THE COTTAGE.

BY JEFFREY GIFFORD.

Where the cosy cottage stands,
By the silver streamlet bright—Graceful hills and meadow lands
Mark a region of delight;
On the warm slopes light does stray Rays footed all the day.

Rural paths lead here and there,
Fringed with leafy colonnades,
While children, free from strife or care,
Frolic on the velvet glades;
Further down the village spire
Is all ablaze with crimson fire.

Still further on, the stream winds round
At the foot of yonder wood,
And the bordering edge of ground Serenely glows with a good
Where the placid brook flows deep.
Rich pastures feed large flocks of sheep.

Milk-white lambs here sport and play Till in gambols weary grown,
As slowly fades the waning day
And the fields look drear and lone;
Yet, the glens are flecked with foam,
Where the dancing waters roam.

Forever, day and night the same,
The babbling spring is bright and clear,
And prattling child and aged dame
Here watch its ripples year by year;
Near by, great oaks in stately pride,
Stand close together side by side.

THE SONG THAT THE TEAKETTLE SANG.

BY LOUISE DUFEY.

The teakettle was humming something that sounded like this, and startled Nora, who was half-asleep by the fire:

"Puff, puff, steam, steam, steam!
Wake, little maiden, out of your dream,
There's a beggar at the door,
Steam, steam, steam, puff, puff, puff!
On the table there's supper enough
For one little maiden more."

"Dear me!" said she to herself, "I did not hear any one at the door. What a funny tale kettle! I believe, after all, it's telling a story."

But no, for sure enough, when she opened the door, there sat a forlorn little being on the step, with white hair that looked like thistle-down, and so long and tangled that it hid her face entirely. All that Nora could see of her was her head and a bit of ragged old cloak; and, as she remained afterwards, the "white reminded her for all the world of a tall thistle-stalk in the autumn that had caught and was clinging to a bit of rag."

"Come in and warm yourself, won't you?" said she, half afraid of the weird little object.

The child arose without a word and followed her into the room. Nora placed her a seat by the fire, and she spread out her tiny purple hands to catch the heat, with an air of great satisfaction.

"I wonder if the teakettle conjured her up, sure!" thought Nora. "She might be a steam-sprite, if there do be any such, but indeed I never heard of the like."

She was the possessor of a learned volume which went very deeply into fairy lore, but it did not mention anything of the kind.

"Where do you live, sure? Did ye get lost, poor little thing?" she questioned the child.

"I live down by the wharf, and I didn't get lost, only a dog stole my basket with all I had got for the day in it, and I don't dare to go home. Auntie whips me when I don't carry anything home, and she'd kill me for losing the basket," said the mite, in a precise, piping little tongue.

"What's yer name, then?" said Nora, her rosy Irish face all ashine with sympathy.

"Mamma used to call me Tina," said she,
"but auntie calls me Mary."

"And where is the mother, that ye live with the aunt?"

"She said she was going to heaven, but they took her away in a box. I suppose they carried her there, though they didn't go up when I saw them. She was sick, O sence a long time!
I wanted her to go, because she said that she shouldn't be sick any more, but be happy with papa," said the little thing, solemnly.

"And the aunt is a cruel thafe of a woman, and sends ye out to beggin, with your poor bits of toes to the ground, in weather like this! I had 'ces to an aunt like that! I'd love her to be sent entirely. You shall stay with me to-night, anyway. We're poor enough ourselves, me mother and I. Me mother lives out in a hotel. She used to be cook, and made the lots o' money; but then she got sick, being over the fire so much, and now she only helps the cook, and does little odd jobs, and little wages she gets. I worrnk, too. I'm cash-girl at Habely's, and with what we both earn, we get along. Me mother sleeps with me nights, and to-night, coz 'tis Saturday night, she's coming to supper. It's her I'm kaping the table for."

"Will she like to have me here?" said the child, looking anxiously toward the door.

"Sure she will. Me mother has the kind heart. Don't you fear, me dear. How could anybody shut their door on the likes o' you?
You looks like a bit fairy."

Just then the door opened, and a woman with a kind face, very like Nora's, entered the room.

"Here's me mother," said Nora, springing up gladly. "Mother, see what a nice little company I've got."

"Nice indeed," said Mrs. Murphy, patting the cornsilk head. "And who might she be, my dear?"

"Her name's Tina, and she lives with her aunt, and her aunt is cruel and bates her; and, mother, I'm going to kape her with me—for a while, at last. She's lost her basket, and doesn't dare to go home, and the weather's so cowl'd!" said honest Nora, all in one breath.

"Well, well, we'll see about it, me dear; but now let's take a bit o' something to eat, if the tays'll let us."

Tina seemed pleased with the little flowered plate Nora placed for her. Her eyes were as bright and blue as stars, and she seemed more than content with her surroundings; but she could not eat.

"Maybe you had your dinner late?" said Nora, anxiously.

"I don't have dinners," piped Tina; "I only have breakfasts and suppers."

"I'm afraid the child's going to be sick. Her cheeks are so flushed-like, and her eyes are so bright," said Mrs. Murphy.

But Tina said she wasn't sick, and she liked to look at the pretty room, and the red flowers on the paper.

"The paper do be pretty. I put it on myself, dear," said Mrs. Murphy. "But you will be sick if you don't eat a bit. I always know me Nora's going to be sick when she don't care for her supper."

"Do you know, mother, that taykettle's found speech for itself? It woke me up talking and singing away this very night," said Nora, earnestly. "It made a sort o' song about somebody's being at the door, and there being room at the table for one more. And sure enough, there was Tina at the door, though I hadn't heard her at all!"

"Och, you were dreaming, me dear. Taykettles don't spake!"

"Why no, 'twasn't exactly spaking," said
Nora; "it was just singing along a sort o' song."

It was a fearful cold night, and as it grew later the wind arose and blew furiously. Mrs.
Murphy had thought of taking Tina home herself, as they had but one bed, and that one hardly wide enough for two; but she could not have the heart to take such a frail-looking little thing into such bitter cold. But warm-hearted Nora would have slept on the hard floor herself, rather than have her brave that dangerous aunt, to say nothing of the cold, for saw from the pit she felt for her, she took a great fancy to the child. She told her fairy tales until bed time. The wonderful adventures of that sagacious youth, Jack the Giant Killer; the fascinating story of Puss in Boots; and the perils and triumphs of those valiant philanthropists the Seven Champions of Christendom. Tina's brown eyes shone like stars out of the tangle of white hair, and she hardly dared to breathe for fear of losing the spell.

"Like stories," she said, clasping her little brown hands; "and you are so good. I never saw anybody so good before, 'cept mamma, and she went away so long ago I can't hardly member. I s'pect you're an angel, aren't you? Angels are gooder than anything!"

Poor Nora, with her little freckled Irish face and funny turn-up nose! She didn't look much like an angel. She couldn't help laughing at the idea herself, though she felt immensely flattered. She thought that Tina looked like an angel when she was attired for bed that night. She had put one of her own white nightdresses on to her, and had combed the cornsilk locks back from the little fair wistful face. The child's beauty was striking, and it was high-bored beauty, too; even Nora recognized that. But there were black and blue marks on the delicate shoulders and arms that made her warm Irish heart ache, and she kissed them with something like tears in her honest blue eyes.

"It isn't me that'll ever let ye go back to the aunt again," said she, half to herself. "If I have but a crust, the bit thing shall share it, and I'll slape on the floor meself, if me mother objects to being crowded!"

The next morning Tina was flushed and feverish, but still she said that she wasn't sick; her head ached, that was all. Nora hurried home from mass as fast as ever she could, to keep her company, and the two children spent a cosy day together. Nora kept a bright fire, and told her stories until her stock was entirely exhausted. Tina seemed thoroughly happy, and took no thought of the morrow. Nora, to her, was like one of the good fairies in her stories; she would take care of her. Auntie and the days when she went begging were already like a dream.

"It's unlikely that that spake in a woman she calls auntie is any relative of hers," said Mrs. Murphy, as she watched her while she was sleeping that night. "Mind, Nora, that child has gentle blood. These vile women steals pretty frail-like children to send a begging, bad-'ces to 'em! The mother's a weepin' for the poor little lamb now, I doubt not."

"Ah, mother, we will never let her go back to the likes iv her, will we? Didn't the praste say as the good saints would give back all a body spent in deeds o' charity?"

"But, me dear, how are you ever going to provide for yourself? Aren't your own poor bits of toes almost out of the ould shoes now? Coal is so dear, and there's so much spint in this weather. Then I want you to go to school and get a bit o' larnin', and not grow up in such haythin ignorance."

"But I don't want to go to school," said Nora; "I can read now. I'd a hape rather kape Tina!"

Poor little Tina! she was really very ill. All night she tossed and moaned in her sleep, and in the morning she could hardly lift her head from the pillow. Mrs. Murphy did all she could for her before she went to her work, and Nora hung over her until the very last moment, almost broken-hearted that she must leave her to suffer alone. But work begins on Monday morning, and if she did not go to the store she would be sure to lose her place. Then what would become of her little friend?

When she came home at noon she found her in a high fever; her eyes looked wild and strange, and she talked incoherently.

"Whatever shall I do for her?" said poor Nora, in despair. "It's the fever she has, sure, and who knows but she'll die the poor bit thing? I'll never get over it if she do die on my hands. Perhaps a jug of hot water at the fate would draw the hate from the head, and p'raps a bit of hot tay, if I could make her drink it, would make her feel better. Tay-kettle," she said, as she stood that useful vessel on the glowing coals, "you towld me to take the little thain' in and give her the supper; now tell me what to do for her if you can. She is that ill that it's fit to break one's heart just to look at her."

But the teakettle only looked mildly com-plative, and didn't open its mouth; and as Tina was quiet for a few moments, she sat down by the fire to think what she could do to help the little sufferer.

"I'll not leave her again," she said to herself; "I shall lose my place, but the saints will provide."

Leaning her head on her hands, she was quite lost in thought, until that funny witchlike old teakettle startled her with another one of its sage sayings in rhyme:
The steam was pouring in a flood out of its crooked nose, and it sang along in this wise:

"Steam, steam, steam, puff, puff, puff!
The doctor, the doctor, 'tis plain enough
What to do for the child!"

Nora started to her feet in a moment. A doctor, sure enough. Why did she not think of it before? She was so unused to a cussness that, with all her thoughtfulness, the idea of calling a doctor never entered her mind. She hardly knew that there were such sort of people in the world.

"I'll run for one this instant," she said.
"I've got two dollars in my own, that I was saving for the boots; but it's better to let me feet go bare than let Tina be moaning in illness. I'm much obliged to you, taykettle, and sure I'll always be after asking advice of you. You're as good as gold!"

And she made a little courtesy, that was not mockery, by any means, to the homely household god; for if there ever was a fairy she believed that one haunted the teakettle.

Then, hardly stopping to put on her things, she rushed out of the house.

"Do you know where there be a doctor?" she asked of Mrs. Donahoe, over the way who always had a sick baby.

But no, Mrs. Donahoe didn't know where there was a doctor. The city doctor who came for nothing to poor people had moved, and she "had no account of any other."

And so Nora rushed away on the wind to find a doctor's sign. She found two or three but the first one was away attending to a patient; the second was ill himself and did not go out; the third told her shortly, without giving any reason, that he could not go to visit her patient.

"If all the doctors be as stony-hearted as you, I may as well go home now," said she to herself, as she stood on the sidewalk.
She clasped her two little red hands together, looking in every direction, as if in search of help.

"What did you say about a doctor, my child?" said a gentleman who was waiting in an elegant carriage by the street side, noticing her look of distress.

"Oh, if I could only find a doctor, sirr!
The little one at me house is that sick I'm afraid she'll die."

"Indeed! Well, I'm a physician myself, and I will go to see the child at once, if you desire it. Your sister, I suppose."

"No sir," said she, without stopping to give any further explanation. "The number is ten, Canal Court, if you please. I'll be at the door, and show you the way up when you get there; and thank you kindly sirr."

"He didn't look as if he'd be that good," she thought, as she ran toward home. "I should 'a' said that he was sternlike and stuck-up, in his fine carriage, and with his gould-headed cane; but you never can tell by looks."

He was rather a stern-looking man. Nora was half afraid of him as he came up the rickety steps into the house. He was not so very old, but his hair was snow-white, and his features were sharp and compre-sed, as if he had known trouble, and he had a grand air, which seemed to awe the very house. Nora had brushed Tina's hair back from the little flushed face, and she lay quite still, with her wide fever-bright eyes fixed on the doctor.

He gave one glance at her, then started back as if in alarm.

"Is this child?" he demanded, in a tone of more severity than the occasion required, Nora thought.

"I don't know what her last name be's;
I couldn't make out by what she said. Her first name's Tina."

"I thought so," he said, in a tone half triumphant half-anxious. "But where did you find her? She's no relative of yours, certainly." And he felt the fevered pulse with more than professional anxiety.

"She came here Saturday night, and we took her in," said Nora. "She was afraid to go home, coz she'd lost her basket, and her aunt bates her. She sends her out a begging. Me mother doesn't think it be's her fault at all, though, but some thafe of a woman that stole her coz she was pretty."

The doctor bit his lips, and bent very low over the little prostrate figure.

"He be's a quare man," said Nora to herself.

"Do you think she will die, sirr?" she asked, with tears in her eyes.

"I hope not, my child; but she is very ill," he said in husky tones. "I am indebted to you, my good girl, more than I can express," he went on, "for this little beggar child is my granddaughter. Her mother was lost to me years ago. She married a worthless man, against my will, and I never forgave her. When she was dying she wrote to me, begging me to care for her child when she was gone. I did not receive the letter for some time, as I was in Europe then; but when I did receive it, I hastened thome with all possible speed.
When I reached here she had been dead for nearly two months, as far as I could learn, and I could find no trace of the child. I have been searching for her ever since, and despaired of ever finding her. But as soon as my eye fell on her face this morning I recognized her, for she is the image of her mother when she was a child. She has her eyes, her hair, her forehead, her expression. We called her Tina, too." And the strong man's voice was broken, as if he were weeping.

"If he have been hard for his daughter, he repents, and may the saints forgive him!"
prayed Nora.

"O sirr!" she said, "there do be a good fairy in our taykettle, and 'twas she that bade me take Tina in. I never should 'a' known she was at the door!"

The doctor looked at her as if he thought she were insane. But when Tina got well she found some sympathy in her faith in the "taykettle fairy." Tina was very, very ill for a time, but she got well at last. All through her illness, though she was delirious nearly all the time, and did not seem to recognize any one, she would have no one to wait on her but Nora. Nora's hand was the only one that could bring her relief; Nora's very presence seemed to quiet her.

When she was able to be moved to the luxurious home of her grandfather, Nora went with her, and Nora's mother also.

"I want my Nora always," she said.
And the saints did pay the honest little Irish girl tenfold for what she "spint in charity."

There was no more "climbing other people's stairs," no more pinching poverty, no more hard work for either herself or her mother after that; for Tina's grandfather in his gratitude could not do enough for them. He gave them a dear little homelike cottage for their very own, furnished in a way that would have suited the most fastidious; and, what was better to Nora than anything else, it was so near to Tina—just at the end of the garden. And besides that, he gave them money which seemed almost fabulous to Nora and her mother. This was to be kept in the bank, and the interest of it to support them in their cherry little home.

Nora goes to school, and is growing into a perfect little lady, though the burr will cling to her Irish tongue; and she still holds to her faith in fairies, and cherishes that old teakettle as if it were a golden treasure. And you may be sure she still "spinds" in deeds of charity, for such a warm little heart as hers could never be made forgetful by prosperity.

Job DOWLING'S FUNERAL.—Many years ago I was one of the party in Washington City, when South and North vied with each other in convivial life. Another of the party was General Dawson, member from Western Pennsylvania, whose homestead was Albert Gallatin's old home. He was an admirable story-teller. I recall somewhat sadly, now that he is gone, how well he illustrated the laziness of a class of Virginians.
The story was a part of his Congressional canvassing. On one occasion he got across the Pennsylvania line into a little village of Virginia. He was in the midst of a group around the tavern. While treating and talking, a procession approached, which looked like a funeral. He asked who was to be buried?

"Job Dowling," said they.

"Poor Job!" sighed the general. He was a good-natured, good-for-nothing, lazy fellow, diving on the few fish he caught and the squirrel he killed, but mostly on the donations of his neighbors. "So poor Job is dead, is he?"

"No, he ain't dead; sadly," said they.

"Not dead—not d— Yet you are going to bury him?"

"Fact is, general, he has got too infernal all-fired lazy to live. We can't afford him any more. He's got so lazy that the grass began to grow over his shoes—so overlazy that he put out one of his eyes to save the trouble of winking when out a gunnin'."

"But," says the general, "this must not be. It will disgrace my neighborhood.
Try him a while longer, can't you?"

"Can't: 'tolate—coffin cost $125. Must go on now."

About this time the procession came up, and halted, when the general proposed, if they would let Job out, he would send over a bag of corn. On this announcement the lids of the coffin opened, and Job languidly sat up; the cbeats dropped from his eyes as he asked,

"Is the corn shelled, general?"

"No, not shelled."

"Then, said Job, as he lazily lay down,
"go on with the funeral!"—The Hon. S. S.

"Twice one is won," repeated an urchin in an absent-minded way. "What!" cried his father; "have I spent so much money on your education with no better results than that? Twice one is two, sir." "Well dad," replied the young hopefuls, "I will admit that you are right from one standpoint; but, with all due deference to you as my paternal progenitor, I must beg leave to maintain that, when I win two one-dollar bills on a horse race, twice one is won."

A clergyman, being applied to in less than a year after his appointment, to put a stone in the church, asked "how long his predecessor had been there; and when answered, "Twelve years," he said, "Well, you never had a fire in the church during his time?" "No sir," replied the applicant, "but we had fire in the pulpit then."

Agassiz having once spoken of fish being the right food for men who had brain work to perform, a thick-headed youth asked how much the professor thought he ought to eat to obtain the requisite brain food. Agassiz, looking quizzically at him, said, "About two whales."

"What do you sell those fowls for?" inquired a person of a man attempting to dispose of some chickens of questionable appearance. "I sell them for profits," was the answer. "Thank you for the information that they are profitable," responded the quarist; "I took them to be patriarchs."

New Zealand.

Until very recently, New Zealand was a sort of terra incognita to the inhabitants of Great Britain. Even now, there exists but a dim perception of the resources and history of the country. It is not more than thirty-five years since the British Government planted its standard on the islands; and with the proverbial indifference of the British people to the Colonies, it is not surprising that the majority of them have remained in partial ignorance of a country which has the most abundant resources, and which is destined to play no unimportant part in the future development of the empire. Any reliable information furnished by competent authority may, therefore, be welcomed as adding to the stock of public knowledge, and as likely to secure a better attention to the claims, and a better administration of the affairs, of this comparatively new, but rapidly growing colony. Such information has recently been afforded by Sir James Ferguson, late Governor of New Zealand, in a lecture he delivered at Ayr, Scotland, in aid of the funds of the Public Library and Reading Rooms. Sir James is very shrewd observer of men and things; and any opinion expressed by him may be sure, has been deliberately formed, and is based upon well-attested evidence or fact.

The common opinion has been that New Zealand and Australia were closely connected—forming in reality parts of one vast continent. But according to Sir James Ferguson, they are utterly separated from each other divided by at least 1200 miles of ocean, and with as little actual relation between them as there is between Portugal and Great Britain. New Zealand, indeed, is a vast country, apparently isolated from the rest of the world, standing in the neighborhood of no continent, lying at the very antipodes of Great Britain, washed by the waves of the great ocean which everlastingly beat against its shores, and, from the necessity of its position, it is, and must be always, to a certain extent, self-supporting. According to Sir James, New Zealand cannot boast of a very remote antiquity.

In the absence of historic monuments, however, which may prove the handy-work of man, there is abundant evidence of the workmanship of God. The soil of the country is surpassingly rich—capable of producing almost any and every kind of vegetable and fruit. It has a climate most salubrious and healthy; and scenery which for grandeur and beauty will compare favorably with the finest panoramic views presented to the eye of the traveller up the Rhine, or in any part of Scotland or England. Its rivers are said to be vastly out of proportion to the size of the country, one of which, indeed, has a volume of water next in magnitude to the Nile; whilst its mountains and glaciers rise in height from 3,000 to 6,000, and even 13,000 feet above the level of the sea, and run in a perfect Alpine range around the whole colony. Coal is abundant, one seam seven miles in length, and seventeen or eighteen feet thick; and if on this subject we adopt the commonly received geological opinion that coal is the result of vegetable formation, then here is an argument in favor of an older existence of the country; whatever may be the fact as to the population by whom it has been inhabited.

The present aboriginal population of New Zealand is known as the Maori tribe. According to their own traditions, they owe their origin to some of the Pacific Islands, from which their earliest ancestors passed over in large war canoes. They are a stalwart and warlike race—war indeed being described by Sir James Ferguson almost as their normal condition. All who have had any acquaintance with them have testified to their bravery and honor.

It is certain that the country is now becoming populated by emigrants from Great Britain; and so far all who have found their way there have every reason for congratulation. All the necessities of life have been secured in abundance; and many of the earliest settlers are on the high road to affluence and honor. The true way to open up the country is to encourage a healthy system of emigration, and to enter vigorously into works of internal improvement and control. This is being done on a large scale.

There is a local government actively at work. About £10,000,000 are to be expended upon public works and emigration. Already 530 miles of railway have been constructed, and 300 miles more are in construction. In 1874 82 ships were sent out from Britain, carrying not less than 23,975 persons. There is room for all; and in the over-crowded state of the Mother Country, and the present depressed condition of much of its trade, it will be an advantage to thousands to turn their faces towards New Zealand. It is not unlikely that such, in some measure, will be the effect of Sir James Ferguson's lecture; and in so far as this is the case, both the colony and the empire will be indebted to him for this, as for other valuable services rendered by him when Governor of New Zealand.

Numbers of our young men are constantly leaving this and the surrounding towns for California, Washington territory or the Western States. It is a curious truth that estates are mortgaged, personal property pledged or sold by fathers to raise money for the boys to seek their fortunes in the far or farther West. What the result is to be to this region is a most serious question. Markus Republican.

Many are following their example in the Provinces. The U. S. papers give the result,—"scores of men may be found on the trains east from California, returning to their homes, the 'Golden Land' having failed to provide them with remunerative employment which they expected. Perhaps the lesson will not be lost upon others who intended going out."

Our Grand Southern friends at Saint George, and the advocates of railroad extension in Calais will notice with attention and pleasure, the fact that the Ponoisot and Lake Megantic railway is to become a fixed fact, since Directors have let a contract for its construction to Messrs. Schriber and Burpee. The line will be surveyed and this season, and in the hands of the present contractors is sure to reach a successful completion.—Calais Times.

The debt of the town of St. Stephen greatly exceeds the debt of this city. According to the Journal the debt of the Town of St. Stephen exceeds $75,000, exclusive of the endorsement of bonds to the amount of $100,000 to the St. Stephen Branch Railway Company.—Ibid.

The Standard.

SAINT ANDREWS, APRIL 28, 1875.

THE SESSIONS were closed on Friday afternoon last; the principal business during the last two days being the confirmation of some Parish lists, granting licenses, and arranging St. Andrews Parish affairs. Mr. John Bailey was voted $75 for his cottage which was pulled down, during the late fire, to prevent the conflagration spreading to the adjoining buildings. The rate adopted for Liquor Licenses was wholesale $60, Retail $40, and in one or two cases in isolated places, smaller sums were accepted. The Sessions were more largely attended than for several years, and the proceedings were conducted with great harmony. The Grand Jury Report, will be seen in another column, and is a document worthy of an attentive perusal, as it contains impartial comments on the County and Parish accounts. The Grand Jurors passed a vote of thanks to their foreman, Mr. Irish, for the able manner in which he discharged his duties.

THE CONCERT last evening in Stevenson Hall, by the Choir of the Baptist Church is deserving of a more lengthy notice than we have space for to-day. The audience was not as large, as the concert was worthy of and those who were not present missed a great treat, as on no previous occasion here, did we listen to finer melody or more harmonious voices. The choir, as at present constituted, have not been associated together for any length of time, but there have been Concerts given here by professionals, not equal to the one which we attended last evening. The solos, duets, trios, quartettes and choruses, would do credit to any choir, and elicited marked applause. The accompaniments by Miss STEVENSON, who presided at the organ, were played in that artistic style and sweetness, which she is so eminently qualified to perform. We have no wish to particularize, still it would not be just were we to pass over the solos of "Auld Robin Gray" and "You'll soon forget Kathleen," they were rendered with fine taste and feeling.

At the close a vote of thanks was unanimously passed by the audience to the Choir for their highly creditable concert.

BRIGADE CAMPS.—The Military authorities at Ottawa, it is said have decided to hold Brigade Camps, during the summer. The local camp drills will take place prior to the Brigade Camps.

The political rumors of a change in the Cabinet at Ottawa, have no foundation in fact. The reports are the emanations of disappointed politicians whose wish is father to the thought. No minister has expressed a wish to retire; this information comes from a source which can be relied upon. Would-be leaders and would-be ministers will remain a little longer in the "cold shades," as there is not a distant prospect of a coalition.

GRAND JURY REPORT.

APRIL SESSIONS, 1875.

The Grand Jury beg leave to report? They visited the Jail and found it generally clean and in good condition. They beg leave to present that the committee for repairs of the Jail, Court House and premises effect any repairs of plastering, and as in their judgment may be necessary not to exceed $24.

The Grand Jurors report as follows on the Parish accounts:

LEPREAUX.
The accounts are correct. $150 recommended for the support of the Poor for the ensuing year.

ST. PATRICK.
The St. Patrick accounts are generally correct, except the account of Jas. Kinney, Overseer of Poor, who states a balance of six dollars and seventy cents as due to him, but on examining Stewart Kerr's account we find a voucher in which he acknowledges having received the amount. No estimate of Assessment for the support of the Poor.

DUMFRIES.
Accounts correct. $125 recommended to support Poor for the ensuing year.

PENFIELD.
Accounts correct, except two charges, one of debit the other of credit, not particularized in Collector Shaw's account. The charges are one for $12.56, the other $18.80, both charges are on the credit side in place of as above stated—County rates and Wild Land tax. These charges are made for delinquencies and should have been particularized and attested to? The Grand Jury present that Collector Shaw be ordered to make out a new account containing the particulars of these charges, duly attested; so that the matter may be more explicit. No estimates.

ST. DAVID.
Accounts correct $400, suggested for the support of the Poor, for the ensuing year.

ST. CROIX.
Accounts correct. No estimate for support of Poor.

DUFFRIN.
Accounts correct. No estimates.

ST. ANDREWS.
Accounts correct. $1200 estimated for the support of the Poor.

ST. JAMES.
Accounts correct. No estimates.

ST. GEORGE.

Accounts generally correct, but find the Collector for the Upper district, Ronald Campbell, by his own statement to have $185.93 in his hands for the collection of 1874; also the sum of $89.93 due from his own statement in his account for 1873—making the large sum of $275.86 due by this Collector to the Parish fund—the want of which seems to add very materially to the sum of indebtedness which appears to be due by the Parish. Therefore the Grand Jury present that the proper officers take steps to collect the amount from the said Ronald Campbell or his bondsmen respectively for the year 1873 and 1874; and that forthwith, $1200 estimated for the support of the poor for the ensuing year.

CLARENDON.
Clarendon seems to be blessed with no poverty as there are no Poor accounts.

The accounts of the Collector for the purpose of Highways are very imperfect and unsatisfactory, the Collector Frederick Boyle shows a collection of $37.14, and at the same time states that he had $132.50 to collect, without showing any account of the balance of $95.36. The Grand Jury present that as Collector Frederick Boyle has not done his duty in presenting such an insufficient account that the officers of our Worshipful Court order said Frederick Boyle to make a further and new account showing as well something about the said balance, as well as a paper writing that may be intelligible to the Grand Jury.

CAMPO BELLO.
The Grand Jury present the account of Peter Dewade, Collector of Rates, as containing charges for sums of money not vouched for to a considerable amount; of having charged commission on the whole amount of his warrant instead of the amount collected; and of having charged commission not only far too high, but for having entered the amount of that twice to his credit. No estimate for the Poor.

ST. STEPHEN.
The Grand Jury present that the affairs and accounts of this Parish are much confused and irregular; that Cyrus Thomson, Collector of Rates and Commissioner of highways has not presented any account of his doings; and that the proper officers take immediate steps to enforce the laws made to remedy such matters. That W. G. Maxwell, Commissioner of the Alms House has a charge of $11.32 without a voucher, and that Wm. D. Christie, Collector of Rates, has a lump sum of $10.22 for taxes that cannot be collected, but no particulars. The Grand Jury observe that the Collector of Taxes in most of the Parishes, (except the parish of St. George,) are in the habit of putting a lump sum in their Accounts in the shape of "delinquencies or taxes that cannot be collected," in place of giving the particulars; and further that most of these accounts and statements are not sworn to; that even the account of Ronald Campbell, the collector of the upper district of St. George, is not attested to; neither is the account of G. K. Wetmore, of the middle district, who also appears to have a balance of $2.40 in his hands, and who also has charged commission on his whole warrant in place of the amount collected; all which the Grand Jury would wish to see corrected, and therefore bring the matters to the notice of the Court. No estimate for the Poor.

WEST ISLES.
Accounts correct. No estimate for the Poor.

GRAND MANAN.
Nothing from this Parish.

COUNTY TREASURER'S ACCOUNTS.
We have examined these Accounts and find them correct; showing a balance on hand of $277.91.

COUNTY CONTINGENCIES.
The Grand Jury are of opinion that the sum of Two Thousand Four Hundred Dollars be an Assessment for the contingencies of the year.

PRESENTMENTS.
The examination of the Court House reveals the fact that a quantity of water in the basement of the building at the west corner having become ice, and being allowed to remain, has occasioned injury to the wall, and without too strongly reflecting upon the Committee of Repairs of the Court House, would say such neglect cannot be allowed to pass without notice, as a small drain would effect a remedy by turning off the water; and the Grand Jury would bring the matter to the serious attention of this Court, and that the sum of $100 be allowed for repairs of Court House. That the County Accounts be referred for examination to the Court.

Presented—That in the opinion of the Grand Jury, no recommendation to draw the $100 voted by the Grand Jury of 1873, for the purpose of building a Tank, as this Grand Jury considers the appropriation injudicious. Respectfully submitted, JOHN W. STEVENSON, S. C. IRISH, CLERK. FOREMAN.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. John Stewart, an old resident of Digby, and for many years a constable, died suddenly on Monday night. He retired to bed in apparent health, at 8 o'clock, and at 9 he died. Heart disease is believed to have been the cause of his death.

Andrew S. Phair, Esq., who was for 30 years Postmaster in Fredericton, died at his residence on the 21st instant, after a long and painful illness.

SPRING business is commencing, as may be seen by reference to our columns. Messrs Odell & Turner, have just opened a splendid stock of goods for spring and summer, to which they will add each month by British steamers. The St. Lawrence Advance observes:—"People who don't advertise are not troubled very much with any kind of business, and they don't deserve to be."

Mr. Cornelius Austin, an old and respectable Quaker at Milltown who occasionally contributed quaint articles to the press in that vicinity, died a short time ago.

GRAND SOUTHERN RAILWAY.—We will comply with the request to publish the Act to facilitate the construction of the Grand Southern Railway, as it involves taxation.

J. Pollet Esq. from the celebrated Mercantile House of J. P. Westhead & Co., Manchester, England, was on a visit to T. T. Odell Esq., during the week. He left here for Quebec on Thursday, to take passage in the steamer for England.

The Hon. Surveyor General who was unwell for the past week, we are pleased to notice has recovered from the severe attack of quinsy, and was in town on Saturday last.

The President and Directors of the Grand Southern Railway, held a meeting on Friday last to make arrangements with Col. Mayo, agent of the United States contractors. They intend to push on the work without delay.

The Hon. A. H. Gillmor was here yesterday. The Surveyor General left by train for St. John on Monday.

T. E. Grinden, Esq., of St. John, is in town.

OUTRAGE.—Mr. J. Walter Scammell while leaving his office, Smyth street, St. John, on Saturday night, was struck down by a ruffian, who made his escape. Mr. Scammell called out "murder," and his brother ran out of the office, and lifted him up from the sidewalk, and had him conveyed to a doctor's, who dressed his wounds—a cut on the back of the head, and the end of the middle finger of the left hand missing. We are happy to learn that Mr. Scammell's recovery is believed to be certain, but it will be some days before he can leave his house. The greatest indignation was felt by the citizens, at the outrageous assault. A reward of $500 is offered for the apprehension of the would be murderer.

The weather though fair is still cold, and a moderate rain would be of infinite service to prepare the ground for agricultural labor.

It is reported that coal has been discovered at Perry, a specimen has been examined by the State assayer of Massachusetts, proved to be good bituminous coal.

GRADING.—The Schools are being graded the present week, and the changes which are being made, give evidence of marked progress during the past term.

Spectator's letter received too late for insertion to-day; he will please call at the office; it would be just as well to publish his real name, as some people are stupid enough to visit their wrath on publishers, for the charges of correspondence.

LONDON, April 26.
The steamer "St. Lawrence" left Portsmouth on Saturday, with troops for Halifax.

Moody and Sankey's meetings were well attended on Sunday. Mr. Gladstone and Lord Kinnaird were present. William Selwyn, D. D., chaplain to the Queen, aged 63, and Henry Pickersgill, portrait painter, aged 94 are dead.

NEW YORK April 26.
Eight more deck hands are returned as lost on the steamer "Bodman," burned at New Orleans, and four more on the "Ex-Porte"; several deck hands are yet missing.

More Mexican outrages in Texas are reported. The American investigating expedition has been attacked and compelled to retire. Gold 115 1/2 @ 115 1/2.

Messrs. Dawson Bros., Montreal, have published an address by Edward Jenkins, Esq., M. P., the Agent General for Canada, to the Manchester Reform Club. It is entitled "The Great Dominion," and forms a very useful and timely contribution to the historical and statistical literature bearing upon Canada of to-day. It is a pamphlet covering 30 pages, and presents in brief, concise, yet sufficiently comprehensive terms those general points calculated to convey a correct estimate of the extent, resources, trade, growth and prospects of the Dominion as a whole and the Provinces forming it, the position, peculiarities and productions of which are given in order. This address will not only promote a happier appreciation of the Dominion by Englishmen and others abroad, but will, no doubt, where read, as it should be extensively in Canada, enlarge the views of our own people respecting the real claims of the country to their respect and admiration.

It is said that the wife of a very poor man in Brattleboro, Mass., having presented him with four babies at a birth, he took advantage of the fact, rather disheartening circumstance, opened a show, and the babies have become a source of a handsome revenue to him. This is a hint to any of our readers who should happen to become similarly blessed.—Sentinel.

The old amusement of holding spelling matches has been revived in the States, and has reached this Province. It is adopted for the purpose of raising funds for benevolent objects.

WANTED.—Information of THOMAS GEORGE, who resided at Chamcook about 36 years ago, and is supposed to have removed to Richibucto, or perhaps Nova Scotia. By communicating with the Editor of this paper (St. Andrews Standard), he will hear of something to his advantage.

If ELIJAH HAMMON, a native of Ashburton, England, who worked in St. Andrews nearly forty years ago, will send his address to the STANDARD Office, he will receive information of interest to him.

Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.
PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE, THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA, ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A MAGNIFICENT CONCEPTION, WONDERFULLY CARRIED OUT."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the end of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume can not duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interposition of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.
Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in all colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

'MAN'S UNSELFISH FRIEND'
will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pictures, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of Vinegar Bitters?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative, as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

If men will enjoy good health, let them use VINEGAR BITTERS as a medicine, and avoid the use of alcoholic stimulants in every form.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poisons or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the Bitters equal to Dr. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the off-branches of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiating Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blisters, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scars, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Jaundice.—In all cases of jaundice, rest assured that your liver is not doing its work. The only sensible treatment is to promote the secretion of the bile and favor its removal. For this purpose use VINEGAR BITTERS.

Cleanse the Vitiating Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.
