THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOVEMBER 21ST

The Twelve Sent Forth, St. Matt. 10.
Golden Text, St. Matt. 9: 37, 38.

1-4. The Names of the twelve whom Jesus chose have become more familiar and better known to the world than, perhaps, any other names of human history. Eleven stand high in the world's honor roll, one has become the synonym for traitor. These men, when they had been with Jesus for some weeks or months, observing His work, listening to His teaching, asking Him questions, drinking in of His spirit, He sent out to do as He was doing, to preach the love of the heavenly Father, to teach willing learners, and to heal the sick. The instructions which He gave them for their work, then and afterward, constitute our lesson.

5-8. Go Not, Go Rather. The first instruction is where to go and what to do. Jesus appears to have regarded it as His first duty and that of His disciples to minister to His own people of the Jews. Later He was to issue His command to go to Samaria and to the Gentiles, to the end of the earth (Acts 1: 8). But now it was to the people of Israel the disciples were sent. The gospel was to begin at home. The Jews, prepared by the long discipline of their history, and by the revelation of the Old Testament Scripture, for its coming, were to hear it first. If they would but repent and turn to God and seek the way of faith, the great prophetic promise of their history would be fulfilled, and they would be, as bearers of the gospel, "for a light to the Gentiles and for salvation to the ends of the earth." This was the challenge of Jesus to them, His God's call to them through Him. We may well believe that He expected and hoped great things, and that in the failure of the great mass of the Jewish people and of their rulers to respond He was bitterly disappointed.

Preach, Heal. With preaching, no doubt, teaching was to go hand in hand. So it is in the missionary work of the Church to-day. Preaching opens up the way, attracts attention, persuades and wins. Teaching instructs and establishes and makes permanent. Together with preaching and teaching must go healing. The apostle and the missionary will carry with them the same spirit of compassion which moved the heart of Jesus. They will seek to minister to the body as to the soul. They will make God's love real in loving, human service. They will, as it were, take Christ's place, and His healing and life-giving power will flow through them. They will not turn back from any human need. The sick, the leper, the demoniac, the dead, will be the objects of their interest and their care. Every word of Jesus applies to the Church's work to-day as surely as to the disciples whom He then sent out. "Freely," He said, "ye have received, freely give."

In vs. 9-28 are many other counsels and warnings. The theme of their preaching is to be the nearness of the kingdom of heaven, and that men must prepare for its coming by repentance. They were to go forth in simple garments, without ostentation, living on the hospitality of the people who would receive them, and leaving behind them, with such hospitable souls, the blessing of peace. By contrast those who did not receive them would suffer great loss. They would, like their Master, meet with persecution, but they would be sustained and guided by the Spirit of God.

In verse 23 Jesus makes the strange declaration, "Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel till the Son of man be come." Did Jesus think that in some marvellous way, by some display of supernatural power, such as that described in 24: 29-31, His kingdom would speedily be established? If so, He must have suffered keen disappointment, for the disciples went upon their mission and returned, and no such extraordinary event happened. Or is there another explanation of Christ's words?

29-31. Fear Ye Not. This is the great command of Jesus to His missionaries. Whatever may happen, fear not. Whatever or whosoever the foe, be not afraid. Fear God and God only. He who cares for the sparrows cares very much and very tenderly for those who go out to do His bidding and to bear the gospel of Christ to men. Fear ye not therefore.

"Thou on the Lord rely,
So safe shalt thou go;
Fix on His work thy steadfast eye,
So shall thy work be done."

37-42. More Than Me. Jesus makes a very great demand upon His disciples. They must put Him first. Neither father nor mother, neither son nor daughter, must be more to them than He. Even life itself must not be counted dear. The cross will be for them the way of life. And yet, is it not true, in obedience to this demand of Christ, to this law of discipleship, there lies the sanctifying and glorifying of human love, and the finding of true life, the life that is eternal?

Receive Him. Receiving His disciples, who were to be His messengers, it would be as though they received Him, and receiving Him received God Himself who sent Him. It is a great assurance and a great promise. The simple and kindly and open-hearted hospitality of those who receive and entertain Christ's messengers will have its abundant reward. Even the cup of cold water is credited. Tennyson has said, "It is impossible to imagine that the Almighty will ask you, none was lost by leaching. If the manure made by this hay were carefully saved, a part of this ammonia (not more than 80 per cent.) would come back to the land and would become a part of the circulating medium of plantfood, thus being used over and over. The same may be said of the phosphoric acid and potash. The first cost is not a measure of the final cost.

The Farm Business.

A farm, to be successful, should maintain its productivity and should return a reasonable wage for the labor of the farmer and his family, after paying farm expenses and deducting a fair rate of interest on the investment.

Four important factors in the success of the farm business are size of business, yield of crops, returns from live stock and efficiency in the use of labor.

What is the size of your farm business?

What part of your investment is in land, buildings, live stock, machinery and other capital?

Is your area properly proportioned to the various crops with regard to profits? With regard to labor distribution?

How do your crop yields compare with the average yields of the locality?

What classes of live stock return you the most money?

How do the returns from your live stock compare with the average of your locality?

How many acres of crops do you raise per man? Per horse?

Is your farm so organized that each part of the business is yielding satisfactory returns?

How much have you left for your own labor, after deducting from your total receipts your year's expenses, value of labor performed by members of your family and interest on your investment?

How much does the farm contribute toward your family living?

A good name in our own neighborhood is far more to be desired than preferment among strangers.

BRITISH EMPIRE PAID SILENT TRIBUTE TO HER HEROIC DEAD

His Majesty Attends Inspiring Ceremonial When Body of an Unknown British Warrior Was Placed Among the Illustrious Dead in Westminster Abbey on Armistice Day.

A despatch from London says:—"Zero hour" was sounded throughout the British Empire at eleven o'clock on the morning of Armistice Day, when all work ceased and all traffic was stationary for two minutes to pay silent tribute to Great Britain's million men who died in the war. The hour was observed with extreme reverence by all classes and thousands of people dressed in black wept openly as they stood with heads bared in London streets.

The capital of the Empire has seldom witnessed a sadder or more inspiring ceremonial than this official tribute to the fallen, which took the form of an unveiling of a cenotaph in Whitehall and the reburial in Westminster Abbey of the remains of an unknown soldier disinterred in the Ypres salient last week.

The body, which was brought from France on a destroyer, was the centre of the Empire's homage. Draped in the Union Jack, with the accoutrements and helmet of a private soldier placed on top, the coffin bore the inscription, "A British warrior who fell in the Great War of 1914-1918." Twelve pall-bearers surrounded the gun carriage bearing the coffin in the parade from Victoria Station to Whitehall were Admirals Beatty, Jellicoe, Meux, Jackson and Madden; Field Marshals Haig, French, Wilson and Methuen; Generals Horne, Byng and Gattiff, who, as the nation's greatest war figures, thus honored the simple soldier who is hailed to-day as "the man who won the war." Germany paid her first official tribute to her enemy's dead when Ambassador Von St. Hamer, surrounded by his official staff, stood bareheaded on the balcony in the rear of the German Embassy as the coffin passed in the Mall.

King George, waiting at Whitehall, saluted as the carriage drew up at the cenotaph for a brief religious ceremony, which ended at eleven o'clock. When Big Ben boomed the last stroke of the Zero Hour King George pressed the button which released the flag draping the monument. He then remained standing with head bared in the immense crowd, which included all the leaders of the church and state, while the two minutes of silent homage elapsed.

Then the King, aided by Marshal Haig, placed a wreath for himself and Queen Mary on the unknown hero's coffin as the great throng joined in the prayer offered by the Archbishop of Canterbury. Then the King deposited another wreath at the foot of the cenotaph, followed by the Prince of Wales, Lloyd George and former Premier Asquith, who together laid a third wreath before the monument. On behalf of the Dominion of Canada, Sir George E. Foster deposited a wreath of maple leaves.

The Queen witnessed the ceremonies from the window of the Home Office with a party which included the Queen Mother, Alexandra, the King and Queen of Spain, and the Queen of Sweden.

When the parade reformed and marched to Westminster Abbey for the burial, King George followed immediately behind the coffin on foot as the Empire's chief mourner. A bodyguard of 100 Victoria Cross heroes were lined up in two files when the coffin was carried into the nave of the Abbey and interred beneath the floor in soil brought from Flanders. Queen Mary and her party were at the side of the grave with representatives of Imperial and national institutions who gathered there for the brief burial service. Places of honor near the grave had been reserved for 6,000 women selected by ballot from among Great Britain's three million women who lost relatives in the war. Special accommodations were also arranged for former soldiers and war nurses.

Princess Mary May Visit Canada Next Year.

Officials of the Canadian National Exhibition are endeavoring to arrange for a visit of the daughter of the King to the annual fair at Toronto next year, and they are hopeful that their efforts will be successful.

Flew Over Europe on Business Trip

A despatch from London says:—"A flight of 3,250 miles for business is a new record made by an English business man. He is R. Wright, a Manchester engineer, who returned here from a tour of Central Europe in a Handley Page flying machine. The return trip was made from Jassy, 215 miles beyond Bucharest, by way of Strasburg. From Strasburg a record non-stop flight was made to London, a distance of 420 miles, in 3 hours and 50 minutes. From Jassy to the hangar at Cricklewood the distance is 1,635 miles.

"It was a very successful and enjoyable trip," Mr. Wright said. "I was away a little more than a month and covered 3,250 miles in all."

Former King of Bavaria is Dead

A despatch from Munich says:—"Former King Ludwig III. of Bavaria is dead at the age of 75 years. King Ludwig III. has been living in the Swiss mountains near the head waters of the Rhine, where in the past two years it has been reported that he was losing his reason, as had the mad Kings of Bavaria before him for nearly a century.

King Ludwig was born January 7, 1845, and became ruler of Bavaria on November 5, 1913, in his 68th year. He was forced to abdicate when the German revolution broke out.

German Bonds Delivered to Allies for Debt

A despatch from London says:—"Germany has delivered to the Reparations Commission bonds to the amount of 60,000,000 gold marks, the value of which is approximately £3,000,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. The delivery of the bonds is in accordance with the requirements of the peace treaty, and the commission proposes to hold them as security for and in acknowledgement of Germany's debt.

Army of Occupation Costs $18,000,000 a Year

A despatch from London says:—"It was stated in the House of Commons recently that the cost of the British army of occupation on the Rhine was £3,600,000 sterling a year.

The total cost since the armistice up to September 30 this year was £51,000,000 sterling, and the amount received from Germany for the troops amounted to 346,000,000 marks.

FRANCE HONORS UNKNOWN BRITISHER

Marshal Foch at Boulogne as Body of Nameless Soldier Goes Home

A despatch from Paris says:—"With no less emotion than when at Verdun the French people chose for the honor of burial below the Arc de Triomphe the body of their own Unknown, they saluted at Boulogne that of the British soldier who will rest in Westminster Abbey. The whole population of the little seaside town, which has played so great a part in the history of the war, lined the streets to see the procession bearing the body from the Citadel, where it had lain all night, to the British vessel Verdun, which was to carry it to England.

All the church bells were rung, and ships in the harbor flew their flags at topmast, as the ceremony was not one of mourning, but of glorification.

Marshal Foch paid to the British a great tribute, making the special journey to Boulogne to honor the unknown hero. Standing beside the coffin on the quay just before it was taken aboard the ship on its last journey back from France, the Marshal made a short speech. To all those who, from the British Isles, Canada, Australia, Africa, India and the other countries of the Empire, brought to aid France their courage, valor, endurance and abnegation, he paid a touching tribute.

Irish Home Rule Bill Passes Commons

A despatch from London says:—"The Irish Home Rule Bill passed the House of Commons on its third reading on Thursday after a motion for rejection of the measure, proposed by William C. Adamson, the Opposition leader, had been defeated by 183 to 52.

The measure passed without any noteworthy incident in a rather tame debate. The Liberal and Labor members, who have boycotted it through most of its stages, as a sign of their conviction of its hopelessness as a settlement of the Irish problem, were again absent on Thursday.

When money talks we never pause to note if it should stammer, nor if it honors all the laws of logic and of grammar.

By drawing back the loose folds of the skin, a French doctor recently removed wrinkles from a woman patient's face.

CANADA MAY MEET ALL WAR DEBTS BY DECEMBER, 1937

Total War Obligations Amount to $2,127,481,800—To Pay Them Dominion Must Raise Each Year Over $125,000,000 Besides Interest

A despatch from Ottawa says:—"If Canada can avoid further borrowing and set aside sufficient funds by way of sinking fund, her war obligations will all be paid by December 1, 1937. Those obligations total $2,127,481,800, of which $1,976,608,800 is the principal of War and Victory Loans issued in Canada and largely held by Canadians. The balance amounting to $150,873,000 represents the principal of Public Service Loans issued in New York. To liquidate this large liability without making further issues, Canada would have to provide, in addition to sums required to carry on the public service and to pay interest on all these loans, an average of more than $125,000,000 a year by way of sinking fund. Of course, as maturities were met, the annual interest burden would be diminished and the task of providing money for sinking fund to that extent would become less onerous.

Outstanding bonds of domestic and New York issues with their amounts, rates of interest and dates of maturity, are as follows:—

Date	Amount	Rate
Aug. 1st, 1921	$15,000,000	5 1/2 per cent.
Oct. 1st, 1921	25,000,000	5 per cent.

Bees Were the First Embalmers.

Few people are aware of the fact that bees were the originators of embalming. It happens sometimes that a stranger enters their hive, and often the enemy is too large or heavy to be cast out.

A slug, for instance, might make its way into the bee-hive. The bees pounce upon the unwanted intruder, and proceed to sting him to death.

The problem now presents itself to the intelligent bees as to the best method of ridding the hive of the slug's carcass. They evidently are aware that if left, the hive would become infected by the presence of a dead body, so the embalming process is commenced.

This is done by encasing the remains of the slug in propolis, a substance specially collected by the bees from the opening buds of poplar and other trees. The propolis thus prevents the slug's body decaying.

But if a small sneaks into the hive, the process is even simpler. As soon as the snail receives a sting he retires into his shell. Then the artful bees just wall him in with propolis, and without troubling to shift the shell, securely cement it to the floor of the hive. The tomb of the snail thus becomes part and parcel of the hive.

Had Lost Husband and Sons in War

A despatch from London says:—"Of all the witnesses that packed Whitehall or crowded the Abbey at the memorial services on Armistice Day, a little band of approximately 100 women in the Abbey received the most reverent attention. They had been selected for the seats of honor because each had lost her husband and all her sons.

Mammoth Growth of Pacific Coast Shipbuilding

A despatch from North Vancouver says:—"Figures concerning the development of the shipbuilding industry on the North Shore were divulged by Mr. A. Wallace recently. In 1915, 172 men were employed at the Wallace Shipyards, the payroll at that time amounting to $88,856; in 1916, 237 men were employed and the wage sheet totalled $164,915; in 1917, 685 men were employed and brought the wage sheet up to the $720,603 mark; in 1918, 892 men brought the wage sheet up to $901,635; the figures for the past year showed that 1,067 men were employed and the payroll amounted to $1,220,882. Repair work has amounted to approximately one-third of the total output of the local yard and has considerable to do concerning the number of men employed, stated Mr. Wallace. The fact that the cost of repairing had increased in the Orient and decreased in this province should have a tendency to increase the amount of repairing done in this province.

No Decrease in Railway Traffic

A despatch from Toronto says:—"Passenger traffic on the leading railways continues unusually heavy for this time of the year. The railway offices in the principal centres are finding it difficult to cope with the business offering. Up to the present time it is stated that, so far as can be judged, the recent increases in rates have not affected the volume of business to any extent whatever. Advance bookings for Christmas business are also reported to be very heavy. These bookings would indicate that the volume of traffic from Western Canada to England for the Christmas season this year will establish a new record. In a great many cases people have not been back home since before the war and this development is resulting in a very large movement for the coming holiday season.

Armenia in Danger of Annihilation

A despatch from Paris says:—"The Armenian Republic is on the eve of being entirely wiped out of existence through the combined attacks of the Turkish Nationalists and the Soviets.

The refusal of all powers to accept the mandate over Armenia has put the Armenian problem directly up to the League of Nations, which is admittedly powerless to act.

The Matin declares that unless the allies act to save Armenia the Turkish treaty may be considered as another "scrap of paper."

Ship Grain From Ontario to Spain

A despatch from Fort William says:—"Foreshadowing days when the deep water canal will make this an ocean port, two ships for Vigo, Spain, carrying 100,000 bushels of grain each, Antoneo and Joseffa, just built at Duluth, sailed from here on Thursday on their maiden voyage.

New U.S. President Must Face League Issue

A despatch from Washington says:—"From all advices it is apparent that the League of Nations issue is far from settled. While the election has placed the opponents of the present League in charge of the government of the nation, their way will not be particularly easy in solving the problem which the Versailles Treaty and the old League has brought into being. It is reasonably certain that Harding and his followers will find it no bed of roses to straighten out the debacle which the European war has caused.

Safety First.

"Will you accept this portfolio?" inquired the Berlin cabinet maker. "I don't know," replied the cautious statesman. "Times are uncertain; maybe you'd better make it a suitcase."

Pert Paragraphs

Burned to death was the fate of a four year old girl in Chicago recently. The little girl refused to divide some candy with a boy of five and he set fire to her clothing.

A most ingenious weapon was found on a young man of twenty two, when he was arrested by detectives in New York.
The weapon was a combination revolver and knife. One of the blades of the knife acted as a trigger while another blade acted as the barrel for the revolver.

The new boarder sniffed at the contents of his coffee cup and set it down.
"Well," queried the landlady in a peevish tone, "have you anything to say against the coffee?"
"Not a word," he answered. "I never speak ill of the absent."

An onion fiend was arrested by a railroad special agent, sitting eating the savory vegetables in a freight car which was stopped in front of his adobe. He told the Judge, when arraigned that he had always been addicted to onions, and he couldn't resist when a carload stepped right in front of his door. The Judge fined and sent him to the Muncipal
Farm, assigning him to the garden department, "where there are lots of onions."

Mr. J. W. Singster, a councillor of Listowel, seems to be the mark for tire thieves in Listowel. On former occasions during the summer, joy-riders have made use of his car but returned it, but this last time it was found some miles from town stripped of it's tires, windshield, slip covers, tool boxes and a panel clock. Earlier in the summer tires were taken from his garage, and his total loss is eleven tires, besides the other articles mentioned.

Again the Canadian Red Cross Society has undertaken to do its share of worthy work on the continent of Europe.
The appalling disaster that has followed the wake of the war must needs appeal to every human being when it is remembered that there are over 10,000,000 children in Europe who are fatherless from the war; Poland has about 500,000; in Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Hungary there are at least 1,000,000 war orphans of whom some 5,000 were recently found wandering almost like animals in the Ruthenian mountains. An appeal is being made for funds and should receive hearty support.

One of Four Millions

(A Photograph Direct from the War-Stricken Area)

$1 per Month Preserves the Life of One Child

Millions of war orphans in Central Europe are growing up undernourished and stunted.

Thousands of them are dying of typhus, tuberculosis and small-pox.

There is almost a complete lack of the nourishing foods growing children need, of clothing, of doctors, nurses and medical supplies. The condition of the children is pitiable in the extreme.

Upon this coming generation depends largely whether these nations will be healthy and right-minded or a hot-bed of anarchy and degeneracy—a menace to the world.

It has been found by experience that the cost of caring for a waif child is approximately three dollars per month; that of the supplies that are required by imports about one dollar is needed; and therefore the dollar that we provide, together with the local support of local governments, local municipalities, local charities and local services practically preserves the life of one child.

The British Empire War Relief Fund will be administered in Europe by the British Red Cross in co-operation with the League of Red Cross Societies. Send your contribution care of:

Carrick's Experiment in Consolidated Schools

A correspondent to the London Free Press says there are no happier school children in the world than those of the Karlsruhe public school section, who are being driven in a motor car each school day to and from the Neustadt public school by Mr. Jacob Walker, of Neustadt. At least this is the impression one gets in viewing the happy faces of the youngsters as the school car speeds along carrying the scholars of a Carrick school section which now has the distinction of being the first, not only in Carrick, but also in the province, to adopt the much-talked-of consolidated schools system and to give it a fair trial.

The children are delighted with their new school, and also with the method of conveyance, which they consider a welcome change from the old order of school life and which they do not fail to appreciate. A few moments' conversation with any one of the youngsters reveals an amusing situation in which every child is found to be a stern advocate of consolidation, because they would not like to have to revert to the old order of things. That would mean walking to school in all kinds of weather, etc., whereas under the new system they are carried for and delivered at the school door every morning and are brought back to the door of their own homes in the evening. The youngsters know that such accommodation is somewhat new and superior to the ordinary rural school life.

Consolidation in Carrick can quite easily be brought about, providing the people understand it. The majority in some school sections object because they do not quite understand the advantage of consolidation. Several other sections, at present struggling with high school rates, are anxious to consolidate but are somewhat timid in making the start. In conversation with H. M. B. Me, the obliging and capable principal of the Neustadt public school, your correspondent learned that the following school sections could quite nicely consolidate and save money: Nos. 12, 13, 4 and 5 (Carlsruhe) and Nos. 6, 13 and 9 (Neustadt).

The Karlsruhe school in sending the children to Neustadt, were saving about the amount which it costs for conveyance, which is $580 yearly. The principal is convinced that the schools in question are going to consolidate, and maintains a more suitable centre than Neustadt could not be found. Principal Ermel, who very kindly procured a picture of the school and of Mr. Walker's conveyance, is a firm advocate of consolidation and is very optimistic in regard to the present school situation in Carrick.

Carrick, however, is not the only place where consolidation is regarded as inevitable in view of the high school rate in the rural school sections. There is one school not far from here whose average attendance is nine scholars. This school has been kept up since pioneer days when the attendance averaged 60. Up to about ten years ago a teacher was engaged at $125. This year a teacher is paid $1200 to teach the nine pupils, an average of $125 per pupil for tuition alone, without the cost of fuel, supplies, etc., which must be added to that. In such cases the need of consolidation is clearly shown, and is felt that probably with the opening of the next school term sections will consolidate locally.

The coin of the least value ever issued is the "mite," so called, such as the widow of the Bible contributed to the poor. Its shape was hexagonal, and its value about one-fiftieth of a cent. It would take five thousand mites to make one dollar.

A doctor claims that germs lurk in morning kisses, because the sun and fresh air have not had a chance to sterilize even the sweetest lips. "If you would be sanitary, kiss in the evening," he says. Isn't it a fortunate thing for the human race that courting is done in the evening?

Eastern professors are getting it figured out so that by following a well laid out plan a person can live on 25 cents a day. Some of them will figure it out pretty soon so a man can read over a bill of fare and easily fix his stomach by swallowing his words.

Fire completely destroyed the River Valley Creamery near Durgannon at noon to-day. The fire originated in the engine room while the employees were at dinner, and had gained such headway when discovered that only a small portion of the stock was saved. The building and machinery, valued at upwards of $5,000, was a total loss, though partly covered by insurance.

Kincardine Heroine Fights Fire on Roof

On an 18-inch ledge, with a drop of 55 feet should she miss her footing, and in a 40-mile an-hour wind, Miss Ray McLeod walked out with two pails of water to fight fire which had caught in the peak of the roof of the Royal Hotel, where she is employed, and held the flames in check till the firemen could give their attention to them and put them out.

The fire started at 7:15 in the Kincardine Evaporator, and by 9:30 the building was a wreck. Owing to the strong wind off the lake this was one of the hardest corflagrations the firemen had ever experienced. Large cinders were carried far. Shortly after 9 o'clock the Royal Hotel caught fire, but the damage there was chiefly by smoke and water, and will amount to some $4000. On the evaporator and contents, however, the loss will run up to ten or fifteen thousand dollars.

Early in the fire the main lead wires of the lighting system were broken, and the town was plunged into darkness. Much damage was also done to the telephone service.

At 10:30 the fire, though under control was still burning. The wind was still fairly high, but a heavy patrol was maintained until 11:30 p.m.

Stockings of Wood.

The popularity of silk stockings is said to have an important influence on the shortage of paper, for these very different articles are both made from wood pulp. A German professor invented an "imitation" silk made in this way and the American stocking manufacturers were quick to see the possibilities of the invention, with the result that every year millions of pairs of "wooden" stockings are made. Crepe de Chine is another material that is often made from wood pulp and some "weights" of this are made heavy by being "leaded" or mixed with minute particles of lead during the process of manufacture. Taffeta silk, or some qualities of it, is also made of wood pulp. Means have just been discovered of making men's felt hats from wood.

Halloween Fatality

Richard Allan, an aged and respected citizen of Orangeville came to a tragic end as a result of a "practical joke" on the part of some on Halloween. Mr. Allen occupied an apartment in a flat on the second story of the Henderson block at the rear of which was a closet supported by four posts about fourteen feet from the ground. Boys armed with axes were chopping through the posts when Mr. Allen came out and told them to go away, but they kept right on with their chopping when suddenly the posts gave way, and the closet with Mr. Allen inside was precipitated to the ground. Mr. Allen was badly shaken up, sustaining compound fractures of both legs and also a fracture of the skull. He was found later by the nightwatchman and taken to the hospital where he died Thursday morning. The names of the boys have been ascertained and the case is in the hands of the Crown Attorney.

From Cherry-Blossom Land

The Japanese Give Good Example

It is the proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on woman's health.

What is it that makes our Canadian women often pale, sallow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old at forty-five when they should be in their prime? Women suffer in all kinds of ways from backache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

The Revolt From Four Walls

By C. COURTENAY SAVAGE.

CHAPTER I.

Madeline Wardell was startled to the point of dropping her sewing when her husband entered the room. Her surprise at seeing him was quite justified. It was only half past two on a week-day afternoon.

"I didn't hear you come in," she exclaimed, half angrily. "What's the matter? Are you sick?"

He shook his head to indicate that he was not ill.

"Has the office shut down?" This time she positively snapped her question, but she could not hide her anxious tone.

"No—the office is still going on—," he said hesitatingly. Then with deliberation: "I've quit, that's all."

She swung round in her chair, and picking up her sewing for a minute or two she busied herself with her stitching. Wardell stood opposite her, watching the flying needle and apparently thinking of nothing else.

"Well," she said finally, without looking up, "what do you mean, you quit? Have you a new job or did somebody hand you a million dollars? Don't forget that rent day comes the first of the month—and I'm not going to hand out one cent of the money I've saved. I've done without things—and saved, and—"

"Nobody has asked you for anything—no one ever has," Guy Wardell said sharply. "I've provided for you—and well. I'll still do so." He turned on his heel and went quickly from the room.

Madeline Wardell—Mad, as most people who knew her intimately called her—went on with her sewing. She was putting the buttons on a new dress, and as she had decided that, unless she wore it, she could not go to the card party that evening, it was a case of hurry. Her thoughts kept pace with the needle. Had Guy suddenly gone crazy? Dear knows she had often thought him odd—but this was the limit—walking home and saying that he had quit his job. Had he done it just to be mean to her? An unhappy crisis in their lives had made her believe that the man she had married was quite capable of being mean to her. For months her mind had been on the defensive, ready to find and exult over any flaw that showed on Guy's character.

"If he won't support me, I'll go right home to my people," she thought—and the idea pleased her. She even began to mentally tabulate what she would take with her in the way of clothing. She was still tabulating when her husband returned to the room.

"Mad," he said quickly. "Mad—don't you feel different these days? Different towards me—different towards the whole world? Different towards yourself?"

"How could I help but feel different towards you, you act so crazy?"

"It's the spirit of the times. We're only mirroring in our lives what is happening everywhere. The unrest is general."

She looked up at him—puzzled.

"Say, are you crazy?"

"No, only in revolt."

"Oh! Like the Bolsheviks?"

"Not exactly," he laughed. "Though I dare say that they have been more or less responsible. You see, Mad, I've been thinking about this all winter—about how I hated to go on with the grind—the getting up in the morning, getting dressed in the same set of clothes, catching the same interurban for Warren's Falls every week-day morning, sitting in the same chair at the same desk, making out bills for the same goods to the same people. Then coming home to the—"

"To the same home and the same wife?"

"Possibly—though I don't intend to change my wife. The revolt hasn't gone quite so far as that. What are we getting out of life? My salary's been raised but what's sixty a week? It doesn't buy much and the monotony is getting the very life and soul of me. Nine hours a day—six days in the week. Sundays I'm too lazy to get out of the house into the open fields. That isn't what we are made for. The earth—the sky—the living things—they're natural, not office walls."

"But we've got to eat and that means work."

"Yes—work. It isn't work that men mind. It's plugging away day after day at a work they don't like because it isn't natural. When I went into town this morning, I looked out of the window and saw the men in the fields. There are going to be some good gardens," he went on almost wistfully, "even if the men are on strike. When I saw some of the patches the men had spaded, I got to thinking it over. It seems to me that those gardens are the greatest reason why the strikers aren't in any hurry to get back to the mills. It's because they're working out of doors, under the sky, instead of in the roar of the machines. When I went out to lunch, I walked down to the park. You know, they're having a community garden there—and the men were all helping."

"Do you really think you'd like to work in the fields?" Mad was not complaining now. She was questioning—she was thinking very rapidly.

"When I got back from lunch the place was deserted." Wardell ignored his wife's question. "There wasn't a thing to do—there hasn't been any thing to do for two weeks. The strike has settled that. So I sat there, looking out in the sunshine—and thinking—thinking—of what it must be like up at the Point."

The Point was a long arm of land that stretched itself into the north-east coast of Georgian Bay. There the earliest Wardells had settled and there Guy still held ownership to some thirty or forty acres of land and a more or less dilapidated house, half stone, half timber. They both loved the old farm—it was their place of vacation.

"It must be spring up there now," continued Guy wistfully, "and my cousin, John Baker, told me last year that if the small fruit was cared for, if the apple trees were looked after, that the old place ought to make a good financial return."

He looked keenly at his wife, but she gave no sign.

And the more I've thought of it, the stronger my sense of revolt against this life grew. Finally to-day I knew that I couldn't stand it any longer. I knew that I couldn't stay in four walls—I don't care if it will hurt the business at the mill—I don't care if President McTee gets mad—I don't care for anything. I've thrown over all the old life, and I'm going up to the Point and start to live. We've not lived."

For several seconds Mad did not answer.

"I wonder," she said slowly.

"Wonder what?" he questioned sharply.

"About starting life over again. It sounds so easy—but law and order—"

"I'm not talking about law and order. I'm not upsetting law and order."

"Yes, you are—upsetting the order of a big business by walking out. I don't know whether it's right or wrong—but do you want me to come to the Point with you?"

"Want you? Well, I hardly dared to think that you—," he paused, laughing.

"In fact, I'd thought of how you'd probably go home to your people. I didn't think that you'd—at least, I feared—"

"That I'd come with you?" she finished his sentence. "Well—I will. I'll be a change from this life. You see, I'm in revolt with you."

A week after Guy's sensational revolt from office work, the Wardells were driving from the little station, where the train had left them, along the muddy spring road. In almost every field they passed men were busy plowing and harrowing, while here and there a more venturesome man was planting. Every apple tree was bright with blossoms. An occasional cherry tree still held bloom. Along the hedges before the homes of the farmers were bushes of brilliant lilacs. Birds of every description hurried with their nest-making, and here and there a squirrel or chipmunk, venturesome after the long winter's sleep, sat inquiringly on the stone wall and watched them in their mucky progress. The house was in more than fair condition and the ground was rich. Guy had written his cousin, John Baker, a prosperous young farmer, asking to have his best field plowed and harrowed and this he knew had been done. It was planting could start at once. They not from this four or five acres of land that they expected to make their expenses but from the fruit which Guy knew would bring a good price at the village cannery. Years before, when Guy had been a boy in his middle teens there had been wonderful strawberry beds, hedges of black and red raspberries and small fruit trees, plums, pears, quinces, to say nothing of the orderly rows of apples of every variety. Now there was mostly underbrush, though the past years had told them that the fruit was of a finer variety than the ordinary wild fruit.

Woman's Interests

A "Merry Heart."

It seemed to me when the woman told me her reason for marrying the man she decided upon, that her judgment was lame. She was a widow, of course, or she wouldn't have reasoned it out—you never do the first time, you just blithely leap in.

"He's always cheerful, and he says the little pleasant nothings you like to have folks say to you. You may know perfectly well they don't mean a word of it, but it smooths things out, and keeps you feeling pleased with yourself. And that's half the battle, isn't it?"

To marry a man because he said "soft nothings," when you had already been married once and knew that life is real and life is earnest in double harness, seemed to me the height of folly. There were other men who would have liked to console that particular widow. They had bank accounts and steady jobs and income property and pleasure cars, while this wight was a better spender than he was an earner, and his only piece of property was mortgaged. But the widow passed over the substantial qualities of her other admirers, and married the man who was always cheerful.

That was five years ago, and I've been watching the outcome of the marriage. Reluctantly I've had to admit that she made the better choice, for the man still keeps cheerful, still supplies her with the compliments her soul craves, and still keeps her happy. They are little better off financially than they were five years ago, he is one of the many who didn't profiteer by the war. They have managed to keep up, but not to get ahead, but as they look at it, getting ahead doesn't count.

The main thing is that the home atmosphere is always sunny. And after all, isn't that the supreme proof of a successful life? What good is money if it can't buy you happiness and laughter? Why have houses and good furniture and automobiles if they just bring lines between your eyes, and add to your cares and anxieties? After all, it isn't the things which we possess that make us happy or unhappy. It is the spirit in which we approach life. And the woman who married for good cheer instead of for money showed her good judgment.

I believe it was Johnson who said, "It is worth a thousand pounds a year to be able to look on the bright side of things." No matter who said it, he could have multiplied that thousand by a thousand, and not made it too much. The power of being cheerful, not because we foolishly ignore conditions, but because we refuse to see conditions, but because we refuse to be conquered by conditions, is worth more than all the wealth in the world. And it is a power that all too few people possess.

There are two sorts of cheerfulness, and we often fail to differentiate one from another. There is the cheerfulness of young children, who know no troubles, are filled with laughter. This sort is shared by some adults who either lack the power to see conditions which do not affect them directly or seeing them, take the attitude that it is none of their affair, or that it is the will of God, and therefore should not affect their happiness. And there is the better form of cheerfulness, which seeing and knowing the misery in the world, resolutely sets itself against discouragement and keeps cheerful in spite of conditions which cannot be overcome. It is this cheerfulness which we should all cultivate as a protection against the petty irritations of every-day life. It is the only thing which can keep us from growing pessimistic, morbid, introspective, and can save us from falling into a loveless old age.

Little annoyances are bound to come to all of us. No one can count on a life free of the daily grind of little things which vex and annoy. But we can lessen the pin pricks if we take them good naturedly, if we cultivate smiles instead of frowns, laughs, instead of groans, determined to be of good cheer, no matter what comes.

Information Wanted.

A well-known clergyman is in the habit of repeating his sentences several times over to enable the congregation thoroughly to grasp their meaning. On one occasion, while preaching in a very poor district, he came to the following words:—

"Who was John the Baptist?"

He brought them out slowly and distinctly, and then repeated them. After glancing round the church, he once more repeated the words, "Who was John the Baptist?"

To his surprise, a very seedy-looking individual at the back of the church shuffled to his feet and remarked, with a smile, "Look here, gus'nor, I know there's a catch somewhere; but come on, who was he?"

Baptism in Cyprus.

A baptism in Cyprus is a curious ceremony. The infant is rubbed in oil by his godfather, blown upon in the face by the priest and waved in the air, then dipped several times in the font and again anointed with oil on various parts of the body.

Ceylon boasts of a mussel that sings. When the tide has ebbed these shell-fish produce sweet flute-like sounds. As the mussels have no throats they make music in some way or other with their shells.

Autumn Recipes.

Sauerkraut can be made of surplus cabbage, and from small or burst heads. Strip the outer green leaves from each head and slice thinly into a clean stone crock or wooden keg that has been scalded out. There are cheap hand slicers available for this, or the cabbage may be shaved into thin slices with a knife. The finer the slices the better the quality. The container must be absolutely watertight, for kraut will be spoiled by the brine leaking away. As the finely sliced cabbage is placed in the container, it should be pounded down with a clean stick, to secure a compact mass and to force out the juice of the cabbage which is to form a protective covering against decay. Fine salt must be added at the rate of one pound to forty of sliced cabbage. This will also help to draw the water out of the cabbage. When the container is nearly full, the kraut should be covered with a clean piece of board, and weighted down so that the juice completely covers the cabbage. Kraut should be stored in a cool place and, if made in the summer time, it is wise to seal the top of the container with paraffin.

To keep sweet apple-juice sweet, run it through a cream separator as soon as the juice is extracted. This removes the particles of solid matter and gives a clear color. Put the juice immediately into containers that have been sterilized by scalding. Heat the filled containers in a water bath for one hour, at a temperature of 150 deg. F. This sterilizes the juice and prevents a cooked taste. Seal the containers while hot.

Vinegar from apple parings—save apple peelings and cores; put into a wooden or stone vessel, keep in a cool place until filled. When the vessel is about full, put a plate on the parings, then put some heavy weight on the plate. Pour on contents, let stand for two or three days, then strain through a cheese-cloth. Pour into another vessel which can be closed, add a small amount of "mother of vinegar." Keep the vessel in a warm place for three or four weeks.

Vessels can be kept for this purpose, and you can make enough vinegar for your own use. Any fruit wastes, or the last of honey or syrup which can not be used for table use, can be used for vinegar; also, old cider can be made into vinegar.

Too Realistic.

Two men were standing outside a jewelry store. They were criticizing the gorgeous display of glittering gems. Presently one of them, pointing to an object on a red plush tray, said:

"Just look at that sapphire, representing a fly. Any one can tell that's not real!"

"Of course," answered his friend. "Who ever saw a fly with such bright wings? I suppose the man who produced that fondly hoped that some one would buy it to take a rise out of his friends."

At that moment the object of their scorn flew away.

"Cream the butter with the sugar"

—the Cook-Book says

"OH, come on, Mabel, I want to go shopping. It needn't take all afternoon to make a cake! Here, let me cream the butter and sugar. Watch how quick I can do it! If you'd ever used Lantic before you'd realize how quickly a fine sugar creams."

Lantic is a quick-acting sweetener, because it is fine. It distributes the pure cane sweetness speedily, thoroughly and economically. It saves time in the preparation of cakes, puddings and sauces, in the cooking of preserves, in the making of candy, in the sweetening of beverages, hot or cold. Not whiter are the snowy dollys and serviettes on the mahogany table than the tiny crystals of Lantic that gleam and glisten in the sugar bowl. Not finer is the silver with its hall-mark. Yet, in homes where every penny counts, Lantic goodness helps in the saving. It does go farther!

Minard's Liniment Relieves Distemper

Novel Way to Fumigate Fowls.

Henry Windahl, of Indiana, has invented what he calls a "sanitary chicken roost," which is guaranteed to dispose of the insect parasites that afflict poultry, while incidentally killing bacterial germs.

His idea is to attach beneath the roost-perch an ordinary preserving jar, with a screw top, the receptacle being filled with a strong disinfectant, and from it to conduct a thick wick all along the top of the perch and along the bottom of the latter. The fluid disinfectant follows the wick, keeping it saturated.

Along the top of the perch the wick runs in a deep groove, so as to keep it out of the way of the chickens' feet, but along the bottom it is stretched without a groove.

Evaporation of the fluid, while the fowls are roosting, gives a sense of extreme discomfort to the insects hidden among their feathers, causing them to drop out and seek safety on the under side of the perch. There, always seeking a hiding place, they crawl between the wick and the perch, and the disinfectant kills them.

The lid of the jar (which has a hole for the emergence of the wick) is permanently fastened beneath the perch. When the jar needs refilling, it can be unscrewed at a moment's notice. The inventor prefers a series of short roost-perches, with a jar beneath the middle of each.

Parasitic insects not only make chickens uncomfortable, but impair their vitality and reduce egg production. Hence the economic importance of Mr. Windahl's idea.

The antennae masts of two new Japanese radio stations consist of reinforced concrete poles 600 feet high.

Gasolene is Dangerous.

Gasolene fumes came in contact with a lighted lantern. Ten buildings destroyed, loss, $250,000.

Gasolene is dangerous. It is one of the most rapidly volatilizing fluids. One pint of gasolene will impregnate 200 feet of air and make it explosive.

Many serious fires have been started from the careless use of gasolene.

Gasolene should only be used in the open air, and clothes, after being cleaned with it, should be hung outside to allow it to evaporate. It should always be kept in tightly closed metal cans, never in glass bottles or jars. The latter are liable to breakage and the consequent freeing of the dangerous fumes when open flame may ignite them and cause a serious fire.

The Land of Fire and Ice.

Geological map of Iceland by Dr. Thoroddsen, who has spent many years on the work, gives much information about one of the world's most wonderful islands which few visitors ever see.

An example of the strangeness of Iceland is furnished by the volcano Katla. This is buried under immense snow fields, but from time to time its fires burst through the glittering blanket, and then such floods are poured from the melting ice that a great stretch of country between the volcano and the sea is inundated and huge masses of ice are carried out into the ocean.

It is unsafe to cross the territory lying between Katla and the sea, so suddenly come the floods.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS.

The ailments of childhood—constipation, indigestion, colic, colds, etc.—can be quickly banished through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild but thorough laxative which instantly regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach. They are guaranteed to contain no harmful drugs and can be given to the youngest baby with perfect safety. Concerning them, Mrs. Alcide Lepage, Ste. Beatrix, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets were of great help to my baby. They regulated her bowels and stomach, and made her plump and well." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Grateful Tribute.

Great Britain has done a fine thing in deciding to enter the body of an unidentified soldier in Westminster Abbey alongside of those of her kings, statesmen, poets and distinguished warriors who have there found their last earthly resting place, says the Editor of the Philadelphia Ledger. In no more effective and impressive manner could the debt of the nation be acknowledged, for the grave will stand forever as a memorial that the empire realized and appreciated the sacrifice of those who died not only in the defense of its liberties but those of the world as well.

Westminster Abbey is the resting place of those who have contributed in the greatest measure to the well-being of their country. Nevertheless, it contains few memorials which mark the existence of those who died to better purpose than the grave of this unknown soldier, who rests unknown but not unhonored amid the ashes of the elect of the earth.

Use for Clinkers.

When the householder's furnace gets out of whack, there is usually reason to suspect an accumulation of clinkers in the firepot. It is rather a job to clear them out. Now, however, a practical use has been found for these exasperating things, representing incombustible material in the coal. They are turned to account for building blocks.

For this purpose they are crushed and mixed with sand, lime and cement, the material thus prepared being molded into blocks.

Such clinker blocks are used for walls, cellar floors, warehouses, garages and pavements. They are cheaper than brick, and being made in larger sizes, facilitate quick construction. They take plaster on the interior and stucco on the exterior of buildings.

In a humid climate clinker blocks are especially desirable because they withstand moisture and do not drip, as brick does sometimes, on the inside of buildings.

Power of Jaws.

The U.S. Bureau of Standards has ascertained that, when you eat, the pressure exerted by your jaws is more than eleven tons to the square inch.

No wonder, then, that your teeth are made of a material almost indestructible except by decay. A sound tooth comes pretty near to being the hardest thing in nature, and the most enduring.

It follows that artificial teeth must be made of an extremely tough quality of porcelain. The material dentists use for fillings nowadays is usually either a cement of great hardness or a metal composition that is mostly silver, and which may contain zinc, copper and tin.

The fillings are liable to break down under the tremendous chewing pressure. Various materials used for the purpose have recently been tested by the U. S. Bureau of Standards, and the conclusion it draws is that a standardization of dental cements and amalgams is needed in order that their relative resistance to wear may be definitely known. It says that too much copper in fillings discolors the teeth.

Living Them Over.

What good comes of living them over, All the wearying, wearing, things? Those phantom shapes from the past that hover So oft about us on night-black wings. With their horny thrusts and their cruel stings? Who is stronger for bearing a burden Twice as heavy, or twice as far As necking you from Hope's beaming star?

But, oh! the joy of living them over—The friendly word and the kindly smile That, like blooming roses or wind-blown clover, Cheer with their fragrance the weary mile, And warm and strengthen our hearts the while. For hearts grow stronger when vanished, pleasure Lend to the present their afterglow Of softened light and we catch the measure Of the old-time melodies, sweet and low.

Then live them over—the joy and gladness Of all that has made the past life bright. Let their memories banish thy care and sadness That signal and sigh from a by-gone night. And seal the soul with their canker-blight. And as ever the changes of time shall reach us— Its joy and blessing; its pain and fret— Be pleased, O Lord, in thy love to teach us How to remember and how to forget.

RICH, RED BLOOD NECESSARY TO HEALTH

When the Blood Becomes Weak and Watery a Tonic is Needed to Build it Anew.

Why are we being continually told that good, health-giving blood must be bright red? What has color to do with the quality? Just this—the oxygen in the air is the great supporter of all organic life. One function of the blood is to take the oxygen from the air—which it meets in the lungs and deliver it to the tissues of the body. When the blood, filled with life-sustaining oxygen, is sent out by the heart, it is bright red. When it returns, impure and deprived of oxygen, it is dark.

You will see, therefore, that there are two prime requisites of health, pure air and bright red blood—the pure air to furnish the oxygen, the rich red blood to carry it where it is needed. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make your blood rich and red because they increase its power to carry oxygen, actually making it so much more able to carry increased life and strength to every organ in the body.

Pale, anemic people whose nerves are on edge, whose cheeks are pale, and who tire out easily, should try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and note the steady improvement that follows their use. A case in point is that of Mrs. J. P. Rolston, South River, Ont., who says:—"About two years ago my system was in a badly run down condition; and I kept growing worse all the time until I could hardly do my housework. I had severe headaches, and pains across my back and under my left shoulder. I did not sleep well and would feel just as tired when I got up in the morning as when I went to bed. Life seemed a burden. I had taken doctor's medicine for a long time, but it did not meet my case, at least it did me no good. Then as a result of reading about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I decided to try them. When I had taken a couple of boxes I felt much better, and when I had taken five boxes more I felt that I was again a well woman. I have not since felt any return of the trouble and I advise all women who are broken in health to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial." These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Western Farmers Building Silos.

It is to be anticipated that before many years have elapsed almost every farm in the Canadian prairie provinces will have its silo. The growth of the dairy industry would naturally bring this condition about in course of time, but the movement is being expedited by the success farmers are having in growing sunflowers. Small fields of from three to thirty acres have been planted in various parts of the three prairie provinces of Canada. The yields are proving more satisfactory than the farmers generally dared to hope, and each acre yields on an average from fifteen to thirty tons of ensilage.

Many farmers have erected silos on their farms during the summer to take care of this crop, but most of them have underestimated their requirements and will have more crop than they can put in their silos.

Sunflower silage is due for a more extensive trial this winter than it has had before. The results in previous years have been very satisfactory but only comparatively few farmers have grown the crop for silage previous to this year. In its more extensive use the crop proves to be as satisfactory as it has already proved in a few cases where it has been tried, it is safe to say that in a few years the farm without a silo will be an exception in Western Canada.

Since last year's results have become known, considerable interest has been shown in silos and ensilage in Western Canada and several hundred silos have been erected during the past summer. Typical of this movement is the Cardston district in Southern Alberta, where eight silos have been erected this year and where about fifty acres of sunflowers were planted. The crop has proved so successful that it is predicted that one hundred silos will be built in the district next year and more than a thousand acres of sunflowers planted.

Similar plans are being made in other parts of Western Canada, and the already rapidly growing dairy industry promises to grow much faster with the general acceptance of the sunflower as a silage crop. Another evidence of the value of sunflowers as a forage crop will be the big gain in finished steers. Many of the larger livestock raisers are growing sunflowers and erecting silos for this purpose. Thus will be considerably increased the finishing areas of Canada, which, hitherto, have been somewhat restricted, compared with the large feeding areas throughout the country, and the livestock industry in the West will be placed on a sound basis.

The child, who was making desperate efforts with his knife and fork, replied: "Yes, thanks, I've often had it as tough as this at home."

Father Was Once a Boy.

Johnny liked ice cream, but he drew the line at turning the freezer. One day when his mother returned home she was agreeably surprised to find him working away at the crank as though his life depended on it.

"I don't see how you got him to turn the freezer," she said to her husband. "I offered him a dime to do it."

"You didn't go at it the right way, my dear," replied her husband. "I bet him a nickel he couldn't turn it for half an hour."

Minard's Liniment For Dandruff.

The actual process of making basenets has altered very little since the earliest time, only very simple tools being used.

Mr. Herbert Osborn Tells How Cuticura Healed His Wife

"My wife began to be troubled with itching and burning of the palms of her hands and the soles of her feet. Later the skin cracked and became inflamed, making walking or even standing very painful and preventing sleep at night. Later it became necessary to bandage both hands and feet.

"She was treated but obtained no relief. She saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. She bought more and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment she was healed." (Signed) Herbert Osborn, 135 Sherbrooke Ave., Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 2, 1919.

Cuticura is ideal for every-day toilet uses. Soap to cleanse and purify, Ointment to soothe and heal.

Soap 25c, Ointment 25c and 50c. Sold throughout the Dominion. Canadian Depot: E. J. Loring, Limited, St. Paul St., Montreal. Free Cuticura Soap and Ointment without charge.

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"

The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada. Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally. Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages. There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer!"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacid of Salicylic Acid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

LIVE STOCK MARKETS TORONTO.

With a heavy run of cattle on the Union Stock Yards Monday, around 4,000 head, exclusive of these billed thru, there was only an average demand. The offering was heavy enough, apparently, as the trade was decidedly slow, particularly during the morning session. Values weakened and cattle had to be very choice to bring steady prices.

While the bulk of the offering was made up of common and medium cattle there was a few loads of prime stock. All grades, except the real choice declined about 50 cents per hundred.

The light receipts in the calf section served to hold prices steady. Choice calves were in demand, but few offered. A lot of grassers were in the alkys and were not wanted by the packers. The top for choice veal was $18.50, but few brought this figure. Values ranged from $16.50 to $18.50.

Lamb prices showed an advance over last Thursday. Lambs sold from $12.75 to $13.50. A choice lot of 1000 lambs sold at $13.25. Some black-faced animals of the Ottawa Valley sold for 13.50. These were very choice and averaged 78 pounds. The lamb receipts throughout showed good quality. Sheep prices were little changed from last week.

The hogs held steady at 16c to the farmer, 16½c f.o.b., and 17½c fed and watered. These prices will not likely hold as the packers promise a reduction of $1 a hundred later in the week.

MOLTKE.

Mrs. Andrew Wepler of Drew spent a week with her daughter, Mrs. John Weigel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ortman has moved into Charles Holm's house on the town line, between Moltke and Neustadt.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Marshall, of Brant, visited at Chas. Weber's on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Demmerling and Mrs. L. Koeller, of Neustadt, spent Sunday with Mrs. Henry Hill.

Miss Orillia Wettlaufer spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. J. Wagner.

On Sunday Rev. Malinsky announced the engagement of Mr. Elgin Shenk to Miss Emma Unger.

HUNTINGFIELD.

Mr. John H. Renwick has disposed of his 100 acre farm on the Carrick town line to Mr. Charles McIlwain of Howick who recently sold his own farm to Thos. Inglis. Mr. Renwick has not yet made up his mind where to locate.

Born—In Carrick, on Saturday, Nov. 18th, to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. B. Dickson, a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall of Teeswater, spent Sunday at Walter Renwick's.

The Women's Institute held their regular meeting at Mrs. Ralph Metcalf's last Thursday. In the evening, the husbands of the members were invited to be present, and it was an occasion of great enjoyment. The evening was delightfully spent with music, games and social intercourse.

Quite a number from here were at Fordwich last Thursday to witness the unveiling of the splendid memorial for the fallen Howick soldiers. It was a very impressive ceremony.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

A ton of coal in England costs $8.31 at the pithead. The miners get $6.06, office and other expenses cost about $1.49, royalties are 16 cents, capital adjustments are 5 cents, and the owners get 32 cents. These are the figures which the British Government published recently in order to show just where the cost of coal came in. It is clear that by far the most important item is the labor, and only the introduction of labor-saving machinery can possibly reduce the price to the consumer.

The Ontario Government has a commendable scheme for providing future generations with timber. It is prepared to co-operate with township councils in creating new woods. If the township will provide the land the Government will plant it with forest trees and take care of it in the early years of growth. It requires that the land should not be less than five acres in extent and be located on a well travelled road. A five acre bush is not a forest, but with five acres of good bush in every township the province would have a fairly large supply of timber, and what is better, a beginning will have been made in a scientific reforestation.
