Lord Somerton's Ally.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Stretton went through the servant's quarters, where he encountered the butler, a pompous man, with a double allowance of dignity and a shining bald head. The butler was a privileged member of the Blairwood household, and in a weak moment he had descended to notice the charms of Annette Moffatt. To his surprise and disgust his familiarity was resented. At first the idea was preposterous to the mind of Mr. John Kemp, the butler of Blairwood Park. How could a mere lady's maid fall to appreciate this importance and dignity?

He was a large, portly man, and had every confidence in his good looks. Despite the fact that he was fifty years of age, he had been most careful of his person, and in the eyes of the under servants was a modern Croesus. He looked them small even when they were short, at an exorbitant rate of interest. It was even whispered that John Kemp assisted the tradesmen of Blairwood financially, but exacted his pound of flesh in innumerable cruel ways.

From condescending to patronize pretty Annette Moffatt, the dignified butler one day dropped upon his knees at her feet and declared that he loved her.

Though fully aware of her beauty, Annette was not a Coquette, and the conduct of the amorous Mr. Kemp was the reverse of pleasing.

Unfortunately the ludicrous aspect of this avowal presented itself to the maid, and as Annette laughed, the butler hastily scrambled to his feet.

"Do you scoff at my love?" he demanded, angrily. "Oh, Miss Moffatt, I assure you that it is not a thing to be despised. Look at my position in life. I have money in the three per cent. government securities, four shares in a gas works, two sum out on mortgage."

"Mr. Kemp," she said, disdainfully, "I am not so sensible of the honor you have done me as you appear to imagine. I have no ambition to marry a man who I am quite sure is much older than my father!"

"You have grossly insulted me, Miss Moffatt," he said, sternly, "but even now I am disposed to think that you are merely jesting with me."

"Then disabuse your mind of any doubt upon the question," rejoined Annette, quickly and contemptuously. "Your self-conceit is so excessive I suppose that you think it impossible for any girl not to fall an easy prey to your grandfatherly charms?"

Five minutes before he had adored her; now he hated her!

"Thank you, Miss Moffatt," he replied, politely, but with a bitter smile on his face. "I shall not forget your flattering words, and will some day repay them with interest."

He went away with slow and stately steps, and Miss Moffatt could not help feeling a cold shudder run through the folds of her being. After that, however, the butler never referred to the matter again, and always treated his mistress's maid with studied respect.

That was six months before Sir John's departure for India, and in the meantime, William Stretton, the young gamekeeper, and Annette had fallen in love with each other.

As the happy young gamekeeper passed through the servant's hall, after his interview with Miss Sterne, the outcome of which had marked so important an epoch in his life, he encountered the butler, who regarded him with curiosity, for the gamekeeper's visit to the library had not passed unnoticed.

"Good-morning, Stretton," Mr. Kemp said, pompously.

The gamekeeper nodded, and would have passed on had not Kemp seized him by the arm.

"How is it that we are in such high favor with the young mistress of the house?" he asked, affecting to be pleasant. "Come, now, there is no reason that we should be bad friends, Stretton. I know that Miss Moffatt has told you that I once aspired to put a ring on the third finger of her left hand, and call her Mrs. Kemp, but she wouldn't let me, so that's all over and done with."

Stretton eyed Mr. Kemp's smiling, oily face steadfastly for a moment, then he held out his hand, saying: "Yes, Miss Moffatt told me about it long ago, and some way I have felt that you are not a friend of mine. If I have been mistaken I am sorry."

"Mere prejudice," the butler assured him, in his blandest manner. "I have spoken well of you many times to Sir John, and I believe that I can yet prove to you that I would like to do you a good turn. The past is dead, and I wish to be your friend and Miss Moffatt's friend."

"Thank you," said Stretton. "I am glad to hear you say this."

He was a frank-hearted young fellow, and did not for one moment doubt Kemp's word.

"Now, confess," continued the butler, with an indulgent smile. "Confess that you have been currying favor with the young mistress. I can tell by your blushes, man, that I am not far wrong."

He had kept pace with the young gamekeeper until they were standing in the rear of the house, well screened from the windows by a luxuriant growth of lilac bushes.

"I have certainly fallen into luck's way," Mr. Kemp Stretton replied, smilingly, "and all that I can tell you will be no news to anybody in a day or two."

The butler's smile did not relax, and he pressed the young man's shoulder encouragingly.

"I am to be promoted to the post of head keeper," he said. "That means an increase in my wages and a cottage to myself on the estate."

Mr. Kemp started, and he had to

EXCRUCIATING PAINS, CRAMPS

Entirely Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ebets, Ont.—"I started with cramps and bearing-down pains at the age of eleven years, and I would get so nervous I could hardly stay in bed, and I had such pains that I would scream, and my mother would call the doctor to give me something to take. At eighteen I married, and I have four healthy children, but I still have pains in my right side. I am a farmer's wife with more work than I am able to do. I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel that it is helping me every day. My sister-in-law, who has been taking your medicine for some time and uses your Sanative Wash, told me about it and I recommend it now, as I have received great relief from it."—Mrs. NELSON YOTT, R. R. 1, Ebets, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for ailments common to women. It has been used for such troubles for nearly fifty years, and thousands of women have found relief as did Mrs. Yott, by taking this splendid medicine.

If you are suffering from irregularity, painful times, nervousness, headache, backache or melancholia, you should at once begin to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is excellent to strengthen the system and help to perform its functions with ease and regularity.

turn away his head to hide the gleam of envy and rage that flashed into his usually expressionless eyes.

"Lucky fellow!" he exclaimed. "Really, I cannot understand it. So Jones is retiring, eh? But there is a much older man between you. Why this favoritism on the part of Miss Sterne? I shall have the page boy jumping into my place. Ha! ha! No, I did not mean that, Stretton. Now I suppose that there will be an early wedding, eh?"

"That is not settled," the gamekeeper replied. "I have the next to prepare and rehearsal first."

"Now, if I may be so rude, Stretton," Kemp went on, as he pompously expanded his broad chest, "how much cash have you to start your house with?"

"Thirty pounds," blushed the gamekeeper, "or thereabouts."

The butler glanced at him pityingly, as he ejaculated:

"Preposterous! Simply preposterous! You cannot furnish under a couple of hundred, Stretton, take my word for it."

The gamekeeper smiled wistfully. "I am not so ambitious as that," he said. "It would be the greatest pleasure in my life to give my wife pretty things; but—"

Afraid to be "Shut In"

Many People Are Victims to This Fear. It Can Be Overcome.

(By Leonora Eyles.)
I suppose there is not a thinking human being on earth who has not, at some time or other, experienced deadly fear. I do not mean the natural fear we all felt when air raids were happening, such fear is natural self-protection. It is the unreasonable fears that are so horrible and so difficult to combat.

Some people are afraid of insanity, shadowy things; others are afraid of circumstances and their power of coping with them; both these classes of fear really spring from self-distrust.

One of the commonest fears is that of being shut in, buried alive. A friend of mine had this fear so badly that he simply could not face a railway journey for fear of going through a tunnel; and a Tube journey was quite out of the question. On one occasion when he forced himself to take a Tube journey and so try to master his terror, he was a nervous wreck for weeks.

It was no use telling him that thousands of safe journeys by Tube were made every day, that millions of people went to bed at night without the ceiling tumbling down and suffocating them. He knew that without being told, of course, but he did not know it in his emotions, only his reason was convinced.

He had always had this fear, and at school it had been made worse because the other boys found it out and gazed him about it, piling bolsters upon him, sitting on his chest in a good-humored attempt to "laugh him out of it."

He got thoroughly morbid on the subject. Yet at the seaside last year I saw his kiddie burying him in sand, sitting on his chest, almost smothering him with their demonstrations of affection. All the old fear has disappeared.

How was it done?
He told his doctor all the long tale of his fears and some of his dreams which were so terrifying that they wakened him at night. It was found, by delving deeply into his mind that once, while he was a baby, the bed-clothes had got over his face, almost suffocating him, until his frantic cries brought his mother on the scene.

This memory, which had lain asleep in his mind all his life, was so painful that he could not recall it by his own will; in fact, his will very carefully kept it hidden as the will does hide in the background of our minds the things that torture. It was only when hypnotized by his doctor and unconscious, that the man brought to light the experience.

A Friend Can Help.
There is only one thing to do in order to get rid of such an obsession: Go to a mental specialist if possible. If you do not want to go to a doctor, find some friend—some wise, common-sense friend—who will listen to you without trying to "laugh you out of it," and tell him all about it.

Another way, often very effective, is to shut yourself up occasionally and write down one of these experiences of fear. Don't try to think, but just let your pen run on. You will be astonished to find that you are bringing to mind things you had forgotten years ago.

The astonishing thing is that you will know when to stop! Going back over these painful memories is a distressing business, but one day you will find that you have reached the end of the journey. "Why, of course! That's why I'm frightened of being shut in!" you will say as you take up that long-ago terror. The effect is almost instantaneous. A fear disappears once it is understood, and the man who was a wreck one day is a normal, safe being the next.

At a dinner in London given to American military men, at which Mr. Ridge was present, General Biddle replying to a toast, told no fewer than six stories—mostly chestnuts.

"General," said an American sitting next to the author, "I liked that last story of yours." The General was pleased, "I always have liked it. I recollect, when I first heard that yarn, I laughed so much that I nearly kicked my cradle all to pieces!"

Gold Completely Cured With Two Bottles

Most colds are the result of a weakened condition of the system. Nothing will undermine your health so quickly as a cold. More consumption results from neglected colds than any other source. When you notice a cold developing build up your system. The most effective way to do this is to take a course of Carmel.

Harry Heller, of Regina, cured a cold of two months' standing by taking Carmel. Read what he says:

"After having used two bottles of your Carmel, I find that it has completely removed my cold from which I have suffered since the first week of December last. All other remedies have been failures and I strongly recommend to others who have been suffering from a similar ailment to try a bottle of your Carmel and I am sure they will not regret such a purchase."—Harry Heller, 2126 Broad St., Regina, Sask.

Mr. Heller suggests trying a bottle, but to get the full benefit of this wonderful preparation, you should take a course of Carmel. Carmel is sold by all good druggists everywhere.

FOR over twenty years the Carnation label has been a sure guide to purity, safety, and convenience in milk. Carnation is simply the richest and best milk with about 60% of the natural water content removed by evaporation, sealed in the container and sterilized.

Carnation is rich enough to take the place of cream in tea, coffee, etc. By adding a little more than an equal part of water you get "whole" milk of natural consistency. Order several tall (16 oz.) cans or a case of 48 cans from your grocer.

Government Annuities is Popular Investment

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 19.—Increasing interest throughout Canada in the Dominion Government annuities is indicated by a large increase in applications for this form of investment made during the last six months, to the Dominion Annuities Branch of the Department of Labor. During the first six months of the present fiscal year, which starts on April 1, the amount of money invested has been over $125,000, which is an increase of $125,000 in excess of the value of the annuities issued in the same period last year.

The Act establishing government annuities was passed in 1908, but in the first few years of operation the business done was not extensive. In the past 10 years, however, it has grown steadily. Various plans of annuities are operated.

The most popular, judging by the number of applications received, is that stated at the branch, in that which gives a life income to the annuitant for the payment of a stated capital sum. He or she will be paid a sum for life equivalent to or beyond the age of 55 years to about eight per cent. of the amount invested. The rate of interest increases according to the length of the period of survival until at the age of 75 the rate is nearly 27 per cent. The next most popular plan is the deferred annuity system, which is the

"Please Take My House" Contributory Negligence

WHEN GENEROSITY IS CARRIED TO EXTREMES.
In response to the most casually spoken word a Spanish gentleman will offer his guest everything he possesses in the world—but he doesn't mean the offer to be accepted!

In Spain, in fact, it is the accepted routine of polite conversation to make offers which it is equally right to refuse (says Mr. Arthur Koyser in "Trifles and Travels").

Once, while calling on a gentleman on business, a stranger I admired his house. He rang the bell and gave an order. Presently the servant appeared with a large key on a silver chain he handed to me. This was the key "of my house."

For such an embarrassing situation there is also an accepted procedure, to hand it back with an assurance that "it is already in very good hands."

A story of similar nature is told of a certain princess who, while staying in Granada, in Spain, was visited by the Governor of the Province.

As he departed in a fine motor-car, the princess admired it.

Of course, his Excellency said at once: "Please take her Highness that it is absolutely at her disposal." This was duly interpreted to the princess, who, not knowing of this custom of politeness, replied: "Please thank him and say I will have it at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning."

Thereafter, next day at that hour the princess and the author went for a "joy-ride," though the author hardly enjoyed it. He was wondering all the time what his Excellency thought about it!

BERLIN, Oct. 24. The attempt to establish a Rhenish Republic has failed, according to the newspapers, whose despatches report that the separatists are having to be repelled, or voluntarily withdrawn from almost all the towns over which their flag has been hoisted. The movement is attributed to bitter opposition on the part of the populace and the loyalty of both the army and workers.

A REPARATIONS CRISIS.

PARIS, Oct. 24. Germany's formal application for a hearing before the Reparations Commission on the subject of her capacity to pay is considered in authoritative circles as having brought the Reparation problem to a new stage. The German request was contained in a note presented to the commission this afternoon. It is expected it will bring up an issue between French delegates on one side, and British, Belgian and Italian representatives on the other, the three being in favor of hearing the Germans.

WILD, CREWED SCHOONER ON FIRE.

HIGHLANDS, N.J., Oct. 24. The British tank steamer San Manu, bound for New York, reported wireless to-day that the Nova Scotia schooner William S. Macdonald, on the sixteen miles east of Ambrose lightship and that the vessel had been taken off by the San Manu. The William S. Macdonald, a three masted, built at Deyersburg, 1920, and owned by Capt. Joseph Connor, Fraser Gray and Capt. E. Backman of La Have. Her skipper was Capt. Maurice Randall of La Have and Capt. Coats of Annapolis. She was carrying a cargo of coal, and was supercargoed by Hugh Hynes, mate; John R. Haines, cook; and Billy, Charles Skinner, and

James Keeping, all of Newfoundland, comprise the crew. The schooner was in La Have on October 3rd for supplies, her papers showing her bound from Cuba to Nassau, with five thousand cases pure alcohol, valued at eighty thousand dollars. The vessel was under charter and ten thousand dollars insurance is carried by the owners on the hull.

SAILORS REPORTED IN SAFETY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. Radio messages from the tanker San Manuel to the Anglo American Petroleum Company state that the vessel had rescued six members of the crew of the Canadian schooner William Macdonald, which was stricken sixteen miles east of Sandy Hook. Some marine observers believe the Macdonald is the same vessel reported in distress off Moriches, Long Island, yesterday.

WESTMORELAND MISSING.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. Wireless stations in New York and vicinity, joined with stations along the coast in frantic efforts to learn the location of the British steamer Westmoreland which sent out S.O.S. calls last night, but her fate remained a mystery this morning. An unidentified schooner, flying distress signals, thirty miles off Fire Island last night, was reported this morning at Moriches, Long Island, where she was being pounded by mountainous seas and heavy gales, and was later reported to have run out to sea.

THE STORM IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. Half a dozen ships were unable to beat their way into quarantine during the night. Those aboard the American lightship reported that several vessels, including inbound liners with passengers aboard, had been compelled to return seaward and ride out the storm beyond sight of land. Several vessels were badly damaged and ten ships that crept up the Bay to-day bore outward signs of their struggle with the elements. Wind and rain swept New York and environs throughout the night blowing fifty miles an hour. At Atlantic City the coast line was swept by a gale that attained the record breaking velocity of eighty-two miles.

Pursuing for an investigation of the Labrador Gold Fields Limited, now in liquidation, Warwick Smith, of St. John's, Newfoundland, has sent a copy of a letter written by himself which appeared in the St. John's Daily Mail. Mr. Smith takes exception to the statements made, particularly by J. Lambert Payne, Vice-President and Manager of the Company, now in liquidation.

THIS STATEMENT, which was published in the same paper, reads: "I have but one consolation. In all our advertising we presented the proposition as an absolute gamble. No one could have been misled into the belief that they were taking up a sure thing."

Mr. Smith says Mr. Lambert could not have read all of the advertising issued by the company, and make such a statement. He quotes various paragraphs from the literature issued by the company, which make quite definite statements as to the presence of gold in quantities in the Labrador district.

He also points out that Labrador Gold Fields, Limited, controlled 104,000 leases which they offered for sale at $1,000, with $200 cash, the rest to be paid out of "earnings of the mine."

In other words, he says, the company might have received, at $200 per lease, more than $20,000,000 before a single person could have reached St. John's. These leases, Mr. Smith says, were rented from the Newfoundland Government at three-quarters of a cent each.

In concluding, Mr. Smith says: "I have no financial interest to serve in this matter. I had no claims nor share in any claim. I write simply as a private citizen, though I was at St. John's in an official capacity. If I had the money I would investigate the matter myself and expose and prosecute those who perpetrated the greatest hoax of modern times. I think it is up to the directors of the Labrador Gold Fields, Limited, and Mr. J. Lambert Payne, in particular, to do this, and to prove to the world that they were hoaxed, and who did the hoaxing. The Newfoundland chief of police has a list of all who visited St. John's this year, and amongst the visitors it will not be difficult to find witnesses whose evidence might be worth hearing."

What Europe
Owes to Mussolini

SPREAD OF BOLSHIEVISM STOPPED.

WESTERN CIVILISATION SAVED.

The following article is reprinted from the "Sunday Pictorial":—

(By LORD ROTHERMERE.)

The crisis brought about by the massacre of Italian officers on the Greek frontier has made it unshapely clear that the achievements of Signor Benito Mussolini, the Italian Prime Minister, are still very imperfectly understood in Great Britain.

If the British public had more clearly appreciated the remarkable man who is now in supreme authority in Italy, the regrettable mistakes made by our Foreign Office in London, and by Lord Robert Cecil at Geneva, after the occupation of Corfu, would not have been tolerated for an hour.

I hold no brief for Signor Mussolini, and have never met him, but I have a profound admiration for his work, and I believe that in saving Italy he has stopped the furor of Bolshevism which would have left Europe in ruins.

I have found in our country the vaguest and most inaccurate notions of the work of Signor Mussolini. We are accustomed to think of France as a Great Power, but we have not yet got it into our heads that Italy is a Great Power also. If she has any shortcomings and weaknesses, Mussolini will probably rectify them.

We ought to regard his efforts with sympathy and understanding, instead of encouraging our politicians and our war-mongering newspapers to embitter the relations between the Italians and ourselves.

Mussolini himself was originally a Socialist, and in his youth he was banished to Switzerland, because of his revolutionary tendencies. Perhaps he has Socialist leanings now, but he is eager to build up a stable and efficient State upon fair and just practical lines.

Mussolini played his part manfully in the Great War. From the outset he ardently espoused the Allied cause. He scoffed at the idea of Italian neutrality.

It is difficult for us to conceive the political degradation into which Italy sank after the war was over.

Communism and Bolshevism made alarming headway among the population of Italy, especially in the northern provinces. Immortal Rome was hardly touched at all, but city after city in the north passed into the hands of the Reds. This was the time when great industrial enterprises, such as the Fiat Company's motor works, were seized by the workpeople, who tried to run them on Soviet principles.

These were comparatively minor troubles. What was far more serious was that the Reds made it impossible for anyone to wear military uniform. They had seized many of the great centres of population, and officers and men of the Regular Army had to hide their uniforms and their decorations in order to preserve their lives. The Red poison spread to rural areas, and land was seized and left uncultivated.

It is now known that the Bolshevist movement in Italy was inspired from Russia, was organised by Russian emissaries, and was kept in motion by Russian money. The Moscow conspirators, whose object was the overthrow of Western civilisation, swept with a wide net. They spent much money in England, and they are still spending money here to-day. They made great headway in Germany, especially in Berlin. They seized Budapest under the direction of a convicted thief. But it was upon Italy that they counted most, and when Mussolini struck against them in Italy he was fighting a battle for all Europe.

To me the most marvellous thing about the Fascist movement in Italy is that until the culminating stages it was always run by small handfuls of determined men. Mussolini knew that such movements, if they are to be successful, must be handled by limited numbers of people.

For two years Mussolini fought Bolshevism in Italy with small groups. At a time when the town of Ancona was held by 10,000 Reds, one of his lieutenants took it with 32 men. It is not my purpose to tell again in detail the story of his activities, but in the end he was invited to Rome by the King himself, and he formed a Government because no other Government was possible.

I have said that it is difficult for an Englishman to write without reserve of the condition of Italy until Mussolini took control; but I hope it is permissible to say that the feebleness of the various Italian Governments in the years after the war seems to us Northerners wholly deplorable. They let the Reds have their own way everywhere, and if Mussolini had not taken action Italy would have been completely Bolshevist to-day.

This young, vigorous, ardent Italian did more than save Italy. In my judgment he saved the whole Eastern world. It was because Mussolini overthrew Bolshevism in Italy that it collapsed in Hungary and ceased to gain adherents in Bavaria and Prussia. There was one man in Western Europe who knew his own mind, knew what to do, and did it. That man was Mussolini, the blacksmith's son, the man with a much cooler and saner head than his critics give him credit for.

In foreign affairs he has never been provocative, but has always worked for the preservation of peace and for the amicable adjustment of international difficulties. In domestic matters he instantly inaugurated steps very dear to my own heart, for he started in Italy what I may describe as the equivalent of the Anti-Waste movement in Britain, with which I had much to do.

Mussolini saw, as our successive Governments have never seemed to see, that only by the most drastic measures can the squandering departments be forced to reduce their expenditure. He instituted a system of rationing their outlay, and I think there can be no doubt that in time he will get the national finances of Italy upon a sound basis. Among his many admirable attributes he has great financial ability.

The prime minister of Italy is unquestionably a man to be reckoned with. The idea that he is a blustering, flag-waving agitator is foolishly wrong. All who have met him privately in official conversations are deeply impressed by his caution, his skill, and his gentleness in discussion.

What possessed our Foreign Office and Lord Robert Cecil to pick a quarrel with this most robust and statesmanlike individual passes my comprehension. Nor can I understand why our Government newspapers should have suddenly united in starting a campaign of vilification of the Italian Prime Minister.

I can well conjecture why Mr. J. H. Thomas and Mr. Clynes and the other leaders of the Labour Party have no good word for Mussolini. Our Labour members take eccentric views of foreign affairs, and they have been filled with the delusion that the Italian Government is anti-Labour, which is by no means the case.

But why should our Labour Party be so ready to quarrel with Italy? Have we so many customers for our products that any of our political parties can afford to talk nonsense about an "economic boycott" of one of the greatest Powers in Europe? Last year Italy bought from us goods to the value of £45,000,000. We only took Italian produce to the value of £17,000,000 in exchange. The balance of trade with Italy is enormously in our favour.

We may hope that the trouble between Italy and Greece is now over, but the folly of our Ministers and of some of our newspapers has left a bad effect which it will take a long time to undo. At a period when it is essential to preserve the solidarity of Western Europe they have followed up their continuous attacks upon France by a deliberate attempt upon France by a deliberate attempt to cause an estrangement with Italy.

I move a good deal about the Continent, and perhaps have better opportunities than home-staying people of judging the mischievous results of our quarrelsome foreign policy. We have treated Italy very unwisely since the Armistice. We have belittled her great sacrifices during the war, and we irritated her most grievously by backing the Greeks in Asia Minor.

We have now crowded our official blunders by conveying to the world the idea that we regard Signor Mussolini as a noisy and reckless adventurer. Any British statesman who cherishes such a conception of the Italian Prime Minister is not fit to hold in these changing times. Signor Mussolini stands for all Italy to-day.

All my efforts in these contentious matters are directed towards the maintenance of close and cordial relations between Britain, France, and Italy, because I am convinced that unless these three nations remain united in their friendship and in their political purposes Europe may not long survive the menaces now threatening its existence.

The Baldwin Government seem to be doing their utmost to destroy every remaining safeguard. Do they know where they are drifting? I do not think so.

To Electrify
Swiss Railroads

GENEVA, Oct. 24 (A.P.)—A new water power plant is being constructed in the Alps at an altitude of 6,233 feet near Martigny, Canton of Valais, for the purpose of supplying electric energy to the Swiss federal railways.

A dam is being built across the Barbinne outside, whose waters flow into the River Rhone, to form an artificial lake of 40,000,000 cubic metres. The cost of the dam will be 20,000,000 Swiss francs, but with the electric installation the amount will be run over 60,000,000 francs. A total energy of 80,000 horsepower will be supplied.

The work will be finished in 1926. It goes forward slowly, for at this high altitude the cold and the snow permit of only 100 working days a year.

BIG THINGS WITH LITTLE BEGINNINGS.

Every electric light in the world, from the small pocket torch to huge advertising signs, owes its existence to a little ring about six inches in diameter.

This ring, which is in the Royal Institution Museum in London, is that from which Faraday, the great inventor, obtained the first induction spark, thus making a discovery which is the basis of our modern electric lighting system.

In the same museum is another instrument from which great results have sprung. This is Faraday's hand-pump used in his experiments in turning gas into liquid. To-day we accomplish the same feat with the aid of two large engines working compressors.

Origin of the Derry Lamp.

Equally interesting is the model from which Sir Humphry Davy constructed the famous lamp bearing his name. Everyone has heard of the Davy safety lamp, used in coal mines because it will not cause explosions of fire-damp, and so on.

This lamp was so important in the mining industry that colliery owners of Newcastle gave its inventor a silver dinner service as a recognition of his great work.

The Royal Institution was founded by Count Rumford, himself an inventor. A hundred and twenty years ago he made the first fire grate. This grate is in the museum, and it takes the attendants there a good two hours a day to keep fire in it burning properly!

Have you noticed the specks of dust which show when the sun shines in through your window?

These specks or motes ARE DISEASE BEARERS, many of them are living germs, which come from the cess pools and drains.

IF THERE ARE SO MANY IN YOUR HOME, HOW MANY ARE THERE IN A BUSY, MUCH FREQUENTED SHOP?

These motes get into open sugar barrels, but they cannot get into a package of LANTIC SUGAR.

Consequently LANTIC SUGAR in full weight packages is CLEAN and free from disease bearing dust.

This is why people who are particular prefer to buy LANTIC SUGAR in dustproof, flyproof, full weight packages.

LANTIC SUGAR in packages costs only ONE HALF CENT per pound more than sugar out of a barrel.

The extra cost for 12 months may amount to 2 or 3 dollars, but what does a week's illness cost?

LANTIC SUGAR is sold in the better class shops in 2 pound packages for 23 cents and in 5 pound packages for 57 cents.

TWO RECORDS GO AT MCGILL TRACK MEET.

Montreal, Oct. 17th.—Yesterday saw two college records go by the board when the Faculty of Medicine won the annual Inter-Faculty Track Meet of McGill. The first of these was in the broad jump when Kennedy shattered his own previous record of twenty-one feet eight and a half inches, by making twenty-two feet two inches; the other was in the three miles run, Wiggins, likewise, bettering his time of last year of sixteen minutes twenty-one and two-fifths seconds, when he made the twelve circuits of the track in sixteen minutes nine and one-fifth seconds. Medicine ran up an aggregate of fifty-three points, Science forty-five, Arts thirty-five, Law twenty-two and Commerce six.

There was a fair crowd on hand when the programme opened at about two-thirty p.m. Throughout the proceedings, glass yells and freshets in imitation ceremonies lent variety to the proceedings, which were conducted in a highly efficient manner under the direction of Reg. Henry.

The dashes and the middle distance runs were all hotly contested, but probably the most spectacular run of the afternoon was the four-hundred yard dash, which brought the attendance to its feet when Reggie passed Walker on the last turn after trailing during the greater part of the race. The three miles event, also, was to the liking of those present, who loudly cheered the winner when he finished well ahead of the rest of the field.

The results of the events and the order in which they came follow: Dashes, Kennedy (M.); Gaboury (L.); Freedman (A.). Distance, 101 feet, 10 inches, 100 Yard Dash, Michaels (M.); Patterson (A.); Forrest (M.). Time, 10 and 3-5 seconds. Half-Mile, Legge (S.); Hurd (A.); Watson (A.). Time, 2 minutes 1-2-5 seconds. Pole Vault, Gaboury (L.); McGerrigle (A.). Height, 10 feet. Running High Jump, Kennedy (M.); Rutherford (S.); McDermid (S.). Height, 5 feet 7 1/2 inches. Putting Sixteen Pound Shot, Kennedy (M.); Jardine (A.); Amaron (A.). Distance, 35 feet 3 inches. 220 Yards Dash, Patterson (S.); Michaels (M.); Walker (S.). Time, 23 4-5 seconds. Running Broad Jump, Kennedy (M.); Patterson (S.); Gaboury (L.). Distance, 22 feet 3 inches (record). One Mile, Ranben (S.); Hartt (C.); Fry (S.). Time, 4 minutes 46 2-5 seconds. Throwing 16 Pound Hammer, Amaron (A.); Freedman (A.); Doughkes (A.). Distance, 95 feet 5 1/2 inches. 120 Yards Hurdles, Pierce (L.); Consiglio (S.); Darling (S.). Time, 16 2-3 seconds. 440 Yards Dash, Legge (S.); Walker (M.). Time, 58 3-5 seconds. Three Miles Run, Wiggins (M.); Grimsen (C.); Kerr (S.). Time, 16 minutes 9 1-5 seconds (record). Javelin Throw, Gaboury (L.); Kennedy (M.); Jardine (A.). Distance, 134 feet. 220 Yards Low Hurdles, Grier (A.); Darling (S.). Time, 30 seconds.

THE FOOTBALL REFEREE.
When "Whistlers" Upset the Crowd.
Always the referee has been the most abused man on the football field. There's never been, and never will be, a "whistler" capable of pleasing all sections of a soccer crowd; if he satisfies the supporters of one team, he's sure to bring howls of disapproval from the other fellows.

One of the best stories bearing on this aspect of the game owes its origin—we hope solely—to Mr. Punch. It was told with graphic brevity, beneath a picture of two brawny footballers returning from the fray, mud-spattered and disconsolate, carrying between them a large sack, and meeting on their journey an inquisitive old gentleman.

"Who won?" asked the latter. "We lost," they replied. "What have you got in that bag?" "The referee!" came back the unexpected answer.

The antipathy felt towards the "knight of the whistle" had a curious illustration on a more recent date. The officials of an aspiring country club had decided to build a new pavilion in place of the derelict railway carriage that had served so well for many years. One afternoon a rabid supporter strolled into the ground and observed two cart-loads of bricks in a corner. After a critical examination of the bricks he sought out the club secretary.

"Look here," he began, "don't you know that half-bricks are more easily thrown than whole ones?" "I suppose they are," replied the official, "but who wants to throw them? And what are you talking about, anyway?"

"Why, about those two cart-loads of bricks." "Well, they're for the new pavilion." "Oh," said the rabid supporter, with a sigh of disappointment, "I thought they were for the referee."

Painful Surprises.
The referee is liable to sudden and painful surprises on the football field, and Mr. John Lewis is hardly likely to forget the day he got mixed up with the players in a rush on goal on a Liverpool ground. A goal was scored, but the referee had to disallow it because he had not seen the ball go between the posts. As a matter of fact, he was turning half a somersault at the time.

At a match in Derbyshire, too, a referee was ducked in the River Derwent by a crowd of women enthusiasts for giving a decision that displeased, while another had to hide in a corner to save himself from being trampled on by an angry mob.

Not would anyone envy that other "whistler" who was officiating in a country match. The ball burst just as it was going through the goal, and he decided that it was not a legitimate goal. The crowd, considering the decision unfair, rushed upon him, rained the split ball over his head, and chased him round the field.

Some Celtic Memories.
That great football wag, the late Peter Somers, of Celtic fame, once stated that the "luckiest" goalkeeper ever he saw was the man who kept the sticks for the Irish League team against the Scottish League team at Belfast in 1888. Of course, he had the referee on his side, and that made all the difference. The Scottish forwards—Somers, Walker, Michael, McMahon and Tennant—actually scored five goals against him, but were only allowed one, and the result was that Scotland was defeated by three goals to one at the finish.

As Peter said, "It is never nice for a player to blame a referee, but really on this occasion his decision was so bad that our side could not have won had they scored twenty goals—they would all have been off-pieces." After seeing their fourth goal being disallowed, Sandy McMahon turned to Somers. "Here, Peter," he said, "it's my opinion that the referee's a brother of the goalkeeper!"

It was in this match, too, that a ludicrously funny incident took place. Barney Battles was playing left-half for Scotland, and was laid out very badly in the second half. The referee allowed the game to go on. Dan Doyle, the Scots captain, ran across the field and asked the referee to stop the game. "What for?" asked that official. "Don't you see that Battles is knocked out?" said Doyle. "Then, why the hell doesn't he say he's knocked out?" was the extraordinary reply.

The Old-Time Referee.
Some of the old-time referees wouldn't, of course be tolerated to-day at any price; they were quite unworthy of being entrusted with such a responsible position. On one occasion, I remember, a referee of the old school, upon being questioned how he came to allow three gloriously off-side goals in a game on Old Hampden, admitted they were scored from off-side positions, but added: "It would have been a shame to cut them off for a galley yard off-side, considering the delightful passing that led up to the goals!"

Refereeing of this nature (fortunately the match was an old-fashioned "friendly") is enough to incense any crowd, and under Cup or League conditions there would assuredly have been a "scene."

There are some present-day "whistlers" who, in the opinion of many football enthusiasts, would be better employed at something else than refereeing. It was one of this type who not so long ago walked over to the touch-line, and exclaimed to an outpoken critic: "Look here, are you refereeing or am I?" The answer came pat and prompt. "Neither!"

Another referee, much given to asserting his position, sent for the secretary, who, in the hearing of the official, gave expression to an appeal which left the whistle-holder uncertain. "Please behave yourselves, gentlemen; the referee is doing his best."

Some of the refereeing in junior football is deliciously unorthodox. "How could I be off-side?" exclaims the disgruntled forward. "Didn't you see your back play the ball?" "Ah," comes the quick explanation in the tone of one not to be "had." "You can't catch me, boy. Were there three of you in front of him?"

Going up to a player the referee, with all the severity he could muster, said, "Didn't I tell you that at the first offence off you go?" "Ah," replied the player, with something like triumph in his tone, "but this wasn't the first!" Another example of sardonic humour. Referee—"Look here, my man; that's the second time you've tripped him. You do it again and off you go." Player—"All right, guv'nor, don't be nasty over it. If it wasn't for the likes of me there'd be no bloomin' referee!"

One of the very few occasions on which a spectator has been known to speak a word on behalf of the much-maligned referee occurred during the progress of a match. Third Lanark v.

Ribe, at Cathkin Park some years ago. During the game an excited "Third" supporter shouted out, "Foul there! foul!" as he noticed a Rib player deliberately handling the ball.

The incident passed unnoticed by the referee (who had only one arm), so a big Irishman, who was standing near the speaker, said to him—"Whist now, whist! Sure you can't expect the poor referee to see everything, and him has only one arm!"

Making Your Hair Brushes

A HIGHLY SPECIALIZED AND INTERESTING BUSINESS.
An incredible amount of knowledge and years of experience are necessary before one can be counted an expert brush maker. The whole business is wonderfully interesting and specialized.

Some factories start the process of brush making at an advanced stage—purchasing even the backs of their brushes ready shaped and drilled to take the hairs or bristles. Others will buy whole trees and great heads of bristles sent from Siberia, Poland, Roumania, China, and India.

When the hairs shed their winter coats, the bristles are gathered up, sent to a central depot, cleaned, tied into bundles, and dispatched. At the factory each bundle is examined. Skilled fingers push aside the outer layers and trained eyes decide the grade of the bundle judged as a whole not from the bristles on the outside. The bristles are then ranged according to color, and are started through the processes of cleansing, bleaching, and so on.

"Lily-white" bristles are selected for hair brushes. They are separated, sprayed out (as if a handful of cards) and pulled in shaves through a series of gauges, which, spaced to a scientific degree of accuracy, can be best described as combs. The butt ends of the larger bristles are caught in the teeth of these combs and so separated.

Before the bristles are given out to be fastened into brushes they are carefully weighed—so many ounces, to so many brush-backs—and the work is weighed-in on completion. The actual assembling of brushes is marvellous in its swift simplicity, but it takes long years of training of hand and eye alike to manipulate the brushes.

Notes and Comments

Appeal to an Expert.—The golfer had an excellent opinion of himself, and after making a fairly good drive, he turned to his caddy.

"I suppose," he said, "you have been 'round the links with worse players than me, eh?" "I heard you the first time," replied the caddy, calmly, "I'm just thinking about it."

Mr. H. C. Thomson

A NEW VENTURE IN TRANSPORTATION.

The Board of Trade room this morning the H. C. Thomson delivered the address which appears below on the subject of establishing a new route of transport between the coast of Newfoundland and the coast of the United States and Canada, by way of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the ports in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Mr. Thomson was proposed President Mr. L. C. O'Connell, and seconded by Captain Stuart and unanimously. The address was as follows:

Gentlemen—The opening of the St. Lawrence to ocean going vessels of 10,000 tons or more is a project which has been approved by the International Joint Committee. But it is a project which has been opposed in New York and in Montreal and in other cities until that has been overruled.

It is in the waterway project have been considering whether the establishment of a port of the south coast of Newfoundland as a transfer point for the immense quantities of freight, manufactured goods and raw materials which are being shipped from the United States and Canada to the whole region of the Great Lakes, is probably the greatest industry in the world, and which is at the same time a source of enormous economic means of obtaining the raw material necessary for the manufacturing industries.

They have come to the conclusion that the port of the south coast of Newfoundland is becoming a port in Central Europe, although only boats of 1,000 tons can go to the Danube, goods having to be transhipped at the mouth of the Danube on the Black Sea, and then by rail to the great industrial centers of Europe. Germany has built up a commerce largely by means of cheap transportation systems of this kind, although only boats drawing 14 feet of water can pass the Rhine or the Danube.

It is drawing 14 feet of water and carrying a total cargo of 2500 tons through the present canal locks of the St. Lawrence. Why should they more fully and carry out during the open season for navigation to some ice-free port to which access can be had all the year? The answer is that they desire to be effected by means of the New York and St. Lawrence Act passed by the Newfoundland Legislature in 1917. That Act authorizes the construction of a short railway across the isthmus of Avalon from Bull's Head in Trinity Bay to Arnold's Cove in Placentia Bay, and the establishment of a port at the southern end of the Bay at or near Bull's Head.

Ships used in conjunction with the enterprise are to be exempt from harbour dues, and from company pilotage, and customs duties to be charged on goods in transit and land grants of five square miles to be given at each port terminal facilities, town sites and other industrial purposes. This enables Mr. Thomson, who has been selected for the southern terminal to compete on favourable terms with New York and other Atlantic ports, where heavy duties are charged where the handling charges alone are exceedingly heavy. They point out that had Germany been able to build from Holland such concessions as these what a business commercial port it would have been able to create.

The Act provides that when the New York and St. Lawrence Act is pure an investigating committee, shall confer its rights to a company formed to operate the enterprise, the Act will be construed as though passed in favor of that company. That company was formed last year and incorporated in Newfoundland with an authorized capital of $10,000,000, under the name of the Great Lakes, Newfoundland, Atlantic Company, Ltd. (The G.N.A.) and it is by means of that company that the enterprise is to be undertaken.

Mr. Thomson has been selected as transfer point, the ocean-going vessels to speak, because it is a magnificent, deep water, land-locked harbor, easy of approach, and under normal conditions open all the year, although of unexcelled land from which land required for the terminal facilities, town sites and industrial purposes can be selected without interfering with anyone.

But the most important point of all is the fact that the intersection of the water routes to the St. Lawrence and to the eastern seaboard of Canada and the U.S. The evidence before the International Joint Commission showed that if the water way were deepened, 60 p.c. of the exports from the Great Lakes would be for the U.S. seaboard. Mr. Thomson is particularly suitable for this domestic U.S. trade. Goods consigned from Chicago, Detroit or any other city on the Great Lakes to say Norfolk, Virginia, Charleston, Savannah, can be sent to Mortier Bay, picked up there by freight steamer going from Europe to those ports. Those steamers on their return voyage bringing back to Mortier Bay cargo for the Great Lakes and taking on from Mortier Bay the cargo from the Great Lakes to Europe which it would not wait for it there. It is this future which has particularly appealed to those who have looked into this matter. The difference in cost of inter-coastal freight over land-borne freight is about one to five. Mr. Thomson, the managing director of the Toronto Harbor Commission, stated in his evidence before the joint commission that he had obtained air from British Columbia by way of the Panama Canal and by rail from East London to Toronto for $28 as against a rate of $34 by rail direct.

It would therefore be a much cheaper route for domestic consignments and in addition to that a quicker and more reliable route. In Canada there is no railway connecting the railway facilities being ahead of the requirements of the population. In the United States the population and these industries have outstripped the railways and the congestion is very great.

It was shown in the evidence before the Industrial Joint Commission that it had sometimes taken as much as ninety days to get goods from Toronto to New York and that the average minimum time from Detroit to New York was 21 days. A nine knot boat would take 8 days from Toronto to Mortier Bay, a distance of 1400 nautical miles, including the time taken in passing through the canals and locks.

And there is another aspect of the question which has a material bearing so far as Europe is concerned. The goods shipped from America to Europe are largely in excess of the goods shipped from Europe to America so that ships have often to come out with light cargoes. With regard to the West Indies and South America the balance of trade is the other way. Nearly twice as much mostly in raw materials comes from those countries to North America, and goes from North America to them. In the way of manufactured goods, America exports to the West Indies and South America and West India trade, rather she is anxious to find an economical means of sending her automobiles and other manufactured goods to the South American markets and to bring back the rubber, hides, sugar, cocoa, wool and other commodities which she requires for her industries. Steamship connections will be established at Mortier Bay to deal with this, and those connections will afford a means of taking the Newfoundland sailing and cargo ships to the West Indies and South America markets. The Government is not being asked for any guarantee of bonds or any steamship subsidies. It is believed the enterprise can stand on its own intrinsic merits. What the Government is asked for is this:

1. That they will reserve from grant for three years ten square miles of land at Mortier Bay, from which five square miles can be selected, and that a grant of the five square miles in fee simple will be given to the Great Lakes, Newfoundland, Atlantic Co., Ltd., on the signing of bonds for the construction of the enterprise within one year from the date of the contracts of not less than $100,000 for wharves, etc.

2. That the Government will extend to the company the benefit of the Provisions of the Cold Storage Act of 1917, when the company shall erect a cold storage plant of 1,000 tons at Mortier Bay and install cold storage holds of not less than 200 tons in three of its steamers.

3. That the Government will afford grazing rights for three years over an area of not less than 25 square miles at the back of Mortier Bay so that experiments can be made to ascertain whether the country there would be suitable for raising cattle or bringing the cattle and stock down from Canada and fattening them there.

4. That if within three years the company shall spend $2,000,000 on the enterprise, including ships, the Government will bring a Bill before the Legislature that similar concessions with regard to exemption from light or harbour dues and upon Customs duties in goods in transit shall not be granted to any other company for a period of fifteen years, so that the company may have the means of building up its position.

The company would undertake to pay the Government for those fifteen years of 5 per cent. on its net annual profits, and that the Government should have a nominee on the Board. It is proposed to begin with seven ships, to run from Detroit to Mortier Bay, but if the Government will allow the construction of the isthmus of Avalon Railway to be deferred until a later date, then with ten ships. It is proposed at once to bring the matter before the Chamber of Commerce of Detroit and of all the principal cities on the Great Lakes, so that the enterprise will be subjected to the most searching inquiry and criticism before it goes to the public. That is why I have asked to be allowed to bring it first before the Board of Trade here, as you are the persons financially concerned and your views will therefore carry great weight.

It is not intended to launch out into any great expedition—in anticipation of trade—to provide for the potentialities of the enterprise in advance. It is proposed to expend money gradually in development work as the trade grows. The ships to run from the Great Lakes to Mortier Bay have been designed by the best known British shipbuilding firms and the ships will have the full A1 classification at Lloyd's for ocean going ships and not the limited classification for Lake ships. In the winter months they will run from some southern U.S. port to Cuba or possibly from Mortier Bay to the West Indies.

Motor Car Crashes Through Window

A 3 o'clock this afternoon a motor car driven by Mr. James Newell crashed through the western window of the Royal Stores Furniture Dept. on Duckworth Street. The machine was coming up over the first incline and had turned to proceed west. Two women appeared in front of the moving car and Newell attempted to avoid them. It is presumed that with the slippery roads the brakes did not work and the car turned at right angles going through the window and bringing up against a dividing partition. The space was just the length of the car. A suite of Chesterfield furniture was completely smashed up, but strange to say the car suffered no damage, not even the tires getting punctured from the falling glass. Mr. Newell was badly cut about the head and had to be taken to Dr. Anderson's surgery where several stitches were inserted to close a gash over his eye.

What is the Origin of the Saying, "Not Worth the Candle"

In full, this saying is, "The game is not worth the candle," and it means a fight is comparatively modern, exactly what it says. The use of artificial light in comparatively modern times is something like a century and a half ago the great bulk of the people used to go to bed when darkness came, simply because there was nothing to sit up for. What lighting there was cost money, and was for the rich.

The candle of the phrase does not mean the single taper, but rather the candelabra—the word is from the French—holding a good many expensive candles. When, therefore, a party of gamblers found that the stakes were getting so low and the interest of the game so little that it was hardly worth going on, it was said that "the game was not worth the cost of the candles."

Why is a Certain Make of Bag Known as a "Gladstone"

A century ago the carpet bag was in fashion. Next came the portmanteau (of the type seldom seen to-day), which, even empty, weighed a good deal more than any clothes that could ever be put into it. The invention of the light, metal-framed bag, with flexible instead of solid thick sides, came as a great improvement, and the firm who first put it upon the market named it after Mr. Gladstone, the great statesman of the day, partly because the head of the firm was a great admirer of the famous Liberal leader, and partly, of course, because the name, then the most popular in the kingdom) would help to sell the bag.

In just the same way a new sort of carriage was once called after Queen Victoria's new sort of wheel-chair after the Prince Consort (the "Albert"), and so forth.

Is it a Fact That Donkeys Never Shy?

A donkey will "shy," though infrequently, and while a horse, when startled, will give a sudden nervous plunge, the donkey's dislike of any object usually expresses itself in an obstinate determination not to pass it. The average donkey is a much less high-bred animal than the average horse, and his nervous system is less highly developed. The horse's "shy" is really a nervous plunge of terror at the unknown; the donkey, though he can "shy," is not so nervous, and consequently less liable to fright.

If your wife laughs at your joke you may be sure that it's either a darn good joke or you've got a darn good wife.

Big N. P. Street Scenes

IN "A PRINCE THERE WAS"

When picture fans see the New York street scenes in Thom Meighan's new Paramount picture, "A Prince There Was," at the Majestic Theatre to-day, they will doubtless marvel at the fact that these were made on the Paramount studio lot, three thousand miles from the big Metropolis.

As only a few scenes were needed, it was inexpedient to take the company across the continent for this purpose and a replica of the location required was constructed by the technical wizards at the studio.

The scene represents an intersection of two streets, in the vicinity of Fifty-seventh street and Sixth avenue, and includes the exterior of the city boarding house where the heroine resides. A slanted railway was constructed along one of the streets, crossing diagonally across the camera range. A row of these boarding houses, fronted one side of one street and on the other was a large brick building. The rest of the setting was of buildings and business houses. Several hundred persons of various types and all varieties of automobiles, trucks, and other vehicles were in action and gave the effect of a busy traffic scene in the big city.

An immense amount of detail had to be perfected in making such a scene. Auto license plates had to be duplicates of those used in New York, the types of people had to be selected with care, and the entire scene was given a smoky, dingy, dusty appearance when the property man lighted a smoke pot and smoked up the atmosphere.

The new picture is a film version by Waldemar Young of George M. Cohan's dramatic success and was screened under the direction of Tom Foreman. Mildred Harris, Charles Jackson, Guy Oliver, Nipsey, Charlie Sylvia Ashton, Fred Huntly and Arthur Hall are in the cast.

Migle From Labrador

SUMMER WEATHER AND GOOD FISHING REPORTED.

S.S. Migle, Capt. Burgess, of the Labrador Coastal Service, reached port yesterday at 2.30, having made all ports of call as far as Turnavik, the round trip occupying only 14 days. The Migle brought a small quantity of freight, and the following passengers: Dr. H. L. and Mrs. Paddock, H. Paddock, A. Paddock, Miss Mitchell, L. Stevenson, J. R. Dupont, W. Grancher, J. W. Hayes, W. A. Brown, J. T. Croncher, W. Roberts, F. Hartrey, R. Ryan, F. Moore and Mrs. A. Lahey. Capt. Burgess reports the trip a most uneventful one. Summer weather was met with all along the coast, and as yet no snow has fallen, though at this time of year there was generally a different appearance. The balance of the fishermen operating along the coast, as far as the ship and were landed turned by the ship and were landed at their homes. Several thousand quintals of fish have been shipped from the coast during the past month. The natives are still fishing and are reported for good catches. The Migle will sail North again on her last trip for the season at 10 a.m. Saturday, going as far as Cartwright. Amongst those who will return by the Migle will be the Lightkeeper and his wife at Indian Tickle; and the Marconi operator at Domino, and which the coast will be deserted for the winter.

Mt. Allison Honors Rev. D. B. Hemmeon

Mount Allison signalled the installation of its new President, by conferring honorary degrees upon a number of men distinguished for leadership in university and other work. The degree conferred upon Rev. Douglas B. Hemmeon, of Wolfville, is especially to be commended because it does worthy honor to a talented minister of the Methodist Church. Dr. Hemmeon is one of the brightest minds in the Maritime Province, and he has shown originality of thought and a wide range of scholarship, added to a graceful diction and an arresting personality, which give him distinction. Dr. Hemmeon is to be congratulated upon the winning of so worthy a mark of honor. —Halifax Chronicle.

Wedding Bells.

At 7.30 Tuesday evening, at St. Mary's Church, a very pretty ceremony was witnessed when Mr. Raymond Chaytor was united in Holy Matrimony to Miss Mary Mills, daughter of Mr. Samuel Mills of Fortune Bay. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Sterling. The bride was very handsomely dressed in a navy blue costume with hat to match. The bride attended the Church leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Albert Mills, the popular plumber of the West End, while the Wedding March was rendered by the organist. Mr. Lloyd. The bridesmaids were Miss Isabelle Furness and Miss Jean Lester who wore Fawn costumes with hats to match. Mr. Albert Chaytor, brother of the groom acted as best man. After the ceremony the bride and groom were escorted to the bride's home by Mr. Albert Chaytor. The wedding supper was prepared by Mrs. Gordon Lester and the usual toasts honored. The newly-wedded couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents. The Telegram extends to Mr. and Mrs. Chaytor the wish that they may live long in the enjoyment of every happiness and success.

Shipping.

Schr. Lucille B. Creaser, Capt. Pfander, has entered at Renews to load salt bulk fish for Gloucester. Schr. Faurins has sailed from Renews for Oporto, taking 4,252 quintals. Schr. Possidon, 40 days from Thorsham in ballast, has arrived at Bull's Head. Schr. Sable L. from Halifax via North Sydney and St. Pierre, is due here Saturday morning. The ship sails again Saturday night. S.S. Silvia docked at New York at 9 a.m. to-day. The ship made the passage from Halifax in 45 hours and apparently must have escaped the blizzard which was raging yesterday along the American coast. S.S. Frank with a cargo of codfish on board, shipped by the Nfld. Labrador Export Co., arrived at Naples yesterday. The Danish vessel Mars is now loading codfish at Fogo from the Nfld. Export Co. for Oporto for orders. The Danish vessel Svalen is now due from Iceland in ballast for Nfld. Labrador Export Co., Ltd.

A delicious ice to serve with a poultry dinner is made by boiling together for ten minutes one and a half cups of sugar and one cup of water, cool, and three cups of elder, preservative cupful of lemon juice and a few drops of oil of peppermint; color green, freeze and serve in apple shells.

Good Fishing at Bonavista

Under date Oct. 20th, Robert Brown, Sub-Collector at Bonavista, reporting to the Customs, states that fish was very plentiful on the outer grounds. From Upper Amber Cove to Cape Lambert, for the week ending Oct. 20, 1,200 quintals of fish have been landed. About 15 motor boats are operating, and in plentiful, and the weather has been exceptionally fine; in fact fishermen say they never witnessed such a sport of good weather at this time of year.

Italy Has Fishery Aspirations

The following article taken from the Canadian Fisherman outlines a new venture on the part of Italy to obtain their own fish for the home market. Whether or not it will affect to any extent our sales in that country remains to be seen, and will largely depend upon the amount of support given to the promoters by the Italian Government.

The chief factors which mitigate against the successful prosecution of the fishing industry by the Italians are their ignorance of the work as it is carried on in Northern waters, and their instinctive aversion to the hardship and exposure incident to a fisherman's life in those regions where the cod are found.

Many circumstances, however, have to be considered in connection with such an undertaking. Italy has had a new birth as a result of the war, and, directed by that vigorous, determined if somewhat reckless dynamo of energy, Mussolini, who is the incarnation of the new spirit, she has become fired with the desire to set her house in order, to restore prosperity among her people by giving every encouragement to her industries, and to secure a more important place among the nations. Spurred by such aspirations, the Italians of to-day may still prove themselves equal to their forefathers who in past centuries faced hardship and privation in their ventures into unknown seas.

During the past summer a Portuguese vessel loaded with green fish in St. John's, and conveyed it across the Atlantic in order to cure it at home. If their project is successful, it will no doubt result in their prosecuting the fishery by this method on a larger scale next year.

Whether such operations develop to any extent or not, they indicate at least an attempt by others to enter as competitors into our industry. They emphasize further the necessity for us to overhaul our fish business carefully, in order to ascertain what can be done to make it more profitable, and to search further afield for new markets.

Canadian fish exporters who have done considerable trade in past years with Italy and other Mediterranean countries will be interested in the new Italian government policy to stimulate activity in the fishing industry on the part of the native population. While ostensibly the purpose is to make Italy self-supporting in the matter of fish, it is not at all improbable, experts aver, that the government at Rome sees in the prosecution of the fishing industry, the building up of a valuable naval reserve force. The vigorous policy pursued by France since 1917 or 1918, but which now lacks its original ardor, was undoubtedly instigated with the same motive in view. It has been recognized that British naval power found its beginning in the virile citizens who prosecuted her fisheries and aspiring nations look for patterns by which to cut their cloth.

Some time ago it was announced that a company was in course of formation in Italy to carry on fishing in the North Sea. This company was to take over from the Italian government a number of German trawlers received in payment of reparations under the peace settlement. These trawlers were to be purchased by the company by instalments, extending over 30 years, at a moderate rate of interest, stated to be 2 per cent, being charged by the Italian government.

upon the money so advanced to the company.

Further particulars available show the concern is, in effect, a company supported by the State. "La Pêche Maritime" says that the Italian government is seeking to free the Italian market from "economic dependence on foreign countries" in the matter of fish. That economic dependence is represented at present by annual importations of fish, amounting in value to two hundred million of lire (at present rates of exchange about $2,000,000). Most of these fish imports are received from France, Great Britain, Canada and Newfoundland, Iceland and Norway and consist almost entirely of dried and salted fish.

The new company is intended to carry on fishing in waters "where the Italian flag has hitherto been unknown." According to a previous statement on the subject, the plan is to fish from a German port, where the fish caught at Iceland and other northern areas would be cured for transportation to Italy.

There is an Italian fishing law of March, 1922, under which Italian firms are exempt from import dues on preserved fish, and, further, what are called national fishing enterprises are exempted for 10 years from payment of the taxes on movable property and all other state taxes falling upon industrial establishments.

According to its constitution, the company is formed for carrying on fishing in general, in seas, rivers, and lakes, with the necessary vessels for the purpose, and for the transportation and selling of fishery products, and the preservation and the industrial utilization of such products.

Various banks are participants in the company, as well as the chief Italian shipping lines, while the list is headed by two members of the Royal family.

The capital is fixed at 12,000,000 lire (at the present rates about $210,000), a sum divided into 200,000 shares of 100 lire each.

The chairman of the company is H. R.H. the Prince of Udine; the vice-chairman is the Marquis of Cambrano. The title of the company is the Società Italiana Industria Pesca, and its office is at 27 Via St. Basilio, Rome.

Mount Cashel Day

SILVER JUBILEE FITTINGLY CELEBRATED.

The Silver Jubilee of Mount Cashel Orphanage yesterday, was fittingly celebrated at the Institution. High Mass was celebrated at 10 o'clock by Monsignor McDermott, with Revs. Dr. Carter as Deacon, and Fr. P. Kennedy as sub-Deacon. Fr. Savin was Master of Ceremonies. Rev. Frs. Flynn, J. Rawlin, McCarthy, Bide, Pippy, Connors and McGeehan were present in the Sanctuary. The Mount Cashel Choir sang beautifully through the service. About 150 of the boys and ex-pupils of the Orphanage received Holy Communion. Following Mass Monsignor McDermott delivered a masterly sermon in which he eulogized the work of the institution. At noon Bro. Ennis entertained their Lordships Bishop March and Renouf, the priests of the Archdiocese and the Brothers of Mount St. Francis and St. Bonaventure's, and complimentary speeches were made by Bishops Renouf, March, and Monsignor McDermott. His Grace Archbishop Roche was unfortunately not able to attend. Citizens generally showed their appreciation of the good work of Mount Cashel by the manner in which they responded to the young ladies who were on the city streets yesterday, selling tags and tickets for the Grand Lottery, which had been started by the Jubilee Committee. The sad death of Rev. Bro. O'Flannigan, which occurred at 5.30 p.m., unfortunately marred the close of the celebrations—a promenade band concert. A large crowd assembled at the Prince's Rink for the event. It was postponed, but arrangements were made to hold it on Monday night next.

Preliminary Enquiry Opened

In the Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon, the preliminary hearing into the charge of perjury against John Crickard was commenced. Judge Morris presided, when the evidence of Mr. McCarthy, J.P., Supt. O'Neill and Mr. Harry Power, stenographer, was taken. The further hearing was postponed until this afternoon, when Arthur Dessert, his wife, and Const. Parrell will be called. Mr. J. A. Barron for the Crown, and T. P. Halley, for the Defence.

Presbyterian Bazaar Opened

GRAND AUCTION SALE TO-NIGHT. Yesterday at 3 p.m. the annual Presbyterian bazaar was formally opened by Lady Allardice in the presence of a large gathering. The hall presented a gay appearance and the different stalls were well stocked with fancy goods, stationery, vegetables and other necessary or useful things for the housewife. The tea tables were well patronized and quite a large number of people availed of the opportunity after the stores closed to partake of a delicious turkey or ham tea. The Bazaar will continue up to 6 p.m. to-night, when a grand auction will be held. No doubt the attendance this evening will be even greater than on the opening day.

There will be a Big Card Tournament in the Holy Name Hall, Harvey Road, to-morrow, Friday night, at 8 p.m. Admission 30c. Oct. 25, 11

Rev. Bro. O. E. O'Flannigan Dies Suddenly

News of the passing of Rev. Bro. O. E. O'Flannigan of the Mount St. Francis Community, which occurred rather suddenly yesterday evening, will be learned with general regret. In the morning, when he attended his class at Holy Cross School, he appeared to be in his usual good health, and when the classes were given a half holiday in honor of Mount Cashel Jubilee he, with the other Brothers, left by motor car for Mount Cashel to tender his congratulations to the Community. About 3.30 p.m. he returned to the city and proceeded to Holy Cross School. Accompanied to do some stamp collecting for the Chinese Mission Fund, it was orally with this intention that he availed of the free afternoon to return to his school at Holy Cross. Here at about 5.30 he was taken suddenly ill and the janitor, who found him, became unconscious. Word was phoned to Mr. St. Francis and some of the Brothers hurried to the school. In company with Dr. Brohm, whom they met on LeMarchant Road. Meanwhile, Dr. Mitchell, and Rev. Fr. St. John had been summoned. All possible was done and after receiving the last sacraments, he quietly passed to his eternal reward.

Brother O'Flannigan was born in Monaghan, Ireland, in 1855. He came of a deeply religious family and was a nephew of the late Cardinal Power of New York. He joined the Order of the Christian Brothers in his seventh year, and, after teaching a short time in various parts of Ireland was transferred to Newfoundland in 1905. He was attached to the Monastery Community and labored unceasingly in St. Patrick's Hall and Holy Cross Schools. He is survived by his parents and one brother, whom he expected to meet in a projected holiday to Ireland next year. To them and to the Christian Brothers the sympathy of the community is extended. The funeral notice will be announced later.

Mae Edwards Co. Scores Another Success

"THE MAN BETWEEN." A large audience witnessed the above performance, last night, at the Casino Theatre and, if one may judge from the unstinted applause accorded the different players, it was a great success. The story of the play is that of a family feud between two families whose sole object in life was to shoot, on sight, any of the opposing faction. This continued for generations until, as generally happens, the son of one family falls in love with the daughter of the other, and they decide to get married. In the last act a fight is staged to settle all outstanding grievances, with the grandparents as judges. The hero, of course, wins out to the delight of the younger portion of the audience. The acting throughout was really good, and this, together with the excellent specialties between the acts, made up an entertainment well worth seeing. The same play will be staged to-night when new musical numbers will be put on.

On With the Dance

The Felician dance in the C.C.C. Hall last night was in every way a signal success. From the moment when the Felician Orchestra struck the first strain of the opening dance, to last, followed by another and another, until it seemed as if the dancers would never be satisfied, there was no let up in the zest and enthusiasm and enjoyment.

All were delighted with the musical selections rendered by the Prince's Orchestra and also by the talented musicians of the Mae Edwards Company who very kindly assisted, and helped materially to make the event so successful. The elimination dance was won by Mr. Avalon Goodridge and Miss Emma MacPherson. From time to time various specialties enlivened the entertainment, and the elaborate decorative scheme together with the magnificent costumes of the fair sex made a marvellous galaxy of colour. The Spencer Club were unremittent in their efforts to make the supper all that could be desired, and in this they succeeded beyond measure. At one-thirty the National Anthem brought a very pleasant evening to an end.

BEFORE MR. JUSTICE KENT.

In the matter of the will and estate of the late Judge Alfred Penny between the Eastern Trust Co., Plaintiff, and Margaret Taylor et al. Defendants.

Mr. Knight for the plaintiff, moved for the confirmation of the Master's (Blackwood K.C.) Report, the passing of the accounts of plaintiff as administrator to of the estate of the late Alfred Penny, the payment over to the Eastern Trust Company as executor of the will of the late Rosa L. Penny, the balance of several sums of 1,800.97 and 9,245 collected respectively as capital and income account of said estate Alfred Penny. After paying thereout the costs of the plaintiff in the matter, to be taxed, the sum of $500 as compensation to the plaintiff for the services as such administrator and that the said Eastern Trust Company be released as Administrator. Mr. McNelly for the estate of Rosa Penny assents and asks for costs. It is ordered accordingly.

The Woman Franchise Movement

This evening the Women's Franchise League is holding a meeting in the Old Colony Club when addresses will be given by Rev. Canon Jeeves, M.A. and Mr. L. E. Emerson. It will be remembered that in the Parliamentary Session of 1922, the question of Woman Suffrage was discussed both in the Upper and Lower Houses of the Legislative Assembly, and while the movement was strongly upheld in both chambers, no definite action resulted to extend the franchise to women. There is no question of doubt that it is but a matter of time when the women of Newfoundland will be given this privilege which has already been extended to them in the other Dominions of the Empire. In Canada they first obtained it by proxy in the election that was held during the war, and to them in a great measure was due the enforcement of conscription in that country.

There is no doubt that their militant activities for years caused many to hesitate to extend to them the right, even though similar measures were adopted by men prior to 1832 in order to compel the opponents of Parliamentary Reform to bow to the will of the people and pass the Reform Act.

One of the arguments used against the granting of the franchise to women has always been that a woman's place is in her home, but it is apparently overlooked that in the same way it may be said that man's place is at his desk, by his bench, in his boat, or in the field; and it cannot be claimed that because he has the vote, his duties are in consequence neglected. A striking illustration of the fallacy of the argument often advanced that women are too easily actuated by sentiment to take part in public affairs is given in the following account of an incident which occurred recently in the Scottish courts during a murder trial:

REV. ST. SUSAN NEWELL.

Doubts were raised as to a woman's qualifications to act on a jury. In the recent trial of Susan Newell for the murder of the little nephew of Courtbridge whom she callously strangled with her hands for the sake of temperance, the counsel for the defence challenged every woman juror until a complete jury of men was secured. They found the perpetrator of this terrible deed guilty but recommended her to mercy. Why did the defending counsel rid the jury of women? For one reason only, namely that he knew that no woman in Scotland, possessed of maternal instinct, would have exhibited any feeling but repugnance for the agent in such an atrocity.

Hr. Main Elections

Polling in the Harbor Main by-election opened in the District at 9 a.m. to-day. A booth for city voters was opened at the house of Jos. Power, Hutchings Street. Up to noon hour at this place there was very few votes cast. As the time of polling ceases at 4 p.m. the count should start before midnight. The Telegram got in communication over long distance phone with Mr. St. John, the independent candidate at one p.m. to-day and learned from him that on the South Shore the vote appeared to be 50-50 but in Horse Cove and Paradise he, St. John, had a majority. The situation at Long Pond appeared to be 4 to 1 in favor of Hawco. Kelligrews 2 to 0 in favor of St. John. Holyrood Southside is going half and half. There apparently will be a small vote polled on the South Shore he said. At Middle Right last night, supporters of Mr. Hawco held a meeting which lasted but half an hour. Messrs. Hibbs, Hallyard, Dr. Barnes and Hon. M. P. Gibbs were present, but owing to interruptions they were not heard. Mr. Hawco held a meeting last night at Collier's and received a good hearing. The race in this place will be neck and neck. Mr. St. John stated he was confident of polling from 200 to 350 votes on the South Shore. We were unable to get into touch with Mr. Hawco in order to ascertain his views on the situation.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

A RHINELAND REPUBLIC IS SLOW OF ACCOMPLISHMENT.

COBLENZ, Oct. 25. The position of the Separatists at the close of the fourth day since the proclamation of the Rhineland Republic at Ais La Chapelle is little improved. They nominally hold about one fourth of the territory under foreign occupation. Yesterday, however, was marked by the Republicans most signal and costly victory at Crefeld where twelve Separatists were killed and fifty wounded and in the peaceful occupation of Mulheim and a few villages in vicinity of Trier. In many instances occupation has been limited to the confines of the City Hall with garrisons on defensive fighting not only for existence as the Republic but for their own very lives.

Terra Nova Council

HONOURS PAST GRAND KNIGHT.

At the recent meeting of the Knights of Columbus of Terra Nova Council, the members presented Mr. Joseph Fitzgibbon, Past Grand Knight, with a purse of gold in recognition of his services to the Council as Grand Knight. Many flattering speeches were made regarding the work so faithfully carried out by Mr. Fitzgibbon during his tenure of office. The recipient, who was taken very much by surprise, made a suitable reply, thanking one and all for their very pleasing remarks. In accepting the gift he expressed the hope that the same friendly feeling would always exist between them.

Charlie Chaplin at the Crescent To-Night

HIS GREAT COMEDY "TRIPLE TROUBLE."

A great evening's amusement is in store for those attending the Crescent Theatre to-night or the remaining days of the week, as Charlie Chaplin plays an outstanding role on the stage in his funniest two-act comedy entitled "Triple Trouble." It's one of the best of the start to finish and one should miss a good laugh and opportunity offers. "The Ragged Edge," a Gwynn six-act drama is a great love adventure is the feature attraction. Here is a story everybody will like—a missionary's daughter imprisoned in her own home by a father who hopes to keep her from the means of her love—a brave boy fleeing from secret persecution to the black interior of a far-off land. They meet in the perilous settlements where the girl is tied to freedom. A smouldering love revolt breaks out—the drink which he took for forgetfulness saves his life. Into their peaceful home comes a shadow from America which brands the man she loves as a fugitive from justice. And then the story is told of this boy's heroism and self-sacrifice, a climax as thrilling and heart-breaking as any you've ever seen on a screen.

The morning night is the night of the Crescent's big Amateur Contest. Miss anything, but don't miss this big night's entertainment.

Outpost customers will receive prompt attention at the CENTRAL BAKERY, Central Street.—Oct 25, 31

"I Was Terribly Weak After Baby Was Born"

Mrs. H. McClure, Norwood, Ont., writes:

"After my baby was born, I was terribly weak and run down, with pains across my back. I had heard so much of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that I decided to try it. Three boxes proved enough to make me quite strong and well again. I also used Dr. Chase's Ointment for a rash which broke out on the baby, and the rash disappeared completely in a short time."

October.

GOOD EVENING.

October is an interesting month historically, although many folks look upon it only as the forerunner of Winter. On the 5th October, 1535, the English Bible was printed (a copy of this book is in the British Museum). On 6th October, 1820, Jenny Lind, the famous singer was born. On 21st October, we have the anniversary of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson, and on the 31st the ancient institution of Halloween. Another great event of October was the opening of the Grand Calceum, a market place for the people to do their shopping, where a large and varied stock of Hosiery, Gloves, Boots & Shoes—Two Specials for Men—Fats, $2.10 per pair; Men's Grey Coat (Sweaters) $1.15 each.

Bar Every Bushel of Canadian Wheat

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—(Associated Press). Formal application for increases of the tariff on wheat from 30 cents to 45 cents a bushel will be filed by Congressman Sydney Anderson, of Minnesota, president of the wheat council of the United States, upon his return to Washington this week, he announced here yesterday. Corresponding increases in the duty on flour and other wheat products also will be asked.

"The present tariff is effective for the first time and in spite of it wheat is already beginning to spill over into the United States from Canada," he said. "I am told that 50,000 bushels of wheat have been imported from Canada in the past few weeks."

THOSE ILLUMINATING GLIMPSES.

"O wad some power the giffie gie us To see ourselves as others see us."

I think there is hardly any one of us who cannot point back to some very fruitful experience when the folly of our ways was vividly, even cruelly, brought home to us by getting an illuminating glimpse of ourselves through someone else's eyes. And although at the time the smart of humiliation may have been keen, in the end we were glad to have profited by it.

I was reminded of this anew when a friend stopped in one afternoon last week. She is a good-natured, lovable soul who leads a very easy life, and whose disinclination for exercise and fondness for sweets show themselves in a "too, too solid flesh," although she has a pretty face. But this time when I proffered a dish of candy, she held up a restraining hand. "I'm dieting," she said.

I laughed. "Still, or again?" I asked, knowing of her many beginnings. She little knew. "It's again, and for good this time," she said. "You see I never realized just how huge I am till last week. All my friends have kidded me along with, 'Oh you just think you look big,' or 'If I had your lovely color I wouldn't mind being plump,' and even John says he doesn't like skinny women. But last week at the Literary Club I was in the telephone booth of the dressing room waiting for a call and two of my friends came in. I can't tell you how I felt when I realized they meant me in saying: 'She's a dear and she would be a peach for looks, too, if she wasn't such a horse.' That settled it. If I look like a horse to my friends what must I look like to mere curious onlookers. I'm cutting out all the sweets and starches for all time."

The best powered woman of my acquaintance takes harmonious simplicity as the keynote of her dressing scheme. She once told me that in her younger days she overheard two women, whom she greatly admired, lamenting the tendency of the young girls of the day to adorn themselves with cheap jewelry and perfume. And seeing herself in the class they deplored she profited by their comments.

Try It On Children.

Of course we can't go around asking people how we look to them, and we are not always fortunate enough to get an unexpected look at "ourselves as others see us." But it seems to me that it is a splendid idea for mothers to employ in the training of children. There is no class more acutely sensitive to ridicule than children, and once they see themselves appearing in an absurd light to other people they quickly change their ways.

I know of one mother who completely cured her five-year-old of stinkiness by showing him a picture of a stinky little boy named Archibald Basset eating a big bag of candy while a group of candy-less children stands sadly by. The legend beneath says:

"Did you ever see stinky Archibald Basset? Who always has candy and never will pass it? If I were his conscience I surely would chide him. If I were his mother I think I should hide him!"

I am sure there are other childish faults which could be cured in this way by a clever mother.

17,000 Pounds for Deportees

COMPENSATION AWARDS FOR WRONGFUL ARRESTS.

Forty persons who were illegally detained from Scotland to Ireland in March last in the round-up of Irish subjects made claims for compensation before a tribunal at Glasgow Sheriff Court. The people, concerned, who were seized mainly in the Glasgow district and detained for ten weeks in Mountjoy Prison, Dublin, sought compensation to the amount of £59,485. Lord Ashmore presided over the tribunal which fixed the awards.

—Mr. Norman Macpherson, instructed by the Lord Advocate, explained that the Indemnity Act laid it down that compensation was to be assessed on the principles on which damages would be assessed at Common Law as an action for wrongful imprisonment or assault. He was instructed by Sir James Adam representing the Treasury, to endeavour to adjust with the claimants figures which might be suggested by their Lordships as representing fair and reasonable compensation. Intimating the proposed terms of settlement agreed upon with the legal advisers of the parties concerned, Mr. Macpherson mentioned that 38 claimants were wage-earners. It was agreed that each would receive £250 as a solatium for deportation and internment. To that sum of £250 they added for each claimant sums ranging from £50 to £100 as a solatium in respect of special considerations applicable to particular claimants. The figures worked out at an average of £217 as a solatium to each of the 38 people. When to the solatium was added the actual loss, the average compensation suggested for each of these wage-earners was £259. The cases of Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Hickey were in a different category. Their position as business men justified the Treasury in consenting to larger awards in these two cases. Mr. Hutchinson had lodged a claim for £2,070. Subject to his Lordship's approval, they were agreed that £1,500 would be fair compensation in case case. Mr. Hickey's claim was for £1,534. In his case they had agreed for compensation at £750. The total amount of the award suggested was £17,000 14s. 10d. Minutes lodged also asked that Mr. Hickey's expenses be fixed at 100 guineas, and the expenses of the other claimants at 25 guineas each. The Court concurred in the entire settlement.

Why are Cartridges so Called

Until about three hundred years ago the charges of powder for a muzzle-loader gun were carried in little wooden boxes—the set of boxes fitting into the bandolier round the soldier's neck. To load a rifle, one box had to be emptied into the muzzle of the gun, then a "wad" put in and driven home to compress the powder, and finally the bullet was put in. Gustavus Adolphus, a famous general, thus adopted the much less cumbersome plan of wrapping each charge up in paper, and the next obvious step was to include the bullet as well in the little parcel, thus making loading a single operation.

Most military terms were taken from the French, and the French for a particular shape of paper parcel is "cartouche," from cart, the Latin for paper, and so we took the word for this particular little paper tube or box, and turned it into the more English cartridge. Even though cartridges are now made of metal, we still use the word.

THE VANISHING HORSE.

VALENTINE

We sometimes see a patient horse go "tolling" on its way; such animals we don't indorse in this busy modern day. They block the traffic and their progress is so slow, and chatters grind their teeth and swear, and speed fans writhe in woe. Where now the stately autos chug once horses were in line: the poor man drove his spavined plug, the plume his trotter fine. It is not long since autos first appeared upon the roads, and wrathful farmers raged and cursed while perched on horse-drawn loads. The horses, scared, would run away and smash the running gear; the things the drivers used to say will not be printed here. But they were one and all agreed that statutes should be framed which would protect the useful steed from dragon-carts go-blamed. The motorist, in bygone days, flew in the face of fate, and ever, as he went his ways, men sung their hymn of hate. And now the driver of a steed is here who gives offense; men curse him for his small-like speed. So mundane things adjust themselves, so work out human plans; we place our horses on the shelves, and wind our tin sedans.

A New Sounding Instrument for Ships

When approaching land, it is of vital importance to the navigator to know at frequent intervals the depth of the water beneath him. The time-honoured plan in such circumstances is to "heave the lead"—that is, to throw overboard a heavy lead weight at the end of a line which is marked off in fathoms. If the vessel is under way, the leadman throws the lead forward, so that by the time it reaches the bottom the leadline is vertical. In fast ships speed has to be reduced when soundings are being taken, even in comparatively shallow water, or the lead would be overtaken before it touched bottom. clever device for finding the depth at any moment and at any speed, which bids fair to render the leadline obsolete, has been invented by Mr. James Burn, a Tyne-side pilot. It is practically a range-finder applied to measuring the distance away of the sea-bottom. A beam from a searchlight is projected straight downwards through a thick glass circular window in the ship's bottom and produces a spot of light on the bottom of the sea. A second glass window is provided at a known distance from the first. Now, if the spot of light be observed from the second window through a small telescope, or even through a tube which is so pointed as to keep the image in the middle of the field, we have all the factors required for finding the depth. It is simply a question of calculating the perpendicular in a right-angled triangle having a known base (the distance between the telescope and the horizontal) in addition to the right angle. If desired, the telescope could be mounted on trunnions, and provided with a graduated circle upon which a fixed pointer would show the angle. It would, however, be cumbersome and slow to calculate the depth each time; hence a table of angles and corresponding depths could be prepared and added; or, simpler still, the depths could be marked on the circle instead of degrees. Mr. Burn's invention has been applied to the Tyne pilot-boat, Queen of the May. The window for the searchlight, which measures 9 inches in diameter, is protected by a gate valve for shutting off the water in case of accidents. The second window is 31 feet 5 inches further forward in the ship, this distance thus forming the base of the triangle. It should be added that in actual practice, instead of a telescope being used, the image of the spot of light on the bottom is reflected by a mirror to the observer, and the angle is given by a flat tube under the window, the tube being trained on the spot by the aid of a lever. This arrangement, however, is experimental. In the final apparatus means will be provided for adjusting the angle-finder and reading the depth from the chart-room at any moment. Depths have been given correctly by this device up to 16 fathoms, the greatest depth of the sea where the pilot-boat cruises. There is little doubt that in time it will be widely adopted.

Advertising as an Art

It is essential that publicity methods should be original and striking, and we imagine that the public generally will apply this test to the methods of the sweets trade in running a "Candy Week" with the purpose of calling attention to the virtues of their goods. It is one of the new ideas in trade booming, and, it may be added, an idea of some national importance. Increased consumption means more trade and less unemployment.

In this case about five thousand manufacturers and sweet retailers are making a massed attack on the public. The commodity they have to sell is always popular but it is not always understood that sugar, especially when taken in an attractive form, is a valuable food, for young people in particular, while older people who take vigorous physical exercise find it an energiser. The sweets trade is determined to let the public know that the article they sell is worth buying.

Other trades are watching their experiment in advertising with interest. It is successful already, although "Candy Week" has only just begun. The sweets shops report that since the newspaper publicity started sales have gone up by leaps and bounds. This new illustration of the art of advertising is likely to make history in publicity methods.—Liverpool Courier.

Unintentional but Enlightening

A traveller by a certain steamer had written to the head lodging a strong complaint about the presence of vermin in his berth. He received in reply a letter of great effusiveness, assuring him that never before had such a charge been made against any vessel of this scrupulously clean line, and that the management would have suf-

Fortunes in Films

Industry That Made Four Men Wealthy
The romance of the cinema, made a career of amazingly rapid growth. Only twelve years have passed since the first Wild West films were shown to children in shops on Saturday and Sunday nights, for the modest fee of one penny.

It is estimated that over $9,000,000 visits are paid every week to the cinemas of the British Isles; the amount of capital invested in the industry in England alone is well over $50,000,000, and film artists, who at one time were content with two or three pounds per week, now earn, in some cases, as much as $100,000 or more annually.

Naturally, there were fortunes for the pioneers of this young gold-mine. One of them, now a millionaire, was formerly behind a counter.

Few Failures.

An ex-working-tailor has recently purchased a world-famous West-end theatre for a sum considerably over a quarter of a million.

Two South Wales workmen, one a dealer in furniture and the other a watchman, bought a cinema three years ago. To-day they own a magnificent picture-house round about London, bringing in a huge revenue.

Of course, there have been failures, but these can usually be traced to lack of enterprise, carelessness, or bad judgment.

There is a man in London to-day who would jump at the offer of a job at $3 a week, yet not very long ago he owned a super-cinema worth $150,000. But such cases are rare, and the number of bankruptcies among exhibitors is scarcely more than a dozen during the past two years.

What Theatres Cost.

To-day a palatial up-to-date cinema, built to hold 1,000 to 1,500 people, will cost at least $50,000 from start to finish--the Regent at Brighton is stated to have cost $100,000--and many of the London houses to-day are worth anything from $120,000 to $300,000.

One small cinema, seating only about six or seven hundred, is actually valued at $120,000, and recently an offer of $850,000 was put up for seven London picture theatres.

In some cases houses are rented, although to-day it is practically impossible to get a West-end house on these terms.

The highest prices are obtained in London, but the provinces are not very far behind, especially in the great industrial and holiday centres. Thus, $2,500 a year was recently asked for a house in the northern town, and another in Kent is rented at $2,000 per annum.

A Lady But Not a Lady

COMEDY OF ERRORS AT A WEDDING.

A comedy of errors concerning a bride's name occurred in a London register office when Lady Gladys Guilford arrived with her fiancée to be married. She was met with a courteous "Good morning, my lady," the officials being under the impression that she was a titled woman. It was not until the registrar began reading out the names that the bridegroom intervened with the remark, "But I told you last week that my fiancée was Lady Gladys Guilford."

"Oh, yes, that is quite all right. We don't read out titles," said the official. "Titles?" said the bridegroom. "I don't understand what you mean." "But you said your fiancée was Lady Gladys Guilford," said the puzzled registrar. "That's a lady?" "No, she is not a lady--yes of course she is a lady," replied the confused bridegroom. "What I mean is that she was christened Lady, but she has no title."

It was then that the officials realised that the bride's name was Lady Gladys and the wedding proceeded.

Trade of the Empire

THE ECONOMIC CONFERENCE—
SETTLEMENT, FINANCE, PRE-FERENCE—DOMINION VIEWS.

(The Times, Oct. 2.)

The first meeting of the Imperial Economic Conference was held yesterday at the Cabinet Office, in Whitehall Gardens.

The three broad questions proposed for consideration by the Conference are those of Empire Settlement, Financial Co-operation between Great Britain and the Dominions, and Imperial Preference. These and other subjects which may arise will be discussed with special reference to the desirability of promoting practical means for the improvement of inter-Imperial trade.

Sir Philip Lloyd-Greame, President of the Board of Trade, presided at yesterday's meeting.

The full attendance was twenty, as compared with fifteen at the meeting of the Imperial Conference on Monday.

The President's Speech.

Sir P. Lloyd-Greame, in his opening speech, gave a short survey of the present economic situation and reviewed the work which is to come before the Conference. He submitted that the economic problems and difficulties with which all were faced had a common origin in the upheaval caused by the war and the dislocation and disturbance which had followed in its train, and expressed a belief that they were susceptible to a large extent of a common solution.

The export trade of Great Britain, he said, was still far below the volume which had been secured before the war, and steady employment could be restored and maintained in this country only by wiping out this deficit and increasing our old proportion of trade to meet the needs of an expanding population. The vital problem was the problem of markets, the restoration of old markets, and particularly of new markets.

The President of the Board of Trade drew lessons from the period of easy economic success between 1850 and 1870, which coincided with enormous development in America and other parts of the world, and from the way the United Kingdom was able to carry on in the years of depression which followed the Franco-Prussian War owing to the fact that our exports of manufactures within the Empire almost doubled in those difficult years. In the light of these lessons he thought they could look to the future with hope.

He pointed out that the resources of the British Empire were as great as those of the United States, and suggested that Great Britain and the Dominions together were capable of realising a development comparable with that which had been seen in America. That development, he thought, would come, in any case, in the fullness of time, but he pressed that it should be anticipated. By a bold and business-like policy of accelerating the development of the Empire and its resources, he contended, they would find immediate relief in present difficulties and bring about a greater and quicker increase in the wealth and strength of all parts of the Commonwealth.

Subjects of Discussion.

Sir P. Lloyd-Greame proceeded to discuss the various subjects which it is proposed shall come before the Conference, and grouped them in the three broad classes of Empire Settlement, Financial Co-operation and Imperial Preference. The problem of the adjustment of population, industrially and agriculturally, he said, could only be solved if it were treated as an Imperial problem. It would be for the Conference to consider whether at present we were working on the right lines.

On the question of financial co-operation, he admitted that the acceleration of Empire development was largely a matter of finance, and as an instance of the need for speeding up development he drew attention to the requirements of British industry in regard to raw cotton at a reasonable price and the existence of large tracts of territory within the British Dominions capable of producing cotton of the right quality.

A frank discussion on Imperial Preference was promised, and the Conference chairman gave an undertaking that the British Government would approach the question with a strong desire to increase mutual trade with the Dominions, and be ready and willing to take what action was possible for them and of value to other parts of the Empire to secure that end.

Sir P. Lloyd-Greame, in conclusion, indicated that other subjects on the agenda paper included such questions as Imperial communications, co-operation in commercial intelligence, the preparation of Imperial economic statistics, the reciprocal enforcement of judgments, and Imperial policy with regard to the import and export of live stock. If they could frame practical proposals and work out a common and complementary policy on these matters, he said, the Conference would have accomplished work of real and lasting value. He fore-shadowed the discovery of a need, however, for establishing some machinery by which a closer contact on economic questions could be maintained, and while he did not dogmatize on the form of this machinery he commended the problem as deserving consideration.

Speeches in Reply.

Speeches in reply were made by the representatives of the Dominions. Mr. MacKenzie King said that Canada had now reached a point after the war when they could welcome immigration of the right type, but regard must be given to what it might be possible for industry normally to absorb. Much could be done in the Conference by way of working out phases of emigration development which would be of advantage alike to the old world and to the new.

Mr. Massey spoke of the possibilities of increasing trade with the Empire.

General Smuts, who intimated that Mr. Burton would be the chief representative of South Africa at the Conference, contributed a lucid statement of the attitude of South Africa towards several of the matters to be discussed. He disclaimed any intention to launch an attack on British fiscal policy, but suggested that it was possible for additional preferences on certain articles to be given in such a way as to lead to a tremendous development of Empire resources. He touched on the great possibilities in South Africa of producing practically everything this country needed in the way of raw materials, and referred specially to cotton and tobacco. By a settled policy of developing our African estate he saw the provision of means to pay off our American liability.

With regard to migration, he described Africa's peculiar situation and said that the immigrants needed were men of special training, men of the skilled artisan type or men with a certain amount of capital. The Dominion especially wanted capital. General Smuts added a comment on the proposal to establish consultative machinery to carry out policies recommended at the Conference. The Empire worked well, he said, without machinery.

Mr. Innes, for the Indian delegation, threw out a remark that India was not content to acquiesce indefinitely in a position of exporting mainly raw materials and foodstuffs and importing many manufactures. She had declared, he said, for a policy of "discriminating protection," but if this increased the wealth and productivity of India those who traded with her had nothing to fear.

Mr. Ormsby-Gore spoke for the Crown Colonies and Protectorates.

The Conference adjourned until tomorrow morning.

CONFERENCE OF PRIME MINISTERS.

To-Day's Meeting.

The Conference of Prime Ministers will meet again at No. 10 Downing Street at 11 o'clock this morning. It will be asked to consider the draft agenda list submitted by the British Government and to consider the procedure for its future meetings.

The question as to how far the public should be informed of the proceedings of the Conference will be one of the first to be settled. It is understood that most of the Dominion delegates are willing to allow the public as much information as possible.

When the formal business of today's meeting is concluded the Duke of Devonshire will make a statement reviewing the political and economic situation in the Crown Colonies. Although most of the problems affecting these Colonies are properly speaking matters for the consideration of the Economic Conference, there are several important questions, such as defence and the adjustment of relations between the Crown Colonies and the rest of the Empire, which remain for discussion by the Prime Ministers.

It is not anticipated that today's meeting will extend into the afternoon, and the Conference will probably adjourn about 1.30. The next meeting will be held on Friday, when Lord Curzon will make a detailed and confidential statement on the Government's foreign policy, particularly as it is affected by the questions of German reparations and the French occupation of the Ruhr.

Mr. Bruce, Prime Minister of Australia, is expected to arrive in London early to-morrow evening. It is stated that the Irish Free State delegates, who have been compelled to return to Dublin for the opening of the Free State Parliament, will return as soon as possible.

Buckingham Palace Called a Firetrap by British Experts

Oct. 12. (A.P.)—Buckingham Palace, home of King George and Queen Mary, is a firetrap subject to great fire risks, according to an official report of a commission appointed to investigate fire prevention in England. British public is alarmed at the danger to the royal family residence in the palace, for during one of the brilliant court parties when thousands of guests are present, could easily result in a disaster.

High royalty itself may often be a danger, royal residences rarely escape. Buckingham Palace, as far as appearances go, is no exception.

Each year thousands of tourists gaze in wonder and admiration on the imposing stone facade of the palace, one of the architectural sights of the British capital. Few of them know the palace front is a shell hiding an older building. It is like a beautifully decorated theatre fire curtain which separates the people from the stage settings of a royal court.

Behind the noble palace front is a maze of royal reception rooms, banquet halls and living quarters for the royal family, and its retinue of retainers, court officials and servants. These quarters are separated by inflammable partitions and linked by a labyrinth of drafty hallways and a net work of old fashioned electric wiring and heating installations.

Despite the fire risks, no English government buildings are ever insured, no matter what may be their value or that of their contents.

During the year ended December, 1920, the commission reports, 21 fires occurred in government buildings, eight of them being attributed to short circuits due to defects in old electrical installations.

Buckingham palace is only one of London's historic buildings open to fire risks because of the nature of its construction. Somerset house, depository of priceless documents, is another. This building is a source of great anxiety to the government, according to the report of the commission on fire prevention.

Many precautions are taken against fires in Buckingham palace. Somerset house, the Houses of Parliament and other government buildings. There are continual patrols of night watchmen, many of whom are trained firemen. Servants and officials of all classes receive instruction in the use of fire extinguishers. Government officials explain the lack of insurance by saying that in many cases such as the House of Parliament, it would be impossible to estimate their value for insurance purposes.

1,200 Youthful Farmers to Assemble in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 13. (A.P.)—The second National Boys' and Girls' Club Congress to be held here in connection with the International Livestock Exposition, December 1-8, will bring more than 1,200 winners of club work projects held in the various states during the last year.

The champion boys and girls who will be awarded the trip are being chosen by state agricultural colleges and will come largely from the rural districts where they were graded on excellence in work done in the activities of the Dairy Calf Clubs, Pig Clubs, Home-Making, Garden, Poultry, Sewing and other Clubs. The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad offered a contribution equal to the cost of one-round trip from the champion's home town to Chicago for those chosen in the states through which the road passes.

More than 600,000 boys and girls participated in the contests held last year, who, according to announcement by stock show officials, produced stock and farm crops valued at $5,500,000. Enrollment in the clubs this year will exceed 700,000, according to compilations made at the state institutions. The work is being encouraged by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and is considered one of the important phases of agricultural development now under way.

The visiting youth will be given a series of entertainments and will visit points of interest in the city. Among the features will be a luncheon given by the Chicago Board of Trade. Secretary Wallace and the president of the American Bankers' Association will make addresses.

Come to the Women's Franchise League Meeting, The Old Colony Club, Thursday evening, at 8.15 p.m.—Oct. 23, 24, 25.

Refusing to Grow Old

Striking as are the records of long-lived families that have been published recently, science gives every encouragement to suppose that in the next hundred years they will easily be surpassed.

Modern mastery of disease has given the middle-aged a definitely greater expectation of longer life. The feature of population statistics in years to come will doubtless be the increased proportion of the elderly and the old in Great Britain.

Our times are a great tonic for old age because they are more interesting; there is more to live for, to experience, and to enjoy. Elderly people, it is noticeable nowadays, politely decline to be put on the shelf like their Victorian parents. They dress youthfully, they dance, and generally take their part in the modern bustle of life. And their enjoyment is justified by results. A reasoned refusal to grow old is clearly the best way to keep young.

Buried in Well

Second Fall of Earth Prevents Rescue Alive.

In shifts of 50, some one hundred miners worked throughout the night in an unsuccessful endeavour to rescue alive a comrade who had become buried under a tremendous fall of earth. The unfortunate man, John Pew, of Rainworth, was engaged in digging a well to obtain a water supply for a bungalow at Blidworth, near Nottingham, when the sides suddenly fell in upon him. Pew had reached a depth of about 20 feet and had timbered the sides of the well. Suddenly the woodwork gave way and Pew became buried under the falling earth. A rescue party was soon at work, and in a short time Pew's head was freed, but his body was held fast in the sand. Later another big fall of earth again completely buried Pew, and eventually his dead body was recovered.

Does Your Roof Leak?

If your roof leaks and you know where the water comes in, you can probably make it watertight with Plastic LASTY-GUM. A 5 lb. roll of Plastic LASTY-GUM costs only $1.50. Your carpenter will tell you that Plastic LASTY-GUM won't crack like cement and won't run like tar. Plastic LASTY-GUM is put on with a trowel and is guaranteed to stop leaks.

If your roof needs coating, we recommend LIQUID ELASTIGUM, which is put on with a brush. Liquid Elastigum will put a new surface on your roof and keep it in good condition. A gallon can costs $1.50, a five gallon can costs $6.00. This is the best coating for rubber roofing.

If your roof needs a new covering, we can sell you Campbell's Patent Roofing complete with fittings for $2.85 per roll side roll. A roll weighs about 55 lbs., contains 108 square feet of roofing and will cover 100 square feet of roof surface. Regular price is $4.50. In June this year we purchased 3000 rolls of Campbell's Patent Roofing from the manufacturers, who were selling their stock at auction. When our present supply is sold, new shipments will sell at $4.50 per roll. Now is the time to get a new roof covering at a bargain price.

Roofs covered with Campbell's Patent Roofing pay less for Fire Insurance than roofs covered with ordinary tarred felt. At our present low price of $2.85 per roll with fittings FREE, Campbell's Patent Roofing is cheaper than felt. Don't delay ordering, we are selling hundreds of rolls each month.

Stone Age Relics

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—Bones and other relics of a race of men who lived approximately 30,000 years ago have been unearthed in southwest France by Dr. Henry U. Hall, of the University of Pennsylvania Museum. Dr. Hall, who returned yesterday from Europe, said the race was only a step above the animal.

"They lived in the paleolithic or old stone age, and used crude, unpolished flint implements," he said. "The relics I found were in a clay bank at the foot of a hill. They probably had been washed down from an escarpment, where there probably had been a settlement."

In addition to the human bones, Dr. Hall said that he also unearthed the bones of animals, killed evidently by the prehistoric men. He said the human bones resembled the neanderthal type.

Thought He Was Still Mad

The German papers are fond of printing funny stories about the depreciation of the mark. Here is one of the latest, attributed by the way, to no less a personage than Dr. Stresemann, the German Chancellor.

It concerns a man who had been in a lunatic asylum for thirteen years, and who, released the other day, called a taxicab, asked that he should be driven to the Hotel Adlon, and then, finding a twenty-mark gold piece, which had been in his pocket for thirteen years, gave it to the cabman, knowing nothing, of course, of the adventure of the mark while he had been insane.

To his surprise, the cabman gave him the change—eighteen million paper marks!

The ex-lunatic regarded the pile of notes in dismay, and gasped. It was too much for him.

"Drive me back to the asylum," he said.

A Danish scientist tells us that he believes that the planet Mars is unoccupied. We thank him for the tip, but it's really too far off to afford us relief in the matter of house shortage.

How Far do Fashions

IN CLOTHES AFFECT OUR BODIES?

Undoubtedly our fashions in dress do affect the development of our bodies, though, of course, very slowly. The wearing, for instance, of a tight-fitting hat that admits no air may not result in the wearer going bald, but it successive generations persist in the habit a general baldness must follow the fashion.

No, too, high and tight collars will in time arrest the full development of the neck, while an exaggerated fashion in extremely narrow or high-heeled shoes in time actually alters the shape of the foot, besides changing the carriage of the body.

Through medical opinion is still divided on the question of corsets for women, there can be no doubt that the tight-lacing of the past was injurious in the extreme to the physique of our grandmothers. Lungs and other organs were unduly compressed, and the absurd fashion was largely responsible for much of the faintness and other feminine weaknesses of the period.

The Panama

(By A. C. GRIEVE.)

After a long slant across the Line, we were coming up to Panama. We carried copra. South Sea copra, since the war, and until recently, used to go in great six-masted schooners up to Frisco, but is again finding its way, in ever-growing volume, to Great Britain or to Europe—finding its way too, not via Sydney or Auckland, as in the old days, but direct, without transshipment, through the Panama Canal. Big freighters are chartered to come across from Sydney, or from Yokohama, and pick up cargo in Fiji, Tonga, and Samoa. There is even prospect of a direct service, outwards as well as homewards, to carry to the islands trade goods and food-stuffs which used to come exclusively from Sydney, Auckland or America. Copra, as everybody knows, is dried coco-nut, and is used in soap-making, and for other purposes. The palm-tree is the staple product in islands southwards of the Line. Fruit and other things there may, or may not, be; but coco-nuts invariably, either growing wild or in the ordered culture of plantations.

We followed in the wake of another copra-steamer, a week or two before us; and yet another was coming up a month or so behind, all carrying nothing else but copra, opening up a new sea-track of trade. Many tracks converge on Panama; the Pacific coast of North America, the Far East, the Islands, New Zealand and Australia, South America, all contribute their quota. The canal is now only on the threshold of future possibilities, and will mean more in time to come than folks at home perhaps altogether realize. Happily it is in the hands of a people with language and laws akin to ours. The through waterway between the oceans is, to say the least, a very great advantage and convenience to the States, quite a third of the commerce which passes being American coastal; but it is equally a boon to us, and to other users of the sea.

As one gets nearer, other ships show up on the horizon, travelling in converging lines towards their goal, while others, again, pass us on an outward track. After a long quiet time at sea, away from everything, it gives somewhat the notion of a busy junction. While steaming up the Gulf, and with still fifty miles or so to go, we saw a pretty and imposing sight—a U.S. squadron of seventeen light cruisers and destroyers running out to sea at an easy pace, but in close and ordered line. To these succeeded a covey of eight good-sized submarines; conning-towers well above the water; and, behind them, their mother-ship, a gray-painted, clipper-bowed, yacht-like vessel. After these again a little, there came the flagship of the officer commanding, a rear-admiral, and then behind him, at a good respectful distance, a further bunch of submarines: this lot followed by a straight-stemmed tender, also gray, and evidently an adapted merchant-vessel. When we arrived there were at anchor in the harbor itself several big battleships and other lesser naval craft. Dapper little launches ran about between them, manned by white-clad, round-capped Yankee tars. One of two other inward-bound steamers were waiting, like ourselves, and the health officer's launch took him speedily to each in turn. We were, perhaps, three-quarters of an hour at anchor, and then moved up to moor at buoys for the night. Large open launches passed up in the dusk, packed with sailors returning from a day ashore.

White, spotless and immaculate, is the all-prevailing tone. What a vast amount of laundering there must be on U.S. naval service in the tropics! The British mind is vain enough to think that Uncle Sam has copied his notions of naval and military smartness from his relative John Bull. The khaki-clad soldiers one sees here and there on the Canal banks are the last thing in smartness; somewhat after the fashion of a garrison battalion at home, except that the ordinary private here is, with regard to tailoring, as stylishly turned out as a sergeant-major might be with us, and in his tropical shirt-sleeves, but for the belt, would not be easy to distinguish from an officer. His visage, of course, is typically American; you don't need to hear him speak to know he hails from U.S.A.

In the morning the Canal pilot came aboard, and a bunch of negroes (West Indians mostly) to manipulate the tow-ropes in the locks; and we got under way about 8 a.m. It was Sunday, and, ashore at Balboa, the wharves displayed an aspect of Sabbath rest and calm. A South American mail-boat, on her way to Liverpool, steamed off about half an hour before us, and we followed at an easy pace. A private yacht, a schooner, lay at moorings in the curve of water just above the port. Her owner, an elderly, well-groomed man, strolled about the narrow deck. He seemed to be alone, without womenfolk or guests, or else they were late risers and had not yet appeared. His crew were garbed in well-cut dark-blue uniforms, and two brown-painted launches lay on each side of his bows. Americans don't believe in rowing, or any other labor, if petrol or electricity can do the work instead.

We were soon in the first lock (Miraflores), and in a trice the gushing sluices had raised our water-level forty feet. Small electric engines, fore and aft, on each wall, towed us onward, and we soon passed through the farther gateway of the lock. In two short miles came our second elevation—at Pedro Miguel. In this lock we gained another forty feet, or so, making in all eighty-five feet above sea-level. The main section of the Canal between this and the Gatun Locks is about thirty-three miles. Six miles more takes one to the coal-wharf at Colon (or Cristobal), the Caribbean port. Ships can pass abreast in the Canal, and we met several. The latter half of this main section is through the Gatun Lake. Up to where the lake begins to widen one sees the railroad running parallel on the right bank. Then it goes out of sight, and nothing is visible but water and islands and passing ships, until one reaches Gatun. The famous Culebra Cut, a few miles beyond Pedro Miguel, is, as it were, the top of the divide, and is the crucial point of this great engineering feat. Here there have been landslides, and the channel, cut out of earth and rock, is thus liable to threat of temporary blockage. In theory it is very easy to say, "Build a brick wall," or something else equally impregnable, on paper. But in practice things don't work out with inevitable certitude. Culebra has given trouble already, and it may, quite possibly, again give trouble. Meanwhile there are after-dreages—U.S. Graders, as they call them—long double-deckers, some with fine mosquito-netting guarding the veranda of the living quarters on the upper tier, and powerful machinery installed on the main floor below. If Nature can't be conquered right away, she can at least be circumvented.

We soon leave Culebra and its hills behind us, and in a few miles more are out upon the lake. This is nowhere very wide, or, rather, there are islands on all hands, with more stretches of water hidden behind them. At Gatun, two successive locks quickly bring us down again to ocean-level. A few further miles and we are at the coal-wharf, in its way just as much a modern wonder as the great Canal itself. A vast travelling crane stands between the ship's side and an elevated railway. Along the latter run electric-driven coal-trucks. When these reach the crane, as they do in close succession, each tips its contents on a travelling band, which takes the fuel to a sort of arm, something like an elephant's trunk. Down this rumble and thunder the coals, to pour through whatever hatch may be desired. It is only a matter of very quick adjustment. The great black tank can reach either side, or the centre of the vessel, as may be wanted. When one bunker is filled, the mammoth reaches over to another. As coal here is something of a luxury, being imported expressly for immediate needs, we only take a few hundred tons to enable us to carry on to our next point with what we have already. The time spent on the actual operation works out at almost ten tons to the minute, through one shoot alone—the quickest coaling I have seen in any quarter of the globe. A punt-like boat slips round to our off-side with some fresh provisions, which are soon on board; and then we back out into the stream. As dusk comes on—an early matter in this latitude—we are heading for the open sea, another steamer just before us, and are soon beyond the shelter of the two projecting arms of breakwater, beating on our way northeast across the Caribbean.—Chambers's Journal.

Storm Tragedy

MAN TURNS COPPER COLOUR.

Death by Poisoning.

The great thunderstorm of July 9-10 was proved on Friday at the resumed inquest on Ernest George Wright (27) to have been the indirect cause of the man's death.

At the previous hearing it was shown that the deceased was filling sacks with metal dross while the storm was in progress, and next day he complained of internal pains, and his skin gradually became copper-coloured. Dr. Ross, divisional surgeon, gave it as his opinion that death was due to the effects of poisoning by arsenic-laden hydrogen.

Became Black All Over.

John Driscoll, a foundryman, said that he was working in the same shed as Wright. He was taken ill the day after the storm. He found himself falling about, and had an abdominal pain. He turned a copper-colour, and afterwards became black all over his body.

Mr. Harrison, a Government chemist, said the dross would be capable of giving off arsenic-laden hydrogen with the addition of water. He did not think the atmospheric electricity of the storm would do it.

The coroner said that Dr. Womack, the analyst, had sent him a "report" giving him (the coroner) details of the result of his analysis of the viscera, and showed that he found arsenious oxide.

The coroner found that Wright was poisoned by arsenic-laden hydrogen gas, and that his death was due to misadventure.

Apples! Apples!!

Latest advice on this Fruit from our representatives in the Annapolis Valley, state that "Gravenstein" Apples are practically exhausted for the season and no further lots of this popular grade are available for shipment.

We have therefore instructed our shippers to send along a carload (250 Brls.) of "Kings" and "Blenheims" by next week's steamer, and are booking orders at lowest prices for this shipment to arrive ex. Rosalind from Halifax on Thursday next.

"Kings" and "Blenheims" are great keepers and we hope to have your order.
