

The fight in Medicine Hat was a close and exciting one, and Sisson led until the last poll was heard from, when his diminishing majority vanished, leaving the Minister of Agriculture a victor by seventeen.

Bennett Goes Down

The most notable feature, apart from the Government's sweeping victory, is the fall of Mr. Bennett, the Conservative leader in Calgary, where he went down under the onslaughts of Hon. Mr. Cushing, minister of public works, who, in the role of opposition leader, a whirlwind platform speaker, and ran in the Conservative city of Calgary, but his connections with the C. P. were his undoing. In connection with leading Calgary Conservatives and the superior generalship of Mr. Rutherford and his associates resulted in his falling.

Some of the Issues.

The Conservatives at first sought to make the issue the question of provincial rights, arising out of the autonomy legislation, but latterly the government took the offensive by attacking the defensive by their references to Mr. Bennett's entangling alliances, because of which the Liberals would be in a position to take over the necessary provincial facilities for the construction and extension of the Grand Trunk Pacific. This practical question being raised, the Conservatives were forced forward, the educational issue was largely eliminated and Mr. Rutherford scored an almost complete victory. The result was a surprise, and a quiet man, quite the opposite of the late Opposition leader. He is a barrister practicing in Strathcona, and has been a member of the provincial territorial Legislature. His chief lieutenants are Hon. C. W. Cross, attorney general, who, like the Premier, was defeated in the last election, and Mr. Bennett, conducts a newspaper in Calgary. He is a splendid type of the honest, sensible, in the popular sense, politician, and of great public usefulness. Mr. John T. Moore, who was defeated in Red Deer, is well known as a former resident of this city.

This is the first election in the new Province of Alberta since the granting of autonomy at the last session of the Legislature. The area of the Territory of Alberta, which was considerably smaller in area than the present province, was represented by 12 members, of whom Mr. Cushing, who had in all 35 members. No Alberta elects 25 for herself. There are largely men as new to public life as the province, and the province's confederation. The lieutenant-governor, Hon. T. H. V. Bulyea, was formerly minister of public works in the Territories, and was defeated by Mr. Rutherford was also a member of the House. Including the Premier, however, there are only ten members in the Legislature at Regina.

Washington, Nov. 10. — General Morozova, the Persian minister, who arrived here yesterday, in an interview, spoke of the deplorable conditions existing in his country growing out of the cholera epidemic of 1904, the failure of the crops and the increase in the prices of the necessities of life.

"Ordinarily, in time of crop failure, the Persians depend upon their next door neighbor, Russia, for wheat," said General Morozova, "but Russia's war resulted in the importations to Persia being so greatly diminished that few were able to profit by it, and then only the better classes, as the Russian war prices were most exorbitant."

"Two-thirds of Persia's commerce is with Russia," said the minister, "and the war crippled our industries in nearly all directions. Each year about 150,000 of our people on the western frontier go into the Caucasus to work, principally in the grain field, but the war and the disturbances there have paralyzed even the agricultural pursuits, and these men have been unable to work practically, for the past two summers."

"The cholera has passed, the war is at an end, but our people are still suffering from the problem of living through another year of paucity. To provide that their granaries may be filled next autumn."

$100,000 MISSING

Certificates Belonging to Big Philadelphia Bank Go Astray.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—Foreign certificates to the value of $100,000, consigned to the Tradesmen's National Bank, of this city, by special delivery, from C. Schumacher & Company, of New York, have been lost by a special delivery boy in the employ of the local postoffice. The package disappeared about 9:15 last night, and no trace of it has been recovered. George Dougherty, the messenger, whom the package was entrusted, has been suspended, pending an investigation. It is estimated that the certificates are of value only to the banks.

Lien Chau Trouble Spreads.

Hong Kong, Nov. 10. — The trouble at Lien Chau and in its vicinity is spreading. The villagers are reported to be arming.

City Solicitor Meredith stated today that he had not received any further details of the judgment handed down against the city by the Privy Council. It is expected that the decision of

NO PARTICULAR FAULT FOUND WITH SNOW CLEANING SYSTEM

Members of Board of Works
Think That It Is Fairly Satisfactory.

Now that the winter is pretty close hand the question of snow plowing is coming in for its annual consideration
at the hands of the aldermen.

At the board of works last night, a memo was read from the council instructing it to deal with the removal of the snow from the sidewalks
but none of the aldermen was prepared to offer a suggestion as to how the present snow plowing system might be improved.

At least, Ald. Garratt alone had an idea, which was that the city might secure "automobiles" to use on the plows.

Assistant Engineer Kirkpatrick told
the committee that the present snow plows were not ideal sidewalk cleaners.
They were simply meant to remove enough of the snow to make walking easy. To his mind if the city had a snow area bylaw, Mr. Kirkpatrick believed it would still be necessary to have a number of snow plows.

Ald. Garratt even thought the present system was very good.

So did Ald. Forrester, who, however, wanted to see the city have better plows.

The board resolved to communicate with Waverley regarding a plow in use there.

The idea of passing a bylaw compelling citizens to clean the walks in front of their premises did not have a single advocate.

The attention of the committee was drawn by Ald. Gerry to the condition of Talbot street, between King and York streets. The road is full of holes, and dangerous to traffic, and the committee were unanimously of the opinion that something should be done to improve it. A vitrified brick pavement will be initiated. It was suggested to include the half block between York street and the Grand Trunk tracks in the initiation, but it was stated that two large owners there would sign against it, and knock out the whole work.

The committee reported that under the present laws the city had no power to pass a bylaw prohibiting traction engines traversing city streets unless loaded on wagons. The committee desired to prevent engines passing over the permanent pavements, owing to the danger of damage to the latter, and a manufacturer to ascertain if the cause for complaint could not in some way be overcome. An extra set of wheels
for the city streets was suggested,
but this was said to be prohibi-
tively, owing to the heavy expense.

The committee decided to recommend the council to adopt Ald. Garratt's motion, preventing citizens, when petitioning for permanent pavements, from demanding the specifications and fixing
the cost of the same.

"It's a step in the right direction,"
said Ald. Gerry.

Mr. Hartman's letter was read, threatening legal proceedings if the purchase of some land in West London from Mr. Seagor was not resounded. It was stated by the chairman that all land for breakwater purposes was secured through the city solicitor, to whom Mr. Hartman was referred for information he desires.

City Solicitor Meredith will report on the claim for damages presented by Mrs. Kew, who fell on an alleged defective sidewalk on Dundas street east and injured her leg.

The petition against a sewer on Lyle street was reported to be insufficiently signed.

Ald. Forrester, chairman, Gerry, Garratt and Wyatt, Mayor Campbell, Secretary Bell and Assistant Engineer
Kirkpatrick were present.

UNCLE SAM NOT MUCH ON GIFTS

Receives Them From All Parts of the Globe But Sends Little in Return.

Washington, Nov. 10.—It is not probable that the revenues of the Federal Government will be seriously affected.
Whatever may be done about the duties
upon the presents which Miss Alice Roosevelt has received during her visits to China, Japan and the Philippines. Their value has been very much overestimated. There is another point of view, however, and a more serious
one. If you will go over to the National Museum, into the Corcoran Art Gallery, the Department of State and the White House, you will find a large number of works of art, swords, robes and other articles, which, from time to time have been presented to the Government. In the collection of the National Museum, in the cases of the persons in authority, by the sovereigns of foreign nations. But you can search the palaces and museums of all Europe, Asia, Africa and the islands of the earth, without discovering any thing
of any value ever presented to anybody, great or small, by the Government of the United States. We have sent $100,000 worth of guns, with other military articles, to the exiles and Laskins along the Lena River delta on the Siberian coast, to reward them for the aid and comfort they gave to the survivors of the Jeanette Polar expedition; we sent a few insignificant gifts to the Sultan of Zanzibar, and the Negus of Abyssinia, to make their hearts good, because we wanted them
to sign trade treaties, and every year or two Congress votes a watch or chronometer to some person who has saved the life of an American sailor or rendered assistance to an American ship in distress.

But Uncle Sam is not in the habit of making presents to anybody, and that constitutes a serious objection to continuing royal and distinguished guests or having our great men travel about the world. Gen. Grant, for example, came home laden down with valuable mementoes, presented to him
by potentates in every part of the universe, but nothing was ever given in return. The contrary has never even officially acknowledged by our Government. Gen. Grant was unable to reciprocate; he was so poor that he was compelled to pawn these presents to William H. Vanderbilt in order to raise $20,000 at the time of the collapse of the Grant and Ward Bank. Most of them are now in the National Museum, re-acted without that they were presented to him, not as an individual, but as the most eminent living American. The Sultan of Turkey, the Emperors of Korea and Spain, the Emperors of China, the Shah of Persia,
the princes of India and other sovereigns of the east, in plenty, and to oriental etiquette, usually bestow gifts
of great value upon prominent American officials. The wife of every American minister to whom they have received costly evidences of the Sultan's generosity; because her husband was not allowed to accept a gift under the laws. But I have never met the wife or any member of the family of Cheikh Bey, the Turkish minister at Washington, waiting up to the White House to receive a gift from the President of the United States. The Emperor of Japan has bestowed priceless gifts upon a large number of American citizens; you can find some of them under the roofs of Washington; but the Government of the United States has never made any acknowledgment or return.

Miss Alice Roosevelt was the recipient of several costly souvenirs of this kind.
From the Emperor of China, the Emperor of Korea, the Sultan of Sulu and others. Not long ago President Roosevelt received a portrait of the Empress of China, which had been exhibited at the St. Louis Exposition. He sent it down to the National Museum, where the public can enjoy it. He made a neat little speech of acceptance, and Secretary Herbert wrote one of his graceful letters of thanks; but the only thing established by fact, and still experts to receive what lawyers call a "quid pro quo," and Congress should make an appropriation sufficient to enable the President to send her a portrait of himself chasing a mountain lion, or busting a broom, or delivering an oration, or in the act of delivering the members of his cabinet. When a lady gives her picture to a gentleman as a token of affection, she has a right to expect a return of the compliment; but the President is a man, and he cannot afford to meet the expectation. It is a national, and not a personal matter.

There is good reason to believe that the President will shortly receive another costly gift from China. In the form of a portrait of the Empress Kwang Su.
Hubert, the famous Dutch artist, who has taken out naturalization papers in the United States, and has a studio

in New York city, visited China several years ago and painted the portrait of Prince Ching, the prime minister and several of the mandarins. Then, through the influence of Mrs. Conger, the Empress Dowager's personal friend, he painted portraits of her majesty, one of them being presented to the President of the United States.

This marked an epoch in Chinese history. It was the first departure from the traditional etiquette of ages. Until recently the persons of the sovereign and China and members of the imperial family have been considered too sacred for portraits to be painted of them. When the "Son of Heaven" left his palace grounds to go to the time of the boxer troubles, the police hung cypress screens over the front of every house on every street through which his sacred person expected to pass, in order that it might not be the object of sacrilege. Common people who have looked upon the Emperor of China have been beheld many a time
the Dowager Empress never permitted
the public to look upon her face until she had thrown her veil and the ladies of the court bowed and smiled at the ladies of foreign legations who stood by the roadside.

Then came the portrait incident, and Miss Carl is now describing her extraor-

STATUE OF SATAN HORRIFIES DETROIT

How Herman Menz Publicly Shows His Contempt for Religion.

Detroit, Nov. 10.—To show his contempt for religion, Herman Menz, a contracting stonemason, this morning unveiled a statue of Satan, which he had erected himself, in front of his home, No. 206 Stanton avenue. The neighbors knew he had been erecting something, but were horrified when they found the nature of the work. Church-going people are freely expressing their indignation, and there are hints that the sacrilegious statue
may be wrecked.

On the base of the statue is this inscription in a sort of dog-Latin:
"Homo non fecit creatorem, sed evolutione non fecit hominem, sed homo fecit deum. (Man is not a created being, but the product of evolution.
God did not make man, but man has made gods.)"

Menz has long been an avowed infidel, and last summer when evangelists were holding tent meetings he appeared to the city council to have them stopped or licensed "like any other humbler."

Asked about his unique monument,
he said he didn't believe in God, but didn't believe in the devil either. He shouldn't be erect a statue of him.

The monument is fourteen feet high,
and stands on an elevation commanding a good view of the neighborhood.
Satan is shown in a stooping posture behind a pulpit. He looks over the landscape with a fiendish glare, and his horns protruding from his head.
Carved in the stone in front of him is the big ugly grin.

Menz was born in Germany, but has lived here 21 years. He has a wife and two daughters who, he says, share his views.

"HIS LAST DOLLAR"

David Higgins' Play Pleased Audience
at the Grand.

David Higgins played "His Last Dollar" to a good house at the Grand theatrical company. The play, which was the last night, was well staged, and the dramatic incidents, of which there were many, were well brought out.

David Higgins is an actor of more than ordinary ability. He was the star of the company, and acted with a full appreciation of his part. He was ably supported, the company being strong in all departments. Eleanor Montell, as Esther Downs, the Kentucky heroine, was splendid. The company deals with a Kentuckian who went west and amassed a fortune. He came east, and the shrewd sharpers began to fleece him. Chas. Amos these was his old friend. He wins out against them all, and by taking his last dollar out of the pocket of the last of the sharpers, he was able to beat his enemies. The drama was thoroughly enjoyed.

The orchestra, before the curtain went up, played "The King's Rhapsody." The play, which was the last night, was well staged, and the audience remained standing while the National Anthem was being played.

ROSE COGHLAN TOMORROW.

London and New York have already given their approval to "The Duke of Killarney," in which Miss Rose Coghlan will make her appearance at the Grand tomorrow afternoon and evening. The play is by Captain Robert Marshall, author of "A Royal Family" and "The Second in Command." Mr. Lynn, who is Miss Cog-hlan's leading man, and Miss Miss Phillips, a very talented young actress who has supported Miss Coghlan in the past. The play is "The Duke of Killarney," concerns a young nobleman, who, being unsuccessful in his efforts
to win the lady of his choice, turns heart-decoys her to a lonely castle on the continent. His friend imprisons a rich widow at the same time, in the same place. The women are furious and make all sorts of plots to escape.
Finally the men tell them to go home,
but they are no longer desired. Then Mrs. Mulholland and Henrietta Addison suddenly discover that they really do want to marry their lovers after all.

METROPOLITAN'S EXPENSES

Fourth Big Life Company Before the Investigating Committee.

New York, Nov. 9.—John R. Hegeman, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, was the first witness before the insurance investigating committee today. Before Mr. Hegeman testified, the committee heard from counsel to the committee, called upon L. E. Mulvaney, who was present and laid the case of the company before the committee. Mr. Hegeman, who is a native of Albany, which has been brought up in previous testimony, was maintained by A. C. Felt, an employee of the company. The expenses of the Metropolitan Life were $2,500,000 in 1904, and $2,500,000 in 1905. It was shown that in 1904, $1,940,044 was paid for salaries,
of which $1,600,000 was paid in cash.
Previous to 1902, the president received a salary and commission, but in 1902
his salary was fixed at $60,000, without commissions, and in 1905 was raised to $100,000. Vice-President Haley Pisk's salary is $75,000. The salary of George H. Gaston, second vice-president, is $37,500, and that of Frank C. Angus, third vice-president, is $25,000. No executive office. Mr. Hegeman said, now receives any other compensation than his salary.

In detailing the growth of the company's business Mr. Hegeman said that 35 years ago less than $250,000 would have bought out the company, while today $250,000,000 would not do it. He remembered the time when the company had to go out and borrow the money to pay a death claim, while now the company has a death claim every minute of the 24 hours and is able to pay them.

The system of agencies and the obtaining business in the field was taken up. It was brought out that the average salary of an agent in the field is $11.02 a week. An assistant superintendent's salary averages $18
a week, with commissions, may run to $25 weekly. The average salary of superintendents is from $250 to $500
a week. These, of course, are in direct charge of the agents in the field.

The Sweep in Alberta.

The electors of Alberta have squelched the cry of coercion and replied to the creed agitators in the east. In the columns of some Conservative journals will be found ingenious explanations of the defeat of this or that opposition candidate. We are told that the school question was side-tracked here and there by the local or side issues; that the Conservative leader, Mr. Bennett, covered his party with odium because he was the solicitor of the C. P. R.; that many people were afraid the Grand Trunk Pacific would suspend operations if the Conservatives won the elections; that the Mormon vote went Liberal, the German vote anti-Conservative, and the labor vote militant against the Opposition. To cap the climax, the Calgary Eye-Opener went back on the self-styled Provincial Righters, whereas everyone knows that the Eye-Opener is a name supposed to be inseparably associated with the literary traditions of the Conservative party.

All these and many more excuses will be found for the collapse of Mr. Bennett's long-heralded revolution. "The constitutional issue was overshadowed," says our morning and mournful local contemporary. "The broad question of provincial rights was lost in the little squabbles of the backwoods." Indeed! Then the electors of Alberta regarded the constitutional and school issues as relatively unimportant matters. Either they did not feel themselves to be the serfs pictured by eastern agitators, or they have not the souls of free men. In the latter case they deserve their shackles and manacles. "Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow." The Albertans refused to strike the blow. They failed to rise to a great moral issue. They preferred the fleshpots to principles. Such people are surely unworthy of a second thought from their would-be liberators in the east. They ought to be abandoned to their swinish content.

Business or Charity?

Practically the whole Canadian cotton industry was represented before the tariff commission on Wednesday. The Dominion Textile Company, which asked for an increase of five per cent in the duties on plain gray and white bleached cottons, controls thirteen mills. It is an amalgamation of the Dominion, Merchants', Montgomery and Colonial Bleaching Cotton Companies. The united capitalization of these companies before the merger was $5,323,000. We do not know precisely what it is today, but the manager of the combine told the commission it was "several million dollars more" than before the amalgamation. On this basis, there must be considerable water in the stock. Mr. Gordon, the manager, claimed that the common stock was of real value and was held by a few persons as a controlling interest. The tariff commissioners estimated, from the figures submitted to them, that the stock represented only about one-sixth in cash of the amount at which it stood on the books. Mr. Fielding delivered a home thrust when he observed that "the public did not seem disposed to favor high protection in order that a company should thereby be enabled to pay dividends on watered stock, or stock of that nature." He added that the common stock of the Dominion Textile Company "may not be worth anything now as a dividend payer, but—addressing Mr. Gordon—"you seem to want us to give you a chance to make it worth something."

The manager of the Montreal Cotton Company, another big concern, asked for 10 per cent more protection on fine, plain, and fancy-woven goods. He admitted his firm during the last ten years had paid an average dividend of about seven and a half per cent. He was not asked whether there was any water in the stock. Mr. Morrice, president of the Canada Colored Cotton Company, claimed his company was not making a reasonable return on its investment, and had no water in its stock. He asked for an all-round increase of five per cent.

The remarks of the Minister of Customs and Minister of Finance give some assurance that the consumers of cotton—and every man, woman or child in the country is one—will be considered in any tariff legislation. The imports of raw cotton show that there has been a remarkable expansion of the cotton industry in Canada during the past seven years, during which the Canadian manufacturers claim they have been injured by the British preference. New mills have been built; none of the mills are idle, and not a few are working overtime. The present tariff gives the Canadian industry 35 per cent protection on colored cottons and 25 per cent on cottons gray and white, with a third off to British goods and a surtax of one-third on German goods. This is pretty stiff taxation on an article of universal consumption, and it has sufficed in the past to pay dividends on a good deal of water. Some of the cotton manufacturers appear to regard the Government as an eleemosynary institution.

Reciprocity in Massachusetts.

The state election in Massachusetts had some interest for Canadians. Mr. H. M. Whitney, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-governor, who organized the great iron and steel industry in Cape Breton, made reciprocity with Canada the main plank of his platform. The Boston Herald says the vote for Lieutenant-governor was intended to be a species of referendum on the question of tariff revision and reciprocity. The normal Republican plurality in the state is 40,000, but Mr. Whitney's opponent, Mr. Draper, had a lead of less than 2,000, the smallest plurality any Republican candidate for the office ever received. The Republican candidate for governor, on the other hand, had a plurality of nearly 25,000. His Democratic opponent did not emphasize the tariff issue as did Mr. Whitney. The fact that the latter ran so far ahead of his ticket is another proof that thousands of Republicans deserted their party on this question.

Mr. Whitney's connection with some unpopular street railway legislation cost him many votes in the central and western part of the state. But for this side issue he would have been elected by a large plurality. The sentiment for tariff revision in the state is so strong that the Republican party was compelled to bow to it, and in convention declared for immediate action by Congress. This had the effect of keeping in line many prominent business men, members of the Republican party, who have been associated with Mr. Whitney in promoting the reciprocity movement. They have not charged their opinion and will continue to bring pressure upon their representatives in Congress.

The industries of the New England States are having a hard struggle to hold their own because of their distance from the cotton fields, the coal and iron mines, the hide markets, the wool-growing states and the other portions of the country which produce raw materials. The New England manufacturers want the tariff on these materials reduced or abolished, so that they may import coal from Canada, hides from Argentina, wool from Australia and generally speaking, buy in the cheapest market. Hence the seeming anomaly of manufacturing communities leading the agitation for tariff reform.

Billy Maclean appears to be trying to qualify for R. F. Borden's salary.

What a lot of sympathy eastern newspapers and politicians have wasted on the west!

Young Mr. Bennett was thought to be a wonder by many of our Conservative fellow-citizens. In Calgary he is better known.

If Saskatchewan will do likewise, the Canadian West will have political peace, which is necessary to the fullest measure of prosperity.

We were mistaken in saying that Mr. Ashby, the division court clerk of Belleville, who refused to resign at the request of the Ontario Government, still retained his position. He was dismissed without any charge of partisanship being proved against him, or even investigated. "This injustice ought to recoil on the head of the administration."

The Toronto Globe's Ottawa correspondent asks a question others are asking when he wants to know what principle governed the granting of King's birthday honors to Canadians. Col. Pellatt, of Toronto, is made a knight bachelor—for what? Apparently because he sent a Toronto bugle corps to the old country at his own expense. Titles are cheapened when awarded for anything but talent and public service. Not that commercial talent should be excluded. There are men in commercial life who have made themselves national figures, but Col. Pellatt is almost unknown outside of Toronto.

The Old-Fashioned Indian Summer [Chicago Record-Herald.]

Away with the man who is yearning for an old-fashioned winter once more. With its "four steady months of good sleighing," and the stress frozen solidly over! Let him bustle away to Alaska. And there gain contentment somehow. Just an old-fashioned Indian summer. Is what we are longing for now.

The roses are gone, and the daisies No longer bespeak the leaf. Glad maidens with sweet little freckles Have ceased to roll down to the sea. We can't cause the months to roll backward.

For, alas! we have never learned how. So an old-fashioned Indian summer Is what we are yearning for now.

Wealth of the Russian Imperial Family. [London Truth.]

All members of the imperial family have large fortunes invested out of Russia, usually in France, England and the United States. The Grand Duke Michael Nicolaievitch and the Grand Duke Vladimir Alexandrovitch are believed to be the richest members of the imperial family, next to the czar himself, whose resources are practically inexhaustible, as he draws ad lib. on the imperial treasury, and is the owner of vast estates which include valuable mines and forests.

Which Is Which? [Toronto Globe.]

Evidently the Dominion Government is responsible in the last analysis for the legal identification of the leader of the Opposition. Will the salary go to Mr. Borden or to Mr. Maclean?

A Humourist's Views. [Boston Herald.]

The English humorist, Jerome K. Jerome, explains the penchant of English girls for American husbands by saying that "American husbands are tamer than English husbands." The English husband, he explains, "is less attentive to his wife." In England, too, "there is more club life, so the women must remain at home." Knowing this,

"the English woman prefers an American husband." But, adds the humorist, now, we fear, turned satirist, "American husbands should not be trifled with, for they will become uninteresting." There is quite a general impression in this country that the simple foreigner, the American men have not been without their attraction to English women. At least, the instances are quite rare where our fair cousins interest the men of this country. An American for a husband, no matter how "tame" and "attentive" he might be, who has not a fortune represented by at least six figures. And the same thing, alas! must be said of English men seeking American wives. It is the dot that turns the scale.

Resignation.

[H. F. Gadsby, in Toronto Star.]

Sir Wilfrid Laurier moves as follows after reading Longfellow's Immortal poem:

There is no flock, however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there;
There is no cabinet however defended,
That could have stood for Blair.

J. Israel Tarte for a brief space got busy. And thought to seize my crown.
I'll bet my hat it mule J. Izzy dizzy
The way I turned him down!

Some severances cause my melancholy.
As, for example, Sir Henri Joly,
British Columbia got Sir Henri Joly,
That prince of gentlemen.

Sir William, too—from that staunch friend
With tenderest regret;
Broad-gauged, big-brained, high-thinking
And great-hearted—
I wish I had him yet!

I speak of Sifton with a shade of feeling.
Nor do I yet admit That it was just the squarest kind of dealing.

To choose that way to quit.
Let me be patient! These severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise.
They stimulate newspaper contradictions,
And opposition lies.

They are, at least, a kind of advertising.
And, in this sense, no loss,
Since they must put a stop to law surmising.
If Laurier is boss.

Here still am I! My years may be declining—
Time's a hard one to rob—
But notice, friends, while others are resigning,
That I stay with the job.

American Humor.

"You will only be able to dissect humor when you find its corpse. They (especially the Americans) are killing humor now with too much of it. The American people have funny funerals, funny politics, funny everything."

In Japan.

[London Globe.]

The Japanese are taught to regard his mother-in-law as much as his own mother.

Who was it helped me win my bride,
When I was downcast took my side,
And never has been known to chide?
My mother-in-law.

Who was the first to praise, the last to blame,
Or call me wild and fast,
Or ask too much about my past?
My mother-in-law.

Who soothed my fiancée's papa,
When he was cross, and shouted "Bah!"
And was polite to my mamma?
My mother-in-law.

Who never called me silly, vain,
Idle, effeminate, insane,
Or talked of horses—bridge—champagne?
My mother-in-law.

And now that we are wed, and May Smiles and anoints me night and day,
Who helps in keeping house and bay?
My mother-in-law.

Shams the Combines.

[Hamilton Times.]

Hon. Mr. Fox has directed that the Master Plumbers' Association be indicted for conspiracy to restrain trade contrary to the provisions of the criminal code. This is the notorious Plumbers' Combine, the rapacity of which has done so much to prevent building and to make unduly expensive the work of building. We do not know whether the long arm of the law will reach the Hamilton branch of the conspiracy simultaneously with that of Toronto, but it is likely that the prosecution will ultimately be extended to reach all in the combine.

MURDERED FOR MONEY.

Then Cremated to Hide Crime—Fate of Owen Sound Man.

Owen Sound, Nov. 10.—Murdered for their money and cremated in the building where they lived, to hide the evidence of the crime, was the fate of Philip H. Ross and his wife, the former an Owen Sound boy, brother of John W. Ross, of Owen Sound, and the latter, Rose, nee Sydenham Township. The young couple were married about two years ago and lived near Kerrystown, a small town on the North Pacific Railway, 40 miles from Seattle, Wash. The deed was committed on Aug. 27 last. Two weeks relatives here were not aware of the tragedy, and it is only recently by a great amount of correspondence and investigation that the murdered man's name is Philip H. Ross, late of Owen Sound.

The crime of a man who, in the Sandwich Islands, the largest volcano in the world, is 18 miles in diameter. Sometimes the stream of lava issuing from it is 50 miles long.

The Hero of New York.

[From the Chicago Record-Herald.]

William Travers Jerome is a native New Yorker, having been born in the city on April 18, 1853. By birth, environment and tradition he should have been a peaceful observer of civic conditions instead of a firebrand to practical politicians. His father, Lawrence R. Jerome, was a broker, banker, promoter, patron of sports, after-dinner speaker, practical joker, patron of literature and art, millionaire and bon vivant. His uncle, Leonard Jerome, built the Jerome Park race track, and was the first man to make a great fortune in Wall Street. Lady Randolph Churchill, of whom Gladstone said that she could make more votes than any campaign orator in England, is his first cousin.

As a child William Travers Jerome was delicate. He was taught by a private tutor and then sent to Williamsport, N. Y., where he entered Amherst, but was forced to leave at the end of the third year on account of his health. Open-air exercises rehabilitated him, and he entered Columbia Law School, graduating in 1884. Several years were spent abroad in travel and reading. On his return he married Lavina Howe, and in 1888 was appointed to his public office, that of assistant district attorney. Two years later he took an active part with the Municipal League in opposing Tammany, and as a result lost his job. It was at this time that he established his reputation as a lawyer in the trial of Carlyle Harris, a medical student, charged with murdering his wife. Mr. Jerome defended the student and astonished his friends in the legal profession by his knowledge of chemistry and of poisons. His next prominent appearance was as assistant counsel in the Lexow investigation. The first exposure of the close relation existing between the police and the criminal classes.

In 1895 Mayor Strong appointed Jerome a justice of the court of special sessions, a position which he retained until elected district attorney. From the outset his work commanded attention, because of the forceful and intelligent way in which he managed to get at the truth.

It was during these days that Jerome earned the sobriquet "The Man With the Axe." He was satisfied that the police were protecting vice, and that criminal had a warning of contempt, because of the forceful and intelligent way in which he managed to get at the truth.

POEMS THAT LIVE.

"Poetry is the music of the soul, and above all of great and feeling souls."

The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls.

[By Thomas Moore.]

The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As if that soul were fled.
So sleeps the pride of former days,
So glory's thrill is o'er,
And hark! that once beat high for praise
Now lies that pulse no more.

No more to chiefs and ladies bright
The harp of Tara swells,
The chord alone that breaks at night,
Its tale of ruin tells.
Thus Freedom now so seldom wakes,
The only troubadour
Is when some heart indignantly breaks
To show that still she lives.

STOP! WOMEN,

AND CONSIDER THE

FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with woman's diseases covers a great many years. You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impedes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

"I feel very much better after something terrible over my mind with my periods. The pains are extraordinary and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have ovarian and womb trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please let me write to you, I hope you can relieve me." Mrs. Mary Dimick, Highland, D. C.

Second letter.

"After following carefully your advice, and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimony, that others may know their value and what you have done for me."

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and an enema, and I feel much better. I have not had a pain since, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy." Mrs. Mary Dimick, 50th and E. Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women, whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, "without trying it, I do not believe it will help me."

You are not to hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

Every Nordheimer Piano Is Guaranteed and Sells at the Same Price to Everybody.

The Nordheimer Piano

The Artistic Piano of Canada.

Think of the uncertainty, unpleasantness and general dissatisfaction of buying a piano from a dealer who quotes a different price to nearly every different customer.

If you look or are known to be "well-to-do" you may be asked from 10 to 25% more than the next customer who may be less prosperous than yourself.

Of course, if you are an expert at "beating down" and wish to spend two or three months in making the purchase, you MAY buy at a fair price from the many-priced houses.

In any case, you are taking BIG CHANCES.

In buying a "NORDHEIMER" Piano you are taking
NO CHANCE.

Every instrument in our warerooms is marked at one price and sells at that price to everyone—no “dickering” or doubting after you have bought.

Terms are liberal for both cash and time.

Nov. 1st, 1905.

The Nordheimer Piano has been used in Alma College for over twenty years, and for the past five years it and the Steinway exclusively. During all that time it has most satisfactorily stood the severe test of constant use for practice by pupils and teachers. The Nordheimer Piano will stand the heaviest wear and at the same time maintain a refined excellence of tone. It is easily kept in tune, artistic in structure, and has behind it the highest integrity in all business dealings.

(Signed) ROBERT I. WARNER,
Principal of Alma College.

No Piano before the public is receiving more favorable indorsement than the NORDHEIMER PIANO with its artistic tonal qualities. It is strictly a musician's piano and has the recommendation and indorsement of all the educational institutions and leading musicians in Western Ontario who know and are known. PIANOS TO RENT FROM $2.00 PER MONTH UP.

"Your nearest telegraph station is Maudslayi," says Mr. Harrington. "Three and a half miles off. I expect it has been lying there for some time waiting for some one to come this way." "I shall not go," says Lord Neville. "The instruments are extremely primitive, and we are quite satisfied if we get the newspapers two days after publication, and the telegrams three days after they have been written. But pray open your telegram," Lord Neville says.

"Why, I have no telegram," says Harrington, "permission, thanks," he says, holding up his hand.

"For the life of God, Carrie cannot keep her eyes from straying towards him," says Lord Neville.

He opens the envelope slowly, indifferently, and unfolds the hideous pink paper; then Carrie sees his face turn pale, even paler than its usual color, and a deathly white, and his lips quiver spasmodically.

"There is no telegraph working on the railway station, I mean—no telegraph office," said Lord Neville.

"No one, Matfield is the nearest, eight o'clock tomorrow," replies Mr. Harrington.

"Thanks."

"No bad news, I hope?" inquires Mr. Harrington, gravely.

"No," says Lord Neville, "the telegram neatly and replaces it in the envelope before he replies. Then he says quietly, and with a marked increase of sadness, 'No bad news, I hope?'"

"No. I might say it is good news," says Lord Neville, with a remark.

"I'm glad of that," remarked Mr. Harrington, "but I don't like to connect telegrams with bad news. I never got on myself that doesn't contain something that I don't want to read. I don't want to read anything you want to wire quite early tomorrow, one of the men can ride over before breakfast."

"Thank you," says Lord Neville; but he does not accept nor decline the offer definitely. Carrie observes, and he says, "I don't care to write letters."

"You are fond of music?" he says, and though there is not a trace of agitation in his voice, a certain weariness is noticeable in his tone.

"I don't like to trouble you and weary you before breakfast."

"Oh, yes," says Philippa, "but we don't mind you. I am fond of hearing such music as you have given us, Lord Neville. You said that most gentlemen played some instrument; if so, that must be the case. I have been told down here in Devonshire. I suppose I mustn't ask you to play again to-night."

"No, you will excuse me," he says quietly.

"Why must be tired out?" says Mr. Harrington, jumping up. "Good-night, Lord Neville, but you were a fiasco and have come down to rest. Come, Lord Neville, you must not quarrel with us, but go and come as you please."

Lord Neville laughed, it was the first time he had done so, and the laugh was a little more pleasant than the first.

"Well I will go," he said. "Good-

"And he held out his hand to Philippa—who gave him hers cordially. "Good-night," he said turning to Carrie. She put her soft hand forward, and he took it. He did so she started slightly, she felt his hand warm and hotly within her cool palm. He just held her hand for a moment, then released it and turned to the door. She bowed her head, and followed Mr. Harrington out of the room.

Carrie rose and crossed over to where the lamp had dropped in to a low socket at her feet, and clasping her knees, perched her chin on the top of them, and stared thoughtfully into the fire.

"Well," said Philippa, "with a mighty yawn, "so ends what you have written. I make a remarkably uncomfortable evening of it."

Silence; the long, straight lines joining over the delicate nose in deep crows.

"I have always admired your temper, Carrie," goes on Philippa, in a tone of friendly calmness "because it is so thoroughly English. You had not tonight you have outdone yourself. Never, in my somewhat extended experience, have I seen a girl so completely at disadvantage. If one were to ask Lord Neville's opinion of you, what do you think he would say?"

"If he gave it candidly, it would hurt."

Still silence.

"I imagine that he thinks you are a tattler. No one in my set would treat a stranger and a guest as you have treated him. There is one thing that I consider me, and that is that he is honest. He has not lied very least. How you could sit there and listen to his playing without uttering a word, I cannot imagine. It passes my comprehension. He has the touch and expression of an angel."

"Silence for a minute; then the red lips, closed so tightly, open.

"Philippa! I would give half the world to know what was in that telegram!"

"Philippa starts. It is bedtime, and, having delivered herself of her reproach, she is silent for a minute.

"I dare say. Perhaps you would like me to go and ask him," ironically.

"Yes, I should," is the candid admission.

"No, no! I will not ask him, you, my gentle Philippa. Oh, no! His lordship can keep a secret as well as most men. I will not ask him. I am sure I did you see him when he read that telegram!"

"I said Philippa! With another yawn. "What a question! Do you think I would be guilty of such unutterably bad form as to stare at a person when he is reading a letter?"

"I don't know, I would, and I w-an," is the calm retort. "Flippa, his face was so pale, and his eyes were so un-teleptic, I saw his hand shake. I said it."

"Nonsense! He said there was no bad news!"

"No, I might say that it is good news," says Carrie, mimicking Lord North's manner.

"I am not sure of the accuracy," "What remarkably good news it must have been to turn his already pale face to the color of marble."

"I am not sharing his secret," "Then it is not nonsense, Flippa. I saw him, I tell you!—I wonder—what was in that telegram?"

Philippa laughs and looks round at the bedroom candlesticks covetously.

"If you hadn't behaved like a savage to me, I might have been able to tell you," she says sarcastically. "As it is, my

"No," says Carrie wistfully "and I want to know so badly."

"You are a miser," she had professed so much indifference to his lordship, you display a remarkable amount of curiosity," Philippa remarks, as she gets up to leave the child.

"Do I!" assents Carrie, comely. "Yes, I admit it! I would give something to know the mystery."

"Mystery! Nonsense!"

"Yes, mystery," repeats Carrie, pursing her lips and frowning at the fire.

"I would not wonder if it was a mystery. To have a guest with 'rippling hair,' who plays the piano 'like an angel,' and who 'must have a real wife'—and who is 'more beautiful than the lord is more; but to have a mystery!—what a mystery! Philippa, our cup of happiness is full, o'er-brimming! It will hold no more."

She gets up as she speaks and takes her candle, and moves toward the door.

"Yes, she does so," she utters an exclamation, and Philippa, turning round, sees her standing in the center of the room, pointing to a piece of pink paper pinned to the wall.

"It was the telegram!"

"Look!" says Carrie in an excited tone.

"An answer to my longing!" cries Philippa, as she stoops and reads. It is the telegram, and she immediately picks it up with her finger and thumb, and stands holding it from her, receding a few paces, but not daring to leave her.

"Carrie!" exclaims Philippa, coloring and coming to her side swiftly, "you are surely not mean to—give it to me!"

"Be calm, Philippa," retorts Carrie, whisking the telegram behind her back and looking over her shoulder to see if she can argue the matter, my sweet sister. Telegrams are not letters, you know. You would not expect to see a letter addressed to the postoffice would you? Why, then, should the postoffice know it? Why should an old woman at Maitfield know what's in the paper as well as Lord Neville?"

Which Philippa laughs, but uneasily.

"Don't be silly, Carrie. Give it to me and I will give it to Lord Neville in the morning."

"Why not we?" repeats Carrie, with a shrug of her shoulders.

"It is to be for him, Philippa, which is it? Are we to tell him?"

The mystery to be solved or to remain a thorn in my heart—She stops and looks at the telegram. It goes—smoothly and untroubled, for noisily the door has opened, and Lord Neville stands ready to receive it.

"I beg your pardon," he says, "I think I have dropped my telegram."

Carrie's arm seems to freeze behind her. Philippa's face goes—smoothly and wide-eyed with horror.

"I think I dropped it here," he says, and looks at Philippa.

"Yes," she says, "it is here."

And looks from one to the other, attracted by their guilty countenances.

"I am so sorry," says she, "I have thrust forward my hand with this hateful pink paper in it."

"Yes, you did!" she says, "Here it is!"

He flushes and bites his lip, then he takes the telegram from her finger and looks at it.

"Have you read it?" he asks Philippa, "that Carrie's face turns pale, and looking him steadily in the face, she says—"

"No," Lord Neville, I have not read your telegram. You have no cause to be angry with me."

His eyes do not flinch for a moment. He stands for a second looking at her, then he inclines his head, goes out with a soft, low sound.

and many houses, but it is still near the city. I am older, but the same son, for in that case you inherit not only title and lands, but also the property which has been settled on you.

This was Lord Cecil Neville's position. Without the prospect of his inheriting the title, he was not a wealthy and influential nobleman; with it he ranked among those giants of gold whose immense income sounds like a thunderbolt. It was a fact, it is somewhat of a nuisance, and most certainly breeds a large amount of envy, that the title is not hereditary, but that it is to be given to the most meritorious and good of his family.

"Be diligent and do your duty," Lord Cecil's father, the Earl of Fitz-Harwood, used to say to him, and he did his duty, and consequently was one of the hardest-working men in England. We all know who is absolutely and benevolently the best of his family, and all men, and he stands highest in the land. Perhaps, next to the prince, who appears to know no more than that one end of the Kingdom on Monday, laying a foundation stone of a hospital, and at the other end on Tuesday, laying a foundation stone of a school, he was the only man in the Kingdom on Wednesday to preside at a charity dinner. Lord Fitz-Harwood worked harder than any man in the Kingdom, and he issued from his steward's office until, having had looked through it; any one of his tenants, servants, or dependents, would have been the friend of him; he answered every letter, examined every charity that was submitted to him, and he was not less diligent in his care as a business man, than in his duties as a benevolent man, conducted his office. A tall, thin, wiry, old gentleman, with a face deeply lined with the wrinkles of age, and a stoop in his shoulders contracted by bending for hours over his writing-table, he was just what you would expect to find by the way—with half that had been white since he was forty, such was the Earl of Fitz-Harwood, Lord Cecil's father.

To go by the rule of consistency, Lord Cecil Neville should have been a keen sportsman, and a devoted hunter; but his delights in laughing at rules, had designed him on a plan directly opposite to that on which she had modeled him.

She made him a poet, a scholar, a musician. In addition to a facile, and a fertile pen, he was a good linguist, and a man's man, was almost perfectly handed some, she had bestowed upon him a highly cultivated and a cultivated mind, and a mind susceptible to the loftiest imaginations.

At college he had spent his days, and he had spent his days in hard study with the result that he took his degrees with high honors and a love for the sciences.

His father and mother, who were sensible, came post-haste and stood beside the bed of the sick and dying child, and said to him, "But Lord Cecil comforts himself."

And he smiled in his dark eyes, and said to his father and mother, "I am contented."

"Don't fret, mother, I don't mean to die."

And he did not. With the same resolution, the same inflexible will, which had enabled him to withstand all the temptations of the world, he set himself to get well, and he succeeded.

And the earl and the countess were naturally anxious.

Lord Cecil was their only son, and he said to them, "I am contented."

And he was one to win the war.

rest love, the earl could consider not contemplate the deed, for he had no doubt that the earl would do as it would if anything happened to Cecil!

When he talked of taking him down to Harwood, the family sat, but the doctors had demurred.

They said that what Lord Cecil required was a quiet place where he could find nothing to do, get rested, and in despair return to the fatal blow, but a quiet place where there should be plenty of variety and amusement, and it possible excitement. They recommended Harwood.

As Lord Cecil was perfectly indifferent where he went, so that he got well, and as the earl insisted to the contrary, he was persuaded that Lord Cecil should make the continental trip. A companion was found for him in a person who had been in the army, and pledged to keep the viscount from anything in the shape of study; the pair were provided with a large number of money and set on their travels.

They went to Paris, and Lord Cecil spent a fortnight languidly visiting the places of interest in the capital of the world, and got very little, if any stronger; the only things he seemed to care for in Paris were the opera and the theatre. He would sit for hours listening to the divine music of Joachlin's violin, or the exquisite melody of Patti's voice.

Mr. Forsyth, his companion, saw that so far, the trip was a failure.

"You don't get any stronger, Cecil," he said, "and I am under the impression that music is a kind of poison to you in your present condition. We shall have to cut this."

Lord Cecil acquiesced languidly.

"Very well," he said.

"Where shall we go?" said Mr. Forsyth.

"Where you like," answered Lord Cecil, indifferently.

"I'll go to Switzerland," said Mr. Forsyth, and he wrote and told them that they were going to Lucerne.

They went to Lucerne; they put up at the Hotel Nationale, overlooking the lake; but Lord Cecil looked at the unspeakable mountain view, the ever-changing light and color in lake and mountains, with the indifference which had characterized him in Paris. He would not get more on the quay, and the bustle of the promenaders and the watermen, and the fruit-sellers, deaf to every sound, and blind to every sight, communing with his soul, poor fashion, and wrapped in a dream state, which was partly born of his peculiar nature, and partly the result of his illness.

Mr. Forsyth was growing desperate and yet, heartily, he had not much to complain of.

Presented to Canadian Archives.

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—The report of the Canadian archives for the year 1904 has been received by Dr. J. H. Ross, Dominion.

In the report reference is made to the transference from Rideau Hall of over 400 volumes of original dispatches and the answers to them, dating from 1751 to the archives. These precious records were sent by Lord Minto and they are naturally much prized. He also sent a series of dispatches relating to the Northwest Territory, the Beaver and British Columbia, a mass of correspondence between the provinces, original instructions from England to governors, and other interesting documents.

These papers are all well-preserved, one document bearing the signature of "George" (George Vancouver) dated in 1763 is an instruction sent to James Murray, "Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of Quebec, In America, Canada and all other territories dependent thereon."

The report contains some old documents printed in full, for Dr. Doughty prefers this method of introducing the ancient records to any form of condensing. Dr. Doughty recommends to the Government a conference of university representatives to arrange for the publication of a new history of Canada in the light of the important historical documents which have recently been discovered.

Telephone Bell Tinkles When Deer Is Ready to Be Shot.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—The Kaiser is nothing if not a sports defender, and which even in his sport he employs "all the modern improvements."

The imperial deer stalking forest is a triangle of 150 miles square, and is intersected with a network of telephone wires forming a connection between the various preserves, which are scattered all over the preserves, and the royal hunting box. Thus the deer is hunted by telephone. The imperial gun is reported by telephone, particulars being given of where the animal was seen last.

When the deer comes the imperial motor car starts for the spot.

In order to make the deer stalking more difficult, the Kaiser has hidden platforms, covered with green branches and leaves, are distributed all over the forest, in positions that mark the favorite haunts of the deer. As soon as a stag is sighted a gamekeeper hands a gun to the Kaiser, who, being a excellent shot, invariably kills the deer.

Two artists, a painter and a sculptor, are always in attendance at Rottenthorf to take the measurements of the other to model specially fine specimens. The expense of feeding the deer with hay, oats, and potatoes amounts annually to $4,000.

WORLD-WIDE PEACE, PLAGUE OF RATS SAYS MR. BALFOUR IN OLD COUNTRY

The Great Powers Never on Better Terms.

HAS KIND WORD FOR RUSSIA

U. S. Ambassador Says President and King Stand Foremost as Peace Ambassadors

London, Nov. 9.—"A century ago Pitt, standing where I now stand, prophesied war. Today I prophesy peace."

This was the text on which Premier Balfour based his speech concerning the relations of Great Britain with foreign countries at the lord mayor's banquet in the Guildhall tonight, an occasion when custom makes it almost imperative for either the premier or the foreign secretary to discuss the foreign and domestic policies of the Government.

Mr. Balfour and Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador, who replied to the toast of "Their Excellencies the Foreign Ministers," proposed the lord mayor, with each other in the pleasant words for the credit of their respective countries as leaders among the advocates of the arbitration of quarrels throughout the civilized world. The whole tenor of the speeches was optimistic on the relations between all the great powers.

The premier's reference to Russia was particularly happy. He said: "Our friends in Russia are doing more than interest by the great movement they are making in the direction, as we believe, of the arbitration of war. It is, indeed, not a light one. There is not a citizen in Great Britain who does not wish them every success, and I express the earnest wish that the movement may not in the future be strained by the unnecessary effusion of blood. We hope that the movement will bring happiness to countless millions untroubled by a repetition of the painful and horrible events which made the initial progress so lamentable."

The banquet was conducted with all the quiet ceremonial peculiar to the occasion. The guests included Lord Morgan, Sir John Pender, many of the foreign ministers and cabinet officers.

In proposing the toast of "The Imperial Forces," Sheriff Smallman pleasantly referred to the reception in the United States of the British naval squadron under Prince Louis of Battenberg.

The lord mayor proposed "His Majesty's Ministers," to which Mr. Balfour responded.

The premier devoted a considerable portion of his speech to the question of the unemployed, expressing his sympathy and his desire to do in every possible way to help those out of work and appealing to private purses for assistance.

Passing to the foreign policy of the Government, the premier spoke first of Russia, and then said that the King's Government had done everything possible for many years to ward off the dangers of war and had done its best to develop a scheme of arbitration.

He alluded to the difficulties attending boundary questions, and said he hoped that these might be settled by arbitration.

"I am sanguine on this subject," said the premier. "I think in the future we shall not see war unless, indeed, we can conceive of a nation or a ruler arising who will be unable to carry out a scheme of national grandeur except through tramping on the rights of his neighbors. However, I see no prospect of such a calamity in Europe."

Ambassador Reid, referring to the premier's expressions concerning the probabilities of peace, said for his part he preferred the court of arbitration to the arbitration of the sword.

The ambassador said he would neither concede nor dispute Mr. Balfour's claim, that Great Britain had taken precedence in the matter of arbitration, but he would say that Great Britain and the United States had set an example and had settled some of the most burning questions through arbitration and that the two countries were more cordial in their relations than had been at any time in the last hundred years.

"If you hear of the possibility of difficulties over fisheries or something else, don't believe it," said the ambassador. "Because such a report will be the result of a malicious misstatement."

"There is no question today between the United States and Great Britain that Secretary Root and Secretary Lansdowne know each other as well as King Edward and President Roosevelt, and their places there is sure to be a continuance of good relations."

Mr. Reid closed with a tribute to the action of President Roosevelt in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan, and said that the United States was an earnest advocate of peace who to every citizen of the world.

Other speakers were H. O. Arnold-Forster, Lord Cawdor and Sir Robert Finlay, the attorney-general.

FINDS RARE TREASURE
Relics of Blot's Regime Located Near Quebec City.

Quebec, Nov. 10.—Rev. Fr. O'Leary, former chaplain of the first Canadian contingent of volunteers to South Africa, who was recently appointed to a position in the Dominion archives department, to make researches in Quebec, has just communicated to the department at Ottawa that he has discovered a solid silver ostensorium, which was presented to a parish by Intendant Francois Bigot. This intendant was in Canada from 1748 to 1753. The ostensorium is the parish of St. Pierre in the Island of Orleans, and bears an inscription describing its origin.

The Archbishop of Quebec has issued a circular to all the priests of his diocese instructing them to admit Father O'Leary to all the records relating to early Canada for the purposes of research for the Dominion archives. A French work, containing a story of interesting information about early fortifications at Quebec, was procured for the archives this week. The work was written by a French engineer, J. J. Lery, in 1716, for the French Government, but was never published. The original manuscript, therefore, remained in Canada. It contains eight books illustrated by 132 plates, and is a valuable acquisition to the collection in the archives.

WHAT MAKES JOHNNY HUSTLE

Every morning first of all Mother comes and gives her call:—
"John-ne-e-e!"
Then I know that I can snore
For a half an hour more,
Till brother comes to bang my door.

For fifteen minutes more I lie,
Waiting for my sister's cry:—
"John-ne-e-e!"
Then dad barks out, but I keep still,
And on and on I snore until
I can hear the coffee mill.

Oh, how good that coffee smells!
Talk about your breakfast bells,
For Johnny!
Quick I slip my pants on,
You can always look for John Fore that Chase & Sanborn's gone.

Guess I'm lazy! Pa says so.
Ma says, "So tormented slow
Is Johnny!"
But 'tis Johnny-on-the-spot,
Johnny for the coffee pot,
When that CHASE & SANBORN'S hot.

bean straw is easy to burrow in, partly because they like to eat beans. On "heavy land" farms in wet weather the rat runs are not traceable. It has runs on the downs, broad paths crossing the open fields and beaten flat by the animal's feet.

Almost the only places in which they do no harm, and are even useful, are the tunnels of the underground railways of London, and near the platforms of the great London termini. Passengers throw quantities of surplus food out of the windows, and the rat way rats come out by night and devour it. The electrification of the District and "Circle" lines has greatly diminished the rats in those parts of underground London. They are not only very inquisitive, but naturally and habitually touch every object they come near, first with their whiskers and then with their nose. No other mammal uses its whiskers as tools so persistently. They are not still for a moment, but always kept in motion like a fly fisher's rod. With "live" rats down in the tunnels, they emit the peculiar smell accompanying highly-charged conductors, this being the result of the rat's skin being so sensitive. They smell that they are not quite like an ordinary length of steel, but their whiskers against it and finally lay their noses on it. This causes death in a moment, the rats falling backward and expiring after one or two kicks.

Indifference, and not any particular difficulty in destroying them, accounts for the multiplication of the plague in the open fields, banks, preserves and corn stacks. Rats in such cases are always killed by poisoning them in their burrows, and as they usually die under ground no risk is run of their death either from the decay of the bodies, or from other and valuable animals eating the poisoned carcasses.

Meal is put into the holes with a long spoon for two or three nights. Then the supply is omitted for a night, and finally poisoned meal is put in and the holes stopped outside.

This is not possible in houses or even near them, but is very effective in the fields, and one peculiar feature of the recent rat invasions is that they are mainly confined to the rural districts, and to the open country. In towns, owing to better sanitation and the removal of all dust hole rubbish, they have greatly diminished. It is a fact that the surroundings of ordinary London houses are enormously more clean and healthful than those of the ordinary country house, where there are no "destructors," and refuse accumulates in some corner or another, where, so long as it is out of sight, it is usually out of mind.

That there is something absolutely repulsive in the rat per se is partly proved by the instinctive horror in which it is held by men, women and children, and most other animals. Horses will often refuse to feed and are unable to sleep if there is a rat in the stable by night. Birds of prey, and hold them in horror, except those which like the hawk almost extinct buzzard make them their principal food. A hen is quite helpless against them, and is often killed on the nest, although a partridge would defeat a rat by day and drive it off at night. Rats are said to have broken up and caused the removal of a guillotine from the present position in the sedge of the Little Broad, where the water protects them effectively even from the most enterprising rat.

Some time ago a medical correspondent of the Spectator wrote to draw attention to the way in which rats directly cause sickness and death by poisoning shallow wells with their decaying bodies. They are thirsty creatures, and in their eagerness to reach water fall into the wells and are thus drowned. Several fatal cases of so-called septic pneumonia were found to be due to drinking water so poisoned. But, in addition, they are disseminators of every kind of disease which can be conveyed into drains and from drains, for of all highways the rat loves a drain the best.

It is one of the curiosities of animal temperament that while the brown rat is so universally detested, the closely related Alexandrian rat—the white or plebeian varieties are well known in this country—is almost a favorite. It is a very quiet, docile little animal, almost affectionate in its relations with man, and constantly kept as a pet by children. It is clean and very healthy, never by any chance offering to bite, and is as content on sleeping on food as if it had never forgotten the experience of its ancestors in the "lean years." When Joseph ruled Egypt, it was the humblest of all domestic pets, and often quite interesting in its ways, the only drawback to its company being the close resemblance in appearance to the criminal brown rat.

FERDINAND AT PARIS

Trip to French Capital Has Bearing on Balkan Affairs.

Paris, Nov. 9.—Of the utmost importance politically was the recent official visit of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria. It regards the laxity of the press in the administration of the finances of Macedonia. It is true that a commission appointed by the powers went to Macedonia after much objection on the part of the Porte and the Sultan of Turkey, but thus far their mission has been fruitless, as the Turkish authorities have refused to place the receipts and disbursement of the taxes, and revenue in their hands.

It will be remembered that the Sultan has taken advantage of the disturbances in Russia and Austria and has sought the scheme with all his might, knowing full well that the threatened combined naval demonstration of the powers would not be real.

RICH MINING MAN MISSING

Had Large Sum of Money With Him and Valuable Jewelry.

New York, Nov. 9.—A general alarm was sent out by the police last night for John W. Tisdale, well known throughout the south and west as a mining promoter and stock broker. Mr. Tisdale but recently returned from Georgia, and was stopping with his wife at the Hotel Seville. Monday afternoon about 3 o'clock, Mr. Tisdale told his wife he was going out for a walk, and since then nothing has been heard of him. It had been the missing man's intention to go to Boston on Tuesday to attend a meeting of the Alaska Snitisham Gold Mining Company, of which he is president.

Mrs. Tisdale and her son are of the opinion that Mr. Tisdale has met with foul play, as he was in the habit of carrying large sums of money, besides wearing valuable jewelry at all times.

SNAP-SHOTS AT VARIOUS SPORTS.

Says Jimmy Britt: "The life of a fighter is all roses when he is on top, but it's tough when he is at the bottom and fighting for — sandwiches. Even when you win it's almost a certainty that you'll have your teeth knocked out and be unable to eat the sandwich."

Jimmy ought to know, as he is getting the small end of things now.

Waddell and Shreck, the Athletics' eccentric battery, are the latest to receive a call to work on the stage. It is said that Shreck, whose real name is alleged to be "Shrieking Ghost" in the Slav tongue, will play the witch in "Macbeth." Waddell will play "Little Eva, or no room in heaven for me."

An eastern writer, in sizing up the Yale football team asks this question, rhetorically, of course: "What has Yale got—a Juggernaut?" Now, no wonder the average man gets the idea that the American game is fearfully rough. If he keeps on treating his subject from such literary heights, he will soon size up to the Toronto News sporting writer's standpoint.

Hackenschmidt, the Russian lion, and Madrali, the Turk, are to "rassle" in London, England, some time next month. It is about up to our friend, Hack, to get his. That game is a fine one for the Turk.

Joe Walcott, the colored welterweight champion, and perhaps the greatest fighter of his weight the game has ever seen, has come to the conclusion that his days as a top-notch are about over, and consequently he will fight but very little henceforth. His injured hand handicaps him very much. He will retire champion of his division.

A judge down east in commenting on the death at St. John, N. B., of a young man in a boxing exhibition called it a damnable business, and declared it should be stopped, etc. While agreeing that the affair was serious, we did not hear him say anything about football, or deer hunting, or auto racing, or a thousand and one things that slaughter men every day. By the same line of reasoning every game in which men are killed ought to be prohibited. What are we to do next?

Webb Jay, the auto racer, who was so badly injured in a race about three months ago, is now out of the hospital, and may get back into the game again. Some people never know when they are lucky.

M. J. Daly's Claude was an almost prohibitive favorite at Nashville the other day, but he failed to get the place. If Daly is up to his old Woodbine tricks again, he is liable to find himself on the road again. Claude has the habit of losing when favorite down fine now.

During the last ten minutes Don Patch has failed to break a record or have some man claim him as his long-lost horse. Savage will have to do something or he will fall about ten columns short of his usual advertising space.

They are having a big time over the Canadian championship games, and the Tigers have absolutely refused to play the Rough Riders in Ottawa. Telegrams and letters are flying and "King" Clancy is having some real pointed things said about him. The discussion may end in the smashing of the Canadian Rugby Union. But there is one feature of it that may result in great good ultimately, and that is that the Ottawa crowd will have to cut out their rough-house work. When challenging teams absolutely refuse to play in Ottawa until they are positively assured that they will receive the same treatment that is accorded other teams in every other town, Montreal included, there will be none of this difficulty. Had Ottawa been a good sporting town, the stand that the Tigers have taken would be utterly indefensible. Knowing Ottawa as we do, and knowing the experience of Rat Portage, and other teams no farther back than last winter, and finally, knowing about Hal Winters and Ovide Lefebvre, there is very little to be gained by playing Ottawa. There is no chance of winning, but there are many chances of permanent injury. Looking at it from the Hamilton bluff, the game is not worth going to Ottawa for.

Tomorrow morning the officers of the O. H. A. executive will be elected, and it is sincerely to be hoped that the best men will be elected. Darrow and Dr. Clark are both firmly committed to the amateur platform. The both have declared themselves bound to preserve the traditions of the O. H. A. in this matter, and which ever of the two is elected, it is the duty of the members of the association to see that that policy is carried out to the letter. No sectionalism is to be permitted. Locality must be abolished. Fair treatment and justice are to be meted out to all. Professionalism must be stamped out at all costs. The good of the game universally, not locally, should be the aim of the executive. We will watch very closely the work of the incoming executive, and the failure to carry out the programme to the letter will be condemned in no uncertain language.

COVERPOINT.

Ottawa Must Back Down; Else There'll Be No Game

Hamilton Spectator: Unless either President Clancy and Secretary Shillington, of the Canadian Rugby Union, or the members of the Hamilton Football Club executive back down from their present position, there is little likelihood of the champions of the Quebec Union and O. R. F. U. champions, providing the Tigers with the tiar, meeting in a contest for the Canadian championship. Messrs. Clancy and Shillington have said that if the Tigers want the Canadian honors they must meet the Rough Riders in Ottawa. The Hamilton executive has declared that the Tigers will default rather than play in the capital. And that's where matters stand. The officers of the local club are firm. They all assert that there will be no backdown as far as they are concerned, and they talk as if they meant business. No good sport will blame them for the stand they have taken. On the contrary, they have already been commended by the press of Toronto, and by at least one Ottawa paper, the Citizen, for their manly attitude in the matter of the Canadian championship. Realizing from the start that an unwritten law gave the game to the east this year, they have not made any effort to have it played in Hamilton, although this city could advance claims much stronger than can Ottawa. All that they have asked is that the game should be played on neutral grounds, so that neither side would have any great advantage over the other. They offered to go to Montreal, even though that would place the Tigers at a disadvantage, as they would have to travel about 375 miles, while the distance from Ottawa to Montreal is only about 110 miles. The Montreal grounds would also be more familiar to the Rough Riders than to the Tigers. They also offered to go to Kingston, Peterborough or any other eastern city or town where good grounds could be secured. Alternative propositions were also submitted to the Quebec champions by the prospective O. R. F. U. champions. They offered the Rough Riders $500 and a guarantee of fair treatment to come to Hamilton, or three-fifths of the gate receipts to play in Toronto. Can any true sportsman say that these offers were not fair and sportsmanlike? Yet they did not appeal to the Rough Riders or their representatives on the Canadian Union executive, who, unfortunately for the Tigers, hold the balance of power. With them it was a case of play in Ottawa or not at all.

DAN PATCH MAY NOT ENTER ANOTHER RACE

Has Won All the Glory Possible—Will Still Go Against Time

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 9.—According to Harry C. Hershey, trainer and driver of Dan Patch, the pacing phenomenon, will never engage in competition again. This statement was made after Dan Patch circled the local track hanging up figures of 1:59.4, which tied Star Pointer's long standing mark made at Readeville under the old time conditions of having the accompanying pacemaker follow or run by the side of the sulky.

Harness horse followers, who have been figuring on a match between Dan Patch and his only rival, Audubon Boy, will therefore be contented to judge the comparative merits of the rival pacers on paper alone in the future.

"Dan Patch has won all the glory possible for one horse," says Trainer Hershey, "and although he will continue to attack Father Time he will never meet another horse in competition."

A very interesting game was played at the Y. M. C. A. alleys on Wednesday evening, between teams captained by B. Graham and W. Primeau, and was won by the former, after a very exciting finish by 14 pins. The same teams will play off a tie Friday evening, each having won a series.

BUGLERS WERE EASY; BADLY BEATEN BY "B"

Two Games of Indoor Baseball Was Played at the Armories, "B" Has a Close Run.

Another good evening's sport was had at the Armories last night, when two games were played in the seventh Regiment Indoor Baseball League. E Company defeated B Company in a close and exciting game. H Company won an easy victory over the Buglers. The scores were as follows:

First game—
E Company.....223154*-48 39
B Company.....121619-43 15
Batteries—Hunt and Treleven; Foster and Condon.
Second game—
Buglers.....1921410-9 14
H Company.....39005221-22 29
Batteries—Orr and Allport; Insley and Reid.
The next games will be played on Tuesday night.

YALE ONLY TEAM THAT MADE GOOD IN TIGERS' STEPS

At Least, None of the Other Big College Elevens Has Come Up to Promise.

Washington, Nov. 9. — In view of the general wreckage that strewed the eastern gridiron last Saturday it is considerable satisfaction to be able to cling to that Yale eleven as the one big team that has been true to its early season promise. No matter how weak or how strong Columbia may have been on Saturday, the performance of the Yale eleven remains a remarkable one.

Above all things Yale's work showed that the New Haven coaches are the real wise men of the east. The cry went up from the New Haven undergraduates early in the season that the team was not a heavy one. This was true only in a measure. The line, for instance, averages the mere trifle of 122 pounds, but there have been great Yale elevens averaging more. The strength of taking fright, at once planned a radically different style of game. The men have learned it to perfection. Such faults as the team showed on Saturday were no more than trifles.

The assets of this team in the shape of backs are simply astonishing. Hutchinson and Jones are the best quarterbacks in the east, and at this date no other big eleven has a pair of backs to equal Veeber and Stevenson. The second string men, Morse, Wylie, Levine, Lind, Roome, are all standard Yale backs. The kicking of Veeber, Roome and Wylie is better than that of any other team in the east, and is covered by one perfect end and another mighty good one.

Yale's offense is a thing of beauty and of greater variety and initial velocity than any the blue has shown in a long time. Every man, save the center, is called upon to carry the ball, and every man is a natural ground gainer. The interference and the backs start quicker, form faster and keep their feet better than is the case on any other eastern gridiron.

There is gloom in Philadelphia, Princeton and Ithaca. Princeton's is a sad story. The truth about the team has been printed several times, but the undergraduates have exhibited a blind faith in the eleven that no amount of argument served to shake. The team is at present a poor one.

WANTED AT HARVARD—A GOOD FULLBACK

Three Best Men for the Position Are on the Hospital List.

Cambridge, Nov. 9.—With the Pennsylvania game close at hand the Harvard eleven finds itself without a fullback. The three best men for that position on the Crimson squad are laid up and will not be able to play against Penn.

Up to the Brown game Carr was regarded as the final choice for fullback as he was good on the offense and a power of strength. Carr was injured by Harvard's weak defense against the Indians closed in part by Carr's absence.

In the Brown game Carr bruised his thigh. The injury was regarded as slight at first, but it kept him out all last week and out in all probability keep him from playing against Penn. Paul began the game against the Indians as second choice for fullback. He broke his collar bone in the first half. Gould played the second half as third choice. He injured his thigh, and will be out this week.

This means that Harvard will be kept in a most fatal spot; and it may be that in the injuries to Harvard's three fullbacks the Penn. has a chance for victory. Hanley, fullback on the second team, or Davis, a sub tackle last year, will probably be the fourth choice fullback to risk Saturday with the exception of Gould and Paul all the Harvard men came through the Indian game in excellent shape.

THE TURF.

YESTERDAY'S WINNERS.
At Aqueduct—Mamie Worth, 30 to 1; Ivan the Terrible, 5 to 1; Bell Snicker, 6 to 1; Hippocrates, 7 to 1; Lone Hand, 6 to 1; Col. White, 3 to 1.
At Nashville—Goma, 10 to 1; Allista, 7 to 1; Tartan, 9 to 1; Kercheval, 16 to 1; Norel, 8 to 1; Royal Legend, 13 to 1.

AN EXCITING FINISH.

Nashville, Nov. 9.—The Test handicap, at six furlongs, furnished an exciting finish. The race was divided the money at Aqueduct today. The Midweek stakes, the feature, was won by a victory for the 1 to 2 favorite, Bell Snicker, but only after a hard-fought finish.

GENTLEMAN JOCKEY SUSPENDED

London, Nov. 9.—A gentleman jockey Mr. DeWend-Penton, an Oxford graduate, and a man of immense wealth and an intimate of royalty, has been suspended at Sandown Park, for pulling a horse in a race.

LONG SHOT GOT IN.

New York, Nov. 9.—Four favorites, a second choice and a long shot divided the money at Aqueduct today. The Midweek stakes, the feature, was won by a victory for the 1 to 2 favorite, Bell Snicker, but only after a hard-fought finish.

WINDSOR ORGANIZED.

Windsor, Nov. 9.—The Windsor curling club held its annual meeting. There was a good attendance and the water skaters. The report of the treasurer gives a balance in the treasury of over $200. The following officers were elected: Patron and secretary, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Walker; honorary president, Gaspard Packard; president, A. M. Stewart; vice-president, Dr. J. A. Smith; secretary, Charles Conroy; executive committee, W. C. Carter, W. A. Renwick, A. D. Bowly, Duncan Stewart, C. J. Wall, Ontario tandem skiers, A. R. Bartlett, Dr. J. A. Ashbaugh; western tandem skiers, C. J. Wall, Alfred Wigley; skiers, Duncan Stewart, J. J. Fenwick, James Anderson, A. W. Ridout, A. R. Bartlett, S. S. Evans, W. Grant, Alfred Wigley, J. A. McKay, G. Grant, T. W. Ellis, Chas. Conroy, G. J. Greenhill and A. D. Bowly.

MAY WAGE WAR ON BIG LEAGUES

Tri-State Likely to Make Things Unpleasant for Major Organizations.

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—On top of the frequent reports that the Tri-State League will branch out into a full-fledged eight-city circuit and will invade the territory of the National League, comes the report that the so-called outlaw magnates will make an effort to coax away from both the American and National Leagues some of the star ball players now under contract with those organizations.

There can be no doubt, but that there is some truth in the rumors that the Tri-State will do all in its power to make things unpleasant for Ban Johnson and Harry Pulliam this coming winter, and it will be no surprise to some if a number of stars of the big leagues are found wearing the uniforms of outlaw clubs. It comes from a most reliable source that the Wilmington club, has been dropped for the good of the cause, and that Pittsburgh and Youngstown, Ohio, will be taken into the outlaw organization.

PLAYERS HAVE KICKS.
Cincinnati, Nov. 9.—The national commission has been asked to give ear to a number of distressed ball players this winter. Central League magnates are backing John Gangel in his appeal for release from the New York Americans. They want the commission to compel Griffith to let Gangel go for a cash sum to be fixed by an arbitration committee, if necessary.

Mike Kelley, manager of the St. Paul club, wants to be a player-manager at Toledo next season. He is claimed by the St. Louis Americans, who bought him from St. Paul. Kelley declares that he was playing under a non-exclusive contract, and that his services were not for sale. If he loses his case he will still refuse to join the Browns, and will manage Toledo from the bench.

A number of other players have asked the supreme court of baseball to collect salaries due them, and Geo. McBride, of the St. Louis Cardinals, wants to be vindicated of the charge of "stealing" a game in the recent inter-league series at St. Louis.

PLAYING FOR CUP.
The second game of the Canadian Fraternal Carpetball League series was played last night in the Foresters' Hall, South London, for the C. H. Walcott trophy, on exhibition in the window of the Oak Hall clothing store. G. O. C. F. No. 13, team defeated Westminster Lodge, A. O. U. W., by the score of 38 to 29. Bro. Carter, official referee. The referee in these games is very much in evidence by the turn out of lodge members. After the game a very pleasant social hour was spent.

WILL HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH HART

Fitzsimmons Refuses for the Present to Arrange a Fight.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Tommy Ryan, manager of Marvin Hart, claimant of the heavyweight championship, was in the city yesterday to get on his feet. He expected to close the match at once, and an surprise to find that O'Brien has spoiled that. But this is the last chance Fitzsimmons will have to get a crack at Hart. We will put him among the dead ones on our list and have nothing to do with him.

"Fitz has been crying around for a match, and when he gets a chance to fight Hart he takes on someone else," said the Irishman. And it is just like O'Brien to grab off the old fellow because he knows it will be pretty fast play for him. Fitz will not last ten rounds under the peppering he will get from O'Brien. No, sir; not for a big amount of money could Fitz get Hart's game now."

WANTS MCGOVERN FIRST, THEN BATTLING NELSON

Jimmy Britt Says That Is His Plan—Thinks He Has It On Fitz.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 9.—Jimmy Britt, who is doing a boxing turn at the Empire Theater, with a variety company, says his plan now is to fight Terry McGovern and then get a return match with Nelson. "I do not see why Terry should not wish to meet me before he does Nelson," he said today.

"He will get just as good a purse for the fight as he could get for success, for I think I have it on the Brooklyn boy. Should he win from me he would have a chance for more money than he has now. It looks to me as a good chance, professionally, and financially, for McGovern to accept Coffey's offer for a fight with me."

Britt is looking and feeling fine. He says he thinks he can beat Nelson if he can get a fight with him under the same conditions that prevailed at Colma.

MIDDY DIED AFTER FIGHT.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 9.—Midskipman James R. Branch, son of James R. Branch of the Hanover Bank of New York City and secretary of the American Bankers' Association, who was seriously injured in a fist fight with Midskipman Minor Meriwether, jr., of Lafayette, died today. The fight took place by arrangement on Sunday night and was a regular pitched battle with a ring and seconds. It lasted twenty-three rounds and ended when Branch was knocked down and struck the right side of his head against the floor.

HENSALL WANTS TO COME IN.
Toronto, Nov. 9.—The Hensall hockey club sent in an application today for admission to the O. H. A. intermediate series, and suggested that they be placed in a group composed of Wingham, Godrich, Clinton and Seaford.

CURLING.

MAY HAVE NEW RINK.
Stratford, Nov. 9.—The roarin' game has such a large number of members that the curling rink on the east side of the big skating rink has for some years proved too small. The club is contemplating building a new curling rink of adequate size sufficient to accommodate all who wish to play.

We will put him among the dead ones on our list and have nothing to do with him.

"Fitz has been crying around for a match, and when he gets a chance to fight Hart he takes on someone else," said the Irishman. And it is just like O'Brien to grab off the old fellow because he knows it will be pretty fast play for him. Fitz will not last ten rounds under the peppering he will get from O'Brien. No, sir; not for a big amount of money could Fitz get Hart's game now."

WANTS MCGOVERN FIRST, THEN BATTLING NELSON

Jimmy Britt Says That Is His Plan—Thinks He Has It On Fitz.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 9.—Jimmy Britt, who is doing a boxing turn at the Empire Theater, with a variety company, says his plan now is to fight Terry McGovern and then get a return match with Nelson. "I do not see why Terry should not wish to meet me before he does Nelson," he said today.

"He will get just as good a purse for the fight as he could get for success, for I think I have it on the Brooklyn boy. Should he win from me he would have a chance for more money than he has now. It looks to me as a good chance, professionally, and financially, for McGovern to accept Coffey's offer for a fight with me."

Britt is looking and feeling fine. He says he thinks he can beat Nelson if he can get a fight with him under the same conditions that prevailed at Colma.

MIDDY DIED AFTER FIGHT.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 9.—Midskipman James R. Branch, son of James R. Branch of the Hanover Bank of New York City and secretary of the American Bankers' Association, who was seriously injured in a fist fight with Midskipman Minor Meriwether, jr., of Lafayette, died today. The fight took place by arrangement on Sunday night and was a regular pitched battle with a ring and seconds. It lasted twenty-three rounds and ended when Branch was knocked down and struck the right side of his head against the floor.

HOCKEY.

HENSALL WANTS TO COME IN.
Toronto, Nov. 9.—The Hensall hockey club sent in an application today for admission to the O. H. A. intermediate series, and suggested that they be placed in a group composed of Wingham, Godrich, Clinton and Seaford.

CURLING.

MAY HAVE NEW RINK.
Stratford, Nov. 9.—The roarin' game has such a large number of members that the curling rink on the east side of the big skating rink has for some years proved too small. The club is contemplating building a new curling rink of adequate size sufficient to accommodate all who wish to play.

The HOME of the Overcoat

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—On top of the frequent reports that the Tri-State League will branch out into a full-fledged eight-city circuit and will invade the territory of the National League, comes the report that the so-called outlaw magnates will make an effort to coax away from both the American and National Leagues some of the star ball players now under contract with those organizations.

There can be no doubt, but that there is some truth in the rumors that the Tri-State will do all in its power to make things unpleasant for Ban Johnson and Harry Pulliam this coming winter, and it will be no surprise to some if a number of stars of the big leagues are found wearing the uniforms of outlaw clubs. It comes from a most reliable source that the Wilmington club, has been dropped for the good of the cause, and that Pittsburgh and Youngstown, Ohio, will be taken into the outlaw organization.

PLAYERS HAVE KICKS.
Cincinnati, Nov. 9.—The national commission has been asked to give ear to a number of distressed ball players this winter. Central League magnates are backing John Gangel in his appeal for release from the New York Americans. They want the commission to compel Griffith to let Gangel go for a cash sum to be fixed by an arbitration committee, if necessary.

Mike Kelley, manager of the St. Paul club, wants to be a player-manager at Toledo next season. He is claimed by the St. Louis Americans, who bought him from St. Paul. Kelley declares that he was playing under a non-exclusive contract, and that his services were not for sale. If he loses his case he will still refuse to join the Browns, and will manage Toledo from the bench.

A number of other players have asked the supreme court of baseball to collect salaries due them, and Geo. McBride, of the St. Louis Cardinals, wants to be vindicated of the charge of "stealing" a game in the recent inter-league series at St. Louis.

PLAYING FOR CUP.
The second game of the Canadian Fraternal Carpetball League series was played last night in the Foresters' Hall, South London, for the C. H. Walcott trophy, on exhibition in the window of the Oak Hall clothing store. G. O. C. F. No. 13, team defeated Westminster Lodge, A. O. U. W., by the score of 38 to 29. Bro. Carter, official referee. The referee in these games is very much in evidence by the turn out of lodge members. After the game a very pleasant social hour was spent.

WRESTLING.

JIM PARR DEFEATED.
Buffalo, Nov. 9.—Fred Beale, of Wisconsin, tonight defeated Jim Parr, the Irish wrestler, by a straight fall. Time, 27½ and 8 minutes.

WILL HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH HART

Fitzsimmons Refuses for the Present to Arrange a Fight.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Tommy Ryan, manager of Marvin Hart, claimant of the heavyweight championship, was in the city yesterday to get on his feet. He expected to close the match at once, and an surprise to find that O'Brien has spoiled that. But this is the last chance Fitzsimmons will have to get a crack at Hart. We will put him among the dead ones on our list and have nothing to do with him.

"Fitz has been crying around for a match, and when he gets a chance to fight Hart he takes on someone else," said the Irishman. And it is just like O'Brien to grab off the old fellow because he knows it will be pretty fast play for him. Fitz will not last ten rounds under the peppering he will get from O'Brien. LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

OLD COUNTRY PRICES.
London, Nov. 9.—Cattle are quoted at 1½c to 1½c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 5½c to 5½c per lb.

TORONTO.

Toronto, Nov. 9.—A light run of cattle, following that of Tuesday, resulted in considerable improvement at the city cattle market today. This was not so much noticeable in higher prices, although they were firm, as in the fact that cattle were not nearly so hard to sell, and sellers did not complain that they had to give their cattle away to get rid of them.
The total run was 87 cars, consisting of 125 cattle, 2,538 sheep, 1,400 hogs and 22 calves.
There was a distinct improvement in the quality of the receipts, less of the rough stuff that has been so prominent a feature lately. One dealer said today that unless there was a large run of common feeders on Monday, it would indicate that the stockmen had decided to tie up their light cattle for the time being and hold them for better prices.

JEROME AFTER TAMMANY

Starts Right In to Punish the Illegal Voters.

New York, Nov. 9.—The contest over the mayoralty election inaugurated by William Randolph Hearst, the municipal ownership candidate, developed interesting features today.

Attorney-General Mayer said tonight, "District Attorney Jerome has placed at my disposal the machinery of his office, and will co-operate with me in every way, as I shall with him, in the prosecution of offenses against the election franchise."

The attorney-general received a large number of subpoenas from the district attorney, and immediately put several election deputies at work serving them.

Charges were made that several ballot boxes had been stolen before the returns were made.

The investigation of the election promises to be the most thorough ever made in New York City. Mayor McClellan today engaged eminent counsel, among them Alton B. Parker, former chief justice of the court of appeals, to represent him.

Attorney-General Mayer stated tonight that he had received information of the recovery from the North River of certain ballot boxes used in the election of Tuesday last. He said the matter was under investigation.

BYE-ELECTIONS LISTS

Those of Last Provincial General Election To Be Used.

Toronto, Nov. 9.—The voters' lists which will be used in the coming bye-elections in North York and West-Ham will be the same as were used in the provincial general elections of last January—that is, the lists compiled from the assessment made early in 1904.

In West Hampton similar lists will be used, except that the registration list in Sarina will be the Dominion list of November, 1904, instead of the provincial list of January, 1905.

The voters' lists, not including the registration lists, are reprinted at Ottawa for Dominion elections, and should be identical with the provincial lists, but in case of variation the Ottawa copies are official.

The following persons, though disqualified from voting in provincial elections, are entitled to vote in Dominion elections, viz.: Customs officers, clerks of the peace, county crown attorneys, registrars, sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, deputy clerks of the crown, crown lands agents, postmasters in cities or towns, stipendiary magistrates, police magistrates in cities over 30,000, inland revenue officers.

If their names have been omitted from the voters' lists they can, nevertheless, vote on taking the oath.

The New Russ Cabinet.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—The following appointments to the new ministry are officially announced: Ivan Shinnikov—Finance minister. M. Kutler—Minister of agriculture. M. Tsiniasoff—Minister of commerce. M. Nemachev—Minister of communications.

WHAT WAS IT KILLED INDIANS?

Stomach of Muncy Reservation Man Sent to Toronto for Analysis.

St. Thomas, Nov. 9.—From the evidence adduced at the inquest today of Elias Cornelius, the Muncy Indian, who is alleged to have come to his death through alcoholic poisoning on Tuesday evening last, it has been established that he and his wife and their cousins, Job and Nicholas Antone, drank the same stuff in an empty house on Talbot street in this city on Saturday afternoon last. That Elias Cornelius, Job and Nicholas Antone are dead and the wife of the former is now sick from the effects of the small portion she partook of.

The dead man's wife was the only witness on the stand today. She stated through an interpreter, that her husband got the fluid on Saturday and was sick on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Poisoning symptoms developed on the latter two days.

The owner of the farm on which the man lived was apprised of the man's state, and went for a doctor, but before the physician's arrival the Indian was dead.

An autopsy was made today by Dr. Lawrence, and the stomach and contents will be sent to Toronto for an analysis. In view of the time which will elapse before a report is furnished an adjournment was made for two weeks from today.

A fourth Indian is said today to have died at Muncy from the like cause.

The inquest on the other dead Indians opens at Komoka (tomorrow) Friday. The authorities here deem that an ante-mortem statement was secured from the Antones by the crown officials at that village.

A MEDICINE CHEST IN ITSELF.—Only the well-to-do can afford to possess a medicine chest, but Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil, which is a medicine chest in itself, being a remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, sore throat, colds, coughs, catarrhs, asthma and a potent healer for wounds, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc., is within the reach of the poorest, owing to its cheapness. It should be in every house.

SPLENDID HOBO DAZES THE COURT

In Evening Clothes, With Opera Hat, He Admits Chastising Fellow-Tramp.

Waterbury, Conn., Nov. 10.—James Montague O'Brien, "Prince of Wanderers," by his own word, plain hobo by the blotto of the police, sits jauntily tonight in the Plainville police station. The police gathered in Mr. O'Brien this morning, because they had previously received one Henry Wall, another tramp, with six stab wounds near the heart, and suspected that he was the wandering son of a hobo.

When they brought O'Brien before him, Wall cringed and said that he did not know how he was hurt. The other hobos in the station made reverence to O'Brien. And well they might; for never was a tramp so sartorially splendid. He wore, it is true, the customary flannel shirt, but he wore as well a suit of evening clothes and a French opera hat, which he rested gracefully on his hip, when arraigned. He fairly dazed the court.

He carried a tomato can as a receptacle for his valuables, his hands were gloved, and he had turned up the tails of his dress coat and pinned them under his arms. O'Brien told the court that he was the wandering son of a Hungarian count and that he had chastised Wall for failure to respect his rank. He denied, however, that he had stabbed him, and insisted that he had not stolen the dress clothes. He will appear in court tomorrow.

STOMACH CURE

An Easy Way from Standpoint of Convenience.

The so-called cures for indigestion are almost as numerous as the victims themselves, and scarcely a day passes without the hopes of thousands of sufferers being raised by the discovery of some novel method of cure for this prevalent disease.

Until a combination of unusual remedies, heretofore but little known in this country, was made in Mito-na tablets, no certain cure for indigestion had been found, and it is therefore hardly to be wondered at that our leading druggists who have the London agency are selling large quantities of Mito-na.

Mito-na is a guaranteed cure for all diseases of the stomach excepting caner. If you have pain or distress after eating, headache, belching of gases, sour taste in the mouth, dizziness, heartburn, specks before the eyes, furred tongue, flatulence, backache, debility or weakness, it shows that the stomach needs to be strengthened and Mito-na.

Just one little tablet out of a 50-cent box before meals for a few days, and you will soon regain perfect health and strength.

If you cannot obtain Mito-na at your druggist, it will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Write us for address on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The B. T. B. Co. Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

twenty years' service, was on Tuesday
made the recipient of a flattering address by the firm, accompanied by a beautiful Morris chair as a recognition of his services and of the kindly relations that have existed between him and the members of the firm for nearly a quarter of a century. Mr. Gaze has secured another job in this city, as the London Machine Tool Company has now decided to remove to Hamilton.

CHANGE IN WORKING TIME.
A change in the working time has gone into effect at the Grand Trunk car works. For some months, the force has been working from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day except Saturday, when the shops closed at noon. Until further orders, the hours will be from 7:15 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. each day. This will give the men 55 hours a week—
the same as before—although it will mean the loss of the half-holiday on Saturday. The change is made necessary by the earlier nightfall.

PUGH IS A LONDONER.
Fred Pugh, the young man arrested
at Wingham on a charge of stealing a horse and rig at Drumbo, Oxford county, is a former resident of this city.
Pugh at one time lived in the east end,
and was sent to the reformatory for stealing a horse and rig at Drumbo, Oxford county, in the Westminister Township. This was many years ago when Pugh was a mere boy. Since then he has kept pretty well out of the way of the police.

ERISON—BIDNALL.
A very quiet wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. E. Bidnall, Mount Brydges, when her daughter, Miss Minnie Bidnall, was united in marriage to Mr. Alden Erison, of this city. Rev. J. J. Ross, of the Tabernacle Baptist Church, performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Susie Bidnall, while the groom's brother,
Mr. Oliver Erison, was best man. After the ceremony the young couple left on a short wedding trip in the west. On their return they will reside at 70 Waterloo street. The bride has resided in the city for some time, and is very favorably known.

IN SYMPATHY WITH LOCAL OPTION

Epworth Leaguers Place Themselves on Record in the Matter.

The Epworth League convention was brought to a close last evening after a series of very successful meetings. Increased interest has been aroused in the work and an impetus given which will materially affect the London Conference, so that the next convention will show increases in every department, instead of having decreases in some as the present returns show.

Officers for the next two years were elected in the afternoon and introduced to the convention in the evening when they were each heartily received. The election resulted as follows:

Honorary President—Rev. Joseph
Philip, Aylmer.
President—T. B. Shillington, Blenheim.

Vice-Presidents—Rev. H. J. Uren,
Harrow; Rev. F. E. Mallett, Chatham;
Mrs. G. M. Haldane, Strathroy; Mr.
Walter Hall, Mrs. (Rev.) S. J. Sutcliffe, Corbett.

Secretary—Rev. D. E. Martin, London.
Treasurer—Miss B. Powell, London.

Rev. J. W. Baird, of Sarnia, was elected to represent the London Conference at the Ontario Epworth League convention.

Rev. E. Mead, Ph.D., of Hensall, opened the afternoon session with an invigilant, devotional service. The junior element of the league subsequently held a conference in which the different subjects were cleverly discussed. Rev. K. A. Smith, B.D., of Lucknow, told of "The Junior League
President and His Work," and Mrs. W.
R. Vance, of West Lorne, gave an able address on "The Junior League and Holding of Juniors." Methods of increasing the attendance of juniors at the regular church service were discussed by Rev.
S. E. R. A. of South Windsor, and Rev. E. B. Lancelotti, of this city, spoke of "The Christian Child and His Characteristics and Culture."

Rev. S. Anderson discussed the remarks of the previous speakers briefly, emphasizing some of their suggestions.
The much-talked-of idea of the summer school was discussed by Rev. K.
M. Beaton, Port Stanley, W. H. Kerr and Rev. G. W. Long, Highgate. The programme of the school, its financing and its threefold object were discussed thoroughly.

Reps. J. W. Hibbert, Kintore, G. N.
Reps. B.A., and E. G. Powell spoke briefly.

Rev. R. Hobbs spoke on "The Supreme Need of the Hour—Evangelism," and gave a very interesting talk on the subject.
Rev. H. Manning conducted the service
during the "Quiet Hour" which again proved a pleasant and profitable diversion.

Rev. Joseph Philip presided in the evening, and introduced the introduction of the newly-elected officers, Rev. R. Whitling, of Toronto, gave a very able address on "The Epworth League and the Life of Christ on earth was set forth as the great example for all leaguers to follow.

Evangelism, the heart and soul of the League, was the subject of the evening.
The League was a firm support for the young people's spiritual life. It was emblematic of Christian optimism and patriotic of Christian life on earth.

During the day the following resolutions were submitted by the resolution committee and adopted:

"That pastors be asked to take up courses of instruction to secure better Bible study a better personal work."

"That pastors and league workers be encouraged to continue efforts for the growth of the Epworth Leagues of the Conference."

"That the convention put itself on record
in hearty sympathy with local option movements."

"That next convention's programme contain fewer socials, with more time for discussion."

"That the Central Passenger Association
be asked to discount the fare of the League, and that tickets costing less than 50 cents be counted in full."

Votes of thanks were moved and seconded to those who so materially aided in the success of the convention.

INVENTS A FENDER

Mr. A. L. Eacrett Has A New Contrivance for Street Cars.

The Los Angeles (Cal.) Times of a recent date contains the following regarding the test of a street car fender invented by Mr. A. L. Eacrett, who for several years has been a jeweler and watchmaker in the late J. E.
Adkins, of East London.

"Yesterday morning and afternoon,
in the train yards of the Pacific Electric Railway at Eighth and Central, exhaustive tests were made in the presence of officials of the road, of a new street car fender, the invention of A. L. Eacrett."

"Thirty tests were made. Car No. 137
of the interurban line was equipped with one of the Eacrett fenders, built in the shops of the Pacific Electric Railway."

OLD FASHIONED FARE
Hot Biscuits, Griddle Cakes, Fies
and Puddings.

The food that made the fathers
great is sometimes out of the children under the new conditions that our changing civilization is constantly bringing in. One of Mr. Bryan's neighbors in the great state of Nebraska writes:

"I was raised in the south, where hot biscuits, griddle-cakes, pies and puddings are eaten at almost every meal, and by the time I located in Nebraska I found myself a sufferer
from indigestion and its attendant ills
—drowsiness and pain after meals, an almost constant headache, dull, heavy sleepiness by day and sleeplessness at night, loss of flesh, impaired memory, etc."

"I was rapidly becoming incapacitated for business, when a valued friend suggested a change in my diet,
the abandonment of heavy, rich stuff
and the use of Grape-Nuts food. I followed the good advice and shall always be thankful that I did so."

"Whatever may be the experience of others, the beneficial effects of the change were apparent in my case almost immediately. My stomach, which had rejected other food for so long,
took to Grape-Nuts most kindly; in a day or two my headache was gone, I began to sleep peacefully and before a week was out the scales showed that my lost weight was coming back. My memory was restored with the renewed health and hearty eating which they made them." Name given by Company, and a dummy figure was provided for the trials.

In all of the tests made, with the car running at a speed of one hour, half speed and full speed, and with the dummy figure placed in every conceivable position upon the track, the founder did not once trip and drop
when it struck the figure, picking it up in every instance and holding it inside the basket.

This fender is an extremely simple device, looking almost exactly like the fenders now in use on the city cars,
with the exception that it is double,
with an upper and lower half, each a fender in itself. When the upper fender strikes an object on the track, it sees and opens, and the lower half immediately drops upon the rail. If,
for instance, the construction that trips the fender is the body of a man,
it is scooped upon the lower fender
and held in place by the upper fender.
At the same moment, the raising of the upper fender automatically shuts off the current from the motors, and the simultaneous dropping of the lower fender applies the air brakes in the emergency position, thus stopping and safely bringing the car to a dead halt.

When the body is removed, the turning of an air cock in the motor's
cab, brings the two fenders together again, and the car is ready to resume its journey.

"Mr. Eacrett, who has been working on this fender idea for some time, maintains that his fender is practically
as cheap as the ordinary fender now in use, and can be applied to any car
with no more trouble."

"The inventor and his friends were elated over the results of the trials
yesterday, and declare that the tests conclusively prove the merits of the new fender."

BOBS UP WITH OLD REGULARITY

Question to Decide Whether Londoners Will or Will Not Shovel Snow.

At this time of the year the snow cleaning problem bobs up with annoying regularity. It is the old question, to be or not to be—that is, to be a snow shoveler,
or not a snow shoveler.

In London the snowplow system is abused right and left, and with a strong section of citizens the cry has been for a law to compel people to clean their walks
and abandon the snowplow system.

But there are two sides to the snow-cleaning question. In Hamilton the people clean the snow off the walks themselves,
and here is what the Times has to say
of the system:

"The Hamilton Herald professes to be puzzled there is general satisfaction in the city with the present system of cleaning the snow off the sidewalks. We believe otherwise. The man who cleans off the snow before 7 o'clock in the morning and finds his neighbor's sidewalk is not cleaned until 8 or 9, is not pleased because he has to tramp through the snow going to work. The man who cleans his sidewalk off in the morning and finds the crossings uncleaned when he goes to work is not pleased. The poor woman who is sick and unable to pay for the cleaning,
or to do it herself, is not pleased with the system when she gets a blue paper to appear at the police court. The man who carefully removes the ice and snow from
in front of his premises is not pleased when he finds his neighbor's walk a skating rink. Pleased or not pleased, there is little if any more reason why we should have to shovel the snow off the sidewalk than we should have to play scavenger on the street."

In London the trouble appears to be that the ward foremen are not sufficiently impressed with the necessity of getting the plows out as early as possible, and the board of works is too ready to ensure the foremen and the city engineer if the plows are ordered out often enough. In attempting to cut down snowplow expenses the city allows the plow business
to go to the dogs.
