PARENTS ARE MUCH CONCERNED

Those Who Saw Him Last Can Give No Indication as to His Whereabouts.

Toronto, Aug. 14.-Nothing was learned yesterday which could throw any light on the mystery surrounding disappearance of Arnott White. His parents are as greatly concerned as ever with regard to him, and are in no better position to understand his behavior. David L. White, father of the missing lad, said he had made diligent in-quiries about him during the day, with no result. It had been supposed that Arnott had taken a train for Chicago or some other point in the west, and that he had made use of his father's name in "working his way." Mr. White asked the conductors running trains to the west, as well as those for the east, whether they had seen or heard anything of the young man, and an answer in the negative was returned in each case. A similar question was put to the captain of one of the Niagara steamers, on which Arnott White had traveled a few weeks ago, but nothing had been seen of him there during the past couple of days. Mr. White was unable to offer any opinion as to what had become of his son.

WHITE'S CHUMS. Arnott's chums were two boys, Albert Fiegehen, who lives on Augusta avenue, and Archie Clark, living on Baldwin street. The former works at the Gurney foundry, while the latter is employed by A. A. Allan & Co. To these boys he was likely to confide any plans he might have made regarding a change of employment. These lads called to see Mr. White last evening, and he implored them to tell anything they knew which would furnish a clue to Arnott's whereabouts. They declared emphatically that he had never said anything to them about going away, nor had they any idea as to where or why he had gone. WHITE DISSATISFIED. Mr. White said that Arnott occasionally discussed at his home the happenings at the Evans warehouse, but he never gave the impression that he thought himself suspected. He had not concealed his dissatisfaction with the circumstances surrounding his employment, but he had never attrihension of suspicion against himself, a few of them were wounded. It had been reported that he had mentioned this suspicion to a fellow-workman at the warehouse, but the father holds that this could not be true. if disclosing such opinions to anyone which has a strong fort and other dein the Evans establishment.

WELL THOUGHT OF. Arnott White was highly regarded at the Evans warehouse, and all those above him there have ridiculed any idea of suspicion against him. They say that his work was satisfactory in every way, and that he gave every evidence of a desire to please his superiors and to make progress. He was doing fairly well, considering his age, and there was nothing against

A police officer who has watched the case closely was asked if the authorities wanted young. White in connection with the Evans mysteries. "No," he replied, "we do not want him. His people have not asked us to look for him, and we have no other reason for instituting a search. Nothing that has been learned regarding the happenings at the warehouse would permit of suspicion being directed against anyone. It has not been shown that any crime was committed in connection with the death of Geen and Whalley, and consequently there is no cause for the police to want THE TALK OF POISON. Charles Doherty, the head shipper at the Evans place of business, was ask-ed about the statement which White made to him on Monday evening with reference to poison. He declined to discuss the subject, and said he was not in a position to make any statement. He would not deny that White had used the words, and declared that at the proper time he would tell what he knew. Doherty, White and Alfred W. Gilbart left the warehouse together on Monday evening, and walked to the corner of King and Yonge streets. There Doherty boarded a car for King street east, while Gilbart went west. They left White standing on the corner, and as they moved away from him he used the words referring to the Disturbances in France Still Continue.

BARRICADING THE

Thirteen Remain Unclosed in One District-Troops Asked For to Enforce Law.

Brest, France, Aug.13.-Soluiers have been requisitioned in several places in Finistere, during the past two or three days to protect police commissaries engaged in closing religious schools, from threatening crowds.

Thirteen schools belonging to White sisters remained unclosed in Finistere. A battalion of infantry and a strong body of mounted gendarmes are expected at St. Meen, Folgoet and Ploudaniel to overawe the excited population of those towns.

The inhabitants of Folgoet are engaged today in building walls of masonry behind the principal door of the church school.

At St. Meen scouts on horseback, bicycles and even on motorcycles, are on the lookout for the police. The peasants declare they will throw beehives among the gendarmes and will put beehives in the barricades. THE TOCSIN RUNG.

The expulsion of the sisters at Concarneou was undertaken today. Scouts on automobiles reached the town at 2 o'clock in the morning and reported that troops were on the way. The tocsin was rung, bugles were blown, and boys ran through the streets ringing hand bells. Large crowds gathered around the railroad station and around the schools: Several bodies of gendarmes and two companies of infantry arrived by a special train. The commissary ordered the school evacuated, at which the crowd shouted "Long live the sisters." The gendarmes advanced toward the general scrimmage followed. Later the troops reached the building and the police tried to break down the door-

Hair Health.

A thin head of hair makes you look five years older than you are. A bald spot gives the world a chance to credit you with ten years more than you've seen. Perhaps you are one of those people who regard dandruff only as an annoyance. It is that and more; it is a disease which in time is bound to make your hair thin. Don't wait until your hair actually begins to feel thin. Use Oriental Rum and Quinine Hair Tonic now; use it regularly. It will keep the hair healthy. It cleans the scalp and stimulates hair growth.

THE GAYNOR-GREEN CASE

Warrant for Their Arrest Was Defective.

Alleged Crime Not Included in Treaty When Committed.

Quebec, Aug. 14 .- Col. John F. Gaynor and Capt. Benjamin D. Greene scored a decisive victory yesterday in their fight against extradition to the United States, where they are wanted in connection with alleged frauds in harbor work for the federal government, involving millions of dollars. NEW PROCEEDINGS. It is understood that the United States Government will institute new proceedings for extradition, but up to a late hour no steps had been taken by counsel representing the Washington authorities. Judge Caron, who spoke in French, occupied about two hours in delivering his judgment. In reviewing the legal proceedings since the arrest of the two prisoners he pointed out that their counsel had raised an important quesfixing of seals to certain nuns' schools | tion to the effect that the warrant issued by Magistrate Lafontaine was illegal on the ground that it did not contain the date nor the year in which the alleged offense had been committed. He could not presume when the offense was committed and it may have been previous to the signing of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, and, if so, the accused could not be held, as the treaties had no retroactive effect. NOT IN THE TREATY. According to a deposition made in Montreal by Mr. Erwin, counsel for the United States in May last, continued Judge Caron, the accused were charged with fraud committed on or about Jan. 1, 1897. That crime was not included in the treaties and that of receiving money under false pretenses was only included in the treaty of 1900. This was fatal to the prosecution and the warrant issued by Judge Lafontaine was defective as the offense included therein did not fall under the extradition treaty, consequently the arrest was illegal and the accused must be set at liberty.

Literary Notes.

Cromwell Childe, editor of "Trolley Exploring," has just issued a companion to that little work called 'Water Exploring," published by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. It is, as its title page pronounces it, a "guide to pleasant steamboat trips everywhere," and contains most useful information regarding water trips of every description, from ferryboat excursions round New York to towns up the St. Lawrence and great lakes. The little book is published for the merely nominal price of 10 cents, and besides being prettily illustrated, contains really valuable information about fares, rates for meals and berths, time the boats leave and arrive, and the time consumed in making the trip. Altogether it is a book which no one contemplating a water trip should be with-

LONDONER FOR GRAND MASTER

Officers Chosen by the Grand Encampment and the Rebekah Asambly The Order Grows.

Toronto, Aug. 13 .-- About 500 members of the I. O. O. F., gathered today at Victoria Hall for the 48th annual session of the Grand Lodge of Ontario. Grand Master C. C. Lyman presided. Grand Master John R. Keilas, of the New York jurisdiction, was introduced. Three hundred new representatives were given the Grand Lodge degree. An invitation was re- The Old-Time Prophecy Virtually ceived from Hamilton to meet there next year. Ald. Ward and Oliver extended a welcome on the part of the city of Toronto.

THE ORDER GROWS. The grand master reported a creditable increase in membership. During the year there were started five subordinate and three Rebekah degree lodges. During the term just ended there were initiated 1,195, while the suspensions for non-payment of dues were 519. After deducting losses from withdrawals and deaths, it shows a net increase for the last six months of 586, and the total membership on the 30th of June, 1902, to be 26,252. This does not include the membership of the two lodges instituted during July. Several places are about ready for the institution of a lodge, and he recommended the advisability of pushing the work in these localities-Lyndhurst, Lakefield, Cobden, Sturgeon Falls and

The grand master also strongly recommended the Oddfellows' Relief Association to brothers desiring cheap assessment insurance.

LIFELESS LODGES.

Under the heading of "Lifeless Lodges," the grand master called attention to Acton Lodge, No. 204, Acton; Livingston, No. 130, Thorold, and Freestone, No. 215, Beamsville. In the case of Livingston Lodge, the grand master was of opinion that the transfer of lodges in New Ontario to Manitoba jurisdiction could not be legally made owing to the present insurance law in force in Ontario. He declined to comply with request of the National Oddfellows' Sanitarium of Florida, for permission to solicit aid in the Ontario jurisdiction, in view of the efforts to establish an Oddfellows' home and orphanage in Ontario.

The grand secretary reported 291 lodges, all except half a dozen active. The total expenditure for sick benefits, relief of widows and orphans, funeral benefits, and special relief for the past 45 years amounts to the sum of $2,-690,589. During the year ending Dec. 31, 1901, 3,052 brothers received sick benefits, amounting to $53,187.

lodges for the year shows receipts from all sources to have been $259,-211. During the year the payments $10,073, or $6,000 less than last year. R. K. COWAN.

It may be regarded as certain that R. K. Cowan, London, will be the grand master, and J. B. Turner, B.A. of Hamilton, the deputy grand master. The Oddfellows' Home fund reported that the subscriptic s paid in and promised amount to 16,376. No site has been finally decided upon, but it is expected that it will be placed in the Niagara fruit district. It is expected that a site will be furnished

The advisory committee of the Odd-'ellows' Relief Association, of Kingston, reported a membership of 14,159. Deaths and disability claims paid were $100,750, or $6,000 less than last year. The revenue from all sources $184,612, and the expenditure $130,927, leaving a surplus of $53,685. An invitation was received from Hamilton to hold the next annual session in that city. GRAND ENCAMPMENT.

Verified in Many Localities.

New York, Aug. 14.—It did rain in New York on St. Swithin's Day, July 15, and ever since then we have had a little sprinkle every day. It looks as if the 40-day prophecy will come true and confirm the old rhyme:

St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain For forty days it will remain; St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair For forty days 'twill rain na mair.

The truth contained in those lines have been proved many a time, this summer one hears more than one disgruntled mortal asking who St. Swithin was and what was the origin of the tradition. In his day, which was nigh a thousand years ago, he was famed for his piety and humility. He was bishop of Winchester and chief friend of his King, as well as the tutor to the heir to the throne. He assumed no pomp and made his journeys on foot, and at his table the poor and not the rich were his guests. On July 15, 971, the saint's body was taken up from its original resting place and laid within the precincts of the church at Winchester. Miracles marked the event, and the church was so crowded with the sick that entry could hardly be had. One old writer tells of 200 cures within ten days. A feasible explanation of the rain is that on the day of the removal of his body the saint marked his displeasure toward those who disturbed his remains by invoking torrents of rain.

TYPHOID FEVER IN CHICAGO

Ten Hospitals Report 493 Patients-Unprecedented Situation.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—In ten hospitals the actual number of typhoid fever cases on Tuesday reached a total of 493. In most of them the number is without precedent, and a majority of the cases have been received within the last week or ten days. From these figures it is estimated that the total number of typhoid cases in the city is between 1,000 and 2,000.

The abstract from the returns of intendent George Sawyer, of the Chicago Baptist Hospital, said, "and the remainded by the company of the Chicago Baptist Hospital, said, "and the company of the cause of the recent strange events."

CRIME IN CANADA

Decrease in the Number of Cases.

Ottawa, Aug. 14.- The annual report of the criminal statistics for the year ending Sept. 30, 1901, has just been prepared by the Dominion statistician for publication and distribution. The number of charges for indictable offenses was 128 less than in 1900. The convictions in 1901 numbered 5,638 or crease in the percentage of convictions to charges which indicates less care in bringing charges or less care in investigation. In 1901 there were 2,532 acquittals, compared with 2,576 in 1900. There is a slight increase in the detentions for lunacy, which agree with the findings of the last census. There has been a decrease in Canada as a whole in the number of convictions, compared with the population. This is due to decrease of crime to population in New Brunswick, Manitoba, Ontario, Yukon and British Columbia. Territories show considerable increase. while Nova Scotia and Quebec a small increase.

The decrease in the Yukon is from 85 to 14 per cent, showing that the reign of law is well established there. Crime among the agricultural, commercial and domestic classes has decreased. It has increased among the industrial classes, while the professional and laboring classes show decreases. The proportion of females among the criminal classes is steadily decreasing. Those who gave their re-ligious views as Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists or Roman Catholics, are fewer in number than their proportion in the whole population warrants, while Anglicans are larger. There was an increase of 1.7 per cent of summary convictions as compared with 1906.

ARNOTT WHITE IS MISSING

Last Man Seen With Whatle, Has Not Shown Up Since Monday-Spoke of Poison.

Toronto, Aug. 13 .- A fifth has been added to the chain of mysterious occurrences centering at the Evans warehouse. Arnott White, who was the assistant of Whalley, the shipper, found dead in the basement of the warehouse on July 19, has been missing since Monday evening. He worked as usual on Monday, and left a few minutes after 6 o'clock. Two of his fenow-employes walked up town with him and saw him board a car at King and Yonge streets.

Doherty, however, says he paid little attention to the statement at the time, thinking White was simply joking. White's parents, who live at 34 Carlyle street, have heard nothing of their son since he left the house on Monday norning. The father, David L. White is a conductor on the Grand Trunk Railway. The distracted mother, when seen last night, said Arnott had not even hinted that he intended leaving the city, but she and the rest of the family thought it possible that he might have gone to Chicago, thinking ex-Manager Ragg, who went there recently, and of whom Arnott was a great admirer, might give him a job. That he should go without saying anything at home about it she could not understand, unless it was that he feared they would object to his going.

On Monday morning, while he was at the breakfast table, Mrs. White said she had gone upstairs, remarking to him that she would be down in a min-son had expressed some dissatisfaction at not receiving his pay on Saturday on account of it being a bank holiday, but as a matter of fact White got his pay on Friday evening. Foreman Scott stated this emphatically when seen last evening. He had been authorized by Manager Spencer to make this suspected by the firm as having any thing to do with the burglary or any the warehouse.

Arnott White was the last man seen with Whalley before his death. In giving his evidence at the inquest first stated that he had left Whalley and another employe, Gilbart, in basement, washing their hands. Later Gilbart swore that when he and White were leaving the basement together, White turned back and went downstairs again. White, recalled, said the 130 less than in 1900. White was cross-questioned at some length as to the time he last saw Whalley. He asserted positively it was 1:20, although another employe swore White had told him it was 1:36 It was White, too, who made the statement that Geen, about 9 o'clock on the morning of the day he was found dead in the warehouse, had said te him in a jocular manner, "By Jove, I believe I'm poisoned." White did not mention this at the inquest, although asked whether he knew of any circum-stance that might throw light on the case, and only admitted it later ex-Manager Ragg had in an interview mentioned that White had made such a statement to him. He explained that he had not mentioned it on the witness stand because he was not asked the question and did not attach much im-

LONDON, ONTARIO.

London, Thursday, August 14. The Tariff and the West. If the National Policy is still in force, as the Conservative press and party aver, why do they cry for tariff changes? The other day ex-Premier Greenway of Manitoba, in an interview, declared that the West would strongly oppose any increase in the duties. This statement was made the text for homilies in many Conservative papers on the selfishness of the West in objecting to being made a private preserve for eastern manufacturers. These papers remind the West that it has been opened up and developed at the expense of the East, which should now be indemnified by a monopoly of the western market. This is not a line of argument calculated to help the cause which it is intended to promote. Those who use it give their hand away by openly confessing that the object of a higher tariff is to enable the East to take heavier toll of the western farmers. Is this the way to reason the West into submission to an increase of the at the dictation of any particular portion of the country, or should the coun-

duties? Should the tariff be framed try as a whole be considered? Is it good public policy to try to array one section of the Dominion against the other? Are the interests of the East and those of the West antagonistic? These attacks on the West are not happily timed. The new settlers pouring into that country will naturally take their color on political questions from their neighbors, and a campaign in the East for higher protection with the avowed purpose of exploiting western consumers will not make for national unity, and will strongly confirm the West in its present attitude toward the tariff. The a summer resort this season. purchasing capacity of Manitoba and the Territories, owing to the influx of well-to-do settlers, is expanding rapid-The newcomers will buy implements, boots and shoes, clothing, furniture, household utensils, and other goods, and some of this trade will inevitably go to the United States, as the American settlers have been used to certain lines of manufacture, and custom is not readily broken off. It is in the interests of the Dominion that the conditions of life shall be made as easy as possible for these desirable citizens. They will be keen to compare prices, and it will create intense dissatisfaction and retard the progress of the Northwest if they find that it is a dearer country to live in than the one they have left. The Canadian manufacturers have a fair margin of protection-more than the West of its own accord would give them-and their wisest plan will be not to agitate for an increase of the tariff, which will unite the West solidly against them, but to make a vigorous effort to introduce Canadian goods and adapt these to the wants of the new population. This is the advice tendered by those who have studied the situation at first hand. There is no doubt that Canadian enterprise and self-reliance will be equal to the opportunity. Meanwhile the manufacturers of this country are enjoying an unparalleled prosperity, and they must admit that a favoring gale from the West has helped to fill their sails. It is reported that several large implement firms in the United States will erect branch factories in the vicinity of Fort William in order to be in a better position to supply the growing demand on the Canadian side. One plant is now under construction. This shows that the present tariff is high enough to give the advantage to the Canadian maker. The growth of manufactures in Western Canada will no doubt modify in time its position on the tariff We want no "solid" West "solid" East in this country, corto the "solid" South in the United States. On Monday last the London and Northwestern Railway Company's express made the trip from Birmingham to London, 115 miles, in 113 minutes. A cable dispatch says this beats all English records for that distance. The Pall Mall Gazette, in a review of railway feats during the past year, calls

One train on the east coast makes the run from Darlington to York, 41% miles, in 43 minutes, or at the rate of 61.7 miles per hour, having reduced the time by 2 minutes since the previous

A new record is made also on the Midland route, between Appleby and Carlisle. The distance of 30% miles is covered in 30 minutes, which is at the rate of 61.5 miles per hour.

On the west coast route to Scotland an express travels from Wigan to Wilesden, 1881/2 miles, without a stop, in hours and 41 minutes, the average rate being 51.1 miles an hour. This is said to be "the longest run by any Scotch express, the second longest run on the Northwestern system, and the third longest in the world."

Reference is made also to a new schedule on the Great Western, including "three down and one up non-stopping trains between Paddington and Birmingham, 1291/4 miles, in 2 hours and 20 minutes, speed 55.3." The writer of the article says that these trains are keeping splendid time, and that with an exceptionally heavy train he has reached Leamington, 106 miles, in 110 minutes, and Birmingham in 2 hours and 17 minutes.

For many years the competing roads have had fast trains between London and Edinburgh, and there was an agreement between them to keep the me at 81/2 hours with three stops. It was reduced, however, to 81/4 hours, and it appears that during the present ourist season there has been a further cut to 7% hours. The distance is about 400 miles, the rate about 51

The Chicago Tribune points out that the fastest long-distance train in the world is the Sud express, which goes from Paris to Bayonne, 4861/2 miles. n 8 hours and 59 minutes. This is at the rate of 54.13 miles per hour, and ncludes six stops. In the United States the Empire State express on the New York Central runs from New York to Buffalo, 440 miles, in 8 hours and 15 ninutes, a rate of 53.33, including four stops. During the summer season the Philadelphia and Reading has a train with the following remarkable schedule for a shorter distance: Camden to Atlantic City, 55.5 miles, in 44% to 48% minutes; average daily speed, 71.2 miles

Mr. Mulock, with his usual vigor and promptness, has already contracted for regular steamship service between Canada and South Africa, winter and summer. The first sailing will be from Montreal in October. There should be good opening for Canadian goods in South Africa, and our manufacturers have arranged for the first cargo. What South Africa can offer Canada, that is not already produced here, is not so evident. We don't expect return cargoes of gold and diamonds.

Dr. G. R. Parkin, principal of Upper Canada College, has been selected by the trustees of Cecil Rhodes' estate to prepare a scheme to give effect to the provisions of the will, establishing colonial and American scholarships in Oxford University. Dr. Parkin is well fitted for the task by reason of his eminence as an educationist, and his mperial enthusiasm. He will be much better occupied in his new work than n lecturing Canadians on how they should run their own country.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday voted in favor of a scheme of preferential trade, provided the minimum tariff would "afford a protection to all Canadian producers." The same association also declared for an increase in the tariff. In other words, they ask for a preference in the British market and an increase of the present duties on British goods entering Canada. When John Bull gets this offer he will shed tears of joy and gratitude.

The corn crop in the United States will reach the enormous total of 2,-561.490.000 bushels. This will be good news for the Canadian farmer who wants his corn at the lowest price to feed it to the hogs and cattle, and convert it into prime pork and beef. Corn is as much his raw material as pigiron is to the manufacturer. Argentine Railways.

The railway system of Argentine is second to none in the world. Trains run at frequent intervals and punctually, especially the long distance trains. The lling stock is excellent, and a long listance journey by rail is a luxury The sleeping cars are sumptuously apponted, the permanent ways are well id, and there is consequently very ittle jolting. It is possible to breakfast or dine in the trains, as comfortably as in a hotel. The dining-cars are fitted up and beautifully decorated with flowers and pot plants. The food is roperly cooked and tastefully served any hour of the day or night, and, bove all, the charges are extraordinarily low. A dinner of six courses, with coffee and dessert, on the cars of the Great Southern Railway, costs only wo paper dollars, or four shillings on an average, and the food could not be better in any way. Fares, too, are very low, so that traveling is an easy

Suicide in Armies.

The suicide rate in European armies far exceeds the rate of the country to which the army belongs. The German army has a suicide rate of 670 per million; the Italian army, 400; the Belgic, the English, 230; the Spanish, 140. The English-Indian rate is due to the epressed and suspicional states produced by moist heat. The suicide rate of the French army of the interior fell rom 470 under the empire to 290 under he republic. The African army of France has a rate of 630 per million, probably from causes similar to those affecting the English-Indian army. Monadnock building, Saturday, was held to the grand jury yesterday by the coroner's jury. No charge was made against Stebbings, but the jury recommended that the grand jury investigate the killing. Stebbings estified on his own behalf at the inquest that at no time during the time Scott was striking and kicking him did he knowingly stab him. Just before he called upon Scott he received a letter, which he was opening with a paper knife when he went into Scott's office. Stebbings said he was in a dazed condition from Scott's attack, and he struck at him, but did not know he used the knife. Miss Myrtle Shumate, Scott's stenographer, testified practically to the same story.

Sunday Observance at Sarnia.

Sarnia, Aug. 14.-Recently the Port Huron Ferry Company set aside the steamer Conger to ply on the St. Clair River afternoons and evenings, stopping at Sarnia and several Port Huron docks, and making a feature of a ride for as long as the patrons desired to remain on the boat. The service The Tourist-You can see out of one was extended to Sundays. This grated on the religious scruples of some of the citizens of Sarnia. Complaint was made to the police magistrate, and a criminal charge was preferred, the contention being that the boat was not engaged in ferrying, but that the "Captain," said the cabin boy, "is a intermediate riding feature made it thing lost when you know where it is?" an excursion affair. The case has "No, you fool," answered the captain, been tried and decision for the present reserved. The agitation for the enforcement of the Sunday observance law in Sarnia has been extended to cover the sale and distribution of Detroit Sunday newspapers, and now newsboys are all barred from doing business on the streets on Sunday mornings.

New York's Supply Is Practically Exhausted-Stocks Are Low All Round.

Chicago, Aug. 14.-Chicago's stock of anthracite coal is running low on account of the miners' strike. Leading dealers today expressed the opinion for all domestic purposes. They said that, even if the strike should be settled by Sept. 1, the new coal would not be received in large quantities before Christmas, so that at least a temporary use of soft coal is extremely probable.

The present cost of anthracite to the retailer in carload lots is $6 15 a ton, to which is added $1 to the consumer. A substantial advance in prices is predicted for September. LOOPING THE LOOP

ON A BICYCLE

A Big Feature Engaged for the Toronto Exposition in September.

Hardy Downing, the professional bicycle rider, of San Jose, Cal., has accomplished the seemingly impossible. In defiance of the laws of gravity, like a fly creeping over the ceiling, he loops the loop on a bicycle, clinging to the track by his own velocity, his flying feet pointing towards the skies and his head downward. The act is without doubt the most dangerous ever attempted on a bicycle. Similar attempts have been country, but the rider was in every case more or less guarded from acciturned from a visit to Miss McDonald, dent by the construction of the track. with a loop in the center perpendicular to the ground. The loop is built of wood, and the track is one foot in width for the entire distance. The track occupies the ground length of 250 feet, and from a height of 50 feet the intrepid rider comes down a run of 150 feet at the rate of 80 miles an hour. Then he strikes the loop 94 feet in circumference, the diameter of which he describes at the rate of a mile in 45 seconds. The whole thing is almost over before the amazed spectator has a chance to take a breath.

COUNTRY CALLS IN THE STATE OF THE

It was sad to see the hospitable villa dismantled and put up for sale; irritating to behold carpets hanging out at window, and mirrors with great spots of whitewash in their centers, and dirty men walking about, examining, appraising, and making themselves completely at home. It was aggravating to see the hospitable owner's choice wines offered for sale and bought up, though at inordinate prices, by Sterling Brothers, who never gave dinner-parties, and old Plumber, who drank nothing but weak brandy-and-water. Above all, it was conducive to wrath and suggestive of profane swearing to watch heavy boots trampling the borders of Bella's neat flower-garden, and grimy hands pulling the wire-fencing about to test its substance before bidding for it at so much per foot. To one spectator who had arriver early and on horseback these offences against good manners appeared particularly displeasing. Several lots were, however, knocked down to this energetic cavailer. The portrait of the late Mrs. Jones, which excited but little competition, was purchased by him for a sum by no means complimentary to the artist who painted that work, or the charms of the lady it represented; but on the other hand, a cottage pianoforte which stood in the boudoir fell to him after a brisk contest at the somwhat unreasonable price of fifty-five guineas. It soon became apparent, however, that this purchaser was determmed to possess himself of any article for which he had once mide an offer, and this act ascertained, he was permitted to secure sundry trifles at not much more than twice their real value. The only exceptance to this forebearance was in the case of the partot, for which desirable bird an old lady from St. John's Wood betrayed so morbid a longing as nothing but her antgonist's complete indifference to price was able to overcome. When the cage and its lively contents were eventually knocked down to his lordship for seventeen to overcome. When the cage and its lively contents were eventually knocked down to his lordship for seventeen guineas, the disappointed one suffered herself to be led away in a flood of

An unusual spectacle might have been, and indeed was remarked in the vicinity of the Regent's Park, after the sale was concluded. Judging from their gestures, it afforded intense gratification to that observant class, the London urchins, and consisted indeed of a mounted gallant proceeding at a hand-gallop in the direction of Baker street, with a huge gilt cage containing a gray parrot swinging on his arm.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

It was about this time I returned to London. I had not been twenty-four hours in town before I sought tidings of my boy. I shall not soon forget the dismay with which I received intelligence that he was lying dangerously ill of a brain fever. I did not think any earthly communication could have made me so sick at heart again. Years ago, when every sunrise brought its fresh glad hopes, and every night its holy trustful calm, when the golden green was still on the summer leaves, and cre-the fragrance and the bloom had departs for ever from the flower, the sting of disappointment was in proportion to the exponents. ever from the flower, the sting of disap-pointment was in proportion to the ex-ulting thrill of hope. It was but fair then that a great sorrow should prostrate us in the dust, as a great joy lifted us high above the clouds into the dazzling heaven. But now, when we have retired from the contest, when we have heart no more to don our mail and plate, and leap into the saddle at the first trumpetleap into the saddle at the first trumpetsound—when that last wound that sent us reeling out of the press a maimed, disabled man for evermore, reminds us, reminds us as it reopens and bleeds afresh, how we are crushed and useless henceforth, we feel that we ought at least to have earned immunity from further pain—that if we rode into the
further pain—that if we rode into the melee again we should find the knights of today do not strike so hard or push so fiercely as those grim champlons with whom we held our own long ago; that even if the angry steel were to penetrate our defences, it would not bite so deep. even if the angry steel were to penetrate our defences, it would not bite so deep, nor leave so ken a smart as heretofore; pay, that if we have gitned nothing elst in our defeat, it has at least made it impossible that we should ever feel so bruised and sore again.

I did not think. I say, that any earthly tidings could have affected me so as did this intelligence of Gilbert's dangerous. illness. From his friends I learned but with difficulty the apparent cause of his malady.
Continual dissipation, obviously without the slightest enjoyment, violent exercise, taken with the sole object of exhausting the frame to the utmost, deep drinking at all hours, alone or in com-pany, equally divested of all ideas of merriment and good fellowship, with the frequent use of laudanum to steady the shaking hand and close the sleepless eye. would have shattered a stronger frame and broken a healthier constitution than was ever possessed by any of the Ormes; and I think a description of one of Gilbert's days, as I gathered it in conversation with Holyhead and others of his intimate friends, would at once account for the state in which I found him on my arrival in London. He was an early riser, they said, though at this time, as long as he could persuade anyone to sit up with him, nothing would induce him to go to bed, and was riding or walking at a rapid pace about the parks long ere any of his companions were astir. From his morning excursions he would come in heated and excited to write a already making rapid inroads on the fine fortune of the heir of West Acres. Bu, one redeeming point, and only one, way remarkable in these unbridled excesses. one redeeming point, and only one, way remarkable in these unbridled excesses.

The other sex were rigidly excluded. The last words came very weak, and in broken, inarticulate syllables; and they were still dying on his lips as he sank back, apparently insensible.

Much alarmed, I summoned his servant, to dispatch him at once for the clation, connected with those that were fairer portion of the assemblage, whicing, as it seemed, from some painful association connected with those that were softest and brightest and most lovable. But he shuddered at the bare mention of a woman's actual degradation, and though Clitus had been sure of a welcome to the feast for the very extravagance of his potations, Phyrne must have unveiled her lyory charms elegathere. unveiled her Ivory charms elsewhere. Soon, when Orme's name was mention ed, people began to nod and whisper and shrug their shoulders. Although suilt-less of being drunk with wine, the vacant stare betrayed at times that he was stupefied with laudanum. His absent restless manners, his unusual hours and strange, variable conduct, now moody and morose, and anon breaking forth into frantic bursts of gayety denoted a state of mind little removed from insantive and are long it became. ity, and ere long it began to be hinted that Orme was mad. "Very queer." panple said, touching their foreheads, and ple said, touching their forcheads, and smiling quietly, as though there were something irresistibly ludicrous in the subversion of a human intellect. "Gets it from his father. Was in confinement months before the died. Take five to two, this one is shut up in a fortnight." Holyhead used to get very angry, but he, too, could not help feling alarmed about his friend. At last the blow fell—the blow that everybody but the sufferer had been daily expecting. At a large-dinner-party of boon companions Gilbert painful in the levity with which this dispensation of Providence, and that other awful judgment, suicide, are discussed among mankind. Who can calculate the horrors that haunt the wavering mind, the doubts and fancies that distract the quivering nerves, ere the twilight closes in utter darkness, and the morbid imaginative temperament settles into confirmed madness? Who can tell the agony that must be endured, the bitter consciousness of complete desolation, the despairing glances here and there for a gleam of hope or a chance of escape, before the suiferer takes his fatal plunge, in the conviction that any lot must be preferable to that which he can endure no longer? And yet, while men pity the loss of worldly fortune, or the maiming of a limb, or the failure of a cherished scheme, they can deem the maniac an object rather of contempt than commisseration, and console themselves with the suggestion of "temporary insanity" as a cloak for the sufferings and the despair of the suiferings and the mann who walks about erect, with no mark of Cain upon his forehead, against whom, as earnestly as against the first murderer, "the voice of a brother's blood crieth from the ground."

Gilbert lay prostrate and insensible in his luxurious apartment, so out of keeping with thoughts of death or sickness. Indeed, he had no lack of friends now at his need. Many a smart carriage stopped at the door, many a fandy associate hoped good-humoredly that Gilbert would pull through; many a soft voice lisped its tender inquiries after Mr. Orme. Though they forgot him five minutes afterward, yet for the moment they were really interested in his welfare. He who expects more from his friends is likely to be disappointed. Better than this, Lady Gertrude, giving up all engagements and amusements, braving, moreover, the remarks and innuendoes of her equaintances, devoted herself unremitingly to the sick-chamber. Coming early and staying late, s attendance on his friend, and John Gordon, though he did not press his assistance when he found it was not required, made it understood that he was always ready if wanted. I, too, petitioned earnestly to take my turn with the others. They had not the cruelty to refuse me. There were but few left on earth to whom my heart still clung. I felt kindly and obstitches toward my fellow cree. whom my heart still clung. I felt kindly and charitably toward my fellow-creatures, as who does not that has known great sorrow? But there were scarcely one or two whose voices could still gladden me ever such a little, and one of those voices was my boy's. If it should be mute forever! Woe is me! the last green leaf of all must wither from the branch!

It is sad to hear it now; sad to endeavor to hush it in the loud ravings of delirium; sadder still to mark the low, hoarse whisper that tells so piteously of physical exhaustion. And it was sad, too, to see the gaunt, wasted frame, at which fever had been draining like a vampire for hours; the thin, shadowy hands, once so capable and strong—the hands that could wield the heaviest club, and stop the swiftest ball, and hold the hardest-pulling horse—alas! feeble as an infant's the swiftest ball, and hold the hardest-pulling horse—alas! feeble as an infant's now; the wan, sunken features, so sharp, yet so beautiful still; above all, those deep, cavernous eyes, that rolled and shone with the lurid light of madness, and seemed to glare upon a thousand things at once; how deep and bright and a wfully beautiful they were, as he lay there in the calm summer afternoons, and told of his spirit's wanderings with a power and eloquence that his weakness seemed to borrow from disease. How the glorious and the grotesque mingled seemed to borrow from disease. How the glorious and the grotesque mingled themselves in his ravings, as the feverwings bore him away, over land and sea, to the strange realms of fancy, which none have visited without a vague consciousness that in some stage of existence they have been there before. How the beautiful fictions of antiquity, the gods and goddesses and nymphs of the heathen mythology, were encircled and confused with fairies and kelpies and pixies, and all the store of Gothic superburst forth, wherein I recognized, how painfully, the aptitude of the willing pupil whom I had cherished from a child. How link after link of the mind's mysterious chain led him on as the thread guided the hero through the labyrinth of old into that other world of which, in our ignorance, we know the thread the course of t our ignorance, we know nothing save that it is populous and unfathomable and illimitable. One afternoon I was left illimitable. One afternoon I was left alone with the patient; a faint breeze laden with perfume from the mignonette in the windows stole into the chamber, and the distant roll of carriages in the streets smote monotonously on my ear. He had been quiet for some hours, and I began to hope that the sleep to which we all looked as the last chance of his recovery had come at last. I did not dare to move, lest I should disturb his repose; and as his face was turned to the wall, I could not ascertain whether he was really asleep or not. Worn out with anxiety and fatigue, I was getting drowsy myself, when a sudden movement in the bed made me turn round with a start to watch my charge. He was sitting upright, his hands clasped and his eyes fixed on vacancy with that expression which the fever-nurse knows so we all looked as the last chance of his

"How cold it is! How cold!" he muttered with a shiver that made my own flesh creep. "The blood was up to my knees, but I have forded the river at to go to bed, and was riding or walking at a rapid pace about the parks long ere any of his companions were astir From his morning excursions he would come in heated and excited to write a few necessary letters, and smoke generally without touching food. Toward the middle of the day he would have recourse to stimulants, and then play tennistic strackets, sence, or otherwise employ himself, for hours, in violent exertion, always with the same wild restless manner which was becoming habitual to him. Later in the day he would be again on horseback, sometimes joining his friends in the park, but oftener riding moody and solitary round the outskirts of London. Afterward dinners to which the most reckless and good-for-ribthing of his associates were invited, were succeeded by frantic orgies, in which noise and ribaldry, and excess reigned paramount. Perhaps he alone who was their chief promoter resisted the degrading tendency of these reunifons. Certainly for him the cup never held a Lethean draught; and he would on eccasion rise from a table at which all the others were more or less intoxicated, ard go into society with a steady step and reserved unfaltering eye. More often nights of deep play succeeded these evenlings of which he seemed utterly careless, were already making rapid inroads on the fine fortune of the heir of West Acres. Buof humble, hopeless homage, dropped her veil and walked soberly and sadly away. My poor Ada! that proud but loving heart must have been nearly breaking then. beautiful, my best beloved! it is not heaven if you are left. See! I turn back for you. Look at me—only one look. You used not to be so unkind! Speak to me, dear one. It is her voice: she is mine still, mine forever. I am saved now, saved and happy; so happy; nothing can hurt me now."

I run for the doctor. I sha'n't be five minutes."

And so, without further explanation, he pointed to the door of a dining-room on the ground floor and was gone.

Leaving Gilbert in a kind of stupor under the nurse's charge, and promising myself not to be away more than a few minutes, I entered the room indicated, and there found a lady seated near the window, in a state of the deepest distress and agitation. As she strove to rise, and sank back helpless in her chair, and strove to speak, but only gasped inarticulately with white lips and vacant eyes. I had some difficulty in recognizing the face I had known and loved from a child, the once blooming and beautiful Ada Latimer. Yes, I had loved that face for years, partly for its own sweet sake, more for its resemblance to one I shall never see again on earth—perhaps, God help me; that I shall not be permitted to meet in heaven. Strange that she should remind me of the lost one more than ever now! Poor Ada! she could not speak, but she grasped my hand, and looked in my face with an eager, wistful expression, that made my heart blook. dinner-party of boon companions Gilbert was attacked by brain fever and carried from the table raging with delirium.

The world, as we know, invariably adopts the least charitable conclusion.

Years before it had voted the father mad. because he dropped out of its circle, and shut himself up in a country house; now it was quite willing to be satisfied, without inquiry, of the insanity of the son.

There is something to me inexpressibly

"Any hape! What a despairing question! How often asked with blanched, faces and wild, imploring eyes, when the silver cord is frayed to the last fibre! How difficult to answer! How sad for the grave, kind doctof, on whose words the poor inquirer hangs as if he had the dispensation of life and death! How hard to tell the truth! How cruel to raise hopes to tell the truth! How cruel to raise hopes that shall crush the heart they shelter in their ruins! Any hope! I could not tell Ada there was none. I said: "He still lives. A change has come on within the last half-hour. It may be for the better."

Oh, the bright gleam that swept over her face for an instant like a glory, as she raised her thankful eyes to heaven. A moment afterward they filled with tears as she took my hand in both of hers, and urged me in imploring accents to install her as his nurse.

"I will be so quiet," she said, "so careful. He will never know it. Directly he is out of danger I will go away. Oh, do let me, I entreat you! I will do everything on earth they tell me."

I urged on her the necessity of keeping him quiet, the danger of the slightest agitation, and the general impossibility of such a proceeding. Also, as I was myself getting anxious about his state, I begged her to remain where she was for a few minutes, while I went upstairs to gather fresh tidings. She sat down, and waited patiently till I came back.

The crisis had indeed passed, and he was asleep—that sleep which the doctor said would save him if it came within a certain period. He was breathing heavily, and, best sign of all, a beaded moisture was standing on his forehead. The good

So it was. A load seemed taken from So it was. A load seemed taken from my heart, and, though I could scarcely tell why, I felt that he was rescued. I flew downstairs to Mrs. Latimer, and told her of the change that had taken place. It was not then, it was not till long afterward, when I had leisure to think over the events of that anxious time, I became aware that his delirium was at its crisis when she came into the house. I believe in my own mind that house. I believe in my own mind that his senses, preternaturally sharpened, caught the tones of her low whisper in the hall. I believe that even on the confines of life and death his spirit turned back, true and unchanged to the sound of the dear voice. I believe that even at the supreme moment her image filled the fever-maddened brain, and her influence soothed down the paroxysm and hushed it off to the slumber which saved his life.

Poor Ada! She bowed her head down till her cold forehead touched my hands, as she clasped them fervently in both her own. Then she looked up so beseechingly so tearfully. seechingly, so tearfully.
"May I not see him?" she said. "Only for one instant—only one look, and never,

I took her hand and led her to the door of Gilbert's chamber, entering softly on tiptoe, and with bated breath, lest we should wake the patient. He was lying perfectly relaxed and helpless, sunk in that profound sleep which is only produced by utter debility. I drew the nurse to the window, for I thought indeed no workel eyes should thought indeed no mortal eyes should look on that loving woman in her great agony. Have I lived, like many another, to forego the dearest hopes I cherished here on earth, and shall I not feel for those from whom the daylight hath departed for evermore-for whom henceforth the rush of streams and the song of birds and the laughter of children is no longer a carol from the heavens, but requiem for the dead? I could not succor nor comfort her. I heard the stifled sob, the low moan painfully repressed, and I held my breath and turned my eves degredly every ed my eyes doggedly away.

The rustle of her dress made me look up once more. She as leaving the room without a thought of anyone in it but him to whom she had bidden her silent farewell. At the door she turned, and, stooping down, pressed her lips against the threshold, and so with that last kiss

Have "eyes bigger than their stomachs," according to an old saying. They overeat themselves, and are tempted by all sorts of injurious and indigestible edibles. As a consequence the foundation of serious stomach trouble is often laid in childhood.

For children with "weak" digestion or whose stomachs are diseased, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery may be confidently recommended. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, so that the nourishment contained in food is perfectly assimilated and the puny child is built up by food into a condition of robust health.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains neither alcohol nor narcotics. Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Mrs. Ella Gardner, of Waterview, Middlesex Co., Va., writes: "My little daughter is enjoying splendid health, I am glad I found a doctor who could cure my child. Whenever she feels badly I give her Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she is soon all right. She took twelve bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' eight bottles of 'Pellets,' and one bottle of of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and she is well. We thank God for your medicine."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 3 one-cent stamps to pay expense of dustoms and mailing only.

Five rinks of bowlers from the London Club visited Stratford yesterday afternoon and played a close and exciting game with the club of that city. The Stratford men were victorious, but by such a narrow margin that the local men need not be at all ashamed of their defeat. All the London rinks save that skipped by Mr. J. S. McDougall were defeated. The London men report that they were right royally proved a counterfeit and was never contented by the bowlers of the formidable. The heat was a battle beentertained by the bowlers of the Classic City. The game was played on the fine new green and the Londoners were loud in their praise of the grounds and surroundings. Mr. Elliott made a suitable reply, and after a song by Reynolds, of Goderich, the day's proseedings came to a close. The visitors all speak very highly of their entertainment while here.

After a while she looked up and smiled—such a piteous, sad smilel—as she pressed my hand once more.

How often asked with blanched with blan New York, Aug. 13 .- The events of the grand circuit meeting at Brighton track today proved to be the most exciting to date. The attendance was large and speculation heavy. The first race, the 2:08 pace, was on the novelty plan, and Major Muscovite was a hot choice at 7 to 10 for the heat. The chestnut gelding Chestnut had the pole and started off at a merry pace to win, with Winfield Stratton and Major Muscovite close up. The fight all the way round was close, but Chestnut came away and won by two lengths. Spinx S. finished sixth. the second heat the Bishop was the choice and this time the talent made no mistake. Winfield Stratton led to the half when the favorite caught him. and with Tom Nolan, the trio shot down the stretch, the Bishop winning by two lengths, with Nolan second. Strange to say Spinx S. was a prohibitive favorite at one to four for the next heat, and as soon as he a flash, but was soon caught by Major Muscovite, and the pair went like a team to the seven furlongs pole, when Spinx S. came away and won by a length. The $5,000 Hiram Woodruff purse for the 2:20 trotting class was a most exciting race from start to finish. Before the first heat Dulce Cor sold at even money against the field. At the word Dulce Cor shot out and was at Wilque's saddle at the turn, with Chase at her wheel, and all lapped they passed the half and came into the stretch bunched. It was a close finish, Chase winning by half a length. Chase was made the choice at 100 to 65, and in another close and exciting battle he beat Wilque by a small margin, Chase was now a prohibitive choice, and he led to the top of the stretch, where he tired, and Wilque won by half a length. Much sympathy is being ex-pressed in this city for Capt. Chief of Police Williams last week received from Beaminster, Dorset, England, a letter making inquiry as to the fate of Henry Hamilton, otherwise known as St. Clair, the Englishin a buggy in this city on Feb. 28 of the present year. According to the letter, only vague rumors of Hamilton's fate had reached his old home there, and the writer of the letter, impelled by an interest in Hamilton's elatives and by the fact that the dead man was a brother Freemason, communicated with Chief Williams for the purpose of obtaining accurate and authentic information. The chief handed the letter to The Advertiser, and as a result copies of The Advertiser, covering two weeks, and conwere mailed at once. The papers are

Relatives of Unfortunate English now on the ocean, and within a few days Hamilton's wife, children and relatives will know to a certainty that their fears are realized. So far as this city is concerned, this probably finally removes from the sphere of Only Rumors of His Death Here public interest the case of the unfortunate Englishman. The letter received by Chief Williams is as follows: Brook Villa, Thortmoor,

Beamister, Dorset, Sir,-There is a persistent rumor in England that Henry Hamilton, the eldest son of Mr. John Hamilton (who has passed in Canada under the name of St. Clair), has died in Canada under tragic circumstances, i.e., found dead in a buggy early in March this year. I trust you will pardon a stranger writing to you to ask if there is really any truth in the report or not. I have already written to Mr. Cox. proprietor of the Dominion Hotel, man who died suddenly while driving London, Ont., but have not had a word in reply. I and others also are very anxious to know if he is dead, also how he died, and if suddenly, the verdict of the jury, etc. I am very interested in the matter on account of his lawful wife and the children of the marriage, also because he was a Freemason, his mother lodge being in Plymouth. I sincerely hope there is no truth in the rumor, but as I live in an out-of-the-way part of the world, and miles from a station, this is the only way I know of arriving at the truth in the matter, and fervently hope my anxiety will be considered by you an apology for troubling you. I taining full accounts of Hamilton's should be glad of any newspaper redeath and burial, and the coroner's ports regarding his death. Yours inquest, which investigated the case, obediently.

Regent and Waterloo streets. The de-The following item from the Toronto putation claimed that the vicinity of the corner where the light formerly stood is among the most dangerous in the city, the road being rough and the ditching deep. For a distance of three of four blocks there are no lights, and, to make it worse, no sidewalks. "Those people might just as well live in the country for all the benefit they derive from the city," an official remarked. Messrs. Robert Fraser and Joseph Connors spoke for the citizens who have a kick coming. In emphatic tones they asked for what reason the light had been taken away. The streets were in bad shape, and in winter-time were impassable for heavily-laden ve hicles. "We cannot see our way clear to do anything for you,"said Chairman Winnett. "The light was moved to where it is now for the reason that the spot is particularly dangerous, and because of the ravine which runs along Wellington street near Regent." The committee, however, recognized the justice of the deputation's contention, and promised to reconsider the matter.

"Next year's committee had better put a good item in their estimates for lighting," said Ald. McMechan. Chief Roe, on behalf of the city firemen, reported that the plan proposing a benevolent association for men of the brigade had been discussed by the men. While they appeared willing to form such a society, they would like a little more time to inquire into the system, which was in vogue elsewhere. The chief had written to other cities where such organizations are in existence to ascertain the degree of success which they had met with. The committee ,decided to progress, and the matter was laid over till next meeting. The contract for wiring the three fire halls and the big chandelier in the city hall was awarded to the Electrical Construction Company at $133, which was the lowest figure submitted. R. D. HAIR-RAISING CYCLE WHIRL Thrilling Parachute Drop, Champion Zouave Drill and Many Other Good Acts.

When the Western Fair opens its gates this year, those attending it will be assured of enjoying perhaps the finest exhibition of the many successful ones which stand to the credit of London and the fair board. Entries and applications for space have been pouring in, until it seems probable that even the generous space at the disposal of the exhibitors will be exhausted. Many improvements and alterations are being made to the grounds and buildings, and the park never looked Each package contains one and a half more attractive than it will next month. In no department will there be more improvement over former years than in the amusements, which are provided each afternoon in front of grand stand, for the delectation of the thousands who annually make a Mecca of the Western Fair. Secretary Nelles promises that in point of novelty and leasing quality, this year's programme will eclipse by far any ever offered here before.

The three leading attractions booked are guaranteed to lead the world in their respective lines. Probably the most sensational act ever seen in this city will be witnessed in the cycle whirl, performed by the famous troupe organized by Tom Eck, whose name has been for years a familiar one in connection with the bicycle world. Unike the cycle whirl recently seen here, the bicycles will be driven by motor power instead of by the riders themselves, adding immeasurably to the dangerous and thrilling nature of the exhibition. The track upon which the five bicyclists perform at once is virtually a perpendicular one, being 181/2 feet in diameter at the bottom and 21 at the top. The enormous centrifugal force generated as the riders whirl around at a speed of 30 miles an hour keeps them in a literally horizontal position. One of the riders is Miss Lottie Brandon, champion short and long distance rider of the world, who holds the mile record of 1:46. Miss Brandon last week went after the female record for an hour's riding, and got it. She covered over 33 miles in the minutes, more than eight miles better than the previous mark. Other members of the company are Stone and Judge, famous racers, and Armstrong, a daring and clever trick rider.

Another big attraction will be the mail show what men think of their generosity:

"Dear Sirs,—Please accept my sincere thanks for yours of recent date. I have given your treatment a thorough test, and the benefit has been extraordinary. It has completely braced me up. I am just as vigorous as when a boy, and you cannot realize how happy I am."

"Dear Sirs,—Your method worked beautifully. Results were exactly what I needed. Strength and vigor have completely returned and enlargement is entirely satisfactory."

"Dear Sirs,—Yours was received and? had no trouble in making use of the recipe as directed, and can truthfully say it is a boon to weak men. I am greatly improved in size, strength and vigor."

All correspondence is strictly confidential, mailed in plain, sealed envelope. The recipe is free for the asking, and they want a wary man to have it.

Judge, famous racers, and Armstrong, a daring and clever trick rider.

Another big attraction will be the Streator Zouaves, the champion fancy drill team of America, and the originators and peers of the zouave drill. They hold the world's record for scaling a 20 foot blank wall.

Another sensational act is furnished on Professor Hutchinson's balloon ascent and parachute drop. Professor Hutchinson makes the ascent inclosed in a gigantic bomb, whose explosion at a dizzy height releases him and his parachute and allows them to drop to mother earth again.

Other meritorious features which will delight the spectators will be the four Olifans, in comedy, singing and
