Owns Up to Forgeries Totaling $500,000.

LONDON, Aug. 24.-Ernest Hansberger, the Dundee jute merchant who was arrested a month ago on charges of having forged bills for £80,000 on Scotch banks and for £20,000 on continental banks, was arraigned for trial today. When called upon to plead he admitted he was guilty of forgeries amounting to $560,000. Sentence was postponed.

The Czar in Poor Health.

BERLIN, Aug. 24.-An additional reason given here for the countermanding by the Czar of the order for the Russian army maneuvers at Smolensk is that the Czar's physicians have expressed a very strong wish that his Majesty should subject himself to as little fatigue as possible because of the unsatisfactory condition of his California Fruit in London.

London, Aug. 24.-An auction sale of the first large shipment of Californian fruit brought to this country by the steamer Paris Between 250 Hoboes and a Force was held at Covent Garden today. All parts of England were represented. Most of the fruit was found to be in such condition that it was necessary to dispose of it within 48 hours of the time of its arrival. This was the result to its having been picked too late and packed too lightly. The market was poor.

Suggests Comic Opera. LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Government has received a dispatch confirming the report that the British consul at Bluefields, Mr. Hatch, has been arrested and imprisoned by Nicaraguans. The Standard, commenting, says: "Despite the fact that the offense is of the gravest nature, the idea of Nicaragua's defying Great Britain, also the way in which Mr. Hatch informed the officers of his departure suggests the comic opera. We may be confident that the United States will not hesitate to support a demand for satisfaction for this outrage." The Boers' Victory.

CAPE Town, Aug. 24 .- Pretoria dispatches of Aug. 7 have been received here, giving a detailed account of the surrender of Kaffir Chief Malaboch to the Boers. Under cover of a flag of truce Malaboch, with seven companions, among them his two sons and brother, came out from the caves in which they had been hiding and voluntarily surrendered. Malaboch twice attempted to kill himself after giving himself up by throwing himself into a camp fire, but failed both times. He was, however badly burned. One of his companions was subsequently shot dead while endeavoring to escape. Great satisfaction is felt throughout the Transvaal at Malaboch's provement Company's coal mines at Franklin, 34 miles from this city, at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Already 37 dead bodies have been recovered from the mine, and it is known that many others are imprisoned in the fiery furnace. The number is as yet only a matter of conjecture, and it is probable that none will escape. ANOTHER.

PLATTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 24.-At 12:30 p.m. an explosion of gas took place in the workings of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company's colliery at Gilberton, and twelve men were buried in the mine.

The number of killed is not yet known,

ANOTHER ACCOUNT. TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 25.—Yesterday afternoon 37 miners were killed by an explosion in the Oregon Improvement Company's coal mine at Franklin, King county, 34 miles southeast of Seattle. The miners were trying to save the mines from destruction by fire when the explosion took place. Those who rushed to the gangway when the fire was discovered escaped. Several of those caught were not instantly killed, and a desperate attempt was at once made by their comrades to rescue them from the flames. The entire mining community of Franklin aided to flood slope 62, in which the bodies of the miners lay.

Franklin is a coal mining town on the west slope of the Cascade Mountains, and the usual heartrending scenes were enacted about the entrance of the mines when a list of the killed and missing was made out. This is the mining district into which colored miners were brought two years ago, resulting in a running fight with the strikers and several deaths. Negro and Swede miners predominate among those killed. Most of them had families.

When the bodies of the dead miners were reached many were found to be in line as if simultaneously overcome by stifling smoke. Some had been smothered and were not cut or even bruised. All were dead before assistance reached them. It is reported that all the men in the breast reached the In all, about 70 men were at work in the sixth level north. Of that number about 40 were at work in breast 62, where the fire broke out. Several of those who lingered at the burning breast 62, took warning and fled, but all who remained were overcome and asphyxiated.

At 3 o'clock the last of the 37 bodies was recovered and then the people began to quiet down. Many of them were completely prostrated with their violent grief, The origin of the fire in breast 62 is supposed to be due to spontaneous combustion caused by refuse and screenings in the bottom of the breast slacking and catching fire. The mines will be sealed. There is a good deal of black damp in the mine, and when the air supply is shut off the black damp will put out the fire. It is believed that in three months the fire will have become completely extinguished.

BATTLE IN BUFFALO

of Policemen.

Twenty-Seven Persons Injured so That Nine Were Taken to a Hospital.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 24 .- Sheriff Taggart's posse of 25 men, assisted by fifteen policemen put to flight Count Rybadewski's army of 250 hoboes this afternoon after a pitched battle, in which 25 hoboes and two deputy sheriffs were injured. Nine hoboes were so badly hurt that it was necessary to take them to the hospital. The count and 150 of his followers have been placed under arrest, the count being held for assault in the second degree, for which he can receive five years imprisonment.

The list of injured is as follows: Albert Vogel, aged 33, of Illinois; Joseph Cavert, Buffalo; Thos. Mankoski, Chicago, very bad wound on head; John Mennicoski, either way. The time from the Needles South Bend, Ind.; Fred Mengus, Chicago; to Sandy Hook lightship was 6 days, 8 Stanislaus Caperlo, Chicago; W. J. Wojei-chowsky, Cleveland; H. Lusser, Chicago; Samuel Rosen, Chicago, left leg tilled with buckshot, also scalp wound; Levi Spencer, deputy sheriff, scalp plowed by bullet; George Taylor, deputy sheriff, bad scalp wound. A score of others had their heads cut open by policemen's clubs, and were treated on the spot by the ambulance physicians. The count himself was badly cut under the eye by the fist of a deputy sheriff. The battle occurred by 5 o'clock this evening. Sheriff Taggart had notified the count to move on, as the three days allowed him had expired. The count sent back word that he "spit" on Sheriff Taggart's notice, and would remain as long as he pleased.

Sheriff Taggart swore in 25 deputies and put himself at their head and set out to disperse the army. He arrived at the camp and placed the count and his lieutenants under arrest, and started with him for Justice Forster's court, half a mile away, where they were to be tried. The army, numbering 250 men, fell in behind the prisoners. When they arrived at the court house the count was permitted to speak to some of his followers. He addressed them in Polish, and before the sheriff could interfere the crowd had closed in around the count and he was beyond the reach of the sheriff. The army formed a hollow square around the count, and swinging their clubs around their heads defied the sheriff to take him. With only 30 men the sheriff was nonplussed for a moment. It was outside the city limits and the police stationed 100 feet away could not legally interfere. Sheriff Taggart the lines a Pole struck at him and the deputy knocked him senseless. "Come on," cried Police Capt. Killen to qued their clubs, the deputies their revolvers and clubs and the count's champions both clubs and revolvers. In fifteen minutes the fight was over and 25 Coxeyites with broken heads were groaning on the ground. Rosen, of Chicago, shot Deputy Sheriff Spencer, the bullet plowing its way through Spencer's scalp. Deputy John O'Brien, a well-known newspaper man, who was armed with a shoton through the product of the produc shotgun, turned it on Rosen, and the contents lodged in his leg. His injuries are the most serious. Sheriff Taggart arrested 65 of the Coxeyites. All were convicted as tramps and sentenced each to 30 days in the penitentiary. The police have arrested as many more, who will be tried tomorrow. The count was badly handled and bruised. He will be held for the grand jury.

Hill's Anti-Anarchist Measure Amended and Objected To,

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 24 .- Another uccessful effort was made in the House today to pass the Hill bill for the exclusion and deportation of alien Anarchists. An amendment has been agreed upon by the advocates of the measure and those members who had previously antagonized it, defining an Anarchist to be a person wh advocates the destruction by force of all government, or of the Government of the United States. This satisfied the objections heretofore made, but Mr. English (Democrat, N. J.) entered an objection, and the bill again went over this time, probably finally for this session. The Treasury net balance gained $2,500,-000 today, standing at the close of business at $125,243,000. The gold reserve increased nearly $200,000, footing up now $54,553,000.

CANADA'S DEAD SON.

The News of Mr. Fraser's Death at Home-The Remains Removed. BROCKVILLE, Aug. 24 .- The town of Brockville has seldem been thrilled by a greater shock than it was this morning on the receipt of the news that the Hon. C. F. Fraser had died in Toronto during the night. He was one of Brockville's most gifted sons, and all classes of the community unite in mourning the loss of one so eminent and so hightly respected. Dr. Moor, a strong personal friend of the deceased and his doctor for 24 years, was intrusted with the delicate task of breaking the news to the bereaved widow. Besides his widow, son and daughter he leaves to mourn his loss his aged mother, four sisters and one brother, Mr. O. K. Fraser, barrister. Flags are flying at half mast from all public places, and many private buildings out of respect to the memory of deceased. The funeral will take place Sunday. Work at the asylum has been closed down till after the funeral,

THE REMAINS TAKEN HOME. TORONTO, Aug. 24.—The remains of the late Hon. C. F. Fraser, were taken to Brockville on the G. T. R. train tonight, in charge of Dr. Chamberlain, Mr. M. Wilson, private secretary to the deceased, and Housekeeper O'Brien of the Parliament buildings. At the station tonight, when the train went out with the remains, were Sir Oliver and several Cabinet ministers and a number of other prominent citizens. The Grand Trunk railway has arranged for a special car for friends of the deceased to go from Toronto tomorrow morning to the funeral ceremonies, returning Sunday night, with the privilege of sleeping on poard Saturday night.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 25 .- The body of Hon. C. F. Fraser arrived here this morning by G. T. R. express. The remains were accompanied by Dr. Chamberlain, Mr. Wilson (late private secretary to Mr. Fraser), Mrs. Delaney and Mrs. Quinn, sisters of the deceased. Dispite the early hour (4 o'clock) a large crowd of citizens were at the station and followed the hearse by procession to the house.

The funeral takes place tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. to St. Francis Xavier Church. Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. Mr. Harcourt, and other members of the Government will come down by special car tonight. Hon. Mr. Harty arrived this morning. Special trains will be run tomorrow for the accommodation of those desirous of attending the funeral.

In accordance with the will of the dead statesman the funeral will be very simple.

Annual Convention in Harrisburg-Grand Master Sargent's Report-The A. R. U. Failure.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 25 .- Grand Master Sargent, of the Brotherhood Locomotive Firemen, has about completed the bi-annual report which he will submit to the brotherhood which opens Sept. 10, at Harrisburg.

He says in part: "There has been falling off in membership of perhaps 4,000 in the past two years, leaving the total at 25,000, yet the order is in a first-class and healthy condition. In my judgment there is no probability that the 25,000 members will consider the proposition which I am informed through the newspapers will be made for the consideration of the various railway labor organizations. "During the past fiscal year we paid 289 claims, each of $1,500, or $413,500 in all. Of these 199 were for death and 90 for disability. The lesson of the A. R. U. strike is that the employe must respect public Northern Steamship Company, en route sentiment and law. Sentiment will be from Collingwood to Mackinac Island, with against you and sure defeat will be the a passage list of 2,000, ran aground on result. Many good men were mixed up in that strike, being carried away by day noon. Passenger steamboats were at the excitement and delusive promises of once dispatched to her but were unable to the agitators. These know it now and land the passengers, owing to a telegram will be conservative and unexceptionally from the Grand Haven collector, ordering the careful men hereafter. One recommendation I will make to the convention is to change the constitution so that a brotherhood man cannot belong to another railroad order, excepting, of course, the engineer's brotherhood. The firemen and engineers are one so far as their line of duty is concerned, and we have on our rolls thousands of engineers who did not relinquish their memberships when they were promoted to the other side of the cab.

Nicaragua-Warships to the Rescue. New Orleans, La., Aug. 25.—Advices from Bluefields, Nicaragua, under date of Aug. 19, per steamer Gussie, confirm the story of the arrests of Englishmen and Americans at Bluefields. The Americans arrested were all merchants of prominence. They were threatened with the confiscation of all their property, and it is believed the arrests were made with this end in view. The authorities refused to state the charges against them or to bring them to trial. The other day the cruiser Mohawk steamed up alongside the Columbia, and after a conference between the commanders both put out to sea. It is said to be the purpose to intercept and rescue the prisoners on their way to Greytown.

INTERESTING TO INSURANCE MEN

Suit Against the Great Western Life Assurance Company for $10,000. Hamilton, Aug. 24 .- Walker & Phelps, on behalf of David Blackly, today issued a writ of summons against the Great Western Life Assurance Company, of Winnipeg. The suit is an interesting one and will be closely followed by insurance men. The action is for $10,000, the amount of a policy held by Mr. Blackly on the life of the late John Taylor, of Toronto. The policy was issued only a year ago, and at that time Mr. Taylor was considered a good risk, but in January last the company claimed that untrue statements had been made in application, and they notified the parties that the policy was canceled. The company insisted on a full yearly premium being paid, which was resisted, Mr. Blackly being willing to pay only for the time actually insured. The company sued and gained their point. Three months later Taylor died suddenly, and the present action will determine whether or not the policy was in force at the date of his death.

SAD SEQUEL TO "SKYLARKING." Death of Young McMillan, Who Was Shot With a Charge of Shoenails.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Aug. 24 .- As was reported yesterday, William Mo-Millan, of Wood Islands, and one or two others visited the house of a crusty old bachelor named James McNeil at that place at a late hour on Wednesday night, and so annoved him by their actions that he fired a gun at them while they were skylarking in the yard. The gun was loaded with sparables, and the charge lodged in McMillan's abdomen, causing a terrible wound.

McMillan lingered in great agony till this forenoon, when he died. He was 25 years of age and McNeil is upwards of 85. An inquest will be held this evening. No arrest has been made up to the time of telegraphing.

"A PLEASANT PLACE."

Grand Bend Justly Entitled to Be so

At Least That is What Visitors Say Who Have Epjoyed Summer Helidays There.

One of the most pleasant places within easy distance of the city at which to spend the holidays is Grand Band, situated about 40 miles away on the shore of beautiful Lake Huron, easily and cheaply accessible either via G. T. R. to Exeter or Parkhill, thence by stage sixteen miles from the former and twelve miles from the latter. A person leaving Lendon by the 8:15 a.m. train, L., H. and B. P., can change at Lucan crossing for Parkhill or go direct to Exeter, as from either places stages run regularly to the Bend, or livery rigs can be hired at reasonable rates. The grounds are pleasantly shaded with pine, spruce and oak trees, while bunches of the beautiful juniper and other shrubs are growing profusely around, thus giving the place a very park-like and inviting appearance. The bathing is unexcelled, the shore being low and the beach of fine gravel and pebbles, with a lake bottom of soft velvet-like sand, while the water increases so gradually in depth as to make it perfectly safe for even small children to go out a considerable distance before getting beyond their depth, there being no dangerous holes to entrap the most inex-

Boating may be indulged in ad libitum on the lake or River Sauble, which enters the lake at this point, so that weather does not prohibit that delightful and healthful pastime. The disciples of Isaac Walton can also "hunt the finny tribe" to their heart's content, either in lake or river. Cottages may be rented for the season or less time, or lots can be leased and cottages

Somerville and family; Dr. Hotson and family; J. H. Dickson and family; Joseph Marshall, M.P.P., and family, who own a cottage; Mrs. Albert Pearson and family; Miss Lynch and Miss Mulvaney, public school teachers; Misses Hodgins, Cannom, Howard and Hersey; Messrs. C. Sifton, T. D. Orme, H. J. Jones, David L. Chapman, John Fried, Alex. Wright and others, whose names just now slip my memory. Other places are also well represented, visitors being present from Montreal, Detroit, Toronto, Exeter, Parkhill, Seaforth, Lucan, Clinton, etc.

Picnic parties from the surrounding towns and villages are almost an everyday occurrence, adding to the pleasures of the situation.

Mr. May, of Parkhill, the newly-appointed principal of Park street school, this city, owns a cottage and boat, and is an enthusiastic camper. He is a genial whole-souled gentleman, and will make a Religious services are not neglected, disorders, with but five bottles of the Nermeetings being held on the grounds, while those so inclined can attend services in the village churches. Fruits and provisions are plentiful, good and cheap, and can be purchased at the village stores or from the farmers. An excellent hotel in the village, and an equally good dining hall on the grounds furnish accommodation to all who Laurier at Mattawa.

Conservatives and Liberals Alike Turn Out En Masse to Honor the Champion of Canada's Best Interests,

MATTAWA, Ont., Aug. 24 .- Nothing could have exceeded in enthusiasm the reception accorded Hon. Wilfrid Laurier on the occasion of his visit to this town. The leader and his party were met at the station last night and heartily welcomed by practically the whole of the citizens without regard to political divisions. The Conservatives generally joined with their Liberal fellow citizens in receiving the distinguished visitor. A torch light procession was formed and accompanied Mr. Laurier to the residence of Mr. John Loughrin, M.P.P. This afternoon Mr. Laurier addressed a large and sympathetic audience in Rankin Park, reviewing the political questions of the day, and appealing to the people to join in the fight for freedom of trade. Addresses were presented to the leader by the French Associations and the French-Canadians of Mattawa. Speeches were also delivered by John McCracken, president of the local Liberal organization; Mr. Loughrin, Thomas Murray, ex-M.P., Messrs. Mulock, Choquette, J. A. Lavesque and Sutherland. The demonstration was entirely successful. Mr. Laurier will speak at Sault Ste. Marie on Monday.

The Injury to Corn Less Than Was Estimated.

Flattering Reception to Hon. Wilfrid | Much Uncertainty Remains, but There Are Healthy, Encouraging Signs-Congressman Wilson's Opinion.

> NEW YORK, Aug. 24 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Changes during the past week have not been definite nor very important. As the President's final decision regarding the new Tariff Bill is assumed to be not yet certainly known, part of the hesitation, which appears may be attributed to the lingering uncertainty which must soon terminate. Other conditions that are not entirely favorable have not at least changed for the worse during the week. The injury to corn is less than many apprehended, but is be-500,000 bushels.

The strike of coke workers and coal miners is ended, and while the lockout of cotton operatives is important, it affects the earnings and livelihood of a much smaller number. The business so long delayed by the tariff bill debate begins to come forward so that transactions in many departments are larger than of late, and on the whole larger than at the time of especial stagnation last year, but it is still too soon to determine how far the satisfaction of postponed demands will set idle hands to work or raise the transactions to nominal volume, but it is a healthy sign that the gain so far is gradual and not some increase in demand for products has appeared. The failures this week number 234 in the United States, against 410 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 20 last year. CHAIRMAN WILSON'S VIEW.

CANADA TO THE FRONT. Bri tish and American Life Insurance Companies Distanced-Remark. able Change in Eighteen Years.

Life insurance has become of such uni versal popularity that only the most careless and non-provident hesitate to avail themselves of it in one way or another. In this year's issue of the Insurance Blue Book, just published, entitled an "Abstract the immense growth of the business of Canadian companies as compared with British and American concerns. Take for illustration the increase of premium income. The following figures show the re-

Therefore, in this respect, our Canadian companies now lead the British companies by 500 per cent., and the American companies by about 100 per cent., whereas eighteen years ago they were about equal with spasmodic. In all the great industries the British and only one half as strong as the American. -South Huron Liberals meet to select a candidate for the House of Commons on Wednesday, Sept. 5, at 11 a.m. That is right. A good candidate cannot do either himself or the cause he advocates justice by entering a contest at the eleventh hour.

-According to Mr. Daly, Minister of the Interior, it is not the intention of the Dominion Government to open Lisgar. What will Mr. A. W. Ross, M.P., do now, poor man? Is the Lieutenant-Governorship to be kept dangling before his eyes Indefinitely, and finally refused him ?

-The absurdity of granting hereditary titles in democratic countries like ours is illustrated in the case of the Robinson family. The first baronet was a celebrated Jurist. He died, and the title went to his son, who held an obscure office in the gift of the Province at Toronto. The grandson now succeeds to the title. He holds even a more ordinary position in a department at Toronto. The title has become an encumbrance to the family. But like the unduly wound up cork leg, it is destined to go on for ever! If these titles were marketable, there would doubtless be a clearing off sale every generation or two.

-Labor Day, which comes on Monday week, will be as much of a holiday as the such. At various points the united labor organizations are arranging for great atherings to demonstrate their strength and unity, and to provide recreation for hemselves, their families and their friends n town and country. The great gatherng for Western Ontario will be held in ondon, and it need scarcely be said hat it promises to be an imposing affair. there will be a monster procesion, games and other competitions well as food of a substantial haracter for the mind. As cheap fares will the order of the day, and London is an imirably situated railway center, it is exected that the visitors to the city on that ay will number many thousands. Lononers should arrange to give them a warm elcome. There is no reason why this city could not be a great excursion center, inead of, as now, a feeder for much less wored places on public holidays. Before other year we hope to have many conmplated improvements, which have been r too long delayed, carried out, and a ited body of citizens working in the comon interest to advance the prestige of this

NO VETO.

The new tariff of the United States, hich we have shown to be distinctly ore favorable to trade between the neigh. ring republic and Canada, comes into e on Monday. President Cleveland not like the measure as passed. He expressed himself that it is not nearly radical in its reductions on some articles it should have been, and does not carry to the full extent the platform promises the Democratic party. He will not sign bill, as he is in the habit of indorsing sures which he approves, with the end, "Approved, Grover Cleveland." President will merely let the law go inlorce by the effluxion of time. This is a course. A man may hold strong views a law does not go as far in the direction he is traveling as he believes to be it, but he would be foolish to refuse amelioration of the conditions bese he cannot have his own way rely. Cobden and John Bright d not force Sir Robert Peel to grant absolute free trade when they ated the corn laws. They were agreeto have those obnoxious claims reed. knowing full well that the popuwould not be contented with that but would press for more. Grover eland and the friends of tariff reform in a somewhat similar position to-day. may not regard the law now passed together what they could desire in the lie interest, but they know that it is a improvement on the McKinley law, they will honestly carry it out and inue to agitate for further relief from taxation. This is a wise course. ete the measure would prevent even ial relief and insure a period of unainty that would be very hurtful to

BE FAIR TO THE SCHOOLS. There is a good deal of caviling about the public schools these days. Some of it is justifiable. The system can no doubt be improved on, though visitors from Britain at Pullman. At the time of the great and other advanced countries tell us our strike the strikers were accused of perschools are better managed than those of any other country. But there is more than the system to consider when conditions are criticised. How much of the school troubles are traceable to trustees, who recognize the "forcing" results as the sole teacher? Is there not a tendency to gauge the work of a teacher, no matter the material he may have to mold, by the number of "passes" he can cram through during his school year? Then there is parental responsibility. How many parents are contented to accept the old slow but sure methods of imparting instruction that were wont to prevail in the schools that became the models of the world-the Scottish parochial schools? Very few, indeed, according to the evidence of experienced teachers. From the time the pupil leaves the kindergarten till the finishing touches are given to his education-be the school career long or short -there is a constant demand by the average parent that no possible "passes" shall be missed. If the child, through natural slowness, fails to keep up with his neighbors, woe betide the unfortunate teacher! The average parent does not take kindly to the fact that his boy or girl lags behind, and is not always ready to acknowledge that the slowness may be attributable to some other agency than the school system or the teacher, or to recognize that the easy going, slowly plodding pupil may, after all, finally prove the more brilliant and capable man or woman. It is not always the child who runs the fastest at the start of the educational race that takes the prize of life.

THE "CRAZE FOR CHEESE." Some remarkable developments have been evident in the cheese market this year. Never before in the history of the trade has so much cheese been held in cold storage at various points. In Montreal the increased available space has all been taken up, and helders have been compelled to store their products at outside points. It is estimated by the Trade Bulletin that there is nearly 100 per cent more cheese held in Canada today than a year ago, most of which is on English account. One firm n Montreal bought 25,000 boxes last week for English account, most of which went into store. Another bought a considerable quantity a few days ago, with instructions ast of July or the Queen's birthday. At to ship last half of September, which of member of the household, down to the ast session of Parliament it was decreed a course means putting it into cold storage till humblest of the servants, holds classes in statutory holiday, and will continue to be then. In fact, there has been a perfect craze the evening from 7 to 7:30 two or three for cheese for future shipment on English times a week in wood-carving, French, account. It is safe to say that the great Gordon, the military secretary, and bulk of the 300,000 boxes and over that is Mrs. Gordon are stored in Canada today is owned by English in the art of wood-carving. Lady houses, and it is thought that by the end of Aberdeen herself superintends the this month that quantity will be increased sewing class, and the singing is conducted to nearly 400,000 boxes. Shippers have told the Trade Bulletin that they have no cantatas. Every Thursday evening an faith in the situation at present high entertainment is given in the ball-room, prices, and yet they are instructed to buy. Contracts covering 10,000 boxes of balance of season have been made in the Belleville section at 10 cents, while other contracts in the Kingston district have been made at 10 turn up," and Lady Aberdeen as the goodcents August, 10½ cents September and 10½ natured "Pegotty," Lady Marjorie Gordon as "Aunt Betsey," the Hon. Dudley Gordon as "Mr. Dick," while "David Copperfield" fell to the Hon. Archie Gordon. cents August, 101 cents September and 101 houses are crazy for more goods.

Cheese undoubtedly continues to be king, and it is to be hoped that it will continue so. We are very much afraid that in the West the restricted yield, resulting from the drought, will neutralize the advantages arising from the steady demand byold world dealers. But as philosophers we must remember that the situation might easily have been worse.

PROTECTING" THE WORKINGMEN Our city contemporary said the other

"According to one of Ottawa's leading umbermen, observes the Citizen, wages of shantymen are lower this year than last because of the influx of men from the United States. With their alien labor law they prevent this sort of thing across the line. Let a Canadian workman engage to work in the Michigan mills and he is promptly pounced upon and his employer heavily punished. Yet this is the one-sided sort of free trade that Canadian Liberals have been trying to make us believe would suit this country as a fiscal policy.'

To this the Hamilton Times vigorously

replies: "Not so fast, neighbor. That is not the Liberal idea of free trade. That is the kind of "protection" which the N. P. gives to the industrial classes of Canada. Manufacturers are protected; the workmen must compete in the open market against the world. All the Tory talk about Canada for the Canadians and protecting our labor has been for votes; in practice the worker has absolutely no protection. He must take just what the protected manufacturer wishes to give him, or others will take it. If none of his neighbors displace him men can be brought from abroad to fill the position, and there is no obstacle to prevent, save Mowat's Contract Labor Law, and under the constitution the Province cannot legislate effectively in the premises. The Dominion Government talks, but does nothing for the workingman by way of preventing alien competition; the combines won't let it, because they want protective prices for their goods and free trade in hiring labor. And the tariff enables the protected ones to keep the market, put up prices, and thus reduce consumption, while at the same time they cut wages or lay off men till they can load stock at monopoly figures. We have in this city men who boast enormous profits in the last year, yet lay off the men to work off all stock, saying they will not manufacture unless they can make 35 per cent, although they have announced heavy cuts in wages. The protection of the workingmen and the alien labor question are matters which Tory editors gifted with a little "horse sense" would let severely alone. There are too anty that would be althy revival is a way of sharpening perception in some people." many hungry workers now, and hunger has

THE WORKERS VINDICATED. A correspondent points out that the legitimate workingmen of Chicago have been vindicated by the Government inquiry petrating many outrages. It was alleged that they pulled up tracks, fired trains, and so on. But a searching investigation has revealed the fact that the so-called "strike riots" were caused by adventurers, by people who had no direct interest in the passport to merit on the part of the strike-by rowdies, in fact. The trouble is that to very large cities the werst descriptions of tramps hie as soon as there is trouble, hopeful that they may profit at the expense of the strikers so soon as they can set disturbances going. The evidence given at Pullman shows the necessity for refraining from jumping at conclusions regarding the conduct of others. Some critics of the strikers have unwittingly done them a grave injustice.

CIVIC USEFULNESS OF THE

CHURCH. Leaving the religious aspects of the church on one side, says the Springfield Republican, it is worth far more than it costs as a civilizing and educating influence in a community, and the presence and example of an earnest, devoted and hardworking Christian minister is of itself enough warrant for his adequate support by any community. It is not a question of the worthiness of the laborer for his hire which is behind this matter of preachers' salaries and church support-it s a question of public and individual welfare. If there is any one thing more than another, we as Americans need, it is that moral inspiration which comes from the stimulus of high ideals. We are rapidly becoming a nation of materialists and money grubbers, worshipers of wealth and slaves of the dollar. We are getting richer in money, but in not much of anything else. We are buying our wealth at a price which is as much beyond its value as Ben Franklin's boy paid for his whistle. Practically the only institution which stands squarely athwart this demoralizing tendency is the Christian church, and the Christian minister is the one man among us whose duty it is to bid us halt and see where we are going. If he did no more than this, his service to society would be inestimable and well deserving a far greater reward than society sees fit to give him.

SERVICE AT RIDEAU HALL.

(Canadian Gazette.) Who would not be a domestic servant at Rideau Hall just now? It is, of course, pure fiction to say, as some have done, that their Excellencies give up their drawingroom to the servants once a week, and also dine with their entire household. But it is a fact that the Haddo Club, which inby Miss Wettermann, Lady Marjorie's governess, and consists of glees and pretty generally a concert. Perhaps the most en joyed of these entertainments was one when "David Copperfield" was presented with Lord Aberdeen as the ever-sanguine "Micawber," waiting for "something to

The latter organization four years ago seceded from the International Typographical Union on account of local differences. A basis of agreement was arrived at for amalgamation of the two bodies of pressmen under the jurisdiction of the International Printing Pressmen's Union. This includes an alliance offensive and defensive in regard to the strike law between the two unions, the Allied Printing Trades Council in every city and town in the United States and Canada, and a joint union label. The warfare heretofore existing between the two bodies is suspended pending the ratification of the two articles of agreement entered into by the referendum of the two contracting parties.

ONTARIO CROPS.

Summary of the Government Report-Fall Wheat Leads the List.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 24.-The Ontario Government crop bulletin issued to-night and compiled from reports received from correspondents all over the Province is summarized as follows:

FALL WHEAT. This is probably the most successful crop of the present season. The grain filled fairly well and barvesting was completed in favorable weather. There are the usual complaints as to rust, shrunken grains, etc., but they are not so numerous as usual. As to both yield per acre and quality of grain, the crop may be called first-class.

SPRING WHEAT. Reports are quiet varied. The little that is grown in the western half has su ered very severely from drought, whereas excessive rains in the east have in some cases done much damage and encouraged rust. Taking the Province over, the crops may be set down as being limited in quantity and light in weight.

BARLEY. The acreage is greater than in 1893. The yield per acre is below the average. The excessive drought of the west has caused premature ripening with grain small and light, but of good bright colors. In the east more favorable returns are being had, but even there the yield will be moderate. In a few places an extra good crop has been harvested. On the whole there will be available only a limited quantity of plump bright barley for export. The yield is practically all of the six-rowed variety.

OATS. From all parts of the country come reports of only a fair crop. The eastern crop is somewhat better than the western. The grain is a little light, while some damage has resulted from rust and excessive early rains on low lands. The greatest draw-back has been from drought. Destruction by grasshoppers is very commonly reported

His chances were pretty shaky for a time, pasture or cut for soiling. The little that was left for grain has turned out very well.

PEAS.
This crop suffered in the spring. From eastern counties the reports are very con-will probably be less than for some years

If rain falls a fair crop may be harvested. If the drought continues there will be but a very limited crop.

HAY AND CLOVER. The larger portion of the present crop is imothy and native grasses. There is less clover than usual in the first cutting. On the whole the quality is reported very good.

Reports from the great corn-growing counties of Essex and Kens are to the effect that much replanting had to be done owing to wet weather, and that the prolonged drought has been telling on the plant. From other sections of the Province come complaints of late planting and a fear that the ears may not fully ripen. Some encouraging reports have been received from different localities in Eastern Ontario, but much will depend upon the weather of the next few weeks. In Middlesex and Perth the crop was attacked by grasshoppers, but no general injury by insects has been reported.

POTATOES, Heavy rains at the time of planting, June frests, bugs and drought have combined to make the yield of potatoes small in Western Ontario, both as regards the size of the tubers and quantity per acre. In the eastern portion of the Province the reports are much more favorable, in some ocalities the yield being most encouraging.

ROOTS. Roots generally are thin, backward and unpromising in the west, owing to drought. Mangel-wurzels and carrots are here and there reported as doing fairly well, but turnips have had a hard time of it on account of grasshoppers attacking what the exceedingly dry weather had left. In Huron whole fields have been eaten almost bare, and in Bruce, Grey, and the West Midland counties this pest has done much Eastern Ontario generally has been but lightly affected with the grasshoppers.

FRUIT. Apples will not be a heavy crop. Fall and winter apples are dropping off in large healthful and you will live long. Stoop numbers, and early sorts are only moder-over, take long and exhaustive rides, and ate in vield.

Plums are in fair condition in the Niagara district, but other sections report much injury from curculio. Pears will give a fair yield taking the Province over, although considerable blight is reported in the west. Peaches are fair to good, early sorts especially yielding largely. Cherries were plentiful on the tree, but were unusually troubled with worms and blackknot. Grapes will hardly be up to their average, owing to the early summer frosts, although in some sections there is promise of an abundant yield.

Small fruits have been fair, except wild varieties.

PASTURES AND LIVE STOCK. The most favorable reports come from the St. Lawrence and Ottawa counties conthe more eastern counties. The barn-fly is reported in nearly every group and has been very annoying.

Notwithstanding the drought, live stock are reported in a healthy condition generally, although thin. There will be an abundance of fodder for winter.

BUTTER. Butter has been scarce in some districts, but cheese factories have been largely patronized.

BEES AND HONEY. Comparatively little honey was made from clover, but there was a good show of linden, and the bees made most of itduring time of bloom. The drought lessened the supply of the nectar, and the supply will be slightly less.

FARM LABOR AND WAGES. With a few local exceptions the supply in all parts of Ontario was fully equal to the demand, with a strong tendency towards an over-supply. The tramp element constituted a good part of the farm labor offering, while a lowering tendency is perceptible in the matter of wages all around. The average rates of wages for harvest hands throughout the Province appears to be about as follows: Per day with board, 90 cents to $1. Per month (4 to 6 months) with board, Without board, $18 to $26. In cases of exceptional ability, however, as high as $28 and $30 is reported as being

THE ARMY OF MODERN JAPAN. Carefully Modeled on the European System-Trained Officers. [From the Naval and Military Record

(British.)] The military system of Japan has been almost entirely revised since the rebellion of 1877. In that year it may be remembered, Marshal Saigo, commander-in-chief of the army, revolted, and for eight months Japan was harassed by a terrible and bloody struggle, in the course of which upward of 7,000 men were killed and over 10,000 were wounded. With the establishment of Constitutional Government in July, 1888, the most important changes in the army may be said to have really begun to be felt. Prior to this time the Japanese had a sort of feudal system, and the number of trained troops was but small.

But, as is well known, the army of modern Japan has been carefully modeled on the European system, and up until 1889 it may be said to have been both organized and drilled by French officers. Since then the German system has been introduced, and many of the chief posts are even now held by German officers. According to the recruiting law now in force military service is obligatory and personal, and even professional men are liable to give one year's service to the state. The average length of service is for three years, and the troops are subsequently passed into the first reserve for a period of five years. They are again passed into the second reserve for five years, and thence into the territorial army for a further period of eight years. Thus, with certain exceptions. every Japanese subject is liable to three years' service with the colors and to seventeen years in the reserve or territorial force.

In 1885 the first application of the law gave the following results: Out of a total of 18,470,276 male inhabitants, 341,355 young men having attained 20 years of age, 167,312 had been passed as fit for service, and had drawn lots. Of this number, 70, 000 had been incorporated in the active army of reserve, but the actual peace strength of the army, or the number of men actually undergoing the three years' training, cannot have greatly exceeded 15,000. In 1887 the active army amounted to 3,681 officers and 57,766 men. The reserve was 101,273 strong, and the territorial army slightly under 45,000, but these numbers have since been considerably modified. In 1891 the number of toops under training was 20,458. From this it will be understood that the European military system has not had time to develop, and that, although there is a large paper army, the actual number of trained troops is at present but small.

Thus, by the latest statistics, the active army consists of 28 regiments of infantry. seven divisions of cavalry, and a relatively small force of field artillery.

The Japanese officers have been carefully trained at the military school at Tokio, or at similar establishments in other districts. They are said to be tolerably efficient, but there is some doubt as to the discipline of the troops. The officers of the highest rank Vallens & Co., Manufacturers, London

A French writer who is regarded as an authority on the subject estimates that in the event of war Japan would be capable of putting 100,000 men in the field without depleting her reserves. At present there are less than 10,000 Japanese troops in Corea, and it remains to be proved whether the organization will admit of a substantial army being rapidly transported to the scene of hos-

The Japs Lose 1,300 Men-Another Battle

SHANGHAI, Aug. 25 .- A letter from Chemulpo, Corea, received at Chee Foo today reports that nineteen Japanese warships and thirteen transports arrived in the Tatung River on the 18th inst. They 6,000 men, who, proceeding were attacked by 1,000 landed inland. Chinese cavalry, who succeeded in dividing the Japanese forces into two parts. The Chinese artillery located on an eminence poured a heavy fire into the ranks of the Japanese, making great havoc. The Japanese were compelled to retreat to the seashore, where the guns of the fleet prevented further pursuit by the Chinese. The Japanese loss is reported to have been over 1,300 men, Tien Tain reports say a telegram has been received from Ping Yang stating that the Chinese troops at Chung Ho were reinforced by 10,000 men from Aug. 8 to Aug. 20, swelling the army there to 34,000 men. A council of war was held on the 20th, and it was decided to attack the Japanese about the 25th. The Japanese are holding a pass eight miles southward from Chung Ho. It is reported that they are reembarking their heavy baggage in Tatung Bay. Chinese cavalry are scouring the country, and have captured and beheaded a hundred stragglers.

Arrest of an ex-East End Grocer.

Mr. James Annett, until recently engaged in the grocery business on Dundas street, left for Port Huron last night at 7 o'clock, but returned at 11 p.m., having only reached Strathroy. Annett sold his business about a week ago to a man from the country. He settled up with most of his creditors, but Edward Adams & Co. claimed to still have an account against him amounting to about $140. They got word that Annett was going across the line, and had a capias issued for his arrest. It was handed to Sheriff's Officer Graham. who started for the Sarnia train just in time to see the last car go out. The Strathroy officials were then communicated with, and the chief of police arrested Annett when the train pulled into the station there. Annett told the officer that he had paid his creditors until his money ran out, and also that he intended to return and settle up the balance. He had a Port Huron-and-return ticket in his possession. Mrs. Annett and the children are at present visiting the former's parents in Michigan's Tunnel City.

PROROGUED.

Queen Victoria Closes the British Parliamentary Session.

Refers to Several Important Matters-The Intercolonial Conference-A Treaty With Japan.

London, Aug. 25 .- Queen Victoria prorogued Parliament today. In her speech closing the session her Majesty said:

"My Lords and Gentleman - It affords me sensible gratification to be able to dismiss you at the end of a session which has been little less than a prolongation of the previous one, and it gives me pleasure to reflect that your labors, if they have been exhausting, have also been fruitful. I am confident that you share in the joy with which I and my people have welcomed the birth of an heir in the third generation to my throne, an event not merely propitious but unprecedented in the history of the country.

"My relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly and peaceful. It is, however, a matter of regret that a variety of questions relating to Africa between my Government and that of the French Republic still remain unsetaled. It is my wish that these be arranged without unnecessary delay, and I am engaged in friendly negotiations looking thereto.

"In concert with the President of the United States, I have taken the steps necessary to putsinto effect the award of the tribunal of arbitration on the question of the seal fisheries in Bering

"I regret to state that war has broken out between China and Japan. After endeavoring, in concert with Russia and other powers, to prevent the outbreak of hostilities. I have taken steps to preserve a strict neutrality between the contending parties. I have concluded a treaty with the Emperor of Japan for the regulation of commercial intercourse between that country and the United Kingdom. "A conference was held at Ottawa in June in which representatives of the Imperial Government, of the Dominion and of the Cape and Australasia delegates considered questions relating to international tariffs and connection. I have learned with satisfaction that the proceedings of the conference were of a character calculated to strengthen the union of the colonies concerned, both among themselves and with the mother country. "Gentlemen of the House of Commons,-I thank you for the liberal supplies which you have provided for the requirements of the public service, though I lament the necessity for increasing the burden of taxation. It had become indispensable for the security of my empire. I trust that the alterations which you have made in the fiscal scheme of the country will have the effect of materially alleviating all that portion of the burden which falls upon the less wealthy classes of the population, and many redound to the contentment and prosperity of the nation at large."

"My Lords and Gentlemen-While the general tranquility of Ireland has been maintained in a remarkable degree, certain social and administrative difficulties still exist, which still require the earnest atten? tion of my Govarnment. I have given my ready consent to the bill which despite the shortness of the session you have been able to consider and secure.

No fears nor doubts, however, disturbed the resplendent Julia herself. Satisfaction shone in her eve, showed itself in the tones of her voice, and even influenced the tenor of her reply. She agreed with her mother, and spoke of her sister as "poor Mattie." "I went to her room just now," she said, "and she was so quiet that I should not have thought she had minded, only I saw that she had thrown down all her things, her nice white muslin and all, in a heap on the floor; and her hair was loose over her shoulders -

"That was temper; there was no need to have touched her hair. She might, at least, have let me have the pleasure of seeing it nicely arranged, she need not have thought

"You did not give any reason for stopping her mamma ?" "None whatever. I said exactly what you and Adelaide told me — nothing that she could have minded — nothing, at least, that the ought to have minded. I could not be-lieve my ears, when she actually tried to make me alter my decision afterwards." "Did she do that !" "She did indeed."

"What did she say, mamma?"

"She begged to go; that was all. Quite enough too, for one who never asks to be taken anywhere. It showed me immediately that I was right - that you and Adelaide were right, in advising me to put a stop to

"I am really sorry for her. Mamma, don't say any more about it; it will do no good." 'And I am sure I have had enough of the subject. I wish now you would all get away as quickly as possible, and let us settle down to a quiet evening. I dare say we shall be quite happy together. Your father has brought in the parcel from the library; it was kind of him to call for it, and it will be quite an interest to Mattie to see what we have got. I am looking forward to her reading aloud — it will keep the dismal howling of the wind out of my ears."

Already she was impatient to begin. "I do wish you were all out of the way now," she proceeded. "Could you not go down to the drawing room and wait there? The going in and out, and the talking of many peon'e in this little room, always susses me."
"Very well, mamma. I will go down with the very next person that appears; but I may stay till some one does, may I not? This room is so nice and warm," with a little

"Have you wraps enough?" 'Quite, mamma, thank you."

"You will not get blown about at either house, that is one good thing. The entrance to Rimmin is as well sheltered as our own." Better; at least it was better until papa built up that archway. Oh, we shall be quite out of the wind going in and out of the carriage, but I wish we had not to drive along the shore-road: the tide is so high tonight that the waves are breaking right over the rocks.

"Indeed!" said Mrs. Boscawen!anguidly. She was not going to drive along the shoreroad herself, and the waves seemed a good way off from her cosy pillows. "Oh, here are papa and Adelaide at last. Now then, good-bye; go down to the drawing-room everybody. What! Is the carriage there? Toat's right, then. Doshut the door, Boyd, thecold air coming in from the passage chills one all over. Put your shawls on, girls,

"But where is Mattie?" inquired her "She will be here directly. As soon as ner together -

'Is she not going with us?" "Not tonight; she will go another night." "I wish her to go tonight," said Mr. Boseawen decidedly. Julia, call your sister, and say we are waiting.

"Papa — "Julia paused, looking round for support, and at the look, a voice was raised from the sofa.

"It is impossible, my dear," said the mother. "If I had known that you wished it before - but now it is too late. She is not thinking of going. She is not dressed, nor - nor anything.

"Then she must dress, and tell her to be

"The carriage is at the door." "It can wait a few minutes. Do as I desire

To such a tone even Julia must submit, and without a word she left the room. But who shall describe the shock of mingled feelings which that message gave! Oh, how bilterly did Mattie now repent her II-advised haste, her passionate weeping? het ready to go now? Now, when every single part of her attire would have to be put on afresh, - when her hair, all disheveled as it was, would in itself require care, pains, attention, — and when the flowers lay broken on the floor?

Now? Was she dreaming? Her trembling feet refused their office, as she rose in bewildered consternation, and down upon the chair she sank again. Could she ever, with such a beating heart and such nerveless fingers, begin from the beginning once tmore, and rehabilitate herself within the time permitted? Harrison seemed an age

"And oh, Miss Mattie," cried the maid, "twill take a good half-hour, your hair alone; and there's your dress to lace, and the bows to tie, and even then - bless me, hiess me!" which later aspiration, murmured under the speaker's breath, was called forth by a vision of the pale, tear-stained face beside her, as contrasted with is glowing freshness when last seen so short a time before.

"I can be ready, Julia, indeed I can. Oh, Harrison, what need to brush my hair all over? Put it up as it was, or - or any way you can. Oh, my flowers, my pretty flowers! Oh, Julia, why did mamma change so often? why did she insist on my undressing, as she did? Tell papa I will be ready immediately. Dear, kind papa. Please find my gloves, Harrison, I had them one Another messenger, in haste and breathless, a voice at the door saying, "If Miss Mattie's ready, she is to come; if not, Miss Julia is to come immediately. Coachman says the tide is still rising, and the horses will be frightened if the waves come too near. Master says he can't wait another minute."

"It's of no use, Miss Mattie," said
Harrison, with the calmness of despair; we couldn't be ready, not if we tried never so, for a quarter of an hour -"I must go you see," added Julia hurriedly. "Don't go on trying, Mattie, it is of no use. I pish papa had let it alone." "Get on, Harrison, get on," whispered the youthful mistress to her maid, as the two were left behind. "Never mind what they say; I shall be in time yet. Are you nearly done? Oh, this dreadful gown! How far have you got? You must be half way? I after that. She considerately explained that, if she had only known her husband's wishes in time, she would not have canceled her permission, and would not have sent her daughter to unrobe; she also demonstrated that if Mattie had not been over impetences in fulfilling her commands, her toilet might have been effected for the second time without difficulty. Finally, she considered that everybody had been to so seldom took any part in family matters, should have been vexed and put out by what had happened. She could not understand his caring about such a trifle at all, and still less his. "Well, I suppose I can make it all straight, but I wish it had not happened."

With unusual discretion, she did not confide the above remark to her companion, aware that it might be ruminated upon more than would be advisable, but confined word of commendation to Mattie's thoughtto the meal, instead of waiting for further alterations in her appearance. It could do her pretty dress no harm to wear it on this quiet occasion, than to take it out and have t crushed among a crowd of people. She liked to see her children nice, and so seldom had that pleasure, that really it did her good, — and so on, and so on. But, alas! after dinner the headache returned, so that even books and music could not be thought of with any satisfaction. No she must go to bed; she was very sorry; it was vexatious, now that they might have had a nice, cheery evening together, but it was of no use bearing up any longer. "And don't sit up late yourself, little one," exhorted the parent, as she left the room. "You will not have above an hour or two alone, for it is nearly eight now." eight now, — you might have come into my room, but I must try to get a sleep. Don't go on with the story to yourself, Mattie; that would be too bad of you, when we are both so much interested. I think I shall take it with me," laughing, "to put it out of the way, for fear you should be tempted. Good night. Dear that wind! Rut I don't Good-night. Dear, that wind! But I don think it is quite so bad as it was."

Nota sound now broke the silence in th house, save the dull moaning of the blast without, and the occasional patter of a shower on the window-panes. The servant were too far off in thir own regions for voice or laugh to penetrate the passages above and in the weird stillness which prevailed the striking of the hour by the great clock outside made the solitary watcher start.

She started still more when immediately following the last note of eight there range through the house the sharp, imperative peal of the great door-bell. At such an hour on such a night, who could be thus seeking admittance? Tenants did occasionally come of an evening, when business obliged them to speak to her father, and a messag from the farm was a thing of frequen occurrence, but such visitors or dispatches were usually conveyed through the back door; and even the parcels sent up by the village tradespeople found their way into the house without passing through the entrance-hall.

ELEVEN TIMES A BRIDE, and Still Fresh, Fair and Only Forty-

Four. VALPARAISO, Ind , Aug. 24.—A woman who was until recently Mrs. Dr. Spencer, of Bourbon, has just been joined in wedlock to her eleventh husband, and, as the bride of today is but 44 years of age, time may blame, and that she, who had tried to please possibly record many more matrimonial all, had been unrewarded for her efforts. It alliances. Her career is believed to be one was certainly hard that her husband, who of the most remarkable on record. She was a bride when a girl of 15 summers, and her first venture was more successful in point of time than any of them, ten years elapsing before that marriage was demonstrated to be a complete failure. She was separated from her second and third husbands. The fourth was wedded as the sequel of a romance. A convict in the Joliet Penitentiary won her good graces, herself to general subjects, after a passing and a pardon, which was granted by a sympathetic governor, was follow by mar-riage. Death ended this union, and the season of mourning was followed by the choice of a fifth and sixth husband from among a legion of suitors. A charge of bigamy was disproved in connection with the marriage of the seventh husband, who gave her statutory grounds for divorce. The eighth husband was secured through the medium of a matrimonial paper, but his life had a tragic ending, and at the age of 36 years she concluded negotiations with S. H. Brown, No. 9, with whom she lived for two years. To this union the first child was born. Brown disappeared, and the next alliance, with a Dr. Spencer, a venerable physician, was terminated by his sudden death.

BABIES GROW AND

WHEN FED ON LACTATED FOOD.

Physicians Everywhere

Recommend It.

The majority of the mothers of Canada are now thoroughly convinced that Lactated Food is the best, safest and most nourishing of all infant foods ever put on the market. After severe tests thousands of mothers have discarded other makes of food and now use only the Lactated.

Physicians strongly recommend Lactated Food at every opportunity, and many of our ablest medical writers urge its use as a perfect substitute for mothers' milk. Mrs. L. P. Smith, of Truro, N. S., writes about Lactated Food as follows: "I have been using Lactated Food for the past seven months for my baby with great success. When he was 3 months old I stopped the use of other foods, as he was then seriously ill and weighed only ten pounds. I gave him Lactated Food only, and now, at the age of 10 months, he is well and hearty, and weighs 25 pounds."

Poisonous Pike.

HAMILTON, Aug. 24 .- Mr. Robt. Elling. ham, who lives on Bay street north, bought a pike from an itinerant vendor at his door yesterday. When he was cleaning it the cat came mewing towards him for a piece, and his valuable terrier also begged for a taste. Both animals were supplied, and both of them died in torrible agony a few

AN EIGHT-FOOT ALLIGATOR Has Taken Up His Abode in Oneida Lake-Three Fishermen Startled

by the Saurian. UTICA, Aug. 23.—A huge alligator is having a high old time in Oneida Lake. It escaped from a menagerie that recently exhibited near Constantia and made for the lake. It was seen on Tuesday morning by George W. Beebe, George A. Baker and the Rev. A. N. Raven, who live near that place, and who were seated in a small boat fishing for bass off One Tree Island.

They said that their boat was overturned near the island, and that they were startled by the appearance of an alligator fully eight feet long. Its mouth was wide open and the men consider themselves fortunate in escaping.

Yesterday a crowd of men were dragging the lake for the 'gator, all armed with spears and guns. Their search had not proved successful up to 6 o'clock. The menagerie proprietors have sent a telegram offering $50 for the capture and return of concession South Dorchester, bled for 40 hours the other day in Cleveland, Ohio, where he had gone to have his tonsils removed as a relief for catarrh. Physicians could not stop the flow. The young man is very weak, and it will be many days before he can return home. On Wednesday evening last the residence of R. Hedge, con. 4, London township, was the scene of a happy gathering. About 100 guests assembled to witness the nuptials of his daughter, Miss Carrie, and Mr. Charles Edward Tuckey. The ceremony was per-formed by Rev. S. W. Muxworthy, of Charing Cross, a former pastor, and an in-timate friend of the contracting parties. The bride was charmingly attired in cream cashmere trimmed with murah silk, and was attended by Miss Addie Tuckey, sister of the groom, who also presented a beautiful appearance, Miss Ethel Venner acted as maid of honor. The pleasing task of supporting the groom was allotted to Mr. Benson Cohoe, of Palermo. At the conclusion of the ceremony the company sat down to an exceedingly recherche wedding repast. The wedding gifts were elegant and costly, testifying to the high esteem in which the young couple were held.

to His Big Practice. PORTLAND, Ont., Aug. 20 .- The account which appeared in many Canadian papers a few months ago of Dr. E. A. Rose having been cured of diabetes by Dodd's Kidney Pills, attracted widespread attention at the time. Many doubters, though, protested that the cure was not a permanent one. The best proof that these doubters were wrong is the fact that for a year back, Dr. Rose has been attending to his practice, which was first-class, and the doctor is not compelled to take any of the precautionous as to diet or otherwise, that are always ordered for people threatened or troubled with dia-

DROWNED HIS LITTLE SISTER.

The Water in the Bathtub Was Up to the Boy's Chin When Help Came. ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 24.-Mrs. John R. Kirkman, of 1,173 Mary street, put her infant daughter Edith and her 3-year-old boy Joseph in the bathtub yesterday morning. Then she drew a small quantity of water in the tub and went down stairs to attend to some household duty. The children played until Joseph spied the faucet. He managed to turn it full on.

The water poured into the tub, and soon the baby girl was covered. The water continued to rise and was almost up to lives in Dakota. He was about 51 years of Joseph's mouth when the mother came running into the room.

Mrs. Kirkman picked up the baby and ran with it in her arms to a neighbor's house. Three physicians were called, but the little one was beyond resuscitation.

CHASED HIM ON HER BICYCLE. A Woman Catches a Thief and Re covers Her Property.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 24.-Mrs. E. J. McLaughlin is a pluckly bicycle rider of Washingtonville, this county. The other day she discovered a colored sneak thief in her house. She was alone, and when she accosted the man he handed her some insurance circulars and said he was an insurance agent. When he walked away she made a tour of the house upstairs and found that all of her jewelry was gone. Then Mrs. McLaughlin mounted her wheel and flew in the direction of the thief and overtook him. She faced him and demanded her jewelry and watch. At first he denied having them. She stamped her foot and firmly said: "Give me back my things, sir." The thief threw them down at her feet and fled across a meadow. She called to some men in an adjacent meadow, but the man got away. She recovered all but a pair of gold cuff buttons.

A Wonderful Cure. -Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's VEGE-TABLE DISCOVERY. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardalways a large one, in this village and the ly and inwardly, to cure the sore but all surrounding country, and has never had to no purpose. I had often thought of tryany return of the disease. His health is | ing Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DIScovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast, I was always of a very bilicus habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little affect. But since using three bottles of the VEGETABLE DISCOVERY the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know." 3

MICHIGAN STATE FAIR Will be Held at Detroit Sept, 10

The Detroit citizens this year will have the pleasure of having the State Fair held in their city. Efforts are now being made to make the initial State show in Detroit a greater success than in previous years, when held in Lansing. Mr. H. C. Teeple, was in the city yesterday, and will remain in the western district of Ontario for a few days, booking entries and advertising the fair. The Detroit fair has always secured a large list of entries from Ontario. This year the executive committee have arranged that all entries from Ontario will go through to the association in bond and remain so, thus avoiding all the customs regulations. The rates from London by express and freight will be reduced. Mr. Teeple will be at the Grigg House on Tuesday night and Wednesday morning next to give all information to those desiring to make entries. Today seven horses that have been entered for speeding will be shipped. There will be four races each day. The stable accommodation of the Detroit Fair Grounds is claimed to be second to none in America, while the main building is the largest. Michigan will endeavor to make their fair a World's Fair success. Direct information can be had from I. H. Butterfield, 521 Hammond Building, Detroit, Mich., who will accept entries if for-warded direct to him. The association bonds all entries from Canada. Reduced rates will likely be given by all railroads, Woodmen of the World. Canadian Woodmen of the World took a ritualistic inning on Thursday evening by visiting Hyde Park Camp, where the beautiful workings of the degrees were exemplified by the visiting sovereigns from Forest City and Pine Grove Camps. Owing to the inability of the sovereign to catch the goat, Sovereign J. Saunders' donkey was brought in to take the place of the bearded personage, much to the amusement of the honored crowd of Woodmen within the camp. The camp fires burned brightly, over which "toasts" were made and the delicacies of the season enjoyed. New life and spirit entered into the camp, and an interesting programme was gone through with in the style characteristic of a jolly lot of Woodmen, every sovereign being a singer whose vocal education had not been neglected. Repetition of Job's Great Affliction.

Repetition of Job's Great Affliction.

Mr. George Henry Drew. of this city, has been in very poor health for some time. His system was completely run down, and his blood so impoverished that "boils came out all over his body"—in short, it seemed but a repetition of Job's great affliction, for no sooner did they disappear in one part of the body than they returned elsewhere with more severity, and this condition of affairs seemed to increase, although Mr. Drew had tried no end of curealls. On the 5th day of August he end of curealls. On the 5th day of August he got one bottle of the Royal Crown Remedy and a box of Royal Crown Fills at Bark-well's drug store, of which he has taken half, and last evening he called at the above store to return thanks, and in the presence of eight witnesses stated that it did him more than $1,000 worth of good, as he had not felt as well for years, and the benefit derived from it could not be overrated, and it ought to be made known to other sufferers. It establishes throughout the entire system functional harmony, and supplies the blood vessels with a pure and healthy current of new life. The skin, after a few days' use of the Crown Remedy, becomes clear and beautiful – pimples, blotches, black spots and skin eruptions are removed, sores and ulcers soon cured. Persons suffering from Scrofula, Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Mouth, Ears, Legs, Throat and Glands, that have accumulated and spread, either from uncured diseases or mercury, or from the use of corrosive sublimate, may rely on a cure if the Royal Crown Remedy is continued a sufficient time to make its impression on the system. ression on the system.

cation was held last night to consider the report of No. 1 committee. Chairman MacRobert presided, the others present being Trustees Wilkins, Murphy, Stephenson, Craig, Jeffrey, Dr. Campbell, Martyn, Sanders, Johnston, Anderson, Powell, Alexander, Greenlees, Blackwell, Griffin, Turner, Inspector Carson, and Secretary McElheran. The report of No. 1 recom-mended the following transfers: Miss Ince, to take Miss McMechan's class at Quebec street; Miss McNaughton to Miss Adcock's at Rectory street; Miss McPherson to Miss Colquhoun's at King street; Miss Fleming to Miss Smith's at Princess avenue; Miss Sutton to Miss Walton's at Simcoe street; Miss Florence O'Brien to Miss Williams' at Colborne street. The promotion of Miss Edith Vining to the senior third class at Lorne avenue, and the addition of Misses Bertha Graham, Kate Sutherland, Maude McConnell, B. Thompson and Lilias Mc-Keown to the transition list were approved. The fourth clause recommended the appointment of Mr. T. D. Orme in Miss Miller's room in Talbot street during her year's absence. Trustee Jeffrey moved in amendment that Miss Wade, of Port Hope, receive the position. He did so because Inspector Carson could not recommend Mr. Orme's appointment on account of inability to keep order in a class he recently taught. Trustee Powell spoke in favor of Mr. Orme, and produced recommendations from Principal Graham, of Simcoe street, and Principal Liddicoatt, of London West, in which Mr. Orme was given an Al reputation as a teacher. Trustee Craig was going to be guided by the inspector. He seconded the amendment. The vote resulted in favor of the amendment, 9 to 6. Miss Bella Grieve was recommended to a vacancy in Colborne street. Mr. Powell noved that Mr. Orme be given a position, and said he had a great deal he would like to say but wouldn't. He hinted at it, however, by stating that he had received the promise of several trustees to support Mr. Orme, but they had gone back on their word. Trustee Blackwell said he had promised to support Mr. Orme, but the statement of the inspector threw a different light on the matter. He seconded Mr. Orme's appointment to Colborne street, which carried. Miss Grieve was added to the transition list. Miss Ella Robertson's application to be placed on the kindergarten staff at the Aberdeen school was granted. No salary will at present be

CHARMING GOWNS FOR LITTLE GIRLS AND STYLISH MISSES.

Elegant Simplicity Seems to Be the Prevailing Fad-Madamoiselle Dressed for a Swell Party-A Dainty Miss in Bed and Little people's clothes, like the little people themselves, are always an interesting subject to mothers. So many changes are required by these minature men and women even in a single day of their busy, out-of-door life that every detail of their apparel has to be made the subject of much thought and study. And so it happens that suggestions regarding the prevailing modes for the little folks are always welcome to the grown up.

The little maiden who rules the household from papa down with a firm though dimpled hand is not forgotten these days by the designers who regulate affairs in the domain of fashion.

While the style is not so elaborate as that adopted by her mamma, and while she does not reckon among her possessions as many frocks as her older sister, yet her ciothes are dainty and pretty; and where EMBROIDERED FROCK FOR LITTLE TOTTLERS. quantity is lacking an opportunity is given of adding in quality. And clever and fanciful, not to say striking, are the materials and decorations now permissible in the small girl's modistic world.

The very little girls-those who have not long been able to toddle along without stubbing their tiny toes-are wearing the sweetest little frocks imaginable; things that make them look like children even though some cynical bachelors and other disagreeable persons declare there are no children in this day and generation. These little gowns are mostly pure white and the materials softest silk or sheerest muslin with fine lace for the trimming.

The favorite model has the short empire waist and full skirt in which a happy medium has been struck between the extremely short and the exaggerated long ones so much in vogue last season. A very pretty empire frock has tiny bands of lace insertion for the sole decoration of the sheer muslin skirt. The sleeves are puffed and unlined, showing the baby arm beneath. A deep collar of soft lace falls over the front of the short waist and passes bertha fashion over the shoulders while just below the waist the skirt is shirred. through which a ribbon is run and tied in a very large bow with short ends at the Mothers who go in for style and elegance regardless of expense have robes for their very small girls made entirely of real lace, to be worn over a silken foundation. I saw a quite exquisite one yesterday composed of alternate bands of lace insertion and edging, the latter being lightly fulled in flounce fashion. The little lace bodice was high in the neck, and the full sleeves of lace were drawn in at the wrist with narrow satin ribbon. Accompanying this robe were three silk slips, one in rose pink, one in pale blue and the other in pure white, each edged at the bottom with a tiny frill of fine lace.

Of course, such a dress is quite beyond the reach of those not to the manor born. and perhaps therein lies its greatest

Another pretty style of frock for a little girl from one to three years of age is like the model in the picture. The skirt is laid in box plaits and hangs from a yoke of plaited silk. The sleeves are very full, ending in a deep cuff of silk, while the bottom of the skirt is finished by a narrow silk frill put on in shell pattern and headed by a band of deep embroidery. A pretty and decidedly chic appearance is given by the addition of a little curiass jacket, decorated with embroidered bands. If made of fawn-colored cashmere, with salmon pink silk for trimming, the result will be an up-to-date little gown. The dresses worn by girls from six to ten years of age are equally pretty as those of their smaller sister; and the materials chosen are the soft clinging ones so becoming to children. Serge and stout cloths in all colors are in great demand as outing and school frocks. Among a number of such practical dresses recently made for a young school girl was an olive green cloth made with zouave jacket and frill of silk of a darker shade and trimmed with of guipure, finished it. A hat of dark and mahogany from harm.

green straw with pointed crown and loops of ribbon to match will be worn with the

Another gown that pleased me much was a fine smooth-faced cloth, tan in color strapped across the yolk with four rows of gimp. Full gigot sleeves, tight at the wrist, with stripes of gimp and a broad silken sash in vandyke brown gave it the desired style. A pretty hat of ecru and brown straw, trimmed with a large cluster of crimson roses, was the headgear. adopted by the little girl who called this pretty frock her own. The little maiden or ten or thereabouts "goes in" for dances and parties quite as enthusiastically as do her elders; and, of course, must be provided with suitable raiment. Frocks for these occasions are made more elaborately than school dresses and house gowns; but at the present moment it is not considered good form to have them too fancy, but rather quaint as it were. At a fashionable modiste's, who is also an importer, I saw yesterday a charming dancing gown for a ten-year-old girl. It was of gold-colored chiffon with raised pea spots. The skirt was accordion plaited, rather short and bordered with fine rows of extremely narrow black velvet ribbon, the baby waist was decollete, shirred at the neck and belt, and ornamented with five rows of herring-bone stitching in vellow silk through which was threaded black velvet ribbon, the elbow sleeves full and gathered into a band decorated with velvet and a frill of chiffon. The guimpe was of pineapple tissue, cream-tinted, shirred in loose puffs.

Guimpes, I might mention, are universally worn, dressy ones being elaborate creations of puffs, embroidery and lace, while those designed for everyday wear are of India linen or fine cambric gathered into a band at neck and waist, edged simply with narrow embroidery or lace.

Girls in their teens, as a rule, have gowns that are miniature pictures of those their mothers are wearing, with blazers and blouses, revers and lace-trimmed yokes. This is really too bad. Many a girl has been dubbed an "old maid" at twenty-two simply because at sixteen she put on long dresses and young lady airs and went into society. Girls, don't do it.

Be young girls just as long as you can. Youth is short enough at best, and once out of that happy, care-free time you can never, never go back.

But my mission is not to preach, but to record the fashionable frivolities of la mode, and just now I am haunted by visions of a dress I met this morning. It was a lovely dress worn by a lovely girl just turned sixteen, red in color, which,

PRETTY GOWN FOR A PRETTY MISS. might remark in passing, will be a most popular shade for early fall wear. This particular red dress was of crepe, made with a full skirt ornamented by a flounce with a row of black lace insertion set on near the bottom. As is the case with all pretty dresses nowadays. the style or air was in the well-fitting bodice with its deep plaited collar of red chiffon and very large sleeves decorated with two bands of insertion. The crush collar was finished with a flaring bow and iet buckle, and a similar one held the band of red ribbon on the black straw sailor hat.

With its accustomed regularity the little reefer coat has come to town. This year it is more fanciful than ever before. Some are of scarlet cloth, gay with gilt buttons. while others are in the lavender blue shade, now so fashionable in Paris. This shade is also known as bluet blue and promises to be an important color in the autumn. One little coat that struck my particular fancy was of reversible tweed that is in small checks on one side and large plaids on the other with edges bound in leather matching the short belt across the back. Most of these coats are only designed for early fall wear, but such a one as I have described would be serviceable until time to put on heavy winter

The exquisite elegance of the new silk hesiery for children is enough to bankrupt the most resolute mother. Black silk stockings have Chantilly lace insertion up the front and daintly embroidered tan ones have lace inserted clocks up the sides. Besides these are plain white, soft gray and pale blues, keeping close company with every variety of design interwoven in color with black.-Kate Gardner, in Chicago Lamp.

Mats for the Table.

It is too bad to have one's polished tables and stands covered with little rings where a vase has stood and the water has overflowed. There is no need of this, either. Everybody should have on hand an abundant supply of these mats. These need not be obtrusive in design. In fact, no one wants any more the elaborate confection that were once wont to call attention to their crocheted splendors in our drawing rooms. Make the latter-day vase mats of small rounds of olive-green felt. preferably not ornamented at all except narrow guipure. Full sleeves with a deep | for a "pinked" border. PRETTY LINEN DOILIES.

THEY ARE MORE POPULAR THIS SUMMER THAN BEFORE

Their Numbers Have Increased Until They Are Nearly Beyond Count-Tablecloths for Luncheons Are No Longer Au Fait in the Best Circles.

The doily is in great demand. Its numbers have increased and added unto themselves until now they are nearly beyond count. The very latest of all is the wine glass doily, and authorities declare that a full set must include all sizes and sorts from it to the big one which forms the centerpiece. But without going quite so far as that, one can set a very charming table and present an up-to-date appearance with only a part of the prescribed

One of the most important of all to the lucky owner of a polished mahogany board is the plate doily. In its latest, most approved style it is ten inches square, is finished with a fringe and is embroidered in one corner only. When the table is laid these embroidered bits are all turned toward the centre, where they decorate the cloth, and the plain portion is left free for the plate. They are really very decorative, and if you possess a dozen of them and a few caraffe doilies, besides a centerpiece, you are well supplied. The multitude of smaller ones will hardly be missed, and you can always console yourself with the thought that many objects to the too great accumulation of linen

The wreath and the bow-knot designs still hold sway. The former is used almost exclusively for the round doilies, and the latter is seen upon all sizes and all sorts. A charming set recently sent to bride is all done in wreaths of different flowers, no two being exactly alike, and the whole effect is dainty in the extreme. For these only solid work is used. The flowers are necessarily small and do not admit of the more sketchy styles. The work involved us, of course, considerable, but linen endures so well and the colors of to-day are made so lasting that it is thoroughly well worth the doing.

Ribbons and flowers combined are always charming and suggestive of the best French taste. Just now they are very popular and are rivaled only by the wreaths. Most needle workers make the ribbon solid as well as the flowers, but one clever woman has devised a rapid and effective method of her own. She first outlines the entire design, then fills the space between the lines with single cat stitching. The result is really striking and well worth the trying. The contrast between the solid flowers and the lighter ribbon is charming and novel, besides being very little work. A most successful design of the sort is of white violets tied with pale vellow ribbon, and it is seldom one gets a better result with even the most exacting

Luncheons promise to be popular the season through, and the bare table will be much in use both for indoor and the piazza functions. These charming bits of napery will so find a speedy demand and may well employ all one's leisure time. Linen is delightful stuff to handle in the warm summer days, and an array of well selected silks in a natty basket makes a picture not to be despised. -N. Y. Recorder.

A Recipe for Tartlets.

Mix four ounces of fine sugar and four ounces of ground almonds into a stiff paste with the yolks of two eggs; roll it out about a quarter of an inch thick, cut into rounds with a fluted pastry cutter and line some small tartlet tins with them. Fry them in a cool oven for some hours. remove and leave them to get cold and firm. Then detach them carefullg from the molds, dust over with pounded sugar and fill with any fruit and cream prepared as follows: Put a pound of the chosen fruit into a basin with four ounces of sugar and a teaspoonful of maraschino, let them stand for an hour. then mix carefully and lightly with a gill and a half of whipped cream. Dish the tartlets on a napkin or fancy dessert paper.

The Best Furniture Polish.

An experienced cabinet-maker says that the best preparation for cleaning picture frames and restoring furniture, especially that somewhat marred or scratched, is a mixture of three parts of linseed oil and one part spirits of turpentine. It not only covers the disfigured surface but restores wood to its original color, leaving a sustre upon the surface. Apply with a woolen cloth and when dry rub with woolen.

Flowers in Finger Bowls.

A very pleasing table decoration that is easily carried out throughout the summer months is the addition of flowers to the finger-bowls. Use double bowls, one large enough to hold the other, and fill the space between the two with very small blossoms. The effect of dipping the fingers into flower-encircled water is decided. ly unique and agreeable.

EUGENE YSAYE, VIOLINIST. Something About the Great Virtuoso Who

Is to Visit America This Fall. M. Eugene Ysaye, probably the most distinguished violinist in the world, has obtained from King Leopold, of Belgium, a special permit to visit this country in November for a series of forty concerts, appearing first under the auspices of the a grand orchestra of 150 players. Eugene Ysave was born at Liega, Belgium, which place is, according to the illustrious Vieuxtemps, "the cradle of classic violinists." He is young and has a striking negie Music Hall on Nov. 16, supported by personality. Of all the famous artists who graduated from the Conservatory at Liege, Ysaye is the most famous. He is the second son of a family of distinguished musicians and received his first lessons from his father, Nicolas Ysaye, who was also an author and composer. Following this came the discipline of the Conservatory, where he had, as a master, Massart, a member of that renowned family which did so much for the art, and who is yet chief of one of the first classes at the Paris Conservatory notwithstanding his 75 years.

After his studies at Liege, which were completed in 1874, Ysaye enjoyed for the following year private lessons at Brussels from Wieniawski. Shortly after Vieuxtemps heard him in concert. His reception by the audience was so enthusiastic and the impression made on Vieuxtemps so great that he, in a fit of uncontrollable admiration, jumped upon the stage and shouted "Thou art inspired!" and with tears streaming down his cheeks he embraced and kissed Ysaye, calling him "his son" and "star of his school"-"upon whom the mantle of greatness had fallen." His triumphs now came thick and fast, and by the recommendation of Vieuxtemps, Ysaye was furnished by the Belgian Government with a liberal purse for his travel and study in Paris, in which city he finally completed

By constant association with Vieuxtempe he imbibed the manner and methods of that great genius. In 1878 Vieuxtemps retired to Algiers, where he died.

Then Ysave made a series of successful tours through Europe, receiving the patronage of crowns and the nobility. This was interrupted only three years ago, when he was nominated to the Royal Conservatory of Brussels.

In 1880 at Cologne he played under the direction of Ferdinand Hiller at the commemorative festival of Mendelssohn, and at Frankfort with Clara Schumann. Sweden and Norway were also visited and Zurich. In Russia, at a grand festival in honor of Liszt, he appeared before the Russian Imperial Society, under the direction of the great Rubinstein, who said he saw in Ysaye "a master of masters."

After these triumphs the King of Holland decorated Ysaye Knight of the Oak Crown in 1884. He then played in Germany from time to time, at the Gewand. haus of Leipsic. After resting he made a new sensation at the Conservatory concerts in Paris. In September, 1886, at the suggestion of M. Jevaert, he was appointed high professor at the Royal Conservatory at Brussels, where he successfully continued the school formerly presided over by his two masters. Wieniawski and Vieuxtemps. The effects of his close attention to this school are already potent, and to-day the Brussels Conservatory boldly claims that it produces as great violinists under the instruction of Ysaye as the Paris Conservatory or the school of Joachim.

Since the high honor has been conferred upon him at Brussels Ysaye has played each winter in the symphony concerts or in the Chamber of Music, originated by him in the salon of twenty, and has given two series of auditions consecrated to the new school of French music.

He has since been promoted Officer of Public Instruction by the French Govern-

Ysave is, to use the expression, a romantic violinist of the highest order; none more than he has the life, the communication, the passions and the warmth of phrase, and he has, above all, a variety of feeling which makes him prominent as an interpreter of the most difficult styles, with a comprehension and respect due to Millet's Butcher's Bills.

M. Zeim, the Paris painter, relates : story of the brother of the present presi dent of the French republic and Corot, the artist. M. Casimir-Perier, jr., was an in timate friend of Corot. On a visit which he made to the great artist in 1875, in his home at Verdizon, in the forest of Fontainebleau, he found Corot putting his las touches on his "Biblis" ("Nymphs in the Forest at Sundown.") The masterpiece filled Casimir-Perier with an enthusiasm, and he begged the artist to sell it to him.

"I'll give you my canvas," replied Corot, "on one condition-that you pay the butcher and baker bills of my friend Mil

"Taken," answered the wealthy French

In Chailly, where Millet lived, the butch er and baker were asked to make out their bills and send them to Mr. Casimir-Perier. The art-lover was somewhat surprised when he found that Millet had lived or credit for twelve years, and that the bills amounted respectively to 22,000 and 24,000 francs, over $9,000. M. Perier paid the bills according to agreement, and carried home the Corot. The price at that time was considered enormous, as the purchaser could have bought the painting in the market for about 1,500 francs, less than $400. The bargain, however, after all was a good one, as the picture to-day, it is esti mated, is worth almost $30,000. It is still in the possession of the Casimir-Periel family.-New York Tribune.

THE CAPITAL OF COREA.

A WONDERFUL CITY INHABITED BY STRANGE PEOPLE

The Quaint Customs Which Regulate Their Coming and Going-The Walls of Seoul and Their Ironclad Doors-The Women of the Corean Kingdom.

I want to give you some idea of Seoul, the capital of Corea. It is the centre of the war trouble between China and Japan. A battle may be fought in it any day and the firing would wipe its thatched huts from the face of the earth. It lies in a basin in the mountains and it is perhaps the most beautifully located capital on the face of the globe. It is only twenty-six miles from the sea, and it is connected with the port of Chemulpo by a poor wagon road, which climbs up the hills and over the mountains to get to it. The sluggish Han river flows within three miles of it.

A great part of the war has to be fought on Corean soil, and Seonl will be ground between the upper and the nether millstones. It may be wiped out of existence. If so, the most curious city on the face of the globe will pass away. You will not find accurate descriptions of Seoul in my books of travel. The tourist who comes here without introductions could not find a lodging place. There are no hosels, and I am indebted to my friends among the missionaries, among the diplomats, and with some of the high Coreans for my entertainment through these many days. I despair of giving you an accurate idea of the Corean capital, it is so different from any other city on the face of the globe. It is such a mass of the beautiful and the ugly, of civilization and barbarism, of the old and the new, that I don't know how to describe it. Take its situation. It lies in a great basin surrounded by mountains, which in some places are as rugged as the wildest peaks of the Rockies, and which in others have all the beautiful verdure of the Alleghanies or the Catskills. The tops of these mountains often rest in the clouds, and masses of vapor hang in their recesses above the green plain upon which the city is built. They change in their hues with every change of the heavens, and they give Seoul a setting more gorgeous than jewels.

The basin below is just about large enough to contain the town, and a great gray wall from thirty to forty feet high runs along the sides of these hills, bounding the basin and mounting here and there almost to the tops of the lower mountains. It scales one hill of at least 1,000 feet in height, and this wall incloses the whole city. It was built in nine months by an army of 200,000 workmen, about 500 years ago, and it is a piece of solid masonry, consisting of two thick walls of granite packed down in the middle with earth and stones. Its top is so wide that two carriages could easily be driven about it, and it has, on the side facing the country, a crenellated battlement, with holes large enough for its defenders to shoot through with arrows. There are no cannon upon it, and it will be no means of defense against the batteries of the Chinese or the Japs in the present struggle. Its only use in the late years has been to keep out tigers and leopards. This wall is more than six miles in length. It is pierced by eight gates, the arches of which are beautifully laid and cut. Each of these great arches has a curved roof of black tiles. This rests upon carved wooden pillars, which rise above the tops of the walls and which form watch-towers for the soldiers. Over the great south gate, the main entrance to the capital, there are two such roofs, one above the other, which are guarded at their corners by miniature demons of porcelain, who seems to be crawling along the edge of the structure.

COREAN POLICEMEN.

They have as much ceremony connected with them as other nations have with their forts, and there are officers in charge of them who would lose their heads if they failed in their duty. Every night just at sundown these gates are closed, and they are not opened again until 4 o'clock in the morning.

The signal of their closing and opening is the ringing of a massive bell in the exact centre of the city. After this those who are in cannot get out, and those who are outside cannot get in.

The greatest care is taken of the keys to these gates. The locks close with a spring and the keys are kept in the king's palace except when they are used at the gates. The locks themselves are guarded all day at the palace and are only | dress brought to the gates a short time before closing the city. I wish I could show you one of these locks. Each gate has two of them and they are each as heavy as a 10year-old boy. It is all that one man can do to carry them from one part of the city to the other, and when I tried to lift one I found my back strained. They are of iron and made in the shape of a box, two feet wide and at least a foot thick. They lock with a spring much like that of a padlock, and it takes a hammer to put them together.

Inside this great wall, within this setting

COREAN BELLES. contains more than 300,000 people, and it has scarcely a house that is more than one story high. It is a city of wide streets and narrow, winding alleys. It is a city of thatched huts and tiled one story buildings. On one side of it are the palaces of the king. They cover an area as large as that of a thousand-acre farm, and they are massive one-story buildings surrounded by great walls and laid out with all the regularity of a city. As you stand on the walls of Seoul and look over this medley of buildings, your first impression is that you are in the midst of a vast havfield, interspersed here and there with tiled barns, and the three biggest streets that cut through these myriad haycocks look like a road through the fields. You note the shape of the thatched houses. They are all formed like horseshoes with the heel of the shoe resting on the street. The roofs are tied on with strings, and the thatch has grown old, and under the soft light of the setting sun it assumes the rich color of brown plush, and there is a velvety softness to the whole. As you look closer you see that the city is divided up into streets, and that these narrow and widen and twist and turn, without regularity or order. One part of the city is made almost entirely of tiled buildings. These are the homes of the swells.

Come down now and take a walk with me through the city. There are no pavements on the streets and you look in vain for gas lamps or the signs of an electric light. This city of 300,000 people is entirely without sanitary arrangements. There are no waterworks, except the Corean water carrier, who, with a pole across his back, takes up the whole sidewalk as he carries two buckets of water was not a "bill" and it was not along with him through the streets. The wound" that made the hand swell up. The clouds are left to do the sprinkling of the highways, save where here and there a householder takes a dipper and ladles out the sewer fluid to lay the dust. All the slops of each house run into ditches along the sidewalk. Mixed with the smell from the sewage is the smoke. This comes out of chimneys about two feet above the ground, which jut at | from the walls of the houses into the streets.

These houses along the streets have no windows to speak of.

I am human enough to want to study the women of every country I visit. I found this very hard in Seoul. The girls on the streets wear shawls wrapped around their heads, and only an eye peeps out through the folds. In India and Egypt the women are secluded, but when they go on the street, if their faces are covered, they think they are modest enough.

The fair girls of Cairo care not that their dresses are open at the neck, if the black veil hangs o'er their cheeks, and the maidens of Hindostan trot along with bare legs, while they pull thin white cotton gowns around their eyes, priding themselves upon their bracelet-covered arms and the anklets, which reach half-way to their kness. These Corean girls are mere bundles of clothes. Their teet in their wadded stockings look as fat as those of an elephant, and their skirts and their drawers hang in great folds. I happened to rub against one as I passed her on the streets of the city. She looked angrily at me out of the tail of her eye, and fled like

For a long time I feasted my eyes upon what I considered the pretty little girls of the country. They were dressed in bright gowns. They parted their hair in the middle, and they tied the long braid which hung down their backs with neat little ribbons. Once or twice I smirked and I smiled, but I could get no smiles in return, and I know now that these little girls were no girls at all, but merely young boys, who, not being married, have to wear their hair down their backs. After they are wedded they will put on hats and wrap their hair up on the tops of their heads in a waterfall. All of the men of Corea wear waterfalls or topknots. There are no stranger people on the face of the globe. A masquerade of the nations could not furnish more strange costumes, and in going through Seoul you rub your eyes again and again to find whether you are dreaming or waking. The king- liminary opening in a "burglar proof" dom of Corea is made up of many classes of people, and each has its costume. There are hundreds of officials connected with not so much to deepen the cut as to lengththe palace, each of whom wears a different en it, giving saw No. 2 a chance to start. FRANK G. CARPENTER. family make war upon the inhabitants of this country every summer. That is the scientific designation of the most blood. thirsty summer visitors we have, but in vernacular they are common mosquitoes, These blood-suckers are not content with attacking a man when he is busy. They appear to wait until evening after a man has had his dinner and goes out on the veranda for a quiet smoke, feeling at peace with all the world. Then it is that he gets it in the back of the neck.

Mosquitoes are of two kinds-male and female. There is no neuter gender. And right here it is time to lift a weight of obloquy from the shoulders of the masculine mosquito. He is no blood-sucker. While he has no apparent place of usefulness in the great scheme of nature, yet he does no harm. It is the female mosquito that lives off of mankind. She is an adventuress. The male mosquito is a gentleman, but the female-well, she is no

Did you ever study a mosquito in the light of science? Probably not, because your encounters with the mosquito have been full of indignation and poison, all of which is foreign to the spirit of that science which calmly studies bugs while empires totter. Science, through its glass eye-the microscope-has been studying the mosquito for our readers.

"He stuck his bill into me and sucked my blood, and the wound made my hand

That is the way a boy described the operation, and it is the way most people think of it. Yet the statement contains mosquito, as the microscopist has discovered by magnifying the insect nearly 900 times, is a regular arsenal. Instead of a single stinger at the rear end, such as our friend, the bee, is provided with, as a means of defense, the mosquito is armed for offense with a full set of surgical instruments, and on top of this has a large and complicated poison apparatus.

Not content with sucking our blood the approved vampire fashion, the musquito adds insult to injury by leaving a most virulent poison behind as a gentle reminder of its visit. It is like knocking a man down to rob him and then kicking him in the face. No expert graduate of of the College of Physicians and Surgeons handles his instruments with the skill and precision of the mosquite, who always 'gets there" and never uses a saw instead

The knife of the mosquito is moreover finer than any known to surgery. It is an instrument which a microscope magnify. ing 900 times shows no larger than a pin. Hence the knife of the mosquito is invisible to the naked eye. It is carried in its proper slot in the surgical instrument case. The case contains six different instruments, all of which are used when the bloodsucker gets in its fine work upon the helpless human victim.

This surgical instrument case or set of tools is what the boy last week called "the bill." It protrudes from the head of the insect and though containing six instruments, which fold into it lengthwise, is as fine as the smallest needle. The common delusion is that the mosquito jabs its beak in through the skin. Just try to stick a fine pointed needle through your skin and you will find how much muscular pressure this will require. Such an effort is beyond the power of even the most highly developed swamp blood-sucker.

The pests go to work in a much more scientific manner, knowing with devilish ingenuity that they have at least six thicknesses of skin to penetrate and no time to lose. A little lance is first brought into play. This merely makes a slight incision in the outer skin, just big enough to give saw No. 1 a chance to start. The lance is now pulled up and the little saw started. It is like the fine saw which old-fashioned bank burglars used to use to make the presafe. This saw is scimitar-shaped, with teeth on its outside edge. Its object is TOOLS, speaking, and the 81-ton gun of the mosquito. It is armed with a double set of teeth, one on either side. Its point is finer than a needle's and it is thick and strong down through the centre. The mosquito works this saw like a man cutting ice, having a set of ropes and pulleys in its head. It has two of these saws, in case one should break down. It keeps on going down after the blood like men sinking a well for oil, and when it strikes the oil the saw is withdrawn to give place to Millions upon millions of the Culex another instrument. This is the pump.

The pump of the mosquito works with the old-fashioned up-and-down motion, but some of those that have visited us this season seem to have a rotary pump, with the wheel in their head, judging by the celerity with which they get full. Working the pump is the longest operation of the blood-sucker. It is the insect's way of working the growler, for the blood which it drinks acts as an intoxicant and is very often the cause of its death.

Mosquitoes differ. Some are satisfied with enough. Others get loaded clean up to the gills, when they cannot even stagger home, and one or two have been known to keep on sucking or pumping until they swelled up and exploded, scattering blood -his own blood-on the hapless victim.

But the next operation after the mosquito has taken its last pull at the bottle is one that puzzles the world of science. It would seem that you could go no further than to rob a man of his heart's blood, to steal his life current. But the fiendish ingenuity of the mosquito has advanced beyond that and provided the poisoning apparatus, the tube of which is now inserted. Mankind could forgive the mosquito anything but that. Bees and snakes sting, but that is all. They do not rob you first and then injure you afterwards. They only sting when attacked. Even the vampire only sucked your blood. He did not sting you also. But the mosquito once a robber and an assassin.

The mosquito is like the burglar who would first rob your house and then go back and pour water into your boots. The mosquito's poison glands have been identified by a scientific professor, and they are large and complex. There is a reservoir to contain the poison, a sort of sponge to hold it in readiness and a tube through which it is squirted down under your epidermis. This tube is one of the implements of torture which the mosquito carries in its box of tools, and which is the last one used.

What is the purpose of the poison? One scientist has originated the theory that the poison is injected before the sucking of the blood begins. He says its object is to inflame the newly made wound so as to draw the blood to that locality. This theory, however, is not generally accepted. It is believed that the mosquito in injecting the poison has what lawyers call "an ulterior motive." That motive can be nothing more nor less than spite and cussedness-a sort of last kick of contempt given by the mosquito before taking its departure. It has been noticed that no inflammation appears about the wound until just before the mosquito withdraws its apparatus, and that the last sting is much more agonizing than the first.

Hindoos were amazed to find that the western woman knew their scriptures and sacred literature better than themselves. After the lecture Brahmin priests called on her to discuss metaphysics. Mrs. Besant was equal to the occasion, and they went away lost in admiration, declaring that she was the incarnation of some one of their great ancient sages. At Madura Mrs. Besant and party were installed in the palace of the Maharajah, and the high priest of the world-renowned temple there came in state to offer greeting. At Bangalore the English Government gave a big place for the meetings, and closed the public offices early so that every one could attend the last lecture. The Prime Minister, accompanied by high Indian officials, discussed methods of education in the Government schools with Mrs. Besant, and especially the best methods for the girls' schools. The high Brahmins then got together and asked her to draft a national school system, begging her to stay in India and take charge of it. She was also besought to head a national reform movement, the reforms to be along the lines of Hindoo re-

Sweetest Scented of Roses.

It may be remembered, says the West minster Gazette, that in 1884 some fruits were brought to England from the roses that are planted on Omas Khayyram's grave at Naishapur by Mr. William Simpson. Some of these were presented to the Royal Gardens by Mr. Bernard Quaritch, and the bush which grew from them, of which cuttings were sent a year ago to plant on the grave of Edward Fitzgerald in Suffolk, has now flowered for the first time. The plant proves, according to the Kew Bulletin to be a form of rosa centifolia, the sweetest-scented of all the roses from which the cabbage rose, the moss rose and the pompon are derived.

To Soften the Skin. If the skin be coarse looking and you desire to improve the texture bathe it before going to bed in very hot water and good toilet soap and rub thoroughly with a coarse Turkish towel. Wrinkles are less apparent under a kind of var nish containing thirty-six grams of turpentine and three drams of alcohol, allowed to dry on the face. For pimples on the face use this recipe: Thirty grains of bicarbonate of soda, one dram of glycerine and one ounce of spermaceti ointment. Rub on the face let it remain for a quarter of an hour and wipe off all but a slight film with s soft cloth.

SUPPLEMENT TO DAILY ADVERTISER --- SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1894.

Motto for the Week:

"I say to thee, do thou repeat To the first man thou mayest meet In lane, highway, or open street, That he, and we, and all men move Under a canopy of love As broad as the blue sky above."

-- Archbishop Trench.

Women are beginning to come to the fore as professional architects, too. A Miss Anna Hawkins, a graduate of the Maryland Institute, is said to be the first woman in that State and among the few anywhere to receive a diploma in the architectural division. She has decided to make a profession of architecture for which she is said to show a decided talent. Women have often the very fine taste and peculiar skill so necessary to excel in architecture. Why should they not succeed in that department as in teaching, medicine, and in many of the learned professions?

-Men who indulge in drink at all. even though not known to be drunkards, or to be in the habit of getting intoxicated occasionally, are finding themselves more and more circumscribed each year. Formerly the men who were habital drunkards were proscribed, then the men who got drunk, even occasionally, now it includes those who drink at all. The leading railway companies are now discharging engine drivers and conductors who drink and requiring all young men to sign the pledge when they enter the service. Politicians are joining in the cry. Governor Lounsby, of Connecticut, an able and efficient man, has just been declaring: "I want it distinctly understood that no man can drink insome consternation.

Switzerland's Experiment.

A good many honest meaning people, including many Canadians, have been advocating the public control of all liquor selling, thus depriving private individuals from the profits, supposing thereby to rid the traffic of much of its evils. In Switzerland that experiment is being now tried. An English journal gives the following statement of results, which ought to make very interesting reading. It says:

"Switzerland's Stastistical Bureau has issued its official report. During the present year it shows that 7,536 died in its fifteen largest towns, and out of that number 488, or 1 in 15, owed their premature death to their drinking habits. Yet the alcohol sold by the Government was the best of its kind, but deadly nevertheless. In 4,301 smaller townships 4,215 died. Of these 245 died through alcoholic poisoning, or 1 in 7. In the 15 largest towns 3,409 young men died between 19 and 25, and of these deaths 566 were caused, directly or indirectly, by drink, while 105 died in delirium tremens. One in eight of the lunatics owe their loss of reason to drink, and 2,790 of the insane in Zurich were aggravated cases of alcoholic insanity. No one can rightly realize what these figures imply but must shudder at the nature of the terrible death which has overtaken the drinkers of this free but intemperate republic.

An Opportune Time to Restrict Immigration.

It is interesting to note the strong reaction that has been loading the emigrant ships with strange campanies of people who have failed to gain an industrial footing in America and are returning to Central and Eastern Europe. It would be good policy to aid this turn of the tide by every legitimate means. Fortunately the east- art, and those wielding wide social inextremely low. We have been comands of these people by charity during where they belong. This temporary to vote at local government elections, reversal of the current of emigration and at the next session of Parliament tunity for Congress to enact a law severely restricting immigration for a period of years. It would be the most popular law ever placed on our statute books since the foundation of the American Republic. It could be enacted just now with a minimum of hardship to any interest. All the most deplorable and most dangerous features of the recent labor troubles, whether those of the bituminous coal strikes or those of the riots accompanying the railway strikes, were clearly due to the fact of a vast over-supply of recently imported and not yet assimilated working population from the non-English-speaking countries of Central and Eastern help could be obtained. Duggan had it is said, never even tasted wine over Europe. The restriction of immigra tion should have been accomplishedten years ago. It is no longer a delicate question open to argument, but an imperative duty demanding prompt action. - [From "The Progress of the World," August Review of Reviews.

Irreverent Prayer.

The recent Iowa incident, widely noticed in the secular press, when a clergyman descended to a "stump speech" addressed to the convention for which he was supposed to be praying, and was interrupted in his pseudoprayer by applause, which was renewed and continued after he had concluded his scandalous performance, may well be made occasion of suggestion and warning against an evil to tion. which ordinary extemporary prayer is subject, and against which earnest protest should stand.

There is a claim on the part of some offenders against reverence in prayer, highest, and is only "talking with held on Aug. 23. The basis of the customs of public speech. This ex- platform." tremely low view of prayer has had much vogue in certain Christian circles, producing some manifestations of "talk" which, while not so bad as the one referred to, have a leaning in that direction. The peril of transgressing and the average wage, $5; 9,813 not toxicating liquors in public and remain for utterance. Strong impulses push ing, and present a respectable appeara member of my staff." Such an an- to the front in the moments of de- ance. nouncement in Canada would cause votional speaking. And there is urgent call for utmost self-restraint, a command over one's expression which forbids impertinence and assumption to direct the divine wisdom and love. Our Father knoweth what we need before we ask Him for anything. The elements of all true prayer consist chiefly and always of an exaltation of unerring counsel and dispassionate judgment on the part of Him to whom we pray. To keep well within the line marking the prerogative of heaven and the moral forces of this world is a solemn obligation at all times, especially so in the act of prayer.

One of the commonest forms of irreverent prayer assumes to convey information to the listener above as well as below. For example: A devoutly good minister told the Lord and the audience that he lived in "a community that was neither a city or a village, but something between the two," and he therefore asked for that which was "peculiar and suited to the case." Could it be that God was the more inclined to grant that request? Thanksgiving, too, is made the vehicle of much of this sort of real impertinence. The soul's selfishness is fed by giving thanks for things that seemed good to itself. Its praise of men and of results go up to God under the guise edly says, "for them (the conservative of his praise. This comes nigh to blasphemy. It is the very snare of Satan. Yet good men walk right into Writing of the woman suffrage reform the Philadelphia Leger has just said: "In England the woman suffragists are making good headway. They are asking for further concessions, demanding to be included on the list of parliamentary voters in the next registration bill. The appeal to Parliament has received the support of women of all classes, parties and occupations. How They Helped the Fair. Adapted for the Home GUAED from the Union Signal.

"I don't think I shall ever want to go to the fair again, this year or any other," declared Mrs. Hepburn to her husband, "and I wish you would not place to take Jennie and Tom, I'll was worth that much to us." not stand in the way of anything you wish to do; but for myself-just to think of the drinking and swearing, the wheel of fortune and other contrivances to persuade people to gamble, and the horse-racing and betting and all, is enough. I tell you the saloons are glad enough to have fair time come, for numbers of men and boys just turn themselves loose for a jollification, and before they know it they have slipped into drinking. The sights I saw of that kind last year are grieving me yet."

Now, mother, you are not worrying a little bit about me, I trust," said Farmer Hepburn, with a teasing glance out of the corner of his eye.

"You dear goose! I guess that a man who has kept sober for 57 years, and voted for prohibition ever since he knew of the ticket, won't need to be kept at home from the fair for his own sake. And I know-I feel sure-our Tom would never so disgrace us and break our hearts. I can trust his good principles, though it makes me shiver cream and lemonade. And the ten miles' ride with you and the children would be a rest and pleasure any time. And I suppose could get a prize or two for butter or fruit as well as I have before. Tom has done splendidly with the garden this year and his vegetables will make a nice showing if he chooses to take them, and so will some of your stock. But you remember how our best hand went off on a spree last fair time and worried And wouldst thou set thy tender hand, and tired you out for need of his help. It's just that side of it, John, that has worn me out."

This was about six weeks before the date for the fair, and on that same afternoon the W. C. T. U. was also discussing the coming fair.

"I suppose it will fill the town full of drunken folks and make a harvest for the saloons," said Mrs. Billings. "I wish there would not be any fairs until prohibition carries in our town. They are more harm than good the way they are run now."

"Couldn't we put an influence in this one to help bring prohibition?" asked Grandma Sickles. "There will be lots of folks there, if we could only set them at our kind of thinking, and farmers are more willing than most folks are to think right. Edith Thomas's Protest.

A bright correspondent of the Woman's Journal (Boston) answers well the time-worn arguments against women's political equality with men.

The cause of the remonstrants has its poet! Edith M. Thomas has lured her muse from the realms of Greek mythology and exalted sentiment into the dusty strife of the political arena of New York State. The Critic publishes this, her "Protest":

materialize. "Nay, make not law, but be thou law, my love,

And rule the land through me." This pretty little sentiment is the burden of the legislator's song in every State. The men who framed the constitution of Kentucky some 44 years ago, were of the opinion that "my and framed laws that forbade a married woman to make a will, that gave her husband absolute possession the time of her marriage or might acquire thereafter; and in order to keep her from acquiring any, they made it lawful for her husband to collect her wages and spend them as he pleased. Then they crowned their work by fixing the "age of consent" at

In the course of time "my love" began to be dissatisfied with these arrangements, and concluded that she would rather help "make the law" as far as a disfranchised citizen can do such a thing. After a ten years' struggle she has just succeeded in straightening out the muddle of "married women's property rights." Her experiences in "being law" and "making law" without a vote have combined to breed in her soul intense dissatisfaction with the existing order of things. To be law means to be a slave. To make law without a vote means to be a beggar and a suppliant in the halls of legislation and the courts of justice. Neither attitude can be pleasing to a self-respecting woman, and she now proposes to make the law in pure masculine fashion, with a ballot for her tool.

If Miss Thomas intends to aid (?) the remonstrants by more "Protests" in rhyme and out of reason, we advise her to follow Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's example, and merely protest, without going into argument. Mrs. Beecher is reported as saying: "I am unalterably opposed to woman suffrage. . . I always have been and always shall be opposed to women voting. There is no need of discussing the question, as there is nothing to discuss, from my point of view. NEWS FROM THE LODGES .- The Grand Chief Templar sends us the lodge workers. We will be glad to receive news items, fresh and crisp,

To the Editor of the Home GUARD:

Dear Sir,-In your issue of July 30th there appeared a letter from a Grand Lodge representative complaining that the Grand Lodge officers had not carried out their instructions in sending items of news to the public press. Unfortunately the resolution referred to does not appear in the love" should "rule the land" through printed minutes, but I think in spirit, if them, and "my love" acquiesced as a not in wording, it applied to the whole "womanly women" should. Then jurisdiction and not only grand but these gallant legislators went to work district and subordinate lodge officials were asked to send all the news they could to the press; in other words, to take advantage of all the free of all the property she might have at advertising that could be obtained. It has been a source of keen disappointment to me that this course has not been more generally followed. Good Templars in Ontario are far too modest, far too much given to hiding their light under a bushel. In the traveling I have done since entering office I have made it a point to ascertain how our order stood with the local press, and in every case have found that the press was not only willing but anxious to publish lodge news; but very little was offered, The HOME GUARD is asking for Good Templar news every week and so far only District No. 16. has responded. I wish to impress upon the members of the order in general and my deputies in particular the vast importance-of keeping the order continually before the general public. Every lodge meeting or meeting of any kind in connection with the order should be reported not only in the local papers but in any papers of wider circulation to which access can be gained. Very few people form a proper estimate of the giant results N. W. T., and Lacombe, N. W. T. up of this plan. Other orders very wisely take advantage of the newspaper, what is the reason the Good Templars so persistently ignore it?

Brothers and sisters, wake up! I ask each of my deputies to send or cause to be sent a report of his next lodge meeting to his local papers and to temperance organization we must let no opportunity slip of getting and keeping ourselves before the people.

An ingenious mother tells in the Philadelphia Times of her method to induce good behavior in her little family: "We have a quantity of brightcolored stars, and when the children have been good all day we paste one of the stars below each of their names, which we have written on white paper and fastened in a convenient place on the nursery wall. When they have been better than usual, or done a generous or very thoughtful act, we paste on a gold-colored star, and you cannot imagine how they work for them, and how disappointed they are an extensive tour in the Maritime at night when they get no star at all."

How an Old Lady Was Released from Suffering.

Strong Testimony of a Reliable Witness Added to the Already Long Chain of Evidence-Why Suffer When the Means of Cure Are at Hand?

(From the Leamington Post.)

Mrs. Mary Olmstead, a highly-respected and well-known lady residing south of the village of Wheatley, eight miles from Leamington, has been the subject of an experience that has created not a little wonder, and has excited so much comment in the vicinity of the lady's home that the

Proceeding to the handsome farm residence, we were ushered into a room where sat the genial old lady. Upon inquiry she of health. She expressed her willingness to make public the particulars of her suffering and cure, stating that while she did not care to figure prominently in the newspapers, yet if her testimony would relieve others suffering as she had done, she would forego any scruples in the matter. She then related the story of her case as follows: "About six years ago I was stricken with sciatica rheumatism, which first made its appearance in my left knee, but gradually took possession of all my limbs. Within three months after its first appearance I was unable to leave my bed, and day and night suffered the most excruciating pain. My limbs were swollen to more than twice their natural size, and drawn out of all natural shape. My feet were also badly swollen, and my right arm was in the shape of a semicircle. For three long years I suffered in this manner, being unable to put a foot to the floor, the only way I could move around was by being wheeled in a chair. My appetite gradually left me until I had no desire or relish for food of any kind, and I got very thin and weak. During all the time I kept doctoring with the medical practitioners of the neighborhood and swallowed gallons of medicine, which cost my husband much money, but am unable to say that I received any benefit from this medicine. My agony kept increasing and my system growing weaker, till many times death would have been a welcome relief to my sufferings. After reading in the newspapers about the many cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I decided to try them. My case was a stubborn one and it was not until I had taken a half a dozen boxes of the pills that I began to feel an improvement. I continued taking the pills. however, and never had a relapse, and today I am as hearty and healthy as I was before the rheumatism came on. I am now able to knit and sew as fast as any young person, while for years my fingers were as stiff as needles. I owe my recovery entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and will always have a good word to say for them." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills may be had of

Runaway Sophie.

(By Clara J. Denton.) You have often seen a pretty little calf tied under a shade tree, and perhaps you have felt sorry for the calf because it could not go wherever it

I know a cunning little girl who has to be tied to a tree just like a calf. "Oh," you say, "they fasten calves up because they run away and get into mischief, but little girls know better." Yes, some little girls do, but I am afraid this one does not.

They call her "Runaway Sophie." Although her mamma allowed her to go anywhere on a large and well-shaded lawn, and gave her many beautiful toys to play with, she was not content, but would run away, far beyond the sound of her mamma's voice.

One day she was gone a whole hour, and as she is so very little her poor mamma thought some dreadful thing had happened to her.

So she said to beself: "I want Sophie to be out or woors in the fresh summer air, but I cannot run after her so much, neither can I watch her every single moment; as she will not obey me, and stay on the lawn like a good child, I must treat her just as they do the foolish little calves who do not know enough to do as they are told." So she tied her up with a long rope. The knot is a very hard one, and Sophie cannot untie it, although she tries very hard to do so.

She has her dolls and her toys all and wants to get those that are farther off, but she cannot quite reach them.

Isn't it a pity that a dear little girl cunnot be trusted to run about freely? Of course you never run away!-The Outlook.

A LITTLE GIRL'S STORY. "I'll tell you, Daisy, something nicer than playing dominoes," said Kitty, packing them neatly in the box. "It's helping each other improve."

When she opened the gate to carry the note to Daisy she spied that little girl coming out of her own, evidently on the same errand.

They hurried toward each other holding a note at arm's length before them, with a look at once timil and questioning; then a smile of forgiveness beamed from both faces, and feeling that the trial was at an end, they sat sociably down on the edge of the

The art of reckoning is very seldom taught in the Chinese schools except in a rudimentary way. The abacus is a slow and clumsy device compared with written Arabic numerals; and yet the Chinese must employ it for even the smallest processes which Americans usually perform in their heads.

The Chinese are becoming conscious of their deficiencies in this respect, and are attempting to introduce arithmetic into their system of education. A Shanghai newspaper says that during the present year, for the first time, arithmetical problems were included in the triennial Government examinations for the Hsin-ts'ai, or lower mandarin grade of scholarship. One of these problems was the following:

Still, his keen blue eyes, fastened earnestly upon my face, seemed to look me through and through, and held my attention; and the poor man's evident sincerity

"Adam, where art thou?" The quaint salutation still rang in my ears. "My name is not Adam," I said, gently.

With a half smile the man lowered his voice, and murmured: "God said unto Adam 'Where art thou?' Thou art not Adam, and I am not God; but God can speak to thee through me." Then with solemnity he asked: "Do you drink?"

"Drink! my friend, do I look like a man that needs a temperance lecture? Why do you ask a stranger like me such a question?" "Pardon me, sir," he said, and, peering into my face with a doubtful expression, he added, ruefully: "I'm glad if you don't !"

"Well, then," I said, to test him, what if I do take an occasional glass of wine or beer?" This question appeared to stir up the old man's animation. "Ah, now," he answered, "just listen to my story. If you never take strong drink, the tale may not help you, except as by telling it you may do good to others."

"Perhaps the story is too long; remember, I must hasten on by the next train!"

My manner must have reassured him in spite of my words, for he entered at once upon the story of his life. He was a United States pensioner, and lived with a widowed daughter not far from that station. In his own odd he unfolded what he thought to be the important lesson to be communicated, substantially as follows:

she was as good as she was beautiful. We set up in life on a small farm near the town, and in time we had two daughters who grew to womanhood as lovely as their mother, and that is saying much for them. The elder was a brunette, and the younger a blonde. Indeed, sir, they were ideal children. Alma, who, as you see, most favored her mother, brought us grace and goodness, and Jeanette came to increase these gifts and add her own sunshine and affection. Their devotion to each other was always remarkable; it hardly occurred to them or their parents that during their girlhood they would ever be divided. I myself," the old man the first clouds to that heaven of a home. A began to drink, first, wine a year before Jeanette's birth was a hard drinker of whisky. This drink habit absorbed by income so much that Alma tried to help out the home life by her own earnings. She took the village school, and was for several years the accepted teacher. Our State Senator the Hon. Hiram Brown, lived in the village and owned a large store. His son Henry after graduating from college had returned to assist his father in business. The Senator was a pillar in the village church, had been No one had thought to teach the for years an old-time Whig, and was naturally among the first to help in organizing the Republican Party. So you see, sir, Mr. Brown, a 'teetotaler' and Christian, was eminently respectable, and his son a grand young man free from any bad habits. He and Alma soon loved each other, and were married. The village approved the match, though some said: 'Too bad her father drinks so much; yet Alma is a fine girl and cannot be blamed for the old man's sins!' Ah, sir. It was a couple—a tall, broadshouldered young man with refinement and culture, and the veritable beile of the village, a woman true, good, beautiful, and much beloved in spite of the

That scar, horseshoe shaped, was made by the kick of a horse; but neither that nor the wrench of my nose, the result of a drunken brawl, was very noticeable till whisky did its business. When I went home intoxicated the scar and the nose became inflamed, yes, red and hideous. They were thus a sign, a shock that was dreaded. By their suddenly appearing my wife and daughter were often brought to tears. You may be sure I often tried to reform as I saw the respect of my townsmen and my family gradually oozing away." The old man again dwelt on the happy household of Henry Brown. I could almost see their snug little home-Alma the pride and joy of it. "It was the happiest moment of my life when leanette, my sweet blonde, came dancing into our sitting room and cried out, 'Gh, papa, mamma is just back from Henry's, and says they have a baby boy! "Of course, as soon as I could be permitted to see the youngster I was informed by Jeanette, and I set out for the Browns'. Unfortunately, I met a boon companion at the edge of the village. 'The first grandchild!' The event had to be celebrated. I didn't get to Henry's then, but remembered no more for several days. My heartbroken wife forgave me as before when I, in shame, presented myself at home. After a few days I visited Alma. She was possessed of every convenience and luxury that a fond husband could provide or her taste select. Henry was away just then; he had gone to the postoffice for army news, for the great war was on. And there was Alma in an easy rocker, with the sleeping babe tightly hugged to her bosom. She hardly noticed me; she was gazing forward with a far-away look, and her eyes were red with weeping. 'Why those tears?' I said. What could be the matter? My bride was a charming answer, not even a look. her eyes did young girl, with dark brown hair and know we never get to be old enough speaking eyes to match. She was singularly loved by all the village; for pulse, like one in a dream, she arose and, holding the child in one arm removed the little blanket, and for a moment displayed the face of her twoweeks-old baby. She covered him again, and placed him in his crib and. covering her face, cried out: 'God forgive me; thou knowest that I am not wicked. There is none to deliver me out of thy hand!' Clearing his throat the old man con-tinued: "I did not know the Scriptures then, but it soon dawned upon me. The child, if not positively idiotic, had a horrid, changeable birth mark. The scar and the malformed nose came to the innocent child, and by no fault of the God-fearing Henry and Alma. My daughter, at every look cast upon her child, had grown more and more morbid, so that at my visit she became almost beside herself. Her intense affliction had taken on a strange type. 'The cruel marks on the face of the child are traceable to the mother. My kind, loving husband, as soon as he realizes it will hate me. Oh, this terrible heredity! How can I bear it? The innocent suffering for the guilty!' She had tried hard to guard this horrid disfigurement as a secret from Henry, but, of course, such a strain could not last long. Fear first, then councealment, then anxiety, then cruel misgivings, all intensified by her constant grief, let in time to positive derangement. My poor daughter, my Alma, believed herself despised by all the members of her husband's family. She declared that she was a curse to him, where she had hoped to be a blessing, because my sins were visited upon her first, and afterwards upon her child. Of course I never drank any more alcoholic drink.'

At the next station this singular old man left me; but he had already told me that poor Alma had soon been carried to an insane asylum, and that Henry went to the war, never to return. "I cared for the little one," he said, "till he was 15 years old. The red horseshoe scar and the malformed face grew worse, and the boy always walked and talked like a drunkard, half intoxicated. He ran away from me and is now somewhere struggling for life among men." As he shook my hand he added: "You may meet him, my grandson, somewhere. Tell him his sad old grandfather has sought him for sixteen years. My business? It is to plead with young men that they, like me and mine, may not fall under such a curse. God spare you, dear

Nova Scotia Methodists on Temperance.

At the late annual session of the Nova Scotia Conference of the Methodist Church, held in Amherst, an important temperance committee was appointed and its report, which speaks out in plain terms, was adopted. We give the following extracts which will show that our friends down by the sea are taking advanced positions regarding the position of the church to temperance and prohibition:

2. We believe in a pledged membership. Not a man in the ministry indulges in intoxicants as a beverage; nearly 4,000 children have taken the pledge in our Sabbath schools. In the congregation there is an earnest disposition to support, not alone the prinlegislation for the total suppression of are born into a mission. The solemn ciples of total abstinence, but also the liquor traffic.

3. We regard it as so vital a principle that no dealer in intoxicants or moderate drinker can legitimately obtain membership within the folds of our church, neither can a member consistently remain as such who in this matter departs from the conditions of our Father and the requirements of the discipline which are based upon the solid rock of God's inspired word.

4. We regret that the two political parties of this Dominion are still recreant to their duty; they hold out little hope for temperance reform, not having yet reached that point in their history when the principles of prohibition have become foremost in the politics of the country.

5. The conference regards the Royal Commission as an expensive and unnecessary evasion of the prohibition question.

8. That as a conference we pledge ourselves not to vote for any man who will not pledge himself to vote for prohibition independent of any political party, and will recommend the members of the Methodist Church within conference bounds to do the same.

10. Whereas, in the recent plebiscite, more than three-fourths of the possible vote was polled, resulting in immense majorities in the Provinces of Manitoba, Ontario, Prince Edward Island, and Nova Scotia, we regard it as strong and undeniable expression of tion, of "procuring by the use of all the electors in favor of prohibition, but | constitutional means the enactment the declaration of the Government in reference thereto that neither pledge nor promise would be given for prohibition was unwarranted and most unsatisfactory.

The Duke of Argyle's Position.

The Duke of Argyle, father of Lord Lorne, ex-Governor-General of Canada, and one of the largest land-owners in Scotland, is not a prohibitionist, but has become thoroughly convinced that all connection between groceries the early days of the movement to read and liquor-shops should be prohibited. We commend his position to a number of license commissioners in several Ontario towns and cities that can be easily named, whose ideas are much too loose in this matter for men of their position.

Writing to one of his tenants who refused to carry on a grocer's business without a liquor license, he says: "I have long had, and have often ex- Brown, M.P., Toronto; A. Morse, pressed, a great objection to the combination of a license to sell liquors Treasurer, R. H. Brett, Toronto; secrewith the selling of groceries. Men, tary, H. W. Jackson, Toronto. Execuand especially women, who would not go to the regular public house, go readily to a grocer's shop, and it is within my knowledge that in this way habits of intemperance are acquired, where otherwise, in all human probability, they would be avoided."

Our Ontario license law now expressly requires that a grocery and a licensed liquor shop shall be on entirely separate and distinct premises, without any internal communication. The benefits of that law have been very much prevented in several districts by the commissioners deciding that a mere board or glass partition run up through the middle of an old established shop constitutes such entirely separate premises and the grocer is then granted a liquor license, as bebefore, both shops being attended by the same salesmen and orders for both groceries and liquors being taken as before at the same counter. The Government ought surely to interfere and prevent the continuance of such evasions of an excellent law.

Child Rescue Work.

The Origin and Extent of Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The Methodist Magazine of a recent date contains, among other valuable reading, a very interesting paper by Helen Campbell in regard to the work being done in New York for the rescue of children from cruelty and neglect, in most instances caused by the drunkenness and consequent imprisonment and brutishness of parents. The Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children was formed in New York over sixteen years ago and during that time, in Vew York alone, it has investigated nearly 55,000 complaints involving 160,000 children. Of these about 18,000 cases have been prosecuted and about 30,000 children relieved and rescued; 7,500 have been sheltered, fed and clothed in its reception rooms and 70,000 meals furnished.

A great old-fashioned house has been secured for headquarters, or bureau of reception. This is supplied with a number of officers, a telephone, and other appliances for attending to all cases of complaints, day and night. Each case as it appears is registered in the great books and then handed over to the matron and attendants in the temporary home, where all are kept till the case is tried, if necessary, or the child transferred to an asylum or pro-

No less than 227 societies have been organized elsewhere, in various parts of the world, and are now in active operation, following the example of the first one thus referred to. The result of the work, too, has been the framing and securing the passage of laws for the protection and preservation of children. Our new Neglected Children's Act in Ontario no doubt owes its origin largely to that movement.

HOW IT ORIGINATED. The orgin of this excellent movement is thus told:

Late in 1874 on the top floor of a wretched tenement house in the fourth ward, a dying woman lay in the last stages of consumption. With the horror of the very poor for all hospitals see had refused to be taken to one, and lay there dying by inches and visited by the city missionary, a woman beloved Protestant and Catho-

> The missionary sent to the police station, and her story was listened to with the respect she had earned, but the captain shook his head.

"You must furnish evidence of assault before we can arrest," he said. 'Unless you can prove that an offense has been committed, we can't interfere, and all you know is only hearsay. A series of visits to different benevolent societies charged with the care of children brought the same reply from "If the child is legally brought to us under an order of the court, and is a proper subject, we will take it, otherwise we cannot act in the matter." Hampered thus on every side she went next to several well-known charitable gentlemen, and asked what could be done. From each and all came the same reply-"It is a dangerous thing to interfere between parent and child. You might get yourself into trouble if you did so, as parents are proverbially the best guardians of their children." Day after day the piteous appeal of the dying woman went on: "I can't die till something is done. The child is being murdered by inches"-till at

There they hang on the wall of the inner room, a perpetual appeal to all who look, to aid in the work of rescue and make such barbarity for evermore impossible. Face after face comes up, each one an added protest against the misery it has known. Here is little Nellie Brady, with hair a painter would gaze at with delight, found hungry and abandoned wandering in the streets. The gallery of photographs shows what one day of care had brought about, and gives a face full of sweetness and promise, like hundreds of others in like case.

Profited by Prohibition.

Des Moines has not suffered from prohibition. On the contrary, the city has made a greater gain in population, business and improvements of every character since prohibition was a law of the city and state than any six cities, where that law has been entirely disregarded, combined. Taxes are no higher in Des Moines under prohibition than they were under license, while the annual public improvements under prohibition have been vastly greater than under license. It is idle to talk about the 'good license fee' from dealers in liquors in 'Council Cluffs, Sioux City, Dubuque, and fifty other Iowa cities.' There is not a town or city in Iowa that has not collected $25,000 license from the saloons in any one year since prohibition was enacted. If Des Moines had licensed saloons her police force would have to be doubled, all the funds received for license would be exhausted in protecting the saloons, and there would be at least as much expense in suppressing illegal sellers under license as there has been under prohibition.- Des Moines Register.

An Imperial Housewife.

Female suffrage has to contend against very serious obstacles in Germany, as the Emperor, in his usual the movement. Victoria, the Empresent Empress appears to be ill fitted to lead the movement, as she takes a most plebeian delight in pots and pans. The Christliche Apologete, Cincinnati, draws a sketch of the Empress' life, in which it says:

"Before his marriage the German Emperor was wont to say that a 'wife with a talent for making jam is preferable to one who has the wish to amend the constitution.' He must have found his ideal, for in a speech recently delivered by him he said: 'I cannot wish anything more pleasant for the men of my nation than that the women may, like the Empress, devote their attention chiefly to the three great C's Church, Children, and Cookery.

"Augusta Victoria is the daughter of the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, and has been trained to superintend household affairs after the manner of the daughter of German yeoman. Her parents taught her to be saving, diligent and modest-qualities which she now endeavors to instil into her own children. No particular of the imperial household escapes her attention; she takes especial pride in attending to the mending of the Emperor's linen, and darns his stockings, after the manner of old-fashioned housewives, who would consider it a crime to throw her social functions, but delights in the Grand Maneuvers, when she will ride by the side of her husband in the uniform of the regiment of which she is honorary colonel. Much of the Empress' time is devoted to charity, and especially do poor children find a willing listener in her. In giving presents she chooses some useful article, generally a watch. She is not only strict in the fulfillment of her own work, but exacts the same attention to duty from others. The simplicity of the life led by her household may be gathered from the following:

"The Empress rises, summer and winter, at 5 a.m. Breakfast is taken at 6, dinner at 1 p.m., tea at 5 and supper at 8. At 10:30 the whole im-

The nursery-maids are taught to make poultices, oil-skin jackets, plasters, etc., to use the clinical thermometer, to give hot and cold and mustard baths, to care for the skin, mouth, eyes and ears of the babies, and when, how, and how much to feed them. The maids also learn plain sewing and mending, the laws of ventilation and temperature, and to train the babies into good habits. System is the strong point. During the summer the hospital and trainingschool are transferred to their warmweather home at Oceanic, New Jersey, and the nurses acquire the best of practice in traveling with babies, sick

A THOROUGH-GOING SERMON ON THE SUBJECT BY A WOMAN.

Kate Field as a Teacher-She Says It is Part of the Christian Religion-Why Farmers Should Favor and Work for Better Highways.

Everybody has a panacea nowadays for curing our national ills. In the general pillow. madness perhaps I may be permitted to suggest that the most evident duty is the duty that lies next us, and that on the fulfilment of the duty of the majority depends the welfare of all.

It is a self-evident proposition that the salvation of this nation depends upon the intelligence and integrity of the masses. All crime, all bad legislation are due to ignorance, the one unknown quantity which it is impossible to overcome. Admitting the power of the masses to make or mar, the question arises which class constitutes the bulk of our population. It is easily answered: Farmers. To them, then, we must look for the preservation of republic institutions. As they prosper so will the state. It is, therefore, of profound interest to the nation that farmers stand at the top instead of the bottom of the social and financial-ladders.

As ye sow so shall ye reap. By ignoring the farmer, by leaving him in his ignorance, the churches of this country have a deal to answer for. Their missionary work lies here, not in Japan and Africa. The beam needs to be cast out of our own eye before we seek the mote in our brother's. Christianity begins at home and Christianity begins with good roads.

"But farmers oppose them. They fear greater taxation. Moreover, rich men holding unimproved property for speculative purposes also oppose them," say

What of it? Is not this proof positive of the need of home missionaries? Nothing has given me greater satisfaction than the congress of good roads at Chicago during the world's fair and the more recent good roads convention at Asbury Park, N.J., the state that proves its faith by its works and shows the value of good highways by the increase of valuations and of population. The good roads congress of a year ago was an evidence of practical Christianity that should have been the crowning glory of the world's parliaments in point of attendance and enthusiasm. That it was not establishes the fact of urban as well as suburban ignorance and makes the need of an earnest propaganda all the more apparent.

Among various interesting papers read at this congress, that of Professor Lewis M. Haupt, consulting engineer, of Philadelphia, furnished unlimited food for rumination. Professor Haupt's paper should be published as a tract and sent to every farmer in the United States. It would do more as an opening wedge to a change of opinion than anything I know of on this vital subjects of roads.

Seeing is believing. What makes economy in transportation? Reduced resistances to locomotion. Why is water transportation cheaper than that of the rail? Because of reduced resistance. Thirty millions of improvements on the great lakes has saved in the cost of transportation, as compared with rail, $150,000,000 in one year! How does the greater part of tonnage reach rail and water? By earth roads. What is the comparative cost of this earth movement? Twenty-two times greater than by rail and 266 times greater than by water. What further argument is needed to convince enlightened minds of the duty that lies next them?

Bad roads can be made good at comparatively small expense. How to raise the money is the next question. Albert A. Pope, of Boston, suggested at this congress that every state should establish a graduated succession tax of 1 per cent on all estates valued from $10,000 to $100,000, 2 per cent on estates valued from $200,000 to $500,000, and so on, gradually increasing the tax as the inheritance increased. Thus taxation could never fall on the poor. and when good roads were once established they could be maintained at very little

Another speaker at the congress advocated appropriating a part of saloon licenses to improving roads. The detail of taxation must be left to the states. When it is realized that Illinois alone loses millions yearly on account of bad roads, their appalling extravagance becomes evident to all but human bats.

Look at certain counties on Long Island, New York, that have redeemed themselves while less intelligent communities rebel at any improvement that necessitates additional taxation. Towns that never before knew each other are now perennial visitors: farms of little value are making small fortunes for their owners in garden truck hauled to New York markets over good roads, and urban business men seek permanent homes where they can enjoy country pleasures and fresh air within a short distance of the metropolis. The very farmers who were loudest in denunciation of good roads are now their most enthusiastic advocates for the good reason that they reap the greatest benefits.

There are many bats among farmers, not because nature has made them blind. but because bad roads have cut them off from intelligent intercourse. When they learn that the friction of bad roads wears out wagons, harness, horses, oxen and temper, and that the friction of humanity at the far end of a good road means joy and prosperity begotten of better farming, the republic will look to farms not only for occasional Abraham Lincolns, but for its unflinching and enlightened conservators. - Kate Field, in Chicago Herald.

Fruitarians. "Fruitarians" are the latest novelty in the world of cranks. They are ascetic beings who consider modern civilization far too luxurious, and therefore agree to live upon nothing but fruit and water, to live in bare huts without any comforts, and to wear as little clothing as possible. The society is headed by a retired German lieutenant, who has gone to the Sandwich Islands to found a colony in some out-ofthe-way spot, where his disciples can follow out their doctrines undisturbed.

BRUCE WAS HOMESICK.

Agross the Ocean. Bruce was a Scotch collie. His master was coming to live in America, and, being attached to the dog, he decided to bring him to this country. The first morning that Bruce was in his new home, the servant heard a scratching at her door, and on opening it the dog ran in, leaped upon her bed, crawled under the bedclothes, and laid his head upon the

But I started to tell you of Bruce's adventures at sea.

Having decided to take the dog to America, his master bought a ticket for him and led him by a stout chain up the gangplank to the deck of the steamship. He was to be fastened between decks, so the captain said. The poor dog was bewildered at first, and then frightened. When he found that his master had deserted him, as he supposed, and that he could not get away, he howled for a long time.

The sailors, growing tired of the noise, threatened to beat him if he did not ston. so he dropped down on the deck, and cried as if his heart would break. His master paid him a visit before bedtime, and tried to comfort him. How he begged to go into the cabin with the only one he knew in that dreadful place!

But that was against the rules. He cried all night, and the sailors and steerage passengers complained that they could not sleep.

In the morning the captain ordered Bruce to be loosed, and called to him to come up on the saloondeck. Bruce gave two bounds up the steep ladder, and then was at his master's side. He soon made friends; with the cabin passengers, and they were quite willing to have him stay with them.

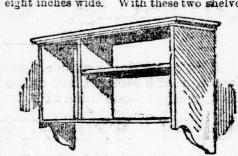

It was very funny to see Bruce stand by the ladder up which he had recently come. and watch the steerage passengers on the lower deck. -Sunshine.

A Wall Cabinet Which Can Be Made in a Few Hours. The illustration shows a simple and useful wall cabinet that can be made by any bor. It should be made about thirty inches long, twenty inches high and seven or eight inches deep, and below the bottom shelf the ends of the sides should project about five inches.

Make the two sides first twenty-five inches long and eight inches wide. With a compass saw out out the bracket effect at the bottom of each side, and then make two shelves twenty-eight inches long and eight inches wide. With these two shelves and the sides form the framework of the cabinet, and fasten it together with long steel wire nails or slim screws. Next make an upright division piece, as shown in the illustration, and fasten it at wailtop and bottom a distance of six or eight inches in from one end: make another shelf and fasten it a little above the centre, between the top and bottom shelf, making one end fast to the upright division and the other to one side of the cabinet, as the drawing shows. Get from a carpenter a piece of cornice molding about two inches wide and long enough to go around the front and sides of the cabinet; mitre and fasten it around the top, and with the addition of a few coats of paint the cabinet is completed.

A curtain across the front, arranged with rings so it will slide on a rod, will add greatly to the appearance.

A Fish With a Lantern. No matter what animals, or groups of animals, are studied, it will always be found that their leading physical traits are exactly adapted to their habits and conditions. A striking illustration of this fact is afforded by the torch fish. This is a deep sea fish, that carries on its nose something like a short, thin bone, which it can illuminate with a phosphorescent light, or extinguish at pleasure. It does not use this lantern to guide it on its way in the depth of the ocean, or to enable it to see what is going on in the neighborhood; the light is put to a more practical use. When the fish feels hungry, it lights up to attract smaller fish. They dark for the light and find themselves in the capacious mouth of the fish. How the lamtern ts lighted and extinguished is not yet clearly understood.

Almost as Tou, h as Cats. Next to a cat, there is nothing so tough and tenacious of life as a Rocky mountain burro, and some of the tales told about this little animal are almost marvelous. One day, as the express train was running into Santa Fe, N.M., the engineer spied a burro walking the track. He whistled and slowed up, but the burro ignored all signals, and, in consequence, was knocked about thirty feet ahead of the train. One hoof still lay on the track, and the engineer, coming to a stop, got out with his fireman to push the carcass into the disch. Each seized a leg, but before they could heave the burro scrambled to his feet, planted a couple of kicks on the two men, jumped the ditch and was off. On the next trip the burro was seen, a little stiff in one leg, but otherwise uninjured.

A Steamer on Mule Back.

A triumph in engineering is reported from the mountains of Peru, where a twinscrew steamer of 540 tons, 170 feet long and thirty feet wide has been successfully launched on Lake Titacaca, the highest navigable waters in the world, more than 13,000 feet above the sea. This steamer, which belongs to the Peruvian government, and is to be used for freight and passenger traffic, was built on the Clyde, then taken apart in more than a thousand pieces and shipped to Mollendo by sea. It was then carried to Puno by railway and transported over the mountains on the backs of llamas and mules and put together by a Scotch engineer.

WHEN WIFIE IS AWAY.

DIVERSIONS OF THE MARRIED MAN WHO IS LEFT HOME ALONE.

The Ever-Recurring Idyl of the Summer Time-An Opportunity for the Gratification of Man's Dearest Wish-The Second

The observant stay-at-home-one who does a little prowling at night-cannot fail to notice the increasing number of midnight lamps which illumine the shades of the great second-story windows. Midnight gas jets come nearer the truth, for men are unanimous in their scorn for kerosene and go into open revolt against it as soon as Madame is safely out of town.

Yes, the number of midnight lamps is increasing, for no sooner does the de-serted husband find himself privileged to do as he pleases, and free from that call—so harassing when he is in the middle of an exciting story—'John, aren't you coming to bed?"-than he buys and borrows quantities of "alloverish" literature, turns on all the gas, gets out a bottle of something wet and a plate of something dry, and proceeds to take his summer read. The summer is the only season in which he is able to gratify the hunger of his dearest wish-that of reading in bed. For, no matter where he may select his bedroom-upstairs or downhis light is sure to disturb his sensitive partner, and to inspire repeated protests against his unreasonable course. She is always afraid that he is going to injure his health or his eyes, and finally, in ostensible deference to her wishes, he gives the thing up as a hopeless case and resolves to wait until she has gone for the summer before resuming his favorite dissipation.

Then after he has taken the whole family to the train, seen that the luggage is on, put all the bags and bundles and the three children in the wrong sections and then had to change them all back again; after he has gone back again to the ticket office to see why their sections are not all together and then had to run back in order to get the checks to his wife before the train pulled out; after he has received any number of hasty moist kisses and bear-like hugs from the boys, he rushes out, steps from the moving train with the air of a man who can do that sort of thing extremely well, and then saunters up the street in a careless, objectless way. As there is nothing to hurry home for, he amuses himself with the windows and the people on the streets, but it proves an unexciting pastime and he takes the car for home. There in the airy solitude of the second story, with the doors and windows wide open and the gas all on, he plunges into the adventures of Stanley Wey-man's heroes, or reads the back numbers of "Trilby," or perchance, forsaking the moderns, goes back to the D'Artagnan romances and lives again the life of the "Three Musketeers.

One o'clock, 2 o'clock, 3 o'clock strike. and still he reads on. At first he reads guiltily, as one who fears to be surprised in some criminal act, but by the end of the week he will have grown accustomed to doing as he pleases and will no longer expect the voice of rebuke from his drowsy mate. - Buffalo Courier.

Dead Paupers Made Useful, Nothing is useless nowadays-not even a defunct pauper. Hood's plaintive Rattle his bones over the stones: He's only a pauper, whom nobody owns is now out of date. The guardians know better than to act as recklessly for often the party concerned is the possessor of a set of artificial teeth which contains a good deal of gold-last relic of more prosperous times—and in the interest of the ratepayers the precious metal must be secured and turned into pounds sterling. Often, too, they are the owners of rings or tiny trinkets, not pawnable, but still containing as much auriferous value as not a few modern gold mines. These have to be collected and also converted into cash by means of the melting pot. In the Holborn Union the melting process takes place once a year. and has just been accomplished for the present season. The jewelry dealt with is what is found on paupers who die friendless and unclaimed in its various establishments.

This week rings, chains, brooches and trinkets have been melted down, and produced a bar of gold, estimated at 11 carats, and worth about £40. A good portion of it was got from the plates of artificial teeth. Mr. Walton said that on one set of artificial teeth there was at least £4 worth of gold. The proceeds are paid into the common exchequer of the union. - London Telegraph.

Ingenious Smuggling.

"One of the most ingenious devices for smuggling was detected in Russia not long ago," said O. L. Ratovitch, of St. Petersburg, to a reporter. "A great number of false bank notes had been put into circulation within the dominions of the czar. They could only have been imported, and, although the strictest search was made habitually over every vessel entering a Russian port, no trace of the smuggling of false notes was discovered. Accident, however, at last brought the mystery to light. It happened that several cases of lead pencils arrived one day from England, and while being examined one of them fell out from a package, and the Custom House officer, picking it up, cut it to a point, and used it to sign the order which delivered up the pencils to the consignee. He kept the loose pencil for his own use, and a few days afterwards, because it again needed a new point he cut it again, and found that there was no more lead. He cut still further, and was surprised to find a thin roll of paper nested in the hollow place where the lead was supposed to be. The paper was one of the false notes, and in this way they had been smuggled into the country.

Homes Are Cheered and Brightened.

Paine's Celery Compound Carries Blessings to Old and Young.

A Wonderful Cyre in Coldbrook, N. S.

A Case That Was Pronounced Incurable.

DEATH WAS EXPECTED.

The Sufferer Saved From the Dark Grave.

The Cured Man Praises Paine's Celery Compound Every Day.

Father and mother, sisters and brothers, should all feel an interest in making home happy, bright and joyous.

Home cannot be a bright and happy spot while some leved one is laid low with diseaseand suffering.

There always prevails much anxiety, doubt and fear, for the safety of the sufferer. The trusted family physician may be doing his utmost to banish pain and disease, but the efforts are too often vain and fruitless.

Into all afflicted homes Paine's Celery Compound comes like a bright angel of mercy. As soon as the great healing medicine is used, hope is revived, faith strengthened, faces look brighter, and every one interested feels that heaven has sent an agent of life that cannot fail.

No living mortal can estimate the blessings that Paine's Celery Compound has bestowed upon Canadian homes. The work of life-saving wrought by the great medicine is marvelous and astounding; the record of cures will endure forever. Every day bright and telling testimony is sent in from all sections of our Dominion declaring that Paine's Celery Compound saved and cured, after other means had utterly failed.

One of the very latest cures reported is that of Mr. John A. Church, of Coldbrook, Here we have an array of solid facts that speak in thunder tones of warning, and at the same time they are calculated to inspire every despairing heart with true hope and comfort.

Here we have a man who suffered in pain and agony for long months, spent all his money for medicines that could not cure, and who was given up to die. Mr. Church accidentally heard of Paine's Celery Compound, and made use of it; the medicine restored and renewed his life.

Mr. Church tells his story as follows: "It is with pleasure that I give testimony in favor of your marvelous medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. In the spring of 1892, I had an sattack of la grippe, which put me into such a condition that I could not sleep or eat. I was completely rundown, had extreme nervous prostration, and lay for days in a half stupefied state. "After spending all my money for medieine which did little good, I gave up to die, when one day a paper on Pain's Celery Compound was brought to me. I at once procured the medicine, and derived great relief from the first bottle. I slept better, ate better, and digestion improved. After using nine bottles I feel like a new man. I can truly say that Paine's Celery Compound snatched me from the grave, and gave me a new lease of life. "I earnestly urge all sufferers to use Paine's Celery Compound, feeling sure it will cure them. Do not spend your money for medicines that cannot cure you."

GARDENING IN DOG DAYS. ...

Things Requiring Attention in the Vegetable and Flower Gardens, In the way of planting and sowing, this is not a notable month, neither is it an especially busy one in the vegetable garden. When crops cover the ground, weeds get less of a foothold, still among the late planting there will be plenty to do with the hoe and cultivator, and the market gardener will be kept busy marketing the different summer crops as they come in. The onion crop will ripen during the month, the first requisite being to pull up and lay in rows until thoroughly dried off. Then clean and market or place in sheds for later use. Late plantings of celery may still be made. The stalks will have time to attain a fair size for late winter

Rutabaga turnips may be sown the early part of the month, and the white varieties as late as the latter part. In case of an attack of the fly endeavor to protect the plants by dusting with lime or wood ashes where these materials can be had. Spinach intended to be used in the fall may be sown, A late crop of bush beans and peas may still be tried. Remember also that if bush beans are not allowed to go to seed, they continue in crop much longer than if only partially picked. The same is true of cu. cumbers. Pick as often as the crop is ready. Repotting plants of many kinds will during this month be actively engaged in. For example the cala bulbs may be shaken from the old, and reset with new soil in a 5 or 6 inch pot and given a place for a couple of months on the outside to be transferred to the house or greenhouse when cold weather comes. Cyclamen will need larger pots as they make fresh growth. Calceolaria and Cineraria seed may be sown at once. Fuchias of known, good winter flowering kinds. may be partially pruned back, a part of the old soil being taken away, and be repotted with fresh earth to induce a full growth. The old Speciosa, set out in the free ground or in a large box in a conservatory makes a wonderful growth in one winter, affording masses of flowers all the Usually the Harrisii lilies come into the market this month and to get them in flower by November they should be planted in pots or in flats as soon as received. There is no better place for them at first than out of doors, covering the soil with four inches of loose manure. Mediumsized bulbs are the most satisfactory, and they may be flowered in 4 or 5-inch pots.

Oxalis is a very pretty flowering bulb. Such kinds as hirta, flabilifolia, elongata and amena should be repotted this month. Eupatoriums, stevias and poinsettias, all aseful winter flowers, should be kept growing by repotting as they make growth. Geraniums intended for winter flowering and now in pots, should have the flowers picked off to encourage free growth and to insure flowers when winter does come.

The making of cuttings for next year's plants in the flower garden will begin with geraniums, as well as stock plants from many kinds of which cuttings will be taken towards the end of the month. Few care about bothering with the large old plants in the flower garden except enough large geraniums for filling vases, which may be taken up the last thing before frost ap-

An old hotbed is an excellent place to root cuttings. Place six inches of sand over the soil. The glass should be kept close and shaded during the day until new roots put forth, which will be in from two to three weeks, depending upon the nature of the plant. Even roses may be rooted in this way if a stock of young plants are wanted. It an amateur has no hotbed mash, a few old window sashes will answer.

Tuberose bulbs set out this month will flower in December. If planted in benches. give them the warmest end of the greenhouse; if in pots they are of course portble and can be taben into the house later. Leave about half the bulb out of the soil in potting, or from where the neck begins to swell. The Achania Malvaviscus is a good old greenhouse or window plant, as it flowers continuously throughout the winter. It belongs to the mallows, the character of the flower being very well shown in the illustration. In color it is bright red. A plant once obtained it may be kept for years, as it is quite shrubby in its habits, being merely pruned back in the summer to make fresh growth by winter. Slips root readily when placed under glass. but for a time they are far less striking than older plants. Habrothamnus is an excellent greenhouse plant with panicles of red flowers at the tips of the branches. It is easily trained up against a back wall in the greenhouse or does well for covering what is often an unsightly spot in the house conservatory. Still another of this old class of plants is Cestrum aurantiacum with brange yellow flowers. It is quite shrubby in its nature. It does not, however, flower oo long as either of the others named. -Orange Judd Farmer.

THE ART OF BUDDING.

The Modus Operandi of This Interesting Operation.

The usefulness of any good variety of fruit may be easily and profitably increased by any farmer by budding which requires little experience and no preparation in advance such as grafting does. Budding may be done in summer while grafting must be done in apring and the scions carefully saved in winter for the grafts. The Stockman and Farmer says upon the subject that budding and grafting, though essentially the same, are different. Grafting is done in spring, budding in the latter part of summer or in fall. Grafting is done by taking a piece of wood-a scion-of the kind to be multiplied and placing it in the wood of the stock. Budding is done by inserting a single bud of the desired variety under the bark of the stock. The stock, if will be understood, is the young tree, or the branch of a tree, which receives the bud, or the scion of whatever fruit is intended to be increased. But though different, budding and grafting are the same in results. They are the same in that the leaves unfolded by the bud or by the scion when the work is successful are the leaves of the identical kind budded or grafted. These leaves make wood and fruit-buds and blossoms and fruit of their own kind. All the stock does in the operation is to supply the life-giving-sap. "The scion overruleth the stock quite," as Bacon wrote three hundred years ago.

The right time to bud is when buds approaching maturity can be obtained, and while the bark of the stock still peels freely. This is when growth is nearly completed for the season and while the stock is forming its terminal buds. At this period the layer of new wood under the bark is still soft and in the right condition to receive the bud. And the bark must peel freely. If it begins to adhere only slightly the work will fail. The best place on a stock to put the bud is generally within a few inches of the ground. But when budding is done in the branches of a large tree one's own judgment must direct. The buds are obtained from scions of the current season's growth. As soon as the scion is cut the leaves are to be cut off all but about a third of an inch of the footstock, this footstock being left to hold the bud by when putting it in place. The best buds are in the middle of the scion, so that the usual way is to cut off and reject a few inches of the immature point, and the same of the butt, the buds on the latter part usually being too small. These prepared "sticks of buds" are to be kept in a damp cloth and a cool place until used. In cutting the scions, it is best to get them from a bearing tree in order to insure accuracy. The budding knife should have a keen edge, a thin blade and a point rounded to nearly the quarter of a circle.

For tying material the best is prepared basswood bark. But woolen yarn does well and also strips of muslin or calico half an inch in width.

When ready for work a smooth place in the stock is selected, and there is (1) an upright incision made clear through the bark. (2) A short horizontal incision is made across the upper end of the first. (3) The bark is then raised by pressing the thin piece of bone-or the point of the knife-against the cut edges with a kind of lifting motion, beginning at the upper end of the incision and proceeding downward, with special care so as not to touch the soft new wood under the bark. This done (4) a bud is cut from the prepared "stick," the knife entering half an inch below the bud and coming out three-quarters or so above it, taking as thin a slice of the wood as may be along with the bud. Some take this thin slice of wood out but it saves time to leave it in and it does just as well, to say nothing about the danger of spoiling the bud in taking it out. (5) The bud is then taken by the piece of footstalk left for the purpose, placed in the upper end of the incision under the bark and pushed gently down to the lower end. If a piece of the bark of the bud projects above the incision it should be cut off. making a neat fit. (6) Tying, to exclude air and moisture, should be done at once. beginning at the lower end and covering all the incision, but leaving out the footstalk and the point of the bud. This completes the operation.

In a week or ten days it may be known if the bud has taken by the piece of footstalk dropping off when touched. If it has dried and sticks fast there is failure. But if the bark still peels freely the work may be repeated, choosing a different place on the stock to make the incision. When successful, the tying may remain about three weeks, unless it begins to cut into the stock by reason of the growth of the latter; in which case untie and immediately replace the tying but not so tight. After untying at the end of the three weeks, nothing more needs to be done until the succeeding spring, when, if the bud is in good condition the stock is to be cut off two or three inches above the bud.

A Convenience in Fruit Gathering. Designs for fruit ladders are legion, some good, some bad, and some indifferent. The quadruple stepladder here illustrated must be classed among the good designs, for obvious reasons. Placed under low, branching trees its use permits one to move about within reach of a large portion of the whole side of a tree, because of its four sides, about which one can freely step. Moreover, when not occupied as "standing ground," the top affords an excellent resting place for the basket. It will be found exceedingly convenient for the home orchard, where one may desire to pick but a basket or two of fruit at a time, and wishes to make a selection of those in the best condition for picking. It should be made strong, but light, so as to be readily moved about -American Agriculturist.

REMOVING NEW HONEY.

When to Take from Hive-Bee Escapes-Round-up in Apiary.

After honey is capped or sealed it deteriorates in appearance if it remains upon the hives and should be removed at once when a fancy article is desired. Its quality and flavor is improved if lett with the bees, but what it gains in this way is lost by discoloration. And further, if a dearth of honey occurs the bees may open some of the cells along the bottom of the section. destroying their good appearance and injuring their sale.

Among the recent developments in aiding a honey producer to remove his surplus are bee escapes. British bee keepers call them super cleaners, and they are simply small cones through which bees can leave the section, but can not return. One of these escapes is fastened over a hole in a board. If, towards evening, a case of sections is raised and this board put between it and the brood combs, the case will be free from bees by morning and can be removed without disturbing the colony in the least. There is no discoloring of the combs with smoke or tearing open the cells by angry bees. Some producers advise putting an empty case under a case of sections partially filled. raising them up, and putting underneath. In doing this great care should be exercised, for a case of completed sections are worth much more than two unfinished. When contemplated, a careful survey of the honey resources should be made, and if the flow promises to continue it may be done. Where the cases are so constructed that the finished sections can be readily removed, and there are unfinished ones in the outside row, these should be put directly over the brood and their places filled with empty sections.

When bees refuse to leave sections there is either a queen or brood in them, and it is better to remove and investigate at once. The brood will be drone and can be fed to the chickens, and the honey that surrounds it extracted. If there is a queen she can be returned to her hive.

Those who keep bees to produce honey simply for their own use, usually have it stored in small boxes. These boxes when full should be removed towards evening, placed near the entrance of the hive and covered with cloth. If the bees get started from the boxes before night there will probably be but few of them remaining in the morning. Take the boxes away early in the morning or robbers will find them. If all the bees have not gone out the top. The bees will pass out through this and those on the outside will not find at some future time. It is a good time now to have a roundup in the apiary preparatory to a fall flow of honey. Where colonies have been allowed to swarm at their own pleasure, there may be parent colonies which have swarmed to death; that is, until they have too few bees to pass the winter in safety. Small afterswarms or casts may also be found, which have only a small amount of comb. If these were returned to the parent colony before the fall flow of honey, they may be able to secure enough stores for cold weather. In cure enough stores for cold weather. In I was cured of Black Erysipelas by my apiary there has not been a single MINARD'S LINIMENT. afterswarm this season and but few first swarms. In my experience with Italian bees I have had but few second swarms, and believe that they are far more provident than the common bees, for the little swarms that flit from tree to tree late in the season are usually black bees. At the present, says Mrs. L. Harrison in Orange Judd Farmer, strong colonies are little more than making a living, and the prospect for a fall flow is quite encouraging, as there has been abundant showers. Polygonum (smartweed) which grows in corn and potato fields is now making its appearance. Spanish needles and beggar sticks which grow luxuriantly upon overflowed lands and along water courses, yield much honey in the fall.

The Queen's Work and Duty.

A prosperous colony of bees at swarming time consists of a fertile queen and a few hundred drones and many thousand workers. The queen is a perfectly developed female, and is the prolific parent of the whole colony. The only duty she performs is to deposit the eggs. This fact is well demonstrated by removing a common queen and introducing an Italian queen in her stead. During the honey flow the queen will deposit about 30,000 eggs per day. She is distinguished from the other bees by her size, form and color. Should her death occur when there are drones in the apiary and eggs in the hive, or if she is to leave the hive with a young swarm, the workers will construct large cells, supply them with "royal jelly" and the eggs or larvæl that would have produced worker bees are developed into queens. The young queen usually leaves the hive when five or six days old to meet the drones in the air, for the purpose of fertilization. The cells in which the workers are reared are the smallest in size, the drones about one-third larger, the queen cell still larger, and resembles a peanut in shape and appearance. In the movable frames which should always be used, the queen cells are readily found about the time swarms are expect-

LIZARDS IN THE STOMACH.

A Reptile Swallowed While Drinking in the Dark.

Excruciating Agony Suffered by Mrs. Westfall-Nerves Shattered and Death Locked for as the Only Relief.

(From the Trenton Courier.)

The editor of the Courier having heard of this strange case of Mrs. Simon Westfall, made inquiry and learned the following facts-Mrs. Westfall said that one evening some three years ago she went to the well and pumping some water drank a portion. As she did so she felt something go down her throat kicking and told her mother so at the time. Little she thought of the agony in store for her through drinking water from a pump in the dark, for a female lizard found its way into her stomach and brought forth a brood. After while the sight of milk would make her tremble and she had to give it up. The disorder increased so that the very sight of milk would produce effects bordering on convulsions. She lest her appetite but would feel so completely gone at the stomach that she had to eat a cracker and take some barley soup frequently to quiet the disturbance within. She took medicine for dyspepsia and every known stemach disease, but got no relief. She changed dectors and the new doctor having had an experience of this nature before, gave her medicine to kill and expel the lizards. For three years the poor moman suffered all kinds of physical and mental agony. Her whole system, kidneys, liver and stomach were all out of order. Her heart would flutter and palpitate so faintly as to be imperceptible, and a smothering feeling would come over her, that it was often thought she had lmost gone, her nerves shattered so that the least sudden movement would bring on collapse through extreme weakness. Sitting or standing she would be dizzy and experience most depressed feelings and lowness of spirits. After the removal of the reptiles, the doctor sanctioned the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she took three boxes, but found no apparent relief. She then gave up their use believing she was past the aid of medicine. At this time Mrs. Haight who suffered twelve weeks with la grippe, and who was completely restored by taking Dr. Wililams' Pink Pills for Pale People, urged Mrs. Westfall to begin the use of Pink Pills again. She did so and soon she perceived given her last gasp. Her memory was their beneficial effects. Her appetite began to improve and for two months she has steadily gained strength, health and steadiness of nerve and memory. She can now do her household work and feels as well as ever. She says she cannot speak as strongly of Pink Pills as she would like to, and feels very grateful for the great good resulting from the use of this wonderful medicine. Mrs. Haight, before referred to, is enthusiastic over her own perfect recovery from the after effects of la grippe, feeling as well as ever she did in her life. She

PIN WORMS.

No More Misery. ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsclously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.
