THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL

BY BARONESS ORCZY.

Sally was already helping the ladies to take off their travelling cloaks, and both turned, with a shiver, towards the brightly-burning hearth.

There was a general movement among the company in the coffee-room. Sally had bustled off to her kitchen, whilst Jellyband, still profuse with his respectful salutations, arranged one or two chairs around the fire. Mr. Hempstead, touching his forehead, was quietly vacating the seat in the hearth. Everyone was staring curiously, yet deferentially, at the foreigners.

"Ah, Messieurs! what can I say?" said the elder of the two ladies, as she stretched a pair of fine, aristocratic hands to the warmth of the blaze, and looked with unexpressed gratitude first at Lord Antony, then at one of the young men who had accompanied her party, and who was busy divesting himself of his heavy, caped coat.

"Only that you are glad to be in England, Comtesse," replied Lord Antony, "and that you have not suffered too much from your trying voyage."

"Indeed, indeed, we are glad to be in England," she said, while her eyes filled with tears, "and we have already forgotten all that we have suffered."

Her voice was musical and low, and there was a great deal of calm dignity and of many sufferings nobly endured marked in the handsome, aristocratic face, with its wealth of exquisite hair dressed high above the forehead, after the fashion of the times.

"I hope my friend, Sir Andrew Froulkes, proved an entertaining travelling companion, madame?"

"Ah, indeed, Sir Andrew was kindness itself. How could my children and I ever show enough gratitude to you all, Messieurs!"

Her companion, a dainty, girlish figure, childlike and pithy in its look of fatigue and of sorrow, had said nothing as yet, but her eyes, large, brown, and full of tears, looked up from the fire and sought those of Sir Andrew Froulkes, who had drawn near to the hearth and to her; then, as they met his, which were fixed with unconcealed admiration upon the sweet face before him, a thought of warmer color rushed up to her pale cheeks.

"So this is England," she said, as she looked round with childlike curiosity at the great open hearth, the oak rafters, and the yokes with their elaborate engravings and jivial, rubicund, British countenances.

"A bit of it, Mademoiselle," replied Sir Andrew, smiling, "but 'all of it,' at your service."

The young girl blushed again, but this time a bright smile, fleet and sweet, illumined her dainty face. She said nothing, and Sir Andrew, too, was silent, yet those two young people understood one another, as young people have a way of doing all the world over, and have done since the world began.

"But, I say, supper!" here broke in Lord Antony's jovial voice, "supper, honest Jellyband. Where is that pretty wench of yours and her kind of soup, Zooks, man; while you stand there gaping at the ladies, they will faint with hunger."

"One moment! one moment, my lord," said Jellyband, as he threw open the door that led to the kitchen and shouted lustily, "Sally! Hey, Sally there, are ye ready, my girl?"

Sally was ready, and the next moment she appeared in the doorway carrying a gigantic tureen, from which rose a cloud of steam and an abundance of savoury odour.

"Odd's my life, supper at last!" ejaculated Lord Antony, merrily, as he gallantly offered his arm to the Comtesse.

"May I have the honour?" he asked ceremoniously, as he led her towards the supper table.

There was general bustle in the coffee-room. Mr. Hempstead and most of the yokels and fisher-folk had gone to make way for "the quality," and to finish smoking their pipes elsewhere. Only the two strangers stood on, quietly and unconsciously playing their game of dominoes and sipping their wine; whilst at another table Harry Watte, who was fast losing his temper, watched pretty Sally bustling round the table.

She looked a very dainty picture of English rural life, and no wonder that the susceptible young Frenchman could scarce take his eyes off her pretty face. The Vicomte de Tournay was scarcely nineteen, a beardless boy, on whom the terrible tragedies which were being enacted in his own country had made but little impression. He was elegantly, and even foppishly dressed, and once safely landed in England he was evidently ready to forget the horrors of the Revolution in the delights of English life.

"Pardi, if this is England," he said as he continued to ogle Sally with marked satisfaction, "I am if it be satisfied."

It would be impossible at this point to record the exact exclamation which escaped through Harry Watte's clenched teeth. Only respect for "the quality," and notably for my Lord Antony, kept his marked disapproval of the young foreigner in check.

"Nay, but this is England, you abandoned young reprobate," interposed Lord Antony, with a laugh, "and do not I pray, bring your base foreign ways into this most moral country?"

Lord Antony had already sat down at the head of the table with the Comtesse on his right. Jellyband was bustling round, filling glasses, and putting chairs straight, Sally waited, ready to hand round the soup. Harry Watte's friends had at last succeeded in taking him out of the room, for his temper was growing more and more violent under the Vicomte's obvious admiration for Sally.

"Suzanne," came in stern, commanding accents from the rigid Comtesse.

Suzanne blushed again; she had lost count of time and of place, whilst she had stood beside the fire, allowing the handsome young Englishman's eyes to dwell upon her sweet face, and his hand, as if unconsciously, to rest upon her face. Her mother's voice brought her back to reality once more, and with a submissive "Yes, Mama," she too took her place at the supper table.

CHAPTER IV.

THE LEAGUE OF THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL.

They all looked a merry, even a happy party, as they sat round the table; Sir Andrew Froulkes and Lord Antony Dewhurst, two typical good-looking, well-bred and well-bred Englishmen of that year of grace 1792, and the aristocratic French comtesse with her two children, who had just escaped from such dire perils, and found a safe retreat at last on the shores of protecting England.

In the corner the two strangers had apparently finished their game; one of them arose, and standing with his back to the merry company at the table, he adjusted with much deliberation his large triple capote coat. As he did so, he gave one quick glance all around him. Everyone was busy laughing and chatting, and he murmured the words "All safe!" his companion then, with the alertness borne of long practice, slipped on to his knees in a moment, and the next had crept noiselessly under the oak bench. The stranger then, with a loud "Good-night," quietly walked out of the coffee-room.

Not one of those at the supper table had noticed this curious and silent manoeuvre, but when the stranger finally closed the door of the coffee-room behind him, they all instinctively sighed a sigh of relief.

"Alone, at last!" said Lord Antony, jovially.

Then the young Vicomte de Tournay rose, glass in hand, and with the graceful affection peculiar to the times, he raised it aloft, and said in broken English: "To His Majesty George Third of England, God bless him for his hospitality to us all, poor exiles from France."

"To His Majesty King Louis of France," added Sir Andrew, with solemnity. "May God bless him and give him victory over his enemies."

Everyone rose and drank this toast in silence. The fate of the unfortunate King of France, then a prisoner of his own people, seemed to cast a gloom even over Mr. Jellyband's pleasant countenance.

"And to Mademoiselle de Tournay de Baserville," said Lord Antony, merrily, "May we welcome him in England before many days are over."

"Ah, Monsieur," said the Comtesse, as with a slightly trembling hand she conveyed her glass to her lips. "I scarcely dare to hope."

But already Lord Antony had served out the soup, and for the next few moments all conversation ceased, while Jellyband and Sally handed round the plates and everyone began to eat.

"Faith, Madam!" said Lord Antony, after a while, "must I not tell you, being yourself, Mademoiselle Suzanne and my friend the Vicomte safely in England now, surely you must feel reassured as to the fate of Monsieur le Comte."

"Ah, Monsieur," replied the Comtesse, with a heavy sigh, "I trust in God—I can but pray and hope here interposed Sir Andrew Froulkes, "trust in God by all means, but believe also a little in your English friends, who have sworn to bring the Count safely across the Channel, even if they have to bring you to London."

"Indeed, indeed, Monsieur," she replied, "I have the fullest confidence in you and in your friends. Your fame, I assure you, has spread throughout the whole of France. The way some of my own friends have escaped from the clutches of that awful revolutionary tribunal was nothing short of a miracle—and all done by you and your friends."

"We were but the hands, Madam; the Comtesse . . ."

"But my husband, Monsieur," said the Comtesse, whilst unshed tears seemed to well her eyes, "he is in each and every one's heart. I would never have left him, only . . . there were my children . . . I was torn between my duty to him, and to them. They refused to go without me . . . and you and your friends assured me so so soon would my husband and he be safe. But, oh! now that I am here—amongst you—all in this beautiful free England—I think of him, lying for his life, hunted like a poor beast . . . in each peril . . . I should not have left him . . . I should not have left him . . ."

The poor woman had completely broken down; fatigue, sorrow and emotion had overmastered her rigid, aristocratic bearing. She was crying gently to herself, whilst Suzanne ran up to her and tried to kiss away her tears.

Lord Antony and Sir Andrew had said nothing to interrupt the Comtesse whilst she was speaking. There was no doubt that they felt deeply for her; their very silence testified to that—but in every century, and ever since England has been what it is, an Englishman has always felt somewhat ashamed of his own emotion and of his own sympathy. And so the two young men said nothing, and busied themselves in trying to hide their feelings, only succeeding in looking immeasurably sheepish.

"As for me, Monsieur," said Suzanne, "I am sure that you brought us to safety. I trust you absolutely, and I know that you will bring my dear father safely to England, just as you brought us to safety."

This was said with so much confidence, such unuttered hope, and belief, that it seemed as if by magic to dry the mother's eyes, and to bring a smile upon everybody's lips.

"Nay, you shame me, Mademoiselle," replied Sir Andrew, "though my life is at your service, I have been but a humble tool in the hands of our great leader, who organized and effected your escape."

He had spoken with so much warmth and vehemence that Suzanne's eyes fastened upon him in undisguised wonder.

"Your leader, Monsieur?" said the Comtesse, sagely. "Ah! of course, you must have a leader. And I did not think of that before! But tell me where is he? I must go to him at once, and I and my children must throw ourselves at his feet, and thank him for all that he has done for us."

"Ah, Madame!" said Lord Antony, "that is impossible."

"Impossible?—Why?"

"Because the Scarlet Pimpernel works in the dark, so that his identity is only known under a solemn oath of secrecy to his immediate followers."

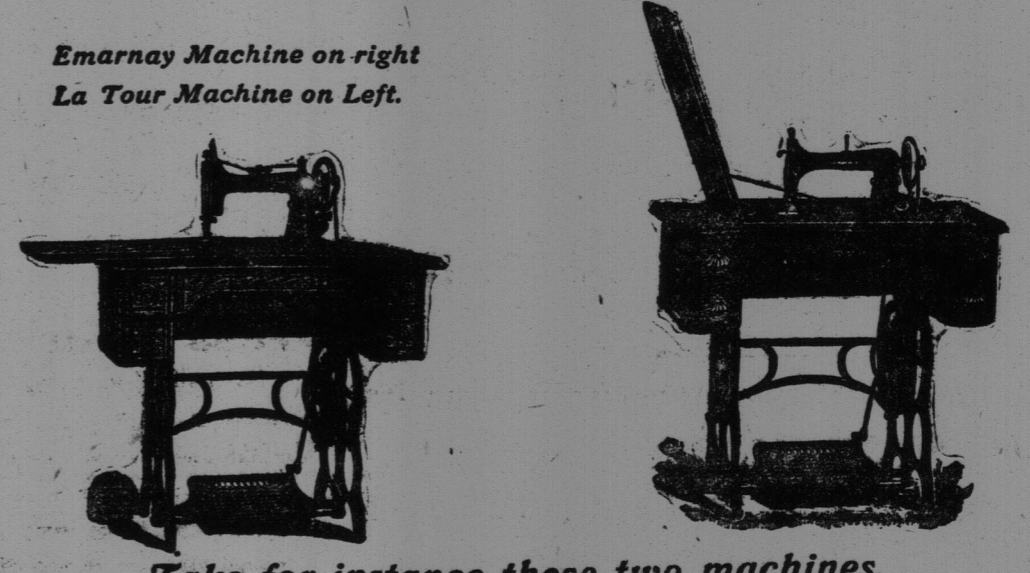

"The Scarlet Pimpernel?" said Suzanne, with a merry laugh. "Why! what a droll name! What is the Scarlet Pimpernel, Monsieur?"

She looked at Sir Andrew with eager curiosity. The young man's face had become almost transfused. His eyes shone with enthusiasm; her worship, love, admiration for his leader seemed literally to glow upon his face.

"The Scarlet Pimpernel, Mademoiselle," he said, at last, "is the name of a humble English way-side flower; but it is also the best chosen to hide the identity of the best and bravest man in all the world, so that he may better succeed in accomplishing the noble task he has set himself to do."

"Ah, yes," here interposed the young Vicomte, "I have heard speak of the Scarlet Pimpernel. A little flower—red?—yes! They say in Paris that everytime

WANT TO DISTRIBUTE TO THE OUTSIDERS

The Next Week May Bring Unfavorable Surprise in the Stock Market Though to the Professional Eye the Outlook is Tolerably Satisfactory.

(New York Commercial).

As was expected and predicted by all observers of market conditions who clearly discerned the fact that the powerful combination of banking interests behind the August bull movement had not lifted prices far enough to suit its purposes, there was no reason Saturday, despite the loss in surplus reserves reported by the associated banks. On the contrary, questions advanced, and the session witnessed a general betterment—the controlling consideration being the widespread belief that the current week would mark the beginning of considerable importations of gold. This, beyond question, is the issue that dwarfs all others. The surplus reserves on Saturday stood below $3,000,000. It was not a deficit by any means, and the case was one where a miss was as good as a mile. But conditions are precarious, and it is quite likely that the next ten days may bring unfavorable surprises. The conservative operator will be inclined to limit his commitments strictly and will keep in mind the all-important fact that the great objective of the men now dominant is to distribute to the "outsider" a large fraction of their holdings. This purpose is not necessarily illegitimate; and the men leading the present movement are entitled, all things considered, to a goodly share of public confidence. They have proved themselves capable of the greatest achievements in construction and administration; and so far as respectability is concerned, they are as hyperion to a satyr compared with the rascals who managed the bull movement last winter. There are others, and not a few who regard the average as fairly measuring national property and as several points below the level which would represent a fair capitalization of the business of the next two years. Amid this diversity of longes the cautious trader will be apt to take his chances among securities which manifestly have not shared to an equitable degree in the prosperity of the properties they represent.

To the professional eye, however, the outlook is tolerably satisfactory, and a speedy resumption of the activity of the early part of last week is expected.

Visitors to the City Are at All Times Made Welcome at This Store

By citizens it is considered a money saving centre for dry goods: It is the same for strangers, and all are treated alike. Our buyer spent last week in Montreal and Toronto visiting the manufacturers and jobbers, and while there picked up many special lines, which are now on sale. This offers an opportunity for shoppers to secure their dry goods at a considerable saving.

Dress Goods

The largest stock we have ever shown. Tweed effects predominate, in light, medium and dark shades. The prices range from 35c. to $1.50 a yard. One of the special lines marked 65c. is an all wool English Tweed, 46 inches wide. A thoroughly dependable goods and very stylish. Light, medium and dark effects.

A Special All Wool Granite Cloth

42 inches wide, is all the leading colors.

Plain Finished Satin Cloths at 55c.

The regular price is 70c., pure wool, 42 inches wide and a material that is dressy and serviceable.

Fine Venetians at 75c. a Yard

46 inches wide, pure wool, and a splendid finish, English woven, good weight, suitable for tailored suits or for dresses. This is very special value.

Fancy Waistings

We show over one hundred different patterns of new fall waistings in fleeced satin flannel and a lot of fancy French waistings at prices running from 12c. to 25c. a yard. Very pretty patterns among the lot.

Dress Trimmings

French and German designs. Those that are entirely new are shown here at most reasonable prices. 10c., 15c., 20c., 25c., and up to $1.50 a yard.

Furs

Our fall furs are all in. These were bought over six months ago, before the advance in the price of raw skins, consequently we made a saving of from 25 per cent to 35 per cent. That saving goes to the purchaser, and if you buy from this lot, you can buy a storm collar at $6.00, that will cost you $3.00 in other stores. The prices of neck furs are from 75c. up to $15.50 each. The assortment consists of boas, colarettes, caprines, victorines, stoles and storm collars. MUFFS TO MATCH, running in price from $1.10 to $10.50 each.

Special Value in Raincoats

A large lot now on sale at $3.65, neatly and stylishly made from a good all wool, waterproof cloth.

Another Special Line is Priced $7.50

A three-quarter coat with box plaise, a very stylish and most serviceable garment. At $9.50. A very attractive tweed coat, most serviceable, comfortable and stylish. Comes in all sizes.

"Stand By" Corsets, 50c. a Pair

This corset cannot break in the hip. It is fitted with a pair of garters and is one of the best 75c. corsets on the market, yet the price is only 50c. in white or drab, all sizes.

The celebrated D & A corsets at 75c. a pair, fitted with garters, made from the best French coilie, bias cut, straight front, perfect fitting corset, white or drab, in all sizes.

Health Building Time.

is not "two weeks vacation" or "a long rest." It's every day—every meal. What you eat to-day means more red blood—more brain power—more energy—more strength—or it means loss.

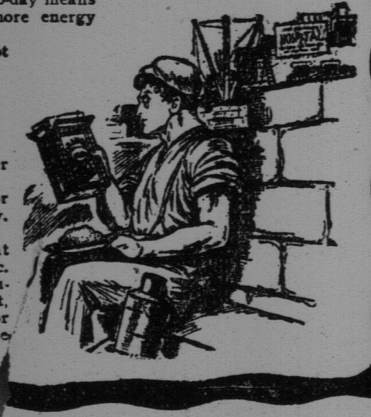

It all depends on what you eat—how much, but how good.

is sent up health and strength and power—ready to BUILD mind and body.

ORANGE MEAT is the right FOOD for bright, busy men and women of to-day. Are YOU building up or tearing down?

Grocers everywhere have Orange Meat in 5c. and 25c. packages. Every 5c. package contains a coupon, good for valuable premiums. Write "Orange Meat, Kingston" for new premium list. 25c. or "Jumbo" package contains 2 1/2 times the quantity of the 5c. size.

A DISCREDITED JOURNAL.

The Times on Monday published Hon. Mr. Blair's challenge and denial of slanderous charges made against himself and Senator Thompson, in articles appearing in the Fredericton Gleaner and Moncton Times.

Senator Thompson went to England two or three weeks before the merger was effected, and at a time when both he and Mr. Blair regarded a merger as impossible.

Moreover, he and I never, at any time, exchanged a word on the subject of buying any stock, and I am absolutely convinced and know that he personally did not become interested in any more than I did in the stock of the Central Telephone Company.

Speaking for himself, Mr. Blair denied the charges made, with all the emphasis of which language is capable. Thus:

"Speaking for myself, I give these charges the most emphatic denial and positively state that at no time, either before or during the negotiations for the merger or since the completion of it, did I purchase either directly or indirectly one single share of Central Telephone Company's stock, neither did I authorize any person or persons to purchase any on my behalf, and deny that I had any interest of any kind whatever in a single share of this stock."

This, one would think, would silence at once the voice of calumny, so far as the scandalous charges referred to are concerned. But Mr. Blair went further. He called for the name of a single Central shareholder who had been asked to sell or did sell stock to him or Senator Thompson, or anyone acting for them; and he requested the Central Telephone Company's officials to open the transfer books for the inspection of anyone who believed that any such transfer had been made.

Possibly some who read Mr. Blair's letter may have thought his language in denouncing the newspapers in question was unduly vigorous, but so far as the Fredericton Gleaner is concerned he was evidently well advised, since that shameless journal devoted practically all of its editorial space on Tuesday to a reply which, while it does not directly challenge one of Mr. Blair's statements, yet seeks to discredit them by nasty insinuation. Having lowered itself by becoming the medium of a base attack, it had not the grace to apologise when exposed. It does, however, at the end of the article make this reluctant acknowledgement:

"It will be any relief to Mr. Blair we may say that the publication of the stock buying rumor in these columns was not in any way influenced by a desire to persecute him. In fact his conduct in the matter was not even criticized by this journal."

Editorially, perhaps, the Gleaner did not at first criticise Mr. Blair, but it was exposed, a journal of good intentions would at once make such reputation as lay in its power. The Gleaner has not done so, and therefore stands discredited in the eyes of the whole public.

VERMONT REPUBLICAN

Republicans in the United States will extract considerable satisfaction from the news from Vermont. While it may not indicate the general trend of the November elections the country over, it shows that Vermont at least is solidly republican.

Fletcher D. Proctor, son of Senator Proctor, has been elected governor and the Republicans will have an overwhelming majority in the house and senate of the state. Mr. Proctor was opposed by Percival W. Clements, an independent Democrat. There was a fusion of the Democrats with a few dissatisfied independents, but the result has not been satisfactory. The New York Evening Post, on the eve of the election thus discussed the situation: In Vermont the Independent-Democratic, or the Clement-Democratic, fusion movement is declared by its friends to be a revolt against machine rule—the quarry entrenched machine of the Proctors, father and son. In the nomination of Fletcher Proctor for governor, the fusionists see the awful prospect of Vermont's becoming as much a heritage of the Proctors as Pennsylvania ever was of the Camerons.

The really good showing made by Percival W. Clement in the three-cornered campaign of four years ago pointed to his candidacy as the welcome straw which would break the back of the Proctors. The really good showing made by Percival W. Clement in the three-cornered campaign of four years ago pointed to his candidacy as the welcome straw which would break the back of the Proctors.

Finally in answer to Mr. Clement's charge that Vermont has been standing still for the past fifty years, comes a bit of "Federal interference" in the shape of a bulletin of the Census Bureau, which shows that during the past five years Vermont has led all the New England states in percentage of increase of capital invested in manufactures, and in percentage of increase in the number of wage-earners employed. Not all the ill-luck has attended Mr. Clement's charges, however, for the story of his sale of the Rutland Railway to Dr. W. Seward Webb at a fictitious price was proved to be so entirely groundless that it was publicly retracted by Republican press and speakers alike.

Interest in the result in Maine next week will be increased by the Republican victory in Vermont yesterday.

IN RUSSIA

The conditions in Russia since the dissolution of the Douma have proved that without a parliament of some kind the country cannot be pacified. The situation appears to be very well summed up by a New York paper as follows: "The scheme for the distribution of the spangane lands would presumably have been welcomed two years ago; today it appears to make little impression. Similarly, before the closing of the universities and higher schools had scattered the natural leaders of revolt throughout the empire, to proceed against agrarian agitators through the police might have been an effective policy; today wholesale arrests in the provinces will do about as much to avert revolution as a popgun to frighten wolves on the steppes. For a manly attitude towards a desperate undertaking Premier Stolypin deserves all credit. But it becomes weak by week more evident that without the Duma nothing can be done. From hated hands favors may indeed be received, but never contentment; and Russia is apparently in the position of hating the forces that move the hands of the Czar. But no remedy except that provided by the national assembly is likely even to have a trial. The time has passed when concession can satisfy or recession terrify. It is not even certain that a travelling nation would obey its own parliament; yet that still appears to offer a chance for an orderly solution. Every other way anarchy seems to lie."

One of the most attractive, as it is one of the most interesting in every way of the features of the exhibition is the department under the care of the Women's Council. The ladies have made the section beautiful, and the varied display and the care exercised for the comfort of visitors is worthy of the highest commendation.

Another great and happy crowd spent the day and evening at the exhibition grounds yesterday. The glorious weather of today makes a visit to the fair even more pleasing, and will doubtless encourage thousands of citizens to attend.

St. John people should not fail to see the manual training exhibit at the exhibition. It tells what may be done to make school life more attractive and of greater practical value to the pupil.

With a population in excess of 250,000 Toronto shows a very large increase in a year. The cities of the far west have eastern rivals in the march of progress.

Although it is so early in the season there are some fine exhibits of fruits and root crops at the fair.

The city council must ensure the coming of the big steamships to this port next winter.

H. B. and E. W. Eastbrooks, Miss M. Brittain, Miss A. Smith, Mrs. Danckler and her daughter, Mrs. Jones, all from Boston, arrived in St. John yesterday to spend a few weeks at their native home.

BE CHEERFUL

Sing a merry song as you go along: Sing a better one than that cry. When a frowning fate knocks at the gate, If you smile he may pass you by. The burden too heavy, may lighter seem. If we stop to admire the road: The feet so weary, new strength may glean, If we try to forget our load. Let our minds go straying in fancy's groove, Let our lips hum an old-time tune: And our smiles will leap and thrill, And the gloaming will turn to moon. The sun will shine on a new-born earth, Let our hearts beat fondly, love, love, love, And the gloaming will turn to moon.

IN LIGHTER VEIN

Two wee robins in a nest; One flew east and one flew west. Both grew tired and longed for rest. Back there in the old home nest, Two wee pets at mother's knee; One chose the north and one the east. Many's the time they longed to be Back again at mother's knee. She—they say that sailing on lakes is considered far more dangerous than on the sea. He—I guess that's right. I've heard of more engagements made in a canoe than on a steamship. Mrs. Anxious (mother of two marriageable daughters)—Really, I don't know whether to send Grace and Edith to the seashore or the mountains this summer. What would you advise? Mrs. Knowing—Well, I would advise Sulphur Springs for a change. Sulphur, you know, is one of the principal requisites in matchmaking.—Brooklyn Eagle. "It's strange," said the piano teacher "that you can't learn to run the scales correctly." "That is probably one of the traits I inherited from father," replied the young lady pupil. "He made money in the grocery business, you know."—Chicago News. The late Russell Sage hated lawsuits and always tried to avoid them. One day he went to his lawyer and laid the details of a case before him. When Mr. Sage was finished the lawyer said, "I will be delighted to take the case. Mr. Sage had a sure case, one, the lawyer said, he couldn't possibly lose. "I can't lose?" asked Mr. Sage. "You can't lose," positively replied the lawyer. "I guess I won't bring suit, then," said Mr. Sage. "But why not?" asked the lawyer, in amazement. "Because," replied Mr. Sage, as he took up his hat, "it wasn't my side of the case, but my opponent's side, that I laid before you."

DAMAGE DONE AT LAST NIGHT'S FIRE. The house and bakery situated in the rear of Adelaide street, near the corner of Metcalf and owned by Sinclair McKiel, were destroyed by fire last night. A tenement and coach house owned by Samuel Corbett, were also gutted. A rough estimate fixes the loss at about $3,000. The fire originated in the hay loft over the stable, but how it started is unknown. The flames spread rapidly, and soon Mrs. McKiel and her five children were hemmed in. After a desperate attempt all were gotten out, but not before Mrs. McKiel and one of the children were somewhat burned. Mr. McKiel's horse was burned to death in the barn, and $100 in cash was burned in the bakery. Mr. Corbett was compelled to bring his horses from the barn through his house in order to bring them to safe quarters. He states that he has lost to the extent of $1,000, and has but $100 insurance. A tenement owned by Mrs. Tilley M. Phipps is also damaged to the extent of $400. The fire, which began at 11.20 o'clock, had gotten under headway when the firemen arrived, but the men through their indefatigable efforts did excellent work.

"OVERSEAS" LIMITED AT VANCOUVER

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 4.—Punctual to the very minute the "overseas" mail steamed into the Vancouver depot this morning precisely when due, 3,070 miles from Quebec by the route it traversed, and an hour later the steamer Empress of China flying the red and white house flag of the C. P. R. fleet cast off anchor with favoring breeze started out on the voyage across the broad Pacific. While a little less than half of the entire distance between both countries and the little British possession at the southern part of the China Sea, it is true, has only been covered; there is small room for doubt that the great feat before this Empress of Pacific will be accomplished. From Liverpool to Quebec via Belle Isle is 2,633 knots approximately, or 3,000 land miles. As the Empress of Ireland is the first Canadian Pacific ship to use this route on the new mail schedule no comparison can be drawn as all the best previous passages have been made between Liverpool or Morville and Rimouski. It is 4,293 knots from Vancouver to Yokohama or in land language 4,885 miles and from Yokohama to Hong Kong via the ports of Kotsean, Nagasaki and Shanghai at which the C. P. R. steamers call 1,888 knots or say 2,275 miles. The Empress of China has therefore to cover the distance between Vancouver and Hong Kong, 6,271 knots or 7,160 miles, in eighteen and a half days. Inland revenue receipts for the month of August: 1906. 1905. Spirits $14,283.66 $12,781.74 Tobacco 2,500.00 2,623.25 Cigars 1,234.00 1,689.36 Beer and wine 254.17 236.14 Bonded m'frs. 220.81 235.71 Other receipts 724.07 1,282.44 $26,026.61 $25,147.65

EXHIBITION ATTENDANCE STILL LARGE

For half an hour, when the fireworks started, the lower floor of the main building was comparatively deserted but quickly filled again when the display was over.

The work of judging in the various departments of live stock was continued uninterruptedly through the day. The dog show, in the machinery hall, proved the centre of attraction and the opinion was frequently expressed that it was the best ever held in St. John.

Today will be a busy one among the judges. Awards will be made in certain classes for horses, and cattle, the sheep and swine will be considered and work on the agricultural and horticultural classes will be resumed.

Amusements were again well patronized in all departments yesterday. The fireworks, which, thanks to the weather, were seen to the best advantage by thousands of spectators, proved to be among the best and most novel ever displayed in St. John.

The Dog Show One of the most interesting features of yesterday's fair was the dog show. The trials and prize ring were continually surrounded by an eager throng and the canine pets came in for many admiring comments.

SHAPE SUSTAINING

A shoe which won't sustain its shape until worn out is not a shoe. It's merely pieces of leather sewed together and given a temporary form over a last - then cunningly painted and polished and sold with a great blare of advertising.

The wearer is mightily happy for a week or so when the truth creeps through the paint and polish veneer and her shoe spreads out like a turtle. Slater's are shoes all through from heel to toe, from sole to upper. They're built with the solidity of ancient architecture.

Here are the four points of construction which enable Slater's to hold their shape. The soles are of "Quick Oak," a tough, pliant, damped, unwearetable, exclusively Slater leather.

The arch is strengthened and held up by a strong steel arch support which prevents the shoe from breaking down. The upper leather is cut with infinite pains and skill on patterns which fit the last with making accuracy.

Anywhere in Canada at $3.50 and $4.00 for women and $4.00 and $5.00 for men - $1.00 less than the best American makes and precisely the same shoe.

ELECTIONEER WON FUTURITY

In One of the Greatest Races Ever Run on the American Turf—$37,270 Goes to the Winner—Pope Joan Was Second and De Mund.

Down a lane of gray-brown earth which had all the softness of velvet beneath the tread of the flying thoroughbreds, 15 of the finest two-year-olds the American turf has ever produced roared madly at New York, Saturday, to a goal three-quarters of a mile away, where lay a purse rich enough to buy a ransom. It was the nineteenth running of the Futurity at Sheepshead Bay, and as a race came from nearly 40,000 throats, Electioneer, a well-matched colt by Voter Quaal, flashed under the wire a winner by three-quarters of a length. Another champion had been proclaimed and William Lakeland, a horse man by profession, who trains his breeders himself, and sleeps in the barn when necessary, had snatched the richest prize of the year.

Back of the leader and at his hind-quarters was Pope Joan, the fastest filly of the year and the best of the trio, which James E. Keene sent to the post and which was favored at the short price of 8 to 5. De Mund, the Goldsmith colt, for which Paul J. Ratney paid $15,000 early in the season, was third, beaten for second honors by the shortest of heads. He had run a most creditable race. Next came Lee Gun, an added starter; Peter Pan, to which the frantic players of the Keene stable had pinned their faith; Yankee Girl, owned by C. B. Ellison; Ballot, which had been added by Mr. Keene to take the place of Zamboni, who was sent home; Conville, one of the most widely tipped horses in the race; Horace E., the famous western colt, bought by Roy Rainey for $25,000, with the idea of winning the Futurity; Don Zantique, the Belmont representative; Kentucky Beau, backed down from an opening price of 20 to 1 to 12 to 1. Old Homage, the only colt to shot in the stake; Alusia Orin, played by a few because Miller had the mount, and last of all, Puritan who opened at 20 to 1 and stayed there.

Especially For Women

FRUIT-A-TIVES are the finest medicine in the world for women. As a mild and gentle laxative—as a positive and speedy cure for Constipation and Biliousness—as the only cure for weak and irritated kidneys and especially for "that pain in the back"—as a general tonic to build up and invigorate the whole system—FRUIT-A-TIVES stand supreme.

Fruit-a-tives

have the most remarkable effect. Ninety-nine cases out of a hundred of Female Troubles are due to neglected Bowels becoming constipated—kidneys irregular—skin neglected—and the poisons of the body which should be carried by these important organs, are taken up by the blood carried to the female organs and poison them, thus starting up a train of female troubles.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are made from fruits and by their remarkable action on bowels, kidneys and skin, rid the system of poisons, purify the blood, and restore the delicate organs of generation to their normal state.

GOOD WORDS FOR COUMBS. "I've had my eye on Combs for three years and since Coach Mack, manager of the Athletics, after Saturday's great game, 'I didn't expect he'd get such a tremendous test within a month after he entered a major league team, but I knew he had the making of a strong pitcher."

BASE BALL. The North End League has completed its schedule for the season. Eighteen clubs have been played by Victoria street, Portland, and St. Luke's nine, the latter being the champion.

THE BIG LEAGUES. Now it looks like the Highlanders to make the fight against the White Sox. Six victories in three days over Washington, while the Athletics were handed two defeats in Boston, lifted the Highlanders into second place and right on the heels of the best of the White Sox.

THE RING. Mike "Din" After Gans. Butte, Mont., Sept. 4.—Mike (Din) Sullivan today pitted $1,000 for a fight with Joe Gans. The Butte Athletic Club has wired Gans offering a purse of $5,000 for the fight.

Notice has been left at the manager's office that the following articles have been lost: A gold bracelet, two umbrellas, a pocketbook containing thirty-five cents.

The following articles await identification: A small leather purse containing a handkerchief, a lady's silk scarf, a gentleman's umbrella, a lady's glove size 6 1/2, a child's glove, a notebook containing cards printed in the name of Charles McDonald, a lady's wallet with a small purse inside.

The last mentioned articles give some indication that they were left lying about by pickpockets after being emptied of their contents. The leather of the larger bag is torn as if by force and with the smaller purse inside was picked up on the Pike.

Among the visitors to the exhibition yesterday were: E. B. Elderkin, president of the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association; Robert Robertson, director of the experimental farm at Nappan (N. S.); R. H.

Arnold, secretary of the Sussex fair; Dr. Oscar Wilson, of the Associated Press, New York; C. S. Smallwood, secretary of the Charlottetown exhibition; G. E. Fisher, secretary of the Chatham fair; W. S. Hooper, secretary of the Fredericton exhibition; W. R. Marshall, circulation manager of the Farmers' Advocate and Home Magazine; and W. V. Mills, Canadian representative of the American Machinist.

NOT WORRYING OVER IT

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 4.—(Special.)—That English capitalists are not worried over the government investigations of insurance companies in Canada is the opinion formed, while in England, by R. Wilson Smith, the Montreal financier. Mr. Smith visited many of the head insurance firms who have branches in Canada and learned they were not harboring anxiety as to the result of the finding of the insurance commission. All the firms visited, while admitting that the inquiry will prove beneficial, consider the same end might have been reached by less sensationalism and by conducting the investigation through expert channels.

Miss Bessie McLeod, of Point de Bute, returned home yesterday after a visit to friends here.

FIRE IN LANGEVIN BLOCK

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—(Special.)—The Langevin departmental block caught fire last evening but the blaze was soon extinguished.

The Langevin departmental block has a political history. It loomed high in the scandalous session of 1891. The contract price for the building was somewhere about $400,000. Nearly a million was paid and some bills for additional extras are still to be found in the government archives.

At six o'clock last night the prompt action of the minister of public works, who was one of the first on the spot, the Dominion police and the Ottawa fire brigade, saved the building from destruction by fire.

Mr. Peiers, assistant secretary of the department of the interior saw smoke escaping from the room in which the stationary of the department is kept. This is in the top story of the building. All the elevators were stopped. It was with great difficulty that the fire, which was no doubt caused by an electric wire, was reached, but once this was done it was easily extinguished. The loss was from water. A few hundred dollars ought to cover it.

THE OPERA LAST NIGHT

Despite the many counter attractions, the Opera House had another large audience last night to witness the Robinson Opera Co. in Pirates of Morocco. The performance last night was a finished one from every standpoint. The chorus, who on the previous evening were weak, in some numbers, did magnificently last night, and looked pretty and sang well.

Miss Kilroye had to respond to repeated encores in the famous drinking song: "See how it sparkles" and in her new song, "The Moon has its eyes on you."

Rudolph Koch has become a prime favorite and audiences can't get enough of singing such as his Harry Burnham is as funny as possible and all the principals are good in their parts. At the two performances, matinee and night, today, Fra Diavolo will be presented with Frank D. Nelson as Diavolo. Mr. Nelson arrived from New York last night as did also the favorite character woman, Essie Barton. With these two people added to the principals in the Robinson Co. St. John theatre-goers will have the strongest comic opera organization ever here.

Visitors to the Exhibition will be on the safe side by calling and inspecting our large stock of harness, horse furnishings, blankets, etc., which we are offering at special prices during Exhibition week. Driving Harness from $10.00 per set upwards. Splendid value.

"EMPRESS OF CHINA" REACHES VICTORIA

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 4.—The steamship Empress of China, carrying the Oriental mails, arrived here at 12:10 this afternoon, having made the run from Vancouver at the rate of over 17 knots an hour and, for the latter half of the trip, against a strong tide.

Large numbers of passengers embarked here, including members of the diplomatic corps of several nations, naval officers and commercial men. The total number of the China's passenger list is 101 first, 14 second and 269 steerage.

Captain Archibald is confident that the Empress will lead the European mails at Hong Kong within the specified time.

GOLF

Yesterday's play in the Maritime Ladies Golf Association championships on the local links was interesting. The first round was completed and the contest for the championship is now limited to eight ladies. Play was begun at 2 p.m. and there were many spectators on the links. The ladies were drawn against each other as follows:

Miss Thomson vs. Miss Tiffin (Moncton.)

Miss Smith vs. Mrs. Norman.

Miss Barker vs. Miss Stetson.

Miss Dennison (Woodstock) vs. Mrs. E. A. Smith.

Mrs. Handsomebody (Windsor) vs. Mrs. M. B. Edwards.

Miss Parks vs. Miss Inches.

Miss Warner vs. Miss Vera Robinson.

Miss Dibblee (Woodstock) vs. Miss W. Barker.

The winners were Miss Thomson, Miss Barker, Miss Smith, Mrs. E. A. Smith, Miss Vera Robinson, Miss Parks and Miss Dibblee. Mrs. Edwards won by default from Mrs. Handsomebody, who had to return to Windsor Monday night.

In the consolation cup contest Miss McGivern and Miss Robertson drew level. Mrs. Chandler, of Moncton, defeated Mrs. Green and Miss C. Smith won from Miss S. D. Robertson.

Tea was served, the ladies in charge being Mrs. J. V. Anglin, Mrs. G. H. Flood, Mrs. R. K. Jones and Miss Edith Skinner. These social functions are largely attended and are proving delightful features of the association meet.

MONCTON NEWS

Moncton, N. B., Sept. 4.—At meeting of the city council tonight Police Officer Chappell was appointed chief of police for three months at $60 per month. The vote stood five to three between J. A. McLean and Chappell, George Rideout, Fred. Erickson, was an applicant for the position and it was thought up to the time the vote was taken he stood a good chance for the appointment.

The council appointed a committee to set with the exhibition association to arrange, if possible, for the holding of a maritime exhibition in Moncton in the fall of 1907.

Details of a bad collision on the I. C. R. at St. Charles Junction have been received. The accident occurred between 8 and 9 o'clock this morning. Express train 150 and way freight collided. It appears the freight was doing shunting and was foul of the main line. The express engine, running at the usual rate of speed, crashed into the freight cars and Driver J. Quinn was killed. Seven or eight cars of the freight train were wrecked and the postal car on the express smashed.

The express engine is badly damaged. The cause of the collision is said to be due to signals being at fault. It is reported one signal showed all right while the other was at danger. Trains are able to pass the wreck. Driver Quinn, who lost his life, was one of the best known engineers on that section of the road. No one else was injured.

ELOQUENT SERMON ON CHRISTIAN UNION BY REV. FR. P. F. DUFFY

The following sermon on Christian Union was preached by Rev. Dr. Duffy, of Marsville, in St. John's (Mission) church a few Sundays ago. It is published in full by request.

Titus 1: 1--"For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders (presbyters) in every city." Let me direct your attention to the word "elders." This in the Greek text is presbyteros, from which comes directly our own word presbyter and priest, used so often in the prayer book. In the discussion of Christian union, I shall use the Greek words in preference to the English, as it will simplify my argument--Diklonoi for deacons, presbyteroi for elders (priests), episkopoi for bishops. Observe in the text (1) that Titus was "appointed to ordain"--what is the meaning of disacrament--in other words he was "consecrated" and (2) that he was to "ordain presbyteroi in every city." Here is a grand distinction. St. Paul "consecrated" (disacrament) Titus, an episkopos (bishop), Titus "ordained" (katastaxen) presbyteroi (presbyters, priests).

In presenting this subject to you tonight, my desire is not to use a sentence, phrase, or word that can wound a Roman, Greek, or Assyrian Catholic on the one hand, or a Presbyterian, Methodist, or Baptist Protestant on the other. In this spirit, then, I place before you the fourfold division of my basis for Christian union. The early Irish church, as founded by St. Patrick, (1) Non-Roman, (2) Catholic, (3) Apostolic, (4) the bishop as, sometimes, subordinate to the presbyter ecclesiastically. I. St. Patrick and the early Irish church were non-Roman. This statement is made simply as a matter of history. We have no evidence, so far as authentic history is concerned, that St. Patrick was ever consecrated by the pope. On the contrary, he never saw the pope, never was in Rome, was not consecrated by a Roman bishop, and was not sent to Ireland, either directly or indirectly, by the Bishop of Rome, or the Church of Rome. A simple historical incident will dispel all illusions on this head: Edwy, King of Northumbria, was a pious though superstitious prince. He was desirous of healing the strife and division between the British, or Celtic, church in England, and the Roman church in Ireland. And accordingly he held a conference of the leaders of the opposing churches. The controversy was about the due and correct time for the observance of Easter. The champion of the British church was Columba, the Gael, the champion of the Roman church was Wilfrid, the Saxon. Columba based the argument for the whole Celtic church, Irish, Scotch, British, on St. Columba of Iona, back to St. John the Divine. Wilfrid based the argument for the Roman church on St. Augustine of Canterbury, back to St. Peter and St. Paul. King Edwy decided in favor of Wilfrid and against Columba. The reason for his decision would be considered most ridiculous by my hearers. But that is not my argument. The point is: the Gael refers to St. Columba and St. John, the Roman refers to St. Augustine and St. Peter and St. Paul. St. Columba was St. Patrick's disciple, and held the usage and customs as received from St. Patrick, which were contrary to those of St. Augustine, who had been sent to England by the pope. Need I say more?

II. St. Patrick and the early Irish church were Catholic. They accepted the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds as existing in their church. They had the threefold ministry in their church. They used a Liturgy and wore vestments. They held the usage and customs and doctrines as delivered by St. John to the Ephesian church (such as we may reasonably conclude prevailed largely in the seven churches of Asia), such as St. Polycarp claims he received from the beloved disciple. They were never accused of heresy or schism, except certain of the popes of Rome, Adrian IV, for example. Thus they were Catholics, but not Roman.

III. St. Patrick and the early Irish church were apostolic. It is worthy of note that the apostolic succession is traced, not through Rome to St. Peter and St. Paul, but through Ephesus to St. John and St. Philip. The most celebrated disciple of St. John was Polycarp, who succeeded him in Ephesian episcopate. Polycarp's most eminent disciple was Irenaeus, who became Bishop of Lyons in Gaul. Not far removed from St. Irenaeus was St. Martin of Tours. St. Martin's sister, Concessa, was St. Patrick's mother. His father, Calpurnius, was a deacon, and his grandfather, Potitus, a priest. We are assured by Irenaeus that he delivered the customs and usages to the Gaelic church, as he had received them from St. Polycarp. A bishop of that Gaelic church, St. Germanus, from whom the town of St. Germans, on the confines of Devon and Cornwall, is named, was the consecrator of St. Patrick, who was sent by the church in Gaul to take the oversight of the church in Ireland. (I may here remark that there were Christiana Ireland and England long anterior to St. Patrick). But St. Columba, a disciple of St. Patrick, was the founder of the great college and monastery of Iona, an island to the north of Scotland. From Iona and Cornwall, Christianized by Irish missionaries, not only England, but large portions of Europe, to the borders of Russia and Italy, were brought under the sway of the Cross; and the churches established in these different countries owed allegiance, not to Rome, but to Iona.

IV. In the Celtic churches was found an ecclesiastical procedure differing from that which obtained in other churches generally. It was that the bishop was frequently subordinate to the head of the great collegiate and monastic, and even conventual, establishments. The function of the bishop in things spiritual was supreme, such as ordination, absolution, Holy Communion, and all essentially episcopal acts, but not in government and kindred functions. In proof of this I need only instance St. Columba and St. Brigid or Brice. A question now arises which must be dealt with. Granted that episcopacy dates from apostolic times. But is it of such vital importance that it cannot be surrendered to the exigencies of Christian union? And, again, is there any certain warranty from Holy Scripture that any of the apostles consecrated bishops as a separate order? To both these questions we enter an emphatic "yes." If there was no other passage than my text that would be an all-sufficient answer. But let us briefly refer to other passages.

(a) Acts 1: 20. "And his bishopric let another take." I am aware that an alternative word found in the margin and revised version is "deacon." But with all due respect, I maintain that "overseer" is not an English synonym, or a true equivalent of the original. The Greek word is episkopos, which gives us the word episcopate. Let us substitute this word for bishopric and overseer, and then we shall better understand the meaning of the word episcopate let another take. "And his episcopate let another take." This was said by an apostle, Peter, of an apostle, Judas, a bad, wicked apostle, doubtless, but still an apostle. The date of this application of the word to the highest order, ordained by Christ himself, was A. D. 34, the meeting of episcopate is here fixed, and in the chronological tracing of the word we must adhere to this original sense.

(b) "Now let me direct your attention to Acts xx. 17. "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus and called the presbyters of the church." Next look at verse 28: "Take heed therefore to yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you episcopos." Mark you, the presbyteroi of verse 17 become the episcopos of verse 28--the Holy Ghost "ordained" the presbyteroi, they returned to Ephesus bishops or episcopoi. In other words they were raised from the presbyteroi to the episcopate by Paul through the laying on of his hands, and received the gift of the Holy Ghost for the work of the episcopate. It is interesting to note that, in the closing years of the life of St. John, he goes to this same city, Ephesus, and becomes the episcopos of the church.

(c) Phil. 1: 1. "To all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the episkopos and diakonoi." There are those who say that the episkopos here means the presbyteroi, and why? Simply because presbyters, or the second order, is not mentioned. This is through a misapprehension of the mind of the scriptures. Wherever diakonoi is mentioned, in the sense applied to in Acts vi. 3, means deacons. Wherever presbyteroi is mentioned, in the sense of an officer of the Church of Christ, it means presbyter, or priest. But when episkopos is mentioned, are we to suppose that there is a departure from the rule, and episkopos has a double meaning? By no means. What it means first and last, it means altogether. There is a similar misapprehension about St. Patrick's Bishop. He consecrated many that certain writers, forming their conceptions from medieval and modern bishops, contend that his bishops were merely presbyters; forgetting that in the early Irish church there were presbyters as well as bishops and deacons.

(d) 1 Tim. iii. 1. "If a man desire the episcopate (episkopos) he desireth a good work." The attentive reader cannot fail to notice that St. Paul uses the very same word here that St. Peter uses in its application to the apostolate. God in His word is not the author of confusion; so that what episkopos means in all. The chronological order of the term is not to be omitted in the study of the subject. It is Acts i. 6; in Acts i. D. 34; in Acts ix. A. D. 36; in Phil. i. A. D. 61; in 1 Tim. iii. A. D. 65; and in Titus (my text) A. D. 65. This is conclusive. (I follow Luce's Chronology.)

A word in conclusion may be said about wounded dignity and conscientious convictions of our denominational brethren. I can understand that a learned saint among the denominations should feel it injudicious to occupy, in social affairs, a position subordinate to certain bishops. Here the Irish or Gaelic church offers a solution. In such functions let the great Presbyterian or Methodist presbyter take precedence and away the higher authority, but in spiritual functions let the bishop have the precedence, as in the case of Columba of Iona, with his bishops.

As to the conscientious convictions or scruples of our brethren of the denominations who believe that they are validly ordained by the grace of the laying on of the hands of the presbyteroi, I think I can point out a way for Christian adaptability and Christian charity; a way presented by the holy scriptures and practised by the Anglican communion at the present time. That church, jealous of the letter as well as the spirit of the holy scripture, and careful never to depart from apostolic example, presents a reasonable solution of the difficulty. She believes in the grace of the presbyteroi. Nor, I think, am I wrong in saying she admits a presbyterial episcopate. (In ordination she associates presbyteroi with the bishop in the act itself in the laying on of hands on the head of the candidate. And she does so because of its historicity, and because of its scripturalness. Here is the scripture: 1 Tim. iv. 14. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbyteroi.")

Whatever consecration and whatever grace may be in presbyterial orders the Anglican church allows. And, therefore, in ordaining denominational presbyteroi and her own priests with the bishop, in laying on of hands in the ordination of the candidate, she would not, in my opinion, be acting ultra vires. Nor do I think that any Godly denominational presbyter, thirsting after Christian union, would reject the olive branch thus held out by a church that has a history of 1800 years and a succession dating back to apostolic times. And here we can reach out the hand to the great British denomination also, on the common ground that both believe in baptism by dipping. May the Lord Jesus, the episkopos of souls, (1 Pet. ii. 25), "come into our hearts to bind us together in the unity of the faith, so that we all may be one."

THE LATE G. C. COSTER At a meeting of the St. John Local Society held yesterday afternoon in the Equity Court room and presided over by D. Mullin, K. C., the following resolutions, moved by Dr. A. A. Stoddart, M. P., and seconded by C. N. Skinner, K. C., were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, that the death of Mr. Coster this society has been deprived of one of its most valuable members. Ever zealous and faithful in performance of his numerous trusts reposed in him, honorable and upright in his dealings, courteous and obliging in his intercourse with his brethren, and well versed in legal principles and the etiquette of the profession, prompt and active in the discharge of all duties, and universally reliable, he leaves the memory of a useful and irreproachable life; be it therefore Resolved, that our appreciation of his worth as a member of the bar, and sense of loss at his untimely demise be entered in the minutes, and that a copy, suitably engrossed, be presented to his family, to whom our sincere sympathy is extended in their bereavement.

It was moved by Dr. A. O. Earle, K. C., and seconded by A. I. Trueman, K. C., that the society attend the funeral in a body.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. O'Mullaly, of At-Leboro (Mass.), arrived on the steamer Calvin Austin yesterday to visit the former's mother, Mrs. M. A. Mullaly, 90 Duke street.

Mrs. D. J. Deberry, of Main street, and her little daughter, Mary, and Miss Catherine Sherry, of Memusook, are visiting friends at Niagara Falls. While they are away they will take in the Toronto exhibition.

Mrs. J. S. Leighton and Miss M. Mowatt, of Woodstock, are at the Royal.

When at the Exhibition be sure and see JAMES MASSON'S Pungs, and Gay's High Grade Waggon.

An Invitation to Exhibition Visitors

When you visit the city you are cordially invited to inspect the newspaper offices of THE TELEGRAPH and TIMES. As you know, these papers have the most up-to-date equipment, and the largest circulations, east of Montreal.

We will take pleasure in escorting you about the building, and explaining the different steps in the making of a modern newspaper, and showing you in operation the finest printing press in this part of Canada.

You are welcome to make our offices your headquarters while in the city. Stop at our booth on the grounds and receive the little souvenir of the Exhibition we have prepared for you.

Remember, our entire plant will be thrown open to visitors during Exhibition Week. All our friends are requested to call.

The river is now lower than it has been at any time this year, although it is higher than at the same time last season. The heavy rain of yesterday which is reported to have been general in the upper section of the province, will no doubt bring the water up some.—Fredericton Gleaser.

A man named Bennett, of Boston, was touched for $300 in the depot last night when about to board the train that was to carry him to the hub. A large number of people were in the station and consequently more or less bumping was indulged in. The I. C. R. police were notified and Mr. Bennett continued on his journey.

Herbert Green, of the west end, while on his way to the exhibition, was run over by Philip Granam's horse and team at the corner of Sheffield and Sydney streets yesterday afternoon. Visitors seem more than pleased with the great snaps that they are getting at the big exhibition sale at the Union Clothing Co., 29-28 Charlotte street, old Y. M. A. building. Those who have not already attended this sale will greatly benefit themselves by calling at their store before leaving the city. Read their ad on page nine.

THE ROLLER CARNIVAL

The Hon. Joseph Chamberlain will make his first visit to St. John on Monday night next and will be seen at the 'Sally Corp's' carnival at St. Andrew's Rollaway in competition for the prize for the best representative of any British or Canadian statesman. Photos of the above gentleman can easily be secured, and who knows, he might win a prize. Don't forget the orchid though. Skaters must be costumed and must be marked. Secure your tickets early, as only a limited number will be sold, and the rule is first come first served.

EXHIBITION VISITORS

Out of town customers and visitors to St. John during exhibition week are cordially invited to call at the offices of the Northwestern Land & Investment Company, Canada Life Building, to examine charts, plans and maps of Western Canada. Their demonstrator will be on hand to explain fully the towns in the north-west where money can be profitably invested; offices open from 8.30 a. m. to 6 p. m. 9-30-71d.

NEW FACTORY SITE

Ames, Holden, Limited, has Purchased Montreal Property of 32,000 Feet—Capitalization increased to $2,500,000.

James Redmond, vice-president and general manager of the Ames-Holden, Limited, announced yesterday that the company having increased its capital to $2,500,000, would build a new factory in Montreal, representing an investment of $800,000, the purchase of a site for the factory having been completed yesterday. The property, which covers an area of 32,000 feet, is bounded by LaGauchetiere, St. Menique and Inspector streets, with a ten-foot lane in the rear. It is known as the Muir estate and will be all covered by the new structure. It is an ideal site, having light on four sides which can never be interfered with by other buildings being erected.

The new factory will have a frontage of 168 feet on LaGauchetiere street, 180 on Inspector and 200 on St. Menique streets. It will be four stories high, with a basement, and will be built so as to carry another story should it be required later on.

It is the intention to use reinforced concrete construction. It is to be an absolutely fireproof structure and when completed will be a thoroughly up-to-date factory, containing every known device that will facilitate the manufacture and handling of shoes. Announcing the plans of the company Vice-President Redmond said yesterday: "We have increased our capital and will spend $800,000 on a new factory and site to keep pace with the growth of our trade, which has increased very rapidly within the last few years. We are the largest shoe manufacturers in Canada, operating two factories, one at St. Hyacinthe, where staple goods are manufactured exclusively, and the other in Montreal, where all the finer grades are made. We have branches with separate organizations in St. John, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, and as soon as the buildings are completed we will open two more, one at Calgary, and the other in Edmonton."

The Ames-Holden Company's business was founded in 1833, the Victoria Square factory having been occupied for the last six years.—Montreal Gazette, Friday.

DECEPTION DON'T GO

When a business is successful various people offer different reasons for its success. Some say: "It is good advertising." Others "the management has a pull"—the sarcastic one remarks, "they are good bluffers;" but Emerson says: "If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods the world will make a beaten track to his door." The reliable simply states, that his brand of soap is pure, or that his brand of tea is good; if he tells the truth he is soon rated among the eminently successful; so it is with the Currie Business University, Ltd. This school states that its graduate is equal in capacity to the ordinary experienced office helper, and the fact that its employment bureau is able to record over three hundred calls for stenographers and bookkeepers annually, with salaries from $300 to $1,000 per year, proves to both business men and pupils that it is pre-eminently a successful school. The names of the successful students along with the names of the successful students are recorded in the newspapers daily under the heading of "Another Position."

COME AND SEE US

The Times extends a standing invitation to its friends to visit its new premises, Canterbury St., at any time during the Exhibition. There are few manufacturing processes that surpass in interest the process of manufacturing a modern daily newspaper, and to visitors The Times, as an afternoon paper, has this advantage, that the entire plant may be seen in operation during the daytime. The typesetting machines are in operation from 8 o'clock in the morning, the stereotyping department is busily at work between 12.30 and 3, and the big Goss press is in operation from 3 o'clock on. The Times plant in completeness and up-to-date-ness is not surpassed in Eastern Canada, and we think you will be interested in seeing it in operation. Come and bring your friends.

New $100,000 Traffic Bridge at Saskatoon

The new $100,000 traffic bridge being built at Saskatoon, which will connect that city with Nutana, is well under way, and probably will be completed next year. This new bridge will be the means of greatly enhancing real estate values on the Nutana side of the river, where the Grand Trunk Pacific and C. P. R. have recently bought up an extensive parcel of land. The land held by the Northwestern Land and Investment Co., Canada Life Building, is centrally situated near these extensive railway purchases, and can be secured while the remaining few last at $115 each. The opportunity of buying at the low rate is a chance to make money, as the probability is that inside of six months these lots will be easily worth $200 each.

Experts at Sewing

The gentlemen in charge of M. R. A.'s sewing machine exhibit at the fair are thoroughly experienced operators as well as salesmen. They have been all their business lives in this line of work, and can readily enlighten enquirers upon matters pertaining to sewing machines. Ladies are there to demonstrate the varied capabilities of the new lines of sewing machines, and samples of the sewing are willingly distributed among interested ones. M. R. A., Ltd., have gone seriously into the sewing machine business; have engaged expert help, and are prepared to stand back of every machine that leaves their establishment.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Wall street—Early advance in American in London did not prevent a thoroughly mixed tone in the active speculative market in stocks at the opening here. The Harrisman Pacific, St. Paul, money and other local favorites showed small fractional gains, but there was a long list of declines as well.
