken a good many kinds of medicine and found no relief for it. One day a friend advised me to try Gin Pills, so I did, and after taking only one box of them, I felt like a new man. I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know how thankful I feel for the relief they gave me, and would advise all sufferers from Rheumatism to get Gin Pills."

FORCE OF HABIT.

"Why did you break your engagement with that school teacher?" asked the friend.

"If I failed to show up at her house every evening, she expected me to bring a written excuse signed by my mother."

"Halloa, James, what an enormous cigar you are smoking! It must be a foot long!" "Over a foot. I have this kind specially made for me. My doctor has ordered me to smoke only one cigar a day, and I always do as he tells me."

LAY FOR WEEKS AT DEATH'S DOOR

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
CURED MRS. THOMPSON'S
DROPSY.

It Started with Backache and Grew Worse Till the Doctor Said She Must Die.

Holt, Ont., May 16. (Special).—All the countryside here is ringing with the wonderful cure of Mrs. Samuel Thompson, who lay at the point of death for weeks, swollen with dropsy so that the doctor five different times decided to tap her, but desisted because, as her husband said, "It might be better to let her die in peace." After the doctor had given her up Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Mrs. Thompson's terrible trouble started with pain in the back. She grew worse and the doctor treated her for jaundice for eight weeks. Then her feet and legs began to swell, and it was realized that dropsy was the trouble. For seven months she suffered. The doctor said there was no hope; she must die.

As a last resort Dodd's Kidney Pills were tried. The improvement was slow, but gradually her strength came back. To-day Mrs. Thompson is a well woman. She says, and the country-side knows, she owes her life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

If the disease is of the Kidneys, or from the Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

HIS REASON.

"Why do you always leave the house, James, when I begin to sing the old songs?" pouted Mrs. Howlitt.

"Fresh air," said Howlitt.

BANKS AS ROAD BUILDERS

Time and time again in the last two years information has come from the Canadian West indicating that the Chartered Canadian Banks are playing no small part in the development of our Western territory.

Repeatedly we have heard of the Banks going into new districts with the first settlers—opening up and fostering business connections which have resulted in the rapid growth of the community.

Two of the latest instances of this have been shown in the establishment of Branches of the Farmers Bank at Fort George, B. C., and Stewart, B. C. Fort George is half way between Prince Rupert and Edmonton on the projected line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. It is attracting attention on account of its favorable location, and present indications would point to its being one of the large cities of Northern British Columbia. Stewart, B. C., is within two miles of Portland City, the place in British Columbia where the recent wonderful Silver strike was made.

The latter town is attracting people from the Western Coast States in large numbers, and a small rush of prospectors into the district is now under way.

Don't kick if people distrust you. Who's to blame?

Pills of Attested Value.—Purmer's Vegetable Pills are the result of careful study of the properties of certain roots and herbs, and the action of such as sedatives and laxatives on the digestive apparatus. The success the compounders have met with attests the value of their work. These pills have been recognized for many years as the best cleansers of the system that can be got. Their excellence was recognized from the first and they grow more popular daily.

MINNICOGANASHENE.

A hard name to pronounce, called locally "Minnicog." This is a picturesque summer resort on one of the largest islands of the Georgian Bay, only 3 1/2 hours run by the Grand Trunk Railway System from the City of Toronto, Canada, and beautifully situated among the 30,000 islands of that territory. Splendid hotel accommodation, good fishing, fine boating and no hay fever. Bass, trout, pickerel and pike abound. For illustrated descriptive matter and all information, write to Mr. J. D. McDonald, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

We feel sorry for a man who hasn't sense enough to make use of his good judgment.

They Cleanse While They Cure.—The Vegetable compounds of which Purmer's Vegetable Pills are composed, mainly dandelion and mandrake, clear the stomach and intestines of deleterious matter and restore the deranged organs to healthful action. Hence they are the best remedy for indigestion available to-day. A trial of them will establish the truth of this assertion and do more to convince the ailing than anything that can be written of these pills.

AS HIS NEIGHBORS SEE HIM.

If he is poor, he is a bad manager. If he is rich, he is dishonest. If he needs credit, he can't get it. If he is prosperous, every one wants to do him a favor. If he is in politics, it's for what he can get. If he is out of politics, you can't place him, and he's no good for his country. If he doesn't give to charity, he's a stingy scoundrel. If he does, it's for show.

If he is actively religious, he is a hypocrite. If he takes no interest in religion, he's a hardened sinner. If he shows affection, he's a soft specimen. If he seems to care for no one, he is cold-blooded. If he dies young, there was a great future ahead of him. If he lives to an old age, he has missed his calling.

'Tis a Marvellous Thing.—When the cures effected by Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil are considered, the speedy and permanent relief it has brought to the suffering wherever it has been used, it must be regarded as a marvellous thing that so potent a medicine should result from the six simple ingredients which enter into its composition. A trial will convince the most skeptical of its healing virtues.

The transition from winter's cold to summer's heat frequently puts a strain upon the system that produces internal complications, always painful and often serious. COUNTY COUNCIL bound to pay the money to the treasurer.

The Council passed a resolution giving him (Hartley) authority to pay out to Mr. Colpitts money for the payment of witnesses and constables as long as there was a surplus to the Scott Act account. Now there was no surplus and therefore Mr. Colpitts was here.

Coun Scott thought we should see that the Inspector was supported.

The sec-treas suggested that a committee be appointed to give him instructions as to when he should pay money to the Inspector.

Coun Brittain—I am in favor of stamping out the tariff if it can be done. I would favor the suggestion of the sec-treas.

Coun Smith—I think we should advance Mr. Colpitts the money. Why not give it to him now? However I move that he be appointed to direct the sec-treas as to the amount to be advanced to the prosecution of the act and that the sec-treas act under the directions of the committee in regard to advancing money to the Inspector.

Seconded by Coun Scott.

Coun Perry—That means as regard over drawn accounts.

Sec-Treas—I think so.

Coun Lamont—We engage Mr. Colpitts and we give him a salary of $400. He cannot work without funds. I believe in giving him a free hand. If the act is any good enforce it. If it is not do away with it.

Coun Estey—I am willing to trust the warden and that he appoints the right men on this committee.

Testimonial for Ostrich.

The following is an extract from a letter from J. F. Ryan, manager of the Canadian Bureau of breeding: I firmly believe that in Ostrich we have one of the best sires of the present generation. Furthermore his colts will prove it for the Bend Or blood is the most prepotent in the horse world and the Bend Or qualities are always transmitted to the offspring. The National Bureau would not take ten thousand dollars for Ostrich and I hope your neighbors appreciate the kind of a horse that has been placed with you. I send you his extended pedigree showing the Bend Or blood on both sides. No other horse in Canada can show such blood line.

Yours Very Truly J. F. Ryan

CHAPTER XI.

Regina was now lying on the sofa, exhausted by her frantic struggles. Old Mr. Wallraven beckoned Constant, and between them Wolfgang was lifted, brought near the sofa, and laid upon the carpet, with his head supported as before upon his father's arms. He feebly raised his hand and took hers. At the touch she opened her eyes, and as soon as they fell upon him, with a frenzied cry of anguish and despair, she bounded to her feet, foaming at the mouth, and went into the most violent paroxysm of madness. Constant Wallraven and myself seized and tried to hold her; and while she was struggling, plunging, and screaming in our arms, Wolfgang raised himself upon his elbow, gave one long agonized look upon the wreck, fell back and died!

The next day a coroner's inquest sat in the saloon, and the crowd, collected by the rumor of what had taken place, filled the house. I was the principal witness, and as soon as I had given in my testimony, and was permitted to retire, I wandered toward the chamber whence the terrible screams of the mad bride still issued, filling all the air.

Constant, Constantia, and myself, were constant and unremitting in our attentions to my wretched sister. For two, three, and four days she raved in high delirium, and then sunk, under the united effects of nervous exhaustion and opiates, into a profound stupor.

Upon this second day the remains of the unfortunate Wolfgang were committed to the grave. His funeral was perfectly quiet, attended by his own family and the Davenports.

During all this time, I could realize to myself nothing that had taken or was taking place. I seemed out of myself, in some unreal existence, and, sometimes wildly, desperately, hoped to wake and find it all a hideous dream.

That evening, when we returned from the funeral, I followed Mr. Wallraven to the library.

"Give me," said I, "some explanation of that which has wrecked all our happiness!"

"Be seated," said the old man, himself sinking exhausted into a chair. I sat and waited for him to speak. He leaned his forehead down upon his open palm, and, after a silence of a few minutes, sighed heavily, and said:

"I am unequal, now, to the task of giving you any lengthy detail. Listen then! I married my mother's maid. She was a quadroon girl, brought up at my mother's knee; a simple, gentle child, whose life of chamber seclusion had kept her unspotted from the world; a loving, religious child, whose faith in her Heavenly Father was like a babe's innocent trust in its mother. She had been taught in her childhood almost to worship her 'young master'—the mother's spoiled and willful boy—the idol of the household. She learned in girlhood to love him with all the blind and passionate devotion of her race. I had the power of life and death over her—yes, of eternal life and death—for her life hung upon my love—her integrity upon my honor. The alternative for her was ruin, fame, a broken heart, and the grave; or the marriage ring and benediction. The alternative for me was sin without pity, or infamy without sin—or so it seemed to me in my passionate youth. I chose the latter. I loved her, I married her, and lost caste, I and my children, forever! The whole community recoiled in loathing from us. The minister who united us was ungunned and degraded from his pulpit. Our marriage was declared illegal, and my mother, to oblige me to break the connection, made a will, just before her death, by which she left me Constance and her children, upon condition only of my never freeing them. Upon my attempting to break this condition, they were to become the property of a distant relative. Constance brought me three children—Wolfgang, unhappy boy! and then Constant and Constantia. But they could not be my heirs, because they could not legally hold property. At my death they would have inevitably become the property of others. And the more legal light I brought to bear upon this fact, the more decided was this fact. My other property—the land, negroes, bank stock, hall and mills—I inherited from my father, without restriction. I was unutterably wretched. Constance, seeing the misery of which she had been the innocent cause, fell into a deep melancholy, from which neither the affection of her children nor my own love and unremitting endeavors could arouse her. Her health failed, and she died when Constant and Constantia were but twelve months old. Again I consulted the ablest lawyers in the State, only to be more than ever convinced that there was no possibility of setting aside my mother's will. There was not in all Virginia a father so unhappy as myself. A thousand times I prayed for the death of my children. If one of them fell ill, I watched the progress of his or her illness with extreme anxiety, not fearing they might die, but fearing they might live. Conscience, and not a wish that they should survive, induced me to provide necessary nursing and medical attendance at such time. At last it suddenly occurred to me that I might easily evade the will. It is strange that this expedient never struck me until years of misery had passed; but so it was in my case, and so I have often seen it in the case of others. The remedies for what we conceive to be incurable ills often lie very near us, unseen or neglected. It suddenly struck me that nothing hindered my sending my children, while they were mine, to a foreign country, and transferring my whole property thither. I resolved to do so. My sons were then at college, and my daughter, at boarding-school in the North. I was in robust health, and of a race never subject to illness or sudden death; therefore I felt that there was no occasion for hurry, and I was not in haste to sell, and leave forever my native soil, while my children were receiving their education. I determined, however, to do it upon the first indication of declining health. Well, month slipped after month, and grew into years. Constant returned from Princeton, where he was educated, and commenced the study of divinity as a private pupil of Mr. Davenport. He formed an unhappy attachment, but Constant possessed a strong mind and righteous heart. He struggled with, and conquered his passion, coming out as pure gold from the furnace of his trial. After this experience, I determined to guard my unhappy children from forming indiscreet attachments.

"When Wolfgang returned from Harvard, accompanied by yourself, I saw your sudden admiration of my daughter. I withdrew her from your presence. I warned Wolfgang against the society of young ladies. I knew nothing of your sister, or I never should have consented to his visiting you at your own home. The first knowledge I had of Miss Fairfield was from the letter of Wolfgang that announced his engagement. Without literally telling me so, it was couched in such terms as, with other circumstances, to mislead me into the belief that she knew all! This was not unnatural. I thought to some his infinitesimal proportion of African blood might be no objection—while his many distinguished—pardon me! It was a father's dotage. Wolfgang told me in his letter that his bride had consented to depart with him to France immediately after the marriage ceremony. This afforded me the opportunity I wanted to secure a fortune to my son, by settling it upon Miss Fairfield—to which there could be no legal obstruction. A few weeks before the marriage I received a long letter from Wolfgang, telling me that his Regina, willful as charming, insisted on coming to Hickory Hall, and being introduced to her father-in-law before her departure for France. In this turn of affairs, he requested me to send Constant and Constantia to him, and above all things, to imprison old Nell, whose very sight would appall Regina, and whose extreme boldness and malignity would assuredly instigate her to present herself before the bride."

"But what, then, is the ground of such malignity, and how could one so degraded be in any manner related to one so beautiful, so angelic, as was Constance, judging by your description of her, as well as by a portrait I saw and missed the same night from the walls of my chamber, and which I now suspect to have been hers."

"Yes—it was hers—old Nell stole it that night. She had long watched the small personal effects of Constance, and had watched her opportunity of getting into the closed chamber. You left your door unlocked, and she entered the room, rifled the bureau, and carried off the portrait and had returned, it is likely, to rob you, when a slight sound of her steps attracted Wolfgang, who happened not to have retired, but was in the next room. He followed her into your chamber

MISERABLE WITH DYSPEPSIA

Another Wonderful Cure By That Wonderful Fruit Medicine "Fruit-a-lives."

Mr. Mathias Dery, of 225 Church street, Ottawa, Ont., was treated for years by physicians for Painful Dyspepsia. He spent so much money for doctor's medicines without getting much relief that he had about made up his mind that his case was hopeless.

Seeing "Fruit-a-lives" advertised, however, Mr. Dery thought he would invest 50c in a box of these wonderful fruit juice tablets.

And this famous fruit medicine did for Mr. Dery what all the doctors could not do—it cured him. He writes:—"Fruit-a-lives" positively cured me of severe Dyspepsia, when physicians failed to relieve me. "Fruit-a-lives" makes the stomach sweet and clean, insures sound digestion and regulates bowels, kidneys and skin.

the last time, and arrested her at your bedside. You asked me the cause of Nell's malignity, and expressed astonishment at the idea of her relationship to Constance. She is, really, no blood-relation to Constance or my children.

"She was the step-daughter of Constance's father, and hence the claim to relationship, hence her presumption to a high degree of notice and favor, even while her extreme deformity and her disgusting habits and vices, made her very presence in the meanest capacity insufferable; and hence her envy, hatred, and demoniac malignity. She openly said and swore among her fellows that she would 'kiss her pretty niece.' Upon the night, therefore, that the bridal party was expected, we locked her up in her remote cabin, charging old John with her custody. She escaped, and concealed herself, evidently with the object of seeking and insulting the bride. This gave me only uneasiness, for I supposed Regina at least knew our position; but it filled Wolfgang, who knew, and his brother and sister, who had lately discovered, the illusion under which your unhappy sister had given her hand in marriage, with consternation. While we were seeking the hag elsewhere, she had found her entrance to the house, and found her way to Mrs. Wallraven's presence! You were there! You know better than myself what followed. It is necessary to repeat, however, that there, for the first time, I discovered the concealment that had been used toward the ill-fated lady. I have nothing more to tell. If I have sinned against the conventional usages of the society in which I was born and lived, my whole life has been one long and terrible expiation."

I took his hand and pressed it, and silently withdrew from the room. In the course of a week, I discovered that there was no one who possessed the least moral control over the maniac girl except Constantia. Mr. Wallraven prayed that she should remain at Hickory Hall, when I talked of removing her. In truth, the change from their affectionate though sorrowful care, to that of a lunatic asylum would have been a most unfortunate one for the victim. She had the best medical advice that the country could produce, or wealth could purchase. For more than a year, her malady has constantly increased until it has left her the ruin you see.

I, also, Mary, was nearly blighted when you met, pitied, loved me.

The reading of the manuscript had occupied the whole night. It was sunrise when I folded it up, and began to make my simple morning toilet. Before this was completed a low tap was heard at the door, and to my "come in," Mary entered, apparently just returned from her nightly visit.

She sat down by the fire. "You have been to see Regina Fairfield, at Hickory Hall," said I.

"Yes," she replied. "And she—"

"Died at one this morning—died in her sensus—reborn at turned at the approach of dissolution. She died forgiving all who had a hand in her betrayal and wreck, and praying forgiveness for herself. She died upon Constantia's bosom."

We attended the funeral of Regina Fairfield, which was conducted with great simplicity. We left Cedar Cliff soon after. Upon our return from Virginia we lost sight of the Wallravens of Hickory Hall for many years. We heard frequently by letter from Mary Fairfield and knew that the health and spirits of Ferdinand were gradually improving. In one of her letters to me, Mary mentioned that old Mr. Wallraven had sold the property of Hickory Hall, and left the State, accompanied by his two children. This was the first and last time that Mary ever mentioned them in any of her letters.

THE END.

SALTING NEW BORN BABIES.

In Parts of Asia and Europe Custom is Still Followed.

In certain parts of Asia and Europe the custom of salting newborn babies is still practised. The method varies with the differing nationalities of the peoples employing it. The Armenians of Russia cover the entire skin of the infant with very fine salt. This is left on the body for three hours or more, when it is washed off with warm water.

A mountain tribe of Asia Minor is even more peculiar in this regard than the Armenians, for it is alleged to keep the newborn babies covered with salt for a period of twenty-four hours. The modern Greeks also sprinkle their babies with salt; and even in certain portions of Germany salt is still used on a child at birth.

The mothers imagine that this practice brings health and strength to their offspring, and serves as well to keep away evil spirits.

Judge Giles Baker, of a Pennsylvania county, was likewise cashier of his home bank. A man presented a cheque one day for payment. He was a stranger. His evidence of identification was not satisfactory to the cashier. "Why, judge," said the man, "I've known you to sentence men to be hanged on no better evidence than this!" "Very likely," replied the judge. "But when it comes to letting go of cold cash we have to be mighty careful."

No opinion can help you to heaven if it makes you hate your brother man.

NAME ADDRESS

Canadian Appreciation
Langham Hotel, London.
Gentlemen,—I wish to express my appreciation of the 38 h.p. Daimler which you have delivered to me. Before shipping the car to Canada I made a three weeks' trial of it, covering some 1,800 miles. The car ran perfectly, and I never had the slightest trouble of any kind, and I think it quite lives up to the many claims you make for it. The silence, smoothness of running, and power of acceleration on hills is really remarkable.
My petrol consumption was 16 miles to the gallon, including a great deal of driving in traffic. The tyres show no appreciable signs of wear, and I think it will prove light on tyres.
I am really delighted with the car.—Yours sincerely, (Signed) C. A. BOONE, of Toronto, Canada.

“ONCE AGAIN”

Monday night having come, the small hall in Glenellen Asylum was lit up for the weekly concert for the entertainment of its inmates. Seats were ranged along the sides of the hall for the latter, while the centre was left vacant for dancing. In the front stood a small platform occupied by a few of the local wealthy personages who patronized the hall by their presence. Of the two singers who were to provide entertainment, one was Grace Allenbury, only daughter of the widow who kept the post-office at Glenellen—a little village to the east of the asylum.

In person Grace was tall and dark, with a head of beautiful black hair surmounting a face of somewhat sallow complexion, rendered beautiful and fascinating by a pair of sparkling eyes in whose depths one could see a glowing, steady light.

She sang in the village choir, and had been invited this evening to sing before the poor inmates. Of these she had no misgivings, but the presence of Mr. Stewart, of Glenellen, his friend, Mr. Sampson, from London; Mr. Lamberton, the minister, and the governor made her tremble with excitement. They would be sure to criticize her, she thought.

Though astir rather plainly, she chose to bestow upon her dress made her personality beautiful, as it certainly was attractive.

The evening's proceedings were opened by Mr. Stewart, who, in a few interesting remarks, commented upon the artists of the evening. He then called upon Miss Allenbury to open the programme, so, stepping forward with a smile of exquisite sweetness, she sang “Bonny Woods o’ Craigielea.” Her voice, a rich soprano, now soft, now strong, but always sweet, rose and fell, filling the building with floods of music. The beautiful harmony produced brought her a great ovation, such as one could expect from the blind enthusiasm and appreciation of an audience of half-wits. Immediately after her last note she bowed to the audience and assumed her seat.

The other singer was a gentleman, after whose rendering of “Hail, Smiling Morn,” Miss Allenbury was again called upon to sing. This time she sang with more gentleness and deep pathos the familiar strains of “Home, Sweet Home.” At the end of the first verse several of the inmates were weeping. She continued her voice sweeter and clearer at each note, and when the sound of her voice finally died away she stood looking on the poor hapless inmates, whose souls had been stirred, and now gave expression in tears.

Immediately after she finished a quiet conversation began amongst the occupants of the platform. Miss Allenbury's singing had appealed to them. They recognized a voice that with training might one day captivate cities like London and Paris, and before the evening had passed a definite plan had been formed among them.

When the closing hour came Grace was escorted home by the gardener of the asylum grounds, a young man of tall and powerful build. He had heard his sweetheart sing, and had been thrilled. What flattery he bestowed on her that night! He could not help himself. He had been completely surprised by her performance. The feelings of both heart and soul were extended to her in his earnest commendation of her voice. But Grace was one of those women gifted with a modesty that prevented her pride in her musical talent from giving outward evidences of self-confidence and self-appreciation. She did all she could to make him change the subject and devote the short time at their disposal to less personal matter. Walking home in this way, her sweetheart left her at the door of the house and wandered back to his own house in the asylum grounds.

As for Grace, her mother being in bed, she quietly slipped upstairs to her own small bedroom and lay in bed whispering to the night her idle vagaries on the evening's proceedings and on Ronald Philips, her lover. He had surrounded her with an untiring devotion. He walked her new powers which she had not known she possessed. Indeed, it seemed that she was flowering and blossoming under the influence of love.

So the night passed. In the morning Mrs. Allenbury anxiously greeted her daughter.

“Well, Grace, how did ye get on last night?” she asked.

“Very well, mother; all seemed fairly well pleased,” answered Grace, with her usual modesty.

It was obvious that Mrs. Allenbury, who was a scrupulous lady, inquisitive, and withal selfish, could gain nothing by this line of questioning from a woman of Grace's type; but, unwilling to give it up, she pursued different tactics.

“What big folks were there?” she asked, with apparent indifference.

“Mr. Stewart, of Glenellen, and a friend of his called Mr. Sampson, and the minister. The governor was there too, of course.”

“Ronald would be there?” was the next question from the mother, who leaned back with her eyes fixed on the bottom of her tea-cup as she pretended to swallow the dregs.

“He was, mother. He came home with me.”

“What did he say about your singing—he would be praisin’ ye and sayin’ ye did brilliantly, eh?” She put the question inquisitively, and with some sarcasm that did not fail to sting Grace.

“Yes, he did. He said I did very well,” her daughter replied, sharply.

Conversation then dropped and the usual routine went on. Mrs. Allenbury, as postmistress, attending to her duties at the counter, while Grace set about the household work.

“Mrs. Allenbury, I presume” inquired one of two stout gentlemen who entered.

“Yes, gentlemen, Mrs. Allenbury,” responded the postmistress, in a tone which seemed to show that she was conferring an obligation in imparting this information.

“Well—oh, there’s Miss Allenbury herself,” the one who had spoken ejaculated. “Well, Mrs. Allenbury, we have come to talk to you about your daughter.”

“Grace, you might attend to this counter,” This was her mother's order as two or three customers entered. “Come this way, gentlemen,” and she led them into the parlor. “Now, gentlemen, what have you to say?” as she showed them to seats.

“Well, I may first inform you who we are. This gentleman, Mr. Sampson, is a friend of mine from London. I am Mr. Stewart, of—”

“Of Glenellen,” finished Mrs. Allenbury, snatching at this opportunity of showing her acquaintance with the good gentleman's neighborhood.

“Yes, of Glenellen. You’ve heard of my name before, I see. Mr. Sampson and I were on the platform at the concert in Glenellen Asylum last night and heard your daughter sing, and we have thought it expedient to advise you about your daughter's welfare. She has a brilliant voice, and we—Mr. Sampson and myself—have been discussing its merits, and we are of opinion that with two or three years’ training under masters she would make a brilliant debut in London.”

“Well, sir, but—”

“Don’t interrupt, Mrs. Allenbury, please. I know quite well what you wish to tell me, but Mr. Sampson and myself are willing to club together and provide for your daughter should she show a desire to take advantage of the offer. She would have to go to the Continent and study under several masters there for some years, when, I’ve no doubt, she would return and make London crazy over her voice; and,” he added, as a further attraction, “she would amass a considerable fortune. So we are willing to provide for her.”

“Oh, sir, you’re so kind! It’s what I should like to have done, but you know, I wasn’t able.”

“Yes, yes. We have your permission, then?”

“Yes, sir, with pleasure.”

And so it was there and then arranged that Grace Allenbury was to go to the Continent and study there.

In two months Grace left home for Italy, accompanied to the city of A— by her mother and Ronald.

Her grief at parting was considerable, for never before had she ventured far from home, and, moreover, she was leaving Ronald for a long time. But she would write often, very often, to him, that neither of them might weary. So she determined.

Her daughter away now and on the road to unexpected fortune, Mrs. Allenbury mused over the future and began to build huge castles in the air. She pictured her beautiful daughter married to a peer. But the idea that she loved Ronald sincerely was galling to her. Grace, a prima donna, to marry a gardener! The thought was absurd. What could be done to bring about an estrangement? She had no idea.

A fortnight later she received a letter from her daughter giving details of her journey and temporary settlement in Italy. There was also one in the post-office for Ronald. She held it in her hand with a look of malignant triumph. She recognized her daughter's handwriting. An idea had occurred to her.

This letter was duly delivered to Ronald. How pleased he was! That kind heart would never forget him. He read it again and again. His whole being was thrilled. Carefully he laid it aside in a small drawer. He would preserve it and tell the others to follow, because they were from her. In the course of another week Mrs. Allenbury had dispatched another letter to him from her daughter. The next letter, however, addressed in her daughter's handwriting to him she pondered over, opened it, read it, and then—burned it. A similar fate was in store for all Ronald's letters from Grace.

What was wrong? Had she forgotten him already? He was getting no more letters from her. Why was not his lot. He inquired continually at the post-office if there were no letters for him. “None,” was Mrs. Allenbury's reply, although Grace was still writing asking what was wrong with Ronald. No letters were coming from him now. “What had happened to him?” she kept asking her mother. Her mother replied affectionately that she had been observing Ronald of late. He had probably forgotten her, she ventured to suggest. She had noticed that something was worrying him. At the end of six months, in reply to another earnest inquiry of her daughter's, she wrote that Ronald had resigned his situation as gardener and gone away, nobody knew where.

It was indeed true that he had gone off. Worried and troubled because he got no letters, he became restless. The old spot had no attractions for him now. Work in that district was dreary to him. As often as he passed through the hall in the asylum he was reminded that her singing there was the result of her going away and forgetting him. He felt inclined to go to Italy to see her. But quite possibly she might not be there. She might be in Germany now. Moreover, what was the use of going when she did not want him? Still, he loved her. Her person haunted him. He emigrated to America and wandered through many of the cities of the United States, but he was always restless and depressed.

Indeed, the trouble was now deep-seated. Under the stress of suffering his whole being became transfigured. After remaining about two years in America he returned home to his native land and wandered about the city of A—. The agony of the disease became intolerable, and he indulged in opium to deaden his nerves. The metamorphosis became complete; he wandered about haggard and broken-down. His whole physical frame was apparently wrecked, and it seemed that nothing short of a miracle would put him right again.

In this condition, and probably after indulging in opium, he was found one day in the gutter of a street in the city of A—, raving loudly. Nobody knew him, and he was picked up and removed to the nearest asylum—Glenellen; but nobody knew him there either—he was so much changed. Here he lay for several years, venturing up now and again to listen to the concerts.

Meanwhile Grace Allenbury had completed four years of training and was ready to venture on to the stage. Her name she changed to Mlle. Calona, and she appeared at Covent Garden, where she made a most brilliant debut. She had all London at her feet; offers of extensive engagements poured in upon her. Calona was a name familiar to everyone. After a period in London she toured the provinces, and then went to America—on a two years’ engagement, returning home with a considerable fortune, besides several offers of marriage; to behold once more her native village.

Her mother by this time had given up the post-office and was living in a cosy cottage close by, which had been furnished by her daughter. Her daughter was her boast to everybody, and when Grace showed her the offers of marriage she had received she even ventured to tell her how she had intercepted her letters, thus leaving her a free hand to accept whatever of these offers might be to her liking.

“You know, Grace, I foresaw that you would receive these offers and I knew you would be glad of this help,” her mother explained.

“You did this, mother?” Grace replied, savagely. “You did it for these?” and she tossed them into the fire. “No wonder my poor Ronald worried. Oh, Ronald, forgive me!” and she threw herself on a couch and wept bitterly.

Mlle. Calona, despite the efforts of people to flatter her, had much to think about. She had now begun to exclude herself from society and ventured out to nothing, even the concerts in the asylum which she had been invited to attend. However, Mr. Stewart, of Glenellen, pleaded with her one day to sing to the inmates. How could she refuse this man who had done so much for her, or even refuse to sing to the unfortunate inmates? So she consented.

Throughout the asylum it was noised that the great Mlle. Calona had consented to sing to them. Explanations were freely given of her brilliant successes in London, and the hall was adorned as it had never been before. All the inmates were present; some of them reclining on couches, propped up by pillows.

Mr. Stewart presided. He said he would refrain from speaking of Mlle. Calona's merits. Everybody already knew all about her and her name had been particularly emphasized on the programme before them. He would say no more, but call upon Mlle. Calona to sing. She arose, bowed to her audience, and stood up while the accompaniment of Lewin's familiar song, “Once Again,” was being played. She began softly—

I linger round the very spot
Where years ago we met,
With due regard to the harmony
And the ears of her audience, and
As she finished the last couplet of the first stanza—

If you could know that I was true,
And I that you were free,
Her voice became softer and sweeter, continuing so throughout the chorus.

The second and last stanza—
For ever yet my thoughts incline,
And back my memory slips,
I feel warm fingers lock'd in mine,
I see those quivering lips, etc.,

was so touchingly reminiscent. Past scenes and memories flashed through her mind. Thoughts of her she loved bore her on in the song, and gradually her face lit up as she looked upwards. She saw none of her audience. Her face was radiant. The cry in her voice as she finished the stanza—

That all the world was nought to you,
Who only wanted me. Ah!

was one that could only come from one who had been balked by Fate. It was a cry full of pathos. She stretched out her arms; she had quite forgotten the audience; her voice had been borne to other worlds, and she finished the chorus:

Love, once again; meet me once again,
Old love is waking,
Shall it wake in vain, shall it wake in vain?

with such a passion that the very force of her tones thrilled her hearers.

The audience was in a trance, except in the case of a man who lay on a couch haggard and worn, propped up by pillows. During the singing came the words—

“Her voice!” “Her voice!” Ah! but it's Mlle. Calona's! Grace! Grace! Where are you?”

The agony of the man was intense. He worked himself into such a state of excitement that just as Mlle. Calona was in the passion of her appeal he rolled off the couch and was carried away. On inquiring the cause of the commotion, the artist was invited to go and see him. Slowly and quietly she approached the bedside of the young man, who was muttering several incoherent words. Among them could be heard:—

“Her voice—ah! but I’ve been dreaming—”

Here he attempted to raise himself, but fell back exhausted. Mlle. Calona peered forward at him. A cold shudder shook her violently from head to foot.

“My God! Ronald! Ronald!” and she was on her knees at his bedside. The man gave a start. “Her voice again! Could I but find her!”

“Ronald, don’t stare so. Speak to me. I’m here, Grace is here.” He turned sharply upon his elbow with a cry, “Grace! Thank God!” he stretched out his arms to embrace her, but fell back, fainting.

The singer became alarmed, but the doctor who hurried forward assured her that he had only fainted from the sudden shock, but that her presence would revive him and restore him to health and vigor again. She sat at his bedside, holding his hands between her own, and weeping quietly in spite of herself. When he came to himself again, he ventured to whisper a few words to her, while she on her part was inclined to pet him.

“Ronald, the doctor says you’ll get well again. Won’t you?” and she smiled through her tears. “You’ll get well again and be my—”

“Yes, Grace,” and he lay back, falling into a much-needed sleep.—London Tit-Bits.

AMUSING HER.

“Yes, our little four-year-old is such a comfort, and such a help to me,” said Mrs. Ritchie to a lady caller. “Why, he can take care of his baby sister as well as any nurse. He is in the next room now, playing with little Dorothy. I’ll call him—Walter!”

“Yeth, ma.”

“Are you taking care of little sister?”

“Yeth, ma.”

“What are you doing, Walter?”

SELECTED RECIPES.

Lemon and Banana Sherbet.—To the juice of two lemons and the pulp of two bananas add one quart of milk and two cups of sugar. Freeze.

Red and Green Salad.—Choose large, firm tomatoes, one for each person to be served. Scoop out the centers, and in the cups thus formed place asparagus tips arranged in small sheaves. Put the tomatoes in the ice-chest until they are thoroughly cold, and serve on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing, arranged either on individual plates or in a salad dish.

Rhubarb Conserve.—Use five pounds of rhubarb cut in small pieces; put in a bowl, cover with five pounds of sugar, and let stand overnight. Cut in small pieces one and one-half pounds of figs; pour boiling water over them when the rhubarb is ready to use. Pour water off again at once, add figs to the rhubarb, and grate rind and juice of one lemon. Boil about one and one-half hours, until quite thick.

Clove Cookies.—Mix one level teaspoonful of saleratus, one level teaspoonful of salt, one-half level teaspoonful of ginger, and two level teaspoonfuls of clove. Mix one cupful of molasses, one tablespoonful of vinegar, one-fourth cup of cold water, and one-half cup of melted drippings; add the dry ingredients, and stir in enough flour to make a soft dough. Roll one-fourth inch thick, and bake in a hot oven.

Chops with Jelly Sauce.—Cut the round of meat from each chop on a loin of lamb. With a toothpick, fasten a thin slice of bacon round each piece of meat. Cook in a spider with no fat but that which comes from the bacon. Serve on rounds of toast, with a sauce made of one glass of currant jelly, one dessertspoonful of vinegar and one-half cup of water; heated together. Be sure the sauce is served after the meat reaches the table.

Real Scotch Scones.—Level one pound of flour in a bowl; scoop a hole in the center of it, and put in one teaspoonful of soda; one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and one cup of buttermilk, or as much as is needed to make the flour into the consistency of common dough. Roll this to the thickness of an inch; cut out the scones with a tumbler; lay them on a griddle, which has been heated and rubbed with butter, and keep turning them until they are a rich brown on each side.

Rhubarb Tarts.—Make a rich pastry of three cups of flour, one cup of lard and one-half teaspoonful of salt, with enough ice-water to mix it. Roll and cut into tarts, and bake a light brown. Make a rhubarb sauce of two cups of rhubarb, washed and cut into inch pieces, and stewed slowly with sugar to taste. When done fill the tarts. Make a boiled frosting as follows: One cup of sugar and one-fourth of a cup of hot water, boiled until it thickens—about eight minutes. Pour slowly on the white of an egg which has been beaten stiff. Put the frosting over the rhubarb filling, allowing an edge of the sauce to show.

Celeriac Chicken.—Cook three and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter with one teaspoonful of finely chopped onion until the onion becomes yellow, stirring to prevent burning; add one tablespoonful of corn-starch and stir until smooth, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one and one-half cups of chicken stock—the liquid in which chicken or fowl has been cooked. Bring to boiling-point, and add one-half teaspoonful of lemon-juice, three-fourths teaspoonful of salt, a dash of paprika, one-half cup of celery cut in small pieces, one and one-half cups of chopped chicken. Serve hot on toast and garnish with celery tops.

Indian Curry.—Cut into squares one pound of meat—veal, mutton, chicken or duck—and stew it with two ounces of raisins in a pint of water until it is tender. Cut up one large apple and two large onions, and fry them with a quarter of a pound of butter in a saucepan until brown; then stir in the gravy from the meat and raisins, and boil for fifteen minutes. Put the mixture through a sieve; return it to the saucepan with the meat and raisins; add a dessertspoonful of curry powder, the juice of half a lemon, and a pinch of salt, and boil for ten minutes. Serve very hot with dry, boiled rice—not mixed with the curry, but in a separate dish.

PIES.

Pineapple Cream Pie.—Crust part—Take one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, one cupful of flour with one teaspoonful of baking powder sifted in, one whole egg; mix butter and sugar till light; gradually add flour and baking powder, lastly the beaten egg; butter your tin and press dough into it, as it cannot be rolled, and bake till done. Cream filling—Mix one cupful of sugar, one-third cupful of flour, a pinch of salt, add two eggs slightly beaten and pour on gradually one and three-fourths cupfuls of scalded milk; cook fifteen minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly; when cold add one pint can of grated pineapple drained of its juices. Meringue—Two well beaten whites of eggs; add one cupful of rellied powdered sugar, and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla; instantly set in a hot oven to brown.

Apple Pie.—Line a pie tin with a rich crust. Peel and slice into it, until it sounds up a little, good scur apples. Cover with a crust. Do not make holes in it nor pinch it down around the edge. Bake a rich brown. When done run a knife between the crusts and throw back the top crust. It will not break. Now put into the apples a cup of sugar and butter the size of a hickory nut and mix it all together and smooth it out even; grate a little nutmeg on the top. Now put your top crust back on the pie and it is ready. You can make this pie when you start your dinner. It is better served warm. You can use evaporated apples just as well, choosing the very light colored ones, as these are sour and cooking them in a tightly covered basin until tender. Have water enough to make them quite moist.

PINEAPPLE.

Although pineapples are obtainable all the year, their palatableness and desirable qualities make them an especially welcome addition to the spring dietary. A few well recommended recipes follow.

Pineapple Chips.—Peel and trim a pineapple, cut in slices one-quarter inch thick, weigh and allow half their weight of sugar. Put in a hot oven, sprinkle sugar between slices and let stand two days. Turn into a preserving pan, simmer till pineapple looks clear, taking care not to burn it. Next day dry slices in a cool oven and when cold pack in airtight tins with white paper between each layer. Keep in a cool, dry place.

Baked Pineapple.—Pare and core pineapples, cut in slices half an inch thick. Fill some wide-mouthed glass bottles with fruit, cover with cold syrup (made by boiling three pounds of sugar and two pints of water for ten minutes), cork bottles loosely and wrap in wisps of hay. Place bottles on a large boiler, with enough water to reach the necks, bring to boiling point, boil half an hour. Take bottles from water, cork and seal securely.

DESSERTS.

Orange Jelly.—One and one-half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin, one-half cupful of cold water, one cupful boiling water, two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of orange juice, juice of one lemon, teaspoonful of orange extract or one-half teaspoonful of grated yellow rind of orange rubbed in sugar.

Caramel Pudding.—Two cupfuls golden brown sugar, one and one-quarter cupfuls of water, two heaping teaspoonfuls of cornstarch, butter the size of a hickory nut, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Put the sugar and water in pan and boil. Then add the butter and moistened cornstarch and let boil for three minutes, or till clear. Just before removing from fire add vanilla. Pour in mold or individual dishes and serve cold with whipped cream. This dessert is highly spoken of by all who taste it.

Pineapple Whip.—One-half box granulated gelatin soaked in one pint cold water, one 5 cent can of grated pineapple, one cupful of sugar; heat until at boiling point; add dissolved gelatin. When it jellies, add one quart of cream, whipped.

USEFUL HINTS.

To remove tea stains lay the fabric over a bowl and pour boiling water through it.

Butter that is watery and not well worked must never be used for cake, as it will make it heavy.

If mixed with milk instead of water mustard will not get dry, but will keep nice until it is all used up.

A good way to tell when ham is fried enough is by the fat. When the fat is brown (not burnt) the ham is done.

To prevent starched articles sticking to an iron add a pinch of salt and a little lump of lard to the boiled starch.

If a pan smells of onions boil it out with tea leaves; this will make it perfectly clean and sweet smelling again.

Rusty knives can be cleaned by soaking the blades in paraffin oil and then rubbing them with finely powdered ashes.

Burning oil is spread by water. To extinguish it throw down flour, sand or earth. The idea is to prevent the oil's spreading.

When ironing colored garments avoid a very hot iron, as too great heat tends to fade the colors. Iron on the wrong side whenever possible.

COUNTY COUNCIL

COUNCIL BUSINESS.

Coun. Melville asked if the highway board held the money. It was rumored that might not be the case. The warden said there was a misunderstanding about what the commissioner for public works said at the meeting. What he said was he did not know what the committee would do in the disposition of the patronage of the money, but in Northumberland the highway board would have the handling of the money as usual. Council adjourned till 1.30.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

On re-assembling a motion was passed accepting an invitation of the Woodstock Auto Club to take the members of the council for an auto ride this evening.

It was resolved that the meeting of the Good Roads Association be held in the Court House this evening. Coun Phillips read the following report of the building committee:

BUILDING COMMITTEE REPORT.

Woodstock, N. B., June 20, 1910. To the County Council of Car. Co.

Gentlemen: Your Building Committee to whom was entrusted the erection and furnishing of a new Court House in the Town of Woodstock beg to submit the following report:

1. We have attended to the duty imposed upon us and have the said Court House fully completed and furnished with the exception of the grounds, and all the bills are paid except a balance of $65.00 on the furniture and a portion of the cost of grading, etc. the grounds around said Court House which we are unable to mention at this time, but we hope to have almost enough left out of the proceeds of the sale of the debentures to complete the whole work.

2. We have negotiated and sold $31,000 of debentures receiving therefor with accrued interest less discount and exchange the sum of $30,512.26.

3. We have expended to date the sum of $30,370.94 leaving a balance on hand to complete the work of $241.41 which we hope will be sufficient.

4. Out of the above expended to date $10,000 has been expended in repairs to the Record Office or rather in repairs and improvement to same so that the Court House with the addition of the discount and exchange on the bonds, cost complete $30,000, in round numbers. A statement of account is attached.

We trust the work of the committee will prove satisfactory and beg to remain,

Yours Respectfully

H. A. Phillips

Coun Balmmain referred to the chair for the Judge which was the old chair used in the old Court House. It was also requisite he thought that a flag pole should be placed on the grounds. Provisions should be made in this regard.

The sec-tres, speaking regarding the Judge's chair, said the chair, had all arrived excepting five including the Judge's chair which would be here in a few days.

Coun Scott thought we should have a flagstaff and flag; he thought the Court House should be carpeted within the rail anyway and some improvements made.

Coun Scott moved, seconded by Coun Balmmain, that the building committee be empowered to procure a flagstaff, and a flag for the Court House.

Coun Brown said a steel pole would cost about $90 and would be about 90 feet high.

The flag would cost about $25.

Coun Melville spoke of a flag on the building approving the idea.

The sec-tres said that Mr Edgett had told him that it would be a mistake to put the staff on the building as it would stain it and cause a leak.

The sec-tres said the debentures for the new Court House were sold at 96 1/2. The expenses were some $1200. Out of the $31,000 the net proceeds were $30,500.56.

Coun Williams wanted to know if the contractor had any thing more to do with the building. Outside there seemed cleaning and finishing to be done on the brick work.

Mr Hartley said that the building had been given a coat of oil, and he was informed that the weather would do the cleaning up.

It was pointed out that the same condition has occurred in the case of the Methodist church. Time and the weather had clear this up, and it was the case with all the brick buildings.

Mr John McCormac asked leave of the Council to occupy part of the office of Mr Wm Connell, the Clerk of the peace. He was Registrar of births, marriages and deaths, and as such, made the request.

The matter was referred to the building committee.

Coun Phillips had no objections to this but he did object to the furniture now in the office. He thought if Mr Connell had an office he should put in suitable furniture.

Coun Balmmain moved, seconded by Coun Perry, that officials using the rooms of the Court House as offices must put in furniture in keeping with the surrounding. Carried.

Mr Colpitts, the Scott Act Inspector, was heard. He said that during the last year there has been many cases in which the convicted persons were put in prison. This was according to the requirements of the Council but it meant less revenue and it was also to be borne in mind that the hands of irresponsible people, who did not have much of this world's goods. He would leave it with the Council as to granting some funds for carrying on this work.

Coun Melville—How many third offence have you had the last six months?

The Inspector—I think it was only three.

Coun Melville—Did they go to jail?

Inspector—I think one of them was in York County; one went away to Aroostook; the other went to jail for awhile and then became sick and was let out on a doctors certificate.

Coun Melville—Keeping them in jail is no expense to you.

Inspector—No, but there is no money coming into the treasury.

Coun Williams—Do you know how you stand now with the county?

Inspector—There is a deficit. I don't know what it would be.

Coun Scott—Have you anybody in jail now.

Inspector—No.

Coun Britain—How do you find two constables, Green and Stockford, who are working for you. What kind of service do they give?

Inspector—Very good.

Coun Britain—Are they making any seizures?

Inspector—They are ready to make one now.

Coun Britain—How are they to disposing—to their own use?

Inspector—I think I can satisfy you that is not the case. I would not keep such men if I knew he did that.

Mr Hartley explained that some years ago Mr Colpitts got no money from the treasury, but he was not
