The lenses are made of the best material, uniform in density, and of high refractive power, their perfect polish and spheroidal shape adapt them to ease and improve the sight of the wearer. The eye being the most delicate organ, great care should be exercised in selecting spectacles; it is not enough that the glass be of the right focus, but the lenses must be perfectly centered and in many cases perfect relief is only given by having each eye fitted separately. To effect this the lenses are made interchangeable, and having an Optometer to measure the sight, a perfect fit is guaranteed.

IVANHOE.

(BY SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.)

CHAPTER V.

A short passage, and an ascent of seven steps, each of which was composed of a solid beam of oak, led him to the apartment of the Lady Rowena, the rude magnificence of which corresponded to the respect which was paid to her by the lord of the mansion. The walls were covered with embroidered hangings, on which different-colored silks, interwoven with gold and silver threads, had been employed with all the art of which the age was capable, to represent the sports of hunting and hawking. The bed was adorned with the same rich tapestry, and surrounded with curtains lined with purple. The seats had also their stained coverings, the one, which was higher than the rest, was accommodated with the footstool of ivory, curiously carved.

No fewer than four silver candelabras holding great waxen torches, served to illuminate this apartment. Yet let not modern beauty envy the magnificence of a Saxon princess. The walls of the apartment were so ill finished and so full of crevices, that the rich hangings shook to the night blast, and in despite of a sort of screen intended to protect them from the wind, the flame of the torches streamed sideways into the air, like the unfurled pennon of the chieftain. Magnificence there was, with some rude attempt at taste; but of comfort there was little and, being unknown, it was unmissed.

The Lady Rowena, with three of her attendants standing at her back, and arranging her hair ere she lay down to rest, was seated in the sort of throne already mentioned, and looked as if born to exact general homage. The Pilgrim acknowledged her claim to it by a low genuflection.

"Rise, Palmer," said she graciously. "The defender of the absent has a right to favorable reception from all who value truth, and honor manhood." She then said to her train, "Retire, excepting only Elgitha: I would speak with this holy Pilgrim."

The maidens, without leaving the apartment, retired to its further extremity, and sat down on a small bench against the wall, where they remained mute as statues, though at such a distance that their whispers could not have interrupted the conversation of their mistress.

"Pilgrim," said the lady, after a moment's pause, during which she seemed uncertain how to address him, "you this night mentioned a name - I mean," she said, with a degree of effort, "the name of Ivanhoe, in the halls where by nature and kindred it should have sounded most acceptably; and yet, such is the perverse course of fate, that of many whose hearts must have throbbed at the sound, I only dare ask you where, and in what condition, you left him of whom you spoke? - We heard, that, having remained in Palestine, on account of his inpaired health, after the departure of the English army, he had experienced the persecution of the French faction, to whom the Templars are known to be attached."

"I know little of the Knight of Ivanhoe," answered the Palmer, with a troubled voice. "I would I knew him better, since you, lady, are interested in his fate. He hath, I believe, surmounted the persecution, of his enemies in Palestine, and is on the eve of returning to England, where you, lady, must know better than I, what is his chance of happiness."

The Lady Rowena sighed deeply, and asked more particularly when the Knight of Ivanhoe might be expected in his native country, and whether he would not be exposed to great dangers by the road. On the first point, the Palmer professed ignorance; on the second, he said that the voyage might be safely made by the way of Venice and Genoa, and from thence through France to England. "Ivanhoe," he said, "was so well acquainted with the language and manners of the French, but there was no fear of his incurring any hazard during that part of his travels."

"Would to God," said the Lady Rowena, "he were here safely arrived, and able to bear arms in the approaching tourney, in which the chivalry of this land are expected to display their addresses and valor. Should Athelstane of Coingsburgh obtain the prize, Ivanhoe is like to bear evil tidings when he reaches England. How loaked he, stranger, when you last saw him? Had disease laid her hand heavy upon his strength and comeliness?"

"He was darker," said the Palmer, "and thinner, than when he came from Cyprus in the train of Sir de Lion, and carried second to Sir de Lion's brow; but I approached not his presence, because he is unknown to me."

"He will," said the lady, "I fear, find little in his native land to cheer those clouds from his countenance. Thanks, good pilgrim, for your information concerning the companion of my childhood, Maidens," she said, "draw near—offer the sleeping cup to this holy man, whom I will no longer retain from my page."

One of the maidens presented a silver cup, containing a rich mixture of wine and spice, which Rowena barely put to her lips. It was then offered to the Palmer, who, after a low obeisance, tasted a few drops.

"Accept this alms, friend," continued the lady, offering a piece of gold, "in acknowledgement of thy painful travel, and of the shrine thou hast visited."

The Palmer received the boon with another low reverence, and followed Edwin out of the apartment.

In the ante-room he found his attendant Anwold, who, taking the torch from the hand of the waiting-maid, conducted him with more haste than ceremony to an exterior and ignoble part of the building, where a number of small apartments, or rather cells, served for sleeping places to the lower order of domestics, and to strangers of mean degree.

J. E. COLLINGS, Editor.

FREDERICTON, NOVEMBER 25, 1879.

OUR COMMON SCHOOLS.

There is not a city in the United States of which we have any knowledge that is not complaining of the system of common school education. The taxes levied on property for the support of elementary education is being lavishly expended upon high schools and normal schools—the giving of instruction in languages and other studies wholly without the circle of common school education.

It might be well for us at this early stage, to learn wisdom from their experience. The people of the United States were not many years ago encaptured with their system; ignorance would be banished from the land, thefts and murders would take place no more, every species of vice and immorality would be banished from them; but such has not, however, been the result. The complaint now is that the system has been loaded down with "branches" as injurious to the system as it is costly to those who have to bear the weight of them. What the people now cry out for is to have those luxuriant flowers of no earthly use to the children of labor and toil, cut off, and the system restored to its primitive simplicity—the end for which it was instituted.

A great improvement, nay, a radical change, has, we admit, been effected since we were boys, not only in the system of imparting knowledge, but in the very buildings in which the children are taught. These things, however, would necessarily have come in time, given and done did not obtain the perfection for which they were established in a day.

We not only admire but praise every thing that is good. We are ever ready to admit that we are going too fast, considering our means. Centralization is our great danger; and centralization has ruined nations. The children outside the centres perhaps have not been much affected by the new order of things; yet they have rights as well as those clad in purple and fine linen. The Superintendent of Education, whoever he may be for the time being, should be a man of enlarged ideas to some extent, yet conservative of the people's interests. What is wanted is not the gilded education of a few children whose parents are well able to pay for what may be regarded as culture and refinement. But what we do want is, the practical education of the children, throughout the whole Province to enable them one and all to battle with life when they leave the school room.

The Superintendent of our Province is, to a large extent, the Board of Education. He has almost unlimited powers. He has at his command nearly two hundred thousand dollars annually, which he can diminish or augment as circumstances may, in his estimation demand. He is the great power for all the day, but who has any sympathy with the people? We have no time to devote to a consideration and expansion of the expenditure. And even so, the expenditure will be the same probably.

What we are willing to admit is that our common school system, in many respects, an improvement on the past, yet we cannot help thinking that there are evils creeping into it, young as it is, that will cause the people of this Province to rise in their majesty and might and declare not against the original system, as found in the bond and letter of the law, but its abuse. We write thus plainly and explicitly for the benefit of those whom it may concern.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

At an adjourned sitting of the Supreme Court, held yesterday, the following judgments were given:—

BANK OF NEW BRUNSWICK vs. FLAHERTY.—Appeal from the decision of the Judge of the St. John County Court, setting aside an attachment granted under the Insolvent Act of 1875, against the firm of R. Flaherty & Co., consisting of the defendant and George J. Chubb. The firm was indebted to the Bank on a promissory note which was overdue; and Chubb was a letter to the Bank, stating that the firm was unable to pay the note, or to meet its general liabilities, unless time was given. This letter was written without the knowledge or consent of Flaherty. On affidavit of the indebtedness of the firm, and of the plaintiff's belief in the insolvency of the firm, based upon the statements in Chubb's letter, an attachment was issued against the firm. The question before the Court was whether a statement by one member of a firm was a sufficient acknowledgment of the insolvency of the firm, under Sec. 3 of the Insolvent Act to subject the estate to liquidation. Held per Weldon, Fisher and Wetmore, J. J. that it was; and that it was competent for the Judge of the County Court, on a petition under Sec. 18, to set aside the attachment, to enquire on the evidence whether the firm was insolvent, or not, at the time the attachment was granted. Held per Allen, C. J., and Duff, J., contra, that one member of a firm had no implied authority to acknowledge the insolvency of the firm for the purpose of subjecting the estate to liquidation; that the attachment must stand and fall upon the affidavit on which it was granted; and that as the affidavit in this case was insufficient, the attachment could not be sustained by subsequent evidence showing that the firm was in fact insolvent at the time.

Appeal from the County Court dismissed without costs.

MURRAY vs. MOFFATT.—Action for the price of timber and logs agreed to be sold by the plaintiff to the defendant. The plaintiff had the lumber on the brow on the bank of the Unsalquitch, in 1874, and was indebted to the defendant for goods. It was agreed verbally between the plaintiff and the defendant's agent, that the defendant should purchase the lumber, and after deducting this, the amount of the plaintiff's account for goods, should pay the plaintiff $140. The defendant refused to carry out the agreement, and nothing further was done by either party till the spring of 1875, when the defendant's men drove the lumber down the river Resigouche, and into his boom, and it was afterwards sawed in his mill. Previous to this, in March, 1875, the lumber had been seized and sold by the Sheriff, under an execution against the plaintiff, in the suit of T. R. Jones, and was purchased in for Jones, and Jones' agent afterwards authorized the defendant to drive the lumber down the river. The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the price of the lumber, finding that the defendant had driven it under the agreement to purchase, made with the plaintiff, and cut by the direction of Jones' agent; and that the agreement to deduct from the price of the lumber, the amount of the plaintiff's debt to the defendant, was a part payment on account of the purchase held per Weldon, Fisher and Wetmore, J. J., on a motion for a new trial, that the verdict was right; the jury having found that the defendant took possession of the lumber under the agreement with the plaintiff, and that the agreement to deduct the plaintiff's account was a part payment, on account of the lumber which took the case out of the operation of the Statute of Frauds. Held per Allen, C. J., that the defendant's taking possession of the lumber till after the Sheriff's sale, by which the title to it was vested in Jones, such possession could not be an acceptance by the defendant under the agreement with the plaintiff, so as to take the case out of the statute, and that it should not have been left to the jury to find whether the driving of the timber was under the agreement with the plaintiff or under the direction of Jones' agent. Also that the agreement to allow the amount of the plaintiff's account with the defendant's, as a part payment on account of the lumber, was not equivalent to an actual part payment under the Statute of Frauds. New trial refused.

OUR DELLEGATES AT OTTAWA.

Messrs. Fraser, Wetherburn and Landry are off again to Ottawa, dunnage the Dominion Government. As our readers are aware, there is an amount due to this Province on Eastern Extension Railway Subsidies; there is something to our credit on the Immigration Account; we have maintained the Tracadia Lazaretto, an expense which should, from the terms of the Union, be borne by the General Government. Besides these there are minor claims, which in the aggregate swell up to a large sum.

This counting, as our readers are aware, occurs annually, and it is becoming such a formal piece of business that the Dominion Government pay no attention to the matter, further than to receive our poor little politicians pro forma. There ought surely to be some process of State Equity by which one Government could collect what is due from the other. If there is any such course, it is high time the Local Government took advantage of it, and pushed their claims to a legitimate issue. If there is no such course open, and we are consequently dependent on the generosity of Ottawa, as to whether she will pay us what she justly owes us or not, then the members from New Brunswick, who represent us in the Dominion Parliament we should next turn to.

If these members turned a deaf ear to us when we asked for our rights, we should turn a deaf ear to them when they ask us for our votes. But it seems little less than Tommoology to see a delegation go to Ottawa every year, return again and tell us from the floors of the House all they did not get. We wish the present delegation success, while we do not expect as much for it; and let us hope that, in any case, it will be the last of the kind to Ottawa from New Brunswick. It is becoming a burlesque on diplomacy.

A MARITIME PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION.

SOME of the Provincial newspapers have been expressing themselves pro and con on the subject of a Maritime Exhibition at St. John next summer, instead of a Provincial Exhibition as provided for. A Provincial Exhibition at any time is of more importance than a County Fair; so too should an exposition held by all the Maritime Provinces be of more importance, (if exhibitions mean anything) than a fair held by one of them. But St. John, in part, opposes the project. Why we do not know, unless it would create too great a bustle in the city—fill the stores with customers for the time being, and the hotels to overflowing. There is no denying it would bring strangers from every quarter, and people don't always want to be annoyed, especially if they are trying with elephant force to express an editorial.

It seems to us there is little fault with the scheme itself, but the carrying out of the scheme would be no easy task. Yet if the cooperation of the Provincial legislative bodies of the Maritime Provinces could be obtained, the difficulties would be at an end, and the second idea would be far and far preferable to the first.

RAILROAD LANDS.

We stated the other day that a proposition from the Railroad Company might possibly be presented to the Government this winter for the purchase of the Company's lands. If the Government has still at its disposal four million acres, and can afford to sell them at fifty cents an acre, like it formerly did, we don't see the wisdom of buying land at seventy-five cents per acre. If any thing is to be done, though, it should be done speedily. It would be the height of folly to buy these lands after they had been stripped of all their valuable timber, for much of it would be thus comparatively useless. If the Government be in a position to buy the land, it should have all or none; and at a price for which it can hereafter sell it. And, no doubt, the Company will, in time, be prepared to do what is right and reasonable.

A MOST GIGANTIC SCHEME.

Mr. Hans P. Peterson, the descendant of a family of wealth and title in Denmark, named Liscar, is Commissioner for New Denmark. Since he came there he has worked indefatigably to promote immigration, and now has the pleasure of seeing the nucleus of an important colony around him. But of late he has conceived a most gigantic immigration scheme, so large that, if carried out, it will reduce the population of Denmark to a skeleton, and fill the lands and forests to the north of us with a race of men whom the Marquis of Lorne might call our "discontented colonies." Mr. Peterson [Liscar] proposes that in the next five years to bring out TEN THOUSAND emigrants from Denmark, provided the Government reserve two hundred thousand acres of land lying between New Denmark and the Tobique, extending towards the Tobique, and build roads through the said tract. The inducement to the Government is very great, and such a scheme is most desirable; but should Hans Peterson fail to produce his quota of Danes after the Government having reserved the lands and built the roads, what would be the value of the guarantee? It might be worth nothing, though.

Cetewayo.

In referring to his journey on board H. M. S. "Natal," the News says: "The Commodore sent him a suit of clothes, tweed coat, waistcoat, and trousers, with an ordinary black hat. These he was glad to put on, understanding that such apparel was necessary for him to make a respectable figure among Europeans. He asked for a box to keep his clothes in, and was supplied with a metal travelling trunk, in which he laid them up neatly folded at night; he also got a hat-brush and clothes-brush. The red and green tablecloth was worn as usual. The women were supplied with shirts, but were not always so particular about wearing them. The King made a very tolerable figure in his English dress; he is a tall, big man, nearly six feet in height, and extremely stout, measuring about sixty inches around the chest, but not unwieldy; his thighs are very large, and his knees swollen, from a disease of long standing. He is fifty-four years of age, but looks not above forty, the hair of his head being only a little grizzled. His hair at top is moulded into the stiff ring, which all married men wear among the Zulus. He has a round face, the expression of which is good-natured, humorous and smiling; he has a slight moustache, but not much beard. His color is a light ashy brown, not like that of a negro. The wives are lively young women, about twenty years of age, one of them rather handsome; the daughter is a girl of fourteen. The chief or induna, Umkosana, in whose kraal the Zulu King was taken, and who has voluntarily shared his captivity, is a finely-grown man, above six feet tall, well shaped and muscular. Cetewayo accepted cigarettes and a pipe, and was fond of smoking with Captain Poole. He was taken on board H. M. S. "Boadicea," where he saw the seamen and marines at their drill, and the great guns, to his evident admiration. "I am a child," he said, "I was only born yesterday. I know nothing." His behaviour, in general, was sociable and agreeable. The only dispute he had with Captain Poole was upon the demand he first made to have an ox killed and roasted every day for his dinner, which is the customary etiquette in the Zulu Royal household; but it was soon explained to him that he did not do in an English kitchen. He did not like the company of civilians, perhaps, associating them with Sir T. Shepstone and Mr. Dums, whom he now regards as his enemies; but officers, naval or military, he was always inclined to meet. No person was allowed to come near him without special permission. He consented to let his photograph be taken in several postures, though he seemed to fear that there was some harmful art-magic in the use of the lens and camera; a sketch of him was also drawn while at Simon's Bay. The portraits of the women were also taken.

His Majesty the ex-King of Zululand, like some of the Northern Kings of Europe (but not Henry Beseniere), was unable to write his own name. But nobody has ever yet been able to spell it. Cetewayo, Cetwayo, Keishwayo, Keishwayo, and several other phonetic or conventional variations have been tried in vain. We believe that the last of those given above is nearer than the others to the actual sound of the whole name, but it is not exactly right. During his late voyage from Port Durnford to Capetown on board H. M. S. "Natal," transport-ship, he expressed a wish to know how to write. Having recovered from some sickness, which he endured with patience and good-humor (only wishing he had brought his "big stick" or sceptre, to have thrown it into the sea and made a cairn), the captive monarch was ready to take his first lesson. This was kindly given by his friend, Commander Crawford Caffin, R. N., who, with Captain Roscombe Poole, R. A., had joint charge of the illustrious monarch on board. Commander Caffin first inscribed the King's name, spelling it as he thought fit, in printing capital letters, which the royal pupil imitated as well as he could.

ONE TON OF WOOL

Wanted at the Establishment of J. G. COCANNOR. November 1, 1879.—1f.

Local Matters.

Waiting. There are several car-loads of freight at Gibson waiting for a truck to be taken.

First of the Season. A man from Stanley drove the first horse of the season across the bridge from St. Mary's this morning. The animal broke through twice and once the man was thrown out.

N. B. R. Last Wednesday 60 cars of freight and passengers came into Woodstock at 10 o'clock. Woodstock has become the business centre of the New Brunswick Railway.

The Market. Hay is stiffening, and $8 per ton obtained. Butter remains at 14 and 16 cents per pound. Beef has dropped to 3 and 4 cents per pound. The market was well supplied this morning. The produce sold rapidly.

The River. A party of adventurous individuals crossed the river on Sunday morning from St. Mary's. They would not recommend a repetition of the experiment, however. Yesterday and today a large number of persons have crossed.

Triplets. The wife of Mr. Michael McGrath, Johnville, a few days ago presented her husband with male triplets. As that rate is a hundred years from now, Johnville would be able to supply a fair sized force to the Parthenon movement.

Departure. Mr. Hewitt Carman, for a long time clerk in Messrs. Colter & Son's of this city, took the western train this morning for Boston. We are always sorry to chronicle the exodus of energetic young men from our midst. Mr. Carman has our best wishes for success in his new departure.

A Good Sign. Messrs. McMurray & Feney have just put up their new sign. It is the work of Mr. F.W. Winters and shows a very creditable artistic skill. Strange to say the principles of perspective have been attended to and very correctly delineated.

Wesleyan Institute. There is considerable talk among the Methodist brethren of establishing a Wesleyan Institute in connection with the Wesleyan Free School. There is nothing like activity, and we can see that a good deal of good to the congregation must be accomplished. It would be the death knell to the Y. M. C. A.

Personal. Inspector Gaudet is in town. He leaves tomorrow for Woodstock.

Mr. James Berry of the News was in town on Saturday.

The Surveyor General is expected this evening.

John T. Deane, Editor of the London Times, is dead.

Emigration. One of our city papers seems to doubt the reports of the St. John press concerning the magnitude of emigration going on from the Province. We have been informed on good authority that on the train westward from the Fredericton Junction there may daily be found from 12 to 20 people seeking homes elsewhere. About 25 per cent. of these hail from St. John and the balance from this city. They are mostly young men. Three of these left Fredericton this morning; two for Texas, one for Boston.

Preparat for Carleton County. A correspondent writes to Woodstock publication of a visit to Beaufort. He is fond in praise of Mr. W. B. Mill's management, and adds: "His popularity is enough to drive a man with less popularity to sacrifice himself by offering for M. P. P." The same correspondent writes that there is some notion of building a branch railroad from Beaufort Station passing through Gordonville, Knowlesville, Beaufort, etc. If this be true, it will be lucky for the new settlements.

To Correspondents. "A LOOKER-ON" is held over till our next. "ECLIPSE" which is a valuable contribution, will be published in our next.

OUR ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—A very kind friend has presented the Editor with a beautiful bound volume of Mr. Heman's poems. Accompanying the book is a slip on which is written by the donor, and no doubt original: "Although the poems are a Heman's, I'm proud to know they are a woman's." The donor will accept such thanks as are not given in words.

Lectures. We have attended many lectures delivered here and we do not hesitate to say that one-half of them was an imposition upon the people who went to hear them. To ask people to pay for them is bad enough; but to compel them to sit down and listen to them for an hour, is the acme of impudence. We appreciate original or scientific lectures that teach us something which we don't know. But those of John Billings and his platitudes and quaint sayings, which we have heard since we were children, only generate bile. The check and coolness of these wizards are the only thing we admire.

St. John looking after its poor. Mr. T. Burke passed through Fredericton one day last week on his route to Johnville. Mr. Burke is a representative of the Relief and Aid Society of St. John and visited Johnville to see how the people under his care were provided for the winter. He found some showing every promise of success in their woodshed homes, and a few who seemed to be victims of the sloth that characterized them in the coldest days of St. John. Several of the settlers have chopped down, ready to burn, from three to seven acres; they have all built log shanties, rude in truth, but more or less comfortable. He conversed with them upon how they took to their new departure, and many of them he heard to say that they heartily regretted their departure, and only others were more or less downcast and are only waiting for St. John's idolized industry, ship-building, to show signs of revival; when they will "back again out of the miserable woods." There are only four or five families, though, out of the twenty-two who have these intentions. It is Mr. Burke's intention to recommend that the sum set apart for those people be sent up to a responsible person who will spend it in the stores in his neighborhood, with more advantage to the settler than in St. John. The amount so paid, with careful distribution, will keep the wolf away from the door during the winter. Father Chapman has met like a smiling angel in the wilderness, he says; and Mr. Mills has a future equal to Mr. Penn's if he continues as he has begun.

Mr. Burke went to Carleton yesterday, to enquire into the state of the indigent settlers here.

St. Vincent De Paul Society. We are so material and absorbed in the things of this nether world, that we too often forget the things of a better and less selfish one. We have heard and read of Freemasons, Odd Fellows and Temperance societies and a thousand other benevolent institutions originated for the benefit of suffering humanity. We know nothing of these, but of the St. Vincent De Paul Society we do. Its members have no passwords or bye-words. Charity and poverty are the two ends of the electric chain which keeps the current up and laws them to the abodes of misery and suffering. It is not, however, the business or profession of the Society to interfere with the duties and obligations of the city. The Society is simply intended to relieve the troubles and wants of those whom the city in its legitimate and conscientious charity will not recognize, and for whom it is not, in its wisdom, responsible. It has little means at its command, being sustained solely by the generosity and charity of its members. Some kind people, seeing the good it has done, think of it when dying, and leave to it some of the accumulated wealth which by care and industry they had gathered together during a lifetime. In that most solemn moment the great and essential thought is reconciliation with their Maker. They then remember that sweet and consoling declaration: "I was hungry, and you gave me to eat." * * * Enter into the joy of the Lord."

A Hard-Hearted Wife. Yesterday evening a man named Richard Boyle called in at the STAR, and told the following story: "My name is Richard Boyle and I have just come from Fort Fairfield. My wife has left me, taking with her my three children, and I don't know where she has gone. I owned a little house at the Fort, and went away a short distance from home to earn something for my family, when I loved dearly; but when I returned the house was empty. My oldest son had smashed the glass out of the windows, and broken up all the little things about the house. She wants to get away from me, and has been telling me for several years that she'd leave me as soon as the children were able to walk with me. I belong to the Island; she belongs to Nova Scotia. She has an old maid she was a big fool she didn't marry a younger man than me. I am bound to follow her wherever she goes. I don't care so much about the children as I do about her. She left on Friday, the man at Gibson told me, on the 'May Queen' I will go to St. John and try to get the run of her. If she escapes, I can't tell what my future will be."

The reporter remarked there was a large emigration to the North-West, and thought she might have gone there.

"Well, if she has, I'll never find her. But I wish you to publish my story, that those who read it may keep an eye on her."

The man was evidently half-distracted. He had no money, was poorly clad and had to beg a night's lodging. He will be sent to St. John to-day.

From St. John comes the mournful lamentation of the partner of his bosom: "A WORTHLESS HUSBAND.—A woman named Boyd, with three children, applied at the police station on Saturday for protection. She stated she came from Fort Fairfield, Me., to this city to get work, but it finally appeared that the real reason of her coming was to get rid of her husband, who is a worthless fellow. She will be sent back to Fort Fairfield as soon as possible.—News.

We think these two headings about strike it.

Curious. The initial curling match of the season took place yesterday afternoon between teams of four each—married and single members of the Fredericton Curling Club. The ice was in first rate condition, and some fine playing was made. Mr. A. E. Street distinguished himself by several of the close of the contest by a series of exceptionally good plays. The players seem to have lost none of their old-time efficiency; and from the enthusiastic shouts evoked from the surging throng, we should judge that among this assembly "Scott & Bowman's Celebrated Lung Remedy" phenomenon, would be the discount. The score as appended resulted in a tie: "Morris—H. C. Butler, J. D. Macpherson, J. J. Neill, A. F. Street, skip—14. Single—J. D. Hazen, J. A. Graves, F. A. Melnes, T. G. Loggie, skip—14.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY. The December number of this favorite magazine is already on our table, and as it closes the seventh volume, now is the time to subscribe for the coming year. The contents are exceedingly varied, highly interesting, and instructive. The leading article, "The Career of a Great Speculator," is a detailed and interesting account of Daniel Drew, who was at one time a power in Wall Street; it is profusely illustrated. Nugent Robinson has an admirable article on "Mary Queen of Scots"; "Sik Worms and Sik Culture" is replete with information, and is also, "A Glance at Copenhagen." There are several excellent stories by popular writers complete in this number and poems of great merit. There is, besides, a large miscellany, embracing a great variety of subjects. The number is, in fact, brilliant with literary gems, and every department of literature is represented. The POPULAR MONTHLY has attained a very large circulation, and is eminently deserving of the favor it receives. "What!" "Yes, sir; more than that, his external pterygoid was twisted around so it looked exactly the color and shape of a medusa! I didn't suppose it was possible for a man to suffer so. Just think of it. The doctors say; (and in this case they were Methodists), that the myelodean nerves must have been paralyzed; enough of itself ordinarily to cause instantaneous dissolution; his cordyle was twisted from Dan to Beersheba, and knicked clean through the back of his head; the most of his foramen was more or less dilapidated, and four fibro-cartilages are clean gone—missing entirely."

"Where is the man?" asked the reporter, look in hand, seizing the new-fledged coroner by the shoulder.

"Oh now you're asking me too much. I just come here to find out. It does seem too bad that a man should be sent adrift into the misty regions of the unknowable in this ignominious way, without the comfort of a respectable coroner."

And the man went out muttering something about "Dan and Beersheba."

Yours, CHAS. GARDNER.

A Grievance.—Montreal.

To the Editor of the STAR.

DEAR SIR.—Considering myself unfairly used by your city authorities, I respectfully request the privilege of ventilating my grievances through the medium of your paper. The circumstances upon which base my complaint are as follows: I am one of the unfortunate class known as commercial travellers, and being in the habit of visiting Fredericton twice a year in pursuit of trade, I have always been well-looked upon at my hotel by the City Marshall and requested to contribute five dollars to the city finances, which, in spite of my opinion that this tax is an unjust imposition placed upon trade, I have always complied with without a murmur, in which assertion your Marshall as well as the books of your city treasury will bear me out.

Believing that in such cases custom makes law, I did not take out a license on my arrival, expecting of course to do so before I left, as I was to be several days in town. I also innocently mistook a brother commercial by informing him that he need not trouble himself to take out a license, as it was usual to receive a call from the City Marshall. But imagine, if you can, my feelings when, instead of the customary gentlemanly intimation, we were approached by two minions of the law armed with a summons for each of us to appear before the police magistrate as criminals and law-breakers.

Upon my expressing astonishment at such treatment, particularly towards one who had never tried to evade the law, I was threatened by the constables that if I did not come along they would be obliged to take me. Having a horror, which an honest man would naturally feel, to standing in the dock of a police court as a prisoner, I induced Mr. S., the Town Marshall, to appear for me, entering at the same time into a full explanation of matters, and furnishing him with money to pay my license fee, supposing of course that would be all that was expected of me.

My friend being a stranger in the city thought it best to appear in person in order it possible to soften the heart of justice.

But all the eloquence he could put forth upon the occasion availed him nothing; we were fined $10 each, but the alternative, if we preferred, of 20 days' imprisonment in the common jail. Having no desire to be the guest of so inhospitable a city, particularly under the circumstances upon which the invitation was extended, we paid our fine and retired from the presence.

The above statements are the simple, unvarnished facts of the case, and I think that every one will agree with me that such ungentlemanly treatment as my friend and myself received does not reflect much credit upon the city of Fredericton, and that if the custom of asking travellers for their license money was to be stopped, some intimation of that fact should have been given them, either through notice posted in the hotel or hotel proprietors should have been requested to inform their guests of this change.

Trusting you will pardon me for taking up so much of your space, and hoping that you will see fit to give publicity to my not unjust complaints, I am yours, etc., A MONTREAL TRAVELLER.

[We feel so ashamed of the treatment these two gentlemen have received, that we have not one word to say. The "traveller" who writes the above is a merchant of standing in Montreal.—Ed. STAR.]

A Frightful Accident.

(For the STAR.)

One day this week our new coroner dropped into my office. He was in a fearful state of excitement.

"I see there is a gradually increasing sentiment arising in the old country against the practice of vivisection," he said, as he gazed dreamily out into the dimly lighted street.

"Yes?" I interrogated.

"Did you ever hear tell of a man by the name of Tom Gardner, who used to shoulder molasses hogsheads, trolleys, and such like?"

"No, I have never come across the gentleman. Was he very strong?" I asked.

"Well, yes, to'able, to'able," he murmured. "Say, young man, did you hear about the accident," as a reporter of one of the city papers, with troubled visage, entered the office.

"No," the young man said.

"Good gracious me; well now that's queer. Great heavens, man, there was a chap killed up street dead as a Methusalem; the news has spread from Dan to Beersheba by this time."

"Did it hurt the man much?" asked the new coroner vaguely.

"Holy Ab-alom," said the man, "the poor chap was killed out, right; he was kicked dead by a horse on—on Carl ton Street, just opposite the post office. The man's name was Blair; he belonged to Rushagorish. I never saw a man look so bad in all my life. He was struck right under the jaw, and consequently his pterygo maxillary ligament was severed completely, presenting a frightful appearance. His bicepsides were totally demolished so as to be absolutely unrecognizable."

"What!"

"Yes, sir; more than that, his external pterygoid was twisted around so it looked exactly the color and shape of a medusa! I didn't suppose it was possible for a man to suffer so. Just think of it. The doctors say; (and in this case they were Methodists), that the myelodean nerves must have been paralyzed; enough of itself ordinarily to cause instantaneous dissolution; his cordyle was twisted from Dan to Beersheba, and knicked clean through the back of his head; the most of his foramen was more or less dilapidated, and four fibro-cartilages are clean gone—missing entirely."

"Where is the man?" asked the reporter, look in hand, seizing the new-fledged coroner by the shoulder.

"Oh now you're asking me too much. I just come here to find out. It does seem too bad that a man should be sent adrift into the misty regions of the unknowable in this ignominious way, without the comfort of a respectable coroner."

And the man went out muttering something about "Dan and Beersheba."

Yours, CHAS. GARDNER.

Shipwreck.—The schooner S. H. Morse with a cargo of herring, bound for Waterford, was stranded at Penguin Harbor, Labrador, on the 25th inst. She was badly damaged.

The Wild Drive, the Griffin and the Hazy coming from Labrador, on the 5th inst., when a snow storm came on. They shaped for Quirpon when the storm came heavy, but it was impossible to make out the land, hid in a mist of snow. All three by a take run into a light, Gall-y Head, mistaking it for Quirpon, and became total wrecks.

COLLEGE.—Dr. Carfagnini is having a Roman Catholic College erected at Harbor Grace.

Drowning.—A local paper of a late date says: "A fine young man of 18 years of age, by name Alfred Parrot, was thrown into the sea at Seilly Cove, on the 31st inst., while attending to the 15th sheet, and in consequence of the shabby condition of the craft (the sails being shattered by the storm) the rest of the crew were compelled to watch the poor young man drowning without any possibility of reaching him to his help, set out in boats, and by Mr. ELLERHAUSEN, proprietor of Beets Cove Mine, is on his way to Cape Breton to purchase some of the copper mines there.

The following incident in the wreck of the Etreve, lost at Red Bay, Labrador, will be interesting. The ship stranded, and the waves began to run over her. Some of the crew, thrown overboard when the ship first struck, were killed by coming in contact with the rocks. Others, who were never managed to get up on a ledge of rocks which lay about a quarter of a mile off from the shore. There the poor creatures remained for two nights, one by one before anyone attempted to rescue them—the water at the time being hoarse, and the sea running high. Some of the shore-men, however, tempted by the captain's offer of allowing them to keep half the oxen they could save, set out in boats, and by dint of hard work, (which was not altogether unattended with danger) succeeded in saving the whole number. This was accomplished by the boats being towed up to the shore, and the oxen safely got; ropes were then thrown over the oxen's heads—they were dragged into the water and towed on shore.

The weather at St. Pierre, Mig. is fine, and everyone is taking advantage of it. The schooners are being rapidly dismantled and put in winter quarters, and the fish is being energetically harvested. The season has been a good one for the fishermen; and, probably, for most others; the effects of the fire seem scarcely to be felt. Great activity prevails in all directions, and this should be an indication of success.

HEAD CONSTABLE DOYLE has taken temporary charge of the Harbor Grace police force. He is a most efficient and intelligent officer.

SEVERAL of the Newfoundland "searjacks" people have thought of emigrating to the north-west.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following beautiful little poem has been sent us for publication, and we gladly give it a place.—ED. STAR.

A beggar stood at the rich man's door— "I'm house-less and friendless, and faint and poor."

Said the beggar boy, as the door drops rolled down his chin cheek, blanched with want and cold: "Oh, give me a crust from your bread to-day."

To help the beggar boy on his way." "Not a crust, not a crust," the rich man said;

"To do and work for your daily bread. The rich man went to the parish church, His face grew grave as he trod the porch, And he brought poor and unshod man drew back to let the rich man pass. The service began; the choral layan arose and swelled through the song aisles dim; The man bowed, and the words he said were: "Give us this day our daily bread."

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

IS A FACT ATTESTED BY THE HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

A careful observation of the laws of health, and the systematic and persistent use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will accomplish this result. This preparation has all the virtues of those two most valuable specifics, in a form perfectly palatable, and acceptable to the most delicate stomach, and we make the unqualified statement that Scott's Emulsion is being used with better results and endorsed and prescribed by more physicians for Consumption and the diseases leading to it, such as Chronic Coughs, Bronchitis, Scrophula, Anemia, General Debility and the Wasting Disorders of Children, than any other remedy known to medical science. The rapidity with which patients improve on this food medicine diet, is truly marvellous.

See What Physicians and the People Say About It.

Messrs. Scott & Bowne:—Gentlemen,—I have frequently prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites during the past year, and regard it as a valuable preparation in scrophulous and consumptive cases, (salable and efficacious).

Messrs. Scott & Bowne:—Gentlemen,—Within the last year I have used in my own family, and in my private practice prescribed very extensively Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and found it a most valuable preparation, especially in cases of children. It is agreeable to the most delicate stomach, which renders it a very reliable agent as a nutritive remedy in consumptive and scrophulous cases. Yours respectfully, A. H. SAKTON, M. D., Baltimore, Oct. 12, 1879.

Messrs. Scott & Bowne:—Gentlemen,—Within the last two months I have fairly tried Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, and I can only declare that it is the finest preparation of the kind that has ever been brought to my notice; it is a tonic of the lungs and other wasting diseases, we can consider it our most reliable agent, in a perfectly agreeable and elegant form. Yours truly, J. SIMONAUD, M. D., New Orleans, La. December 10th, 1878.

Messrs. Scott & Bowne:—Gentlemen,—In September, 1877, my health began to fail and my physician pronounced it spinal trouble; since his care I got some relief in pain, but my general health did not improve, an early in the winter I began to lose blood and rapidly grew thin. In May I was taken with a violent cough, which brought me to my bed and my life was despaired of for many weeks; violent symptoms appeared, which, and morning and night, high sweat and short breath, and a return of the spinal trouble. My physician stopped the bleeding and then ordered Cod Liver Oil and Lime; and I used various preparations, but they did me no good. I had all hope of life and was an object of pity to all my friends. Last September I purchased a bottle of your Emulsion and before it was all taken I was better. I afterwards bought a dozen bottles, with the following results: Cough subsiding, night sweats stopped, appetite returned, pains in spine disappeared, strength returning, and my weight increased from 110 to 140 pounds in six weeks. I have taken no other medicine since commencing with your Emulsion and shall continue its use until I am perfectly well. I frequently meet some friends on the street who ask, "What has cured you?" and I answer, "The Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, etc." I have a friend who has no spoken aloud for 15 months, and he is getting better. I gave him a bottle and he took it more, but got a cough, and says it is now and medicine for him. He was given up six or eight years ago; but he is improving now wonderfully. My recovery is exciting the surprise of many people, and shall do all I can to make known your valuable medicine. Very truly yours, H. F. SLOCUM, Lowell, Mass. January 20th, 1879.

Messrs. Scott & Bowne:—Gentlemen,—About the 25th of last April I got a bottle of your Emulsion and at that time I was so prostrated that no one who saw me thought I could live longer than a few weeks at most. I could retain nothing on my stomach and was literally starving. I commenced the use of the Emulsion in small doses. It was the first thing that would stay on my stomach; I consumed it in use, gradually increasing the dose; and from that hour I commenced eating, and now am able to rise and walk, and am gaining flesh and strength rapidly. I have advised other parties to try it, and some two or three have already tried it. I am sure I shall entirely recover. I am gratefully yours, R. W. HAMILTON, M. D. January 20th, 1879.
