FOURTEENTH YEAR

THE RUSSIANS REACH PARIS.

THE MOST REMARKABLE DISPLAY OF MODERN TILES.

The Gay City 16 Holiday Attire and the Populace Goes Wild With Joy—Cheers For the Russian and French Armies and Hisses For the British Legation.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—At sunrise the streets were alive with people bent on enjoying a holiday and giving a welcome to the Russian soldiers. At 7 o'clock the streets were densely crowded. When the Russian soldiers came to a standstill. Among those who packed the streets were tens of thousands of work people. Every train was loaded with thousands from the country. This incoming kept up until the day had advanced. Along the streets where the Russians were, and likely to be seen the windows, balconies, house-tops and chimneys were black with people determined to show themselves in honor of the Russian victors. The streets were nearly hidden with decorations, and the moving mass of people conspicuously displayed badges and other emblems of Russian and French colors.

The Russians arrived at Gare de Lyons, which had been handsomely decorated at 9.20 a. m. and were received by the Cabinet Ministers and deputations from various reception committees, thousands of people crowded around the station and packed the platform about "Vive la Russie," waving handkerchiefs, hats, sticks and umbrellas, seemingly determined upon making as much noise as possible.

Hundreds of Thousands Participate. Admiral Avellan and officers stood upon the carriages awaiting to escort them. The Military Club replied to the cheers by crying "Vive la France." Some of the number of people assembled around the Gare de Lyons may be gathered from the fact that the police admitted 100,000 people were around the railroad station boulevard. Every street leading to the Military Club was black with people, shouting for Russia and the Czar. It was impossible to move the carriages through the street faster than a slow walk, owing to the dense throng, cheering masses which blocked the way.

Admiral Avellan, replying to an address of welcome at the railroad station by the President of the Council, said he was happy that he had been able to witness the return of Admiral Gervais to St. Petersburg, and with a few complimentary remarks to France ceased speaking. The officers appeared thoroughly pleased with their journey, and the Toupa entertainments which preceded it.

The Towns Mad With Excitement. One feature of note was the crowds' extreme good humor. They displayed absolutely no violence, while hundreds of thousands of men waved hats. Almost as many women waved handkerchiefs and sunshades, crying "Vive la Russie," as the Russian soldiers walked to the Military Club.

Admiral Avellan and his officers no sooner entered the city than they were greeted by cheering in the Place de l'Opera compelled them to reappear on the balcony. In reply they greeted the multitude the admiral and his wife waved their caps and cried, "Vive la France." This caused the crowd to cheer more loudly and with excitement. The Russian commander's cry of "Vive la France" was followed by a deafening roar from the crowd. Cries of "Vive la France," "Vive la France," "Vive la Marine Russe" and "Vive le Czar" could be distinguished for a long time. Admiral Avellan stood before the balcony with his cap on the balcony, while the crowd shouted itself into a state of frenzy. The shouting continued long after the Russian officers retired to luncheon. After luncheon the Russians attended divine service in the Russian Church, Rue Daru, and then proceeded to church the scenes witnessed on the way from Gare de Lyons to Place de l'Opera were repeated. The cheering and waving of hats and flags was as great as at Place de l'Opera.

The ceremony in the church was confined to the singing of the Russian hymns. The church was crowded, among those present being all the members of the Russian Embassy and the British and French consuls. The conclusion of the services in the church the Russians were driven to the Military Club, receiving there the most enthusiastic greeting through the street back to headquarters. On the occasion of the first arrival at the city the British and French consuls appear on the balcony and bow to the plaudits of the multitude in Place de l'Opera. The enthusiasm of the crowds was worked to a high pitch by the fact that the Russian hymn was sung by a troupe of skilled musicians. This caused a storm of cries, amid which for the first time was heard the obnoxious cry, the shouting of which was not considered good taste of "Vive la France Arme" and "Vive la Russie Arme."

Heard the Russian Embassy. The Russians drove to the Hotel Elizee this afternoon. The route was packed with enthusiastic people. Some persons raised their hats and waved their flags, and a demonstration was soon suppressed. While the Russians were en route to the Palais National the British and French consuls, Russia, the Czar, France and the French army. On arriving at the Palais the Russian military honors and presented to President Carnot by Baron Mohrenheim, the Russian ambassador, in the grand salon on the first floor.

President Carnot, addressing the visitors, said: "May the loyal interchange of our feelings and friendship be an inspiration to all who have at heart the benefit of peace, confidence and security. The great Emperor who sent you, Monsieur, and whom I greet from this place, entrusted you with an exalted mission which you have worthily carried out. I bid you, therefore, welcome."

Admiral Avellan replied briefly, thanking the President for the cordial reception extended to himself and officers on French soil.

The Russians then left the Palais and visited the Ministry of the Interior, Ministry of War, Ministry of Marine, Senate and Chamber of Deputies. It was with difficulty the police forced a narrow lane through the mass of people who were assembled around the public buildings. The route was so great that the vehicles were carried forward by the throng amid deafening cheers, men, women and children running beside the carriages and grasping the hands of the Russians, who often rose from their seats, waved their hats and shouted: "Vive nos braves armées françaises," crowds replying, "Vive nos braves armées russes." Altogether the scene was unprecedented. All the prominent buildings are illuminated to-night. At a banquet in the Palais this evening President Carnot presided and all the ministers were present.

WADSWORTH, WITH 19, ALSO AIDED MATERIALLY IN GETTING HIS SIDE PAST THE CENTURY MARK.

Goldingham and Jones started Canada's second innings at 12.30, but the partnership was soon dissolved and only 4 runs were telegraphed.

They were materially aided by the active Blackham behind the wickets. He stumped a trio of Canucks who were taking unwise liberties.

The whole was wound out for 715, leaving the Cornwallists victors as above. The score:

RECEIPTS. THE FEATURES OF THE MATCH, WHICH IS TO LAST DURING THE WEEK, WILL BE THE PLAYING OF THESE GREAT EXPERTS UPON TWO TABLES.

An American 5x10 regulation table and an English 6x12 championship table.

The stakes are $2000, the winner to take all the game receipts except the bare expenses of the contest.

An examination of the score shows that the Americans are 34 to 30 for Roberts.

On the English table, in 11 frames, Dr Oro made 61 balls, while Roberts scored 58.

THE MATCH PROGRESS. Ottawa College May Still Progress in the People's Park.

Secretary Moran of the Ontario Rugby Union yesterday received a formal protest from Capt. Troy, on behalf of Ottawa College, setting forth their grievances against Queen's University in last Saturday's game at Kingston.

They were upset by Troy, and besides were without bonds. Owing to the late hour the referee, the Englishman, said that he would ignore the absence of touch lines, but after a few minutes' play he saw this state of affairs and refused to do so.

There is no power to do anything. Despite this drawback, Troy writes, the crowd rushed to the field and fair play was observed every point. All the college team were brutally handled, he states, and several players were laid up for repairs in the first half.

Mitchell will start to train at once. Chicago, Oct. 17.—Charley Mitchell was last night presented with a diamond-studded cane by Manager Joe Bayliss of the People's Park.

Mitchell and Hall left the city shortly after the performance, but before the departure of the train, over a bottle of Scotch, the Englishman said that he would immediately set down to his preparatory work for the Corbett match.

"I shall have a real try to win that battle," said he, "and when it is all over I will say I put up quite a fight. I don't want to lose it, but I'm going to try to do it."

He denied that he had any bit of a fight with the referee, and said that he had done his best and that he had not been in the world. And I am not fond of any man so much as a shilling unless I think I have an even chance to win.

The Lorna took their defeat as only gentlemen can.

The inter-city baseball championship between New York and Brooklyn was decided Monday afternoon, when Dave Ford, a Brooklyn player won the fourth and deciding game of the series. The Female Population Has a New Fad on Hand—A Scene in Yonge-street. Which is Well Worth Witnessing—Toothache Permanently Cured With-out Pain and Without Pain.

A World reporter called yesterday afternoon at the dental office of Mr. C. A. Risk, 86 Yonge-street, where Dr. C. A. Risk is introducing the new local anesthetic mentioned in the Toronto Globe.

When the reporter called the waiting-rooms were packed and a number of patients arrived in King-street. The reporter was not allowed to enter the waiting-rooms to extract his molars. But he explained that he was a newspaper man and that he had the sole control of the new treatment.

There is no better place to study human nature than in Dr. Risk's office this week. As the patients took their turns at the chair for a very interesting study.

One old lady, apparently over 70, was the next victim. She wanted to have extracted two blackened stumps that appeared to be more in the way of a nuisance than of any use to her.

Then a weary, careworn woman led in two small children, but it was not children's day, so she was unwillingly forced to bear a retreat, bag and baggage.

Following her a pale, delicate young lady, who appeared so weak that her legs would scarcely carry her, was helped into the chair by two men.

Another young lady bravely took her seat in the chair, but she was not long in the chair, for she had been so long in the chair that she had become quite numb.
