BUDGET DEBATE WILL BE OPENED BY EX-MINISTER

Sir Henry Drayton To Take Usual Role of Opposition's Financial Critic.

MUCH CRITICISM

Progressives Expected to Move Formal Amendment to Main Budget Motion.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, May 12.—Sir Henry Drayton, minister of finance in the late government, will open debate on the budget on Monday afternoon. Yesterday, following the conclusion of the budget speech, Sir Henry had some remarks to make, but they were brief and merely preliminary to the main discussion which, in all probability, will be protracted.

Comment today indicates that Conservatives will have numerous criticisms to make and will present amendments when the budget resolutions have finally passed the house and are being considered, clause by clause, in committee. But it is not expected, although they have not yet held a formal caucus on the question, that Conservatives will have an amendment to the main budget motion now under consideration, that the house will go into committee of ways and means.

Only one amendment, under the rules of the house, is permissible to this motion, and there is every likelihood that it will be moved by the Progressives. But it is not expected, although they have not yet held a formal caucus on the question, that Conservatives will have an amendment to the main budget motion now under consideration, that the house will go into committee of ways and means.

But members are averse at present to discuss the budget in its details. It is a document which requires close study and the week-end will be a busy one for both critics and supporters.

Mr. Wood Pleased.

Calgary, May 12.—General satisfaction with the 1923 budget as brought down in the house yesterday by W. S. Fielding, minister of finance, was expressed by H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of Alberta in an interview here last night.

"It looks pretty good on the face of it, although I have not studied it Turn to Page 23, Columns 5 and 6."

PLEADS WITH BERLIN TO BE MORE GENEROUS

Britain Sends Note to Germany on the Reparations Problem.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, May 12.—Great Britain's note to Germany will be handed to Dr. Brüning, the German ambassador here, tomorrow. Copies already have been despatched to France and Belgium. The whole tenor of the note is friendly, but firm. The main feature is a plea to Germany to make a more generous offer, and thus re-establish negotiations for a settlement of the Ruhr question among the Allies.

Paris, May 12.—The British embassy in Paris received the British note to Germany this morning. It will be delivered to the French foreign office this afternoon.

Chief in English City Introduces Method to Reduce Cost.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, May 12.—Sunderland is abolishing five of the district police stations of that city and substituting sixteen telephone street boxes from which the public may call the police. The police will use motor cars in responding to such calls. An immediate saving of £10,000 a year in police expenditure is expected as a result of the change.

The chief constable of Sunderland is confident that the new system will work efficiently. He hopes to reduce the police force 50 per cent eventually by the extension of the system.

Russia Announces Willingness To Confer on Differences Between Nations.

Associated Press Despatch.

Moscow, May 12.—All Moscow's factories and government institutions were closed this morning to permit the employees to take part in a great demonstration against the British note. Surging crowds early began to fill the streets of the city. The intent of the demonstrators seemed to be peaceful, but it appeared evident they meant to make the demonstration an impressive one.

Deputy Foreign Minister Gantsev's declaration to the Moscow council of trades unions that although Russia is willing to confer with Great Britain over the differences between the two countries, she "cannot accept such an ultimatum" as was set forth by Lord Curzon is held here as an indication of the mood of official opinion toward the British note. Gantsev told the council that the Soviet government desired no break with Britain. "We say to England," he asserted, "let us talk the matter over. But do not dictate."

Gantsev's statement that "Russia is against those who want to enslave her" found a reflection in the resolution passed by the council announcing that Russia was ready if necessary to respond with armed force to those who try to infringe upon her independence. The Soviet reply, it is generally expected, will go forward to London after Foreign Minister Tchitcherine's address to the special session of the Moscow soviet, which has been summoned for today.

To All Mothers

Soft as the mystic moon;
Sweet as the morning dew;
Soft and sweet as the rapturous tune
That only Ulysses knew.

Gentle and loving heart,
Warm as the sun above—
Oh, where is the light that shines so bright
As the light of a mother love?

Speak of the love that blesses:
Tant till the eyes grow dim,
But whisper mild of the love of child
For the mother that nestled him.

Perfume, passion and kiss;
Fire and beauty divine,
Cannot compare to the love I bear
For the dear little mother of mine.

ADVERTISER SPELLING FINALS CAPTURE CITY; GREAT CROWD SEES END

Children of London Take Armories by Storm at Conclusion of Most Interesting Contest Ever Staged Here—Forty Boys and Girls Face Grilling Elimination Test and Valiantly Withstand Assaults of Most Difficult Words.

WINNERS SELECTED AFTER HARD FIGHT

The children of London took the Armories by storm last night. They swarmed in and they blizzarded until they almost completely submerged the numbers of proud and anxious parents and other grown-ups who had come along to witness the final tussle in the grand spelling championship contest inaugurated by The Advertiser, which has kept the youth of London on tip-toe for weeks past.

The boys and girls packed the area within hearing distance of the stage built at the east end, with hushed and expectant faces, and with happy adults sandwiched and elbowed between. They overflowed the galleries. Swinging feet of dancing lads hung perilously far over the ledge, draping the entire length lambrquin effect. Terror was struck to the heart of many a "frail cat" woman until she discovered the stout iron bar which securely held the fearless ones back from destruction.

Ranged to the left of the platform were the seats for the forty young valiant, who, through the process of elimination in earlier rounds, had won the right to compete for the title of champion.

According to the rules of the game, each judge was obliged to distinctly pronounce the word, explain its meaning, so there could be no possible misunderstanding in the mind of the candidate, then pronounce it clearly again. After that, it was up to the boy or girl to do the best or worst. The "word" was a long time coming, for many, and the best a long, long best.

Certain young invincibles in seventh and eighth grades spelled right through the regulation lists of one hundred selected words. In the seventh grade final round, eleven extra words were required before duelling honours were awarded. The deliberate and clear-voiced runner-up, Marion Reynolds of Riverview School, found her Waterloo in symmetry. The palm, otherwise, a white wash, was awarded to Helen McCormack of St. George's School.

The Eighth Grade.

When it came to the eighth grade, Madeline Dicknoether, of the Sacred Heart, Vivian Cook, Chesley Avenue School, and Jack Holmes, Tecumseh School, held their ground so tenaciously that, regular list and supplementary words were exhausted. The learned judges were obliged to hunt through the imposing big dictionary to find brain-twistingly sufficient appalling to "kill off" competition and leave Miss Madeline Dicknoether alone in possession of the field. Master Jack Holmes couldn't ever remember hearing "malign" before. His phonetic method of spelling was "maline."

A rousing fight was put up by the fifth grade ten, who required more Officials Seek Merchants With Capital To Locate in Village.

Special to The Advertiser.

Ailsa Craig, May 12.—The first steps toward reconstructing Ailsa Craig's business section, destroyed by fire, were put in motion here last night, when the Saxon Lodge, No. 121, of the I. O. O. F., decided to purchase the Wyllie property, on Main street, for the erection of stores and offices.

The Wyllie block is a section on the south side of Main street in the burned area. Work will commence on it at once. A drygoods store, grocery, lodge rooms, and a banquet hall will be built immediately. Arrangements are being made to purchase other properties that might make suitable building sites. The price paid for the Wyllie block was $8,000. The town is considering reconstructing both sides of the ruined section on Main street, and plans will be made shortly to have the village thoroughly renovated.

Officials of the I. O. O. F. announced that they desired merchants with capital to come into the village, who would be given special consideration by the community. Only those who were being residents of the municipality are wanted.

It would undoubtedly help to solve the immediate difficulties of a good many farmers. Mr. Meadley added.

Reports have reached government officials that inflammatory proclamations are to be issued. Extra precautions are being taken to thwart disorders.

The body of Vorovsky, shot with two comrades as he sat at a table in the dining-hall of the Stregli Hotel, will be shipped to Moscow. His widow, Mme. Vorovsky, is coming to Lausanne from Rome to accompany the casket back to Moscow.

The casket is draped in a red flag. Official condolences were ordered presented to the murdered delegate's family by the Federal Council.

Maurice Conrad, who said he killed Vorovsky in revenge for the death by soviet rule of members of his family, is being held under close guard.

The two who were shot with Vorovsky, Ahrens and Dzhirkovsky, are expected to recover.

SMALL LAND CAUSES WORRY TO JAPANESE

Prof. Hissinuma Tells London Society Nation Needs More Room.

Special Cable to The London Advertiser by a Staff Reporter.

London, May 12.—Expressing his view of the Singapore naval base and the importance of that base for defending Australia, Professor Hissinuma, of Japan, made an extremely frank speech to the Japan Society in London last night. He said that Japan's small space was the cause of the greatest anxiety for her future.

Her population was 350 to the square mile, while that of America was 20. Eighty-four per cent of Japanese land was mountainous, leaving only 16 per cent habitable. Japan naturally cast her eyes on thinly populated areas like North and South America, Canada and Australia. She did not want to conquer these, but simply send her surplus population to turn the wilderness into hives of industry.

Unless western nations changed their attitude to the east, the whole of humanity would be involved in disastrous war. Nations possessing vast territories thinly peopled must open their doors to overcrowded nations.

RUSSIA MAY GO TO WAR WITH GT. BRITAIN OVER CURZON'S NOTE

DECLARES RUSSIA MAY GO TO WAR WITH GT. BRITAIN

Soviet Official States Curzon's Ultimatum Cannot Be Accepted.

SPEED UP WORK

Lausanne Conference Delegates Warned That Something Must Be Done.

Associated Press Despatch.
Moscow, May 12.—The Soviet government does not desire a break with Great Britain and is willing to confer with that country; but it cannot accept such an ultimatum as that contained in Lord Curzon's recent note, said M. Gansky, deputy minister of foreign affairs, in speech delivered at a meeting here yesterday.

The meeting passed a resolution protesting against the British note and declaring that Russia is ready, if necessary, to meet with armed force any nation which endeavors to infringe upon its independence.

DELEGATES ARE WARNED.
Lausanne, May 11.—The Vorovsky tragedy has acted as a warning to the delegates in the near east conference that the conference is dragging on too long and that the delay is paving the way for new complications, instead of tending toward peace.

The announced coming to Lausanne of M. Alexandroff, the Greek minister of foreign affairs, in a day or two, to serve notice on the conference that it must get along with its work or Greece will make a separate peace with Turkey, has acted as a stimulant, and the work has gone forth that the experts' committee must be ready to report early next week. Everybody seems nervous and desirous that the conference should work before a political catastrophe follows last night's crime.

The Swiss Federal Council today issued a communique expressing indignation over the attack on the Russians, and regretting especially that it occurred at the seat of a peace conference. The council has decided to express its sympathy to the families of the victims of last night's shooting, but it voted not to change its attitude towards Soviet Russia, and continue to ignore officially the existence of the Soviet government.

Fears are expressed here over the safety of delegation of Swiss watchmakers in Moscow, who are said to be the watch trade with Russia. Members of the Soviet group here are said to have threatened reprisals against the Swiss.

The police department asserts that it never received any complaints from the Russians that a plot had been formed against them. Vorovsky, who was shot and killed in the Hotel Cecil dining-room by Maurice Alexander Conrad, it was recalled by the department today that the Russian was an incognito to the first conference, and that even Georges Tchitcherine, the Bolshevik minister of foreign affairs, arrived unannounced.

Bill To Amend Immigration Act Passes In House of Commons.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, May 12.—The bill to amend the immigration act was taken up in committee by the House of Commons shortly before 6 o'clock. The bill provides for the deportation of an alien who advocates the assassination of an official of the government. Mr. Meighen said the bill was to protect himself. "The alien must not advocate the assassination of an official of the government, but evidently he is permitted to advocate assassination of members of the government," Mr. Meighen remarked.

"Sometimes they may deserve it," remarked S. W. Jacob.

Mr. Meighen asked why it should not be amended so as to provide for the deportation of an alien who advocated assassination.

A. R. McMaster: "It appears to me that assassination is understandable in all cases and as applied to all persons."

Mr. Meighen moved an amendment making the advocacy of assassination of any person a cause for deportation.

The bill was put through the remaining stages and given third reading when the house resumed in the evening.

BOOTLEGGERS RESENT PRICES BEING BOOSTED

Illegal Vendors Can Only Grin When Man In Control Makes Increase.

Windsor, May 11.—Border City bootleggers are up in arms against the man who controls the sale of Canadian rye, raising the price to the bootlegger trade $10 per case. The reason for the increase is not given, but a case of Canadian rye that sold for $35 to the blind-pie and night club is now being sold at $45.

The man who handles the liquor has the source of supply so well tied-up that the rum-sellers have nothing to do but grin and accept.

Federal officers of the United States government report that since the increase a large amount of liquor apparently bearing genuine Canadian labels and revenue stamps has been seized in Detroit, but in almost every case it is alcohol, colored with beet sugar. An increase in the retail price is expected.

DOHERTY CHOSEN U. F. O. CANDIDATE FOR EAST KENT

Three Hundred Delegates Decide On Minister's Name As Only One For Nomination.

TELLS OF EFFORTS
Nominee Declares Kent Paid Government $95,000 and Received $600,000.

Special to The Advertiser.
Thamesville, May 12.—Hon. Manning Doherty, minister of agriculture in the late Drury government, was yesterday unanimously selected as U. F. O. candidate in the coming provincial election. Delegates to the number of nearly 300, who met here, were seemingly of the one mind to honor the man who has represented them during the past four years, that his should be the only name placed in nomination.

Long before Chairman John Gibson called the meeting to order the Ferguson opera house was filled to capacity and a standing room was at a premium. Great interest in the election is being shown here, as in all probability there will be a fight, with the prospects at present of a three-cornered one.

In an address, which lasted nearly two hours, Doherty rendered an account of his stewardship as representative of East Kent in the Ontario House. He could not wish to represent another riding, when the electors here had given him unfailing courtesy and shown him unbounded kindness. His stewardship should be judged as to whether he had brought honor or dishonor to the riding during his term of office, both in his actions and conduct. He hoped when he passed out the people could say the least of him that he had always been a decent and honest fellow.

Worked For Province.
His work in the legislature had been for the people, not only of Kent, but for the whole province, the farmers and all other classes. Among his activities he wished to be judged from the work he had done in the raising of the British embargo on Canadian cattle, a work which no other minister of any government in the Dominion had accomplished.

The securing of a reduction of farm taxes, which meant a saving of $500,000 to the farmers of Ontario, he declared.

Speaking of East Kent, Doherty asked if he had given faithful attention to the constituency, citing as an example, the purchase of the Southern Counties Experimental farm at Ridgeway, which had been chosen by him, and the several branches of agricultural work in the Dominion.

Gives Government Record.
Doherty then gave an account of the work of the Drury Government since coming into power in 1919. He defied anyone to pick out any former four years during the term of any other government which has been enacted more sane and helpful legislation than the Drury government for the benefit of the farmers or to the common people of the province.

On closing Mr. Doherty mentioned the Hicks and Currie incidents during the dying days of the session, stating the bomb which had been set for the former incident, had exploded backwards.

He thought that for common ordinary decency the Currie letter should have been handed over to its proper owner.

The chief criticism of the government had been on the spending of money. Mr. Doherty answered that the total expenditure last year has been $600,000 less than the year in which they took office. The money sent to the provincial treasurer from Kent had been $55,000, while the amount coming back to the county from the government had been over $600,000.

Ex-Mayor Mercer of Galt Indorsees M. M. MacBride, Brantford Nominee.

GIVEN FINE OVATION

Present Member Seeks To Have Assailants Meet Him Openly.

Special to The Advertiser.
Brantford, May 11.—The first bomb in the local election campaign was thrown last night when 2,000 people attended the meeting held by M. M. MacBride, M.L.A., at which several speakers of prominence indorsed the independent candidate as the representative of hydro.

Mayor Magness, Toronto; Rev. Banks Nelson, Hamilton; T. Hannigan, Guelph, and ex-Mayor Mercer, Galt, were the speakers who indorsed Mr. MacBride.

Mayor Fred W. Billo, chairman, opened the meeting with a brief address, in which he placed his views on hydro and public ownership before the gathering. "If hydro cost twice as much," he stated, "it is worth while to the province. The country is in the verge of the greatest industrial prosperity in history. 'Elect those men who are friends of hydro,' said ex-Mayor Mercer of Galt, who took up the cudgel on behalf of hydro. Mr. MacBride's career as a supporter of hydro, he stated, had been satisfactory. "Premier Drury anti-hydro and public ownership, and influenced by the large money interests of the province who want the profits," he declared, "the present system of commissions by the premier has not been satisfactory to the people, but only to the commissioners and lawyers. Mr. Hannigan described the habit of Mr. Drury had been in power when hydro was first utilized? None, and yet it has saved more to the people. The money interests are at work to take it away from them. The representatives of the people should be those who supported public ownership on this vital question."

History of Hydro.
T. Hannigan, secretary of the Ontario Hydro Association, in opening his remarks, referred to the history of hydro from the time of its inception in Waterloo county in 1902. "In 1904 a commission was appointed to investigate and report the best being supplied by several municipalities," he asserted. "They were to be responsible for the financial end of the present system. The commission reported that the present system was a failure. Interest and principal had been paid and there are no arrears. The commission recommended that the Drury government in appointing commissions, Mr. MacBride had stood foursquare on hydro and had fought in its behalf, he declared.

"Four years ago, in a moment of weakness, the people elected a government which had not given them what was promised," he said. "Members of the Drury government had pledged themselves to hydro, but had not carried out their pledges. A deputation waited on Premier Drury at his own residence, but had to deal with his subordinates. Mr. Drury had resented being spoken to by the people of Ontario."

"The present government always stepped the issue, throwing the onus of the present system, outside commissions were appointed but had not accomplished anything. Propaganda was getting the views of private ownership individuals. Members of the Drury government had been extravagant governments about spending when compared with that of Mr. Drury."

"Remove the Drury government because it is a menace and a danger to the province," concluded Mr. Hannigan. "We need men that can be depended on as long as the hydro fight lasts and this will be as long as men have money and industry, its promotion. We need men like MacBride. Elect him!"

Speaking in a humorous vein, Rev. Dr. Banks Nelson urged the people to support Mr. MacBride as a strong worker for hydro.

The farmers of this country were fortunate in that they were able to get hydro, even though the cost in some cases was by distance from the source," he stated. "The people are not ashamed of Premier Drury but he was wrong end of the hydro question. He has become mixed up when called on the wrong advisers. He should have gone to Sir Adam Beck."

At the close of Banks Nelson's address, Mr. MacBride arose to speak. He was greeted with a storm of applause. "Let us have a clean and honorable campaign," he pleaded. "Proceeding, Mr. MacBride told of the falsehoods which had been circulated in certain quarters reflecting on his character and integrity. If any citizen had the chance to tell the truth, he would do so. He would not be afraid to come to him and refer to the charges. 'All I want,' he said, 'is a chance to tell the truth.' Concluding his brief address Mr. MacBride said: 'Any man who espouses the cause of the people will make powerful enemies.'

FINDS HERBERT WILSON GUILTY OF PLOT

Authorities State Former Evangelist Not Connected With Wall Street Explosion.

Associated Press Despatch.
Washington, May 12.—Investigation at Los Angeles has convinced department of justice officials that Herbert Wilson, who is in jail on a murder charge, was not implicated in the Wall Street bomb conspiracy. William J. Burns, head of the detective bureau, investigation, who recently made a trip to Los Angeles, said yesterday, however, that Wilson's story that he had made the bomb, had led him to believe the prisoner had been in the instrument without knowledge of the use to which it was to be put.

Kingsville, May 12.—A battery of brilliant Liberal orators turned their backs, with telling consequences in the general election of the Drury administration during the big nomination rally here yesterday.

William B. Clifford, reeve of Gosfield South, was chosen by a record convention, to carry the fiery torch of Liberalism through the south riding of Essex, winning this signal honor from Reeve W. H. Ferris of Colchester South, the only other of the ten nominees to allow his name to go before the session.

With even renewed vigor and determination, Wellington Hay, leader of the Ontario Liberals, delivered a record of the government of the day, assisted by such competent aid as Hon. George P. Graham, M.P. for South Essex, and newly-elected minister of railways and canals; Major J. C. Tormie, M.P. for Windsor; Albert P. Healy, M.P. for London; and J. C. Tormie, M.P. for Windsor; and a host of others.

No riding of Ontario, with the possible exception of historic South Essex, has given more men to public achievement or to the Liberal cause than the south riding of Essex, and in the province of Ontario, such loyalty and enthusiasm registered for Wellington Hay and his followers, as was demonstrated here today.

Senses U. F. O. Defeat.
Sensing the utter rout of the United Farmer movement at the coming convention, Hon. George P. Graham (the "Old War Horse," as he was dubbed by his local admirers) said that the next election would witness the return of party government to the good old Province of Ontario.

"I am a party man. I believe in party government," asserted the minister of railways, "and while we may pretend that there has been a new division in the province that is found to dislike the party movement, it is not so. That division is still a party, and we find now three parties struggling in the legislature."

"One striking point of argument by the U. F. O. was their objection to the party caucus, and they included this protest in their platform. Now we find the U. F. O. staging their own caucuses and voting more or less on a body generally."

"But a change is coming again in this province. The old line party system is coming back when it was a diamond cut diamond and a flint strikes steel, and the country benefited as a whole."

Hay Raps Expenditure.
The minister of railways declined naturally to discuss federal affairs during a provincial platform, starting by briefly upon the situation at Ottawa. "The King government is making remarkable progress," he remarked, "despite its great handicaps. Little finances, no majority and less patronage."

In his characteristic aggressive manner, the laudatory and continued expenditures of the Drury government, stressing the fact that there had been a financial audit of the province, and that the books and accounts of the province, Ontario in order that the people might know the definite extent of their liabilities and the bylaws and the expected liquidation of the same."

The Liberal leader scored the Drury administration for failure to re-assert immediately upon assuming the reins of office in 1919, in order that the municipalities called upon to shoulder the financial burden would be adequately represented on a commission that directs all operations in connection with the Chippewa Canal and other hydro enterprises.

Mr. Hay did not doubt for an instant the prediction that these ventures would prove real assets to the people of Ontario in the years to come, but he did reason that every precaution should be exercised that no money should be wasted or time exploited for naught. The leader of the Ontario Liberals predicted that Premier Drury would be soon journeying down through the byways and highways and shouting from the hustings that he had saved the people an expenditure of millions because his administration refused to indorse the bonds for hydro railways.

Saved Province Nothing.
Wellington Hay challenges the premier of Ontario in this instance, in that he had saved the province nothing and flays his record in his most scathing manner because it fails to reveal where he took any action to make it "comfortable" for those municipalities who desired to back up upon hydro radial developments at their own initiative and liability and without the initial commendation of the province.

"Premier Drury did not indorse the hydro radial proposals for two reasons," declared the leader, emphatically. "First, because I claim that he had no right and, secondly, because the government had assumed control of the G.T.R. and other corporations."

In general terms Mr. Hay criticized every department of the Drury regime, alleging that the government had expended millions of dollars in the name of the U. F. O., and that the government had been unable to overcome the debts.

In his concluding remarks the Liberal leader prophesied that the outcome of the convention would show when the urban communities would stop running to the government for the many grants for hospitals, educational institutions and the like.

Must Pay Experts.
The time is inevitable, he announced, when the cities and towns will get away from the centralization of money expenditure, he pronounced.

SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1923.

Sunday is Mothers' Day.

Mothers' Day on Sunday. Now, don't come around and tell us that it's just a scheme worked out by the florists to sell a lot of their goods for that day. They may have started it, and it may have been good business for them ever since. We hope it has been, and that it will continue to be.

Mothers' Day! Yes, it is well that we stop now and then to pay respect to mother, to motherhood and to all the sacred memories that cling and twine about that sacred institution.

We're developing boy life and girl life at quite a pace just now. There may be a danger that we shove the young folks into importance and self-assertion just a trifle too soon—not intentionally, of course.

No man thinks of his mother without thinking of home; few men can let their thoughts go back to home and childhood without being better for the recollection.

No father can take the place a mother holds in the regard of a boy; he may approach it; he may even envy it, but he cannot go in and take possession. It is a heaven-born heritage, surrounded by love and buttressed by willing sacrifice.

Let Them Speak Out Now.

Election, regardless of political preference, are entitled to plain talk on the O. T. A. by candidates who are coming forward at this time. Mr. Buchanan, in his address at the South Oxford nomination, did not mince words on this point. He came right out as follows:

"I am opposed to any modification of the Ontario temperance act, first, last, and all the time. The O. T. A. doubtless has many defects, but who shall say it is not infinitely preferable to the bar?"

There is no time like the present, when candidates are getting lined up, for them to show whether they have the courage of their convictions. There should be no time wasted on the candidate who wants to pussy-foot along and conduct a whispering campaign with the hope of picking up a few stray votes from those who want the O. T. A. so changed or mutilated that its friends would not know it. It should not be made possible for one of these rubber-stamped politicians to gather temperance and anti-temperance votes at the same time.

Mr. Buchanan has shown himself, in his opening address, to be in a position to solicit votes from Liberals and U. F. O. alike.

Should a Church Be Popular?

Rev. Mr. Farquharson of Newbury brought to the attention of the Social Service Council of Ontario the fact that in this district was an organization known as the non-churchgoers' union. He had attended one of the meetings, and reports: "The main thing that evolved was that most emphatically they do not like church people. One man said that the ideals of Christianity were impossible and that church people were not trying to live up to them. Another stated that we were formalists. They charged us with all kinds of falsehoods. One man said we were old fogies. So we are," added the speaker frankly, and said that there was some truth in all of the charges.

Any church has an option in dealing with a matter such as this. It can (1) ignore it entirely, or (2) seek to find out if it contains or reflects any of the things the so-called union stipulates.

In the first place, if any church turns back to the New Testament principles it is not going to find that the church was a popular institution. It was made up of people who earnestly believed certain great truths. These truths were not held by the rest of the community. It is hard to find today scriptural backing for an idea that would make a church one of the popular centers of the community.

The greatest preachers of our times have not been popular with many people. They have been bold enough to strike out at sin wherever they saw it; they have made it harder for men to do business in lines that are not up to the mark in decency and honorable methods. Were the Apostle Paul to be turned loose in this year 1923 there is no doubt that he would cut like a lance through much of the present-day church membership. Paul, above all else, was a militant Christian in his ministry; his whole message was lifting up his Master, and every activity of a church Paul might have anything to do with, would have to measure up to that standard or it would go.

What was there, then, that made the early Christian church remarkable? It is recorded that the community made the comment that these people loved one another. That much, at least, has come down to us as one thing that made them distinct and different from others in the same cities. It might be interesting and quite useful as well for any church to stand up against that measuring stick and see if all the membership have that feeling. Or is it a fact that members of the same church are on the "outs"? Is it so that in some cases they have differences that have split the church? Is it a fact that there are churches all over the country that would never have been built had the members of a certain church not had differences they could not settle?

No church resents honest criticism—rather will it welcome a chance to get an honest view of what the man outside thinks. No church should be discouraged if it finds it is not a popular institution; its unpopularity, if brought about by vigorous strokes for great principles, may be the one great star in its crown. It should be zealous, though, that the people outside its fold should see in its members something different, something indicative of the possession of a power and an outlook and a forbearance that the people outside do not possess.

Ridgetown's "Grand Old Man."

Ridgetown lost a fine citizen a few days ago in the death of John P. McKinlay, and the Ridgetown Dominion refers to him as the "grand old man" of the community.

There seems to be an opportunity in towns and villages for men of this type to so conduct themselves and so shape and maintain their course in the community that they easily carry the title of the town's "grand old man." The same idea is wrapped up in the phrase "a gentleman of the old school."

It is high tribute to pay any man that he should be considered worthy of such distinction. The late John P. McKinlay was first a carpenter, then a farmer. Entering a business venture in middle life, he sustained a heavy loss. He turned to another line and found success. For years he was police magistrate, and no culprit could come before him and receive sentence without feeling that justice had been done. He mingled with the people of the community, enjoyed the sports of the younger and the company of the more mature. Such men, living their lives, doing their useful work, and passing on to that fine, mellowed maturity of almost a century of years, reaching and maintaining a stalwart, full-orbed manhood, are the very essence of our civilization. They wear with becoming grace and fitting recognition the phrase "the town's grand old man."

Mr. Fielding's Budget.

Hon. W. S. Fielding is ready to serve notice to Washington that Canada is ready at any time to discuss a reciprocal tariff on cattle, wheat, wheat flour, oats, barley, hay, potatoes, onions, turnips and fish. A similar standing offer was made in 1879, being taken down in 1887. It was proposed again in 1911, and the Liberals were defeated, since which time the cry for wider markets has continuously kept up. The Canadian parliament can go no farther than make the offer; United States will have to recover from its tariff fever before any progress can be made. The making of the offer signifies the attitude of the Canadian government, but it does not lessen the need for the trade scouts to get out and look for other markets.

The increasing of the British preference by 10 per cent is offset by the rule that makes it necessary to bring the goods in at Canadian ports. The difference in price to the consumer by a duty of 27 per cent at a high-rate port against 30 per cent at a lower-rate entry will amount to very little, if anything.

The taxpayers will hear with satisfaction that there are no new forms of taxation. New revenue is needed, but the finance minister will get along without. In that attitude he comes closer to the people than in any other way. The public expect, and they have a right to expect, that the government will assume this attitude on many matters—the people are paying taxes enough, and they must have relief.

The duty on cigarettes was cut, not because Mr. Fielding wanted to make them cheaper, but because so many of them are being smuggled from United States. In that belief he is quite correct. That is exactly what has been taking place for months, and it would take an army of revenue officers to stop it.

Mr. Fielding did not move far enough in lowering tariffs to please the free trade advocates in the House. He was probably justified in the stand he took; he knows the amount of unemployment there has been in some of the industrial centers, and he realizes that business, now facing a period of slow recovery, can best be assisted by letting present schedules, all of them moderate, remain as they are.

Mr. Fielding faced a very delicate situation in framing a tariff. Under normal conditions, or with the railways and marine making less inroads on the surplus of the country, he might have moved to eliminate more taxation, but knowing exactly what amount has to be raised, he had to leave the necessary machinery of taxation in operation to provide it.

"It Is Now Generally Conceded."

The Moderation League of Ontario is hard up. It is sending out an appeal for funds to help get its next issue of propaganda to the people. Unfortunately for the moderationists, printed material costs money, and the government insists on the foolish old custom of making them stick postage stamps on the stuff with which they clutter up the mail bags.

Their latest appeal says: "It is now generally conceded that we are at last within striking distance of securing a system of government control."

And it is in response to such rubbish as this that sensible people are urged to send along their money. "It is now generally conceded." That phrase is nothing short of brazen impudence. Who takes part in this "generally conceded" affair?

That sort of cheap talk smacks of desk room in some office where high hopes are built on easy money from a broadcast appeal for funds.

The man who buys German marks is a financial wizard compared to the man who pours his money into the knot-hole pointed out by the Moderation League of Ontario.

Living Conditions in U. S.

A little bit of home reading for the Canadian who imagines that he would be much better off in United States than right here in Canada:

"Living costs, which the public expected to fall to a reasonable, normal figure, have risen in the last year. Housing is almost as much of a puzzle as it was at the end of the war. Whenever the people start to build homes they find that materials and labor jump overnight."

That is from the editorial columns of the New York Herald.

Note and Comment.

Patience is a virtue, especially in the man from whom you extracted the last five-dollar loan.

Chinese bandits have reduced their demand for $1,000,000 ransom to $30,000. That reads like the prospects and performance of oil stocks.

It's quite a trick to get parking space in cities now. And the young folks say, with streets and parks blazing with light, parking space is also scarce.

Ontario's election is going to be held on wash-day, Monday. And in keeping with the best domestic conditions, many a candidate will be left out to bleach for a few days after the event.

Bootleggers at Santa Barbara are now put to work on a stone pile. By the time they reduce a number of large rocks to small ones by the aid of a very heavy hammer they may realize that law spells L-A-W.

Hon. Manning Doherty had his picture taken shaking hands with a man from the Hebrides playing the pipes. It is perhaps well that a minister of agriculture facing an election contest should become accustomed to any or all situations.

Mr. W. F. Nickle, speaking at his nomination at Kingston, said Conservative obstruction to Premier Drury's redistribution bill was carried on to prevent the extinction of the Conservative party in Ontario. Mr. Nickle prefers that the tombstone be dated June 25.

One of the strongest claims Mr. Wellington Hay and his followers can advance for support from rural sections is the fact that in the legislature the Liberals have given Mr. Drury consistent support in any legislation brought down that was in the interests of agriculture in Ontario.

DIBS AND DABS

WHAT SCIENCE KNOWS ABOUT AND ADVISES IN APPENDICITIS.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Diseases have a strange habit of running "in strings." Ask any ambulance surgeon about his experience about his experience. He will tell you that he will get a series of fractured skulls, broken legs appear to be epidemic, and after that there may be a number of cases of appendicitis.

It is a mere coincidence, of course, but to many a person it seems that the death of one friend is almost immediately followed by two more such deaths. There is a lot of apparently odd things in life and many beliefs—but perhaps the truest thing that may be said about them is that most of these traditions are without foundation in fact. But no matter how he scoffs at these "foolish ideas," the average man hates to walk under a ladder and will wait ten minutes rather than run through a funeral procession.

We don't believe these silly things—but we can't shake off our feeling about them. We continue in the secret fear that seven years of bad luck will follow the breaking of a looking-glass.

Whether appendicitis is more prevalent at some times or not is entirely problematical, yet it is a disease which comes frequently to the attention of the physician, and the subject of the appendix is attached to the bowel immediately below the union of the large and small intestines. It is usually about the size and shape of a cigarette. It may be much shorter or four times as long as this.

Just what the appendix is for nobody seems to know. Perhaps the child function is to continue in the secret fear that seven years of bad luck will follow the breaking of a looking-glass.

Life almost every other disease, appendicitis attacks you because you have neglected the rules of proper physical conduct. When we learn to care for ourselves as we do for our automobiles we will avoid a lot of misery.

One of the common mistakes is to neglect constipation, tendency to intestinal fermentation and the absence of proper foods. In a forum where I spoke the other night, somebody asked if 50 per cent of human ailments are due to wrong feeding. A woman in the front row called out:

"One hundred per cent!"

No doubt constipation, intestinal fermentation and all sorts of stomach and digestive troubles are due to wrong eating. The poor selection of foods results in conditions which pave the way for germ growth and serious physical disturbance.

Certain germs find in the appendix just the right soil and surroundings for rapid multiplication. Then the disease becomes inflamed and the patient is the victim of appendicitis.

At first there is pain all over the abdomen, but pretty soon it is centralized at one point. Pain and tenderness are localized on the right side, midway between the umbilicus and the rim of the pelvic or hip bone. The muscles of the abdomen become very rigid.

Fever, coated tongue, vomiting and constipation are the signs. The patient lies on his back with his legs drawn up to relieve the pressure. Hot applications should be applied to relieve the pain until the family doctor arrives.

MRS. A. G. Q.—Will you tell me how to get rid of water without tapping in a case of dropsy?

A.—Medicine often helps this. You should restrict your intake of liquids. Be guided by the advice your physician gives you.

MRS. B. N. Q.—I have a number of small lumps on my shoulder. The shoulder bone is sore and all around it seems to be swollen. What do you think this is? What would you advise me to do?

A.—You should have a thorough examination by your physician to determine the cause. This is important, as suitable treatment cannot be prescribed until the cause is found.

MRS. S. Q.—Will you please tell me if living near salt water is beneficial for laryngitis?

A.—Dry air is more beneficial in laryngitis. You should be under the care of a throat specialist, who will give you regular systematic treatment.

L. H. Q.—I am a young lady 29 years old and greatly troubled with pain in my head. I am very nervous and often feel like fainting. Will you kindly give me advice?

A.—This may be due to a heart condition or to constipation. Have your heart examined to see if any abnormal condition is present. Follow the advice the doctor gives you. For further particulars on the treatment of constipation, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and restate your question.

GRASS.—Kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and restate your question.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally, if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is included. The Frivolous Girl.

By ANNE CAMPBELL.

She's such a frivolous girl, she said, She'll never amount to a darn! There isn't a brain in her silly, bobbed head.

She'll have to spend a year, She dances all night on her frivolous feet!

She's thinking of jays night and day, The fellow that wedd her! His ruin's complete.

For there'll be the devil to pay! She's such a frivolous girl, they sigh!

She laughs at the slightest excuse, And when she decided that she'd be a bride.

They delightfully said: "What's the use? That flapper can't cook, and she dresses so fine, And all that she dreams of is clothes."

She's pretty, I grant you, but if she were mine, She'd think above darning her nose!

She WAS a frivolous girl, said they, When she had been married some time.

Who ever would think she would turn out this way? As Mother she's something sublime!

Her patience is great, and she laughs as she cooks, With babies, her life is a whirl! I hope that her daughter, who's blessed with her looks, Is just such a frivolous girl!

THE DIFFERENCE.

A teacher was conducting a lesson in history.

"Tommy Jones," she said, "what was there about George Washington which distinguished him from all other famous Americans?"

"He didn't lie," was the prompt answer.

DUST AND SPIRIT.

And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.—Genesis 2:7.

This practically sums up what the Bible has to tell us about the origin of man; his body comes from the dust, his soul from God.

If we know this, we can hold fast the truth of religion while we accept the discoveries of science. There is no enmity between them.

How long it took to form man's body from the dust—hours or ages—the Scriptures does not say.

If the Divine process of fashioning such a wondrous thing required many centuries and stages of development, that would make no difference with God, to whom a thousand years are as one day.

Let science trace the record in the rocks if it can. Why should it shake the soul which came from God?

A heaven-born spirit in an earthly house—that is our present life—that is what the Bible teaches. Evolution is not inconsistent with it.

Christianity tells us that the dust shall not rule the soul, but the soul shall rule the dust, and rise to immortality.

MOTHER'S WAY.

"Why do you love her, baby?" I asked.

With eyes of heaven's own blue And soul as pure as the drops of dew.

Enshrined in the morning dew, She answered, her eyes with wonder wide,

"Why, daddy, I thought you knew That why I love her, because she's my mother, And I want her always, don't you?"

"Why do you honor that name today Young man, in the noon of life?"

"When battles go hard she is the one Faithful through toil and strife."

"A flower on your coat in memory, You love her, sure as can be, Why?" I asked, with a manly flush,

"Because she's my mother," said he, "White was his hair as the snowy bloom

He wore as he went his way, I gently asked: "You remember her?"

"Aye! yes; she taught me to pray, Can a man forget an angel who walked

Side by side with tiny feet? And all follow her God with tottering steps Till together we all shall meet."

Mother, O what a wonderful thing Just to live each passing day, That souls may richer be, and purer, For walking in mother's way.

Budget Speech Shows Careful Collection of Revenue and Reduction in Necessary Additions To National Debt—Forecasts Ordinary Surplus Next Year of $14,000,000, But Railway Advances Will More Than Consume It

MEASURES TO AID CANADIAN INDUSTRIES

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, May 12.—A crowded house and packed galleries greeted H. W. S. Fielding, minister of finance, when he rose yesterday to present his seventeenth budget. In its delivery he occupied exactly six minutes—sixty minutes of close analysis of Dominion finances, of eagerly-awaited taxation proposals, keenly followed by an attentive house. His story at the outset was one of the burden of debt as an aftermath of war, of surplus on ordinary accounts, of a lowered up and turned into deficit by expenditures on special accounts, and railways. He closed with a buoyant note of optimism, Canada had been passing through a period of depression. During recent months there had been an exodus to the United States.

"But this, I believe," Mr. Fielding concluded, "is only a temporary condition. I believe they will come back. Already I see signs of reviving activity in our country. That we may check the exodus and bring back many of those who have already gone is a reasonable expectation. If we have faith in ourselves, faith in the intelligence, industry and courage of the Canadian people, faith in the vast and splendid resources of our dominion, we may justly look forward to an early revival to the prosperity of former days."

Last fiscal year, said Mr. Fielding, the chief revenue source was ordinary revenue over ordinary, special and capital accounts of nearly $38,000,000. But advances to railways and merchant marine took another $38,000,000, leaving an excess of ordinary, capital and special railway commitments over revenue of rather more than $8,000,000. In that year the estimated increase in the net debt amounted to $18,000,000.

In the fiscal year which opened a few weeks ago, Mr. Fielding estimated, taking present taxation as a basis, a revenue decreased by $21,000,000. The chief revenue source was ordinary revenue over ordinary, special and capital accounts of nearly $38,000,000. But advances to railways and merchant marine took another $38,000,000, leaving an excess of ordinary, capital and special railway commitments over revenue of rather more than $8,000,000. In that year the estimated increase in the net debt amounted to $18,000,000.

There would be something over through the fall, the estimates not being expended yet. There would be some addition to the national debt. He was hopeful, however, that the addition would be very small.

It would have been "very agreeable" to make the budget balance, but in view of the present business conditions, Mr. Fielding declared himself reluctant to impose new taxation. "We are proposing," he declared, "as we went into details of his taxation changes, a considerable reduction in our customs tariff, in the excise duties."

His main announcements were: Increase in the British preference on goods shipped through Canada rivers and sea ports.

Sales tax to be collected at source at the rate of 6 per cent on sales.

Reduction in sugar duties.

Excise duties on beet sugar dropped.

Cigarette tax reduced to former rate; tax on soft drinks replaced by tax on carbonic gas in use in manufacturing them.

Bounties granted on hemp and copper with the ceasing of bounties on manila, linen, thread and petroleum.

New items created to give protection to the artificial silk industry.

Duty increased on raisins to allow of special preference to be made to Australia.

Stress Tariff Stability.

Reduced excise on Canadian wines, raw furs, drapery for farm purposes, manuscripts and newspaper to be exempt from sales tax.

Mr. Fielding stressed the need for tariff stability.

"No business man," he declared, "would dare to enter upon a series of changes which might be brought into effect by frequent tariff changes. The tariff as it will be when the changes proposed today come into effect will be a moderate tariff, and probably as low as the country can afford under present conditions."

Subject to exceptional conditions, he thought the country "should be content to accept the tariff as it will now stand as one as fair and reasonable as can be prepared under all the circumstances, and businessmen should be able to carry on the enterprises without fear of being soon disturbed by further changes. He declared finally, "our readiness and our willingness" for reciprocity with the United States whenever they are ready to meet us on fair terms."

He proposed an amendment to Canada's tariff laws to authorize negotiations with any authorized representative of the United States looking to the conclusion of a commercial treaty; further, if the president of the United States under the proposed amendment would reduce by 50 per cent the American duty on cattle, wheat, wheat flour, oats, barley, potatoes, onions, turnips, and Canada would be prepared to make reductions on similar articles by way of compensation.

Debate on the budget is expected to be in full swing next week.

Before the orders of the day were called, Dr. Manion of Fort William asked the minister to carry out the recommendation of the royal commission on pensions and have the claims of ex-servicemen reviewed. Hon. Dr. Manion declared discretion was in the hands of the pension board, but that legislation would be brought down at the present session which it was hoped would meet the demands of ex-servicemen.

The discussion was with the pension board to interpret the act, however.

ever, and the government had urged continuously for the most generous interpretation possible. He thought it would be possible to amend the act to the satisfaction of all.

Loudly Applauded.

Mr. Fielding thereupon moved the house into committee of ways and means. He was loudly applauded by the government members when he rose to speak.

Mr. Fielding at the outset dealt with the financial statement for 1921-22, which, he declared, was really a "conservative year." The revenue had been $251,222,386, and the ordinary expenditure had been $247,560,690 as surpluses had been calculated on the past there had therefore been a surplus of $3,661,696. Capital expenditure had been $16,250,382, so that with ordinary and capital expenditure taken together there had been a surplus of $18,360,000.

It was a story of surpluses, but unfortunately it has been necessary to make advances to the railways totalling $7,560,000. So that there has been a total deficit of $31,360,384. The net result was that there had been added to the public debt the sum of about 61 millions.

Railways Kill Surplus.

For the fiscal year 1922-23 just closed, the ordinary revenue had been $253,619,000 and the ordinary expenditure had been $231,750,000. There was, therefore, a surplus of $21,869,000. Capital expenditure had totalled $14,500,000, and other expenditures had brought that sum up to $24,350,000. The surplus left was, therefore, $37,519,000. Railways again had destroyed the surplus, requiring advances during the year totalling $22,190,000, and to the merchant marine had been advanced $6,050,700, totalling to railways and merchant marine a total of $28,240,700. The balance left on the wrong side of the ledger. The net result was that there had been added to the national debt the sum of $42,933,086.

The receipt of $8,000,000 on exchange adjustment from the British government had helped the situation somewhat.

Dealing with the balance sheet of 1922-23, he placed the ordinary revenue at $253,619,000 and the ordinary expenditures at $231,750,000, which left a balance of $21,869,000. But there was to be added to the debt the sum of $24,350,000, and the balance on the other side of the account.

There would be something over through the fall, the estimates not being expended yet. There would be some addition to the national debt. He was hopeful, however, that the addition would be very small.

It would have been "very agreeable" to make the budget balance, but in view of the present business conditions, Mr. Fielding declared himself reluctant to impose new taxation. GENE STRATTON-PORTER ON THE HOME

If You Would Be Happy—
You Must Make a Garden!

Famous Lady of the Limberlost Says a Garden Is the Frame For the Picture of Every Home.

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER.
Famous Author of "Freckles," "The Girl of the Limberlost," etc.
Everyone agrees that a frame is essential to a picture. In the same degree, a garden is one of the component parts, one of the chief essentials, the frame enhancing the beauty of a real home.

It is very lovely if this frame can compromise a lawn having trees, flowering shrubs, vines and bushes, with a combination flower and vegetable garden at the back.

Of course, there is no limit to the amount of pains and expense that may be used in the making of a garden. Those who can afford it seem to derive great joy from calling in landscape gardeners and nurserymen, and surrounding their homes with small parks.

But the real garden, which is a vital part of a real home, is planned by the master and the mistress of the house.

Every inch of space is utilized. The most loving care should be given to the trees, vines and bushes that are set, in order that a continuity of flowers, colorful leaves or berries may be had throughout the season.

People having the space greatly appreciate a few fruit-trees. Those who have not must content themselves with shrubs and bushes, and one good forest tree for shade.

No Job for the Lazy.
The essential thing is that, working and planning together, a man and a woman shall take a piece of barren soil and so cover it with a thick mat of grass set with trees and bushes as to be an expression of their individuality, their artistic taste, their eye for color.

No lazy man can or will make a garden. People must be willing to work for the treasures of color and beauty and fragrance they wish to evolve. They must dig the soil deep and fertilize it well.

When a man plants, if he wants his growing things really to thrive, he must dig big holes, loosen the soil at the bottom, straighten out the thread roots of the trees and bushes he is setting, turn the tips downward, work the soil around them, moisten it to exclude air, and cut back the tops and rub off buds until his heart rebels, so that the root system may become well established before it is asked to spend strength on leaf and flower.

The chief joy of a garden lies in making things live, making them grow abundantly and flower beautifully.

Nervous Tortures
Irritation By Day and Sleeplessness At Night the Result.

There is no torture more intolerable than nervousness. The sufferer starts at every noise, is shaky and depressed. The least thing produces a feeling of irritation, and nights are often sleepless. Often, although in a completely exhausted condition, the patient is unable to sit or lie still. The nerves are in this jaded condition because they are being starved by poor, watery blood, and to restore them to a normal condition the blood must be made rich, red and pure. For this purpose, no other medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the blood. They bring to it the elements necessary to enrich and purify it, thus bringing new health and strength to run-down, nerve-worn people. There is no doubt about this. Thousands have testified to the blood-improving, nerve-restoring qualities of these pills. Among these is Mrs. Aubrey Caldwell, Melancon, N. S., who says: "I was badly run down and my nerves were in a terrible condition. I would start at the least sound, and often faint away. I could not sleep at night, and only those who have been in a similar condition can tell what I suffered. At my mother's request I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking them for several months I am surprised at my present condition of good health. My nerves are as sound as ever. I can sleep well and eat well, and have no more fainting spells. I can only say that cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too much for what they have done for me."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail, at 50 cents a box, from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.—Adv.

Gene Stratton-Porter Says:

If you would be happy, make a garden.

No lazy man can or will make a garden.

I do not see any trees advertised by the florists that I find more beautiful than oak, elm, beech, maple, linden.

It seems to me that the logical thing, the happy thing, to do is to take the common things that we find around us.

I have had from life no greater joy than walking through the woods surrounding Limberlost Cabin.

It is important that each child should be given at least a small space where he may dig in the dirt to his heart's content and test his skill in setting growing things for which he cares.

Witch-hazel in full bloom is an exquisite sight at an unusual time.

The old wild sweet briar is of unsurpassed loveliness.

The alders are a mist of lace, and those having the red berries are especially beautiful from a decorative standpoint.

The northern holly is a flaming wonder in the fall.

Throwing Away Beauty.
There are dozens of dainty, delicate vines having beautiful leaves and appealing flower and fruit clusters.

When it comes to the flowers and ferns of deep wood that may be utilized in a cool and shaded location, the list is long and surpassingly lovely.

And there is the joy of planning work so that time may be had to take a lunch and spend a day lifting and bringing in specimens.

I have had many country women say to me that they could not afford to buy flowers and shrubs with which to ornament their door yards; and I have pointed out the fact that I was spending my time, employing men and using large sums of money to remove to my premises and encourage to grow there the things that they were digging up and throwing away.

I recall one farmer to whom I spoke beside a road one morning.

I asked him if he thought the owner of a piece of land would care if I took up the roots of bitter-sweet growing where a rail fence had been removed.

I shall never forget the shout of laughter with which he greeted the question, and when his mirth had subsided he said to me:

"Well, now, since Henry's paying three dollars a day to have that 'tarnal stuff grubbed out, I don't reckon he would object much if you took it out for nothing."

So I took out "the 'tarnal stuff for nothing"—roots of bitter-sweet which I set beside a fence running between my orchard and the meadow back of it.

Those roots were matured and were set five years ago. Today that fence is a green hedge in spring in the fall a golden wonder. All winter its gorgeous, bloody berry clusters lift above the snow and lighten the dark days; while I cut great boxes of it to send to my friends in the city, where for months it hangs in wreaths and festoons of brilliancy.

Living Among Flowers.

It seems to me that the logical thing, the happy thing to do is to take the common things that we find around us, and demand of them that they yield us pleasure.

Personally, I have had from life no greater joy than walking through the woods surrounding Limberlost Cabin in May, where it is impossible to step off beaten paths without setting foot on white or blue violets, snowdrops, spring beauties, blue-eyed Marys, adder tongue lilies, and all the little, earthy, delicate flowers of spring; later the trillium lilies, stary campion and the bluebells, dogwoods and the redbuds, the golden orchid slippers and the white, pink-toed ones.

All these wonderful things, that have cost me only the labor of bringing them to my grounds, have paid me with the exquisite joy I find in loving them and living among them. If any city dweller who has a car will consent to drive slowly and keep his eyes well open, he will sooner or later find the wood where these things are growing, and if he has a space in which to put them that approximate in moisture, light, air and fertility the places from which he takes them, he may have a wonderful reward merely for the joy of finding what he would like to have and loving it into consenting to his environment.

The Real Home Has a Garden.
I cannot visualize any kind of building, no matter how stately nor how humble, as a real home unless the father and mother and the least child of the children are all interested in making things grow and bloom and vine around it.

It is difficult to set down in print an exact summary of what the growing of a garden does to anyone—the lessons it teaches in care, in patience, in persistence; and there are no words in which to express adequately the spiritual purging and refining the mental and moral uplift that result from just loving beautiful things into living for and with you.

EXPECT STORMY TIME IN CHOOSING LEADER

East Elgin U. F. O. Experiencing Difficulty in Selection of Candidate.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, May 11.—Even prominent United Farmers and East Elgin admit that trouble appears to be brewing in that riding in connection with the selection of a candidate to carry the party's standard in the coming election, and there is a feeling that the storm will break on the afternoon of Saturday, May 12, when the nomination convention will be held in the Aylmer Town Hall.

There are two distinct factions in East Elgin, those who are supporting Malcolm McVicar, the present U. F. O. representative, for re-nomination, and those who are backing W. F. Smith of Sparta, a man who has been prominently identified with the organization almost from the outset. One of these men will get the nomination, The Advertiser was assured today, and just what may develop is not known, although it is feared that there may be a breaking away.

Mr. Smith is looked upon as the strongest man for the candidature. Both Mr. Smith and Mr. McVicar were present at the organization meeting held in Aylmer last evening, and both delivered short addresses. Each man had a strong following at the meeting, but no clashes occurred, although the atmosphere was charged with possibilities at times.

The meeting was exceptionally well attended, every district in the riding being well represented. Mr. McVicar advocated deferring the nomination convention as long as possible, and then engaging in a short, whirlwind campaign. He felt that such was the course preferable to a long, weary campaign.

All those who attended were unanimous that the U. F. O. should have a candidate in the field. The withdrawal in favor of the Liberal candidate, J. C. Danice, ex-M.L.A., was not even suggested.

Decides Against Father Seeking Custody of Child

Appellate Court Dismisses Appeal of Benjamin Steacy, Elmsley Directing Girl To Remain With Aunt.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, May 11.—The appellate division today dismissed the appeal of Benjamin Steacy of Elmsley Township from the decision of Mr. Justice Giesbrecht that his 8-year-old daughter Julia should remain with her maternal aunt for a couple of years. The father had applied for custody of the little girl.

While his first wife was upon her death-bed, Steacy had promised that their little daughter should be brought up as a Roman Catholic. He has since married again, his second wife being a Methodist.

The appellate court holds that while a father may not divest himself of his obligations, he may deprive himself of his rights by his conduct and his agreements. Chief Justice R. A. Meredith dissents from the judgment and asks whether lifelong heartache and the loss of the child's affection sought to ease his wife's dying moments. Such a promise, he declares, is not binding in law.

While his first wife was upon her death-bed, Steacy had promised that their little daughter should be brought up as a Roman Catholic. He has since married again, his second wife being a Methodist.

then on account of its longevity, by that famous civic bugaboo—what to do about bylaw 916, the city's iron-clad agreement with the street railway corporation.

The city hall issue is still the "burning question of the hour"—even as it was when "Charlie" Graham ruled from the mayor's chair in the marble halls of municipal administration and Col. W. G. Coles rapped for order when the members of the "new city hall committee" assembled in special caucus.

Events of vital importance and rare significance have left their smudge on history's pages. Thrones have been carelessly upset in the grand rush. Regal crowns have been knocked off for the proverbial thirty pieces of silver or less, when there was need for great haste.

The underworld heads have rolled into the baskets or else their owners may be located laboring in distant chop houses across yonder border. Governments have appeared overnight from nowhere in particular and retired with equal celerity. The fate of nations has been decided, not once but frequently. The Ontario temperance act has stood the test of time. Premier Drury has gone back to Crown Hill. All this has transpired and more—but there is no new city hall in London, although the people wanted one in 1911.

Many Votes Taken.
None can side-step the plain, unvarnished declaration that the city councillors of by-gone years are chiefly responsible for this. Sometimes victims of unavoidable circumstance, but more than often agreeing to disagree, the legislators of the past have handed down this city hall football from father to son, and after the strife and fury of many a hot campaign, a desolate federal square remains as the silent reminder for those who buried miserably with a mandate from the people.

But how long is this sort of thing

This diagram shows the location of the proposed city hall if built on the Federal Square site. It also shows the new union depot location and the block on which other public buildings might be erected.

to last? Year after year, the people of this city have watched, first with interest and pride, then with impatience, and lastly with frank distaste, the city fathers argue and ponder to no purpose about the relative merits of sites and buildings.

Time and again, no person seems to recollect, the precise number of occasions they have voted on this proposition and that. Do you want it here? Do you want it there? Do you want it this year or do you want it at all. These and other questions have been fired at the electors until they are weary and "fed up" with the entire subject, and the aldermen thrown in for good measure.

But it is a long lane that has no ash barrel," they have said, and 1923 was heralded as the time-honored
"dawn of a new era." "Let George do it," they chorused, and George says he will let them let him, and to date six members of the council recite that they want to be in at the finish—if there is one.

Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways was in the city a few days ago. The mayor and other leading lights drove him about the city. They singled out the chief points of interest, including the old Grand Trunk depot. That in itself is a "historic pile"—a work of art. All acknowledged it as such, even their distinguished visitor.

Where is Your City Hall?

But Sir Henry wants to see everything when he steps "out among them." "Where is your city hall?"
he asked pleasantly as the civic party encircled Victoria Park. "Over on Dundas street," responded the mayor and his associates, as they diverted Sir Henry's attention to the beauties of their immediate surroundings.

And it has come to this—the mayor and the "city fathers" are actually ashamed of their civic offices—and they have need to be, in a growing city of 65,000 people, and a rosy future. What then do the ratepayers think?

In order to appreciate better the intricacies of the city hall muddle—and it seems to be a muddle, even at this late date—one must glance back through the city hall minutes to the year of our Lord 1912.

On Oct. 22, the McCormick Manufacturing Company, in a communication to Ald. W. G. Coles, chairman of the city hall committee, offered their property (now known from Halifax to Vancouver as the federal site) to the city for the sum of $125, 000 in cash, provided they were given a fixed assessment for the period of 15 years, and that the city will use "the entire block for the purpose of a federal square; provided, however, that the city will make all reasonable local improvements, and the company agrees to pay therefore according to the provisions of the local improvement act, and the company offers also to erect a magnificent plant costing $200,000, and employing 700 to 1,000 hands."

Federal Square.

In those days it was proposed that London should have a "federal" and not a municipal square. And Col.
Coles seems to have been the leading spirit. In any event, eleven years have slipped past, and no person has yet stepped out to dispute his unofficial designation—"father of the federal square movement."

Optimism was rampant at that period. The federal government presented a friendly demeanor toward the project, and through the medium of the late Gen. Sir Sam Hughes it

ALD. FRANK MCKAY.

promised co-operation and financial assistance to the tune of "not exceeding $100,000."

In a letter to Col. (then Capt.)
Coles on Nov. 15 of the same year, the late Sir Sam voiced the sincere hope that the city hall bylaw would be indorsed "in order that the city and the militia department" would own the entire block" (bounded by Dundas, Waterloo, Wellington and King streets).

The council was evidently "sold" with the idea. They passed the bylaw in any event, authorizing an expenditure of $75,000, and the members of the city hall committee and their associate supporters were busy drafting plans and building halls—in the air, as it has developed since.

Along about Jan. 30 of the following year the first stumbling block was encountered. Mayor Graham received a communication from Gen. Hughes explaining that it was "too late to get their $100,000 into this year's estimate, owing to various delays, and it would be much better to wait and place it in next year's estimate. The militia department would be pleased to grant the owners permission to occupy the premises for another twelve months."

Then, after an exhaustive interchange of communications back and forth with the Ottawa authorities, it was decided to defer inauguration of the federal scheme, and an agreement was signed with the McCormick Company which provided that the premises should be given up on or before Sept. 1, 1914. But that corporation was permanently established in the annexed district of East London long before that date. In the meantime, in 1913, the sum of $250,000 was voted by the people.

War Intervenes.

Then the Great War intervened.
Other affairs claimed the close and immediate attention of the late Sir Sam and his advisers and colleagues down Ottawa way. The federal square proposal was allowed to lapse, only to be revived from time to time

by succeeding mayors and councils, who battled in turn as to the need or otherwise of a city hall or a federal square.

Records reveal the fact that while the government was compelled to shelve the scheme until the cessation of hostilities, Col. Coles and his adherents, both in and out of the city council, had not thrown up the sponge. They fully anticipated that the authorities at the Dominion capital would remain true to their pledges.

This is evidenced by a report in
The Advertiser of Dec. 29, 1916, from W. W. Gammage, then a member of the board of control (an organization since departed to join ex-Mayor Wilson's civic commission).

During a visit to Ottawa the controller had met Hon. Robert Rogers, then minister of public works, who promised that the government would surely advance its share of the finances once peace had been declared.

This is recorded as being "very gratifying" to ex-Controller Coles, who, while appreciating the need of Square movement.

conservation of public moneys until after the war, said: "I believe that the city would regret the step if the federal scheme is voted down."
Time slipped along, and a decision was reached in Europe, and the boys, including Col. Coles, came back from "over yonder." The city hall tussle was reopened anew in civic circles.

ALL LONDON HAS AS A CITY BUILDING.

and Dundas streets. Though serving its purpose, it lacks many features an up-to-date city hall should have and certainly is not an adequate structure for a city of London's size and importance.

and has continued intermittently ever since.

Debatable Point.

From a perusal of the files it would seem that the chief point of difference among the aldermen in 1919 was whether the federal idea should be dropped like a hot potato and the construction of a city hall be undertaken. Some evidently wanted the hall on the Spencer block, even as certain of last year's council did, and do yet for that matter.

It is noted, however, that Col. Coles had not lost sight of his pet scheme while away from the Forest City.
In April, 1919, he was one of a number of local gentlemen who traveled down to Ottawa to consult Hon.
Frank Carvell, who succeeded Hon.
"Bob" Rogers, the minister of public works, who had been so enthusiastic when conferring in 1916 with Controller Gammage.

From Col. Coles' report of the conference, as contained in The Advertiser of that date, it would appear that all the members of the council were not so bent upon the idea, however. Incidentally it could be reasonably assumed that Ald. William Wilson was as much a part of the opposition then as he seems to be at present writing.

"Ald. Wilson knocked the scheme for all he was worth," related Col.

Coles, "and told the government that no person wanted the federal square project. The minister seemed quite impressed with the idea, however, in spite of this, but my impression was that the deputation lacked pep."

In another report of the same conference it is written that "Ald. Wilson was very aggressive 'lobbying' with the ministers against the scheme."

Ald. Gordon Drake was also a member of the party, and his report was very gloomy. "I don't think the government wants anything to do with it," he said. "I think they want to get out of it, and right through the meeting Ald. Wilson kept remarking that the people didn't want the hall on the square at all."

Mr. Somerville's View.

C. R. Somerville, mayor at that period of evolution, accompanied the deputation, although he is credited with the following statement as he boarded the Ottawa train: "We are

ALD. PETER J. WATT.

through flirting with the federal government, and one thing is sure in any event, I favor building the hall

The upshot of the Ottawa negotiations can be adduced from the following editorial extract of that day:
"The deputation which went from this city to ask the government to keep its promise is said to have been composed largely of members who were either apathetic in the matter or else had other plans in mind of which they approved."

And so the battle dragged along.

not to build it on the Spencer site.
Councillors and others emerged with increasing frequency to argue the merits of other sites, and it is recol-ected that prospective locations were considered, ranging from the county site, King and Ridout streets, to the

"V" at the northwest entrance to Victoria Park. Hope of government participation had long since been abandoned, it seemed.

In 1921 there was still further activation for a new city hall on the Spencer property, and Col. Coles and others considered such drastic action as injunction proceedings to halt operations of this order if attempted.
Plans for the new building drafted during this regime were all upset, however, by the people, who rejected by a majority of 2,000 the proposal to build on the present location. No person at the city hall can state definitely just where these outlines are now—if not destroyed.

Chinese Puzzle.

The people turned the trick again at the last election, the only marked difference being that the majority against the Spencer block was doubled. But if ex-Mayor Wilson and his colleagues planned to leave a veritable Chinese puzzle for the 1923 council to ferret out, they certainly succeeded.

"Build on the McCormick property, where the people have said they want it," pronounced Mayor Wenige.
"Build it on the McCormick property," concurred Ald. George Burdick, even as he argued when he was a member of the council in 1918, and as he urged from the public platform before the last election.

"Build it on the McCormick site,
where the people have said they want it," defines Ald. Drake, and he proposes to move to that effect at the next session of the finance committee, reluctant to await the pleasure of Mayor Wenige or anyone else for that matter.

Ald. Peter J. Watt is also convinced beyond further argument, that the old McCormick tract is the logical location, as well as the choice of the people.

And both Labor members of the council, Ald. John Colbert and Ald.
Frank McKay, see "eye to eye" with the mayor's appeal for action.

But wait a minute—don't go too fast. There are other counties to be heard from. In the first instance we have Ald. John T. May, Ridout street, who wants the new city hall on the county property, near the corner of Ridout and King streets.

Ald. May kept interjecting this suggestion during the 1922 council sessions, despite the fact that he was standing alone, and lured no one into his camp. He is still alone, although he retains a bulldog grip upon his original proposition.

Alternative Site.

Then we turn to Ald. W. A. Wilson, who does not appear to view the McCormick site as the most suitable choice for the new city hall, if it is ever built. The former chairman of the board of works has referred several times to the corner of Queen's avenue and Clarence street, (selected by Thomas Adams, town planning expert), arguing that the city could purchase this property at a reasonable figure and not a substantial savings. He has been frank and emphatic in his recent unfavorable opinions relative to the McCormick land, just as he was when he went to Ottawa four years ago.

Ald. Douglass, the present chairman of the board of works, advances with a new train of thought. There is some doubt in his mind, he explains, whether the people want a new hall on the latter site, and even if so, do they want it this year? He believes that while the people, by a 4,000 majority, eliminated the Spencer block from the contest, it did not necessarily follow that they wanted the hall across the street.

As an alternative site he submits the "V"—the northwest extremity of Victoria Park—asserting that this would be an admirable location for many reasons.

Last February, with the usual discussion attending such events, a majority ruled council ruled that the city hall proposal should rest quietly for another year—as insufficient funds were available.

But this did not mark the finish.
Ald. Colbert was next responsible for a resurrection, questioning why it was not possible to sell all portions of the so-called Federal Square, exclusive of the McCormick property.

and by coupling the proceeds with such debentures, long since voted for that purpose, undertake the immediate construction of civic office buildings—not a castle.

Immediate Action.

Always alert to the possibilities of the situation, the advocates of the "immediate action" program seized this opportunity to further their cause. Long-distance debate ensued and a compromise was made. Request was entered in the city of London bill, then going to the Ontario Legislature for permission to sell all property, exclusive of the Mc-Cormick site, without a vote to the people.

Mayor Wenige and Ald. Judd journeyed down to the capital to note it the progress of this legislation in the midst of the private bill committee.
Another hitch occurred when inquisitive members of the latter section of the Drury administration arose in mass formation to question what was the opinion of the masses in this respect.

It will be remembered that the mayor and the chairman of his finance committee came back to London, uncertain whether the city of London bill would ever see the light of day again; that portion of it at least pertaining to the council's permanent donating issue.

Dr. H. A. Stevenson, the sitting member for London, was quite prominent when the topic claimed the attention of his associates in the Legislature, and from his attitude throughout it was quite evident that it was his desire that nothing should transpire that would, in the slightest manner, threaten the existence of the McCormick site as the spot for the next city hall.

When the Drury government, now enacting that process commonly recognized as "going to the country," the member returns to his constituency in a jubilant frame of mind. "I have fixed it," he reports, "and is such a manner that if they do not choose to build the city hall on the McCormick site they won't be able to build it anywhere."

Dr. Stevenson's Action.

Dr. Stevenson was mayor in this city upon more than one occasion, and naturally he is more or less familiar with the city hall problem.

"When I was mayor the people voted to put the hall on the corner of

HIGH COSTS CURTAIL BUILDING PROJECTS

Public Is Now Busily Engaged Cutting Down Operating Expenses.

New York, May 11.—Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Conditions says:

"Stocks are tardily recognizing the changes which have been under way since last autumn. Some of these are the rising operating costs, the industrial boom behind them, the agricultural depression, the political aspects of the same, the Ruhr occupation, and the political disintegration of Europe."

"Building projects here and there are being suspended because of high costs, so that the boom is culminating in the usual way. Public economizing has begun, and after beginning it seldom stops until operating expenses have been reduced."

"Investors a few weeks ago were thinking what stocks might rise, the most, but now they seem to be thinking what ones have the most value behind their market prices. This looks like a real change of mind, and probably explains why the rails held better than the industrials. Presumably, they will continue to hold better for some time, but this same stability of value will probably cause them to rally with less vigor."

"Fertilizer companies turned the corner about a year ago and seem to be on the road toward slow but persistent improvement. Acreages promise to show a good increase this year, and fertilizer consumption is gaining, although prices are a little unsatisfactory to producers."

"General trade in peak years is usually very good in the summer, but the autumn boom is habitually disappointing, and expense cutting is usually the feature of November and December."

"The market for refined sugar is firm and higher early today, with a better inquiry reported, prompted by the continued activity in the refined market. Prices were 1-1/16 higher to the basis of 4 1/2c for Cubas, net and freight, equal to 6.25c for centrifugal."

"The raw sugar futures market was firmer on renewed buying by trade interests and commission houses, prompted by the higher ruling of the spot market. Prices at one time showed advances of 8 to 10 points on active positions, but the market has since increased, and prices eased off to about the closing level of the previous night."

EXPORTS FROM CANADA SHOW LARGE INCREASE

Three Times Greater Than the United States For the Past Year.

Canadian Machinery News says:

"That the industrial activity in practically all lines is being revived, there is no shade of a doubt."

"Canadian export trade continues to improve, and it is interesting to note, that, on a per capita basis, it was three times as great as that of the United States during the last calendar year."

"Substantial orders for steel and other products have recently been received by Canadian manufacturers from buyers in the United States, at prices higher than those ruling in Canada, a situation created no doubt, by the difficulty of obtaining prompt deliveries at home."

"A comparison of conditions in Canada with those apparent in the United States a few months ago, seems to justify the belief that the degree of improvement in Canadian export trade is not only gradual, but that it is continuing to advance at a rapid rate."

"There is a slight shading in tin, spelter, lead and antimony, which are sold at $1.15, $1.20, $1.25, $1.30, $1.35, $1.40, $1.45, $1.50, $1.55, $1.60, $1.65, $1.70, $1.75, $1.80, $1.85, $1.90, $1.95, $2.00, $2.05, $2.10, $2.15, $2.20, $2.25, $2.30, $2.35, $2.40, $2.45, $2.50, $2.55, $2.60, $2.65, $2.70, $2.75, $2.80, $2.85, $2.90, $2.95, $3.00, $3.05, $3.10, $3.15, $3.20, $3.25, $3.30, $3.35, $3.40, $3.45, $3.50, $3.55, $3.60, $3.65, $3.70, $3.75, $3.80, $3.85, $3.90, $3.95, $4.00, $4.05, $4.10, $4.15, $4.20, $4.25, $4.30, $4.35, $4.40, $4.45, $4.50, $4.55, $4.60, $4.65, $4.70, $4.75, $4.80, $4.85, $4.90, $4.95, $5.00, $5.05, $5.10, $5.15, $5.20, $5.25, $5.30, $5.35, $5.40, $5.45, $5.50, $5.55, $5.60, $5.65, $5.70, $5.75, $5.80, $5.85, $5.90, $5.95, $6.00, $6.05, $6.10, $6.15, $6.20, $6.25, $6.30, $6.35, $6.40, $6.45, $6.50, $6.55, $6.60, $6.65, $6.70, $6.75, $6.80, $6.85, $6.90, $6.95, $7.00, $7.05, $7.10, $7.15, $7.20, $7.25, $7.30, $7.35, $7.40, $7.45, $7.50, $7.55, $7.60, $7.65, $7.70, $7.75, $7.80, $7.85, $7.90, $7.95, $8.00, $8.05, $8.10, $8.15, $8.20, $8.25, $8.30, $8.35, $8.40, $8.45, $8.50, $8.55, $8.60, $8.65, $8.70, $8.75, $8.80, $8.85, $8.90, $8.95, $9.00, $9.05, $9.10, $9.15, $9.20, $9.25, $9.30, $9.35, $9.40, $9.45, $9.50, $9.55, $9.60, $9.65, $9.70, $9.75, $9.80, $9.85, $9.90, $9.95, $10.00, $10.05, $10.10, $10.15, $10.20, $10.25, $10.30, $10.35, $10.40, $10.45, $10.50, $10.55, $10.60, $10.65, $10.70, $10.75, $10.80, $10.85, $10.90, $10.95, $11.00, $11.05, $11.10, $11.15, $11.20, $11.25, $11.30, $11.35, $11.40, $11.45, $11.50, $11.55, $11.60, $11.65, $11.70, $11.75, $11.80, $11.85, $11.90, $11.95, $12.00, $12.05, $12.10, $12.15, $12.20, $12.25, $12.30, $12.35, $12.40, $12.45, $12.50, $12.55, $12.60, $12.65, $12.70, $12.75, $12.80, $12.85, $12.90, $12.95, $13.00, $13.05, $13.10, $13.15, $13.20, $13.25, $13.30, $13.35, $13.40, $13.45, $13.50, $13.55, $13.60, $13.65, $13.70, $13.75, $13.80, $13.85, $13.90, $13.95, $14.00, $14.05, $14.10, $14.15, $14.20, $14.25, $14.30, $14.35, $14.40, $14.45, $14.50, $14.55, $14.60, $14.65, $14.70, $14.75, $14.80, $14.85, $14.90, $14.95, $15.00, $15.05, $15.10, $15.15, $15.20, $15.25, $15.30, $15.35, $15.40, $15.45, $15.50, $15.55, $15.60, $15.65, $15.70, $15.75, $15.80, $15.85, $15.90, $15.95, $16.00, $16.05, $16.10, $16.15, $16.20, $16.25, $16.30, $16.35, $16.40, $16.45, $16.50, $16.55, $16.60, $16.65, $16.70, $16.75, $16.80, $16.85, $16.90, $16.95, $17.00, $17.05, $17.10, $17.15, $17.20, $17.25, $17.30, $17.35, $17.40, $17.45, $17.50, $17.55, $17.60, $17.65, $17.70, $17.75, $17.80, $17.85, $17.90, $17.95, $18.00, $18.05, $18.10, $18.15, $18.20, $18.25, $18.30, $18.35, $18.40, $18.45, $18.50, $18.55, $18.60, $18.65, $18.70, $18.75, $18.80, $18.85, $18.90, $18.95, $19.00, $19.05, $19.10, $19.15, $19.20, $19.25, $19.30, $19.35, $19.40, $19.45, $19.50, $19.55, $19.60, $19.65, $19.70, $19.75, $19.80, $19.85, $19.90, $19.95, $20.00, $20.05, $20.10, $20.15, $20.20, $20.25, $20.30, $20.35, $20.40, $20.45, $20.50, $20.55, $20.60, $20.65, $20.70, $20.75, $20.80, $20.85, $20.90, $20.95, $21.00, $21.05, $21.10, $21.15, $21.20, $21.25, $21.30, $21.35, $21.40, $21.45, $21.50, $21.55, $21.60, $21.65, $21.70, $21.75, $21.80, $21.85, $21.90, $21.95, $22.00, $22.05, $22.10, $22.15, $22.20, $22.25, $22.30, $22.35, $22.40, $22.45, $22.50, $22.55, $22.60, $22.65, $22.70, $22.75, $22.80, $22.85, $22.90, $22.95, $23.00, $23.05, $23.10, $23.15, $23.20, $23.25, $23.30, $23.35, $23.40, $23.45, $23.50, $23.55, $23.60, $23.65, $23.70, $23.75, $23.80, $23.85, $23.90, $23.95, $24.00, $24.05, $24.10, $24.15, $24.20, $24.25, $24.30, $24.35, $24.40, $24.45, $24.50, $24.55, $24.60, $24.65, $24.70, $24.75, $24.80, $24.85, $24.90, $24.95, $25.00, $25.05, $25.10, $25.15, $25.20, $25.25, $25.30, $25.35, $25.40, $25.45, $25.50, $25.55, $25.60, $25.65, $25.70, $25.75, $25.80, $25.85, $25.90, $25.95, $26.00, $26.05, $26.10, $26.15, $26.20, $26.25, $26.30, $26.35, $26.40, $26.45, $26.50, $26.55, $26.60, $26.65, $26.70, $26.75, $26.80, $26.85, $26.90, $26.95, $27.00, $27.05, $27.10, $27.15, $27.20, $27.25, $27.30, $27.35, $27.40, $27.45, $27.50, $27.55, $27.60, $27.65, $27.70, $27.75, $27.80, $27.85, $27.90, $27.95, $28.00, $28.05, $28.10, $28.15, $28.20, $28.25, $28.30, $28.35, $28.40, $28.45, $28.50, $28.55, $28.60, $28.65, $2

MODERN GOLF

By W. J. Frank Thompson

NOTED CANADIAN GOLFERS

NO. 6—GOLF COUEISM.

The time element in golf has more to do with its fascination and enigmatic character than any other factor. Substitute the moving ball for the stationary one (with the appropriate changes in the club) and you have, by reducing the time element, solved the mystery of golf. Several seconds elapse between the address and the despatch of the ball in which a thousand and one thoughts may occur. If there were no time to reflect in golf during the execution of the stroke, but it took place more or less automatically and unconsciously, as is the case in tennis or baseball, one would hear less about the psychology of the game. Golf is primarily a game of propulsion or muscular effort, or as physiologists would say, it has to do principally with the motor centers, whereas reflection has to do with what is called the ideational centers of the brain.

Now when we reflect how a stroke is to be made at the same time that we make it, there is a certain opposition between the motor and ideational centers resulting in more or less confusion. In playing golf the problem is to allow the motor centers to work while inhibiting all other centers. When we play our best golf we just play without thinking much how it is done, and numerous professionals have testified that while driving the ball their minds were more or less blank. As one said: "I didn't think at all, I just swoop her away."

Don't Think. Somewhat of this opposition is seen in the commonplace experience of thinking how one steps when walking down stairs. It slows up the pace and sometimes causes one to stumble. In the language of Coue, we substitute the words conscious and unconscious.

All our moral, social and intellectual concepts are the result of the conscious, while the action of the vital organs, as well as digestion, etc., are the work of the unconscious. The unconscious never makes a mistake in its work. Although it is the engineer, it is dependent on the conscious for its material. If the conscious thinks of a "bunker," the unconscious takes it at its word and realizes its suggestion. How this is done Coue does not say, any more than the physiologist can explain how his motor and ideational centers work. Coue is not interested in why or how suggestion works, but more in the fact that it does. His contribution has been in eliminating the element of effort. Whenever effort is present there is always a certain opposition going on. The efficacy of Coue's rosary is to keep prominently before us whatever is desired. The golfer has the same problem. He must keep before him the desired end, which is the ball. This alone should occupy his attention. Attention from the very nature of

to fluctuate. It will be difficult enough to keep the eye on the ball without deliberately making it more so by thinking of bunkers which may or may not enter into the game.

Mental Hazards. When one looks at the flag and then at the bunker, the attention fluctuates from flag to bunker, resulting in a certain confusion, and as Coue says, the unconscious accepts the stronger suggestion. All short holes are for the most part mental hazards and are designed purposely to distract the player. If the bunkers were removed, the player would realize how ridiculously easy some of the present formidable-looking short holes are. Distraction may come from having different lines. Aim in golf is something far more than getting the feet in the right position. This is clearly seen in the case of those holes where there is an out-of-bounds to the right. The player usually faces away from the danger to avoid it, but instead of playing in the direction he stands the tendency is still to think of the out-of-bounds, and unconsciously he aims in this direction. The result is usually a worse slice than before. In fact, the stars try to reproduce the above conditions when they deliberately try for a slice.

The Putting Green. The putting green is a fertile field for the study of golf psychology. Due to the fact that the putt is the last stroke, the mistakes of the green become more apparent. It is oftentimes the last chance to recoup oneself against bad play in the field. The hole is more or less a converging point. Players become anxious and apprehensive, for they know what it means to hole or miss a putt. We hope we may hole it, but we fear that we shall not. The agitation is increased if one happens to have a reputation for being a putter. The task is made immeasurably more difficult if some one insinuates, while the putt is about to be made, that it is going to be missed. If one is blessed with a good putting style and is able to ignore such distraction, no harm is done. But for the person who is laboring under a bad putting spell such remarks are almost criminal.

Confidence First. Confidence on the green is more important than anything else. With it wonders can be accomplished, even with a defective style. Without it the most perfect mechanical swing is rendered useless. Usually when a player feels he can hole a putt, he does so, and the converse is true also of missing one when the player thinks it impossible of holing. Coue's explanation is that the unconscious accepts our fears and doubts because they are stronger, and realizes them. The cure is to think success. How this is to be done is the rub. It will depend largely on the ingenuity of the player. So long as he eliminates effort and remains quiet and calm, the problem should not be insoluble. Nothing succeeds like success, and this is the reason why a champion is usually so hard to dislodge from his position. He plays with such confidence. The reputation of a formidable player is an additional handicap for the young golfer to overcome so long as he dwells on it. It has well been said: "Towards die a thousand times before their death, the valiant never taste of death but once." (Copyrighted British and Colonial Press, Limited)

BRITISH AMERICAN Straight-Run GASOLENE

B RITISH American Straight-Run Gasolene gives you much lower cost per mile of motoring. Why? Because it's a "straight run" product, consistently clean, quick-firing and powerful.

It isn't a blend of light and heavy gasolene where the light product rises to the top—like the cream on milk—gives good results and is used up first; then the heavy product comes along fouling the engine, loading it with carbon, cutting down the mileage, sending up the cost.

GERMANY IS SINGING THE NEW SONG OF THE SHIRT WHILE 'ARISTOCRATS' WORK AT THREE CENTS A DAY

Gorgeous Palace Where the Kaiser Used to Strut Now Shelters the Housewives' League—German Ladies Have Become Scrubwomen and seamstresses—Paying the Price of War.

SEWING 'A SHROUD' AS WELL AS A SHIRT

Berlin, Germany. With fingers weary and worn, With eyelids heavy and red, A woman sat, in unwomanly rage, Plying her needle and thread,—itch—stitch—stitch! poverty, hunger, and dirt; And still with a voice of dolorous pitch, she sang the 'Song of the Shirt.'

Work—work—work Till the brain begins to swim! Work—work—work Till the eyes are heavy and dim! Band, and gusset, and band, Band, and gusset, and seam,— All over the buttons I fall asleep, And sew them on in a dream!"

Thomas Hood's "Song of the Shirt" is closely into the Germany of today. The fall of the mark has ruined the middle and upper classes and hundreds of thousands of women, who formerly were rich or well-to-do, are now destitute and looking for work. Some go out to service at pitiful wages, some take in sewing, some are scrub-women in the public buildings, some even walk the streets as sandwich advertisements of the vaudeville theatres, and others hide their poverty by working secretly in homes where they were once society queens. These reduced gentlewomen are legion, and some starve rather than let their wants be known. A baroness who died the other day, upon being prepared for burial, was found to be wearing paper underclothing, and the fustian of others are so desperate that many of the charitable organizations are trying to relieve them. One movement, started here in Berlin in a small way, is now spreading through all parts of the German capital and even going out to other cities and towns. This is the establishing of a home industry that such women can carry on outside the factories and stores. It might really be called a sweat-shop industry, in which the workers are aristocrats. The articles made will go to the wholesale and retail stores, and in some cases to factories. They are prepared according to order, and at prices much below those in the regular trade.

In the Kaiser's Palace. The headquarters of this new movement is the palace of the Kaiser. The gorgeous home in which he strutted about, often changing his uniform a half dozen times a day, is now given up to public offices and shown also as a museum. One of the offices is that of the German Housewives' League, which has to do with supplying this work to reduced gentlewomen. The director of the new industry is Miss Pawel Ramingen, a society lady of great organizing and executive ability. When I called upon her she was surrounded by goods of all kinds, made by the ex-aristocrats, and, as we looked over them, well-dressed but woe-begone ladies, young and old, came in, bringing the work they had done and carrying away the material and orders for other work to do. During my stay I looked over the stock in trade and made some purchases to take home as presents. The things are exquisitely done and the amount of labor upon them in comparison with the prices charged is pitiful. I bought two lace doilies, made by hand with fine linen thread. Each was twice as large as a dinner plate and as delicate as a cobweb. The price was not quite fifty cents, and the woman who did the work received thirty cents each. Miss Ramingen told me that it takes at least ten days to make a doily and as I look at mine I am sure this is an underestimate. I have had one photographed, pinning it on the back of the black dress of my typist, to show my friends what it is like. It measures fourteen inches in diameter, and is so gossamerlike that it might almost be called a museum piece. I am ashamed to own it when I think that the woman who made it could not have earned more than ten cents a day.

Baby Shoes at Two Cents a Pair. The ladies were anxious to sell, and I bought a number of other articles of various kinds. I bought six pairs of baby shoes for my little grandson, aged four months, at a price that could not have netted the maker more than two cents a pair. They were of fine white wool, trimmed with blue, and were crocheted by hand. I bought for my little granddaughter, who was born in Paris just five months ago, a beautiful sheet of fine netting to spread over her cradle. This article lies before me as I write. It is four feet in width by five feet in length. It is edged with silk thread and decorated with great lilies of white silk embroidery running four inches deep around the edges. The work is all by hand, and I am told that the woman put two weeks' continuous labor upon it. Nevertheless it cost me just 80 cents, and half of this must have been included in the material. There is also some sentiment connected with this quilt. It is the work of a Baltic countess, who had a great estate in Latvia, where she lived in luxury until the new government of that republic confiscated her property and gave the most of it over to the peasants. They left her one hundred acres, but if she sold that today it would be for Latvian money, which is worth no more than the currency here in Berlin.

IN GERMANY TODAY. War is exacting its penalties in Germany. The women of the middle classes are the ones hardest hit, and, as in the picture above, some are reduced to such extremities that they are compelled to pick over the garbage outside the markets in search of scraps of food.

When the countess came to Germany she had considerable money, but she invested it in German bonds, which she thought as good as gold. All this has vanished with the fall of the mark. At her home not far from Riga, she had a large country house, and her entertainments were famous. Today she lives in a little furnished room in the heart of the city, and thanks God when the sun shines, so that she can save on the light by which she does this exquisite work. Think of trying to sew at the rate of 40 cents a week, one-half of which must go for the materials on which you are working, and you have the condition of this titled lady who made the quilt for my baby granddaughter.

1,000 Stitches for a Cent. Among the other things shown me at this store, inside the gorgeous palace of the Kaiser, were some lady's handkerchiefs of fine cambric, about as big as a sheet of notepaper, rolled up with thread of different colors. I bought 30 at a cost of less than a dollar, and I venture each has at least one thousand stitches in its beautiful border. The price I paid was about three cents apiece and I feel guilty and mean as I look at them. Nevertheless, I paid twice what the woman asked when she spread them before me and she was delighted. I doubt if any woman who is reading this could do the work on one of these three-cent handkerchiefs in the space of six hours. Still the prices are such that the labor cost could not have been more than one cent.

Baroness Making Sweaters. I cannot speak of all the beautiful things made by these reduced gentlewomen and of their ridiculous prices, but I must say a word concerning the chief business which, just now, is the knitting of sweaters. Thousands of ladies' sweaters are being turned out for the department stores and wholesale dealers of the German capital. The sweaters are of the finest wool or silk or mercerized cotton. They are long, full-sleeved and of a fashionable cut. It takes a fast worker at least three days to make one, and the price she receives in marks at the current rate of exchange is only ten cents. Imagine the most refined and best educated old lady you know, who has spent her life in luxury and perhaps been a society leader, working three days for a dime and you have one phase of this home industry.

The sweaters are sold by the department stores at high prices. One can buy them there or he can purchase the wool or silk and have them knit to measure at the cost of the labor. I have a friend who has just ordered two which reach from her neck to her hips, embracing her capacious 46 bust. She is to pay less than 75 cents apiece and she will have them eight days from now. Suppose you buy some wool and a pair of knitting needles and make yourself a garment of a similar kind. It will not compare in beauty with the work of these ladies, but it will show you how much each of them does for two nickels.

Moreover, the work must be done by experts and the unskilled have to be trained before they can make anything worth selling. The Housewives' League has skilled teachers, some of whom come from the wholesale and retail firms which give the orders, and the applicants have to learn just how to make the garments so that they will sell. The amateur often has to pull out her knitting many times before her labor is sal-

by working half the night, is able to turn out a sweater in two days, but the gas light cuts down her profits. As to hemstitching, the pay for a handkerchief with six rows about the edges is two cents, and only those who have good eyes can do that work at all. I have four lace-trimmed handkerchiefs, the tag upon which states that the woman who made them worked 96 hours. The selling price of the four was less than two dollars.

Of course, the women cannot live on such wages. They barely exist, and I am told that now and then one dies on the job. This recalls another verse of the "Song of the Shirt":

"O men with sisters dear! O men with mothers and wives! It is not linen you're wearing out, But human creatures' lives! Stitch—stitch—stitch, In poverty, hunger and dirt— Sewing at once, with a double thread, A shroud as well as a shirt!"

Aristocratic Stitches. I asked Miss Pawel Ramingen to tell me something of her principal workers. They belong to all classes of the former well-to-do and even of the rich. Some are the wives of high government officials of the old regime. The husbands of others are officers who have had nothing to do since the trade of killing men has been given up for the time, and many are widows living upon pensions which the fall of the mark has so reduced that they yield practically nothing. There are five hundred ladies who call every day for work of this kind and more than two thousand who come in every now and then to get something on which they can labor as their home duties permit. Eight well-known, charitable ladies are now handling the store in the palace, and branches are being organized in different sections of the city in order that the women may save carfare by getting the work near their homes.

The institution is now being assisted by the municipality, but it will soon be on a self-paying basis. The demand for work is rapidly increasing, and eventually tens of thousands of these former aristocrats will be so employed. As prices rise and times get better, it is hoped that the labor will receive increased pay, but the situation of Germany is such and the poor are so many that it will be a generation or more before the need of something to do disappears.

A Baroness From Silesia. While I was in the league rooms a fine-looking lady, wearing a long fur coat, entered, bringing some hand-painted china which she had made. She wanted to know if such work would sell and whether the league could handle it for her. She was told that they had no connections for such manufactures as yet, but that they could give her home-knitting, stitching, or crocheting. When the woman left she took with her several handkerchiefs which she expected to hemstitch for three cents apiece and of which a skilled worker can finish two or three in a day. She was told she could be instructed in other work without charge if she would go to school for a week. The poor woman replied that her home was in Silesia, a half-day's ride from Berlin, and that she would wait. After her departure, Miss Pawel Ramingen penned on the record. It was that showed me her name, which she had of a well-known baroness.

Where Cigars Are a Treat. There was some delay in getting the goods I have described. Several articles were on order and all of my purchases were brought at one time by a lady of the league to me at my hotel. In paying for them I added some thousands of marks to the amount, and gave the lady herself the sum of five thousand marks, telling her to buy a box of candy with it on her way out. She was greatly delighted and shook my hand over and over again. She said she would not use it for candy, but it would go to buy some cigars for her husband, who is a government official with a salary so low that he can afford to smoke only on Sundays. The five thousand marks, on that day, were worth less than twelve cents.

called at my rooms had a brooch and buckle of hammered brass which she had made. I paid her one dollar for them and you cannot imagine the feeling that this seemingly extraordinary price created in her. Her eyes filled with tears and she kissed my hand and thanked me again and again.

Shirts at Three for a Dime. Along this same line is an experience I have had with a beautiful sewing woman who has made me a half-dozen silk shirts. I bought the silk, and she came to the hotel to get my order. She speaks English, is well educated, is about thirty years of age, and has a husband. She took my measure and I gave her an old shirt as a copy. I then asked her the price, and the figure, translated into American money, just equaled three cents. Upon my saying that this was too little, she replied that Wertheim, who might be called the John Wanamaker of Berlin, having the largest and most aristocratic department store here, paid his women workers six cents a shirt, but she would not think of charging so much. I next asked how long it would take her to make a shirt, and she thought she could do one in a day. She almost fell over when I told her that I would pay at least twice the price of the department store and give her a present at the end of the job. When the shirts were delivered they were beautifully made. I paid her an amount which equaled about twenty-five cents a shirt and she went away joyful.

Before leaving, however, she confided to me that she had much trouble regarding the button-holes. She had given this work out to a specialist, a woman who sews button-holes only, and this woman had charged her forty marks per button-hole, which she said was "ungeheuer teuer." I figured the rate out at the exchange of the day and found it was just one-tenth of a cent, or one-half the widow's mite of the Bible. There were ten buttonholes in each shirt, and that woman made all for one cent. Take a piece of silk and work a button-hole without the aid of any machine, using needle and thread, and find out if the charge was too much. (Copyright, 1922, by Carpenter's World Travels.)

BACONIAN DINNER OVERFLOWING WITH CLEVER ORATORY

Commemorate Thirty-Ninth Year of Existence of the London Club.

FORTY ARE PRESENT

Many Former Members Gather in City For Happy Event.

Cultured wit and true Baconian camaraderie combined in all its traditional lustre at the Tecumseh House last evening, when the Baconian Club, London's "society of gentle learning," commemorated the thirty-ninth year of its existence. Clever eloquence and impressive oratory abounded throughout the banquet. Attended by 40 of its members and several former members, who returned to London for the event, the annual get-together surpassed all former affairs of its kind for bantering wit and delightful speech-making. The program commenced with an address by the Rev. W. R. McIntosh, vice-president, and ended with a toast to the organization, outlined the traditions of Baconians, and in a few graceful introductory words, presented the speakers of the evening to their hearers. The Honorable Mr. Justice Taylor of Saskatchewan, Rev. L. Norman Tucker, dean of Huron; John M. Gunn, Lt.-Col. W. J. Brown, E. A. Miller, James Kirkwood and others contributed to the program, which for variety and sparkling repartee sets a criterion in this city.

After referred to the achievements of Sir Francis Bacon, the club's founder, and dwelt briefly on the beneficial effects his philosophy has had on the Baconians present.

Pays Tribute. Mr. McIntosh, in his address, paid tribute to the many difficulties which the club has encountered in the past, and in the course of his remarks said glowing tribute to former members of the club. He then turned to Mr. Grange, the president, whom he characterized as "gentle of speech and beneficent of mind." The Baconian Club, Mr. McIntosh said, was conceived in tradition and cradled in precedent. It remained for a newspaperman, Mr. Grange, to confront the cold legal tradition with which the society was so eminently associated and establish innovations that were a tonic as well as a novelty to the club.

Has Large Influence. "Mr. Jarvis" paper indicated to me something of the large influence this club has had in national life," said Mr. Grange. "But for its cultural influences, its kind brutality to those who speak, or read, or recite before it, I am confident Canada would not have found its members statesmen, jurists, journalists and literateurs of such national repute. Hon. N. W. Rowell might perhaps not have been otherwise caught in time to be amenable to improvement in the art of public speaking, and so Canada might never have had under government, or its kindred evil prohibition, the illustrious statesman of J. Lambert Payne, whose affluence was first kindled at Baconian club fires."

Glowing History. "It is a great and glowing history that this club has had. Death and taxes are its only rivals from the standpoint of the public weal. Finally, to maintain a tradition that verbiage has no rightful place in the Baconian club, must be said briefly in conclusion that I have been especially impressed by two things during the year's thirteen meetings. First, that the Baconian Club of London is still all that the honorary president thinks it is. Second, that the chief act of successful public speaking is to terminate neatly and quickly. I have ten tablets. Mr. McIntosh, responding to the toast to Francis Bacon, the club's "patron sinners saint," said that Bacon's greatest contribution to the world was his redemption of the minds of men. If over a millennium will come, it will be when men reject suspicion and rid the world of the scourge of war. This is what Bacon taught. He labored against parochialism, narrow-mindedness, and believed the world was large enough for every religion and every point of view. Bacon brought things into life that resulted in conquering the bad forces of nature and brought amelioration and riches to mankind."

Reply to Toast. Hon. Justice Taylor, replying to the toast of "Our Guests," reviewed

HEBRIDEAN SETTLERS ARRIVE IN CANADA.

the history of the northwest, and pointed out the many difficulties Saskatchewan and other western provinces had to cope with. He claimed the Doukhobors were very much maligned people. Years ago the Russian Government opened its jails and asylums, and sent the inmates to Canada. These were the Doukhobors. They were the cleanest people in the world, and many made good citizens. "Foreigners outnumber Canadians in the west by two to one," said Justice Taylor. "They wanted to bring their old country customs with them when they came to Canada, and it is that influence we have to combat. The Doukhobors, however, can do more toward enforcing proper legislation that will help solve the Doukhobor problem than any other part of Canada. The people of the west are not happy. It is the duty of Anglo-Saxon Ontario to assist for laws that shall benefit their foreign brothers, who are so numerous in the prairie provinces."

Dean Tucker Speaks. "Books—How I Read Them," was the subject of a discourse from the Very Reverend L. Norman Tucker, Dean of Huron. The dean declared this was a reading age. Men do not read widely, however, owing to the attraction of automobiles, moving pictures and bridge parties. Modern literature is superior to former literature. The printing press was the greatest invention in the history of civilization," he said. "Its development has been the greatest in the history of the world; the time when Columbus, Magellan, Galileo, Copernicus, and other kindred spirits of the renaissance that men developed in great books."

Read Deliberately. "Every man should read deliberately. Random reading of voluminous literature is unprofitable. One should direct his study toward subjects of particular and current interest. The immigration problem, capital and labor, the Mongolian question, the C. P. O. economics and history are all matters that might excite the earnest student and thought of progressive citizens." Dean Tucker outlined the history and development of constitutional government in England. He believed the future of the world was distinctly democratic. Autocracy and every variety of oligarchy were at an end. But if democracy was to survive it must win the aid of books. A man can become a companion of Napoleon, the greatest genius of his time.

Speaks on Broadcasting. John M. Gunn delivered a delightful little speech on "Broadcasting." Pregnant with humor and epigrammatic references, it was one of the most interesting addresses of the evening. "Lions—Col. W. J. Brown's talk on 'Lions' added an historical touch to the program, and E. A. Miller's address on 'Dialectics' maintained the high cultural calibre featuring every speech. Finally, Dean H. W. Miller, in his 'Broadening Our Speech' seasoned the program with a liberal portion of dry humor that exacted laughter in large quantities."

Suspends Player. Associated Press Despatch. New York, May 12.—Pat Duncan, star outfielder of the Cincinnati Nationals, was suspended today for ten days by John A. Heydler, president of the National League, for "violation of playing rules and using exceptionally obscene and insulting language" to the umpire in last Thursday's game between the Reds and Braves at Boston.

carefully," Mr. Wood said. "I don't see anything the matter with it and speaking generally, I am satisfied with the budget. It appears reasonable." "I am pleased to note the first step towards reciprocity with the United States which was mentioned by Mr. Fielding in his budget speech," the Alberta former leader said. "The removal of the tariff would be the greatest thing that ever happened to Canada, in my opinion and I wish heartily to commend Mr. Fielding on this step that has been taken. I believe it will be more important and would have better results on the prosperity of the west as a whole to have the tariff on cattle removed rather than the tariff on wheat for instance. The United States is our logical market, she is in a position to import our product. "The United States grows wheat for export, on the other hand I observe that there is a decided movement among farmers of the United States to obtain the removal of the tariff on cattle for this would be a benefit to the west. However, it will come ultimately," Mr. Wood concluded.

Reserving Judgment. Ottawa, May 12.—Although local retailers and wholesalers reserved final judgment on the budget until they would have had time to give more mature consideration to its effect upon individual businesses, the tendency among the majority was to express satisfaction, tinged somewhat with approval.

There was a unanimous sigh of relief that the sales tax had been simplified and would henceforth be collected entirely at the source of supply of a manufactured article.

The announcement that the luxury tax of 5 per cent on goods and services was to be repealed is what local candy manufacturers have agitated for since its inception a year ago. The reduction of the tax on confectionery on the local retail price is very problematical and could not be foreseen until the Montreal manufacturers made a pronouncement. The opinion expressed by wholesale grocers.

Editorial Comment. Victoria Colonist: The finance minister, owing to the circumstances, which have been clearly explained, has not been able to recommend to parliament any reductions of taxation that are likely to bring material relief to the taxpayer. He has needed stimulus to business; but we are bound to assume that he has done what little he could to lighten the burden.

EXPECT RELEASE. Special to The Advertiser. Washington, May 12.—The American government today momentarily expected release of the prisoners taken to the Shantung-Pekin express. Both the state department and the Chinese legation here have information which leads Secretary of State Hughes and Chinese Minister Zee to believe that the American and other foreign captives will soon be set free. Because of this belief that the liberation of the prisoners may be effected by peaceful means, the United States government is holding in check any military or naval plans that were under consideration for the use of force.

The fact that the Chinese government troops have been held in their march against the bandits, and that negotiations are now in progress to secure the liberty of the prisoners, are thought to augur well for a satisfactory settlement. Minister Zee said it is largely on account of the difficulty the Chinese discharged from the army and others have in finding employment in overcrowded Shantung, that lies at the bottom of such incidents as the present.

CAPTIVE CARRIES FOOD. Special Cable to The Advertiser. Tien Tsin, May 12.—J. A. Henley, American from San Francisco, went back this afternoon to the bandit camp in the Shantung hills, whence he was released Friday, carrying food for the foreign captives. On terms on which the Chinese government proposes to negotiate with the brigands.

Henley, permitted to leave the stronghold to which the bandits withdrew with prisoners they kidnapped after the wrecking of the Shan-hai express Sunday morning, reported that the captives are in good health. High hopes are held out that he will be able to negotiate successfully for the release of all the foreigners by Sunday at the latest.

BURY VETERAN OF FENIAN RAID AT WINDSOR TODAY Special to The Advertiser. Windsor, May 11.—Funeral services for Alexander H. Askin, 92 years old, one of the Border's oldest residents, who died last Thursday night, will be held Saturday afternoon, privately, at the family residence, 218 Sandwich street. Burial will be made in St. John's Church Cemetery, Sandwich. Mr. Askin, who was a Fenian Raid veteran, supervised construction of the first street railway at Windsor 50 years ago, when the cars were drawn by horses.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters, Mary Elizabeth, and Grace Anna, and one son, Erskine, all of Ford.

PARKHILL

Special to The Advertiser. Parkhill, May 11.—Mothers' Day will be observed in the Methodist Church next Sunday, when the mothers will take charge of the music. In the Baptist Church the mothers and fathers will sing. The idea is a good one and will help the singers to remember the days when they first started in the choir.

Mrs. N. F. Newton and sons, and Mrs. Locke and her daughter left for Montreal Tuesday, en route to visit their respective homes in England. They were accompanied as far as Montreal by Mr. Locke.

Associated Press Despatch. London, May 12.—A movement is under way in Pekin, according to the Daily Mail's correspondent, to obtain a loan from the Indian government of 50,000 ghorika troops "to make a clean sweep of the bandit-infested provinces."

It is thought in Pekin, the correspondent adds, that Indian troops would be less likely to frighten the villagers than white troops.

GIVES INTERESTING TALK.

A helpful talk was given yesterday afternoon by Miss T. A. Connell, principal of the Anglican Deaconess Training School in Toronto, at a meeting of Anglican women held in Cronyn Hall. Miss Connell described the growth of the school since its beginning, thirty years ago, and special tribute to Miss Cross, a former Londoner, who was one of the efficient leaders.

The services at the house and the grave will be conducted by the Rev. Judson Kelly of the Colborne Street Methodist Church. Interment will take place at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Ottawa, May 12.—Although local retailers and wholesalers reserved final judgment on the budget until they would have had time to give more mature consideration to its effect upon individual businesses, the tendency among the majority was to express satisfaction, tinged somewhat with approval.

There was a unanimous sigh of relief that the sales tax had been simplified and would henceforth be collected entirely at the source of supply of a manufactured article.

The announcement that the luxury tax of 5 per cent on goods and services was to be repealed is what local candy manufacturers have agitated for since its inception a year ago. The reduction of the tax on confectionery on the local retail price is very problematical and could not be foreseen until the Montreal manufacturers made a pronouncement. The opinion expressed by wholesale grocers.

Editorial Comment. Victoria Colonist: The finance minister, owing to the circumstances, which have been clearly explained, has not been able to recommend to parliament any reductions of taxation that are likely to bring material relief to the taxpayer. He has needed stimulus to business; but we are bound to assume that he has done what little he could to lighten the burden.

EXPECT RELEASE. Special to The Advertiser. Washington, May 12.—The American government today momentarily expected release of the prisoners taken to the Shantung-Pekin express. Both the state department and the Chinese legation here have information which leads Secretary of State Hughes and Chinese Minister Zee to believe that the American and other foreign captives will soon be set free.

Because of this belief that the liberation of the prisoners may be effected by peaceful means, the United States government is holding in check any military or naval plans that were under consideration for the use of force.

The fact that the Chinese government troops have been held in their march against the bandits, and that negotiations are now in progress to secure the liberty of the prisoners, are thought to augur well for a satisfactory settlement.

Minister Zee said it is largely on account of the difficulty the Chinese discharged from the army and others have in finding employment in overcrowded Shantung, that lies at the bottom of such incidents as the present.

CAPTIVE CARRIES FOOD. Special Cable to The Advertiser. Tien Tsin, May 12.—J. A. Henley, American from San Francisco, went back this afternoon to the bandit camp in the Shantung hills, whence he was released Friday, carrying food for the foreign captives. On terms on which the Chinese government proposes to negotiate with the brigands.

Henley, permitted to leave the stronghold to which the bandits withdrew with prisoners they kidnapped after the wrecking of the Shan-hai express Sunday morning, reported that the captives are in good health. High hopes are held out that he will be able to negotiate successfully for the release of all the foreigners by Sunday at the latest.

China's military governors, considering an ultimatum from the powers to release the captives, have been unable to negotiate successfully for the release of all the foreigners by Sunday at the latest.

BURY VETERAN OF FENIAN RAID AT WINDSOR TODAY Special to The Advertiser. Windsor, May 11.—Funeral services for Alexander H. Askin, 92 years old, one of the Border's oldest residents, who died last Thursday night, will be held Saturday afternoon, privately, at the family residence, 218 Sandwich street. Burial will be made in St. John's Church Cemetery, Sandwich. Mr. Askin, who was a Fenian Raid veteran, supervised construction of the first street railway at Windsor 50 years ago, when the cars were drawn by horses.

PARKHILL

Special to The Advertiser. Parkhill, May 11.—Mothers' Day will be observed in the Methodist Church next Sunday, when the mothers will take charge of the music. In the Baptist Church the mothers and fathers will sing. The idea is a good one and will help the singers to remember the days when they first started in the choir.

Mrs. N. F. Newton and sons, and Mrs. Locke and her daughter left for Montreal Tuesday, en route to visit their respective homes in England. They were accompanied as far as Montreal by Mr. Locke.

SHOP TALK

Advertiser Offers Substantial, Balanced and Piquant Mental Diet.

A newspaper, such as the London Advertiser is today, is not just so much paper and so much printer's ink mechanically combined. It is the throbbing heart of a great system of veins and arteries. Through these channels are continually flowing to the centre the nourishment which keeps the organism healthy, well fed and abounding in vigor and pep.

The wires of the world lead to The London Advertiser office at the corner of Richmond and York streets. Day and night, the "click, click" of the Morse code strikes on the ear, telling employee and visitor alike that the telegraph operators are receiving the newest news, just as it is happening, from the four corners of the earth. Prompt editions pass along the information to thousands of waiting readers, right on the heels of the happenings.

Is a train held up by bandits in China and English, Americans and Canadians kidnapped? The same date all the details appear in the first edition of the afternoon paper. London is reading the news by 3 o'clock, and by the time the "Sporting Green" is on the streets at 6, the "tired business man" and "tired business woman," homeward bound, may snatch a few moments from the final sport and market news of the day to learn what action governments purpose taking with regard to the Chinese indignity.

News that a serious fire menaced the near-neighbor town of Ailsa Craig arrived by telephone at 4:30 o'clock Monday. An hour later reporters and photographer were on the scene. The final sporting edition contained authoritative report. In the next morning edition, pictures portrayed every phase of the disaster, and the big fight waged to save the village from complete annihilation.

British Defines U.S. Pet Statue

Peer Has Unique Idea of the Goddess of Liberty.

Associated Press Despatch. New York, May 12.—The Rt. Hon. Lord Barnaby, who is 82 and said to be the oldest member of the British peerage, today furnished New York ship reporters with a new answer to one of their stock questions. "What do you think of the Goddess of Liberty?" they asked, as he got his first view of the statue from the deck of the incoming liner, Berengaria.

His answer was: "She looks to me like a lady entirely at odds with water, with a crown of thorns upon her brow, a bunch of grapes in her hand, and a bundle of law books at her feet. More than that I had better not say."

She Suffered For Years With Backache and Nervousness—Dodd's Kidney Pills Proved To Be the Remedy She Needed.

Ange Gardien de Rouville, Que., May 11.—(Special.) The story told by Mrs. Brouillette, the well-known resident of this place, carries a message of hope to every suffering woman in Canada.

"After my baby was born," Mrs. Brouillette states, "I used to suffer with my back. I had heart fluttering and my head used to ache. I was very nervous and had no appetite. I took twelve boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I am more than satisfied with the results."

JAPANESE VISITS ALARM OFFICIALS IN THE PHILIPPINES

Presidente of Bascoort Send Request to United States For Soldiers.

COME IN MOTORBOAT

Ownership of Islands Disputed by Dutch, British and Americans.

By WALTER J. ROBB.
Special Cable. The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright, Manila, May 11.—The president of the town of Bascoort, located in the Batanes group of islands, the northernmost portion of the Philippines, and less than fifty miles from Formosa, has requested that a company of constabulary soldiers be sent there as a result of a recent visit to that place of Japanese motorboats. The president reports that the only inquiries made by the Japanese were regarding the number of soldiers stationed at Batanes.

Alarmed at Inquiry.
Lonesome municipal officials, alarmed at the nature of the Japanese inquiry, want the constabulary troops sent there to repel any possible invaders.

Governor General Wood has forwarded the president's request to the secretary of the interior of the Philippines, who is investigating the advisability of sending a company of soldiers to the islands.

W. Wood believes that explanation of the Batanes report lies in the fact that Japanese fishermen also come there frequently for fresh water. The government recently completed a radio station in the northern islands, and Wood has ordered that daily news bulletins be sent inhabitants there.

Boundaries Unsettled.
Though there is no controversy with Japan over the northern boundaries of the Philippines, the matter of sound boundaries is yet unsettled with Great Britain and the Netherlands. Although British authorities are administering the local government of three small islands just outside of Sandakan Harbor, North Borneo, America claims sovereignty over them. The same claim is made over Palmas Island, which the Dutch are administering as a result of counter claims.

The Dutch base their claim to Palmas Island on a lease obtained from the sultan of the island, Sultan Sulai, who is an American subject. The former sultan in 1878 also gave the British North Borneo Company a lease of large area of land on the pine mainland in return for $5,000, Mexican, annually, which is still being paid. The American state department has frequently attempted to settle the matter of jurisdiction over the disputed islands.

MASONS WILL CELEBRATE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The afternoon meeting will be held in the lodge room, and in the evening the Presbyterian Church will be given over to the Masonic brethren. Since its inception 50 years ago, the local lodge has steadily grown, until today the membership roll numbers 124.

Let all friends, old and new, of Dundas Center, rally to make this the best anniversary occasion in the history of the school.

MOTHERS' DAY will be fittingly observed.

New Stories O. HENRY

RED CONLIN'S ELOQUENCE.

They were speaking of the power of great orators, and each one had something to say of his special favorite.

The drummer was for backing Bourke Cochran for oratory against the snare. Ingeroll the most persuasive pleader, and the insurance agent advanced the claims of the magnetic W. C. F. Breckenridge.

"They all talk some," said the old cattle man, who was puffing his pipe and listening, "but they couldn't hold a candle to Red Conlin, that run cattle below Stanton in '90. Ever know Red?"

Nobody had had the honor.

"Red Conlin was a natural orator," he wasn't overworked with book learning, but his words came free and easy, like whiskey out of a new faucet from a full barrel. He was always in a good humor and smiling across his face, and if he asked for a hot blizzard he'd like to see a blizzard for his life. He was one man who had the gift of gab, and it never failed him.

"I remember once, in Adams County, the horse thieves worried us right smart. There was a gang of 'em, and they got runnin' off a cashmere every week or so. Some of us got together and raised a pint of order and concluded to sustain it. The head of the gang was a fellow named Mullens, and a tough cuss he was. Right, too, and warm, particular when twenty of us saddled up and went into camp, loaded down with six chubsters and Winchester. That Mullens had the nerve to try to cut off our saddle horses the first night, but we heard him, got mounted, and went hot on his trail. There was five or six others with Mullens.

"It was dark as thunder, and pretty soon we run one of them down. His horse was lame, and we knew it was Mullens by his big white hat and black beard. We didn't hardly give him time to speak, we was so mad, but in two minutes there was a rope round his neck and Mullens was awing up at last. We waited about ten minutes till he was still, and then some fellow strikes a match out of curiosity and screeches out: "Gosh a mighty, boys, we've strung up the wrong man!"

"And we had."

"We reopened the fellow's case and gave him a new trial, and acquitted him, but it was too late to do him any good. He was as dead as Davy Crockett."

"It was Sandy McNeagh, one of the quietest, straightest and best respected men in the county, and what was worse, had'n't been married but about three months."

"Whatever are we to do?" says I, and it sure was a case to think about.

"We ought to be aigh Sandy's house now," said one of the men, who was tryin' to peer around and kind of locate the scene of our brilliant court deliver, as they say.

"Just then we seen a light from a door that opened in the dark, and the house wasn't two hundred yards away and we saw what we knew must be Sandy's wife in the door lookin' for him."

"Somebody's got to go and tell her," said I. "I was kind o' leamin' the boys. Who'll do it?" Nobody jumped at the proposition.

"Red Conlin," says I, "you're the man to tell her, and the only man here who could open his mouth to the poor girl. Go, like a man, and may the Lord teach you what to say, for d-d if I can."

"That boy never hesitated. I saw him kind o' wet his hand, and smooth back his red curls in the dark, and I seen his teeth chinin' as he said: 'I'll go, boys; wait for me.'"

"He went and we saw the door open and let him in."

"May the Lord help that poor widow," we all said, "and d-d us for bunglin', murderin' butchers what ain't no right to call ourselves men."

"It was fifteen minutes, maybe, when Red came back."

"How is it?" we whispered, almost afraid to hear him speak.

"It's fixed," says Red, "and the widow and I asks ye to the wedding nixt Chusday night."

"That fellow Red Conlin could talk," Published by arrangement with the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

Want All the Rights of Citizenship? Own Your Own Home

IT'S A GRAND AND GLORIOUS FEELING TO BE SURE OF HOME FOR THE FAMILY AND RANK AS SUBSTANTIAL CITIZEN

You Are Your Own Landlord When the House Belongs To You, Nobody Can Turn You Out, Every Improvement Enhances Value of Your Estate.

AND YOU HARVEST YOUR OWN GARDEN

Want to be one hundred per cent citizen?

Own your own home, sit at the top of the heap, and dictate to the spending bodies what they shall do with the taxes you help to pay. Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling to be able to order round something or somebody?

That's a big advantage of being a real estate owner in the municipality. No matter how humble the little home, you are entitled to vote on every item when it comes to election day. That's where you have your advantage over the man or woman living in the most expensive rented house or apartment. They can say who shall be elected for what. You can say all that, and put your foot down good and flat on questions of building bridges, making new roads, or erecting new institutions. Your own bank account may be small, but you belong to the elect of the people's trustees. You may carry a dinner-pail and smudge up your face at your work, but you are a pillar of the community, and "one of our substantial citizens."

You are a property-owner, and have a real stake in the place. If the street is improved, that means your property is improved. Does the Western University with other educational institutions forge ahead? Then it is such a much more honorable for you to be a home-owner in the city.

Money In Pocket.
Are new industries and commercial enterprises secured for the town, involving increased employment and expenditure of money in the municipality? Whatever enhances the value of the city makes the more desirable the house you bought or built. You and your home are real factors in the community's development.

Apart from the prestige and influence which accrue from owning a home, those who have made a thorough study of the question declare it is genuine economy.

"When you rent," said a prominent London businessman a day or so ago, "you pay out money for the privilege of having a roof over your head, and a certain amount of apartment convenience, perhaps. Luxury, you eat your cake, and when the last crumb is gone, there is nothing left to show for it. In the hands, even the period is up for which you have paid your rent, the money has vanished, and you must pay more rent, or move on. The only advantage you enjoy, perhaps, is a certain immunity from responsibility."

Owning a home is insurance, at least, of a harbor in time of storm and stress, until the clouds roll away, and the sun comes shining out again. If the worst comes to the worst, quarters made to suffice, or even the home sold to provide for the family, or tide over the business till better days come.

Taxes Reasonable.
While much is said each year when the tax rate is being struck about "high rates," a disinterested and entirely reliable source of information states that the per capita tax rate for London is as low as any of the other enterprising cities or larger towns in Canada, and less than the per capita tax in a number.

A leading realtor points out that low assessment in this city offsets what may appear to be higher tax-rate than in some other places.
But how buy a home, if we haven't enough money saved?

"It's the beginning of saving for many young people," says the realtor already quoted. "They make terms whereby they pay so much down, and after that so much a month, just as they would for rent. But every time they pay out this form of 'rent,' they are adding to their principal, and each month brings nearer the day when they will own the house outright. Every improvement they pay for is not only beautifying or making more comfortable their surroundings, but adding to the value of their own property."

"Nothing like starting to save under a definite obligation system, in order to acquire the thrift habit, and make provision for a rainy day and old age."

If Buyer Comes!
Talking about an assured roof, the ability to pay rent isn't by any means all the guarantee that is required. Rare, indeed, is the house for rent that isn't ready to meet a good buyer half way. The best tenant in the world may have improved up to the hilt at his own expense, and wife just completed the most scrupulous spring house-cleaning. That won't prevent the owner from making the sale which is very much to his advantage just at the time. And the tenants can go house-hunting, with of course a reasonable amount of notice.

Could anything be more aggravating than to get a fine garden planted, and the grounds in ideal shape for the summer, then receive notice to move?

The home-owner may have his own responsibilities and worries, but he is master of the situation when it comes to deciding when to go and when to stay.

BRIDE BEHIND TIMES IN BUILDING MODES

Didn't Know Big Pantries and Clothes Closets Were Very Passe.

"Yes, we have bought our lot and decided to build a bungalow on it. One thing I'm going to insist upon is plenty of closets closet room and a real pantry," the Easter bride announced complacently to a circle of friends the other day as they chatted over the tea cups.

And thereby, Easter bride, the last word in worldly wisdom when it comes to hats, suits, gowns and accessories, revealed the sad fact that she had failed to keep abreast of the times with regard to the latest wrinkles in house-designing and space-saving.

The big clothes closet isn't being done any more, according to the latest advice. A built-in wardrobe is the new thought, a wardrobe just large enough to hold crosswise the padded hangers with their dainty loads.

Down the centre is placed a rod for the hangers, and instead of one door and much bumping of head, and disarranging of coiffure before the desired frock is located, all that is necessary is to open one of several doors and lift off the gown.

Being is just as simple a matter. The idea has been adapted from the protected cases of up-to-the-minute, ready-to-wear shops.

In the wardrobe also are drawers for hats and shoes, and in the bungalow, the projection of eaves means trunk "kennels" in space that could not be utilized satisfactorily otherwise.

Breakfast-Room, Too.
Space saved in the pantry, and a spare room from the kitchen, means the alcove breakfast-room, so cozy on a chilly morning, so convenient under any circumstances, especially where madame does her own work. But, what becomes of the brooms, the cooking utensils, the egg-beaters, ironing boards and all the other paraphernalia necessary to the kitchen?

Special built-in cupboards, a place for everything, everything in its place.

In one new house which is being built, a house embodying the most practical as well as aesthetic ideas, a door swings open to reveal the ironing-board hooked to the wall. When that comes down, a support unfolds, and a series of shelves is brought to view, for ironing, wax, all the essentials for making a good job of the ironing process. The plug, too, for the iron is just where it should be. A separate broom, dustpan, carpet sweeper, dustless mop, vacuum cleaner and dusters.

This particular house has another cupboard for the dishes, pots, pans, in the completeness of its equipment satisfies the average woman and fills her with gratitude that kitchen work can be so simplified.

Possibly Easter bride will change her mind on some points before that house is built.

IF STYLE IS WANTED, KITCHEN CAN'T BE BEAT

Living-Room Fades Before the Flawless Grandeur of Modern Bath.

A fortunate sign of the times is to be found in the fact that builders in the present era of art are following the example of the old artists in the attention they give to the equipment of less conspicuous parts of the house.

If the living-room is to boast a handsome fireplace, then the kitchen must have a sink and taps in keep, a sink of cast enamel, with draining board at the side or rack above, and all the rest of the necessities and conveniences required to facilitate work.

The modern bathroom is just as much a work of art, and receives equal consideration with the reception hall, stairway and library. The bathroom of today is above reproach, so far as sanitation is concerned.

When a man builds his own home, if he can afford it, he has an enduring floor, built-in tub with shower, tiled walls, an elegant pedestal oval basin, and towel racks, tumble-dryers, medicine cabinet and all the rest to match.

The fancy of the moment is for pure white finish and fittings, hence the shining nickel yields first place to enameled finishing. With regard to plumbing, a first concern is to insure the most sanitary conditions possible, doing away with cracks, crevices and pockets, where dirt and germs can lurk.

SACRED PARLOR GOES, PEOPLE LIVE IN HOMES

Spare Rooms Pay Their Taxes When London Houses Are Duplexed.

NEW ASSET FOUND

There's Money In Empty Attics, Toronto Visitor Tells Advertiser.

"There's money in empty attics," said a Toronto visitor yesterday, "what do they do with them up here in London?"

"Use them to store old trunks and old furniture until the day of reckoning," answered the Advertiser. "Shameful waste of space and assets," said the guest for the day seriously.

Then he told the story of how, for a modest outlay, he had converted the attic of his own home into an apartment, renting it heated for $35 a month in winter, and knocking off $5 a month during the warm weather.

"It's a most desirable neighborhood," he continued, "and very convenient for the young couple I have as tenants."

London, apparently, is also awakening to its attic potentialities.

One well-known architect, at least, is enthusiastic over the possibilities to be found in the unused space under the eaves.

"In less practical days," he says, "we have been accustomed to think of an attic as a roof for our heads. We forget that this is perhaps 14 or 15 feet high over a considerable area, and that at least half the space can be converted into habitable quarters.

Light With Dormers.
"In making over attics for apartments, we finish five or six feet back from the walls, which gives added warmth in winter and coolness in summer. Dormer windows look after the lighting and ventilation, and almost invariably improve the appearance of the house on the outside."

"People taking an attic or third story apartment are not as a rule particular to have all the rooms of a regulation house or suite. A good-sized living-room, kitchen, bathroom, and one or two bedrooms, according to the space, meet the needs. A living room, kitchen or convenient kitchenette, bath and bedroom, are considered spacious quarters by unfortunate, who have been paying almost as much money for two or three inadequate rooms on a second floor. The attic apartment is a very worthwhile experiment for a houseowner, especially when an independent entrance can be arranged without too much expense."

"Attics are also used extensively in duplexing, especially in some of the old-fashioned, long houses, where the second floor is only built up over the front part of the house. Under those circumstances, the first floor is large enough to convert into an apartment, and the attic rooms form bedrooms and bath for the second floor apartment."

Helps Housing.
"Lack of housing has made the development of ingenuity imperative. This, with cost of living, and perhaps a more general tendency for people to be businesslike in the management of their funds, has been largely responsible for the duplexing movement, which is helping to such an extent to solve the housing situation. "Thoughtful men and women are getting more and more averse to heating and paying taxes for empty rooms. They build their homes to live in, and with enough space for families and guests they expect to entertain. Many of the old homes built when cost of materials and labor was much lower than today, had sacred parlors, only opened for very special occasions, and "spare" rooms so uninhabited, they were positively spooky.

"In quite a number of such homes, there are even more "spare" rooms than a dozen or 20 years ago, owing to the fact families have dwindled or grown up and gone out into the world. Duplexing, where feasible and not demanding too much outlay, is the one sensible thing to do under the circumstances."

Shoddy Plumbing Mars Household Peace. Insist On Best

Brick and Stucco Popular For Building Purposes Now

Gingerbread Styles Disappear, Dignified Types, Including Bungalow and New England Colonial, Predominate.

In building a home, first you choose a lot. It isn't such a difficult problem in London as in the majority of other cities and towns of the continent where the "right" location is restricted to a few districts. In fortunate London towns, these are to be found in all directions, north, south, east and west.

That's one of the features which surprises visitors, especially from the big American cities, who drive around London for the first time. They are amazed at the charming homes and grounds, bearing evidence of taste and care, which strike the eye somewhere on practically all streets.

A small army of reliable real estate dealers are promptly at the service of every individual interested in the subject of property and buying and selling real estate. They have their listings. If they belong to the real estate board, they have also the listings of 14 or 15 or more other members to draw upon.

Service For All.

Does madame want to look at a lot? If madame toils all day at scrubbing, and is thus thrifflily saving for a little home of her own, Mr. Real Estate Man will take her in his car to see for himself, just as if she happened to be the most affluent lady in the land.

The real estate man's business is service for all, and every inquirer is "prospected."

Which direction does she (or he) prefer to have the house face?

That's a matter of personal taste, which helps in determining the selection of houses or lots to show (along the cost).

With the deed for the lot deposited (title carefully searched before the transaction) the next step is to consult an architect, if it is a case either of build or remodel.

When the style of house is fully approved, the momentous question is the material most suitable to carry out the plan. Frequently the prospective builder has his mind made up about brick, stucco, cement or stone, long before the appearance of the outside, and arrangement of the rooms have been visualized, even in dreams.

With increasing general good taste, brought about through training in applied art in schools, lectures and information broadcasted in magazines, the old "ginger-bread" type of house has fallen into disrepute. It is all but disappeared in London, thanks to the banishment of unadorned ornamental (?) features in modeling.

Suite Climate.

The styles of architecture which are in popularity today are the bungalow and the "New England Colonial," the latter solid, substantial, adapted to both climate and landscape, and permitting variations in the way of porch and sunroom arrangements, while retaining staidness and dignity.

Stucco houses in so many alluring designs coax to be copied from magazines de luxe that, even after some other building material is decided upon, a woman's thoughts are apt to swing back to stucco with a sigh.

Surviving and outdistancing stucco, either in the buff or gray tones, are the dark and light red rug bricks, with hollow tile more and more used for inside walls.

"Remember," says Mr. Architect Man, "it is just as possible to make a small house beautiful and perfect in type as a large house, and it doesn't cost one bit more to have it true to type than it does to spoil it, so far as consistency and appearance are concerned, by adding to the outside all kinds of things never intended to belong there."

The foundation and basement must be right. Every property owner knows that who has been obliged to do much after-digging on a ready-made house.

Versatile Roof.

Time was when the builder regarded a roof purely and simply as a covering to keep out rain and weather. The modern roof carries out the architectural idea, adds grace of line and beauty of coloring, and also is capable of cutting down the fire risk.

From foundation stone to ridge pole, a house is usually the expression of the character and taste of the builders, meaning those for whom it is built.

Is the foundation shoddy and the roof ornate?

"Nothing 'all wool' about that. Do bow windows, oriole windows and porches hang any old place, with towers and ornaments added without the slightest regard for the general design?

Something illogical somewhere about the people who badgered the poor architect into distorting plans like that. Perhaps, however, they built it themselves, with the contractor carrying out their ideas. They have themselves to blame if it is distinctly "homemade," and indudiciously made as well. They'll be sorry, when they know better, unless they are of the type that "never can understand." In that case, the house is a true portrait.

WINDSOR CANDIDATES TO TELL PLATFORM SOON

Canadian Press Despatch.

Windsor, Ont., May 11.—Frank W. Wilson, Conservative candidate for Windsor riding, leaves tonight for Toronto, where he will confer with G. Howard Ferguson Saturday on questions of policy. Mr. Wilson stated today that he would not announce his platform until after this conference.

Major J. C. Tolmie announced today that he would give out his platform early next week. South Essex Liberals are convening this afternoon in Essex, and the North Essex riding will hold its convention in Ford Saturday afternoon.

DISMISSAL OF CHESTER NOW WORRYING TURKS

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.

Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright, Constantinople, May 12.—Though officials in Ankara say that the dismissal of Arthur Chester by John Kennedy, who holds a power of attorney from the directors of the American Ottoman Development Company, does not affect the contracts that have been signed, the writer learns from a reliable source that the Turks are becoming skeptical as to the ultimate issues of the enterprise and are willing to listen to other propositions.

The French are taking full advantage of the dissensions and have despatched to Ankara representatives of the Babla Karalen Railway Company, who are given power to use strong arguments, which are always apt to succeed with Turkish officials of the new regime and induce them to cancel the concession.

The French efforts to wreck the Chester projects are due to a desire to have the whole field free to themselves and thus be able to pick whatever is the most paying.

AVERS FALSE STAMPS CLEVERLY DISGUISE LIQUOR

Canadian Press Despatch.

Windsor, May 12.—Licensing Inspector Mousseau stated yesterday that many counterfeit government liquor stamps, evidently manufactured by a clever engraver, were making their appearance here and in Detroit, affixed to bottles of moonshine liquor. The labels defy detection, the inspector declared, even officials being unable to tell what liquor is genuine and what is not until after the bottles are opened. The counterfeit product is being sold in Detroit at high prices.

REMOVE CRERAR'S NAME FROM BANKING COMMITTEE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, May 11.—A motion by Premier King, that the name of Hon. T. A. Crerar be removed from the membership of the banking and commerce committee, and that of Robert Forke, Progressive leader, be inserted in lieu thereof, was carried in the house this afternoon.

ANNOUNCE CHANGE IN DRILLING UNITS OF ACTIVE MILITIA

Training Will Be Carried Out At Headquarters and Local Camps.

SCHOOL AT NIAGARA

Field Batteries Will Go To Petawawa For Firing Practice.

The policy of training units of the non-permanent active militia for Military District No. 1, has now been given out. There will be no militia camps this year, all training being carried out at local headquarters except where, in a few cases this may be impracticable, in which case local camps will be held.

Camp schools to serve as qualifying courses for officers and non-commissioned officers will be held for infantry and signalling at London and for cavalry at Niagara.

Two infantry camp schools will be held at London, the first from May 21 to June 15, and the second from June 15 to 30. A signalling school for the qualifying of N. C. O.'s of signal sections will be held in conjunction with the Infantry Schools.

Officers and N. C. O.'s of cavalry units will be looked after at a camp school to be held at Niagara from June 15 to 30, horses and instructional personnel for this school being supplied by The Royal Canadian Dragoons.

No Restrictions.

There is no restriction as to the rank of officers to attend and, as pay of rank is being allowed, indications are that all courses will be largely attended.

Officers and non-commissioned officers of the non-permanent active militia are also to be given an opportunity to qualify in musketry at The Canadian Small Arms School, Ottawa, where courses are being held from August 20 to September 23 in the rifle, bayonet, light gun and revolver. A course in the Vickers Machine Gun and revolver for members of Machine Gun units will be held at Ottawa from July 16 to August 4, while members of the Corps of School Cadet Instructors will be entertained there from July 16 to August 3.

Go to Petawawa.

Sergeant L. E. Scholtz, of The Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, Kingston, has arrived in the district to assist with the training of the 12th Battery, C.F.A., at London and the 16th and 29th Batteries, C.F.A., at Guelph. Firing detachments of these batteries will proceed to Petawawa camp for firing practice on the following dates:

12th Battery, C.F.A.—15th to 22nd June.

16th Battery, C.F.A.—24th June to 1st July.

29th Battery, C.F.A.—4th to 11th July.

The 12th (London) battery did not attend camp last year, but the Guelph batteries both made a very creditable showing. The 29th Battery being second in the Governor-General's competition at Petawawa, there being 45 entries.

France Makes Endeavor To Have U. S. Concessions Cancelled.

By CONSTANTINE BROWN.

Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright, Constantinople, May 12.—Though officials in Ankara say that the dismissal of Arthur Chester by John Kennedy, who holds a power of attorney from the directors of the American Ottoman Development Company, does not affect the contracts that have been signed, the writer learns from a reliable source that the Turks are becoming skeptical as to the ultimate issues of the enterprise and are willing to listen to other propositions.

The French are taking full advantage of the dissensions and have despatched to Ankara representatives of the Babla Karalen Railway Company, who are given power to use strong arguments, which are always apt to succeed with Turkish officials of the new regime and induce them to cancel the concession.

The French efforts to wreck the Chester projects are due to a desire to have the whole field free to themselves and thus be able to pick whatever is the most paying.

AVERS FALSE STAMPS CLEVERLY DISGUISE LIQUOR

Canadian Press Despatch.

Windsor, May 12.—Licensing Inspector Mousseau stated yesterday that many counterfeit government liquor stamps, evidently manufactured by a clever engraver, were making their appearance here and in Detroit, affixed to bottles of moonshine liquor. The labels defy detection, the inspector declared, even officials being unable to tell what liquor is genuine and what is not until after the bottles are opened. The counterfeit product is being sold in Detroit at high prices.

Can't Let Place Run Down at the Heels When the Joneses Boast Fresh Paint

Carefully chosen paper and the right paint, these are the good, kind fairies which transform the most unpretentious house with their magic touch.

Ever notice how much more painted the houses are in town and country today? It's a case of keeping up with the Joneses. Properly owners can't afford to have their places look shabby and dilapidated, when those of their neighbors are as spruce and well-groomed as judicious use of hammer, nails and paint can make them. If it doesn't hurt their pockets, it injures their self-respect and prestige.

Painting isn't the trick it was considered some years ago. With numbers of quality paints on the market, more skillfully mixed by machinery than could be possibly be done by hand, and blended with nicest discrimination, any child can master the art of wielding an efficient paint brush.

With so many paints for so many purposes, there's no excuse in the world for rubbed-off spots showing through, except an absolute lack of funds to pay for the paint.

Of course everybody knows the argument that paint preserves as well as beautifies wood-work.

Styles change in paints, just as they do in neck-ties, gowns and hats. This year, taste for painting verandas, window-ledge, eaves and other outside wood-work runs in the direction of light cream, white, white combined with green, or cream contrasted with chocolate hue. "Very light and airy and pleasing to the eye, but will it keep clean and wear just as well?" inquires Dame Dolorous, who is always a joy killer.

That remains to be seen.

With the stucco house of gray hue, which has been pronounced gray wood-work, and a deep buff or brown ground for the statement.

Toronto, May 12.—The statement in a Buffalo despatch that Percy C. Deebie, of Toronto, formerly one of the directing influences in the stock-selling concerns of the L. R. Steel Corporation, had placed $1,000,000 on deposit in a London, England bank, cannot be verified here.

G. T. Clarkson, the Canadian receiver, stated today that he knew of no such deposit, and if it were made there was not the slightest chance of it being undiscovered in the books of the Steel concerns, which are being gone over very thoroughly.

C. H. McKenzie, secretary of the Canadian Shareholders' Protective Association, knows nothing about any such deposit, and says there is no ground for the statement.

PEACEABLE ARCHITECT GETS MAD AS HATTER

He Aroused By Client Who Perpetrates Major Alterations On Plans.

"If Mrs. Jones wasn't just determined to tack on features in her house that she has seen in Mrs. Smith's, it would be a much more peaceful life for the architect and there wouldn't be so many architectural monstrosities at large," exclaimed a usually long-suffering and peaceful architect this week.

"The worst of it is," he continued, "she insists upon attaching them to the outside for all the world to see. It knocks the plan all out of joint and gives the architect a black eye. Some houses, when they have been modified and improved to the queen's taste, are enough to damage an architect's reputation for life."

"Why not the king's taste? Aren't men as fussy as women?"

"That they are not, especially after they are married," snapped the "architect who plans" savagely.

"Why engage expert advice, unless you intend to follow it?" he continued. "A doctor won't stand for having his orders disregarded. If the patient or nurse won't follow his advice, why, he chuckles the case. Why in the name of common sense should an architect submit to the indignities heaped upon his plans? Honestly, some houses, when completed, bear about as close a resemblance to the first plans approved as moving picture productions to the novels of which they are supposed to be dramatizations."

Fancy Runs Wild.

"The worst of it is, a woman who will twist the front of a house all out of proportion, stick dormers and other windows in at random, and hang porches or shoot up towers where fancy dictates, is sure to tell the name of her architect. His one hope is that she will add he evidently didn't know his business and she was obliged to practically do it all over again herself, as well as superintend the building."

"But," mildly protested the writer, "isn't it important to have the house please the people who are to live in it and who pay for it?"

"In nine cases out of ten, it doesn't suit them," he declared emphatically. "At least, it doesn't suit them long. Presently they want to sell and try another experiment in building, correct the first-time mistakes. When they find buyers aren't jumping at the price they think they should get to clear themselves, and have a margin for their trouble, they begin to question. When they awaken to the fact something is wrong, whom do they blame? Themselves? Mrs. Smith's house that misguided them? Not a bit. They throw the responsibility on the architect. 'Mrs.' in the case decides he can't be trusted a second time. Apart from the fact, doesn't want to be the whole situation is disconcerting."

Owner's Rights.

"But, hasn't the prospective owner any say in the matter at all?" asked the awed listener.

"To be sure," answered the architect heartily. "What does the patient do when the doctor is called? Tell his symptoms, also, if it is a new doctor, past medical history?"

"The prospective builders should tell the architect the type of house they want, perhaps indicate by illustration. They should explain what they want in the way of living-room, dining-room, bedrooms, kitchen, bath, rooms, halls, general dimensions, man-parlor, porches, then leave the details to the architect to be worked out in a scientific manner. If he knows his job, he should be able to do so satisfactorily."

"Can they choose the kind of material they want?" squeaked a very much awed individual.

"They generally do that first, and we work out our plans accordingly. Oh, we are not as arbitrary as all that. But we do have to see our perfectly correct plans marred with major alterations."

Hayes was employed in the city engineer's department as a stationary engineer, but has not been working lately. Mrs. Hayes said the building has of late been used as a warehouse and as it was of

State Modern Embalming In Advance of Egypt's Art

London Undertakers Show Present Day Method Highly Scientific Compared With Crude System of Ancient Times.

Since the discovery and partial investigation of the tomb of Tutankhamen, the subject of embalming has become very much in the public eye. Smith's, it would be a much more peaceful life for the architect and there wouldn't be so many architectural monstrosities at large," exclaimed a usually long-suffering and peaceful architect this week.

"The worst of it is," he continued, "she insists upon attaching them to the outside for all the world to see. It knocks the plan all out of joint and gives the architect a black eye. Some houses, when they have been modified and improved to the queen's taste, are enough to damage an architect's reputation for life."

Honestly, some houses, when completed, bear about as close a resemblance to the first plans approved as moving picture productions to the novels of which they are supposed to be dramatizations."

Outline Methods. Mr. Oatman, representative of Ferguson's undertaking parlors and others, in an interview, outlined the methods used to keep bodies from decomposition. It is now possible, even in damp atmosphere, to retain the features of those who have passed away for periods of more than fifteen years. The success of Egyptian mummification is attributable to the extraordinary dry air of Egypt. Nevertheless, handicapped by the humidity and moisture of the American climate, modern undertakers have been able to achieve greater results than those of centuries past.

For instance, it is a wonderful fact that the body of a man who died in 1880 and was buried in a casket in a vault, has been found in perfect preservation. This had not been embalmed, but because of the absence of moisture had not decomposed.

There is a widespread opinion that embalming is a "lost art." The fact is that any student can go to a public library and within a comparatively short time learn not only the process used in Egypt to embalm the human dead, but the minutest details and the prices exacted for the service.

Return of Soul. The foundation of the art was the idea that preservation of the body permitted the return of the soul to the human form when it had completed its cycle of existence of three or ten thousand years. Records show that embalming was practiced as early as six thousand years ago. Sacred history records that Jacob's body was embalmed and transported out of Egypt.

"Ancient Egyptians," said Mr. Oatman, achieved their results by steeping bodies for 70 days. That to say, they boiled them and extracted the intestines. Nowadays we don't follow Egyptian methods because they are too crude. The modern funeral director must have a good knowledge of anatomy, pathology and chemistry. We do not make mummies in these times because we do not believe in it. But it could easily be done. The reasons for embalming are mostly sanitary. Our profession has so progressed that the government allows us to transport bodies of persons who died from contagious diseases to all parts of the world. They know that modern embalming prevents any possibility of disease caused by germs being killed through the process.

Sanitary Measure. "Instead of embalming being a religious rite, as in the days of the ancient Egyptians, it is a sanitary measure, in which the preservation of the deceased and natural appearance is incidental; it is to so disinfect the body as to render it impossible for any disease germ or decomposing bacteria to live or multiply in it. If the proper process as taught today is practiced in a careful and intelligent way, it is possible to secure the disinfection and preservation of the human body in a manner that will be permanent and which even under the conditions of our temperate climate will withstand decay for centuries."

The custom in ancient Egypt began with a funeral procession through the city and the chanting by relatives of the deceased of a wail for the dead. The corpse was then given into the charge of embalmers. It is probable the first operator is responsible for the name "undertaker" because his was the task then that was despised. He was called the "paraschistes," and resided in or near the cemetery. His first duty was to convey the corpse to the home. After this was done, a priest marked the outline where the incision was to be made, and it was the duty of the paraschistes to make the incision itself. Then, because he had desecrated the body and was so despoiled, he was hurried away, and was pursued and cursed and pelted with stones.

"Undertaking," of the present day, however, has become a profession recognized by professional men everywhere. As pointed out by Mr. Oatman, the fact that funeral directors in London are able to date a state of preservation that would last centuries in a climate so moist as Canada's demonstrates the high degree of proficiency the undertaking profession has reached.

Unyielding Hinges, Locks Which Hold, Laugh at Burglars, Guard Treasures

Special to The Advertiser.

What is the use of buying locks for the windows and bolts for the doors, after the thief has decamped with the most treasured jewels and choicest family silver?

"Locks" are perhaps little things, but they assume immense significance after a call from a burglar. With the windows and doors properly secured, the most thorough can go serenely to sleep at night (after making sure there is no one under the bed, or hiding in the clothes closet).

Madame, who values her home next to her husband, can go with him for an evening at the theatre, confident that all will be well on their return, when she knows the doors bolted locks that are locks.

Peace and security are well worth the extra cost of the lock that holds down to good, solid utility?

—the hinges which give unyielding resistance.

"The lock for which every key is a skeleton key isn't worth the space it takes up on a door, except for the appearance sake, and as accessory to the doorknob."

Talking of doorknobs, the most luxurious of these are in English cut-glass, $4.50 each, and not necessary all over the house, even in the home of a confirmed democrat who would carry to extremes the view that "the kitchen is good as the parlor."

In between are brass knobs, which are exceedingly presentable and much less costly.

And what's the matter with that old-fashioned black and white porcelain—50 cents each—when it comes down to good, solid utility?

ORIENT CLUB MEMBERS HOLD DANCE AT PORT

Party of Londoners Open the Casino For First Time This Season.

The first party of Londoners to trip the light fantastic on the smooth floor of the Casino at Port Stanley was composed of one thousand members and friends of the Orient Club. The party left London in a special train last night, nothing daunted by the somewhat rainy weather. They were greeted by the soft lake breezes and opened the Casino season in right royal style.

The Casino has been entirely refitted this year. Under the dancing floor is a grill room, the very latest in comfort, and as beautifully decorated as is the floor itself. Lights have been strung along the girders of the roof, and lights have been arranged around the pillars at the side of the floor.

Several novelty dances featured the evening, and prizes and novelties were thrown over the dancers, who celebrated their first lakeside dance with the greatest enthusiasm.

The dance committee of the club consisted of G. R. Erskine (chairman), Hal Dodge, H. Ball and J. Borden. This is the fifth consecutive premier dance of the season that the Orient Club has held at the Port. It was the finest and jolliest of them all.

Impress Council Members School Addition Is Needed

Members of Board of Education Send Out Letter Outlining the Proposed Work on Technical School.

To impress upon Mayor G. Wenig and the members of the city council the need and wisdom of constructing four additional class-rooms at the London Technical School, the board of education has sent each member of the council a letter fully outlining the project, and with it a copy of the plans for the proposed building.

In doing this the board remembers the strenuous objection the council as a whole raised when the school building program was drafted early in the year. But the trustees believe that the plans they now present are so feasible that the council will raise little objection to issuing the debentures desired.

Letter Reads.

The letter reads as follows: "Dear Sir.—The board of education is making application to the city council for the issuing of debentures for the erection of a $70,000 class-room addition to the present Technical School building. We appreciate how busy you are and for this opportunity of giving you the information in as brief a form as possible."

"The additional accommodation is very urgently needed. From a questionnaire signed by the parents, the Technical High School will have more than one hundred more full-time high school day students in September next than it had in September last, when it was filled to capacity and the other high schools will be in a similar or worse position."

"The class-room addition to the Technical High School which was unanimously approved by the advisory vocational committee, will take care of about one hundred and fifty students. It is the most economical way of providing additional secondary school accommodation. The addition can be made to the present building without any alterations to the building, and nothing but class-rooms and a department for preparing boys for the printing trade, which is one of London's chief industries, are included in the plans."

Use Present Boilers. "The present boilers are used for the heating, the lavatories and other general accommodation of the present building are being utilized. The government will pay half of the interest and sinking fund on the cost of construction as it falls due, so that the addition will cost the city $35,000. Technical High School buildings are the only buildings on which the government pays a proportion of construction cost."

The alternative plan, which the board would have been reluctant to adopt, will be to make temporary class-rooms in the house on King street, adjoining the Technical High School, owned by the board of education, and now rented as a residence. The cost of the alterations is estimated at $2,420, and to this would be added the loss of rent of over $700 per annum. This would be a very unsatisfactory and wasteful method of supplying accommodation."

SIR PHILIP GIBBS THINKS AMERICA MAY SAVE THE WORLD FROM DISASTER

The Brilliant English Journalist Gives Impressions of New York.

ELECTRIC SPARKS

"They Are Going To Be Dominating Influence."

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS.
Special to The Advertiser.

It is still a new world. The civilization of the United States, the mental outlook of the mass of the people, apart from individuals who still maintain the heritage of English tradition, are in many ways different from our European habits of life and thought. To an Englishman on his first visit to America, this sense of having arrived in a different world overwhelms him as he sees New York rising as fantastic as a dream, suddenly, out of the sea. Those skyscrapers, rose tinted, insubstantial through the morning mists, or at night gleaming with a myriad lights like palaces of giant kings with innumerable windows, do not belong to any other vision he has had of earthly cities. This city has been evolved by a new race of men, masters of mechanism, using steel and stone with wonderful audacity and freedom.

The Englishman newly arrived in New York finds himself at first bewildered, a little frightened even by the strangeness of his surroundings. It is as though he saw life through one of those mirrors which distort and elongate the objects they reflect. Familiar things like hotels, railway stations, streets of dwelling houses, are made unfamiliar by enlargement. His hotel has two thousand bedrooms, and he is lost in its immensity. He goes to a railway station like a great cathedral, in which thousands of people are rushing about with extraordinary quietude because their noise is lost in the spaciousness under the high dome. And he cannot find a train. Walking up Broadway at night, he is dazzled by a world of whirling lights, chasing each other, revolving, bursting into convulsions of colored radiance. All about him is the throbbing and heat of an immense humanity, restless, thrilling with some vital energy, carrying out some mysterious scheme of life with unceasing activity like human ants obeying the laws of the hive with inspired instinct.

There is something in the atmosphere of New York, physical as well as mental, of which the Englishman becomes aware. It is electric, with some vital force which makes a change in him. When he touches a door knob he gets a shock. When he brushes his hair it crackles. He feels younger, briske, more self-confident. If he is a lecturer, which God forbid, he will face a great audience with more assurance than in England he would make an after-dinner speech. He gets to know people in New York, and afterwards in other cities. They dress like himself, speak like himself with a difference of accent which is very slight in many cases. They have read the same books and seen the same plays. Their manners and social etiquette are a little better than his own, rather more elaborate in courtesy, at least on first acquaintance. They are delighted to meet him. They say so and seem to mean it. They make a fuss about him. He begins to think himself a more important person than he had previously guessed. They are remarkably like English people in many ways, yet in some indefinable way utterly unlike. What is that difference? Perhaps it is their vitality. They are always "on the go," mentally and socially organizing, speeding up, getting a move on in some direction or other. They want to know things in a clear-cut way. It is alarming to the rapid fire of their questioning. "Is Europe doomed?" "Is England going to lose her empire?" "Is France out for military supremacy?" "What do you think of America?" They read omnivorously. There are tidal waves of best sellers. Everybody has to read them, and it's hard to know where they find time for all those newspapers, magazines, novels, memoirs, which must be read by self-respecting citizens. They listen to speeches from anyone who says he has nothing to say—even in the luncheon hour. They go to lectures as a duty to hear the latest thing in science, art, religion, adventure, or human interest. The women's clubs, which are beginning to pull the political wires, organize "drives" for stricken people, campaigns of moral uplift, courses in culture. The Rotary clubs discuss business ethics and how to get rich without being wicked. The colleges are thronged with youth of both sexes, not lackadaisical, not cynical or supercilious with life, but tremendously keen, alert, eager to know, impatient—to know quickly with the shortest possible cuts. They debate every subject from baseball to German reparations, form little groups with secret passwords and rituals for the intensive culture of particular ideas, they edit papers, organize choirs, orchestras, sports and charities. American colleges are bursting with energy, and in my opinion American youth is the finest material in the world if only it gets a decent lead because it is young, eager to get a move on with life itself, intensely keen.

No One Stands Still. New York is not America. But in all cities to which I have been on the way to San Francisco, there is this vitality, this insatiable curiosity to get at the facts, this desire to get things done, to move on to the next chapter of life. No standing still anywhere. No national pessimism, cynicism or tired feeling. In the cities of the middle west, as well as in the east, one meets the same groups and types of people reading hard, if not deeply, grabbing at culture by short cuts, devising new plans for the moral uplifts of Indianapolis, Grand Rapids, Kansas City, or the human race. They are, it is true, minorities in great communities made up largely of foreign born folks from many countries of Europe not yet merged into the general commonwealth, not thoroughly Americanized, often isolated by language tradition and conditions of labor. That mass of unassimilated humanity in the lower ranks of American social life, earning good wages, but never satisfied, sullen because of the great gulfs between capital and labor, is the incalculable element which hides the future of the American nation.

Outside the cities in which they are herded are the endless fields, the great plains, the vast solitudes through which one may travel by rail for three days or more without seeing a human being, or perhaps no more than a single cowboy riding towards the setting sun. There in that soil is the source of American life and wealth, inexhaustible, and upon the people plowing that land, reaping its harvests, raising its cattle, depend utterly the civilization of the cities, the hotels with their two thousand bedrooms, the luxury within the skyscrapers. Those people in their lonely farmsteads "listen in" to wireless, read the Saturday Evening Post, keep in spiritual touch with a little with the outside world, but are mostly busy with their toil. Of British, German, Scandinavian, Russian, and many old stock, they are the heart and life-blood of America, but not its brain, or its political machine.

What is Their Destiny? What are these people going to do in the world? What is their destiny? In some way, for good or evil, they are going to be the dominating influence in the future of the human race. In what way will they use that power? The Americans themselves don't know. They are conscious of immense human forces at work within their own body, incalculable and terrific pressures of racial instincts, social claims, emotions, ideas. Lately they have become self-conscious and self-critical, asking the very questions I have asked and not finding the answers. The younger writers like Sinclair Lewis, are analyzing their own national life with scientific ruthlessness, but they are not tolerant of criticism from outside, and are enraged by any kind of patronizing, which is a malignant habit of the English mind.

A Big Dynamo. America is too big to criticize lightly. "If it gets into a temper, watch out," said an American to me. "It's a big dynamo." I am not one of the critics of America. I am one who believes in its powers and purpose to make a better job of humanity. The Americans believe in peace more than most people. On the whole they think war is a wasteful and old-fashioned way of arguing about it. They believe in equal opportunity, though not in the equality of man. They would be glad to see the world washed itself, and eliminate disease and dirt, however picturesque. They are practical idealists, with a great faith in human progress, if only the fools and knaves are kept quiet. They are intolerant—too intolerant—of the rebel, the crank, the lazy fellow, and apt to look him up if he makes a nuisance of himself. But as a nation, they want to do the right thing and a bit over, however much it costs them. And when we "grouse," as we sometimes do because they ask us politely to pay our debts, and put up tariffs against our manufactured goods and decline to come into the League of Nations, do not let us forget that but for the generosity of the United States, there would be famine and pestilence over wide areas of Europe, and the misery of many countries after war would have made one great graveyard for the bodies of their children. During the four and a half years of war Hoover's organization of the American Relief Administration brought daily rations to French and Belgian citizens behind the enemy's lines and kept them alive. After the war the effort was greater still, and the generosity of American men and women from every city and township in the United States was poured out on behalf of suffering childhood in Poland, Austria, Hungary, Armenia, and many other lands, utterly unable to support their peoples. During the year of the Russian famine, American relief provided daily food for ten million peasants in the black steppes of the Volga—the greatest act of organized charity in the history of humanity. It is my belief that the people of the United States will do things bigger than that for the welfare of the world, and in close friendship with England will save Europe from the great disaster which now threatens it. For the Americans in the mass are idealists with common sense and the gift of direct action, and they want to "make good," not only in dollars, but in human service and moral values.

Gladke Players Present Intriguing Comedy-Drama of Married Life.

The comedy-drama "Before Breakfast" now playing at the Majestic Theatre, is the story of the romance of a young shop girl who falls in love with a wealthy man and eventually marries him. The play, which is presented by the Marie Gladke Players, follows the course of true love in the case of these lovers, and being no exception to the old rule, it does not run smoothly until two other young married friends of the first couple come to the stage and quell the example of their own married life, straighten out the domestic differences of the romantic pair. The play is presented with the usual finished acting of the Gladke company and is meeting with general approval from those who have witnessed last night's performance.

WARNS ALLIES TO PAY FOR VOROVSKY'S DEATH

Karl Radek Blames Anti-Bolshevik Propaganda For Assassination.

By GEORGE WITTE.
Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News, Copyright.

Berlin, May 11.—"Vorovsky's death at the hands of Swiss Fascists in Lausanne was due indirectly to the Anti-Bolshevik propaganda which has been carried on of late with renewed vigor in Western Europe and the United States, especially by Great Britain," said Karl Radek, the Soviet leader today, upon his arrival in Berlin from Moscow.
"As the result of pressure brought to bear on little Switzerland by Great Britain," continued Radek, "the representatives of a sixth part of the whole world were refused permission to remain in Switzerland. Although the Swiss authorities employed hundreds of spies to watch the situation on the Dardanelles Straits, the Swiss government was made to protect them from the murderous weapons of white Russians. So far the Bolshevik propaganda has never claimed human life, whereas Lord Curzon's harmless Anti-Bolshevik propaganda caused Vorovsky's death. His blood was spilled on the streets of the Dardanelles Straits, the Swiss murder will yet prove fatal for those who were responsible for it."

INDEPENDENT LABOR ARRANGES CONVENTION

Windsor Delegates Will Name Candidate For Provincial House.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, May 11.—At a meeting here tonight a branch of the Independent Labor party was formed and a convention will be held to elect a candidate to contest the Windsor constituency against Major J. C. Tolmie, Liberal, and Frank W. Wilson, Conservative, for the legislature. Some workingmen present demanded to know if the Labor party was for or against prohibition.
"I will never vote for a Labor candidate who favors prohibition," one speaker asserted, while a second declared that workers had been able to think for themselves since prohibition went into effect in the United States and Canada.

The platform of the party as submitted to the meeting does not touch on the question of prohibition. One plank, favoring government ownership of the liquor and almost everything else.

REV. W. GAETZ, ST. THOMAS, ADDRESSES KIWANIS

Special to The Advertiser.

Ingersoll, May 11.—The speaker at the weekly noon hour luncheon of the Kiwanis club today was Rev. Wilfred Gaetz, of St. Thomas. He was heard with keen interest and pleasure, his subject being "Some problems and principles of life." In the course of his address he placed stress upon the fact that the future is governed by mental attitude. If one thought of success and strove with that object in view, success would be achieved, he asserted, while if the mental attitude was inclined toward failure this would likely be the final result of life's effort. The appreciation of the gathering was heartily signified on the motion of R. B. Hutt.

At the Movies Last Night

"Dick Turpin's Ride to York."

Distance and time lend romance to all history, and when the movie is employed to portray the history of those who form the audience usually become father to the play, in "Dick Turpin's Ride to York," showing at Allen's Theatre the last three days of this week, this trait of the moving picture art is clearly marked on the screen. Dick Turpin in the flesh was rather a ruffian, even though a gallant ruffian, and ended his illustrious days swinging from a gibbet. This does not prove conclusively that he was not all that the picture proclaims, but it does show that Stoll has shaped the rather drab tale of the notorious highwayman to his own ends, however pleasing the result may be to the ardent movie fan.

Stoll's picture has the benefit of a noteworthy cast, including Matheson Lang, a popular English actor, now grown somewhat obese for the part of a dashing lover, whose feats on the screen have to match the agility of Fairbanks and the grimness of William S. Hart. Isabel Elsom makes a really charming heroine, due justice to the quaint costume of the time of George II., and lighting the picture with her grace and beauty.

The remainder of the cast is of the best, and the days of the king's highway, of the old post houses, and of the toll gates and Bow street runners are brought before the eyes of the theatre-goer faithfully and with consummate art.

The story of Turpin's great ride on the back of his companion, many a night's adventure, Black Bass, is well known to every boy and girl, and has the added merit of being in accordance with the facts of the story, as shown in the records of the time. This screen story is rich in the love interest, without which no movie is complete, and has a worthy pair of lovers at that. There are scenes of England, of the Yorkshire moors and of country lanes that will make it a favorite with every Englishman who goes to see it.

It is a fine picture of the great, unchanging countryside of John Bull's island, of men and women who have passed into the realm of legend on the scroll of history a brightly colored tale of their lives and their loves. It is a picture of a great, simple man, who scored to rob the poor, and was courageous enough to relieve the wealthy of some of their spoils, in the course of which adventure accompanied him to the gallows and death and danger were his constant shadows.

"Brass."

The new bill now running at Loew's Theatre for the latter half of the week is one of exceptional merit. The feature photo, "Brass," is a splendidly enacted drama, dealing with the matter of unwisdom and marriage, the subsequent divorce, which so frequently follows these hasty marriages, and the terrible wrecking of one's happiness that can result from a marriage prompted by infatuation rather than by similar tastes and that real love which grows with continued intimacy.

Unlike many plays of this description, "Brass" is unique in that the acting and the settings are not overdone or impossible. There is an immensely human touch to the whole production, and acted as it is with a real sincerity, it presents phases of real life that cannot be seen without leaving a marked impression. To those who appreciate superior acting with the plot taken from actual life, "Brass" will appeal as one picture in a thousand. The Christie comedy "Green As Grass," is a scream from start to finish, and depicts a rivalry of a country swain and a village "man of affairs" for the hand of a very pert country maiden. The race for honors between the two, one equipped with a fast, but unwilling horse of the "Spark Plug" type, and the other with a flivver, is terribly fast and fraught with heaps of amusing incidents.

The vaudeville turns are of the very best, and they offer a large range in entertainment. Possibly the outstanding feature in the vaudeville is the acrobatic turn put on by a trio of more than ordinary ability.

"The Kentucky Derby."

"The Kentucky Derby," a thrilling love story set in Kentucky, is the story of the Kentucky Derby, the full of thrilling incidents, including a remarkable photo of shipwrecked sailors, and the presentation of a real horse race that has been screened in London up to the present time. Lillian Rich and Reginald Denry play the leads in this thrilling feature and the picture one that satisfies in every detail.

The plot of the story is a renovation of a drama enacted on the legitimate stage and was at one time the most popular melodrama on this continent.

The second serial installment of "The Timber Queen" is also being shown at the Patricia this week, and if anything this is more thrilling than the first or second installment. To those who delight in the most excruciating thrills "The Timber Queen" offers a multitude of close shaves and hairbreadth adventures that are sure to please.

"Whispers," a Universal comedy, lends a touch of otherwise intense and gripping screen program and supplies that recovery from the intense or dramatic which theatergoers are demanding as part of every program.

La Montes Dog circus is the vaudeville attraction at the Patricia and is a first class exhibition of what can be accomplished by patient kindness in the training of dumb animals.

Altogether it is a very superior bill and one well worth seeing.

THREATENS TO SLAY ORILLIA MAGISTRATE

Anonymous Writer Warns the Court Official To Resign Position At Once.

Special to The Advertiser.

Orillia, May 11.—Magistrate Clarke who recently sentenced the Godfrey brothers to two years for housebreaking has received a "blow below the belt" in the shape of a letter threatening to kill him. He would have ignored the letter, but for the fact that it involves the honor of the Toronto police magistracy, quoting Col. With the letter was a clipping from the Toronto Telegram, quoting Col. Clarke on the Beaver case. All that will be turned over to the police is, it is thought, will forward it to Toronto in an effort to trace its origin. As Toronto magistrates and also the returned men are slurred by the letter, considerable effort may be put forth to bring the writer to justice. It was posted at Terminal A station on May 10 at 12:30 p.m. and reads as follows:

"Sir: At a meeting of returned men, here, attended by all the police magistrates of this section, a resolution was passed condemning you and all such reactionary skunks and Bolsheviks, as the cause of all the disrespect of the law. Such a disgrace to our country and unless you resign at once, we returned men have decided to kill you, like the dirty dog you are."

DORCHESTER DEBATERS REVIEW "GOOD OLD DAYS"

Special to The Advertiser.

Dorchester, May 11.—A debate, "Resolved that conditions existing 30 years ago were more conducive to happiness than present day conditions," proved to be an interesting subject at the regular meeting of the C. O. S. society of the Presbyterian Church Monday evening.

The affirmative was supported by Mr. Talbot and Mr. C. Campbell while Mr. P. Sifton and Mr. E. L. Abbott of the Y. P. S. upheld the negative. The decision was given in favor of the negative. The judges were Mr. D. Campbell, Miss McKinley and Miss L. Stuart.

While the judges were arriving at a decision a solo was rendered by Mr. C. Angus.

And why not, for it does the work of big and heavy electrically-driven machines with more ease, less trouble and much less cost.

It develops a powerful suction while being gently pushed across the floor, that lifts the embedded dust, dirt, sand and grit out of the nap of the carpets or rugs leaving them bright, clean and fresh.

It is one of the greatest smile producers and happiness creators ever introduced into the home, for it lightens the drudgery of house work and brightens the life of the home.

SICKENING HEADACHES ENDED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Effect was splendid when she tried this Fruit Medicine

East Ship Harbour, N.S.

"For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me and I was almost discouraged. Then I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effect was splendid; and after taking one box, I can safely say I am well. I feel like a new person in every way and I am deeply thankful to have relief from these sickening headaches."

Mrs. MARTHA DE WOLFE.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always relieve Headaches due to Constipation because they act directly on the liver and cause the bowels to move regularly and naturally. This rids the system of impurities and keeps the blood pure and rich. "Fruit-a-tives" are made of fruit juices combined with tonics, are pleasant to take and mild and gentle in action.

Several matters of interest to musicians locally will be under discussion, as well as problems affecting musicians throughout the continent. The recent New York trouble, which for a time threatened to spread, will be thoroughly threshed out, and it was Mr. Dwyer's opinion, that a satisfactory solution would be effected at the convention.

I Ride a Red Bird Now
—By Chester Gump—

All the boys on our street
Had wheels, and on the fun
Those kids would have at noontime
And after school was done.

They'd get together Saturdays—
Gosh! They were a happy bunch;
And they'd beat it off to Springbank,
Each with a picnic lunch.

And some of them made money
By working after hours;
Delivering things on their bicycles,
And doing other chores.

Now I used to look on only
And gosh! How I'd feel giddy
To see those kids go whizzing by.
Boy! They'd be going some.

Well, that's all ancient history now;
Those were the days that's passed,
'Cause something happened recently
That made me smile at last.

My dad met a man named Wenige,
And listen, by the way—
He's a man that made walking expensive—
Leastways that's what they say.

Dad went to his store on Wellington street,
You know—right next the "Y."
Oh, boy! The dandy wheels he's got—They're birds and that's no lie.

He trotted out a peach of a bike,
A "Red Bird" Sure, that's right—
Springy saddle and coaster brake
And the frame all painted bright.

This Wenige man says to my dad—
"A small sum's all you pay,
The rest you give in small amounts—
It's easily done that way."

So now the boys on our street
Have nothing on me. Gee!
I lead the bunch on my machine—
They can't keep up with me!

You kids that haven't got a bike
Should take a tip from me—
It's easy to get one nowadays
If dad and you go see—

DENIES QUEBEC ALMOST KILLED ONTARIO DRY LAW

Hon. G. A. Semard Replies To Charge of Chairman, Hales of the License Board.

LAUDED BY STATES

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, May 12.—Replying to a charge by Chairman Hales of the Ontario License Board that responsibility for the near failure of the Ontario temperance act lies at the doors of the Province of Quebec, Hon. G. A. Semard, chairman of the Quebec Liquor Commission, in a statement issued here last night, declares that since its inception the Quebec Liquor Commission has always refused to quote on, or sell wine or liquor in any province in the dominion or any part of the United States, unless authorized to do so by the proper authorities.

The statement continues:
"As a matter of fact our attitude on this point has been commended by officials of the United States Government, who felt that we were doing more than we were expected to do, to help them in the enforcement of the Volstead act. I doubt if any such testimonial has been directed to Mr. Hales, as it is a matter of public knowledge that a very active bottle trade is carried on over the Ontario-American boundary."
"It is not only uncharitable, but absolutely unfair to intimate without proof that we are interfering with the liquor laws of our neighbors."
"One quarter of the liquor and wine sold in the province of Quebec is purchased from distillers and wine producers in Ontario. If part of these beverages is brought back to its source by Ontario citizens who feel that they are unduly deprived of their liberty, it is up to the Ontario authorities to prevent this; we have nothing to do with it, as long as our own laws are respected."

FINED $10 FOR WIRING HOUSES WITHOUT PERMIT

Special to The Advertiser.
St. Catharines, Ont. May 12.—Austin Zimmerman, who used to be a Lincoln county constable at Smithville, was fined $10 and costs today for wiring three places at Smithville without having permits. This was the first case of its kind ever tried here, and is an indication that the underwriters are trying to cut down G. W. House, chief inspector, Hamilton, the menace.
Milton, who laid the charge, said the work had been improperly done, the joints being left unsoldered, which made it dangerous. That is principally why the charge was laid.

Treasurer's Report Shows That Revenue From All Sources Is $11,000.

The reports of the various societies brought before the annual meeting of the Askin Street Methodist Church last night showed the church to be in an exceptionally flourishing condition and presaged a bright future for the activities that have made Askin street one of the best known of city congregations.

Rev. Cosby Morris, who for the past five years has ably filled the pulpit of the church, was extended an unanimous invitation to remain for a sixth term. During his stay in London Rev. Mr. Morris has endeared himself to his people and his religious zeal and conscientious work have won for him hundreds of friends.

Change Fiscal Year.
An important item of business transacted was the changing of the end of the fiscal year from May 30 to April 30.
The treasurer's report up to date with the revenue for the rest of the month yet to be turned in shows the income from general funds to be $11,000. The general and the women's missionary funds brought in $3,752, while the receipts from the Sunday school with an average attendance of 385 were $3,278.

One of the most progressive organizations in the church is the Ladies' Aid Society, and during the past year it has raised $1,000.

Choose Stewards.
Stewards chosen for the ensuing year are: H. Kilbourn, Dr. S. P. Reynolds, A. M. Hunt, R. R. Smith, E. C. Talbot, T. B. Kilbourn, J. H. Vanstone, W. West, J. T. Main, J. A. Brown, F. Wanless, J. Heanish, W. Copp and A. Courtis. Dr. Reynolds was elected recording secretary, and W. Copp the corresponding representative. The new missionary committee will consist of T. Copp and J. A. Brown with their wives.

Y. M. C. A. CIRCUS PROVES SUCCESS ON FIRST NIGHT

Boys and Young Men of City Exhibit Indoor Gymnastic Prowess.

COMIC ANTICS PLEASE
Ringmaster and Two Clowns Provide Laughter of Evening.

The first performance of the Y. M. C. A. circus in the gymnasium of the "Y" last night met with the hearty approval of the large audience which filled the hall to overflowing. The hundred boys and young men took part and the event was easily the largest and finest exhibition of indoor athletic drill ever staged in London. A real circus touch was added by the presence of W. D. Christianson rigged out in dress suit and top hat, and holding the long trainer's whip which marked him as the ringmaster. The antics of two clowns who kept up a continuous performance of small play throughout the evening also helped to add to the circus air of the whole program.

The circus is the outcome of many months of active athletic training. This was the first opportunity the boys have had to show the public what they have been taught and to what extent their prowess has attained. The program included seventeen features, all of distinctive and real merit. Drills, marionettes, dances, races and numerous other events that test the skill and endurance of the participants were executed with a surprising amount of skill.

Grand March.
The circus opened with a grand march of the entire company. The preparation classes, in which the mazes of an intricate drill, following which a number of gymnastic exercises were presented.

The spring-board entertainment by the employed boys was one of the best items on the program. The diving and tumbling exercises by the junior leaders were received with applause by the audience. The program also included torch dancing, pyramid building, freak surgical operations, mind-reading and fencing. The great diversity the item offered did not in any way detract from the quality of the work which the boys put forward to make their endeavor successful.

Boys Develop.
The entire circus tended to bear strong emphasis on the interests of properly-supervised gymnastic instruction, and the wonderful physical benefits to be gained by those who participate in such exercises. Last night the Y. M. C. A. without prior training of this kind are well-developed youngsters, and they gave the public an idea of just what can be accomplished along these lines.
Unlike other affairs of a somewhat similar kind that have been staged in London, the boys' circus was allowed to drag at any point, and the gymnastic exercises were interlarded with much fun and skill, which greatly relieved the monotony of the performance. On the

SCORES LEADERSHIP OF HOWARD FERGUSON

Thessalon Politician May Enter Field As An Independent Conservative.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 11.—At the Conservative convention at Desbarats yesterday, which nominated Dr. J. M. Robb of Blind River for the riding of East Algoma, T. E. Williams of Thessalon, who seemed disappointed that the convention had not supported him as a candidate, intimated that he would enter the field as an Independent Conservative. Williams bore down hard on the alleged disclosure on the timber probe, which, he claimed, did little credit to the Ferguson leadership. Albert Grigg, who addressed the convention, made a rousing speech in defence of the timber policy of the Conservative government, claiming that while the policy had been attacked by the Drury administration it still remained in force, even the Doyle bill rule, which created the big disturbance, being yet in vogue. It is not expected that Williams will adhere to his decision to run.

WATERLOO MEN PURCHASE NEW INSURANCE COMPANY

Special to The Advertiser.
Kitchener, May 12.—Waterloo gets another insurance company to add to its list in the acquiring of the Merchant Casualty Company of Winnipeg, which was purchased by E. F. Seagram and S. C. Tweed, heading a group of financial and insurance men of that town. It is understood Mr. Seagram will become president of the company and Mr. Tweed vice-president. The new company will have no connection whatever with the Ontario Equitable of Waterloo, of which Mr. Tweed is the president. With the new company, Waterloo now possesses six insurance companies.

BUFFALO BODY THAT OF WOODSTOCK MAN

Identified As Remains of John A. Miller, Retired Oxford Farmer.

Woodstock, May 12.—The man found dead in a Buffalo hotel Wednesday, and whose name was given out as "J. A. Mills," has been identified as John A. Miller, of this city. When the Buffalo police found the man's bankbook it was seen that he was a depositor in a Woodstock bank.

However, the bank authorities denied that "John A. Mills" was a depositor. The chief of police then wired Buffalo for the depositor's number. This was received today and immediately the bank authorities identified the number with John A. Miller, a well known resident of Woodstock.
Inquiries were made at the home of Mr. Miller and it was ascertained from Mrs. Miller that she had only returned home yesterday from a visit and that she found Mr. Miller had left the city early in the week. She was greatly shocked when informed that the man found dead in Buffalo was her husband. Mr. Miller spent

JANE ADDAMS URGES CHINA TO ABOLISH CHILD LABOR

By JAMES L. BUTTS.
Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyrighted.
Shanghai, May 12.—Jane Addams, in an address here yesterday on child labor, which is a vital topic in Shanghai, because of the thousands of Chinese children in factories, declared that no great industry could successfully rest on the shoulders of the children, whereas if child labor is abandoned great strides forward would be made. She urged that China profit by America's study of child labor. More than 2,000 women of all nationalities heard the famous founder of Hull House.
