MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER XXIII. ACROSS THE STREAM.

After an hour or two Lord Foyle arrived. "My dear Coverdale, what—ever is the matter?" he exclaimed. "I have heard the most extraordinary accounts. What is it? Has Lillian broken her neck, or her leg?—either or both?"

"Neither," said Lord Heron; "neither, I am glad to say, but I am sorry to say that she has sprained her ankle."

"Tut—tut!" exclaimed Lord Foyle. "That is just like her. She is so impatient. Just what I was at her age. And you have had her brought here. That was very good of you. But I'm afraid you will find it a terrible nuisance."

"Not at all," said Lord Heron. "It was mainly my fault. Lady Lillian was a little too venturesome."

"Really? Well, I'll go and see her," and he went upstairs to Lady Lillian's room.

She was lying back on the bed on which Iris had slept, looking out at the view which Iris had so often looked at. "Well, papa," she said, with a smile, "what on earth does this mean?"

"What on earth does this mean?" asked Lord Foyle. "She smiled again, a smile of triumph. "It means that I am lying here in invalid at Knighton Revels, papa. I have sprained my ankle."

"He stood and regarded her with an uncertain air. "Really," he said.

"Really," she replied. "Oh, yes, it is a real sprain, and it is exceedingly painful. But"—she smiled again, triumphantly—"it is the price I had to pay for being here—here at Knighton Revels. Are you satisfied, papa?"

"Yes," she said, raising herself on her elbow. "This morning you said that Lord Coverdale was like a hermit crab, and that there was no getting him out of his shell. I have done better than that; instead of getting him out of his shell, I have made my way within it."

"Yes," he said. "I am here at Knighton Revels, and, papa, I don't intend leaving it until I have his invitation to return as his mistress."

CHAPTER XXIV. "DEIFY YOU!"

A great and wonderful change had come over Iris' life. Her success was phenomenal. Without any of the long and arduous trials which are generally endured by the majority of actresses, she had stepped into the front rank of the profession, and was acknowledged to be not only a beautiful singer but a talented actress. London does not "rage" much about anything nowadays; "rages" of all kinds have gone out of fashion; but so far as it pertained to her, she was enthusiastic about any matter London was enthusiastic about. Miss Mabel Howard.

The Lyric was crowded nightly, and that by no means perfect play, "The Imprisoned Princess," was a success beyond anything that Mr. Stapleton had as yet produced.

The illustrated papers gave pictures of its principal scenes; the street organs played the popular airs; and in every Belgravia drawing-room was heard Paul's song, as sung by Miss Mabel Howard. Mr. Stapleton and everybody connected with the theatre were in the seventh heaven of satisfaction and delight. Mr. Stapleton himself proved as true as steel, and at once entered into an agreement with Iris which gave her a very large salary, while it, very properly, secured her future services to the Lyric. Paul, too, was not forgotten, and was promoted to first violin at a good salary.

It had all come so suddenly that Iris could scarcely persuade herself that it was more than an unsubstantial dream. Like Byron, she woke one morning to find herself rich and famous.

But of them all she was the only one who showed no excitement or enthusiasm. She was pleased and gratified, but it was more the pleasure and gratification in the delight of the others than any selfish satisfaction. Some people—alas! Many—when by a sudden bond, they reach the top of the hill of Fortune, are apt to forget those who placed them on their feet, and pointed out the way; but Iris was not one of those.

"But for Mr. Stapleton, and the rest, who taught me and helped me so kindly and willingly," she said, "I should have failed utterly," and in this modest spirit she took her triumph, and so silenced even the tongue of envy.

"I suppose," said Paul, the morning after her first appearance; "I suppose you will leave Mrs. Barker and Markham street, now, Mabel? The place will be too poor for you, won't it? You are rich now."

"Yes, Iris had, as she lay awake that night, thought over her position, and made her resolutions. "No, Paul," she said, quietly; "I shall not leave Mrs. Barker. If she will have me still, I have grown fond of these rooms, and I should not be happier in any others, if they were twice as grand, or I were twice as rich, as you call it. We will stay here, Paul, will we not?"

The boy's face flushed with pleasure. "That's like you, Mabel! I ought to have been ashamed of myself for thinking otherwise."

But though they remained in their humble rooms in Markham street, Mabel made some improvements in the matter of the furniture, and that, not so much in her own apartments as in Paul's; and though he remonstrated at her extravagance, the old worn carpet gave place to Turkish rugs. She bought him a beautiful couch upon which to rest when his weak legs grew tired; pictures, such as Paul had looked at covetingly in the shop windows, shone resplendent on the parlor walls, and, to make his joy complete, Iris purchased a collection of the works of the great composers, and a handsome bookcase to hold them.

"You buy nothing for yourself, Mabel," he said, reproachfully, and she answered with a smile. "I have got all I want, Paul. I am happy in trying to make you happy, dear."

She had requested Mr. Stapleton to keep her address secret, so that no one knew, excepting himself, where the famous Miss Mabel Howard hid herself away when she escaped from the public gaze. But presently, on the second day after her first performance, there arrived sundry letters and packages addressed to her at the theatre.

Some of these letters were from photographers, offering her certain sums of money for the privilege of taking and selling her photograph. To these requests Iris got Paul to write a civil but emphatic "No." Other letters contained avowals of the writers' intense admiration, and prayers for her success, and she answered them all with a few lines.

The packages contained a variety of articles. Some of them were jewelry in the shape of bracelets, and rings, and chains, accompanied by the expressed wishes of the donors that Miss Mabel Howard would wear them on the stage.

Iris did them up carefully in their original wrappers, and returned them through the parcel post. But sometimes there came a simple bunch of flowers with a little paper tied round the stalks, and an ill-written message of gratitude and admiration; to Miss Mabel Howard for lightening the sender's heart with her beautiful voice.

These Iris would place in a vase in her dressing-room, and sometimes, when she felt depressed and low spirited, the sight of them would cheer and encourage her.

"Let me sing my best to-night," she would murmur, "perhaps somebody will be tempted to forget their sorrow, some heart will be eased and comforted."

At night when she came out at the stage door, there was generally a group of persons lining the path, anxious to get a glimpse of the famous actress in her ordinary attire; men in evening dress with their eye-glasses stuck in their eyes, and leaning on crutch-sticks, and boys who did not get much by their waiting, for Miss Mabel Howard was always closely veiled, and made straight for the cab without looking to the right or left.

Yet another kind of attention was paid her.

Society had lately adopted a fashion of engaging professional entertainers in their "at homes" to enliven the general dinner, which descends, like an Egyptian fog, upon such gatherings, and Iris was besieged by applications that she would come and sing at Lady This and the Countess of That's; but to these Iris had one stereotyped reply; she was very much obliged, but she sang only at the Lyric.

Paul wrote all her notes, for she dreaded lest some one of her former acquaintances should see her handwriting and recognize it.

It was strange that she had not been recognized on the stage, but powder and paint—while, owing to the effect of the footlights upon the countenance, every actress is compelled to use—are a strong disguise; besides, no one dreamed of connecting the Mabel Howard of the Lyric with Miss Iris Knighton of the Revels.

The days wore on. The Lyric filled night after night, and Iris' fame grew with each performance. Her success had made her careful and painstaking instead of careless, as is too often the case, and Mrs. Berry and Paul declared that she played with greater effect at each performance. Certainly her voice improved, as the voice will when it is used and practiced with intelligence, and presently she began to feel a strange delight in feeling the densely-packed people thrill and throb in sympathy with the notes which seemed to pour down her lips so naturally and easily.

REPORT.
 He brought me his report card from the teacher and he said He wasn't very proud of it and sadly bowed his head. He was excellent in reading, but arithmetic was fair, and I noticed there were several "unsatisfactory" there; But one little bit of credit which was given brought me joy. He was "excellent in effort," and I fairly hugged the boy.

"Oh, it doesn't make much difference what is written on your card," I told that little fellow. "If you're only trying hard," The "very good" and "excellent" are fine. I must agree, But the effort you are making means a whole lot more to me. And the thing that's most important when this card is put aside is to know, in spite of failures, that to do your best you've tried.

"Just keep excellent in effort—All the rest will come to you. There isn't any problem but some day you'll learn to do. And at last, when you grow older, you will come to understand. That by hard and patient toiling men have risen to command, And some day you will discover when a greater goal's at stake That better far than brilliance is the effort you will make."

Must Earn Price of Engines.

Five new vessels are in operation on the New England coast, which were built for auxiliary power, but will be sailed until they can earn the price of an engine. This little fleet is said to comprise the finest fish-boats in many years, and the fact that each was equipped with an engine room and exhaust pipes all ready for power installation, is a silent tribute to the fact that the day of sails as the exclusive means of operation is past. The five vessels mentioned are:

Yankee, Capt. Michael Brophy; American, Fred L. Davis Co. (Owens); Orestia F. Spinnier, Capt. Lemuel E. Spinnier; L. A. Dunton, Capt. Felix E. Hogan; Mayflower, Capt. J. Henry Larkin.

An exception to this method of not establishing a power plant until it has been earned, is the schooner Blanch Ring, Capt. Nickerson, which will go into service with a Bolander's engine already installed.

Naturally all engine builders have their eye on these prospective auxiliary schooners for the very fact that each is a splendid example of the shipbuilders' art, and a few vessel builders will probably be guided by results obtained from engines installed in these craft.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette.

Backache

Backache is the outstanding symptom of kidney disease. Women often make the mistake of attributing other causes and overlook the derangement of the kidneys until serious developments have made it difficult to obtain permanent relief.

This letter points to a treatment which has been so thoroughly tried and proven so effective in the great majority of cases that you cannot afford to overlook it when cause arises for its use.

Mrs. Albert Brunet, R.R. No. 1, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the past two months, having been afflicted with kidney trouble. I used two doctors' medicine previous to this, without any good result. A friend told me to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The second box made me feel a good deal better. I have now used about six or eight boxes, and am completely relieved."

IN CANADA the reward is still to the pioneer. The Canadian longs to go forward. He loves the man who points the way.

In every corner of the world the New Improved Gillette has met with unprecedented success, but nowhere has the enthusiasm been greater than in our own Canada, where the razor is made and the Gillette word and record of achievement is best known.

No one can forget the peculiar tribute expressed in the way so many loyal followers of the old-type Gillette affectionately laid it aside for the new. They believed Gillette when Gillette said the new razor is better. They bought, tried and sold about the New Improved Gillette. The news spread from man to man and now many of your very own neighbours express their enthusiasm over the real shaving advantages brought to them by the New Improved Gillette.

NOTE.—One of the first things to strike the user of the New Improved Gillette is its simplicity. Most men prefer to scrub the handle up right to get the most satisfactory shave. The Gillette Blade, and Gillette Razor are developed to work together. No Gillette Blade can deliver its full shaving quality unless used in a genuine Gillette Razor—built by Gillette, in the Gillette way and up to Gillette standards.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

IF WE COULD ONLY PAY WEEKLY!

Would you like to trade with a merchant who only presented his bills once in five or ten years? There are some people who think that sounds rather fascinating, but I feel sure it is an unpleasant thought to most of us.

Especially if I add that you would have no way of keeping any accounts and that when he presented the bill he presented only a sum total, and you always had to pay what he asked and had no appeal.

An unthinkable picture, isn't it? We Should Count Our Reasons More Carefully.

And yet we all do trade with a merchant of that kind. His, or, as tradition seems to consider, the merchant feminine, I should say her name is Nature.

If Nature presented weekly bills instead of bills once in five or ten or fifteen years, don't you think most of us would be more careful how we spent our health and strength? I do.

I once knew a man who could never drink because he had a weak stomach and a few drinks upset him. He thought he was unlucky. He had a friend whose stomach was his pride, he could eat and drink outrageously without any effect. And he did it. To-day the second man is broken down and in a sanatorium at 45.

The Way to Live to be Old. You have doubtless heard it said that the best way to live to be old is to start off with some weakness that you have to pamper—a weak heart or a weak stomach. What does that mean except to be one of those who gets nature's bills rendered promptly and therefore know what they cost and cannot afford?

One of the worst things about the average person's account with nature is that she so seldom presents any bill to amount to anything before 30. The things one can do to oneself up to 30 without any effect (apparently) are a caution. Nature doesn't seem to be paying the slightest attention to us, a good night's sleep makes right the most terrible over drafts (again apparently). But in reality she is keeping all her accounts very strictly and after 30 she begins to present them.

Please Believe Me, I wish there were some way I could make the people under 30 who are reading this believe what I say. But I can't just hear them thinking, "That may be true for most people but it's different." Whereas the people over 30 who have received a bill or two, and who don't need to be told are warning their heads wisely and saying "That's so."

As queer a sight as has been viewed from the Boston Fish Pier in many a day was presented the morning the schooner "Avalon" was found there stripped of spars and rigging. Stranger even than her appearance was the tale of the adventures through which the vessel and her crew passed on the night of October 2nd.

Homeward bound and just off Sable Island at about 9 o'clock on the night of Wednesday, October 2, part of the crew was forward taking in the jumbo. A sudden squall of amazing violence struck the vessel, severing the foremast some thirty feet aloft. The broken stick hung head downward, and forth across the deck paking it with mighty strokes and demolishing the dories to the point where they were carried out into the night in the form of shapeless splinters.

Those who were forward had no means of knowing what was taking place about the foremast, while the remainder of the crew had but a hazy perception of what was taking place forward. It was not long before the upper section of the foremast crashed into the stump with a violence so great that it snapped off just below the deck.

For the next six hours the mainmast swayed perilously with the rolling of the vessel, and then the expected third crash came—the mainmast had parted some twenty feet from the deck.

Not until morning could the mass of wreckage be cleared away so that there was no danger of fouling the propeller. Then, with the trusty "O" pounding away below the water, the "Avalon" pointed her stem back to the home-ward course and plowed along merrily while the crew reflected on what might have been their fate if they had not had the engine to bring them in.—N. TEETH EXAMINED.

DR. LEHR, Dentist, 329 Water St. RECOGNITION.

The care of the teeth is now recognized as a necessity. In fact the hospitals all over the world examine the patients' teeth and where it is possible put them in good condition before attempting a surgical operation. Experience has shown that the patient has a better chance for recovery with a clean healthy mouth without it. This ought to convince the most skeptical that care of the teeth is imperative to health.

A Prismatic Sermon.

The Rev. William Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's Church, New York, preached a prismatic sermon to his fashionable congregation with the aid of multi-colored electric lights, which were played upon the worshippers during the course of his address.

"The pastor later explained that his idea was to synchronize the light hues with the mood of the congregation as he believed, he said, he could bring the recalcitrant mood of the parishioner into harmonious juxtaposition with the thoughts of the speaker by diffusing pink, blue, red, and amber rays through his church. It was an attempt, he continued, to blend applied science, psychology, and religion, and to lead men through their changing moods to incline their thoughts heavenwards."

To make caramel icing, add 2½ cups brown sugar to ¼ cup milk. Boil 13 minutes. When nearly done, add 3 tablespoons butter and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat until nearly cold and spread.

THE PEDDLER.

The peddler greets me at my door, and he has things to sell, some dope, to stain a kitchen floor, a patent dinner bell; but I can buy them at the store from J. A. U. G. U. S. T. U. S. N. S. N. The peddler has no interests here, he doesn't pay the freight; he doesn't chip in every year to keep the tax list straight; and so I say, "Please disappear," and shoo him from the gate. It may be he sells better junk than Snell does at the store; but if I spend with him a plunk, I'll never see him more, and if I find his goods are punk, 'twill be no use to roar. But if at J. Augustus Snell's I buy a quilting frame, and find it isn't wearing bells, its workmanship to blame, I seek that merchant where he dwells and climb upon his frame. And he'll produce another frame, or else refund the cash; he can't afford to win a fame for selling worthless trash; it's up to him to play the game or see his business smash. And J. Augustus nobly stacks when boosting schemes abound, and J. Augustus pays his tax without a doleful sound, and joins the boys who sprain their backs to make the wheels go round. The peddlers to our village trek and then they disappear, and little, little do they reck what problems we may fear; but J. Augustus is on seek all through the fatal year.

Battle of Austerlitz.

On Monday, December 2, 1805, the memorable battle of Austerlitz was fought between the French, under their emperor, Napoleon Bonaparte, and the Austrians in defence of their land. On November 11 the French army had entered Vienna, the capital of Austria, whose sovereign was thus compelled to agree to the humbling treaty of Presburgh. The French had been so successful that year that it might be regarded as the era of king-making; for Napoleon bestowed the crown of Naples, in Italy, upon his brother Joseph; that of Holland upon his brother Louis; and to Jerome, his youngest brother, was allotted the kingdom of Westphalia.

Civic Commission.

WEEKLY MEETING. The weekly meeting of the Civic Commission was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Morris presided. Councilors Vincombe, Collier, Pete, Hallett and Jackson were present. After the Minutes of previous meeting was confirmed the following business was transacted. A communication was read from the Prime Minister, Sir R. A. Squires, acknowledging receipt of resolution passed with respect to the Newfoundland Ritz Co., Ltd., pointing out that the government had no power to carry out the recommendations in this connection as the entire situation was governed by the Municipal Act, an amendment to which would be necessary. Communications were read from the Deputy Colonial Secretary (1) stating that authority had gone to the Finance Department for payment to the Council of amounts on hand for Fire Insurance Profits Tax; (2) acknowledging copy of list of Voters for the next ensuing Municipal election. Deputy Minister of Finance acknowledged receipt of cheque for the sum of $28,242.52, half year's interest on City debt. Squires and Curtis, Solicitors, informed the Board of their intention to fence property of Keating's Estate, St. John's, West, for which they are agents. This matter was referred to the City Engineer. Communications were read from Royal Stores, Ltd. and Hon. W. J. Ellis, in reference to notification sent them with regard to unfenced vacant land which will receive attention. Reid & McNeil Co. stated lights ordered for McNeil and Summer Streets would be installed immediately. J. R. Morgan asked attention be given to the junction of Freshwater and Merrymounting.

The matter was referred to the Engineer. Application of W. B. Kane to store a boat on public wharf for winter months was not granted. The following plans were passed subject to the approval of the Engineer. C. Parsons, Pleasant Street, provided he gives guarantee to pay proportion of cost, according to frontage for water and sewerage extension; A. Super to erect store Adelaide Street, B. J. Miller (bungalow) Hill of Chips, provided he conforms to the Municipal Act and erects the building of unflammable material, as the locality referred to is in the Fire Zone; Isaac Mercer, McKay Street, for addition to building, provided he gives guarantee to pay proportion of cost of water and sewerage according to frontage. An application was received from the enumerators in connection with the taking of list of electors, for an increase in the amount paid them by the Supervisor. On recommendation of Mr. Doyle, the request was granted. Tender of Bishop & Austin to install plumbing fixtures in the house of Thomas White and F. Moores was accepted—it being the lowest. Hon. F. J. Morris, K.C., stated he had duly revised the list of voters in connection with the forthcoming Municipal Election and that same had been forwarded the Colonial Secretary, as provided for under section 18 of the Municipal Act 1921. Application was read from Mr. J. J. Burnstein to erect out-house rear of premises New Gower Street. Proper plan of building must be submitted, before same will be considered. Report of Health Officer showed 5 cases of Diphtheria, one Scarlet Fever and one Typhoid. Reports of City Engineer, Plumbing Inspectors, etc. were read. Pay Rolls and Bills submitted were ordered paid, and after the granting of requisitions for the different departments, and the disposal of other routine matters—the meeting adjourned.

Eleven Fishermen Drowned. One of the most lamentable tragedies in the fishing industry for several years occurred Oct. 31st off Anglesea, N.J., eleven fishermen were drowned from two boats while removing poles after the close of the trapping season. A furious storm caught them a mile off the bar. The 20 h.p. 40 ft. launches were capsized and all hands lost. At this writing the bodies of John Lundy, of Anglesea, and Charles and Richard Stevenson, twins of Dennisville, N.J., have been washed ashore. The eight still missing are Capt. Charles Johnson, Capt. Gunny Johnson, Capt. A. Hanson, Harry Keen, John Johnson, George Nickless and M. Dahlstrom, all of Anglesea, and Pasquale Damiano.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette.

Nfld. Poultry Show.

DEPUTATION ENTERTAINED.
At the Poultry Show last evening a deputation from the Bell Island Poultry Association consisting of J. B. Gilliam, President, Dr. Carnochan, Mr. A. A. Hughes and Mr. N. Cohen were entertained at supper by the committee of the parent organization. The entertaining committee consisted of Messrs. A. J. Bayly, Judge Walter Field, Judge Stanley White, J. F. Calder and C. R. Williams. In the absence of President (L. Mesurier), Mr. Williams welcomed the delegation and extended the congratulations of the N.P.A. to the sister organization of Bell Island on the wonderful progress made during the two years of its existence. He especially congratulated Dr. Carnochan on his sponsorship in exhibiting his birds at the present show in the Armoury and winning a silver cup for White Plymouth Rocks against all competitors. He also expressed the thanks of the St. John's Association for the many courtesies extended to the city poultry men who visited Bell Island in connection with their show. President Gilliam replied and expressed his appreciation of the assistance the St. John's Association had rendered them in their organization on Bell Island by loaning them the poultry coops and fittings for their shows the past two years. Mr. A. J. Bayly also spoke and extended the congratulations of the Department of Agriculture on the wonderful progress Bell Island had made in its poultry in such short space of time. He wished them continued success. Judge Stanley White and Mr. A. A. Hughes also spoke. The supper ended with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." The attendance at the exhibition during the evening and night was not so great as in former years. Tea was served during the evening by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the C.I.B. which added to the pleasure of those present. Some additional prizes have been received and are as follows: A cheque from H. E. the Governor, cheque from W. K. Chancey, Grand Falls, set of caponising instruments presented by Mr. E. A. Payn, Secretary Board of Trade, and a substantial cheque from Mr. C. B. Archibald, Manager of Wabana of the British Empire Steel Corporation, to be awarded to the breeder whose eggs produced the birds that won the largest number of prizes in the Bell Island and St. John's Poultry Shows. The exhibition closes to-night when the distribution of prizes takes place.

Masonic Reciprocity.

At the St. Andrew's Installation in the Masonic Temple on Wednesday an interesting coincidence occurred. The St. Andrew's District Grand Master, Mr. R. G. Clark, has recently appointed the Rev. Clarence Moulton, as District Grand Chaplain under the Scottish jurisdiction. By the regulations now in force the District Grand officials install the Lodge officers of corresponding rank. The Chaplain of St. Andrew's Lodge is the Rev. Ernest Earp, Rector of St. Thomas's and the duty of installing him fell accordingly on his Curate, Mr. Moulton. A little later on, there being no Grand Organist present, the District Grand Master delegated the Lodge Chaplain to install Mr. Moulton as Lodge Organist. Rector and Curate thus reciprocated in one ceremony, and is all probability established a unique precedent in Masonic history. —Daily News.

Benefit Performance.

LARGELY ATTENDED.
The benefit performance of "Decca Dancers" by the B.L.S. players in aid of the Bellevue Orphanage drew another overflow audience to the Grand Opera House last evening despite the fact that it was the fourth presentation. It was indeed a very happy thought to remember the orphans and we compliment the performers on their kindly action. The show was thoroughly enjoyable, and all the artists, in the play as well as in the specialties, excelled their previous efforts. If this were possible, we hope to see in the very near future some such productions from this splendid aggregation of players. There will be no performance to-night, but by request there will be a matinee to-morrow afternoon at popular prices so as to give the children an opportunity of enjoying this splendid production.

Nurses' Association Meeting.

The Newfoundland Nurses' Association quarterly meeting held last night at Dr. Rendell was the speaker, talking as his subject "Salibolthia," he expressed many of the fallacies regarding consumption, entirely upsetting the many of the pre-conceived ideas held in relation to this dread disease.

Published by Authority.

His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to appoint Mr. Ernest C. Bayly, B.A., to be a member of the "Church of England Board of Education for the District of St. John's, in place of Rev. Edgar House, Ph.D., left the District. Colonial Secretary, Nov. 29th, 1921.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Miss Elsie Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Murphy, after spending six weeks or more visiting friends in the city, arrived home again by Saturday night's train.

Mr. M. Shears, of St. John's, went to Carbonear by the noon train of yesterday and returned to town again by the return, making a short business visit.

The heavy rain fall, which continued all day yesterday and for the greater part of the night, made the streets in very poor condition, and walking very difficult. It took away most of the snow, but left the roads quite slippery.

Mrs. A. Yetman, who has been running a Boarding House, formerly on Water Street, opposite the new market, has now removed down to the house originally occupied by Mrs. R. Hyde at Bennett's lane. Since Mrs. Hyde's removal this Boarding House has been renovated and is in first-class condition. Its location is a fine one and, no doubt, Mrs. Yetman will now be kept busier than ever.

Mr. Tobias LeDrew, of Cupids, who spent yesterday here on a business visit, left town again by the afternoon's train.

Mr. A. A. French, representing Messrs. Soper & Moore, is in town today.—COR.

Hr. Grace, Dec. 1, 1921.

M. J. O'Brien

shall for this evening's remarks call attention to all readers of the wretched condition of our streets, which could at least be made passable by having a few crossings swept where traffic is heavy. Should he be privileged to have a voice in civic affairs he will see if any solution to this problem can be made by appointing or detailing a few men whose duty it shall be to keep back the liquid mud and filth in those particular places. He would further suggest that much could be done in improving the Southside if some of the graves were taken away from the hillside opposite Morey's; this could be used with good results for repairing the streets, much better than the yellow clay that now makes Gower Street such a filthy mess, and it would also after removal enable the Southside Road at this particular point to be widened and have a proper sidewalk placed as requested by one of the residents, to another candidate, in his letter as published. As the city revenue is one of no small importance, in the bringing of many improvements so desired by many of our citizens, O'Brien does not wish to place any planks in his platform that would perhaps look "too rosy" or that would entail extra civic debt for interest of any loans that such would entail, but there are other sources of revenue that might be tapped, if such were brought to the notice of the board, when they are in session devising "ways and means" for to run the affairs of our municipality. However, it is not at present judicious to point out those sources that may yet be drawn upon, suffice it to say they will not, in the least, effect taxpayers. There are many other subjects of importance that could be used as planks by O'Brien, but he believes he has covered the most important ones. He desires the public, however, to feel assured that if they honor him, his strongest plank shall always be a ready ear to listen to their wants and to try and remedy any complaints they may make, and assures them he shall not suffer from any swelled head or false pride, that very often such positions cause those who hold them to indulge in, at the cost of the citizen's comfort. How then can you sensible, intelligent voters do otherwise when you are filling out your choice of Councilors, than say "must not forget to mark One Vote for O'Brien"—A.V.

LETTER ADDRESSES.—At St. Thomas's Church during the session of Lent, the Rector will deliver a series of addresses on Friday evenings, the subject being "Studies in the Psalms."

A Much-Travelled Prince

ROYALTY'S CRUISES COMPARED.

London, Nov. 30.—(By Canadian Press)—So much of the world has the Prince of Wales seen already and is seeing on his present tour of India and Japan that it is possible, despite the set-back to his travels owing to the four and a half years of war, that he may reach the great record of his father, who is easily the most-travelled of Sovereigns in this or any other age. A year after the armistice the Prince of Wales came to Canada and also visited the United States. Last year he toured Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania, and on the way out to the Antipodes and home again, he went through the Panama Canal, and made short stays at Hawaii, Fiji and in the West Indies. His journeys last year were to have included India, but the strain of travelling was too great, and so the visit to the East had to be postponed until this year. After four months in India, embracing a splendid series of entertainments at the hands of most of the Maharajahs, the Prince will sail on March 17th, next from Karachi for Japan, where preparations on a lavish scale have been planned for his reception. He will return to London next June.

Present King's Cruise.

King George V. on only fourteen years of age when he set out upon his travels and went around the world with his elder brother in His Majesty's Ship Bacchante. The two cruises of that vessel took the two Princes to the Mediterranean, the West Indies, South America, South Africa, Australia, Fiji, Yokohama, Hong Kong and Singapore. By Canada, three times to India and Ceylon, and twice to South Africa and Australia, while the only considerable parts of the British Empire that he had not seen were Uganda, British East Africa and Nigeria. Since his accession the King has been again to India and held the Coronation Durbar. His Majesty's last journey abroad was in the year before the war, when he attended the wedding of the Kaiser's only daughter at Berlin. King Edward VII. in addition to his frequent visits to the Continent made two notable journeys of wider radius—the first in 1860, when he visited the principal cities of Canada and the United States, and the second in 1875-1876, when he made his memorable progress through India. Queen Victoria, in the course of her long reign, had seen beyond the boundaries of Europe.

Home From Newfoundland.

L. Gower MacKay returned on Saturday from Newfoundland where he represented the Rotary Club of Sydney at the organization of a Rotary Club in St. John's. The Sydney Record of Nov. 24, talking to The Record, Mr. MacKay said that the St. John's club had got away to a fine start, with between 20 and 30 representative men of the city making up the charter membership and all enthusiastically interested in this expansion of the Rotary movement. The organization meeting was under the direction of R. Downing Paterson, of St. John's, N. B., district governor of Rotary. In addition to Mr. MacKay, Mr. Paterson had with him in St. John's C. Fred Bond and Harvey Smith, two members of the Rotary club at Halifax.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, Dec. 2. — A general pain remedy is a decided necessity in every household. One of the most potent remedies of this sort, and one with about the widest range of action, is Red Cross Oil. You can scarcely do better than have a bottle in the house. For pains, external or internal, for muscular or intestinal cramps, or as a quick remedy for colds and chills Red Cross Oil has no superior and few equals. Red Cross Oil is highly concentrated, and is moderate in price, being sold at 25 cents a bottle. We can strongly recommend Red Cross Oil. — A real cure for melancholia—Go and see FITZ, STARTZ and GASPZ at the Methodist College Hall Wednesday evening, Dec. 7, at 8 o'clock.—dec21

The Voters' List.

NEARLY 9000 IN ARREARS.

There are 9218 qualified voters in the city, according to the list which civic officials have been busily engaged in compiling during the past weeks. Of these, 1078 are women. So far, only about 5500 are fully paid up and eligible to vote in the forthcoming election. Most of the ineligible are in arrears. This applies to only a few women. A chance for the 3000 odd who are in arrears to pay up and so qualify themselves to vote at the election will be given. All who settle up their arrears between now and polling day, which is on the 15th of the month, will be provided with certificates qualifying them to register their votes. There are still a large number of people who have not paid their poll tax. The returning officials room is situated in the T. A. Hall, Duckworth Street, and not in the Pinder Building as was at first intended. A telephone connection has been fitted up and Mr. Doyle, the returning officer, or Mr. F. Grace, will be there from now until polling day, and will give any information which voters may require. The Council office still presents a busy scene as several people come in daily to pay their arrears. It is probably not generally known that the nominators and witnesses in connection with the nomination of candidates must be voters in good standing, and it is understood that any candidate nominated by anyone not in good standing may be disqualified. Nomination day is on Monday next, and there may be several more candidates in the field by then.

Ireland Leads in Chimes and Carillons.

BELFAST.—(By Canadian Press).—Ireland now possesses two of the finest modern carillons in the world: Two years ago a fine set of forty-two bells was placed in Queenstown Cathedral, and on Sunday, November 6, 1921, another set of bells was inaugurated in St. Patrick's (Roman Catholic) Cathedral at Armagh. The latter consists of thirty-nine bells with clavier—three octaves, chromatic E to E with two extra lower tones—D, and G. The total weight of the bells is eleven tons. The smallest bell weighs only twenty pounds. The carillon in the Cathedral at Armagh is placed in the north-west tower, which, with its spire, rises to a height of 210 feet. Thus the bells are placed in a satisfactory position acoustically. Another fine carillon of bells is to be set up at Loughborough, where a war memorial campanile is being built at a cost of £10,000. It will contain a set of forty-five bells with clavier, with a great bell weighing four tons.

Wireless

The Career of

ROBERT DONALD, LL.B. John O'Leary's Weekly. No modern invention is so much of the glamour as wireless telegraphy. It has captured the imagination of a majority of people it is something which they do not understand, and uncannily, unexpectedly. One of the leading exponents of this science which is bridging continents and rapidly making smaller is Dr. W. H. Eccles. He is one of the down authorities on wireless in this country. Mr. Eccles has not only himself shown the practical character of the invention, but has in some respects the rapid development of the marconian.

A LANCASHIRE MAN. Dr. Eccles is a Lancashire man. He is a constructional engineer of sixteen he began work with his father. After practical experience he went to the Royal College of Science with a view to training for a mechanical engineer. He broke away from the ordinary course and took up studies in his third year. He afterwards a demonstration in 1899 he had joined the Marconi establishment in England. He was the first wireless in the world, and was transmitting messages from Boulogne, to Dover.

MARCONI INSPIRED. With superb confidence in the future of his invention Marconi also started a constructional engineering firm. The young graduate of the Royal College of Science entered into an established sphere of responsibility with great zest. A new world was opening for the service of wireless. Dr. Eccles had great admiration for Marconi. "At that time," Dr. Eccles was an insatiable student. He had a laboratory and with the aid of his father's funds turned them to a practical science. In those days he was perfecting the coherer, reducing the high-frequency current into wireless. Marconi then was to communicate a distance of forty miles. Dr. Eccles had been a patient scientist and engineer, carried on at wireless. "Marconi was an insatiable student. Wireless Romance.

The Career of Dr. W. H. Eccles.

Modern invention is invested with so much of the glamour of romance or sits the imagination so close as wireless telegraphy. To the majority of people it is wizardry, something which they do not understand, uncanny, unexplainable, mysterious. One of the leading exponents of this science which is bridging seas and continents and rapidly making the world smaller is Dr. W. H. Eccles, chief adviser and consulting engineer in wireless for the British Government. He is one of the great wireless authorities on wireless—second only in this country to Mr. Marconi—and yet he is only forty-six years of age.

A VOLUNTARY WORKER.

Early in the war the War Office obtained Dr. Eccles's services at the Woolwich Signals Experimental Establishment—which was chiefly engaged on wireless work. On the death of Professor Silvanus Thompson, Dr. Eccles was appointed Professor of Applied Physics and Electrical Engineering at the London Technical College, Finsbury—a position which he still holds. During the war Dr. Eccles worked in the college laboratories for the Admiralty. In fact during the whole of the war he was a voluntary worker in the service of the State, and a member of the Admiralty Department of Research, giving attention, amongst other things to wireless. He was responsible for six useful inventions which he presented to the Government. When Lord Milner appointed the Imperial Wireless Telegraphy Committee, Dr. Eccles was selected as a member of it, and afterwards appointed to the Expert Commission which followed the Committee's recommendations.

PAINTSTAINING STUDY.

While Dr. Eccles held his professorship he was always a student himself. He travelled about the world, he inspected all important wireless installations. He was in demand as a consulting wireless engineer and an expert witness. He is the author of several standard books which are models of painstaking study and scientific exposition. As the reader will appreciate, Dr. Eccles had led a very full life. He has concentrated on study, science, work. He has been too busy to get married up to now. At any rate, he is a bachelor. He lives in London, in a flat in St. James's, and has a cottage at Southend. His recreations are riding and sailing. Dr. Eccles is not a dry-as-dust scientist. He is exceedingly pleasant and cheerful, and has a knack of explaining things with a happy smile or a touch of humour. Dr. Eccles occupies high positions in his own world. He is vice-president of the Institution of Electrical Engineers and chairman of the wireless section of the Institution. He is vice-president of the Institute of Physics and of the Physic Society of London. He is also one of the youngest Fellows of the Royal Society.

Dr. Eccles is now designing the stations for the Imperial Wireless Chain, and his early experience as a constructional engineer is proving of great value to him in connection with the erection of the high towers of wireless installations. Wireless telegraphy is an exceedingly difficult subject to explain in a popular way. It involves so many things. In order to understand wireless one should be a mathematician, a physicist, an electrical engineer, a chemist, metallurgist, with a knowledge of graphology, trigonometry, electrostatics, magnetism, geometry, hydrography, relativity; in fact it would be almost impossible to say what branch of industrial science is not of value to the wireless engineer.

THE EMPIRE CHAIN.

Dr. Eccles having to deal in the case of the Empire Chain with comparatively low-powered stations, for years intensifying them, so that in favourable conditions messages can be carried a far greater distance than the 2,000-mile stage. Wireless messages now encircle the globe, but can not always be read. Readers know that communication by wireless over vast distances is made possible by the sending of electric waves into space. You see at every wireless station high masts of wood or steel with antennae or an aerial attached. The carrying capacity of a station depends on the electric power used to discharge the waves at the sending end of an antenna, and also on the height of the aerial. The chief cause of the failure of messages to carry long distances is what is known as "atmospheric" local electric storms which the waves carrying their words in the Morse code are unable to pierce. To guard against these interruptions, which are more prevalent overland than over water and in tropical countries rather than in temperate zones, Dr. Eccles favours at this stage more stations with shorter effective range under all conditions, than higher-powered stations with much longer range only under favourable conditions.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

Wireless telephony is a more varied and fascinating subject than wireless telegraphy, but Dr. Eccles brings the cold, calculating mind of the practical engineer to bear on it and puts a limit to its application. When the actual sound is flashed through the atmosphere, instead of continuous waves with electric dots and dashes, it tempts the ether to such an extent that if the wireless telephony becomes general it would put wireless telegraphy out of action. Therefore until some development takes place its scope will be limited. There is perhaps no sphere of invention where there is more going on. Methods of transmission new only a few years ago are becoming old, new systems are tried with varying degrees of success, more and more ambitious schemes are launched. There are disappointments, set-backs, little successes, and glorious triumphs. The wireless engineer is conquering the world anew and annihilating space.

AN AFTERMATH OF THE WAR.

SALVING GOLD FROM ILL FATE. London, Nov. 30 (By Canadian Press)—Gold bullion to the value of £5,000,000 and £6,000,000 has been recovered from the sunken steamer Laurentic, off the Irish coast, and there is still as much more of the precious metal to be salvaged. The work of recovering the bullion has ceased for this year, but operations will be resumed next spring when it is expected that £2,000,000 or £3,000,000 worth of the ore which is still in the ship will be brought to the surface. The ill-fated White Star liner Laurentic, a ship of 14,000 tons, was well-known to Canadians. For some years she was in the merchant marine service between Liverpool and Montreal. She was commanded by the British Admiralty while the war was on, and was in the service of the Government as an armed cruiser. She was sunk by the Germans in January, 1917, off one of the west parts of the north coast of Ireland and has been at the bottom of the sea ever since. The Laurentic could not be lifted, but the gold she was carrying at the time of the disaster was too valuable to be left in "Davy Jones' locker," so expert divers were set to work to lift the gold. The Admiralty salvage tug Racer and her tender, the Canadian Drifter No. 1, left Portsmouth last spring for the scene of the wreck and returned recently to Portsmouth, where they will lie up for the winter and prepare for the resumption of the work of salvage next spring. Unfortunately more than gold treasure was sunk when the Laurentic went down—many lives being lost at the time. Of her crew of 476 officers and men only 121 were saved, among the survivors being her commander, Captain R. A. Norton, R.N. She was sunk in over twenty fathoms of water. More than three years' pounding by the Atlantic waves has transformed the big liner into a heap of twisted debris, and her decks which settled down on the sea bottom, cover an area of several hundred feet. The wreck was practically covered with gravel and silt when the divers located it as it is in a position in which it receives the full force of the Atlantic gales. This obstruction had to be pumped away as far as possible by powerful pumps placed in position by the divers, as the gold was at the bottom of the huge mass of wreckage. In consequence of this the Racer carried a re-compression chamber for the purpose of treating cases of illness which the divers might contract in the course of their hazardous task. The vessel engaged in salvaging the gold in the Laurentic is about all that remains of the splendid Admiralty Salvager Section which was brought into being during the war. With this exception the section came to an end with the completion of the wreck-raising operations on the Belgian coast. In the case of the Laurentic the rate paid is half-a-crown for every £100 worth of gold recovered, and this divided among all employed in the work is equal to about one half-penny percent per head.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

YELLOW PRESS IN ACTION. WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 2. (By Ben Deacon, Staff Correspondent Canadian Press.)—The Anglo-Japanese Alliance is being used by the Anti-British section of the United States Press, which is making every possible effort to sow seeds of discord within the Conference. The local Hearst papers last night included editorials, declaring that under the ratio proposed by the United States, "if English-Japanese alliance stands, that this alliance would have sixteen naval fighting units to ten for the United States." There are indications that this propaganda is looked upon with great disgust and disfavor by the vast majority of United States citizens here.

OPEN WAREFARE.

BELFAST, Dec. 2. An attack on the fall at London-derry, with the object of releasing the prisoners there was repulsed by police guards this morning. Two policemen were killed and several of the attackers wounded. The party was undetected until a patrol of policeman saw a rope ladder hanging over the wall, and gave the alarm. Investigation by the military guard found two constables who guard Stan Finlay, lying dead in the corridor, poisoned, drugged or strangled. A Republican rescue party had forced the doors of the cells, when guards surprised them. The military opened fire, Republicans replying with revolvers.

Brazilian Fish.

Samples of Brazilian cured fish received by the Monroes Export Co. were exhibited at the Board of Trade Rooms to-day. The fish was forwarded by Messrs. Mendes, Lima & Co. of Pernambuco. The senders writing to the Monroes Export Co. under date of October 24th, says: "By the captain of the Robert J. Dale, we forwarded you a sample of the native cured fish, of which large quantities are being poured into our city from the north via Para and Amazona, this constituting a serious menace for our cod-fish business. The native article is sold at a very cheap price, thus having a great advantage over the Newfoundland article, and demand for it grows daily. A great part of the population, who consume it, sacrificing quality to price. This is not to be wondered at, considering the high level of which the cost of living in this city has arrived."

Error in Air Stamp.

Have you a copy of the Halifax Air Mail stamp? If so, see if there is a full stop after the inscription. In thirteen out of the twenty-five stamps on each pane, the stop is missing. If this applies to every pane of 25 stamps, those without the stop will be less valuable than those which do not show the error. Newfoundland seems ever ready to oblige philatelists with varieties. All the many errors in last year's mischarges have not yet been unearthed.

Amy B. Silver Abandoned.

A message has been received in the city stating that the schooner Amy B. Silver has foundered in mid-ocean, and that the crew were safe having been taken off by a passing steamer. The Amy B. Silver was loaded at St. John's by Thos. Wakeley & Sons and sailed for Oporto on Nov. 2nd. The vessel was owned by Wakeley and Sons.

DIGBY'S FOOTER TEAM.

A photograph of the "Digby's" football team taken on St. George's Field when they played the city in October last, appeared in a recent issue of the "Liverpool Sporting Echo." The paper states that the "Digby's" team played in three countries, St. John's, Newfoundland, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and Boston, Mass. It suffered its only defeat from the St. John's team.

A prisoner at the Birmingham Sessions recently refused to plead, and a special jury was empanelled to decide whether he was mute of malice or by act of God. The jury returned a verdict "Mute of Malice," and a plea of Not Guilty was entered by the Recorder. The trial was then gone on with. He was lucky not to have been indicted a hundred and fifty years earlier, for in that case, had he refused to plead, he would probably have undergone the terrible "pelme horse" or "saw," a barbarous punishment which disgraced our penal code until 1774. This consisted in pegging down the prisoner to the stone floor of his dungeon and pressing him to death with heavy weights. The weights were added gradually so as to give the sufferer an opportunity of availing himself of an opportunity of avoiding further torture by consenting to plead. Some adopted this course, but there are many recorded instances of accused persons, submitting to be pressed to death rather than plead, their object being to preserve their estates from forfeiture on conviction as well as to save themselves from a "barbarous punishment which disgraced our penal code until 1774."

THE WORLD WANTS OIL!

To the uninitiated, the recent advance in crude oil may not mean much, but to interested parties it carries a world of meaning. Oil to-day is king of fuels. It has largely supplanted coal, and without it industry would be paralyzed. During the war every available pool was tapped and drained, causing a big surplus when the war finished. Production was then drastically curtailed, forcing low prices on many issues, but many reputable parties who saw a reversal of form when the over supply should become exhausted, warned us of a time to come when oil should be again supreme. The tide has turned, and to-day the word is "BUY THE GOOD OILS."

Japan's New Premier Once a Slave in U.S.A.

Japan's new Premier, Korekio Takahashi, was once a slave in the United States. Premier Takahashi was born in San Francisco twenty years ago, and was sold into slavery in the mines by a labor contractor. Prince Quakura, a Japanese envoy on his way to London, heard of his story and purchased him, giving him money to go to school. The future Premier made quick advancement, and after acquiring a thorough knowledge of English and some acquaintance with American business methods returned to Japan.

It is not often that I go down past Prescott Street when coming home, but I did to-day, and in STEELE'S Crockery window I saw Fancy Teapots for 75 cents that are well worth

Lord Robert Cecil

IS ONE OF NOTABLE FIGURES IN POLITICS OF THE EMPIRE.

One of the most interesting, and perhaps one of the most powerful, delegates to the Conference on the Limitation of Armament at Washington was Lord Robert Cecil, who represented South Africa. Lord Robert Cecil has been called the very soul of the League of Nations. Where he stands on the disarmament question is not in doubt. He would like to see every sword in the world beaten into a ploughshare or a pruning hook tomorrow. If that could be done safely, Lord Robert Cecil wants nothing for himself, nor does he want anything unfair for Britain. The anonymous writer of "The Mirrors of Downing Street" says that at the Paris Peace Conference Lord Robert kept the ideal of the League of Nations alive in an atmosphere that was charged with war, and prevented those conferences from being a "peace to end peace."

This writer has a great admiration for Lord Robert, and says that the great defect in his character, the only thing that keeps him from being the greatest political force in England today, is the lack of that quality with which he is most generally charged. Lord Robert is suspected of being a fanatic. He has every quality for the first rank and for the foremost passion or enthusiasm. It is a sense of humor, an engaging diffidence, a continual deviation toward a mild and gentle cynicism—the very antithesis of a fanatic temper—that keeps him from leadership. We are told that there is no more firmly fixed idea in the minds of the British people than that the conquering qualities of a great captain are courage and confidence. Lord Robert has given no sign of these qualities. "He appears upon the platform as a gentleman makes his entrance into a drawing room, not as a toreador leaps into the bull ring."

He expresses his opinions as a gentleman expresses opinions at a dinner table, and not as the all-house politician airs his dogmatism in the tabernacle. Naturally he could hardly compete for public favor with such a man as Lloyd George, who would employ vulgar methods from which Cecil would shrink.

Early in the war Lord Robert perceived clearly that what the nation wanted above all else was not a great political leader, but a great moral leader. He said once that under the public life of national life the British people were famishing for guidance. He numbered himself among those anxiously scanning the horizon for such a leader. In the view of the Gentleman With a Duster, he should have instead been answering the marticulate cry of the people for that leader. He had in himself the qualities needed, but here again diffidence prevented him from stepping forth and filling a role that no one in England was so well fitted to fill. Says the writer: "No good man of my acquaintance is more powerfully convinced of the goodness of British nature. He watches the British people with an abiding affection. He believes that they possess, even those of them who appear most degraded and sordid, the foundational virtues of Christian character—a love of justice, an instinct for kindness and a faith in truth."

More than one of his fine addresses has taken for its text the words of Edith Cavell—Patriotism is not enough. Her murder by the Germans moved him perhaps more than any single incident of the war. Pondering over it, he said that what most impressed him was, not that the Germans thought it no crime to shoot a woman, but that they should be wholly incapable of understanding why such an atrocious deed should shock the world. He realized in the war that the Allies were not fighting an enemy who could be shouted down, but one whose spirit and temper were quite different from those of the British people, and that this spirit must be understood before it could be conquered. As Minister of Blockade he performed services of greatest value. He kept Sweden neutral when the Russian Foreign Office was breathless with anxiety on this point. He showed in this department that he is no mere idealist, but a man with a strong, practical grasp of affairs, whose head may be in the clouds, but whose feet are on solid earth.

Making Up the Loss.

Whilst an errand boy was conveying a truckload of soda water syphons through the street, the wheel suddenly came off, with the result that every bottle was smashed.

The lad showed signs of much distress, and a crowd speedily congregated to ascertain the nature of the disaster.

After seeing what had happened, a benevolent old gentleman expressed his sympathy, and gave the lad a shilling, an example which was followed by other bystanders.

Enough money was eventually subscribed to replace the damaged goods. The boy proceeded to repair his barrow as best he could, and the spectators dispersed with the exception of one, more curious than the rest, who inquired if the lad knew who his kind benefactor was who started the collection.

"Know him? Rather! He's a cute 'un, he is. That's my boss!"

UNJUST TAXATION.

Taxation is the one great burden that every House-owner and Tenant is greatly concerned about. Many are continually at their wits end to know how to meet it. In fact, we are being bled white with taxation to-day, more particularly Unjust Taxation.

I have been approached by scores of voters the past fortnight concerning the new Assessment—the City's Form of Taxation. Properties are being rated at a time when values are temporarily inflated. This tax is being unjustly levied. I have heard of cases in which the taxes are about to be increased anywhere from 10 to 250%, others to remain as before. Why such discrimination? I have yet to learn of them being reduced; is it because Householders elect to keep their homes clean and bright and take delight in decorating the exterior, thereby beautifying their locality and the city in general, that they are a mark to be seized for more taxes? The system is rotten, rotten to the core.

We are politely told by the Civic authorities that such is the Law; therefore you will agree with me that the Law should be amended. I pledge myself that with your help, that is, the help of every House-owner and Tenant in the city, that I will move an amendment to it. Voters just think of it, wages and salaries being throttled down and city taxes soaring skywards. Are you going to stand for it. You have the means; show your disapproval by voting for Physical Development.

And its Bearing on Health and Strength.

By GEE.

YOU'RE NOT TOO OLD.

At birth every human being possesses a susceptibility for the development of muscular strength and symmetry of force of a certain degree. If allowed to grow up under perfect conditions—every muscle active—one will acquire this in all its perfection; but if a sedentary life is followed until past the growing age the attainable degree of muscular strength and beauty is not so great. However, any who have passed this age should not despair. The susceptibility for development—though not so great as before—lies there in abeyance, and the influence of rational training will still increase the strength, size and symmetry of every muscle. Many instances have been noted where such individuals have almost doubly increased their strength in a few months of active training. And remember one does not merely gain increased muscular tissue, but here comes with this physical elevation, a buoyancy of spirits, a mental exaltation, an exhilaration of renewed youth—these make the mind clearer, the world brighter and life really "worth the living."

The most glorious result of physical training is that it enables one to retain the vigor and energy of youth years beyond the usual time for showing age. Remember, you are as old as you look, feel and act, and if your muscles and joints are kept supple, your brain clear and spirits buoyant, you will always feel young.

MAY BE YOU HAVEN'T TIME.

"Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie that we ascribe to Heaven the fates sky,"—Ally's well. It would be just as well for some folk to say that they have no time to eat or to sleep. Health should be the first consideration of everyone, and the means of acquiring and maintaining it should always be at hand. How many of our brain workers, our business and professional men, have sacrificed health, strength and happiness by following this rule, "haven't time to take care of health" in exchange for this sacrifice, many, it is true, have accumulated wealth, but large fortunes are usually spent in vain endeavors to regain even a portion of their former physical vigor.

Stop right now, before it is too late—take time to acquire vigorous health, or else you may be forced to "take time" to attend your own funeral, brought about prematurely by ten to thirty years from lack of muscular activity and other violations of the laws of health.

To sacrifice health and strength for riches and fame, is as bad as tearing out the foundation of a house to decorate a front wall.

There is no real life without activity. Stop right now, before it is too late—take time to acquire vigorous health, or else you may be forced to "take time" to attend your own funeral, brought about prematurely by ten to thirty years from lack of muscular activity and other violations of the laws of health.

A Peep Into History.

(Historians tell us that one of the political parties in Ancient Rome was the Agrarian Party.) In Ancient Rome there lived a man who formed a farmers' party. I cannot recollect his name, we'll call him Ranius Smart; Prohibition was his game, he made it quite a hobby. For those who looked upon the wine, his club was blunt and knobby. He closed the Coliseum tight, the chariots got rusty. The gladiators all got fat, although they had been lusty; He fixed it so the Roman dames had new food passing through their throats, the slaves all put on clothes. (A hint they'd never done before, though he'd never heard of it.) Decline and Fall had come to Rome, it surely got the hook.

Origin of Finnan Haddie.

Fire which swept the quaint fishing village of Finndon, Scotland, consumed the fish houses storing the season's catch of Haddock. One of the buildings, a short distance from the other houses, was not directly reached by the fire, but was bathed in the smoke from the burning structures. To the surprise of all it was found that the smoke had given to this Haddock an unusually appealing flavor. Analyzing the situation, the degree of smoking and salting, and quality of the fish, led to classifying them and naming this new food after the town of Finndon. The name of the new food passed from mouth to mouth until finally what had been known as "Finnan Haddock" changed under the carelessness of constant usage, to the more rhythmic "Finnan Haddie."

The secret of the care necessary to properly prepare Finnan Haddie was withheld from the world for generations, and accounts for the fact that this deliciously prepared fish has retained the name of "Finnan Haddie." Finnan Haddie is now a food which thousands have learned to love—and to eat with consistency and regularity. Finnan Haddie has a flavor all its own—a flavor neither approached nor equalled by any other food.

In the Crevasse.

Dangling helplessly for hours over a bottomless pit of ice while his arms and legs gradually froze—that was the experience of John Lachlan Cope, surgeon and biologist to the Ross Sea party of the Shackleton Antarctic expedition. Dr. Cope, who was one of England's most experienced Antarctic explorers had been leading three men over a dangerous glacier and had failed to notice a narrow crevasse that was bridged with snow. Suddenly, says the Popular Science Monthly, from which we condense this account, he felt the snow give way and fell headlong through space. But twenty feet below the edge the sledge harness, which he had fastened round his chest and shoulders, caught and held him suspended. Fortunately his companions saw him fall and immediately made the sledge ropes fast. Cope looked downward until his senses disappeared from view, and he lay that darkness and illimitable depths. "Are you all right?" came a voice. "Yes, but I can't get up; I'm hung here." "Hang on then!" shouted the man above. "We'll make a rope ladder." With that he disappeared.

It grew colder and colder in the icy crevasse. Cope's mitts fell off and he watched them drop, striking the ice until they disappeared. His hands were soon numb, and his body half frozen. Now and then the roar of ice falling down some far distant crevasse broke the silence.

At last the ladder was finished, and the men lowered it. Since Cope's sense of touch was completely gone by that time, he had to watch his hands to see that they clutched the rope as he climbed. Swinging backward and forward over the pit, he gradually made his way toward the top. But just before he reached it his harness came off. If he slipped nothing would save him from being dashed to pieces. He was so numb and exhausted that he could not stretch his legs far enough to reach from one rung to the other.

He called up faintly to the men, and they lowered the harness until he was able to push his legs through it. Half sitting in it and feebly grasping the rope ladder, he was hauled the few remaining feet to the surface. He had been hanging over that apparently bottomless pit for three-and-a-half hours.

Herring Fishery.

At McIvors some boats hauled on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and secured from three to seven tubs per feet.

At Gillams on Friday there were from two to five tubs of herring per boat.

There was a sign of herring reported on Saturday in the Western Passage.

At Lark Hr. fishermen are only getting enough herring for bait.

At North Arm there was good herring fishing last week when boats could get on their gear.

On Monday there was good fishing at Middle Arm. The best fishing, however, was at Penguin and Goose Arms, and some boats had full loads.

In the Humber Arm the herring fishery the past week has been almost nil. One or two tubs were taken on Friday and Saturday off McCarthy's and Davis Cove.

Stormy weather last week interfered considerably with the herring fishery operations in Bay of Islands. During Wednesday, Thursday and Friday many of the fishermen were unable to haul the nets that had been set at exposed parts of the Bay, and on Saturday when they did get at their gear they found that many of their nets had fouled.

Murrins coming in from Middle Arm on Monday with a boat load of herring for Bagg Brothers, had their boat cut through with ice that made the previous night and barely reached Curling safely.—Western Star.

OF THE TRINITY ENTERPRISE.

The Christmas number of the Trinity Enterprise has just been received, and is, as usual, full of interesting and seasonable matter. There are several excellent short stories, interesting poems, and some very good articles.

There are also many illustrations including several views of the L.O.A. Soldiers and Sailors Monument at Trinity. Many photographs of Trinity war veterans are to be found in this number which is one, for the issuing of which, the publishers deserve credit.

Getting Ready for CHRISTMAS

Already this Store is donning its Christmas garb, getting ready for the rush of Christmas shopping; making displays, pushing forward new things—new arrivals in Xmas Wares, all for the one purpose, making this Store THE Store with the real Christmas Spirit. It's a pleasure to prove of immense helplessness this year because we have made greater efforts than usual to assemble a Christmas Stock so replete with the calls of the season as to make it almost unnecessary to go outside for anything in our line.

FOR PRACTICAL GIFT BUYERS

SUGGESTS as it were the most suitable of Gifts for the Festive Season, for, after all, Practical Gifts will top the list again this season. Growth will appreciate something practical, something serviceable, rather than the frivolous, and realizing this, we have put forward those very things—those needed items, that the season calls for, and, most important of all, have shorn their prices considerably, this making this Store—as it has always been regarded—a helpmeet when shopping presents difficulties. Watch our advertisements for this month, notice how strictly they adhere to the above principles and be prepared to do a liberal share of your Christmas Shopping at this Satisfying Centre.

The cheapest thing in town for 10 cents is the Deacon Dubbs matinee to-morrow. The youngsters will love the fun.

Love-Sick Boy Kills Parents.

After 24 hours of merciless grilling, Richard Chaplain, 22 years old and a veteran of the world war, broke down in his cell at Saginaw, Mich., and confessed to the murder of his father and mother so that he might inherit their $1000,000 estate and marry a 17-year-old school teacher, Clara Humpert, with whom he was desperately in love. Up to last week Chaplain had stubbornly stuck to his story that he woke up, finding the house ablaze, had leaped out of an upper-story window to save his own life. The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Chaplain, fully dressed, were found in their beds with their skulls fractured, three days ago. A blood-stained hammed was found in the pocket of young Chaplain's automobile and a bloody handkerchief was hidden in the tonneau.

"How did you kill them?" he was asked.

"I shot them," was his reply.

"Why?"

"I came home from Clara's house and quarrelled with my mother and father. They didn't want me to go with Clara. Objecting to her religion, I told them she was a nice girl, and I loved her. My folks told me to leave her alone. I went in the next room and got a revolver and shot them dead, and placed their bodies on the bed. Then I went to Saginaw and soon returned to the farm and fired the house to cover the crime."

10, 20 and 30 cents are the popular prices for the Deacon Dubbs matinee to-morrow. A few seats reserved at the Royal Stationary.

A Famous Court Official.

Sir Spencer Ponsonby-Fane, Gentleman Usher to the Sword of State to the King, and Bath King of Arms since 1904, died on Dec. 2, 1913, at his Somersetshire residence, at the age of 81. He was at one time private secretary to Lord Palmerston at the Foreign Office, and became Controller in the Lord Chamberlain's department in 1857, which post he held for over forty-five years. His knowledge of Court ceremonies was unrivalled, and he was invaluable for reference in cases of doubt or difficulty, long after his direct official connection had ceased. His active tact and gentleness carried him over many a rough obstacle, but his fondness for the "soft answer that turneth away wrath" never led him to countenance the slightest departure from the strictest discipline and correctness in the matters for which he was responsible. His faculty for remembering names, dates and the minutest details of distant events was extraordinary, and if ever he found his memory slipping he experienced great vexation.

Safety First.

A suspicious individual entered a barber's shop, and while being shaved casually remarked: "I suppose a good many of your customers forget to pay?"

"No, sir," the barber replied. "There was a time when I used to give credit, but I never do now; in fact, nobody asks for it."

"How's that?"

"Well, you see," said the barber, trying the edge of the razor on his thumb-nail, "whenever I shaved a gentleman who asked me to mark it up, I put a kick in his nose with my razor, and kept tally that way. They very soon didn't want to run up bills."

There was a tremor in the customer's voice as he asked, "between the barber: "Do you object to being paid in advance?"
