POETRY.

Just Common Folks.

A hundred humble songsters trill
The notes that to their lays belong,
Where just one nightingale might fill
The place with its transcendent song.
And thus fame comes, and with it smiles
A soul with lasting greatness cloaks,
And leaves a thousand else the while
To be for eye just common folks.

If only sweetest bells were rung,
How we should miss the minor chimes;
If only grandest poets sung,
There'd be no humble little rhymes.
The modest singing vines add grace
Unto the forest's mightiest oaks,
And 'mid earth's mightiest is a place
To people with just common folks.

Not they the warriors who shall win
Upon the battlefield a name
To sound above the awful din;
Not they the painter's deathless fame,
Nor their the poet's muse that brings
The rhythmic gift his soul invokes:
Above the lowly, 'neath the great,
Are millions of just common folks.

So do not slight them above
The level of the human plan;
They share with them a brother-love,
In touch with pleasure and with pain.
One great, far-reaching brotherhood,
With common burdens, common joys,
And common wrongs and common good,
Creeds' army of just common folks.

Wolfe the Ranger.

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

Love! Her heart was overflowing With it. No woman that ever lived had loved as she loved him. Day and night, as long as she lived, she would surround him with her love, rendering his future so happy that he should be forced to forget the past of which he had spoken. He had said that a cloud hovered over him meaning danger and sorrow; her love, like a soft, should piece—said "dispel" the cloud and vanquish the sorrow.

"Oh, my love, my love!" she murmured, holding out her arms as if he stood before her, "all my life shall be spent in trying to make you happy."

She had promised to go down to dinner, but she had not yet begun to dress, though the first bell had rung; and
the maid knocking at the door awakened her to a sense of the time.

"From the marquis, miss" said
the girl, holding out a lovely bouquet
of white blossoms. "And you will please come down as soon as you can, miss."

And she looked and spoke, or Constance fancied she did, with more than her usual respect.

"Oh, thank you, Mary," she said,
bidding her face in the flowers. "Yes,
I will come down directly. How beautiful they are!"

"Yes, miss, all white this evening."
"Then the flowers that you have put in my room every day were from the marquis?" said Constance.

The girl nodded and smiled.

"Yes, miss. He cut them himself every day and gave them to me. I thought you knew it, though he said I was to put them in your room without saying anything. You must let me finish your hair, miss, please," she added, with respectful eagerness; and she finished dressing her hair, showing even more than her customary alacrity and willingness.

Constance went down a few moments
before the dinner-bell rang, and saw the marquis standing in the hall.

He looked up at her, his handsome face eloquent with love. It seemed to her to have grown younger since the morning.

"What a time you have been!" he said, as she stood on the stair above
him. "I can dress in fourteen minutes!"
and he drew her arm within his. He would have kissed her, and his eyes spoke his feelings plainly enough, but the butler and the footman were about the hall.

"So could I, if I cut my hair off,"
she said.

"Ah, don't do that," he said, as they entered the drawing-room. "I wanted to see you alone for a few minutes, and mother is directly keeping upstairs till the last moment. Do you know what I want?"

"Your dinner?" said Constance. She was so full of happiness that she too had grown younger, and was able to hide the love that thrilled her under a girlish playfulness that gave her a new charm in his eyes.

"So I do," he replied. "But I want something else; I want to seal our compact."

She looked round apprehensively.
The butler or one of the other servants might come in, probably would, at any moment.

He laughed and drew something
from his waistcoat pocket.

"Hold out your hand."

She did so wonderingly.

"Let me see, which is the finger?"
and he held up a beautiful diamond and ruby ring. "Which is the engaged finger?" he asked.

"I don't know. You see, I was never engaged, before," she replied,
blushing, and laughing.

"I thank God for your ignorance, dearest," he remarked, devoutly, under his breath. "The third, isn't it. Now our compact is almost sealed."

"What a lovely ring," she exclaimed,
holding her hand up to the light. "Why,
where did you get it?"

"I don't know. You see, I was
never engaged, before," she replied,
blushing, and laughing.

hand fall on hers, and held it for a moment or two. Constance's face was a panorama of blushes all through the meal, but, as every blush heightened her loveliness in his eyes, probably he did not care.

When the marchioness, smiling at Constance, rose, he flung down his napkin.

"Never mind the claret, Belford," he said. "Do you think," turning to Constance, "that I am going to sit here alone while you talk me over together in the drawing-room? It is not likely."

He drew their arms within his as he had done when they entered, then looked over his shoulder at the butler.

"Tell the servants I want them in the hall, Belford," he said.

That well-trained individual showed not the faintest sign of surprise as he responded with a calm and dignified
"Yes, my lord."

"What are you going to do, Wolfe?"
asked the marchioness.

"Discharge them all!" he retorted.
"Some of them, nearly all of them have been here too long."

"My dear Wolfe!"

"I will go up to Arol now," said
Constance, uneasily.

"Not just yet," he said, holding her arm tightly, and standing stock still at the entrance of the drawing-room.

The servants, a small army, came trooping from upstairs and down-stairs,
and gathered in the hall in expectant
silence.

"Are you all here?" he said, his head erect, his dark eyes glowing with his newly born happiness.

"Yes, my lord," said Belford, looking over the crowd.

"Very well, then," said the marquis.
"I have sent for you because I wish you to know and to share my happiness.
Some of you have been in the service
of my father—"

"Your grandfather, my lord," said a tremulous voice, and an old woman, whom Constance had seen about the house once or twice, dropped a court-sey.

"Yes," he nodded, "and my grandfather. You have served us faithfully, and we have tried to prove ourselves
your friends."

"Yes, yes, my lord," came the eager response. "God bless your lordship!"

"So I have sent for you to-night to tell you that a great happiness has come to me, the greatest that can come to a man. This lady," and he took Constance's hand, "is my future wife!"

Constance, pale and trembling, stood with downcast eyes.

A shout went up, a shout of pleased gratification.

"You were good enough to welcome
me home when I came back a little while ago," he went on, "and you said
you hoped that I should stay. Well, I am going to stay, but if that gives you any pleasure, you must thank Miss Graham," and he raised her hand to his lips and kissed it.

It was not much of a speech, but it went home to them all, especially those who had grown old in the Brakespear service, and felt that the place was indeed their home, and the people they had served so faithfully their friends.

A cheer rose and echoed again and again amid the timbers of the roof and
"God bless you, my lord! God bless you, my lady! God bless you, miss!"
rang enthusiastically round.

The marquis nodded to Belford, who quite comprehending, went off to the cellar, and the marquis with a pleasant
"Good night!" dismissed the crowd, although for Constance's gentle nature
had made her popular with one and all;
and they felt that the kindly Brakes-pear regime would not be broken by this the future marchioness.

Constance sat for a few minutes in the drawing-room close beside the marchioness, then she got up.

"Where are you going?" he demanded.

"To Arol," she replied, and stole a way.

The news spread like wildfire, and at first people utterly refused to believe it.

That the marquis of Brakespear,
the first man in the country, the representative of one of the oldest peerages
in the United Kingdom, should marry
a governess! It was simply impossible!

But when the next day Constance was seen riding by his side, and those who saw them told how he looked at her when he spoke; and when on the next day she was seen in the carriage beside the marchioness, who was heard to address her as "Constance, dear," people began to believe that there "must be something in it," and to stare agast.

"Marry the governess! Isn't it really awful? He must be out of his mind!
But there, we all know what these wild Brakespears are. But to marry the governess, it is really too dreadful!"

It might be dreadful, but it was true, and being true had to be accepted. If he had chosen to propose to one of the housemaids the country would have had to recognize and accept the fact.

So in a few days carriages began to roll up the avenue, and cards were sent in not only to the marchioness and marquis, but to Miss Graham. And the country families, which for pride
can be matched against Lucifer himself in his proudest moments, were constrained to smile upon the girl who "came from no one knows where, and is absolutely nobody, you know, my dear," but whom the marquis had selected as his future wife, and who must be treated as such.

And Constance went through the ordeal admirably. The marchioness, who knew how cruel the class to which she belonged could be to an "outsider," was inwardly rejoiced and gratified by Constance's success, as calm and self-possessed, she endured all the darts and arrows which, under the cover of pleasant smiles and honeyed words, were shot at her.

"It is her love and happiness that makes her brave," she said to the marquis one afternoon when Constance's quiet, well-bred manner and sweet voice had opposed to the harp of half a dozen disappointed mothers who, while murmuring pleasant things, had tried their hardest to "sware her down and freeze her." "They will not be able to resist her for long, you will see."

"Resist her!" he echoed, proudly,
and fondly. "A heart of stone, an untamed savage, would melt under that smile of hers. Confound the people, why on earth don't they stay away!"

"No, dear," she said, putting her hand on his arm. "She must go through it. She is the future marchioness, and will take her place among them presently."

"And will soar above them all as a star above its reflection in a puddle," he said, with his old fire,
"Send and tell her to come to me, and we will go out and forget these harpies.
Bless my beautiful darling, she is worth
a million of such people!"

Constance, who had had a trying afternoon, and had run up to her room
to get a few minutes' rest and endeavor to forget them, entered at the moment.

He put his arm round her and kissed her.

"Go and get your things on, dearest,"
he said, "and we will have a long walk."
"Ah, that will be nice," she said,
and ran into the hall, but stopped and looked back with a smile and a little exclamation of dismay, for a loud knock had sounded at the door.

"Confound it!" he exclaimed. "There is another one! Run, Constance," and he made a bolt for the library. But the door opened before they could escape, and Constance, turning, perforce saw that the latest arrival was—Lady Ruth.

In her newly found happiness, Constance had almost forgotten Lady Ruth.

For a moment she stood looking at her, uncertain what to do. Lady Ruth's sharp eyes glanced at her and then at the marquis searchingly, as he shook hands with her, exclaiming:
"Halloo, Ruth! Come back, eh?
Glad to see you!"

"I've only come for a day—a day off. Papa is just a little better."

Then she crossed the hall, and coming straight to Constance, held out her hand, and fixing her eyes on her face
with a peculiar expression, said:
"I name as soon as I could after hearing the news from Lady Brakespear,
to wish you happiness and to tell you how glad I am, dear Miss Graham,"
and she reached up and put her lips on Constance's cheek.

It was a kiss certainly, but so hard
and cold that Constance could not repress a little shudder. Just as the skeleton appeared at the Roman ban-

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A MEDICINE
WITHOUT AN EQUAL.

Statement of a Well Known Doctor

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is without an equal as a blood-purifier and Spring medicine, and cannot have praise enough. I have watched its effects in chronic cases, where other treatment was of no avail, and have been astonished at the results. No other blood medicine that I have ever used, and I have tried them all, is so thorough in its action,
and effects so many permanent cures as quart, here was Constance's skeleton in her feast of love.

"I can't tell you how delighted I was to hear the news," said Lady Ruth,
looking from one to the other with a smile. "Of course, it's very easy to be cheerful after the event, but I assure you
I saw it coming long ago; did I not,
Miss Graham?"

Constance, appalled by such finished hypocrisy could do nothing but change
color and stare at her.

The marquis laughed.

"Bravo, Ruth!" and he went and put his arm round Constance. "That's very nice of you. Isn't it, Constance?
And now, as you two will want to gossip
for the next half hour, you'd better go upstairs while I go and dress. Don't tell her all my faults, Ruth; she knows quite enough already," and he walked off laughing.

THE BEST OPINIONS!

Scientific Men Say Diamond Dyes
Are the Best.

A lady who understands the use and value of Diamond Dye writes as follows:
"I had a light blue dress, made of expensive material, but so light in shade that it faded quickly. It was too good to be cast aside, so one evening I took it to a dyeing establishment, and was surprised when they told me they would dye it some dark color for two dollars.
I did not care for dark colors, so I took it home again. The next day I bought a package of Diamond Dye, and colored it a beautiful Cardinal Red, and it now looks just like new, so that I have now
a new dress for Sundays, and it only cost
ten cents."

Who Should Advertise?

Who should advertise, is a question that has been propounded and answered in various ways.

Our answer: Everyone who has anything to sell, whether it is product of the hand, brain or machine, and in cases where those who wish to buy or secure or exchange anything that they cannot obtain conveniently, they should advertise.

Advertising should be treated precisely as any other investment, and in nine cases out of ten it pays a better profit than anything for which money is spent.

The best evidence that advertising pays is the fact that millions of dollars are invested in it by all sorts and kinds of trade and by the most successful business men in the land.

No sensible man can believe that successful business houses advertise and become extensive advertisers for the fun of the thing. With them it is business just as much as buying stock or selling products.

There are certain principles of trade that men ought not to ignore, and among them the principal one is regular, legitimate and persistent advertising.

Dime Novel Victims.

The New York people are beginning to wake up to the fact that the dime novel craze is working serious injury to the young boys of that city, and that several acts of youthful criminals have lately come to the knowledge of the police as the outcome of reading the blood and thunder yarns served up to boys in the five cent form.

The writer that is past four boys removed a rail on the New York Central road and sent a train over an embankment. By a miracle only the driver and fireman were killed. The boys were arrested, and confessed that they were lead to commit the crime by reading dime novels which depicted the hero as a train wrecker, who secured plunder in the fishy way.

On Thursday last one of the boys was sentenced to imprisonment for life, two for forty years and the fourth died before the day of the trial. These lads are the sons of prominent citizens.

Canadian History Competition. The prizes offered in the Dominion History competition have been awarded and the names of the successful competitors were published on Monday last.

William Henry Pope Clement, Esq., B. A., LL.B., barrister, Toronto, Ont., obtains the first prize, which consists of a royalty of ten per cent on the retail price of all books sold and is being estimated at $25,000 to $40,000.

Emily P. Weaver, F. ronto, Ont.; Dr. E. T. Ede, Lexington, Ont., and Principal J. B. Calkin, M. A., Truro, N. S., receive prizes of two hundred dollars each for having submitted the best manuscript of merit, but are not given a relative standing as compared with one another.

Formation of a Trotting Circuit. A trotting circuit has been formed, as far as arranging of dates is concerned, to be known as the Nova Scotia central circuit. The summer dates are:

Kentville, June 9. Mahone Bay, June 16. Halifax, June 22. Bridgetown, July 1.

The fall dates are: Halifax, September 7. Kentville, September 10. Mahone Bay, September 16. Bridgetown, September 22.

The latter dates are so arranged that the St. John exhibition races may be added to the circuit, and horses may proceed direct from Bridgetown to St. John.

The Baptist Southern Convention, consisting of delegates from every Southern State and the District of Columbia, was recently held in Chattanooga, Tenn. The most distinguished men, clerical and lay, were present, and the sessions, continuing nearly a week, were of unusual interest.

Dr. Diaz, Baptist Missionary in Cuba, recently discharged from prison, was present and excited much interest. Rev. Dr. W. H. Young, pastor of the first Baptist church of Athens, Georgia, formerly professor at Acadia University, was one of the delegates. The Chattanooga Times gave a full history of the proceedings, the number for Sunday, May 10th, consisting of 24 pages, profusely illustrated.

The Berwick Camp-meeting Association are arranging this year for a quiet Sabbath. The season ticket does not include Sunday and there will be no sale of ticket, or money taken for admission on that day. Those only can enter or remain on the grounds who hold season tickets and in addition a special Sunday ticket (issued free) to be obtained only in person on Saturday. Crosby and Hunter, the noted evangelists will be present, beginning their work on Monday. The meetings begin July 31, and close August 7.

It is stated that Sir Donald Smith, Canada's High Commissioner, will, on the Queen's Birthday, be elevated to the Peerage. His title will be Lord Gleadow. Sir Donald now owns the Glencairn estate in Scotland, which was made famous because of the massacre of the MacDonalds that took place there in the reign of William of Orange.

The Nova Scotia Methodist Conference meets in Grafton street church, Halifax, on the fourth Wednesday in June.

Mothers' Meeting.

The Mothers' Meeting recently held in Temperance Hall under the direction of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was of a most interesting and profitable nature. The subject under discussion was The Training of our Children. The meeting was conducted by Mrs. Trotter, whose opening address dealt with the proper treatment of young children in relation to their moral development. She emphasized three points of special importance. The first of these was obedience—which however, need not be instantaneous, as time should be allowed for the child to adjust his mind to the mother's way of thinking,—the second was self control as to the child's temper, appetite and desires,—and third, the securing of its love and confidence.

Training is not so simple a matter as teaching, but much more important. As mothers we need not so much to learn our duties better, as we need to acquire some inspiration in our work, that will enable us more effectively to utilize the knowledge we already possess.

Mrs. Crandall spoke on The Training of our Girls. She evidently believes that a girl is worth as much as a boy, and that her education, physical culture, and general fitness for life's duties should receive equal attention. Above all, let her Christian character be secured and carefully nourished.

Mrs. Hemenway gave some helpful suggestions drawn from her personal experience in the training of boys. The mother that secures the love, respect and confidence of her growing lad can scarcely fail in her arduous task.

These meetings are largely of a devotional nature. They are held bi-monthly, and announced from the various pulpits of our town. It is especially important that the younger mothers of our community should place themselves under the inspiring influence of these occasions.

Safe Constituencies.

The "safe constituency" is becoming a rare thing in the party considerations. The returns on polling day are very apt to show that it is still rarer in reality. Across the border ten years ago, there were only two states regarded universally as "doubtful," but since that date considerably over half of the states in the Union have proven that they can charge their party allegiance when so minded. In the same way, the number of "doubtful" constituencies has greatly increased in Canada during these latter years, though we do not have the frequent elections of our neighbors to record the growth of political independence.

Two kinds of movement among the electors have carried these constituencies out of the "safe" column. The most potent is the rise of an effective independent vote which studies the claims of the two leading parties, and lets it be understood that it will vote according to the issues finally submitted. Another cause of the decay of party influence is the increasing tendency of "groups" to make a fight outside of party lines. The Patron movement is, perhaps, the best example of this kind of thing; and this agricultural party is making more than one old party "live" unsafe in the present contest.

Politics would be in a more wholesome state if there were no such thing as a "safe constituency" in existence. No party ought to be able to depend upon winning a single seat, regardless of policy and conduct. The poorest kind of a compliment that a politician can pay a constituency is to say that it is "safe" under all circumstances. This is to charge the electors within its borders of psychomotor ignorance, of an invincible want of patriotism and of abject political servility. A constituency may be perfectly independent, but "safe" to vote a certain way on a certain question; but it must suffer from a lack of independence to be "safe" to vote for a certain party, right or wrong.

When the "safe constituency" is numbered with the Dodo, politicians will deal more cautiously with public opinion.

Business College Graduates.

The following is a correct list of the students who completed the prescribed course at Whitson & Frazer's Commercial College, Halifax, and were awarded diplomas during the past three months:

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT. Robert L. Ellis, Ralph S. Gates, Ralph W. Elliot, Dartmouth; John D. Campbell, Frank M. Seeley, Halifax; D. Red McLeod, New Glasgow; C. Ida McAloney, Parrsboro; Hunter C. Barnhill, Onslow; Harry H. Jost, Sydney; Ralph E. Macdonald, Antigonish; S. H. Lorne Newcombe, Port Williams; L. J. J. Johnson, Newton Mills; Donald M. Moors, Hopewell Hill, N. B.

SHORTHAND & TYPEWRITING DEPT. John J. S. Morrison, Georgina Renner, Beatrice O'Neill, Lucy E. Wilson, Jessie L. Eckerley, Halifax; Ada Sergeant-Picton; Margaret Hemmison, Liverpool; Malie P. Stewart, Lachaber; Dell B. Puenner, Orpah Pauley, Dartmouth; George E. MacInnes, Grace Willis, Halifax.

REV. HART'S new story and Jerome K. Jerome's latest piece of fiction have both been secured by The Ladies' Home Journal for immediate publication. Jerome's story is called "Reginald Black-Finnister and Cad," and sketches an incident in fashionable London society. Bret Harte calls his story "The Indication of Ebbeth," and pictures the romance of a young American who falls in love with a German princess, masquerading as a dairy maid.

Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock the Public Anniversary Exercises of Acadia Seminary, at which papers will be presented by members of the Graduating Class, and addresses are expected from Rev. D. A. Steele, D. D., and Rev. A. C. Chute. At the close of these exercises there will be a meeting of the Board of Governors.

Wednesday, June 3rd, at 9 a. m. a meeting of the Alumni of the College at 11 a. m. a Public Meeting of the College for conferring degrees. At 3 p. m., public meeting in College Hall under the direction of the Governors; Address and music.

Night and Day for May emphasizes strongly the needs of "Barnardo's wonderful Homes for Waif Children," in the interest of which the magazine, "A Child's Own," is issued. Five thousand "other people's children"—all orphan, or of the waif and stray class—are now under the Education Act, and the tidal flow of new admissions is at the rate of eight or nine fresh cases of destitute boys or girls every day that passes. As the work has stood the test of thirty years the public may well feel that their confidence is justified in this great social agency for the reclamation of the friendless and forlorn, which has already rescued, trained and placed out in life thirty thousand outcast children. The contents of this issue of Night and Day includes the usual interesting quota of "Personal Notes," with numerous illustrations from photographs. Dr. Barnardo pleads strongly for the observance of the principle of Proportionate Giving, to which he lends the sanction of his individual experience. We observe that the Thirtieth Annual Meeting of "Dr. Barnardo's Homes" is fixed for the 24th June next, in the Royal Albert Hall, when the Duke of Sutherland will preside, and the Prince and Princess of Wales will be among the visitors. We understand that the display of children and the processes of child-training to be seen on that occasion will be of an altogether unique and unprecedented character.

Baseball. Wolfville seems to have become quite enthusiastic over baseball of late. A new team called "The Russels," composed of the younger players of the town, has been formed. Frank Wortman is captain.

A match was played on Friday afternoon last between the High School and Academy teams. The former won, the score standing 45-35.

The game between the "Town" and the "Seniors" on Saturday was an interesting one. The latter won, but the "Town" men, considering their lack of practice, put up quite a game. The score stood 26-13.

The "Russels" played the Academy team on Tuesday afternoon, the latter winning by a score of 28-18.

Canning. The liberal campaign opens here next Thursday evening. Dr. Borden and others are to speak.

Mr. Dag Bigelow is building a large sluice for the new dyke. It is over 70 feet long. He has several of these to build.

Mrs. L. Wickwire and her daughter have moved here for the summer.

A great many buildings are being repaired and painted here this summer. Among these are the houses of Dr. John Miller, D. M. Dickie, and M. McFarland. Mr. Henry Mitchell has also greatly improved the appearance of his place.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 22, 1896.

Local and Provincial.

Rev. Wm. Phillips, of Hanisport, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church of this town, on Sunday morning and evening last. His sermons were able and eloquent, and were much enjoyed.

The best value in Wolfville is a Ladies' Dongola Oxford, $1.75, at Borden's.

Mr. A. C. Hall has been appointed postmaster at Burlington in place of Mrs. Anderson, resigned. The postmaster general has authorized the establishment of a mail route between Gasperau and Lower Gasperau.

Have you seen those heavy Duck Overalls at Borden's, only 75c.

Attention is directed to the announcement of the "Grand Liberal Rally" which appears elsewhere in this issue. Aberdeen rink is admirably adapted for such a gathering, and there is no doubt but that there will be a full attendance of the electors.

Men's Low-cut Shoes for $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50, great value, at Borden's.

Mr. William Regan has removed his building (the old fire station) to the new site, opposite the store which he now occupies, this week. Mr. Sidney Borden, well-known for his success in this line, has had charge of the work, which was carried along smoothly and quickly.

Ask to see those $4.50, $5.00 and $5.25 Men's Suits, at Borden's.

Prof. Faville lectured in Evangelical Hall, Lower Horton, on Saturday evening last, treating chiefly of spraying. A large number of fruit growers and others interested were present, and no doubt much valuable information was elicited from the Professor's remarks.

Large fires are raging in the woods on the North Mountain. Immense areas have been burned over during the past week, and the damage to timber-land is heavy, mill properties having only been saved from destruction by strenuous efforts. These fires are said to originate from camp fires of fishing companies.

To Let.—The store now occupied by William Regan. Possession given June 1st. C. A. PATRIQUIN.

A syndicate of Kings county horsemen has purchased the thoroughbred trotting stallion "R. T. M." 2254, by Sable Wilkes. This handsome stallion was bred in California, and was brought to Wolfville last week by Mr. R. P. M. McGill, of Buffalo, N. Y. He was given a mile or two at the Wolfville Speedway on Friday last, by Mr. McGill, and his style and action were much admired.

Room paper at 4 cents per roll at the Wolfville Book Store.

The oyster supper given by Mr. L. E. Dunnehan, the jovial proprietor of the Hotel American, to the participants in the Royal-American baseball game of a short time ago, was a very pleasant affair. Host Dunnehan and his amiable assistants performed their part of the programme excellently, and ample justice was done by the guests to the repast. After the supper had been thoroughly fortified, various toasts were proposed and responded to. It is needless to say that the speeches were of a high order. Baseball wiser, productive of oyster stews, is a nice game.

Please notice that the "Slater" Shoe Men's wear, are the best in the Dominion and C. H. Borden is sole agent at Wolfville.

All Horses' mouths can be promptly attended to by Dr. Smith, of New York, at cheap rates. Headquarters at Borden's Stable.

BRADLEY'S FERTILIZERS.

THE BEST IN THE MARKET. Manufactured at North Weymouth, Mass. The largest fertilizer works in the world.

WHAT SOME OF OUR FARMERS SAY OF IT: DEER DYKE VILLAGE, February 14th, 1895.

Dear Sir,—I used Bradley's potato fertilizer last spring for potatoes without manure with good results. I used it in the drills, about 300 lbs. per acre. The potatoes made a quick start, and got their growth sooner than those where I used manure, and were a better crop. I have used other fertilizers, but Bradley's is far ahead of any I have tested.

PARALYSIS CONQUERED.

At Last It Yields to the Advance of Medical Science.

The Strong Testimony of a Man Who Was a Half-Dead, Bedridden Invalid...

There is nothing in life sadder than to see a strong man stricken with paralysis.

He is not dead, but he is as good as dead to the world...

He is not dead, but he is as good as dead to the world...

He is not dead, but he is as good as dead to the world...

Scraps for Odd Moments.

Husband: "Strange but my wife always wants me to remember her birthday but forget her age."

A doctor may be able to speak but one language but he is supposed to have some knowledge of all tongues.

Minards Liniment is the best. Talk may be cheap, says the Manxun philosopher, but the man who retains a lawyer knows differently.

I notice, said Mr. Morcum, they call it the X ray, but Y they do it can't X. Perhaps, suggested Hulsler, you haven't got the Q.

Minards Liniment Cures La Grippe. They say that love is blind, sighed the engaged girl. If he wasn't, he'd be a friend, some people would never have a chance to get married.

Miss Gushington—How did you feel you found that the ship would surely go down in ten minutes? Captain Saited—I felt for a life preserver.

He—I believe in letting a woman have her own way. She—What? And this deprive her of the privilege of blaming somebody else when things go wrong?

Minards Liniment for sale everywhere. Patish—This set of teeth you made for me is too big. Dentist—Yes, sir. Sit down in the chair and I will enlarge your mouth a little.

I understand there wasn't a dry eye in the room when Miss Elokte finished her pathetic recitation. There wasn't. There wasn't any other kind of an eye, there, either.

Mrs De ChisCross who has come to talk about an unemployment gown—Is Mme. Fronton Vonlezcrops in? Assistant—No; Madame is ill with apoplexy. Mrs DeChisCross—Then she has a fit at last.

The purifying effects of Ayer's Sarsaparilla are sure and speedy. Take it this month. She—George, on thinking it over, I've come to feel sure that I was the only one to blame in our quarrel.

He—Yes, dear. She—(testily)—Oh, you think so, do you? Who told you so much? Miss Point Breeze—How on earth did you come to get engaged to that little insignificant Van Brann?

Miss B. said Lightheart—Well, you see, just at the time he proposed I didn't happen to be engaged to any one. At a negro wedding, when the clergyman read the words, "love, honor and obey," the bridegroom interrupted him and said: "Read that again, sah; read it once more, so de lady-bim heh-hee-oh full solemnity ob de meaning. I've been married befo."

Minards Liniment the best Hair Restorer. Papa—Who's the smartest boy in your school, Bobby? Bobby—Well, Tommy Jones says he is, and teacher says Billy Barlow is, and I—well, I don't like to say who I think is, 'cos ain't so conceited as Tommy.

An engineer saying the life of a locomotive was only thirty years, a passenger remarked that such a tough-looking thing ought to live longer than that. Well, responded the engineer, perhaps it would, if it did not smoke so much.

Gen. Adress, of Lowell, with ulcers over half his body, cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Reggd Hegged (at the door)—I'm willin' to work, meddlin, but I can't get nothin' to do at me perfession.

Mrs Sapperton—H'm! What is your profession? Reggd Hegged—I am an Anglo-maid.

Hypnotism is a great thing. I can hypnotize any one, and what I desire the subject to do he does. See here, professor, said the little fellow, I'll give you 10 pes cent on all the money you can hypnotize one of my customers.

If the hair is falling out, or turning gray, requiring a stimulant with nourishing and coloring food, Hall's Vegetable Sillian Hair Renewer is just the specific. Dinner at restaurant—What can I do to remove the odor of onions from my breath? I'm going to call on my best friend this evening, and she hates onions.

Resourcel Friend—Just wait until the bill's presented for this dinner, and that will take your breath away. Ethel—I think you have one of the prettiest names I have ever heard of. Ethel—You don't seem very enthusiastic. Don't you like it? Maud Withers—I think I have proved that by not changing it.
