WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

CHAPTER XLIX.

"When I read that you had been arrested on the charge of having murdered the poor fellow," Sir Hugh went on, "I think I realized for the first time what a miserable coward I was. My first impulse was to go and give myself up at any cost; but my courage—bah, I had no courage, so I cannot say it failed me!—my cowardice conquered. Heaven only knows what I suffered during those days, Stuart—you, in prison, and that poor broken-hearted girl did not suffer more—at least you were not tortured with remorse as I was. Again and again, I lived those terrible hours on the rocks, in that awful solitude which I had so dreaded being disturbed—again and again I saw in anticipation the trial, the crowds of abusing faces, the hooting multitude. How I shrank from it all you may guess when I tell you that two or three times I went out to try to obtain poison, and that once I went down to London Bridge—Don't you, dear old friend, don't grieve so—I have been a coward from the beginning. A coward's death would be a fitting end to my career. But I will not speak of it, since it pains you," he added brokenly. "When the time of the trial came on, I went down to Exminster. I had no definite plan, except that, if you were convicted, I was determined to confess all and—"

"Stop!" Guy said breathlessly, lifting his head for a moment. "You were at Exminster. Then it was not a delusion. I saw you?"

"You saw me! Where?"

"It was at night," Major Stuart said unsteadily. "I was leaning out of the window of my room at the hotel, and a man passed down the street—a man with a great dark beard and—"

"You recognized me!"

"The face reminded me of yours; but I fancied it was a delusion—you were so much in my mind," Guy said tremulously; and Hugh looked at him in silence for a few moments.

"If I had recognized you, Guy," he faltered, "I think I should have told you all. Would to Heaven I had!"

"When I saw that you were acquitted, I went back to town," Sir Hugh continued; "and I lived there as long as my money lasted. After a time, I got less fearful of recognition, and I used to go out and wander about the city, and I became familiar with all kinds of misery which I had never even suspected before; and when my money failed I got odd jobs—all kinds of work. I have driven a hansom for weeks, old fellow, and held horses, and— But I said I would not distress you," he broke off, with a faint smile. "Is it not very strange?" he went on, in a moment. "When Shirley was in London, we could not have been far from each other. I feel so thankful now that we never met."

"Hugh, my poor fellow!"

"Have you any pity for such a mean, miserable, cowardly wretch?" the unhappy man said brokenly. "Heaven bless you, Guy! I might have known how you would have received me. I might have had faith in you; but, old fellow, my one consolation all this time lay in the thought that you and Shirley were happy together. Old fellow, why was it—"

The wistful eyes seeking Guy's face so inquiringly finished the question, and Guy answered it with grave gentleness.

"She sent me away," he said, with a slight smile. "Poor child, she feared that the— He hesitated, knowing that his words could not but add to the suffering which Sir Hugh was already enduring; and the latter guessed the conclusion of the answer, even as Stuart had divined the end of the question.

"I understand," he said. "Well, it was as well perhaps. Soon—very soon, old friend, she will be free indeed," he added feebly; "and I shall be truly glad to leave her in your care. Poor darling, how greatly she has suffered, and how nobly she has forgiven! Hers is a heart of gold, Guy, and you are worthy of each other. But, to end my story, I must tell you how I came here. Give me another mouthful of that cordial, old fellow—just enough to enable me to finish."

Guy did as he was requested.

"My health was falling me, and I began to long for a breath of fresh air again," Sir Hugh resumed. "The London fogs were killing me, and I thought it would be so terrible to die in the midst of all the filth and misery and degradation in which I had passed the last months of my life. So one morning I set off on foot and worked my way along the road, getting a few pence for an odd job here, or a meal there, and sleeping in a barn or wherever I could get shelter. I had no route to follow; I just went on and on, until the snow overtook me outside this village, and I lost my way in the fields on that Christmas Day. I had wandered about for over an hour, night was coming on, and I was weary and exhausted, when I saw a light in a window at a little distance. I managed to struggle across to it; the curtains were not drawn over the window, and I could see into the room. A woman was sitting alone by the fire, and I was just going to knock and ask her for shelter, when she rose and came to the window. The next moment I recognized her, and the surprise so overcame me that I fell forward upon the snow, and lost consciousness for a few moments. When I recovered, I managed to creep round to the door. A numbness was stealing all over me. I felt that I was dying, and my one wish was to hear her forgive me before the end came. I tried the door; it was locked, and there was a sound of a dog barking violently. I remember dimly trying to pray, but even my senses were too dead for that; and then I recollect nothing until I found myself lying with my head on Shirley's knee, and her dear face bending over me, with Heaven's own pity reflected upon it. How can I tell you how good she was to me then, Guy—how she warned and fed me? And, even when I told her what a guilty wretch I was, she did not shrink from me—she only hid her face for a moment, and let me keep her hands in mine."

He was silent; his wife's noble self-devotion and perfect forgiveness had touched all that was good in him; and there was a great admiration mingling with the sadness on his face as he thought of her. She seemed to him more than woman—better, nobler, holier; she was no longer the girl whose beauty he loved, and who had been his wife; she was an angel of goodness, of compassion, and of mercy; and the halo which surrounded her in his thoughts surrounded her now high he might have risen; by the face of each other, both too deeply moved to speak; then Shirley said softly under her breath—

"Guy, tell me, what must we do?"

"I am almost too stunned to think," he answered. "It is a terrible position for you, my child."

"And for him! Oh, Guy, think of the consequences of discovery!"

"You trust me, Shirley?"

"Fully," she answered, looking up at him with steady eyes but quivering lips.

"Will you let yourself be guided by me in this?"

"Oh, so gladly, Guy!"

"Dear, you will let me trust Oilphant?" he asked very gently.

a dread which my wild terror must have increased a hundred-fold.

"Hugh"—Major Stuart's voice was very grave and tender and compassionate—"I cannot let you talk any more now. Rest for a while, and when you are stronger we will consider what is best to be done. Ah, here is some one whose influence is greater than mine!" he added smiling, as Shirley came in quietly and went softly to the other side of the bed. "Nurses' and doctors' orders are paramount, are they not?"

"Shirley knows that I shall rest all the better for the relief of telling you all this, Guy, and making you—selfishly, I confess—share my burden—and hers, poor child! Have you rested a little, dear?" he added wistfully.

Shirley forced a smile to her lips as she answered in the affirmative, and, sitting down by his side, took the attenuated hand in hers and held it between her own; and, after a time, the weary blue eyes which dwelt upon her with such love closed, and he fell asleep.

Gently and noiselessly Shirley disengaged her hand from his, and with Guy, went into the other room. The day had worn on toward evening now and the gray wintry dusk was filling the little room, which looked drear and desolate without fire or lamp. For Guy alone. By their nobility he saved a few moments they stood in silence facing each other, both too deeply moved to speak; then Shirley said softly under her breath—

"Guy, tell me, what must we do?"

"I am almost too stunned to think," he answered. "It is a terrible position for you, my child."

"And for him! Oh, Guy, think of the consequences of discovery!"

"You trust me, Shirley?"

"Fully," she answered, looking up at him with steady eyes but quivering lips.

He saw, too, that Hugh was very ill; not only was he weak and debilitated to a degree sad to witness, but he breathed with difficulty, and more than once his narration had been stopped by a fit of coughing which racked his weak frame with a terrible force. It was evident that even with care he could not last many months—even weeks; and Hugh, looking up into the grave, pitiful face, read the thought, with quick intuition.

"Yes, I shall not last long now, old fellow," he said quietly. "And it is all for the best. These last days have not been unhappy, except when I saw how much anxiety I was causing that poor child. It was so pleasant—ah, so pleasant!—to be nursed by her, to feel her hands about me as gentle and tender as if I had not been the worst foe she ever had; to hear her voice with its pitying tones was sufficient to make me happy. At first I was too ill even to thank her, or to realize how terribly I was adding to her anxiety by my presence here; but I can imagine now what those days must have been to her, if her anxiety for me and her dread of discovery—

The Fear of Living.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"Well of course it's splendid to have children and they must be a great comfort to you when they grow up safely and turn out well," said my childless neighbor, "and sometimes I'm sorry that I didn't have them. But since that child has been sick I've come to the conclusion that I'm mighty glad I didn't. It means altogether too much agony."

"That child" to which my childless neighbour referred, was the youngest baby of the little mother across the way. He was taken suddenly and seriously ill just before Christmas, when his mother and father were ecstatically happy in preparing a wonderful Christmas tree for the little brood. And his illness plunged them from a shining height of happiness into a depth of misery that made one sick at heart to contemplate, even from the safe distance of one's own Christmas happiness.

The little mother across the way has three babies, but she once lost one, and now whenever sickness shows its ugly head in the home she is tortured by an agony of anxiety compared with which the inquisition would be a form of amusement.

My childless neighbour had just been in to see if there was anything she could do to help, when she announced the conclusion which I have recorded above, that it is better to be childless since those who do have children suffer so cruelly from the fear of losing them. What a terrible mistake!

Not only in the matter of children, but as regards all the worth while things of the world.

To be afraid of great happiness because the possibilities of unhappiness come with it; to be afraid of loving because loving and losing are twins, these are two of the commonest and saddest mistakes in the world.

Wealth, fame, love, power, success, honor, children—all the good things—bring with them the possibility and fear of loss. For every height there is a depth and the greater the height the greater the depth. And yet I think the most unforfeitable cowards in the world are those who are afraid of life.

"The Fear of Living" is the title of a beautiful French story which contrasts two groups of people. In the one group were those who were afraid to live, afraid to take the loss with the attainment, the suffering with the happiness. Their lives were sheltered, but empty, meaningless and disappointed. In the other group were those who were not afraid of life, who lost, gained, lived, loved, rejoiced, suffered, and were satisfied.

Do not be afraid to live and you need not be afraid to die. It seems to me that the most tragic death is not that of the man who is taken away in the midst of a rich full life, but that of the man or woman who has never lived. Do not let the fear of living deprive you of your birthright—a life with all the gain and loss, happiness and sorrow, understanding and satisfaction that that means.

HOW SERGEANT HARPER CAPTURED TRAPPER CHARGED WITH ABDUCTION.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—A story of heroic devotion to duty, of indomitable perseverance in the face of extraordinary hardship and privation, is told in a report just received at the offices of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. This report constitutes one of the most remarkable of the many hundred remarkable documents in the records of the Mounted Police, and breathes the spirit that has made this force feared and respected all over Western Canada, from the forty-ninth parallel to the Arctic Sea.

It is the statement of Sergeant C. S. Harper, who was in charge of a patrol sent from Lake Saskatchewan in the early part of November to effect the arrest of Asa Hunting, a trapper, charged with abducting a fifteen-year-old girl named Mildred Shaw. Hunting had fled with the girl in the direction of the mountains, through an almost trackless wilderness covered with deep snow and intersected by half frozen streams.

Sergeant Harper started in pursuit on November 3th, taking with him Constable Stevenson and a packer, Richard Harrington. They had a pack train and three horses and a month's provisions. After travelling for a week, they found it necessary to cache most of the provisions, owing to the difficulties of travel. Half the pack train was left behind at this point, and the party began the ascent of Nose Mountain, "which is about 2,500 feet high" and "is very steep and difficult owing to snow, especially the last 500 feet. One of the pack horses lost its footing and rolled down about fifty feet until caught by a tree."

The ascent of this mountain took over a week, the party encountering snow and extreme cold. On the mountain top the snow was waist deep in places and the last of the oats were fed to the horses. Descending into the Porcupine Valley the patrol rested for two days to rest the horses, "who were nearly all in." On December 3, the party came to one of the fugitive's hay camps and learned that Hunting had gone on two months before.

Trail Too Hard for Horses.

Four days later, the man's tracks were found, leading over the mountain to Grand Cache, a trading post in the main range of the Rockies, and difficult of access. Horses could not follow this trail, so the party went back to the Porcupine Flats and bit into the Smoky River over the Jasper trail, which went over Porcupine Mountain." Following this trail the patrol lost a pack horse "that tumbled off a cut bank in the mountains." They packed their saddle horse and walked.

Two days later they ran out of all food except tea and sugar. They had picked up a half breed who told of having a cache of dried moosemeat on the Porcupine. "I sent him on to get it," says Harper, "and he returned with a sackful. This is what we lived on till December 12th. The more you boil it the harder it seems to get." On the 12th the party reached an encampment of Indians who were living on lynx and rabbits. There was food for the exhausted horses here, and Harper decided to leave them behind with Constable Stevenson.

Going on for two more days, the officer and packer reached and crossed the Smoky River three times on foot and reached Grand Cache. "The water took us about the waist and then froze our clothes and we were all in when we got there." Here there was fresh news of the fugitive. Constable Stevenson was sent for, and the party pushed on for the Muddy River on foot. Then they sighted the smoke of Hunting's camp fire. Harper approached through the bush and found the girl cooking in a tepee built of poles and spruce boughs. Hunting was visiting his traps. He was arrested on his return and the long journey began. Hunting and the girl had lived on rabbits caught by the girl in snares. Traveling back to Nose Mountain, the party again ran out of food for the horses and almost out of food for themselves. The horses were almost exhausted.

Ball Confesses That He Killed Miss Bradfield.

LONDON, February 26.—The Home Office last night received the official intimation that George Ball, alias Sumner, had confessed his guilt of the murder of Miss Bradfield at Liverpool. The confession was made to the Bishop of Liverpool, Dr. Cheveruse who then confirmed the prisoner. Ball goes to the scaffold to-day. His companion, Elliott, is now serving a sentence of four years as an accessory to the brutal sack murder, for which Ball is to pay the death penalty.

The New Tariff.

We have been looking through the Customs returns with a view of seeing how the new tariff affects the goods on which it is imposed. It will be remembered that on some articles there are specific increases, and ten per cent. on the total duty including the increase, while on the other articles, there is only the surtax. We will deal with the former first. We will calculate on the basis of the same quantities put into home consumption as during the year ending June 30th, 1913. The increases for the revenue should be as follows:

Ale, Beer, Porter	$7,125
Spirits of Wine	130
Cordials	190
Manufactured tobacco	8,145
Cigarettes	12,600
Brandy	9,471
Whiskey	40,117
Gin	4,414
Rum	84,200
Champagne	427

Excise Duties

Ale	$2,492
Butterine	39,336
Cigarettes	51,458
Tobacco	51,458

Articles Which Yielded $5,000 or more Duty. Extra Revenue from the Surtax on these:

Animals	$3,100
Green Apples	1,284
Beans	760
Brushes	546
Butter	1,600
Cabbage	1,100
Cabinet Ware	2,500

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram
LONDON, To-day.
 That this picture of Ulster as an armed camp was a pure figment of the imagination conceived to impress British electors, is the declaration of the special correspondent of the Westminster Gazette, after making a tour of investigation in North and East Ireland. He does not deny the presence of some volunteers, but says that some knowledge is necessary to find them, as otherwise a man might be in Ulster one week and remain unaware of anything save the ordinary round of daily life. No single responsible head of any big business in Belfast was acting as he would if he believed civil war only a few months ahead. Editorially the paper declares that any attempt to mislead by such an investigation for partisan purposes would be dangerous as well as unpatriotic.

WASHINGTON, To-day.

The President told callers while he had not recalled any formal communication on the subject, he had understood that European nations generally took the same view as did Great Britain, that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was violated by the Panama Canal Act. He pointed out that in dealing with foreign affairs, nations which believed States did not keep a promise on so important a treaty as the Hay-Pauncefote Convention, believed the States would not be likely to be sincere on other delicate questions. Word had come to the President of the general impression in Europe that the States was "sailing as close to the wind as possible," in interpreting promises made in its treaties. No pressure had been brought to bear by any nation to emphasize their view in this connection, but the President felt that foreign Governments had this feeling on the subject. When the House Committee on Interstate Commerce meets it is expected to favorably report on the Sims Bill and to repeal the exemption clause introduced last year by Senator Root. Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania announced that a poll of the House conclusively demonstrated that there are more than enough votes in the House to sustain the President's appeal.

Two Veterans Off.

The Viking and Terra Nova, two veterans of our wooden sealing fleet, left port at ten o'clock, respectively, to-day for Channell, which port they will leave on Tuesday next and go in the Gulf in quest of the whitecoats.

A message was received by Mr. W. A. Munn last night from Trepassay saying that the schooner Antoinette, Capt. George Webber, had reached that port after a passage of 40 days from Gibraltar. This must be the vessel sighted off Cape Race yesterday whose house flag could not be distinguished.

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.
 Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed."
 "Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

Salmon And Trout.

(New York Sun.)

Anglers who are counting the days before the season opens for trout and salmon will be interested in the discussion in the London Times. Are fish color blind? The answer of most knights of the rod and tackle will be an indignant negative: if salmon and trout are blind, why do they jump at iridescent flies? It was a question that interested Herbert Spencer, who whipped many a stream in Scotland for salmon. It was even said—and there is nothing more entertaining in the discussion in England—that the great scientist immersed himself in the Aline or another river to put himself in the place of a salmon and gaze up at a floating fly. It seems from the following testimony that Mr. Spencer preferred flies that were not brilliant:

"About the year 1876 I succeeded him a day or two after he had been fishing on the Aline flowing into Loch Aline on the Sound of Mull. I asked my host's gillie, who showed me Dr. Spencer's flies, scum-brown hackle buzz ones of his own creation. The answer to my query, if the philosopher caught fish with them, was very affirmative, though somewhat expressive of surprise."

Another friend of Herbert Spencer writes that he always rejected the artificial gaudy flies, preferring to make his own lures. Sir Herbert Maxwell admits that salmon may be able to see colors under some conditions, but doubts whether a fish, any more than a human being, can see the color of a fly with the high light of the air above it. That seems to explain why Herbert Spencer did not use bright flies. "One angler, evidently a veteran, declares that the size of the lure at the surface draws the salmon, and that it is indifferent to colors, but this same authority is inclined to think that the trout has a fancy, but a capricious fancy for color; one day he darts for a silver doctor, and the next he spurns it for a black dog."

The Giraffe

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Swash."

The Giraffe is the skyscraper of the animal kingdom. It is a medium sized animal whose neck has been stretched out by Nature in a frivolous mood until it is long enough to use as a wireless mast.

The giraffe inhabits Africa with very poor success, being enthusiastically eaten by lions, tigers and other overgrown cats. Nature spends goat's grown cats. Nature spent so much time on the giraffe's neck, that she failed to develop its powers of defense and neglected to give it a voice. Armed with six feet of throat and no larynx, the giraffe is not even able to complain against a cruel fate which compels it to suffer in silence instead of raising a roar like a member of Congress who has been left off the appropriation committee.

The giraffe has a tastefully designed body and looks somewhat like a zebra which has stretched itself out of shape trying to get its head out from between a pair of fence palings. It has a long prehensile tongue which it wraps around the topmost branches of young trees when feeding and uses to pull off leaves and fruits. The giraffe's neck is a snap as far as eating goes, but it is a miserable failure when it comes to drinking. When thirsty the giraffe finds a water hole and then folds himself up like a camp chair and hoists water up its long-distance gullet like a young water works plant. It is useless to try to catch the giraffe by poisoning him, as he does not notice the effects until the next day when yesterday's meal arrives at headquarters.

The giraffe is very shy and can run like Ty Cobb stealing second. Large giraffes are worth $10,000 apiece to menageries and 37 cents to farmers. One giraffe let loose in Michigan would eat up a peach orchard a week from the top down. An effort is now being made to tame them and teach them to act as portable telephone poles for military use, but it has not been a success. As soon as a giraffe is tamed, he catches cold in some section of his neck and wanders into the labyrinth in hence. Nothing would be more annoying to the farmer than to have to get up early on a hot day and bury a deceased giraffe in an old artesian well.

STOP COUGHING!

It's quite as foolish as it is annoying to keep on coughing since PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE is sold all over Newfoundland and is guaranteed to soothe and heal the irritated parts at once, and to rapidly destroy the very cause of this aggravating nuisance. Hundreds of persons are complaining every day about the cough a cold they have had for a long time, and are not able to get rid of it. Don't let a cough or cold hang on you day after day and run the risk of catching and developing the "cough" that is not easy to throw off. You will avoid all this worry (about the cough or cold you have) by obtaining PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE at once. (Manufacturers also of Stafford's Price 25 cents a bottle; postage cents extra. Count is Acquitted of Double Murder

Berlin, Feb. 25.—The trial at Meitz of Count Mielnski, a Polish member of the Reichstag, for killing his faithless wife and her young love who was her nephew, ended Saturday with a verdict of acquittal.

The double murder took place under tragic circumstances at the Count's castle at Dakowo Mokre, December 20 last. The Count did cover his wife and her nephew, the dissolute young Count Mienysynski, his wife's bedroom and killed the both with a shotgun. He asserted he had heard a noise and thinking burglars had entered the house fired the dim light and killed the woman and man without knowing who they were.

The trial lasted only two days, apparently there was much sympathy with the Count, who had forgiven his wife for two previous occasions. He was separated from her for seven years after the second of these affairs, but took her back, and then began the intimacy with her nephew.

YESTERDAY.

Your yesterdays are dead—To-day, ah, yes to-day is new, and large and limitless in its far-reaching sway. I know it is impossible to wholly e'er forget. To never dream of yesterdays—Impossible, and yet—It is the wise soul turns his face Toward every new-born day And shuts the past away from him. It is the only way.

Your yesterdays are dead—To-day is yours to mould—Hail to his star, you tollers all. And watch its light unfold. And when your loved ones pass away Your sorrow should be deep. But you should realize this truth. The Shepherd knows his sheep; The spirits of the best live on. Moving along through space; We should not weep too bitterly; Think of the joys they face.

Your yesterdays are dead—The joys and sorrows brought Of yesterday now lock away. Experience they taught. In the great current of to-day Your work you have to do: So don't sit down with old regret—Sit down with something new. Responsibility is good And hope a trusty friend. Just get acquainted with them both. For stimulus they lend.

Hon. J. S. Pitts' Will.

ADDITIONAL BEQUESTS. In addition to the bequests of the late Mr. Pitts, as already published, there are as follows:—To his wife: House and land on King's Bridge Road, furniture and effects, and Pitts building on Water Street, and afterwards to be given to Methodist Conference for purpose mentioned in yesterday's issue. To Mary Mackay (niece of deceased): $5,000 and life interest on 150 shares in Bank of Nova Scotia.

Relatives. To Helen Mackay, Annie Mackay, Isabella Mackay and Ethel Dickenson, $2,000 each.

To Arthur Syme: $5,000; Annie Lewis, $500, and Fanny Pratt, $500. To the widow of George Pitts, £200 a year for life. To her son, £4,000. The remainder of the estate to be invested for life interest of his wife. On the death of his wife estate to be divided amongst his nephews and nieces.

Solomon Never Had to Deal With a Hen.

Uniontown, Pa., Feb. 23.—Called on to decide the ownership of a hen claimed by George Bass and Joseph Nedrow, of Arnold City, Justice of the Peace John Reisinger hit upon a "Solomonesque" solution. "Take this fowl to Arnold City," he directed his constable, "and release it near the poultry yards of these two men. In whose hen house it goes to roost, to him it belongs." The constable, accompanied by Bass and Nedrow, did as directed, when liberated the bird promptly flew into the chicken yard of Charles Black, where the constable decided it would have to stay under the justice's ruling. "The word was made flesh," and the preacher. The costs of the case amount to ten times the value of the hen.

A WISH.

Do you wish the world were better? Let me tell you what to do. Set a watch upon your actions, keep them always straight and true. Rid your minds of selfish motives, let your thoughts be clean and high. You can make a little Eden of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wiser? Well, suppose you make a start. By accumulating wisdom in the scrap-book of your heart. Do not waste one page on folly; live to learn and learn to live. If you want to give out knowledge you must get it ere you give.

Do you wish the world were happier? Then remember day by day Just to scatter seeds of kindness as you pass along the way. For the pleasure of the many may be oftentimes traced to one. As the hands that plant the acorn shelter armies from the sun.

To Write Life of Lord Strathcona.

Beckles Wilson of Windsor Has Been Entrusted with Work of Compiling Lord Strathcona's Biography.

The preparation of the biography of Lord Strathcona has been entrusted by the trustees to Mr. Beckles Wilson. The contract was completed by cable Friday. Mr. Wilson goes to Montreal to visit Sir William Van Horne on this subject and on the 10th proceeds to England. He will remain there some time and on returning to Canada will visit Labrador, where Lord Strathcona, then Donald A. Smith was factor for the Hudson Bay Company at Rigolette and Mingan. While an offer of this character to Mr. Wilson is most flattering to him as a literary man, it is none the less a work of great magnitude—it is understood that the documents connected with the estate are of a most voluminous character, covering nearly three quarters of a century of the history of British North America.

Will Harness the Nile.

Work has been commenced on another great scheme to reclaim by irrigation vast tracts of desert in the Sudan. It is believed it can be made to add enormously to the cotton output of the British Empire. The tract which is to be watered is known as the Giza territory. It lies between the Blue and White Niles, below Khartoum, and consists of 1,500,000 acres. The force and flow of the two rivers are sufficient to water the entire district when properly harnessed. The proposal is to build two dams south of Khartoum, one over each of the rivers. Thus the tract between the streams will be irrigated, while at the same time the force of the water flowing into Egypt will be controlled. At present the Blue Nile comes down in a raging flow, and the White Nile, flowing with it to make a huge overflow. The building of the two dams will enable the flow to be properly regulated and will practically mean the final harnessing of the Nile.

FULL of THRILLS

Here is a Novel that is a best seller. It is perhaps the best Western Story yet written. Cloth 50c.; Postage 2c.

WHISPERING SMITH (By Frank H. Spearman). An exciting, adventurous railroad story, located in the Red Desert. A feud between Sinclair, foreman of the bridges, and McCloud, division superintendent, has its beginning in a railroad wreck. Sinclair loses his position and joins a band of outlaws who rob the railroad.

A posse of men under "Whispering Smith" pursues them and there is plenty of gun play. A breathless tale of intrigue and villainy, realistic of the new life of the west, but softened and brightened by a double love story.

Notice the Unusual Security of this Six Per cent Bond!

It is our good fortune now to be able to recommend a 6 per cent Industrial Bond, safeguarded by exceptionally large surplus assets and earnings. We refer to the First Mortgage Bonds of Brandram-Henderson, Limited.

This Company's net profits for 1913 were $163,261.24—while the Bond interest only called for $27,216.76 of these record earnings. The Balance Sheet shows quite large reserves. For instance, bond redemption reserve amounting to $58,000.00; reserve for Preferred Dividend this year of $6,125.00; reserve for depreciation of $7,500.00;—all of which with $88,889.14 at credit of profit and loss account makes a very substantial total reserve for a company with such comparatively small capitalization.

In $100 and $1000 denominations we quote these Bonds on a 6 1/2 per cent yield basis—either outright or on the partial payment plan.

Some Valuable Suggestions for the Game Board.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I recently read a copy of your January 21st issue and was greatly interested in the letter signed "Native".

The concluding suggestions, viz., the importation of animals not indigenous to Newfoundland should appear with great force to all who are familiar with conditions in the interior.

The idea often expressed that the interior of Newfoundland should be settled by farmers is absurd, for conditions are such that it is an impossibility to operate a farm in the interior at a profit, excepting possibly in a few well favoured places, which in the aggregate would not amount to 100 square miles.

If the gentlemen who compose the Game Board would undertake a wise and aggressive policy with the object of stocking the country with the various game, fur bearing animals, inland fish, which exist in other countries having climatic conditions identical with Newfoundland, the favourable results in say 10 years would be of incalculable value to the country.

We have thousands of square miles over which the necessary food to sustain moose, elk, red-deer and possibly other herbivorous animals is found in abundance, and this is the only way this land may be utilized.

Our lakes, teeming with fish should sustain untold numbers of otter and mink, skunk, raccoon, fisher and other fur-bearing animals might also be imported, as well as game birds and inland fish.

When we think of the great benefits which we have derived from the importation of the Nova Scotia hare about 20 years ago, by that public spirited gentleman and sportsman, the late Hon. Stephen Rendell, father of our respected fellow citizens, Messrs. R. G., A. S. and Dr. H. Rendell, it is hard to realize that the various Governments that have been in power, have not, to any extent, made further ventures on the same lines.

During the past season one firm in St. John's handled from 20,000 to 25,000 of these animals, paying 15 cents each for them. Other firms may be calculated as having disposed of in the aggregate say 40,000. Then add to this the number used as food, by people throughout the island, at least as many more, would total 125,000 to say nothing of the food provided for wild animals which prey upon them.

And this animal has proved a blessing to our people throughout the island for the past 25 years, with one or two exceptions, when periodic disease, natural to the animal attacked them.

Is not this fact worthy of the thoughtful consideration of the Game Board?

At present when the artificial propagation of fur bearing animals is receiving so much attention all over the world, it is difficult to realize that nothing is being done in the direction outlined above.

And what is far worse, we are not conserving the animal life already existing in the island. Caribou are degenerating and rapidly decreasing in numbers, otter are not plentiful, marten are rarely seen in places where formerly they existed in large numbers; beaver are nominally protected and are in certain localities increasing rapidly, but large numbers are taken illegally every year in many other parts of the island. Bears are scarce. If the existing game laws were strictly enforced and if regulations making absolute close season for all animal life every 3rd or 4th year were passed and enforced as strictly, we would soon have a great and perpetual source of wealth that does not exist at present.

It appears to me that at the present time money can be easily obtained for carrying out everything outlined above; we are now compelled to sell our foxes in this market at about one half their value in Canada. This difference in price goes into the pockets of wealthy individuals who are fox farmers, and is at least equal to the sum of $1,000 on every silver fox sold.

There are at least 200 silver foxes in farms in Newfoundland to-day, so that $200,000 has been taken out of the pockets of the trapper and given to the wealthy man by the recent regulation of the Game Board.

Repeat this law prohibiting exportation and charge say $500 on every fox sent out of the country, apply the money so collected to the strict enforcement of the Game Laws and also towards the importation of animals not indigenous to the country.

By reference to their 1912 Report I note the names of the gentlemen comprising the Game Board, and note on its committee men well known and of favourable repute throughout the island:—A. W. Piccott, W. B. Sclater, A. McDougall, R. White, F. McNamara, T. Winter, W. Wood, C. Carroil, W. Rennie and others with whom I am not personally acquainted but who have been placed on the Board on account of their worth.

Its makeup embraces a selection hard to match, but why are they not up and doing?

Yours truly,
BAY ST. GEORGE.

Loses Nose And Outfit In Arctic

Copenhagen, Feb. 24.—News has been received here that Mr. Lidden, the Norwegian explorer, composer, shipwrecked in Hudson Bay, lost all his equipment and had to spend a month in a snow hut, but finally reached Churchill, after much suffering and in a piteous state.

He lost his nose and several fingers from frost bite.

Mr. Lidden started on the expedition to study the music and life of the Eskimos.

Good And Bad Books.

The bookstores groan beneath the weight of books in jackets; they're mostly books by Oppenheim, or tales that treat of Sex, excursions in the world of crime, among the moral wrecks. And to the publishers we say: "Great Caesar and gadzooks! Why don't you get a hump on, pray, and publish decent books?" They make reply: "We shall be glad when you yourselves have chased! We publish volumes, punk and bad, to suit the public taste. Just let the people show a wish for helpful books and fine, and we will issue tomes, odds fish, with truth in every line!" They'd have us think the people yearn for tales of lawds and thieves, for books so hot they fairly burn the hands that turn the leaves. But when a great big book arrives, a wholesome book and strong, bookkeepers have to draft their wives to wait upon the throng. Do people clamor for the muck and pass the good books up. Let Winston Churchill tell what struck his "Inside of the Cup." There is a book that's clean and sane, a book with moral grand, and dealers rustled round in vain to meet the big demand. Folks buy the sloppy, trashy tales in carload lots, indeed, because (as many a buyer wails) there's little else to read.

HEALTHY AND UNHEALTHY LIGHTING.

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:—

Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this amongst other reasons that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson B. Hurry.

He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Duffield, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, before the march of civilization had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter being applied with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewis, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov8,tf

BUENOS AYRES, March 5.
A state of siege was proclaimed in Rio Janeiro to-day, according to despatches received here from that city. It is understood here that a strict censorship has been imposed on the despatches from Brazil.

VIENNA, March 5.
Seventeen soldiers of the Emperor's Rifle Regiment were overwhelmed and killed to-day by a great avalanche, while they were engaged in manoeuvres at Ortler Mountain in the Tyrol.

WASHINGTON, March 5.
According to those well informed on the intentions of the Washington Administration, upon the results of the investigation into the death of Benton, and the mysterious disappearance of Baugh, and on Carranza's action, depends, in a far-reaching measure, the policy which the U. S. Government will pursue towards the Constitutionalists.

OTTAWA, March 5.
Under the redistribution Bill it is intended to merge the counties of Digby and Yarmouth, in the west of Nova Scotia; also Antigonish and Guysboro in the east. Richmond county will be added to South Cape Breton, but this will not affect the representation of the Island, as the united constituency will return two members, which with Inverness and Cape Breton, North, and Victoria will still give the Island four members.

LONDON, March 5.
The policy of the United States towards Mexico again occupies the leading place in the editorial columns of English newspapers. The "Standard" discovers a marked change in the whole trend of American foreign policy. Instead of haughty isolation, based on the strict letter of the Monroe doctrine, the States is now becoming anxious to stand well with the European powers. The government at Washington is apprehensive lest, if it became involved in intervention in Mexico, Japan might seize the occasion to carry her designs on the Philippines and Hawaii into effect, and believes that Europe if so disposed, could lay an embargo on Japanese ambitions.

WASHINGTON, March 5.
Dr. Wittgenstein, a naturalized American physician, is here from Mexico. He will to-day report to the Government the deaths of five Americans, two girls and three men, slain in Mexico. He says the rebels under Zapata's command, attacked the home of Bender, an American farmer, six miles north of San Juan, at night. They set fire to the barns and houses. As Bender's two sons rushed out of the house they were shot dead. Defending her sick husband, Mrs. Bender killed one of the invaders. She dragged herself to San Juan and organized a rescue party, of which the doctor was one. They saved Bender, but his home was burned and his property was stolen. Dr. Wittgenstein was himself stabbed four times by Mexicans.

WASHINGTON, March 5.
President Wilson personally appealed to Congress, assembled in joint session to-day, to sustain the National honor by upholding treaty obligations, and repealing the Panama Toll exemption clauses, against which Britain had protested. He asked Congress to do that in support of the foreign policy of the United States, and added that exemption for American ships was not only a mistake in economic policy, but was in contravention of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty. In his address the President said: "I shall not know how to deal with other matters, of even greater delicacy and nearer consequence, if you do not grant it to me in ungrudging measure. The large thing to do is the only thing we can afford to do—voluntary withdrawal from a position, everywhere questioned and misunderstood. We ought to reverse our action without raising the question whether we are right or wrong, and so, once more, deserve our reputation for generosity, and the redemption of every obligation without quibble or hesitation." The Administration leaders in both the House and the Senate have assured the President that with the delivery of the message by him, showing that national circumstances had arisen since the measure was last debated, his suggestion for repeal would be met with prompt action.

At the House

Petitions were presented by Mr. Woodford from Upper Gullies on the subject of a public wharf and the reservation of some bog lands; by Mr. Jennings from Twillingate District on various public matters and from Exploits for a wharf; by Mr. Grimes from Brigus and Cupids on Temperance Reform; by Mr. Parsons from Harbour Grace on the same subject; by Mr. Higgins from Portugal Cove for a wharf; by Mr. Devoreaux from the Cape Shore (St. Bré's) for railway extension; by Mr. Lloyd from Trinity for a road, and by Mr. Hickman from Grate's Cove for elective road boards.

The annual report of the Inspector of Weights and Measures was tabled by the Col. Secretary.

Mr. Hickman, on behalf of the Temperance Committee, asked the Prime Minister what action was being taken in connection with the Temperance petitions and was informed that the petitions were referred to the department of the Colonial Secretary and would be dealt with as early a date as possible.

The amendment of the Legislative Council respecting the Partridge Berries Bill was amended and the Governor in Council given the power to regulate the inspection of the berries instead of the Board of Trade.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means and additional supply resolutions were passed.

While in Committee Mr. Conker spoke on the awards given to Ryan Bros. for a portion of their land for the use of the Trinity railway line, pointing out that $20,000 was claimed but the arbitrators awarded $6,000. All the Ryan property in Trinity was bought for $5,900. Mr. Ryan had testified that among other damages sustained the railway interfered with his fish flake which was a great loss to him for fish drying purposes. He said he had used it to dry fish in some cases he had bought at $1.00 a qd. and sell at $6.50. He also referred to the fat fees got by those who arbitrated on the Ryan property. For instance Mr. M. P. Gibbs, who claimed $972 and got $762; Mr. Howley, $484. These and other expenses amounted to over $2,000 outside the award.

Mr. Lloyd in answer to an instruction made by the Prime Minister that he (Mr. L.) while a member of the House under the Bond administration received 'fat' arbitration fees, said he wished to correct that impression and pointed out that the total amount he received during those four years was $232. He would not have taken notice of the Premier's statement of Wednesday, but that at Bonne Bay the Premier had stated that he (Mr. L.) had lived largely out of the late Government from whom he had fat fees and by the defeat of the party, he had been forced to work for a living.

The Prime Minister expressed regret for the statement and withdrew it, adding that he had made the statement originally under provocation from the strong hostility of the newspaper, edited by the member for Trinity.

Mr. Conker asked for the Report of the General Hospital enquiry and wanted to know why doctors not attached to the hospital could not follow their patients into the hospital as it was said the former did.

The Prime Minister in reply said he would have the report of the enquiry ready by to-day, that it was not true that there was discrimination amongst doctors regarding patients and that the Superintendent had been instructed to ascertain the scale of fees for well-to-do people, so that some scale would be enforced there.

The Public Service Bill passed the first reading; the amendment to the Sealing Bill from the Legislative Council was read a first time; the Municipal Bill passed without amendment, though Mr. Kent spoke against it; the Bills providing for the Governor's salary and for the inspection of pickled fish and the propagation of lobsters, passed the Committee stage, as did also the Train Ferry Service.

The United Towns and Conception Bay Electrical Companies Bill, Pilotage Bill and Revenue Bill passed the second reading and will go into Committee to-day.

Before an adjournment took place the Prime Minister intimated that he expected the House would close on Wednesday next.

If a Child Is Cross, Feverish And Sick.

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

"Brain Supplied Here!"

Is it possible to provide the feeble-minded with more brain until they are normal? Will though the possibility may seem to the lay mind, it has, nevertheless, been seriously discussed at the Congress of Medicine in Paris. Furthermore, experiments in the science which is known as "organotherapy" have already been attempted.

This science really consists of treating diseased organs with medicines made from similar organs. It is pointed out by medical experts that the building up or doctoring of one organ with extracts from a similar one was practised 2,000 years ago, although, of course, in a very crude fashion. It is on record that patients suffering from an affection of any particular part of their system were given the same part of an animal to eat, with the idea of repairing the local waste and damage. Thus consumptives were ordered to eat sheep lungs, while for dyspeptics was prescribed a diet in which the stomach of calves ranked as the chief item.

In an address on the subject delivered by a widely-known Roumanian doctor, Dr. Iscovesco, he remarked that special importance is attached to the treatment of anaemia by this method. "The old treatment with iron," he declares, "was never absolutely satisfactory, while if a liquid extract of blood corpuscles is administered to patients the corpuscles rapidly multiply and the anaemia disappears."

Probably the most startling suggestion made by the doctor was that of curing the feeble-minded by this method. This physician held that so long as organotherapy worked so well along other lines, it stood within reason that it would work well with the feeble-minded. By giving them a liquid extract of grey matter, an extract of the brain, it ought to increase their mental faculties and in time give to them normal brain.

Of course, if this is possible, it will be one of the greatest wonders and most valuable things in modern or ancient medicine. Gloves are more or less sombre, but all the natural tan and kindred tints are worn as much as white.

Headaches and Heart Trouble

Nervous Prostration of Three Years' Standing Cured a Year Ago by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Anyone who knows the discouragement and despair which accompanies the helplessness of nervous prostration will appreciate the gratitude felt by the writer of this letter. Mrs. H. C. Jones, Scotch Lake, C. B., writes: "I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors, without obtaining satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and was completely cured by this treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my housework with pleasure and comfort, and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

At least some benefit is bound to be derived from each dose of this great food cure, as day by day it forms new blood and builds up the system. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Logging Bill.

The second reading of the Logging Bill was taken up in the Legislative Council yesterday. The Bill was unanimously referred to a Select Committee, consisting of President Harris, Hons. J. Harvey, M. P. Gibbs, W. C. Job, J. A. Robinson, P. T. McGrath and J. Murphy. We are informed that the object of the reference is to obtain evidence. It will be interesting to observe what report the Select Committee brings in this session.

Drowning at St. Bride's.

A sad drowning accident happened at St. Bride's on Monday. A fine young man was drowned. He was coming down St. Bride's River with a load of wood, the load upset and he got caught under it and the ice broke and he was drowned under the load of wood when found. He was a son of Frank Conway. His people are heart broken over it.

Fads and Fashions.

Have the new spring tailored coat and skirt made of the new diagonal duvety or the new corded duvety. A simple and becoming style is the peasant's smock. This fashion is featured on many of the smart gowns. The corduroy suit made Russian blouse style and trimmed with fur is eminently becoming to the slender figure.

The newest fur trimming is monkey fur. It makes charming revers to a coat, for it is long and silky. Girdles are tied at the side or back, and when the long ends are omitted, a flat bow is used to clasp the girdle in the front or back.

A new blouse has made its appearance. It resembles a negligee. The length below the waist is used as a petulant and is worn outside the skirt. The new hand bags are made of very fine, soft leather, and are invariably stuffed into the metal frame. They resemble the medieval bags carried by our ancestors.

Occasionally a touch of brilliance is obtained through the intervention of a skillfully posed sash of rich patterned ribbon. This is charming with a dress of black satin.

A pretty idea to hold the pleated skirt in place so as to retain the silhouette is to wear a long loose sash that is draped from the front of the skirt toward the back and knotted near the bottom of the skirt.

Each month seems to bring a new taffeta, and there is a new crinkled crepe de chine in all the new shades, and there is a new crepon in a broad-corded effect, which comes in many of the dearest shades.
