"Lost Initiative" Theory Not Proven By Record

One of the conventional statements heard in regard to the returned soldier is that his experience in France has "robbed him of initiative," and made him largely an automaton. The suggestion is that the thinking of the returned man must be delegated to some Government commission, and that he is to be treated as helpless and incapable of definite action without instruction.

A London officer gave what appears to be the complete answer to this charge. He had read some such dreary official mothering sentiments in the propaganda matter of a Government bureau. He pointed out that all through the progress of the war Canadian officers were killed in large numbers. Hundreds of men had to be drawn from the ranks to take commissions.

Could men who had been robbed of their power of decision meet such a test, he asked. Rather, was it not a certain demonstration of the fact that the last war strengthened the ability to act on one's own initiative?

The records of hundreds of promotions from the ranks would appear to settle this matter thoroughly. The man who has not been incapacitated is likely to possess more initiative than ever before.

If You Have the Coin You Can "Get Away With It"

Justice—noun—the quality of being just; rectitude in dealing with others; impartiality.

That's what the dictionary calls it.

But when parliaments make laws and laws are placed in courts and courts administer these laws, justice often becomes law.

For instance, what justice is there in the alternative propositions which a man gets in a police court?

Say that he is fined $200 with an option of serving six months in prison if he cannot produce the money. If he is rich he pays the fine; if he is poor he goes to prison. No matter how the man with the money got it, his bills are legal tender in the court. He escapes going to jail.

The quality of justice would appear to be measured by the dollar standard.

We have been accepting this double standard of punishment for almost all offences against the law. Perhaps the tendency to think more and to accept less in the manner of the goose that is stuffed with food, inclines us to look below the surface and to examine more closely that which is now taken for granted.

Warning For Union Govt. in Words of British Premier

Winston Churchill pictures Europe as a great ship slowly sinking under the breakers of Bolshevism and disorder. Lloyd George warns that civilization is in danger of being "shattered to atoms." President Wilson predicts world-wide anarchy of the blackest kind unless the League of Nations goes through at once. These are the carefully-uttered warnings of great minds in hourly and intimate touch with the situation. As usual, the British premier gets to the heart of the matter when he points out that justice and fair play to all classes alike is the only way in which civilization can be saved.

Above all things, a spirit of unselfishness must prevail if we are to escape ruin. It matters little what may be the conditions evolved from the peace conference if the nations back of it are themselves given over to class strife. Lloyd George was speaking directly to the people of the United Kingdom, but over here his words apply with equal fitness. There is a flaming warning in the British premier's words for the arrogant, selfish combination at the capital. Nothing will so surely feed and foster the red doctrine in this country as a continuation of this ignoring of the rights of the masses, as shown in the sensational exposure by Sir Sam Hughes.

Where is the "justice and fair play" in such an administration?

Proposed Mothers' Pensions Should Be Fully Supported

It is vital to Ontario's best interests that the scheme of mother pensions, now under investigation by a commission, should be given the fullest support and applied as quickly as possible. The war has greatly increased the number of widows with young children who are in more or less acute need of financial aid. Excellent as are the public school influences, educational and moral, at best they are supplementary to that most important of all training, that of the mother in the home, yet it is the unfortunate fact that thousands of mothers are unable to give this attention to their little ones through having to earn a living. This absence of many hours daily from the home tends to breed a wildness and carelessness that sometimes is difficult to uproot later on. No influence so certainly forms child character as that which comes of constant companionship with the mother. It is not well that this intimacy should be occasional or haphazard.

No doubt attempts will be made by shiftless and thriftless parents to evade the real intention of the pensions, but a system can surely be devised to check up on these persons in a way to insure proper raising of the children, while those whose private means are sufficient can be made ineligible to the benefits. Dr. Riddell's investigation is to decide just who should benefit by state insurance. Whether to include unmarried mothers and those who have been deserted by their husbands has yet to be decided, but the general principle of mothers' pensions, no matter what form its application may take, should be heartily indorsed. No better use could be made of a portion of the province's revenues. The taxpayer should not oppose it.

Hughes' Most Terrible Accusation as to Soldiers

The charges made by Sir Sam Hughes cannot be ignored no matter what attack may follow from the Government benches upon the man who uttered them. The verbal bombs which the former minister hurled at the Government, and the influences which are alleged to control it, have burst upon the country with quite as much force as when Sir Sam himself was the central figure in a sensational offensive in connection with shell contracts.

The country does not fail to read such charges as Sir Sam makes, and, reading them with the natural avidity for the unusual and the scandalous, it is quick to draw conclusions. First of all, it will place a discount upon the accuser by fairly measuring his motives, but after that it will judge the accusations according to their sheer importance as they affect, if true, the destiny of a man or a government.

The charges cannot be ignored, either those which alleged tremendous profiteering by Sir Joseph Flavelle and the exertion of a malign influence to retain power, those which gave details as to conspiracies that reached in vain toward the late leader of the Liberal party, or the most serious of all, that the lives of Canadian soldiers were wantonly sacrificed to the glorification of a general.

The last charge is by far the most important of all. The fate of men and parties, their characters or their grafting propensities, are as nothing when ranged beside the spectacle of men being driven to their death to provide a Roman holiday for some modern Caesar and his cohorts.

There is the charge that cuts to the heart of every mother and father who lost a son in the war. There is the charge that would cover with the stigma of infamous treachery the glorious record of Canada in France and Belgium. It is close to being unbelievable. It must not go unanswered or uninvestigated. Yet no other charge must be ignored in the thunder of the most terrible accusation.

Belmont Sets Good Example With Community Centre Plan

Through the generosity of a resident of Belmont that village is to have a community centre. The last remaining hotel has been turned over to the village with an acre of ground. A new building will be erected, which will provide accommodation for travelers and entertainment and recreation for the people of the village. Best of all, it has as an object the bringing about of a closer relationship between all classes of the community.

Here is an excellent example for the smaller communities of Canada. Never in this country's history has it been so important that Canadians should get together. Co-operation is the means we must use to dispose of many problems which hold perils to our happiness and progress. The community centre plan provides for this with its opportunity for getting all sides of a situation, acting solidly as a unit and abolishing the intolerance and ensuing friction which surely develop from not knowing or considering what the other fellow thinks about it. It is the thousands of small communities scattered between the coasts that will pretty well shape the destiny of Canada during the trying period of reconstruction and readjustment. It will be for these communities to sift the unfair, unreasonable and unsafe from matters of public welfare. To do this, nothing could be more helpful than the community centre, where the social life may come into a closer intimacy and be better understood. Belmont's scheme makes for that stability and liberalism that is necessary to our best and most rapid progress. It is distinctly democratic in the newest and best reading of that much-abused word. Hats off to Belmont!

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Russian revolution is as infernal as some of those circles of The Inferno.

Ottawa announces Canada is to have a smaller cent. Any old size will do if it possesses a greater purchasing capacity.

A few more slams a la Hughes and that Flavelle-Rowell combination will require something stronger than water to bring it around.

General Hughes says he favors encircling maneuvers, but we note that in his attack on the Union Government he used the frontal method.

The girls of the Six Nation Indians sent Patricia a picture. What pretty bridesmaids they would have made for one who is really rated a Canadian princess?

Petrograd dispatches say the Bolshevik Government hopes to raise money in the United States. To Wall street a Lenin or Trotsky signed guarantee would appear about as substantial and reliable as a feather in a gale.

CHOICES.
By Jane Osborn.

For three years Leah Wellington and Grover Gary were true to each other, which might be considered a remarkable record.

By this it is not meant that the present generation of men and women is so ruled by fidelity that three years of being true is out of the ordinary, although you will find sources on the world cynics who will assert that such is the case.

One of the extraordinary things about the fealty of Leah and Grover was that during the three-year period in question they were in different cities and yet did not exchange a letter or a postcard. But the feature that really justifies the use of the word "remarkable" is the fact that the young lady and young man concerned never had formed an acquaintanceship—did not, in fact, know each other's names.

Leah was clerk in the magazine, cigar, popcorn, candy, postcard counter at the Union station in a city of some 100,000 souls in Illinois. Grover was one of those hustling young men who can convince you that not to take out insurance on your life is rank treason against the human race.

Grover arrived at the station one evening, weary from a slow, bumping ride on a local train that appeared to scorn the rails and insist on traveling the ties between them. He had a grouch which he directed against the railroad, the insurance business and the world in general—until he spied Leah.

Leah was not in a joyful mood. She was obliged to work overtime, because the night clerk at the stand was sick and she had to miss a theatre party with four girl friends. She scowled as she sold a fat man a package of smiles adorned her countenance.

"There he is at last," breathed Leah; "the handsomest man I've dreamed about so often. I always knew I'd meet him some day."

"By George! That's the girl I've been waiting all these years for," Grover told himself. "Let's see the pretty thing!"

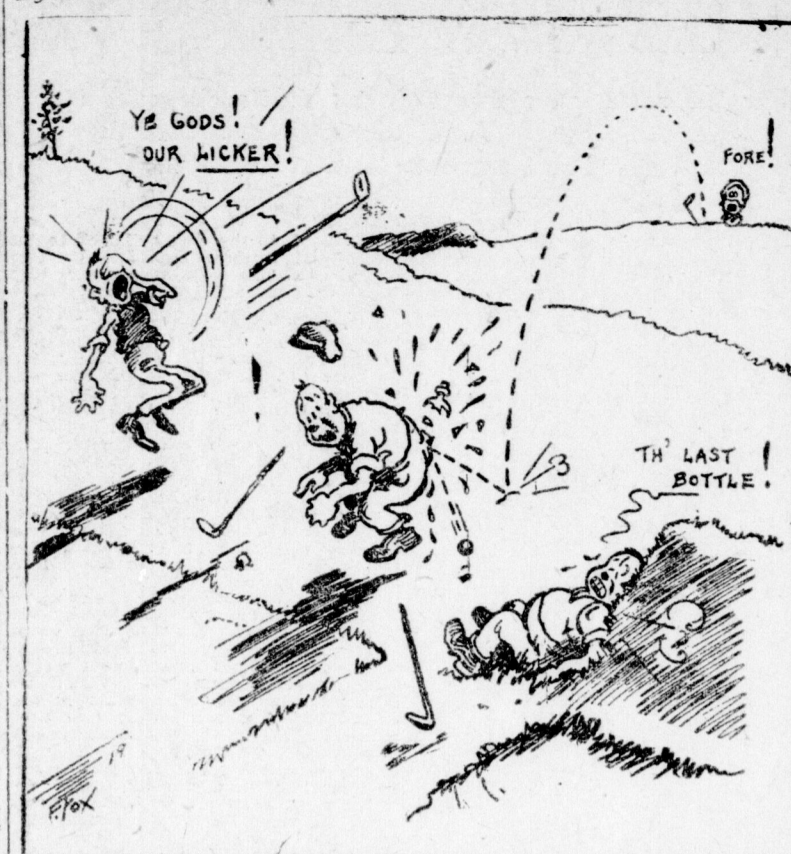

As a matter of fact, neither of them was beautiful or handsome, although each possessed the normal amount of attractiveness.

Grover at once approached the stand. She smiled welcome at him, somewhat timidly, for her experience with men had been limited, as had his with girls. He was far from being at ease, and somehow he could not decide on what to purchase from her. Naturally, when a stranger approaches a place where things are sold and stares at a clerk, the clerk expects to sell something to argued, and still he could not think of a thing he needed.

He looked over the magazines, finally selecting one, but when he thrust a hand into his pocket he found that his purse had vanished. She was rolling up the magazine.

"No, I don't want that wicker all," he faltered. "I have read it, come to think of it."

She laid it back. He ransacked his brain for the name of some magazine that he did not see on the stand. It was useless. The supply laid out before him apparently included every publication in the world.

She was waiting, and he was being tossed helplessly on a stormy sea of discords. He fidgeted and perspired. At last, desperately, he blurted out: "The magazine I want is 'The Magnet'. Have you the last issue?"

The smile left her face and disappeared. "I know it," he said. "You see, when a week he appeared at the station and asked if the "Magnet Magazine" had appeared. Every time Leah was obliged to confess that she had been unable to get track of it. If it had been possible, she would have obtained it for him, for she had made a search which included all the agencies in town.

If Grover had used the same tactics, it is probable that he would have been comparatively easy to win his heart's desire. Leah was ready and waiting, for she was a firm believer in the doctrine that every woman born into the world is intended to wed a certain, particular, pre-selected man.

Leah had been told, and she believed, that if a woman failed to marry the man that fate had selected for her unhappiness would be certain to result. It was the reason for many failures in matrimony, she was convinced. People didn't wait for the right one to come along. Somehow Leah always felt that she would know when her right one appeared, and now she was sure that Grover Gary was he. So she merely waited for him to get down to business and make himself acquainted and ask her to be his wife.

But Grover didn't get down to business. He found himself tongue-tied whenever he tried to talk anything that bordered on the personal. He could not even bring himself to the point of introducing himself. Lovemaking, in its initial stages and in all others, is so different from selling insurance, particularly when one has to fight back bashfulness in the presence of the other sex.

One morning Grover got out of bed with the determination to do two things. First, he had made up his mind to "write up" a very wealthy but obstinate "prospect." Next he was going down to the Union Station, introduce himself and propose to the girl that was rightfully his.

He did neither. When he got to the office he found a telegram summoning him to the head office in Chicago on the first train that went. The train left before Leah went on duty at the stand, and it took Grover away for three years.

Leah waited in vain for the man that was meant for her. When days dragged into months and the months into years she was forced to the conclusion that he had deserted her.

"Well, let him go," she sighed. "Just because he defies destiny is no reason why I should. I shall remain true to him."

It was early in the evening when he returned from his 3-year absence. Leah was thumbing the first number of a new periodical, when a familiar voice inquired:

"Have you the Magnet Magazine?" She jumped back and her eyes opened wide. Then she smiled her first real smile in three years.

"Why, yes, I was just reading it. But it contains an announcement that it is the first number of the magazine. There's a good article in the front about 'Everyone Was Meant For Some One'."

"I know it," he said. "You see, when I used to ask you about the Magnet Magazine I knew very well there was no such publication. It simply gave me an excuse to come here and talk with you now and then. Three years ago I went to Chicago and got interested in the publishing business. I made some money, and finally launched the Magnet. I know that article is good, because I wrote it myself. In fact, it's a proposal from me to you, and therefore it has to be good, doesn't it?"

Now comes the Tory party, and passes without a vote of the people, a temperance measure, forced to do it by the exigencies of the war, and now try to pose as the fathers of temperance and moral reform. It surely does not pretend to be taken seriously in its contention. Credit should be given, where credit is due, and no credit is due to any but the former Opposition leader in the Provincial House for making it an issue before the people.

STOUT OLD JOHN BULL.
(Ottawa Journal.)

Altogether, in the war Britain supplied the most troops against the central powers, the greatest navy, the greatest munitions and resources, the most money. British merchant ships meanwhile carried on the business of the Allied world. Confident in British determination and British honor, the Allies firm through all the long and sometimes desperate-looking stress of the war, let us choose no risk of doing injustice in our minds or our libraries to stout old John Bull.

News Item—"If the United States adopts daylight-saving again, Canada will be obliged to follow suit." Yet it is only a short time ago that the Canadian Government won power on a "No truck or trade with the Yanks" cry. As a matter of fact the daylight played follow the lead to the S. in a great many things since war began. Such a blind follow makes Canada look like an adulation, all right.

A Spring Message To The Canadian Public

THE Signing of the Armistice relieved some of the most pressing demands for shoes. But it did not, and it could not, increase the supply of leather. It released thousands of men from military duty, but only gradually will they find their way back into their old occupations. So, until an actual shortage of leather is turned into a surplus and the supply of labor becomes somewhere near normal, we cannot expect any marked change in conditions, and the price level must continue high.

Leather is not a product of manufacture, but of natural growth. It takes time to produce a skin, and no process of "speeding up" will hasten it. The demands of the war, and the destruction of war, so depleted the world's stock of leather that, as we told you last fall, it was a big problem to produce enough good quality shoes to go around. Now we must simply wait for a new supply of leather to grow.

Labor is another problem which will take time to solve. Many men, fresh from life spent largely out-of-doors, will not go back to factory work again. Many others bear honorable wounds which unfit them for it. Here again, we expect no immediate return to normal conditions. So in this, our Spring message to the Canadian public, we say:—

"Prudence in buying is still necessary. You can help to bring about more normal conditions if you will continue to exercise it. Buy for service and see that you get real value for your money.

"And now especially you should see that the manufacturer's trade-mark is stamped upon the shoes you buy. Unbranded shoes may be reduced in quality to make the price seem low—with the end of the war as a plausible excuse. But no manufacturer will jeopardize his reputation by stamping his trade-mark upon a product which he is ashamed to acknowledge. Remember this, and look for the trade mark. It is the best assurance you can have of real value."

PAGE OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Charlotte Perkins Gilman

Eyes that eternally ask the question, "Why?" now deep and narrowed in thought, now widening at the dawn of decision, now softly gleaming forth kindness upon people, belong to Charlotte Perkins Gilman, known to the world as philosopher, sociologist, feminist, poet, writer, editor and lecturer. Personally she is just a little grey woman, with a voice like laughing music, and a sense of which includes all humanity. Yet she has views so radical that mountains of prejudice arise in her way. Courageously she climbs over them all and marches straight on, a brave str Gahad in search of the Holy Grail.

Wearing the colors of Christianity in her helmet, with one object in view, a people who will unite in higher public service, she forever of the crippling prejudices of the past—her spear is ready for the most ancient dragon and her smile to encourage the feeblest efforts toward progress. Nor does she back away from the beautiful painted shrine, known and revered throughout the centuries as "Home." With mind keenly alert, and eyes far-seeing, she decries the temple, which still persists in the worship of ancient gods, in order to convert the world to a better living and a worthier thinking. And on the spot of its downfall she erects another, not of bricks and mortar, not founded on selfishness and prejudice, but founded on the beauty of love, the sanctity of marriage, and above all on the divinity of service.

Fearless in the face of rebuff, yet so winning in manner and so convincing in logic, that rebuff is seldom forthcoming, she gives to the world her message through the triple medium of poetry, essay and speech. The instinct of the teacher is so big in her that the simplest mind can understand, and the most intricate psychology becomes a pastime for her hearers and readers. When she preaches (for after all it is like a minister of a new gospel that she comes), the words tend of her thought is broken at times by a gentle sarcasm, made still softer by the inevitable chuckle which accompanies it. Yet these lighter moments by no means divert the attention of her hearers from the final impression which she wishes to leave. The whole has a psychological effect on the audience, which is largely responsible for her many converts.

And not only is her success as a reformer due to her presence on the platform and her fame in the journalistic world. Direct contact with Mrs. Gilman finds a winning personality with a big mother love, capable of including all the sons and daughters of the earth. It is for them that she is fighting, and on them that she places her hope when she gathers them around her lap and begins, "Once upon a time there was..."

her name for so long. I sent her some flags and she was to forward me some quilt patches, but alas, she failed to come. Speak up, Stranger, and be as good as your word. NORTH STAR.

Ans.—You inclose a complaint of non-receipt of pattern, and I have handed this to the pattern department. It would be best to write direct to the P. D. when pattern orders do not come to hand.

Find It Good.

Dear Miss Grey—I am writing to ask if you would please send me the pattern of the stocking-foot. I have found it very good. Two and half cups of flour, 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, break one egg on top of the above ingredients, add 1/4 cup of melted butter, prepared vanilla, and sweet milk to make rather a stiff batter. Drop into small pans and bake a few minutes.

Like the Idea.

Dear Miss Grey—I see by the paper where so many of the readers are exchanging patterns, and what a splendid idea it is. Now I wonder if anyone has a pattern for embroidered envelope pillow cases. I want one like to see a pattern of a square crocheted yoke in a lacy design; also come simple design for crocheting curtains. I have a couple of patterns for pillow cases and embroidered towels, which are very nice, and I would be glad to exchange if anyone cares to do so. I will sign myself PATRICIA.

Why This Doubt?

Dear Cynthia Grey—I saw where someone wanted the potato candy recipe. I have never tried it myself, but here it is anyhow: Bake ordinary potatoes, scrape out inside, mash fine, and add as much confectioner's sugar as it will take; have ready a number of little balls or pats. When cold are delicious. If you wish chocolate cream, dip the above into melted Baker's chocolate; lay on paper to cool.

It Helps the Skin.

Philagator asks for the foot pattern. I have a pattern for a foot pattern, which is very nice, and I would be glad to exchange if anyone cares to do so. I will sign myself PATRICIA.

Another New One.

Dear Miss Grey—Another new writer. There are a few questions I would like to ask: 1. I am 12 years of age and in the fourth class. Am I far enough advanced? 2. Do you think it would be wise to learn to bookkeep or stenograph? 3. What day did July 5 fall on? 4. What day did the summer Gladiolus, Phyllis, Vera, Thomas and Edgar mean?

Ans.—1. I think so. 2. Yes, many girls have succeeded admirably at both occupations. 3. July 5, 1918, was a Friday. 4. Gladiolus means the same as Claudius, I mean, peace; Phyllis, a green bird; Thomas, a green bird; Edgar, giver of happiness.

Could She Paint It?

Dear Miss Grey—This is my first appearance, and I have just one question to ask: Can you give me a number of people, and got no answer, so I thought perhaps you or some of your readers might be able to help me. My read baby carriage has gotten quite dirty, and I would like to do it quite a brown or natural shade. I wonder if anyone could tell me what to use.

SOMEONE'S WIFE.

Express Appreciation.

Dear Miss Grey—When becoming a member of any organization, and called on to make a few remarks, should one just express appreciation of being a member of that organization? Thanking you in advance.

DICK'S SISTER.

Ans.—Yes, express appreciation of the work of the organization, and hope to see it by an association with the organization, and state your willingness to do anything you can, as member, to further its objects and aims.

Sent On to Pollywog.

Dear Miss Grey—I saw in your column where Pollywog and her cousins wanted the song "Over There." I have it and will gladly let it be used by anyone who will supply me with the words of "When the Bonnie, Bonnie Heather is Blooming." I will send it to you.

THANKS.

ROSS RIFLE O.K., AMMUNITION TO BLAME--HUGHES

Sir Sam Tells Orange Lodge Meeting Cartridges at Fault.

(Special to The Advertiser.)
WOODSTOCK, March 5.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes received a rousing reception on being introduced by the chairman as a man who did things, at the mass meeting under the auspices of the Grand Orange Lodge of Western Ontario here tonight. Sir Sam stated that he had received a peremptory order to appear tonight in Woodstock, and like a true soldier he obeyed it. He referred to the many pleasant relations he had with many of the residents of Woodstock and Oxford County, and paid a tribute to the life of the late Hon. James Sutherland, stating that he was one of the straightest, whitest and best men the world ever produced. He also paid a flattering compliment to Lieut-Col. Donald Sutherland, saying that he is one of the salt of the earth. He did his duty fearlessly and well under adverse circumstances in France, and always came back with a smile. He extolled the principles of the Orange Lodge, stating that the order was founded on liberty. Referring to the return of the boys from the front, he stated that they did not need our sympathy; all they wanted was to become men, and to get the money off. He declared that we must give them proper jobs, fitting to the great sacrifices they had made for the country, and not of a pleasure nature, which so many citizens were so prone to offer. Referring to the raising of the Canadian army, he stated that he had raised 150,000 men voluntarily and without coercion, and that he could have raised 600,000 in the same manner had he been given the opportunity.

Did not Nobly.
The Orange order in all parts of Canada has done its part nobly and well in the interests of humanity, declared Sir Sam. Referring to the aims of the order, he stated that they were not fighting the Church of Rome, but are endeavoring to educate Catholic and Protestant alike in good citizenship. No organization, church or labor union, has a right to step in between the people of the land and the sovereign power, and say that they will not be governed by the laws of Canada. He declared that there is no reason in the wide world why existing labor duties would soon be wiped away. Referring to the stand he had taken in connection with the Canadians of German origin, he said that he wanted to point out that these men had fought as nobly, as well, in France, as any other nationality in the Dominion. He believed that the people of Quebec were being criticised too much by both parties in Parliament, and that the day was not far distant when people of that province would be demanding a wider education for their children. He believed in the method of teaching to do by doing, and referred to the success of his policy in connection with the training of the men at Valcartier in the early days of the war. The result of that teaching, he claimed, had won the great battle of St. Julien, where the Canadians by their marksmanship had smashed the German lines. "Not With Ross Rifle," was a voice. "Not with the Ross rifle, Sir Sam." "Yes, with the Ross rifle. The men used the Ross rifle successfully for three days, while the principles for which the institution which had at heart the welfare of Canada and all that tended to make Canada a great nation. At all times the members of the lodge held themselves in readiness to defend the rights of all people regardless of political or religious differences. In the great war thousands of them had gone to pay the supreme sacrifice, and when at the front they had not asked for special huts to house them as members of a certain other society did. They were not billeted against the Catholics, but they did not intend to let Rome encroach on their civil rights. Then the speaker went on to explain how absolutely necessary a national school system was if the future success of Canada was to be assured, and he pointed out how inadequate was the present school system of Quebec, where thousands of the children were unable to read and write. "Be thy brother's keeper," was one of the fundamentals of the order, and hence it was the Orangemen's intention to fight hard and persistently to establish national education because it was necessary in building up a united Canada. It was not the policy of the Orangemen, he said, to favor anyone. The speakers confined their remarks to praising the principles and objects of the Orange Order, and made an appeal to the men of Woodstock to become identified with it. About twelve hundred local residents and Orangemen attended the meeting, which was held in the opera house. The principal speakers were: H. C. Hocken, M.P., Toronto, supreme grand master; Hon. W. D. MacPherson, provincial secretary of the province of Ontario; Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes; Fred Dube, Toronto, secretary of the grand council of the Orange Order of the World, and Rev. J. W. Hubert, grand chaplain. Major J. I. Hart, M.P., of Orillia, grand master, presided over the meeting. During the course of the program the presentation of a magnificent cabinet of sterling silver was made to H. C. Hocken, the supreme grand master, by the Hon. W. C. MacPherson on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Ontario West, for the splendid and efficient service rendered to the order during his long term of years.

FORD HAS DESIGNED CHEAPER AUTO MODEL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 5.—Henry Ford left for his home in Detroit today after announcing that on his arrival there he would perfect plans for the manufacture, by a new corporation, of a cheaper automobile than any now extensively marketed. Mr. Ford said that he had designed the car while "resting" at Altadena, near here.

WHY STAY FAT? YOU CAN REDUCE

The answer of most fat people is that it is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous to force the weight down. However, in Marmola Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. They are absolutely harmless, need no dieting or exercise, and have the added advantage of cheapness. A large case is sold by druggists at 75c. Or if preferable they can be obtained by sending price direct to the Marmola Company, 884 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this, you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce two, three or four pounds a week without fear of bad after-effects.

HEY! KIDS! GOT ANY OLD SHOES? BRING 'EM TO THE MAJESTIC

Unique Way of Seeing Picture "Boots" Announced by Manager.

The most novel form of admission to a theatre ever charged in London was announced last night by Manager T. W. Logan of the Majestic Theatre.

Old lamps have been exchanged for new, but it is doubtful if ever before old shoes were exchanged for theatre tickets.

Yet the first fifty children presenting an old pair of shoes at the lobby of the Majestic Theatre between 11 and 12 Saturday morning will receive an admission ticket for the performances of Monday and Tuesday.

Dorothy Gish is to appear at the Majestic in "Boots" on Monday and Tuesday, and the management desired to mark the occasion of this appealing photograph by making a special appeal to the kiddies.

"The first fifty children who bring old shoes to the theatre will get the tickets, and the older the shoes the better. They will form effective decorations for the theatre if the usual response of the juvenile population is again in order.

"Boots" is said to be one of the finest plays in which the famous Griffith star has appeared.

BEADS—THE CRAZE

Many articles of recent date have been written on the subject of beads and their attractiveness in completing the ladies' wardrobe with charming effect.

A significant feature is the fact that shown and sold by JOHN A. NASH, Jeweller, at prices far more reasonable than in Detroit or New York, where the merchants have been startled by their popularity. For six months or more MY JEWELLER has been gradually creating a demand for beads, and had a representative in New York secure for him a most wonderful assortment of beads for sale.

When it comes to new and snappy jewelry of that better class. Be sure and see these beads at this new store, 206 Dundas Street, where you will eventually buy.

W. S. HART HAS ROLE OF REAL DAREDEVIL IN "BREED OF MEN"

Popular Actor at Majestic Again Today; Also "Fatty" Arbuckle.

William S. Hart in "Breed of Men," his latest photoplay, and one that reveals his strongest traits as an exponent of western characters, was shown at the Majestic yesterday to enthusiastic audiences. Hart's popularity is increased by his forceful acting in this photoplay. In this picture Hart portrays the character of a daredevil cowpuncher who fears nothing.

Into the town of Chloride, Ariz., there rides one day "Careless" Carmody, a boss cowpuncher, with a coffee of choice spirit from Bar Double O ranch. The town is owned and controlled by Wesley B. Prentice, a land shark from the east, who is foisting land to which he has no clear title, upon unsuspecting settlers. Among these is Ruth Feltows, a young woman who has settled upon a section and who is farming it with her little brother, Bobby, quite unconscious of the fact that the land in which her last penny is invested has been illegally sold to her by Prentice. When "Careless" appears on the scene, Prentice gives orders to his creature, Farley, the proprietor of a gambling den, to fleece him and set him adrift without horse or bridle. "Careless" is deprived of everything he owns at once, and when he is broke, he accepts the offer of Prentice to act as sheriff. "Careless" thus unwittingly becomes the tool of the villain.

Mexican slugs a man and seeks refuge in Ruth's shack, and here "Careless" learns the truth—his benefactor is a rascal. He follows the man to Chicago and captures him, returning him to Chloride. Prentice, Ruth and "Careless" have been tried by a vigilance committee and sentenced to death. When "Careless" appears in his prisoner, justice is done. Prentice is made to disgorge, while "Careless" becomes the hero of the hour.

Patty Arbuckle appears in his latest comedy, "Camping Out," which is really one of the best of his recent work. Weekly shows interesting scenes of current events.

In vaudeville Frank Besenger renders an entirely new program of popular songs. The above program will be repeated today.

STAR

HARRY T. MOREY IN "SILENT STRENGTH" AT STAR THEATRE.

The limit of human endurance is reached in "Silent Strength," the Vitaphone Star Series release, which will be shown in the Star Theatre today and Thursday. Harry T. Morey has the stellar role of Dan La Roche, who is the love of a girl, allows another man to marry her and then rob him of his fortune, and, in the end, is silent for the sake of the girl, he proceeds to blackmail him out of his millions.

Don lives in the mountains, which he owns, when he meets Ruth, a society girl, stopping at the hotel. They fall in love, and on her return to the city she meets this cousin and mistakes him for her sweetheart. The cousin is quick to take advantage of the situation, and leads her into a marriage. And then when he finds out that the true love, although knowing of the marriage, is determined to keep silent for the sake of the girl, he proceeds to blackmail him out of his millions.

The girl, still ignorant of the truth, returns to the mountains to forget her unhappiness, for her husband is incoherent and brutal, and there she meets the man to whom she first gave her heart. She believes he is her husband, and when she pleads with him he is forced to resign her. And then comes the arrival of the cousin, and the intensely dramatic scene where retribution overtakes the rascal and true love comes into its own.

GET PASSPORTS EARLY

Takes Time to Obtain Them When Wanted Urgently.

Any person who intends to take a trip to countries other than the United States within the next year is advised to secure a passport as soon as possible, as one cannot be secured on a moment's notice. The passport is good for two years, after which time they have to be renewed. One woman came into the office of P. B. Clarke recently, and as her mother was dying in England, she had to sail on March 11. She had a passport, but had expired six months ago, and she had not renewed it. Much trouble in securing her passport in time for the sailing will be met as a result.

MAY ALLISON AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE LAST TIME TODAY

Charming Screen Star Appearing in Entertaining Comedy.

"In For Thirty Days," a charming Metro comedy featuring beautiful May Allison, will be the feature screen offering at the Grand again today at 2:30, 7 and 9.

Suppose a vision in a red roadster had rolled up on you in your poor little flapper, and patronizingly offered to pay you the insignificant sum of your car. And suppose you were an author and not used to being snubbed, and suppose the offer had been on a disagreeable looking foreigner, and suppose the vision, who had snubbed a most unpleasant smile at the incident. And suppose later on the vision was arrested for speeding, and lodged in the county jail. Don't think you would have been as human as Brett Page was, and taken advantage of the old southern law which requires that all prisoners not needed to work on the roads, be hired out to the townspeople for twenty days? Such is the refreshingly original plot of "In For Thirty Days," and it shows what happens to a young society girl, whose only love-up to the opening of the story—is her smart racing car, and her one main desire.

Neil McInnes at the Grand today.

Neil W. McInnes, the young dramatic tenor, will be heard at the Grand again today in a most entertaining offering, the new comedy, "Some Baby," in Farce Comedy, Showing at Grand on Friday and Saturday.

"Some Baby," pronounced by critics the funniest farce written in many years, with a company consisting of members selected from both of the companies which originally produced this play at the Grand, the Grand, London, and the Fulton Theatre, New York, with great success, will be the attraction at the Grand on Friday and Saturday matinee at 2:30. In its principal features it does not resemble any other play of the numerous farce family who may be recalled to memory. The central idea is clever and new. Old Dr. Relyea, after experimenting for twenty-five years, discovers what he believes to be the genuineelixir of youth. The doctor seeks a human being upon whom to demonstrate his theory of youth renewal. The "subject" turns up opportunely in the person of General George Birbeck, a retired army officer, who, at sixty-five years, is ambitious to win the doctor's nineteen-year-old daughter, Sylvia. The general, alone, momentarily, with a bottle of the elixir, which he has secretly upsets. Enter his daughter-in-law, a Spanish girl coming to induce the general to feature her infant, the general's grandson.

Sudden circumstances, of the extraordinary sort, make the young man, in farce almost as strange as those in real life, which the general attraction is the genuineelixir of youth. LONDON DEPUTATION EXPLAINS NEEDS OF CITY AT TORONTO

Called on Lucas and Hearst Regarding London Bill.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

TORONTO, March 5.—To explain to the government the reasons for asking for an amendment to the municipal act to permit a change to commission government in their city, a deputation from London conferred with the attorney-general, Hon. I. E. Lucas, this afternoon.

They explained that it was the wish of the people there that when the aldermen or commissioners are elected they should have certain duties designated to them. This will permit the present members of commissions to run for the council and to perform the duties they are now performing as commissioners.

The deputation also called on the prime minister, Sir William Hearst, to discuss the dispute between the county and the municipality as to the proportional payment for maintaining suburban roads.
