By the advice of his political friends, and in the hope of rendering eminent service to his country by counteracting Hutchinson, and in other ways, he relinquished his professional business and embarked at Salem privately for London, Sept. 28, 1774. His voyage was serviceable to his health. At London he had a conference on American affairs with Lord North, and explained to him his views with great freedom; but the British minister scemed anxious to intimidate one who could not be reached in that way, by alluding to the power of Great Britain, and her determination to exert it to effect the submission of the colonies. He visited also Lord Dartmouth and Lord Shelburne, and consulted much with Dr. Franklin, Governor Pownall, Dr. Price, Sheriff William Lee, Arthur Lee, and other friends of America. He also occasionally attended the sitting of parliament. It was at this period that Lord Camden said, "Were I an American, I would resist to the last drop of my blood." Colonel Barre, who once travelled through this country, assured him that such was the ignorance of the English, that two-thirds of them on his return imagined the Americans were all negroes! While in England, Dr. Warren wrote to him, Nov. 21st, "It is the united voice of America to preserve their freedom or lose their lives in defence of it." He attended the debates in the house of Lords, Jan. 20, 1775, and on that day had the high satisfaction of hearing the celebrated speech of Lord Chatham against the ministry and in defence of America, of which he drew up an interesting report. "His language, voice, and gestures," said Mr. Q., " were more pathetic than I ever saw or heard before, at the bar or senate. He seemed like an old Roman senator, rising with the dignity of age, yet speaking with the fire of youth. The illustrious sage stretched forth his hand with the decent solemnity of a Paul, and, rising with his subject, he smote his breast with this speech Chatham said: "For genuine sagacity, for singular moderation, for solid wisdom, manly spirit, sublime sentiments, and simplicity of language, for every thing respectable and honorable, the congress of Philadelphia shine unrivalled. This wise people speak out. They do not hold the language of slaves; they tell you what they mean. They do not ask you to repeal your laws as a favor; they claim it a right,- they demand it. They tell you, they will not submit to them; and I tell you, the acts must be repealed; they will be repealed; you cannot enforce them." Lord Camden followed Chatham on the side of America, and equalled him in every thing, "excepting his fire and pathos. In learning, perspicuity, and pure cloquence, probably no one ever surpassed Lord Camden." He exclaimed: "This I will say, not only as a statesman, politicisn, and philosopher, but as a common lawyer, - my lords, you have no right to tax America. I have searched the matter; I repeat it, you have no right to tax America. The natural rights of man and the immutable laws of nature are all with that people." "Kings, lords, and commons may become tyrants as well as others; tyranny in one or more is the same; it is as lawful to resist the tyranny of many as of onc. When Mr. Selden was asked, in what law book you might find the law for resisting tyranny, he replied, 'It has always been the custom of England,' and "the custom of England" is the law of the land.' Supported by such authorities and by conference with a multitude of the friends of America, and despairing of any change of measures without a previous struggle, Mr. Quincy, by the advice of many friends to his country, determined to return, probably in order by verbal communications to arouse his fellow citizens to the mighty contest. Indeed, as early as Dec. 14, 1774, he wrote: "Let me tell you one very serious truth, in which we are all agreed, your countrymen must seal their eause with their blood." While in London he was in active correspondence with Dickinson, Reed, and other patriots. He embarked for Boston March 16, 1775, with a bad cough and declining health. In his last interview Dr. Franklin said, that "New England alone could hold out for ages against Great Britain, and, if they were firm and united, in seven years would conquer them." After being at sea a few weeks, he became convinced that his fate was inevitable. He had but one desire, that he might live long enough to have an interview with Samuel Adams or Joseph Warren. In the last letter, which he dictated April 21, he explained the reasons of his proceeding to America so early, against his own inclinations and prospects as to health. He had ascertained the sentiments of many learned and respectable friends of America in regard to the course of conduct exacted by the existing crisis. supreme court of New York. His wife was Juli-

"To commit their sentiments to writing was neither practicable nor prudent at this time. To the bosom of a friend they could intrust what might be of great advantage to my country. To me that trust was committed, and I was, immediately upon my arrival, to assemble certain persons, to whom I was to communicate my trust, and, had God spared my life, it seems it would have been of great service to my country." "Had Providence been pleased that I should have reached America six days ago, I should have been able to converse with my friends. I am persuaded that this voyage and passage are the instruments to put an end to my being. His holy will be done!" Such were his last recorded words. Perhaps the battle of Lexington had rendered his communications unnecessary. He died when the vessel was in sight of land. The ship, in a few hours, entered the harbor of Gloucester, Cape Ann. His wife, the sister of the late Deacon Wm. Phillips, who survived him twenty-three years, being at this time with her child and parents at their place of refuge at Norwich, Connecticut, the funeral rites were performed by the inhabitants of Gloucester. His remains were afterwards removed to Braintree. It was the strong passion of Mr. Quincy's soul to become, by reason of his patriotic labors, immortal in the hearts of his countrymen. A just monument to his memory has been raised in his Life, written by his son. Amidst the miserable abandonment of principle, honor, and country, from the most selfish motives, presented frequently to the eye of every modern observer of public men, it is refreshing to behold the noble, daring, truly patriotic zeal of such a man as Josiah Quincy. His son, Josiah Q., late president of Harvard college, published his memoir, 1855; to which is added the celebrated piece, observations on the Boston port bill, etc., first printed in 1774.

le

G

of

to hι

le

wi

bo

he:

W

Le

tur

in i dre

vic

Oh

jou

tra

pol

Ind

He

Oct

era

neb

his enei

diar

Har

the

Aug Indi

by . and

He

desc

an e

was Fran

QUINCY, SAMUEL, died in Boston in 1789, aged about 55. The son of Colonel Josiah, he graduated at Harvard in 1754. In his politics he differed from the other Quincys. He was appointed solicitor-general, when Jonathan Sewall, who married his cousin, was attorney-general. He left Massachusetts with the loyalists and died in the West Indies.

QUINCY, Rev. Mr., born in Boston, was assistant minister of St. Philip's church in Charleston, S. C. He published a volume of sermons about 1750.

QUOY, JOHN, an Indian sachem at Sandwich in 1698. He was one of three rulers over three hundred and forty-eight Indians, who had a meeting-house, and Ralph Jones, a sober man, one of their preachers.

RADCLIFF, JACOB, judge, died in Albany June 25, 1823, aged 62. He was a judge of the ron, Conn.

RADCLIFFE, ROBERT, the founder of the first Episcopal church in New England, established in Boston in 1686, the church which afterwards built King's chapel in Tremont street. Of the time of his death nothing has been ascertained.

RAE, LUZERNE, died in Hartford Sept. 16, 1854, aged 43. A graduate of Yale in 1831, he became a teacher in the asylum for the deaf and dumb; he also engaged in various literary labors. He edited the religious herald, and six vols. of the annals of the deaf and dumb. He had colleeted materials for a history of New England.

RAFINESQUE, S. C. S., professor, died at Philadelphia in 1840, aged 56. His father was a Levant merchant of Versailles. He was born at Galata, a suburb of Constantinople. At the age of 16 he was sent to Philadelphia with his brother: he cultivated a taste for botany and natural history. From 1805 he spent ten years in Sicily; but in sailing for New York in 1815, with his collections, the result of many years' labor, he was wrecked on Long Island, and lost all his treasures, books, manuscripts, and drawings. Dr. Mitchell befriended him. He made a scientific tour to the West, and was appointed professor of botany at Lexington university. He again travelled, lectured, and settled at Philadelphia. He published in Italy various works in 1810 and 1814; also address on botany and zoology, 1816; florula Ludoviciana from the French, 1817; iehthyologia Ohiensis; annals of Kentucky, 1824; Atlantic journal, begun in Philadelphia in 1832; life and travels, 1836. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

RAGUET, CONDY, died in Philadelphia in 1842, aged 58, president of the chamber of commerce. He was the author of several works on political economy.

RALLE, SEBASTIEN, a missionary among the Indians of North America, died Aug. 23, 1724. He was a French Jesuit, and arrived at Quebee in Oct., 1689. After travelling in the interior several years, he went to Norridgewock on the Kennebec river, where he tarried twenty-six years till his death. Being considered as the inveterate enemy of the English, and as stimulating the Indians to their frequent depredations, Captains Harmon and Moulton were sent in 1724 against the village in which he lived. They surprised it August 23d, and killed Ralle, and about thirty Indians, all of whose scalps were brought away by Harmon. The Jesuit was found in a wigwam, and he defended himself with intrepid courage. He was in the 67th year of his age. By his condescending deportment and address he acquired an astonishing influence over the Indians. Such was his faithfulness to the political interests of ana, the daughter of Rev. C. M. Smith of Sha- serve as an incentive to savage ferocity; for he kept a flag, on which was depicted a cross surrounded with hows and arrows, and he raised it at the door of his little church, when he gave absolution previously to the commencement of any warlike enterprise. He was a man of good sense and learning, and was particularly skilful in Latin, which he wrote with great purity. He spoke the Abnâkis language, which was the language of the Norridgewocks, and was acquainted with the Huron, Outawis, and Illinois. In his preaching he was vehement and pathetic. For the last nineteen years his health was feeble, as his limbs had been broken by a fall. An ineffectual attempt was made to seize him in 1722; but some of his papers were secured, and among them a dictionary of the Abnakis language, which is now in the library of Harvard college. It is a quarto volume of five hundred pages. Two of his letters of considerable length are preserved in the lettres édifiantes.

> RALPH, JAMES, died at Chiswick, Eng., in 1762. Born in Philadelphia, he lived in England thirty-two years; he was a poet, and wrote on polities and history.

RALSTON, ROBERT, died at Philadelphia Aug. 11, 1836, aged 74. He was long a successful merchant, and was a philanthropist and Christian, a promoter of benevolent and charitable objects. His daughter married first Ebenezer Rockwood of Massachusetts, and next Rev. Dr. Vermilye of New York.

RALSTON, SAMUEL, D. D., died in Carroll, Pa., Sept. 25, 1851, aged 96. He had been in the ministry seventy years.

RAMAGE, ADAM, died in Philadelphia July 9. 1850, aged 80. He was the inventor of the Ramage printing press, by a change of shape in the serew; said still to be very useful in certain cases.

RAMSAY, DAVID, M. D., a physician and historian, died in Charleston, S. C., May 8, 1815, aged 69. He was the youngest son of James R., an Irish emigrant and farmer, and was born in Lancaster county, Pa., April 2, 1749, and was graduated at Princeton college in 1765. Two brothers also received a public education. He settled in the practice of physic at Charleston, where he was eminent in his profession. During the war he was a determined whig and a leading member of the legislature; he was also a surgeon in the army. With thirty-seven other citizens he was seized by the British Aug. 27, 1780, and transported to St. Augustine, where he was detained nearly a year. From 1782 to 1786 he was a respected member of congress, being for one year the president. He was subsequently for many years a member of the legislature of South Carolina, and president of the senate. His death was occasioned by a wound, received from an in-France, that he even made the offices of devotion sanc man, named Wm. Linning, who shot him in in 1789, osiah, he olitics he was ap-Sewall, -general. and died was as-Charles-

was То

what medi-

per-

trust,

would ntry."

hould

have

I am

re the

. His

corded

n had

. He

. The Glou-

of the

ed him

ith her

at Nor-re per-

r. His aintree.

soul to immor-

st mon-

his Life,

le aban-

ry, from

ently to lie men,

ng, truly

Quincy.

Harvard

which is s on the 14.

To

Sandwich ver three ad a meetan, one of sermons

n Albany lge of the was Juli-

balls. He suffered exeruciating pain about thirty hours. Linning, some years before, had been brought into court for an attempt to murder, and, indignant because Dr. R. expressed the opinion that he was deranged, had declared his purpose to take his life. His first wife was the daughter of President Witherspoon; she died of the searlet fever, soon after the birth of a son, in 1784. His second wife was the daughter of Henry Laurens. He left four sons and four daughters. His son, Dr. John W. R., died in July, 1813, aged 29. His daughter, Sabina Elliot, married Henry L. Pinckney. Dr. R. was for many years a member of the Independent or Congregational church of Charleston, and he died in the peace of the Christian. His life was devoted to benevolent and patriotic labors. In his zealous anticipations of public improvements he was led to invest his property in projects, by the failure of which he lost his private fortune. He was a man of unwearied industry, and most economical of time, usually sleeping only four hours. In every relation of life he was exemplary. His historical writings are valuable. He published a history of the Revolution in South Carolina, 2 vols. 8vo., 1785; history of the American Revolution, 2 vols., 1789; review of the improvements, etc., of medicine, 1800; the life of Washington, 1801; medical register, 1802; oration on the acquisition of Louisiana, 1804; history of South Carolina, 2 vols., 1809, with valuable public documents annexed; a biographical chart; memoirs of Martha L. Ramsay, 1811; eulogium on Dr. Rush, 1813; history of the United States, 3 vols., 1816; universal history Americanized, 8 vols.

RAMSAY, MARTILA LAURENS, the wife of the preceding, died June 10, 1811, aged 51. The daughter of Henry Laurens, she was born Nov. 3, 1759. After passing ten years in England and France she returned to this country, and was married in Jan., 1787. She was the mother of eleven children, eight of whom survived her. She was a woman of talents, learning, and picty. She fitted her sons for college. One of her Sunday employments was reading the New Testament in Greek with her sons, and in French with her daughters. When, in the absence of her husband, she was the head of her family, she daily prayed with them and read the Scriptures. Of her benevolence, the following is an instance: When in France she received from her father a present of 500 guineas. With a part of this sum she purchased and distributed French testaments, and established a school at Vigan. Memoirs of her life, with extracts from her writings, were published by her husband, 2d ed., 1812.

RAMSAY, ALEXANDER, M. D., an anatomist, was a native of England, but resided for many the back with a large pistol, loaded with three and physiology. He died at Parsonsfield, Maine, Nov. 24, 1824, aged about 70. He had been bitten two years before by a rattlesnake; and he supposed that his last sickness was the consequence of the poison, producing an altered state of the lymphatics of his lungs. He was a very skilful anatomist. He published anatomy of the heart, eranium, and brain, with a series of plates, 2d ed., Edinburgh, 1813.

RAMSAY, WILLIAM, captain, died in Boon county, Mo., May 24, 1845, aged 104. He served during the whole of the Revolutionary war, and was an Indian fighter in Kentucky. He removed to Missouri in 1802.

RAMSEY, Mrs., wife of William R., missionary, died at Bombay June 11, 1834, aged 29. Her name was Mary Wire, of Philadelphia.

RAMSEY, JAMES, D. D., died at Frankfort,

Pn., March 6, 1855, aged 84.

RAND, WILLIAM, minister of Kingston, Mass., died in 1779, aged within a week of 80. Born in Charlestown, he graduated at Harvard in 1721, in the class of Drs. Chauncy and Pemberton. He was the minister of Sunderland from 1724 to 1745, and of Kingston from 1746 to 1779, in all about fifty-five years in the ministry. He was a man of eminence. He published a sermon on preaching Christ, 1736; at ordination of D. Parsons, 1739; of A. Hill; of A. Williams; at the convention, 1757. - Sprague's Annals.

RAND, ISAAC, M. D., vice-president of the medical society, died in Charlestown, Mass., in 1790, aged 71. He studied medicine with Dr. Thomas Greaves of C., his native town. In 1775 he had a small pox hospital in Cambridge. Without a college education, he was respectable for his attainments and was held in high esteem.

RAND, John, first minister of Lyndeborough, N. H., died in Bedford in 1805, aged 78. Born in Charlestown, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1743, and was pastor from 1757 to 1762. He was college librarian. There being no meetinghouse when he was settled, he was ordained Dec. 3d in a barn.

RAND, ISAAC, M. D., a physician, died in Boston Sept. 11, 1822, aged 79. The son of Dr. Isaac R. of Charlestown, Mass., he was born April 27, 1743, and graduated at Harvard college in 1761, in which year he and Samuel Williams accompanied Professor Winthrop to Newfoundland, to observe the transit of Venus. In 1764 he settled as a physician in Boston, and rose to eminence. In the Revolution he was a royalist, but, taking no active part in politics, he was not molested. He remained in Boston while it was possessed by the enemy. From 1798 to 1804 he was president of the Massachusetts medical society. He was for many years a professor of religion. Such was his charity to the poor, that he gave years in this country as a lecturer on anatomy them not only his services, but his money. For Li ge the aft go

ofli

ide

1 ty

ρι

gl

 Λ_1

sici He 1 delp of t I Mai uate ches

retu

R

fam into zeal Eng ing eonj the R gres nati neyform who He gess the its 1 the 24tl Han after died R died John left tion laine, n bitnd he consestate a very of the Boon served ar, and emoved plates,

nissionged 29. a. inkfort, ı, Mass., Born in 1721, ton. He 1724 to 9, in all e was a mon on D. Par-; at the of the lass., in with Dr. In 1775 e. Withtable for eem.

borough, 8. Born Harvard 62. He meetingned Dec.

d in Bos-

on of Dr. was born rd college Williams Tewfoundn 1764 he se to emialist, but, not mot was pos-04 he was al society. f religion. t he gave ney. For ty. His manners were dignified and courtly. He published a tract on hydrocephalus internus, and a discourse on the use of the warm bath and foxglove in phthisis. — Thacher.

RAND, BENJAMIN, LL. D., died in Boston April 26, 1852, aged 67. Born in Weston, he graduated at Harvard in 1808, and was a distinguished member of the Boston bar:

RANDALL, RICHARD, M. D., governor of Liberia, died April 19, 1829. He was born in Annapolis, studied physic in Philadelphia, was surgeon's mate in the navy, and in 1825 commenced the practice in Washington. He was one of the managers of the colonization society, and in 1828, after the death of Mr. Ashmun, was appointed governor of Liberia. He accepted the perilous office; but soon died.

RANDALL, STEPHEN, Dr., died at North Providence March 15, 1843, aged 81.

RANDALL, John, M. D., an esteemed physician in Boston, died Dec. 20, 1843, aged 67. He graduated at Harvard in 1802.

RANDALL, ARCHIBALD, judge, died at Philadelphia May 30, 1846, aged 46. He was a judge of the United States district court.

RANDALL, ABRAHAM, died at Stow, Mass., March 3, 1852, aged 80. Born in Stow, he graduated at Harvard in 1798, was settled at Manchester in 1802, and dismissed in 1808. He then returned to his native town.

RANDOLPH, EDWARD, a man worthy of infamy in New England, was sent over to inquire into the state of the colonies in 1676. In his zeal for Episcopacy he wished to destroy the New England churches, and was the cause of the taking away of the Massachusetts charter. He was conjoined with Governor Andros. He died in the West Indies. - Eliot.

RANDOLPH, PEYTON, first president of congress, died Oct. 22, 1775, aged 52. He was a native of Virginia, of which colony he was attorney-general as early as 1756. In this year he formed a company of one hundred gentlemen, who engaged as volunteers against the Indians. He was afterwards speaker of the house of burgesses. Being appointed one of the deputies to the first congress in 1774, he was, Sept. 5, elected its president. He was also chosen president of the second congress, May 10, 1775, but on the 24th, as he was obliged to return to Virginia, Mr. Hancock was placed in the chair. Mr. Randolph afterwards took his seat again in congress. He died at Philadelphia of an apoplectic stroke.

RANDOLPH, EDMUND, governor of Virginia, died Sept. 12, 1813. He was the only son of John R., attorney-general, who, being a loyalist, left the country at the beginning of the Revolution with Lord Dunmore. He was bred under in 1847, aged 92. his father to the law, but refused to accompany years several families were supported by his boun- him to England. After seeing a little military service in the suite of Washington, he applied himself to the profession of the law, and was appointed attorney-general. He was governor after Patrick Henry from 1786 to 1788, when he was succeeded by Beverly Randolph. In 1790 Washington appointed him attorney-general of the United States; and in 1794 he succeeded Mr. Jefferson as secretary of State, but in consequence of some difficulties with the administration he resigned Aug. 19, 1795. In his private affairs he was much embarrassed. He died in Frederic county, Va. His wife was a daughter of Robert Carter Nicholas, treasurer under the royal government; and by her he had several children. He published a vindication of his resignation, 1795.

RANDOLPH, THOMAS M., colonel, governor of Virginia, died at Monticello June 20, 1828. His wife was a daughter of Mr. Jefferson. Other governors of the name were Edmund, from 1786 to 1788; and Beverly, from 1788 to 1791.

RANDOLPH, MARTHA, died in Albemarle eounty, Virginia, Oct. 10, 1836, aged upwards of 70; the last survivor of the daughters of Thomas Jefferson. She was the widow of Governor Thomas M. Randolph, and a woman of eminent talents and virtues.

RANKINS, CATHARINE, died at Braynefield, Caroline county, Miss., Oct., 1833, aged 109; born near Port Royal, Virginia.

RANTOUL, ROBERT, JUN., senator of the United States, died at Washington Aug. 7, 1852, aged 46. He was born at Beverly, Mass., Aug. 13, 1805, and graduated in 1826, delivering the valedictory poem. After being admitted to the bar he became a resident of Gloucester in 1833, of which town he was a representative. As chairman of a committee he drew up several reports in favor of the abolition of the punishment of death in all eases. It is, perhaps, as much owing to him as to any man, that so many have come to disregard the ancient Divine injunction to punish the murderer with death,-au infliction necessary to the safety of human society. He was on the democratic side in politics. In 1843 he was eollector in Boston; in 1845 he was appointed district attorney for four years. In 1851 he was chosen senator to supply for a few days the vaeancy oceasioned by the resignation of Mr. Webster. In November he was chosen a member of · eongress by the united votes of the democratic and free-soil parties. His speeches and writings have been collected in one volume.

RAPP, FREDERIC, died in July, 1834, aged 59; the leader of the Harmonists, so called, at Economy, their seat in Penusylvania. George Rapp, the founder of the society, a German, died

RATHBUN, VALENTINE, was born in Stonington in 1723, and was by trade a clothier. He formed a Baptist church in Pittsfield, Mass., in 1772, and was their pastor; it was a large church in 1780. He now joined the Shakers in the neighboring town of Hancock, with a large part of his church; and also Mr. Johnson, Presbyterian minister of New Lebanon. In about three months, however, he left them, and wrote Rathbun's hints against their delusions, a tract, of which five editions were soon published. His brother, Daniel Rathbun, remained with them four years: then withdrew and published a more full account of their madness, in 1785. The Baptist church once under his care becoming extinet, a new one was formed in Pittsfield, of which John Francis was the minister from 1806 to his death in 1813.

RATHBUN, BENJAMIN, died in Springfield, New York, in 1854, bequeathing 12,000 dollars to the bible and other societies.

RAUCH, CHRISTIAN HENRY, a Moravian missionary, arrived at New York, July, 1740, and proceeded thence to Shekomeko, an Indian village bordering on Connecticut, near the Stissik mountain. He was successful in his labors. He baptized the three first Indians Feb. 22, 1742, and twenty-six more before the end of the year. Some of his brethren were maltreated by interested whites, opposed to the civilization of the Indians, particularly at New Milford and Peckipsi, now called Poughkeepsie. — Heckweider's Nar.

RAUCII, F. A., minister at Mercersburg, Penn., died March 2, 1841.

RAVENSCROFT, John S., D. D., bishop of North Carolina, died at Raleigh March 5, 1830, aged 57. He was the author of sermons.

RAWDON, Earl of, or Francis Rawdon Hastings, Marquess of Hastings, died on board ship Revenge near Naples, Nov. 28, 1826, aged 73. In 1778 he was adjutant-general of the British army in America. At the battle of Camden, Aug. 16, 1780, he commanded one wing of the army. Severe illness induced him to return to England. In 1793 he was major-general; in 1803 commander-in-chief in Scotland; in 1812 governorgeneral of British India; in 1824 governor of Malta. His wife was Flora Muir Campbell; as he was about to die he requested that his right hand might be cut off and preserved till the death of his wife, to be interred in the same coffin · with her. It was cut off. Whether she preserved it is not stated.

RAWLE, WILLIAM, died April 12, 1836, aged 77. He was one of the first lawyers of Philadelphia, an eminent jurist, respected for his various learning, and an honor to his profession for fifty years. He published an address to the agricultural society, 1819; a view of the constitution of the United States, 2d edition, 1829; discourse on law, 1832.

RAWSON, EDWARD, secretary of Massachusetts colony above forty years, died at Dorchester in 1694, aged about 60. He graduated at Harvard in 1653; his name is printed in italics as a minister. His son Grindall, born in 1658, married Susan, daughter of Rev. John Wilson of Medfield, and had eight sons and five daughters, RAWSON, GRINDALL, minister of Mendon, Mass., died Feb. 6, 1715, aged 56. He was the son of Secretary Edward; was graduated at Harvard college in 1678, and was ordained successor of Mr. Emerson about the year 1680, when there were but about twenty families in the town. Such was his benevolence, that he studied the Indian language that he might be able to preach the gospel of salvation to the Indians in Mendon. He usually preached to them in their own tongue every Sunday evening. His discouragements were great, for he had but little success; but he persevered in his humane exertions. He was highly respected for his talents, picty, and henevolence. He was succeeded by Mr. Dorr. When on his sick bed, as he was reminded of his faithfulness in the service of God, he replied: "O, the great imperfection I have been guilty of! How little have I done for God!" He continued: "If it were not for the imperfection of the saints, there would be no need of a Saviour. In the Lord Jehovah I have righteousness and strength." The last words which he uttered were: "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." He published the election sermon, 1709. - C. Mather's Death of Good Men.

1)(

to se

80

116 bri

mo

R.

wh

inu

ju

ins

Chi

pre

ուս

Cla

dic

son

ate

of

die

Re

Ma

tire

to t tori

176

a n dar

aga

it p

was in t tuti

whi

Stat

Sta

He

res

Virg

RAWSON, GRINDALL, first minister of South Hadley, and of Hadlyme in East Haddam, Coun., died in 1777, aged 69. The son of Rev. G. R. of Mendon, he graduated at Harvard in 1728. He was the first minister of South Hadley, Mass., from 1733 to 1741; then of Hadlyme, and remained pastor until in 1745 he was dismissed.

. RAWSON, GRINDALL, minister of Yarmouth, Mass., died in 1794, aged 73. The cousin of the preceding, born in Milton, he graduated at Harvard in 1741; was from 1751 to 1754 the minister of Ware; and was pastor at Yarmouth from 1755 to 1750. — Sprague's Annals.

RAWSON, JAMES, D. D., died in Hungan's parish, Virginia, Aug. 26, 1854.

RAY, WILLIAM, a poet, died at Auburn, N. Y., in 1827, aged 56. He was born in Salisbury, Conn., and had but little education. After several ineffectual attempts to provide for his family, he sailed to the Mediterranean in 1803 on board the frigate Philadelphia, which struck upon a rock near Tripoli, and fell into the hands of the Tripolitans. He was a slave for a year and a half, and his sufferings were great. In 1809 he settled in Essex county, N. Y.; but was unsuccessful in trade. In the war of 1812 he was a major in the detached militia. He afterwards lived in Onondaga. His volume of poems was published in 1821. In the exordium he says:

"When you're captured by a Turk, Sit down and write a better work."

- Spec. Amer. Poetry, II. 137.

RAY, JOSEPH, M. D., died in Cincinnati, Ohio, April 17, 1855, aged 48. He was an eminent teacher in various aces, and president of the Woodward high school. He published three treatises on arithmetic, and two on algebra, in good repute at the west.

RAYMOND, WILLIAM, captain, commanded a company of young men of Beverly in the expedition to Canada in 1690; to him and them a township of land was given in reward of their services. Their pastor, Mr. Hale, was chaplain.— R. Rantoul's Memoir of Hale, in coll. hist.

soc. 3d series, vol. 7.

RAYNER, JOHN, or Reyner, died at Dover, N. H., in April, 1669, probably as old as 70 years. He had his degree at Magdalen college, Cambridge, in 1625. He began to preach at Plymouth about March, 1635, and was successor of R. Smith as the teacher from 1636 to 1654, when he left the town in consequence of the diminution of his church by emigration and of prejudices against a learned ministry. He was installed at Dover in 1657. He manifested the Christian virtues and was an able and faithful preacher. The instruction of children occupied much of his attention. He married Frances Clark of Boston about 1642.

RAYNER, JOHN, minister of Dover, N. H., died in Braintree Dec. 21, 1076, aged 34. The son of J. Rayner, born in Plymouth; he graduated in 1663, and settled in 1671, the successor of his father.

READ, GEORGE, chief justice of Delaware, died in 1798, aged 64. He was a patriot of the Revolution, was of Irish descent, and born in Maryland in 1734. After he was admitted to the bar he relinquished to his brothers his right to two shares of his father's estate. He was attorney-general of the three lower counties from 1763 till 1775. In August, 1774, he was chosen a member of congress and continued in that body during the Revolutionary war. Though he voted against the declaration of independence, thinking it premature, yet he signed the instrument, and was truly a friend of his country. He presided in the convention which formed the first constitation of Delaware, and was a member of that which formed the constitution of the United States. He was also a senator of the United States, and chief justice from 1793 till his death. He was a distinguished judge, and in private life respectable and estimable. - Goodrich.

READ, CLEMENT, minister in Charlotte county, Virginia, died in 1841, aged 71.

READ, LEIGH, brigadier-general, died at Tallahassee, Florida, in 1841, aged 31; a brave officer in the Seminole war in 1836.

READ, John, a great lawyer in Massachusetts, died Feb. 7, 1749, aged about 72. He graduated at Harvard in 1697. He was a man of talents and integrity, and a friend of the people. He was a representative of Boston and a councillor. The next age was fond of quoting his opinions and sayings. — Eliot.

READ, JOHN, M. D., died at Philadelphia in November, 1792.

READ, Collinson, published abridgment of the laws of Pennsylvania, 1804.

READ, D., published American singing book, also a new collection of psalm tunes, Dedham, 1805.

READ, Thomas, D. D., died at Wilmington, Delaware, in 1823. He was many years an excellent preacher in the Presbyterian church. As he received an honorary degree at Princeton in 1772, he was probably aged 75 or more at his death.— Rev. T. R. died in Montgomery county, Maryland, Jan. 5, 1838, aged 90, nearly forty years rector of Prince George's parish.

READ, WILLIAM, doctor, died at Charleston, S. C., April 20, 1845, aged 91. He had the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and was of Washington's staff in the war of the Revolution.

READ, NATHAN, judge, died in Hallowell, Maine, Jan. 20, 1849, aged 89. He graduated in 1781, and soon opened a school in Sulem for young ladies, and he became noted for his mechanical science and inventions. He was a member of congress from Essex county in 1801. He emigrated to Maine. Of the American academy he was a member. Such were his high inventive powers, that before Fulton he applied steam to navigation, but with paddles instead of wheels.

IREADING, THOMAS, a distinguished patriot of the Revolution, died near Flemington, N. J., in 1814, aged 81. He was religious from youth; in dying he said, "I am now ready to be offered."

REAM, JEREMIAH, a preacher in Sumter district, South Carolina, after he was ninety years old; died after 1797, aged 100. — Ramsay.

REDFIELD, WILLIAM C., died in New York Feb. 12, 1857, aged 68. Born in Middletown, Conn., he came to New York in 1825. He was a man of science and zealously promoted steam navigation. In 1828 he published a paper on a route of a great western railway. He began early to study the theory of storms. His writings on meteorology appeared in the American journal of science, and in the nautical magazines and journals. He gave much attention also to geology.

RED JACKET, chief of the Seneca Indians, died near Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 20, 1830, aged 80. His Indian name was Sagryuwhahad, Keeper r of South am, Conn., tev. G. R. d in 1728. lley, Mass., e, and remissed. Yarmouth, busin of the duated at 1754 the Yarmouth issachu-

rchester

at Har-

ies as a

58. mar-

ilson of ughters.

Mendon,

was the

at Har-

necessor

ien there

n. Such e Indian

each the

Mendon. n tongue

agements

s; but he

He was

and be-

Ir. Dorr.

led of his replied:

guilty of!

ontinued:

he saints.

. In the strength."

. "Come,

lished the Death of

uls. Hungan's purn, N. Y., Salisbury,

fter several his family, on board
upon a rock
f the Tripoa half, and y settled in uccessful in hajor in the d in Onon-

Awake. He had always strenuously opposed the introduction of Christianity, of schools, and of the arts of civilized life among his people. Before his death he was restored to his dignity of chief, from which he had been deposed a few years for his intemperance and other vices. His people were divided into the Christian party and the heathen party. He died a pagan; requesting his wife to put into his hand when he was about to die a vial of water, that, as the devil might attempt to take his soul, he might thus be secure. This expedient might have been the result of a dream, or of the Catholic practice of sprinkling with holy water.

REDLON, SARAH, died at Buxton, Maine, Dec. 26, 1856, aged 100; the widow of Ebenezer R., a Revolutionary soldier. She retained her faculties in old age. The mother of cleven children, her descendants were two hundred and seventy-three.

REDMAN, John, M. D., first president of the college of physicians of Philadelphia, died March 19, 1808, aged 86. He was born in that city Feb. 27, 1722. After finishing his preparatory education in Mr. Tennent's academy, he entered upon the study of physic with John Kearsely, then one of the most respectable physicians of Philadelphia. When he commenced the practice of his profession he went to Bermuda, where he continued for several years. Thence he proceeded to Europe for the purpose of perfeeting his acquaintance with medicine. He lived one year in Edinburgh; he attended lectures, dissections, and the hospitals in Paris; he was graduated at Leyden in July, 1748; and, after passing some time at Gray's hospital, he returned to America, and settled in his native city, where he soon gained great and deserved celebrity. In the evening of his life he withdrew from the labors of his profession; but it was only to engage in business of another kind. In the year 1784 he was elected an elder of the second Presbyterian church, and the benevolent duties of this office employed him and gave him delight. The death of his younger daughter in 1806 was soon succeeded by the death of his wife, with whom he had lived nearly sixty years. He himself soon died of the apoplexy. He was below the middle stature; his complexion was dark and his eyes animated. In the former part of his life he possessed an irritable temper, but his anger was transient, and he was known to make acknowledgments to his pupils and servants for a hasty expression. He was a decided friend to depletion in all the violent diseases of our country. He bled freely in the yellow fever of 1762, and threw the weight of his venerable name into the scale of the same remedy in the year 1793. In the diseases of old age he considered small and frequent bleedings as the first of remedies. He entertained a high opinion of mercury in all chronic diseases, and he gave it in the netural small pox, with the view of tonching the salivary glands about the turn of the pock. He introduced the use of turbith mineral as an emetic in the gangrenous sore throat of 1764. Towards the close of his life he read the later medical writers, and embraced with avidity some of the modern opinions and modes of practice. In a sick room his talents were peculiar. He suspended pain by his soothing manner, or chased it away by his conversation, which was occasionally facctious and full of anecdotes, or serious and instructing. He was remarkably attached to al the members of his family. At the funeral of his brother, Joseph R., in 1779, after the company were assembled, he rose from his seat, and, grasping the lifeless hand of his brother, said: "I declare in the presence of God and of this company, that in the whole course of our lives no angry word nor look has ever passed between this dear brother and me." He then kneeled down by the side of his coflin, and implored the favor of God to his widow and children. He was an eminent Christian. While he was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, he thought humbly of himself, and lamented his slender attainments in religion. His piety was accompanied by benevolence and charity. He gave liberally to the poor. Such was the cheerfulness of his temper, that upon serious subjects he was never gloomy. He spoke often of death, and of the scenes which await the soul after its separation from the body, with perfect composure. He published an inaugural dissertation on abortion, 1748; and a defence of inoculation, 1759.

tl

di

ar

th

la

B

a

ma

acc

Fe

wh

Go

th sho

un

wa

en thi tra

car

Sta

wa

me

of fice

to res

ลา

the

liti

coı

he.

the nic

set

REDMAN, Joseph, Dr., died at Bordentown, N. J., in 1818: he had lived in Philadelphia.

REDWOOD, Adraman, a friend of learning, died in Newport, R. I., in 1788, aged 78. He was a Quaker, and came from Antigua to Newport. In 1730 a number of gentlemen formed a society for the promotion of knowledge and virtue. The establishment of a library being deemed important, Mr. Redwood gave 500 pounds sterling for the purpose. In consequence an incorporation was obtained for the company of the Redwood library; Mr. Collins gave a lot of land; and wealthy citizens subscribed 5,000 pounds. The building was finished in 1750. The British troops in the war carried away some of the finest works; but the library now contains six or seven thousand volumes. — Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

REED, John, an eminent lawyer of Danbury, Conn., settled there perhaps before the beginning of the last century. He was as singular as he was learned. Ancedotes of him may yet be preserved in D.

REED, Joseph, general, president of Penn-in all netura! alivary introretic in owards nedical of the . In a le suschased ccasionous and d to al ieral of he comeat, and, er, said: of this our lives between kneeled ored the He was ashamed unbly of iments in y benevothe poor. per, that my. He es which the body, an inauand a derdentown, lphia. learning, 1 78. He a to Newformed a e and virary being gave 500 onsequence company of e a lot of bed 5,000 in 1750. away some ow contains l. of Amer.

f Danbury, e beginning gular as he yet be pret of Pennsylvania, died March 4, 1785, aged 43. He was cated at Princeton, served under Decatur in 1804; born in New Jersey Aug. 27, 1741, and graduated at Princeton in 1757. He studied law with R. Stockton; also at the Temple in London. On his return he resided in Philadelphia, where he was one of the committee of correspondence in 1774 and president of the convention. accompanied Washington to Cambridge in July, 1775, and as his aid and secretary remained with him during the campaign. In the campaign of 1776 he was adjutant-general, and proved himself a brave, active, and useful officer. By direction of Washington, he cooperated in the affair of Princeton, by attacking the neighboring British posts. In the spring of 1777 he was appointed a general officer in the cavulry, but declined the station, though he still attended the army. He was engaged in the battle of Germantown. In 1777 he was chosen a member of congress. In May, 1778, when he was a member of congress, the three commissioners from England arrived in America. Gov. Johnstone, one of them, addressed private letters to F. Dana, R. Morris, and Mr Reed to secure their influence towards the restoration of harmony, giving to the two latter intimations of honors and emoluments. But he addressed himself to men who were firm in their attachment to America. Mr. Reed had a yet severer trial, for direct propositions were made to him in June, through the agency of an accomplished American lady, known to be Mrs. Ferguson, wife of Henry Hugh F., a Scotchman, who joined the British. She assured him, as from Gov. Johnstone, that 10,000 pounds sterling and the best office in the gift of the crown in America should be at his disposal, if he could effect a reunion of the two countries. He replied, that "He was not worth purchasing; but, such as he was, the king of Great Britain was not rich enough to do it." In Oct., 1778, he was chosen president of Pennsylvania, and he continued in this office till Oct., 1781. During his administration violent parties sprung up from various causes, as the paper currency, opposition to the State constitution, and personal ambition, and he was rudely assailed, as many other illustrious men have been, in the public papers, the vehicles of passion and slander. Yet he remained in office so long as he was eligible; and then returned to the profession of the law. He was content to rest the merits of his administration on the arrangements for establishing the university, for the gradual abolition of slavery, and the demolition of proprietary power. He ever enjoyed the confidence of Washington and Greene. In 1784 he visited England for his health. His wife was the daughter of Dennis De Berdt, an eminent merchant of London and agent for Massachusetts; his son, Jos. R., was a respected citizen of commanded the Vixen brig-of-war in the war of 1812; and died a prisoner in England. Gen. R. was pure in morals and polished in manners. He published remarks on Johnstone's speech, with papers relative to his propositions, etc., 1779; remarks on a publication in the Gazetteer, with an address to the people on the many libels, etc., 1783. This was addressed to Gen. Cadwallader. who replied. - Marshall, 11t. 529, 544; Rogers.

REED, Solomon, minister of Middleborough, Mass., died in 1785, aged 68. Born in Abington, he graduated at Harvard in 1739; was ordained minister of Framingham in 1747; and installed at M. in 1757. Of his sons, John was a Unitarian minister; Solomon, the minister of Petersham, died in 1808, aged 55 ; and Samuel, the minister of Warwick, died in 1812, aged 57. - Sprague's Annals.

REED, Solomon, minister of Petersham, Mass., died in 1808, aged 55. Horn in Middleborough, he graduated at Yale in 1775, and was pastor from 1780 to 1800.

REED, Samuel, minister of Warwick, Mass., died in 1812, aged 57. Born in Middleborough, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1778, and was settled in 1779.

REED, John, D. D., minister of West Bridgewater, Mass., died Feb. 17, 1831, aged 80. He was the son of Solomon R., minister of Middleborough; was graduated at Yule college in 1772, and ordained as colleague with D. Perkins June 7, 1780. He and his two predecessors, D. Perkins and J. Keith, occupied one hundred and sixty-seven years; that is, Mr. Keith from 1664 to 1719, Mr. Perkins from 1721 to 1782, and Dr. R. from 1780 to 1831. He was a member of congress. He published a convention sermon. 1807; before the Plymouth association, 1810; a treatise on baptism, 12mo.

REED, WILLIAM, a missionary, died on his return from India in 1834.

REED, Augustus B., minister of Ware, Mass., died in 1838, aged 38. He graduated at Providence in 1821.

REED, NELSON, died at Haltimore in 1840. aged 88; the oldest Methodist minister in the United States.

REED, Joseph, died in Bordentown, N. J., Jan. 7, 1843, aged 95. He was a soldier of the Revolution: his father was one of the first settlers in the region in which he lived.

REED, JOHN, D. D., died at Poughkeepsie,

N. Y., July 6, 1845, aged 68.

REED, ISAAC G., colonel, died in Waldoborough Feb. 26, 1847, aged 63. His father, Isaac, was a graduate of Cambridge; his mother, Mary, was the daughter of Isaac Gardner, who was slain April 19, 1775. He graduated at Cambridge in 1803, studied law, and settled in W. Philadelphia; his youngest son, Geo. W. R., edu- | He was a legislator of Massachusetts and Maine, a member of the Maine convention, and he designed and prepared the State seal. He was a worthy Christian professor, and died in peace.

REED, Calen, a graduate of 1817, was the son of Rev. John Reed, and died in Hoston Oct. 14, 1854, aged 57. He published a small work,—the general principles of English grammar,—1821. For more than twenty years he was editor of the New Jerusalem magazine, and a believer in the strange notions of the Swedenborgian so-

REED, WILLIAM, died at Marbiehead, suddenly, Feb. 18, 1837, aged 60, while attending the meeting of the Sunday school children. He was an eminent merchant, and of a benevolent and religious character. He was a member of congress from 1811 to 1815; was president of the Sabbath school union of Massachusetts, and of the American tract society, and a member of the board of visitors of the theological seminary at Andover, and of the trustees of Dartmouth college. He left 68,000 dollars to benevolent objects; of which 17,000 were to Dartmouth college, 10,000 to Amherst, 10,000 to the American board of missions, 9,000 and 7,000 to the two churches of Marblehead, and 5,000 to increase the library of Andover seminary.

REED, HENRY, professor of English literature in the university of Pennsylvania, perished on his return from Europe in the steamer Arctic, Sept. 27, 1854, aged 46. He was a grandson of the patriot Joseph Reed, and graduated at the university in 1825. His wife was Elizabeth W. Bronson, a grand-daughter of Bishop White. He studied law, and was an eminent scholar and teacher. He edited a dictionary, and Arnold's lectures on history; he wrote essays and reviews, and a life of General Reed. Since his death, his brother, W. B. Reed, has published his lectures on English literature, from Chaucer to Tennyson.— Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

REED, HANNAH, widow of William Reed, died at Marblehead May 16, 1855, aged about 77. Her maiden name was Hooper, of one of the principal families of M. Her house was the seat of hospitality, and she was always engaged in works of charity. In attending distant meetings of the American board of missions, she sometimes took with her, at her own expense, half a dozen female companions. She was a most accomplished lady and eminent Christian.

REESE, THOMAS, D. D., minister in South Carolina, was graduated at the college of New Jersey in 1768, and was for several years settled over the Presbyterian church at Salem, S. C. He died at Charleston in Aug., 1796. He published an essay on the influence of religion in civil society, 1788; death of Christians is gain, in American preacher, I.; and the character of Haman, in ibid, vol. II.

REESIDE, James, long a famous mail contractor, called "the land admiral," died at Philadelphia in 1842.

REEVE, Ezna, minister of Holland, Mass, died in 1818, aged 85. Born on Long Island, he graduated at Yale in 1757, and was settled in 1785.

REEVE, TAPPING, chief justice of Connecticut. died at Litchfield Dec. 13, 1823, aged 79. He was the son of Abner R., minister of Brookhaven, L. I., was born in Oct., 1744; was graduated in 1763 at Princeton college; and entered upon the profession of the law at Litchfield, Conn., in 1772. He was a patriot in the time of the Revolution. He was a judge of the superior court from 1708 till he was 70 years old. In 1792 he commenced a law school, and continued to give lectures to students at law nearly thirty years till 1820. His pupils were numerous. His first wife, the daughter of Pres. Hurr, was in feeble health, demanding his care, for twenty years. His only child, Aaron Hurr R., died Sept. 1, 1809, aged 28. He was not only a profound lawyer, but also an eminent Christian. Much of his time was employed in devotion. He was accustomed to pray particularly for the conversion of individuals among his acquaintance. His charities were extensive. His minister said of him: "I have never known a man who loved so many persons with such ardor, and was himself beloved by so many." He published a tract on the domestic relations, 1816. - Beecher's Fun. Sermon.

w fa

pl

ar

E

de

uf

en

se.

an

di

of

ha

in try

bu

en

hi

wa

se Ti

gl wi

sa

an

М

re

gr of

REID, George, general, died in Londonderry, N. H., in 1815, aged 81. He was a colonel in the war, in 1780; in 1785 was brigadier-general of the militia; in 1791 sheriff of Rockingham.

REID, JOHN, major, aid to General Jackson, died in 1816. He was born in Campbell county, Va., and was the son of Major Nathan Reid, a hero of the Revolution. Educated at Lexington, Rockbridge county, he settled as a lawyer in Tennessee, and afterwards in New Orleans, where his practice was very profitable. Becoming aid to Jackson, he manifested a commendable humanity in the war with the Creeks. He was an able officer. He died at the house of his father, of the typhoid pneumonia. — National Register, vol. 1.

REID, RODERT R., governor of Florida, died near Tallahassee in 1841, aged 51. Born in South Carolina, he was a member of congress from Georgia, and a judge of the superior court. Mr. Van Buren appointed him governor in 1839. He was a scholar and jurist, and of a kindly temper.

REID, JARED, minister of Belchertown, Mass., died in 1854, aged about 58. Born in Colchester, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1817, and was settled in 1833, as the successor of L. Coleman.

REILAY, JOHN, captain, died in Troy, N. Y., in 1838, aged 104.

REINKER, ABRAHAM, a Moravian minister, pendent of the people. One man only, Mr. died at Litiz, Pa., in 1833, aged 78.

REMINGTON, JONATHAN, judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts, died at Cambridge Sept. 30, 1745, aged about 70. He graduated at 1707 to 1711. H. Flynt was the first,

RENSHAW, JAMES, commodore in the navy of the United States, died at Washington in May,

1816, aged 62.

REVEL, John, one of the five first undertakers of New England, and an assistant in 1629, returned to England in 1630 or 1631. The other four were Winthrop, Dudley, Johnson, and

Saltonstall. - Eliot. REVERE, Paut, colonel, a patriot and a most ingenious artist, died in Hoston in May, 1818, aged 83. He was born in B. in December, 1734, or Jan. 1, 1735, new style. The name was written Rivoire by his ancestors in France. His grandfather, a Huguenot, emigrated from St. Foy to Guernsey Island. His father, when a boy, was sent to Boston to learn the trade of a goldsmith; married there, and Paul was his eldest son. He was brought up to his father's trade; was skilful with the graver; and having a taste for drawing, executed all the engravings on silver plate. In the war of 1756 he was a lieutenant of artillery in the army, and was stationed at fort Edward on Lake George. On his return he married and settled down for life as a goldsmith, deeply interested in various mechanical and manufacturing arts. He studied mechanics as a seience. In the art of engraving on copper he was self-instructed. One of his first productions was an engraved portrait of his friend Dr. Mayhew, whose ministry, to the grief of his father, he was disposed to attend; another was a representation of the repeal of the stamp act in 1766. Another was of great note. The house of representatives had issued, in 1768, a circular to the other provinces on the alarming claims of the mother country. Gov. Bernard required them to rescind it; but for compliance there were only seventeen votes, while ninety-two stood firm. The sevenenteen rescinders, as they were called, were treated with great contempt. Mr. Revere lent his art to the side of the people. The design was a pair of open shark's jaws, with flames issuing, and the devil with a pitchfork driving the rescinders into the "warm place," as it was called. The foremost of them, supposed to be Mr. Ruggles of Worcester, seeming reluctant, a special winged agent, with his fork, is flying towards him, saying, "Push on, Tim." In 1770 he published an engraved print of the massacre in King street March 5, 1770, of which a lithograph has been republished. In the same year he was one of the grand jury, which refused to act, in consequence

Pratt of Chelsen, hesitated; but he, when the chief justice told him it was unimportant whether the erown or the province paid the salaries, rejoined, "I won't surve." This was the last grand Harvard in 1696, and was the second tutor from jury of the crown. In 1775 he engraved the plates for the Massachusetts paper money 1 and the provincial congress sent him to Philadelphia to visit the only powder-mill, to learn the art of making powder. On his return he set up a mill. He was employed on other confidential business, He was one of those who planned the destruction of the tea in Boston harbor. He belonged to a club of patriotic young men, concerning whose operations a letter of his is in print. He became a lieutenant-colonel in the regiment for the defence of the State. The traunions of the cannon being broken off by the British as they left castle William, Washington called on Mr. Revere to render them useful, which he did by a new carriage. After the peace he creeted an air-furnace and east church bells and brass cannon. His mills were at Canton, near Boston. He was first president of the charitable mechanic association, and a liberal supporter of various benevolent institutions. He prospered and educated a large family of children, who venerated the memory of such a father. His large house was in Bennet street. His son, Joseph W. Revere, lives in Boston. His youngest son was Dr. John Revere. His letter, referred to, relating to the affairs of 1775, is in historical collections, vol. v. Notices of him are in New England magazine, and in annals of Massachusetts mechanic association. 1853. The magazine has a fine lithograph of him from a painting by Stuart. - N. E. Mag., ш. 305.

REVERE, John, M. D., died at New York April 29, 1847, aged 60. He was a professor in the medical school of the university of New York; ulso in Jefferson college, Philadelphia; a graduate of Harvard in 1807.

REXFORD, ELIJAH, the first minister of Monroe, Conn., died in 1807, aged about 66. He graduated at Yale in 1763; was settled in 1766; and was succeeded by Chauncey G. Lee in 1821.

REYNOLDS, Methodist bishop in Canada, died at Hamilton, Canada West, Jan. 17, 1857, aged 71. He was born at Clynchill; near Hudson, N. Y., and had been a preacher fifty years. His last sermon was from this text: "For there shall be no night there.'

REYNOLDS, PETER, minister of Enfield, Conn., died May 11, 1768, aged 67. Born in Bristol, R. I., he graduated at Yale in 1720, and was in the ministry at E. 42 years. The poetic inscription on his monument is preserved. He published the election sermon, 1757. — Barber's Hist. of an act of parliament making the judges inde- Coll. of Conn.

of a kindly own, Mass., i Colchester, and was set-il con-

Phila-

Mass.

ind, he tled in ecticut.

9. He rookha-

iduated

d upon

onn., in

e Revo-

r court

1792 he

to give ears till

lis first

n feeble

y years.

Sept. 1,

und lawch of his

as aceus-

rersion of lis chari-

of him:

so many

f beloved

n the do-

Sermon.

donderry,

colonel in

er-general

I Jackson,

ell county,

n Reid, a

Lexington,

yer in Ten-

where his

ing aid to humanity

an able of-her, of the

ster, vol. I.

lorida, died

Horn in f congress

erior court.

or in 1839.

ngham.

oleman. Troy, N. Y.,

REYNOLDS, Joseph, died at Whitehall, N. Y., Sept. 16, 1840, aged 100; a Revolutionary officer, in 1824, aged 66. a pensioner as a lieutenant in the United States army.

REYNOLDS, THOMAS, governor of Missouri, killed himself at Jefferson city Feb. 9, 1844, aged 51. It is said he assigned as a reason for his erime the violence of his political enemies: was he a madman? A native of Kentucky, he became a judge of the supreme court of Illinois, and afterwards judge and governor of Missouri.

REYNOLDS, FREEGRACE, minister of Wilmington, Mass., died in Dec., 1854, aged 88. Born in Somers, the son of a physician, he gradnated at Yale in 1787, and was ordained in 1795. After thirty-five years he removed to Leverett, where he was pastor seven years, but returned in 1839 to W., where he died. He was a plain, evangelical preacher.

REYNOLDS, J. A., Catholic bishop, died at Charleston, S. C., March 6, 1855, aged 56.

REYNOLDS, MICAJAH, colonel, died at Newark in August, 1856. He left 11,000 dollars to Baptist missionary and bible societies and other charities.

RHEES, MORGAN J., D. D., an eminent Baptist minister, died at Williamsburg, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1853, aged 49. He lived much in Philadelphia, and was at first a lawyer. His sermons were well studied, without useless verbiage, short, and impassioned; and remembered.

RHOADES, FOSTER, died in Pensacola Nov. 17, 1846. As the United States naval constructor he built some of our most beautiful ships of war; he also built vessels for the Turkish navy. He was esteemed for his virtues.

RICE, CALEB, first minister of Sturbridge, Mass., died in 1759, aged 46. Born in Hingham, he graduated at Harvard in 1730, and was settled in 1736. Some of his successors were O. Lane, A. Bond, and J. S. Clark.

RICE, ASAPH, minister of Westminster, Mass., died in 1816, aged 83. Born in Hardwick, he graduated at Harvard in 1762, and was ordained in 1765. In 1762 he went on a mission with Dr. Forbes to the Oneida Indians, with the eare of whom he was left. - Sprague's Annals.

RICE, DAVID, supposed to have been the first Presbyterian minister in Kentucky, died, it is thought, about 1815 or 1820. He commenced his labors when the country was a wilderness, inhabited chiefly by Indians. In this year, 1857, it is proposed to remove his remains to Louisville, Ky., and to erect a monument to his memory.

RICE, JACOB, first minister of Henniker, N. H., died in Maine in 1824, aged 84. Born in Northborough, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1765, and was pastor from 1769 to 1782. M. Sawyer succeeded him.

RICE, TILLEY, Dr., died in Brookfield, Mass., b.

R

W.C

co

for

in

Vε

N.

bu

wa

Ce

Ab

gra

the phi

a p sion

Bar

the dice

nen

XIX

ogy

in (

Pre

inst

the

scer

and

Har

had

was

of

tur

wer

with

the

just

Spr

eha

the

mo

San

1

RICE, JOHN H., D. D., professor in the Union theological school in Prince Edward county, Va., was for many years a distinguished minister in that-State. The theological seminary was established in 1824. He died Sept. 3, 1831, aged 52. Memoirs of his life were published by Mr. Maxwell. A paper of "resolutions" was found in his pocket-book, among which were the following: "Never spare person, property, or reputation, if I can do good; necessary that I should die poor. Endeavor to feel kindly to every one; never indulge anger, envy, jealousy towards any human being. Endeavor to act so as to advance the present comfort, the intellectual improvement, and the purity and moral good of all my fellow men." He was for some years the editor of the Virginia evangelical and literary magazine. He published memoirs of S. Davies; an illustration of the Presbyterian church in Virginia, 1816; on the qualifications for the minister, in the quarterly register; a discourse before the foreign board of missions, 1828.

RICE, LUTHER, missionary, died Oct. 25, 1836. aged about 46. He was born in Northborough, Mass., and graduated at Williams college in 1810. He sailed as a missionary of the American board to India in 1812; but afterwards becoming a Baptist, he returned to this country and was actively employed in promoting missions among his brethren, the Baptists. He died in Edgefield district, S. C. Columbia college was chiefly founded by his efforts in the District of Columbia.

RICE, BENJAMIN, minister of Winehendon, Mass., died in 1847, aged 63. He was a graduate of Brown university in 1808.

RICE, HENRY GARDNER, a merchant in Boston, died March 26, 1853, aged 69. The son of Dr. Tilley R. of Brookfield, born Feb. 18, 1784, he graduated at Harvard in the large class of 1802. He was a man of amiable, respectable character.

RICE, BENJAMIN HOLT, D. D., died in Prince Edward county, Va., Feb. or March 17, 1856, being struck with the palsy as he was preaching in his own pulpit. He was a minister of distinetion; and a younger brother, it is believed, of Dr. John Holt Rice. His title of D. D. was given him by Princeton college in 1832; and he was for years a minister in the town of Prince-

RICH, OBADIAH, died in London Jan. 20, 1850. He was a member of various learned societies. He was American consul at Velencia, In London he did good service to literature as a diligent collector of rare books and manuscripts, especially relating to America. He published manuscripts and books relating to America, 1827; Tass.,

Jnion , Va., er in estabed 52.

Maxnd in olloweputashould y one;

ds any dvance ement, fellow of the e. He tration 316; on arterly oard of 5, 1836, orough, lege in merican eoming and was among dgefield chiefly olumbia. hendon, a gradin Bose son of 8, 1784,

class of pectable n Prince 17, 1856, reaching er of disbelieved,). Di was ; and he 20, 1850. societies. In Lona diligent pts, espeed manuca, 1827; f Prince-

by Harper, N. Y.

RICH, EZEKTEL, minister at Deep River, Conn., died in 1854, aged 71. He was educated at Audover, and was many years the minister of Troy, N. H.

RICHARD, GABRIEL, a Catholic priest, died in Detroit in 1832, aged 68; a man of learning. Born in France, he came to America during the French Revolution; was a missionary to Illinois; went to Detroit in 1798, and was a member of corgress in 1823.

RICHARDS, John, minister of North Guilford, Conn., died in 1811, aged about 86. Born in Waterbury, he graduated at Yale in 1745; was pastor from 1748 to 1765, when he removed to Vermont.

RICHARDS, Joun, first minister of Piermont, N. II., died in 1814, aged 84. Born in Waterbury, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1745, and was pastor from 1776 to 1802.

RICHARDS, JAMES, a missionary, dled at Cevlon Aug. 3, 1822, aged 28. He was born in Abington, Mass., Feb. 23, 1784; his parents, while he was young, removed to Plainfield. He graduated at Williams college in 1809, being there the associate of Mills. Having studied theology at Andover and medicine at Philadelphia, he embarked for Ceylon in Oct., 1815. Of a pulmonary disorder, which interrupted his missionary labors, he at last died. His widow, Sarah Bardwell of Goshen, a sister of Mr. Bardwell, the missionary, married Rev. Joseph Knight, and died at Nellore April 26, 1825. He was eminently pious and died in peace. - Miss. Herald, XIX. 241-247; Sprague's Annals.

RICHARDS, JAMES, D. D., professor of theology at Auburn, died Aug. 2, 1843, aged 75. Born in Canaan, Conn., he was ordained over the first Presbyterian church in Morristown, N. J., 1794; installed at Newark, 1809; was professor of theology from 1823 to his death. He was a descendant from Samuel R., who came from Wales and lived near Stamford. His mother was Ruth Hanford, a woman of intellect and piety. He had an honorary degree at Yale in 1794; and was a man eminently useful in the various labors of a minister and Christian teacher. His lectures, with a sketch of his life, by S. II. Gridley, were published by Dodd, New York, in 1846, with a portrait. His lectures relate to the will, the depravity of man, the atonement, election, justification, ability, and other subjects. Dr. Sprague published a sermon and an essay on his character in 1849. He published an address at the funeral of Sarah Cummings, 1812; several sermons, 1836; sinners' inability to come to Christ.

RICHARDS, WILLIAM, missionary at the Sandwich Islands, died at Honolulu Nov. 7, 1847, aged 54. He was minister of public instruction prepared by him.

bibliotheca Americana nova, London, 1835, and in the service of the king. Born in Pluinfield, Mass., he graduated at Williams college in 1819. at Andover in 1822, and embarked Nov. 19, and arrived in April, 1823. His residence was at Lahaina. He toiled as a most faithful missionary till 1838; being among the first as a preacher and translator, no one shared more highly in the affections of the Hawaiian people. His wife was Clarissa Lyman of Northampton. In 1838 he entered upon his secular career as adviser of the king, and introducer of law and order. He went on a successful embassy in 1842 to the United States, to Great Britain, and France, to vindicate the rights of the Sandwich Islands. He returned from his embassy March 23, 1845, and was appointed by the king his minister of public instruction in 1846. He did great service in regard to the publication of the laws in English and Hawaiian. He was a man of a kind, noble, and disinterested mind. He left nothing for his wife and seven or eight children. His widow lived in New Haven in 1856; a daughter married Professor Clark of Amherst college. - New York Observer, March 18, 1848; Sprague's Annals.

RICHARDS, WILLIAM L., a missionary, son of Rev. Wm. R., died on his return from China, and was buried in the ocean off St. Helena June 5, 1851, aged about 25. Pres. Brown of Jefferson college adopted and educated him. studied theology at the Union seminary, New York; and in 1847 went as a missionary to China, where in three years he acquired a good knowledge of the Chinese, and had begun to preach in it, when illness interrupted his labors.

- Sprague's Annals.

RICHARDSON, JOHN, minister of Newbury, Mass., died in 1696, aged 49. He graduated at Harvard in 1666, and was ordained in 1675. He was the son of Amos R. of Stonington, Conn. -Farmer's Register.

RICHARDSON, ABIJAH, Dr., died in Medway,

Mass., in 1822, aged 70.

RICHARDSON, WILLIAM, colonel, a distinguished officer in the Revolution, died in Caroline county, Md., in 1825, aged 90. He was treasurer of the eastern shore.

RICHARDSON, WILLIAM M., LL. D., died at Chester, N. II., March 23, 1838, aged 64. He was chief justice of New Hampshire. He was born in Pelham, N. II., Jan. 4, 1774, and graduated at Cambridge in 1797. He was preceptor of the academy at Groton, and also practised law there, and was a member of congress from 1811 to 1814, in which last year he removed to Portsmouth. From 1816 for twenty-two years he was chief justice; and was highly respected and esteemed. He was the author of the New Hampshire justice, and of the town officer. A large part of the matter in four volumes of reports was

m

11

se:

til

Po

Gr

17

37.

an

the

Se

fro edi

pre

pro

to dic

rid

ter

Ma

Ju

era

Car

Ger

san

Lei

gra

sto

suc

Fai

He

Ply

fatl

han

ord

His

173

182 inst

yea

min

178

ter,

con

Sp

con

W

dist

her

ker

she

her

I

Dec. 22, 1846, aged 60; a prosperous merchant, bequeathed 10,000 dollars to the Maine missionary society.

RICHARDSON, JOHN J., judge, died in South Carolina in 1850. He was a member of congress.

RICHMOND, EDWARD, D. D., minister of Stoughton from 1792 to 1817, died in Boston April 10, 1842, aged 75. Born in Middleborough, he graduated at Brown university in 1789. He was pastor in Dorchester from 1817 to 1833; then lived several years in Braintree. He was regarded as an Arminian, and in his last days as a Unitarian. He published a sermon at ordination of S. Wordsworth; to a masonic lodge, 1801; to Derby academy, 1807; at last meeting in old house, 1808; at ordination of C. Briggs, 1819 .-Sprague's Annals.

RICHSONVILLE, a principal chief of the Miami Indians, died Aug. 13, 1841, aged 80, on St. Mary's river, near Fort Wayne, Indiana. He left 200,000 dollars in specie and a large landed RIDDEL, WILLIAM, a minister, who preached in various places in New England, died Oct. 24, 1829, aged 82. Born in Coleraine, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1793; was pastor at Bristol, Me., from 1796 to 1804; lived in Townsend and Whitingham, Vt.; in Bernardston, Hadley, and South Deerfield. His wife was a daughter of Rev. S. Hopkins of Hadley. He was the father of Rev. Samuel H. Riddel. - Sprague's Annals.

RIDDEL, John, D. D., minister of the Dutch church at Robinson's Run, Pa., died in 1829,

aged 70.

RIDDLE, JAMES, judge, died at Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 5, 1837, aged 82. He graduated at Princeton in 1779, and was a tutor. He was a lawyer of respectable talents, of learning and worth; and a judge of the high court of errors and appeals.

RIDGE, JOHN, an Indian, died June 10, 1839, aged about 38, murdered by Indians. He was a Cherokee, educated at the Indian school at Cornwall, Conn., and there married Miss Gold, of a respectable family. He was an attorney among the Cherokees, and president of the senate of that Indian nation.

RIDGELY, CHARLES, a physician, died Aug. 25, 1785, aged 47. The son of Nicholas R. of Dover, Delaware, he was born Jan. 26, 1738. Having studied medicine in Philadelphia, he settled in Dover in 1758, and there passed his life in extensive practice and high reputation. He was often also a member of the legislature, and a judge in several courts. By his first wife his son was Nicholas R., chancellor of Delaware; by his second wife his son was Henry Moore R., a senator of the United States; his daughter, Mary, the son of General Samuel R. of Maryland; his

RICHARDSON, WILLIAM, died at Bath, Me., | married Dr. Wm. W. Morris, of Dover. He was a man of intelligence, judgment, and learna man of liberal charities, and a Christian. He ing, and amiable in the relations of life. Of the Episcopal church he was an exemplary member. To the religious education of his children he was very attentive, deeming merely intellectual culture without the discipline of the passions and of the heart of little value. To his children and all around him he recommended the diligent study of the Scriptures. - Thacher.

RIDGELY, HENRY MOORE, died in Dover. Del., in 1847, aged 69. He was an eminent lawyer; twice chosen a member of congress; and a senator of the United States in 1827.

RIDGELY, CHARLES G., commodore, died at Baltimore in 1848, aged 63. Born at B., he entered the navy in 1799, and was at the battle of Tripoli with Preble.

RIDGEWAY, JACOB, died at Philadelphia, April 30, 1843, aged 74; said to be worth 6,000. 000 dollars. How a man of immense wealth ought to dispose of his money is an important question for him to settle.

RIEDESEL, FREDERICA, baroness, died at Berlin, Prussia, in 1808, aged 62. At the age of sixteen the married Lieutenant-Colonel Riedesel, who, in 1777, commanded the Brunswick troops in the English service in America. She accompanied him, and returned to Europe in 1783. He died in 1808. Her adventures in America were published by her son-in-law, Count de Reuss. entitled voyage to America, or letters of Madame Von Riedesel, translated, New York, 1827.

RIGDALE, John, came over with his wife in the Mayflower in 1620, and died in the first sickness at Plymouth in 1621.

RIGHTER, CHESTER N., a minister, agent of the American bible society, died at Diarbeker, Turkey, in Dec., 1856, aged about 30. He graduated at Yale in 1846. 'Ie had been on an extended tour among the missionary stations in Turkey when he was taken sick. Among his last words were often these, "God is good!"

RIKER, RICHARD, recorder of New York for nearly thirty years, died in 1842, aged 69.

RILEY, JAMES, captain, died at sea March 15. 1840, aged 63. He was of Middletown, Conn.; and published a narrative of sufferings in North Africa, on the coast of which he was wrecked. As to his rescue from a horrible captivity two names should be mentioned with honor: William Willshire, a native of London, a merchant in Mogadore, who paid 1200 dollars for his redemption and that of some of his companions; and Horatio Sprague, an American merchant at Gibraltar, who paid at once Riley's draft to W. for that sum.

RINGGOLD, SAMUEL, major, was killed in battle in Texas, May 8, 1846, aged 50. He was r. He learnOf the ember.
he was al culand of and all t study

Dover, ent lawand a

, he enattle of delphia,

died at 6,000,wealth portant

e age of liedesel, k troops accomn 1783. America e Reuss, Madame 7.

wife in irst sickgent of arbeker, Ie gradi an extions in nong his d!"

York for

D. Jarch 15, Conn.; in North wrecked. ivity two William redampting redempting; and ons; and t at Gibo W. for killed in He was and; his mother was a daughter of General Cadwallader. He graduated at West Point; he entered the army as a lieutenant of artillery in 1818. He served in Florida; and organized the flying artillery. By a cannon-ball was he killed with his horse. He was an officer of distinction.

RIPLEY, DAVID, first minister of Abington in Pomfret, Conn., died in 1785, aged about 56, Graduated at Yalo in 1749, he was settled in 1753. He was the brother of Dr. H. Ripley.

RIPLEY, SYLVANUS, first professor of divinity in Dartmouth college, died in 1787, aged about 37. He was a graduate of the first class in 1771, and was early ordained as a missionery among the Indians. He returned from a mission in Sept., 1772, bringing with him ten Indian boys from Cahgnawaga and the tribe at Loretto, to be educated in Moor's school, of which he was the preceptor from 1775 to 1779. He was appointed professor of divinity in 1782, and was a preacher to the church connected with the college. He died, in consequence of an injury received while riding in a sleigh. His widow, Abigail, the daughter of President E. Wheelock, died at Fryeburg, Maine, in April, 1818; his daughter, the wife of Judah Dana, died also in Fryeburg; his son, General Eleazer W. R., was distinguished on the Canadian frontier in the war of 1812; his son, General James W. R., was the collector at Passamaquoddy, Maine.

RIPLEY, WILLIAM B., minister in Goshen, of Lebanon, Conn., died in 1822, aged about 56. He graduated at Yalo in 1786; was settled at Ballston, N. Y.; then in 1798 at Goshen, and was succeeded by E. Ripley in 1823.

RIPLEY, HEZEKIAH, D. D., minister at Green's Farms, Fairfield, Conn., died in 1831, aged 88. He was descended from Governor Bradford of Plymouth, whose daughter married his grandfather Ripley. His father was David R. of Windham, Conn. He graduated at Yale in 1763; was ordained at Green's Farms in Fairfield in 1767. His predecessor, D. Buckingham, graduated in 1735, and was pastor from 1742 to 1756. In 1821 he resigned his charge: T. F. Daniels was installed in his place in 1829,-Dr. R., in his 87th year, giving the charge. His son, W. B. Ripley, minister of Goshen in Lebanon, a graduate of 1786, died in 1822. He was an excellent minister, and a patriot of the Revolution; a man of a commanding presence, tall, and athletic .-Sprague's Annals.

RIPLEY, DOROTHEA, died in Mecklenburg county, Va., in Jan., 1832, aged 65. Born in Whitby, England, she early joined the Methodists, but left them, as they did not encourage her purpose of becoming a preacher; the Quakers refused to receive her as a member. Yet she preached all her life, crossing the Atlantic in these refused wines confused the support of the started wines confused to the started wines and the started wines are started wines.

mother was a daughter of General Cadwallader. of thousands of people. Of the usefulness of He graduated at West Point; he entered the her labors nothing is known.

RIPLEY, James W., general, the brother of General E. W. Ripley, died at Fryeburg, Me., June 2, 1835. He was a member of congress from 1827 to 1831, and collector of the United States at Eastport. His mother, Abigail, died in 1818; his brother, John Phillips R., in 1816.

RIPLEY, ELEAZAR WHEELOCK, brigadier-general, son of Professor Ripley of Dartmouth, died in New Orleans March 2, 1839, " about 57. He was the nephew of President John Wheelock, and was graduated at Dartmouth in 1800. Having studied law, he commenced the practice on the Kennebec in Maine, and thence removed to Portland. As a member of the legislature of Massachusetts he was speaker of the house about 1811. At the beginning of the war of 1812 he entered the army. At the battle of Bridgewater, after Scott was wounded, he succeeded to the command of the troops en aged, and was regarded as the saviour of the army. It was in answer to him that Miller said, "I'll try, sir." After the war he was an eminent lawyer in New Orleans, and a member of the twenty-fifth congress. His wife, who died before him, was Love Allen, the daughter of Rev. Thomas Allen of Pittsfield. She nursed him on the frontier after his severe wound, being shot through the neck at the sortie from fort Eric. Congress, by resolution, Nov. 3, 1814, presented him with a medal, containing a bust of General Ripley, and on the reverse Victory holding up a tablet among the branches of a palm tree, inscribed with "Niagara, Chippewa, Erie." He published oration July 4, 1805.

RIPLEY, DAVID B., minister of Marlborough, Conn., died in Illinois Sept. 4, 1839, aged about 61. Born in Pomfret, he graduated at Yale in 1798; was minister from 1807 for twenty years, and was succeeded in 1828 by Chauncey Lee. He afterwards was the minister of Endor in Illinois, where he died.

RIPLEY, EZFA, D. D., died at Concord, Mass., Sept. 21, 1841, aged 90. He was born in Woodstock, Conn., May 1, 1751; graduated at Harvard in 1776; and was ordained Nov. 7, 1778. He preached for the last time May 1, 1841, his ninetieth birth-day. His son, Samuel, minister of Waltham, died in 1817, aged 61; a graduate of 1804, and settled 1809. He published a sermon at ordination of W. Emerson, 1792; of R. Messenger, 1798; on repair of meeting-house; at execution of Samuel Smith, 1799; masonic sermon, 1802; at ordination of S. Ripley, 1809; of W. Frothingham, 1819; of E. Q. Sewall, 1820; at funeral of Ab. Adams, 1813; history of the fight at Concord, 1827; half-century sermon, 1828.

she preached all her life, crossing the Atlantic in her travels nineteen times, addressing hundreds did Nov. 17, 1843, aged 73. He graduated at that pret lent

He

of s elan

tion

177 tron

astr

the

ered

life '

1802 man

New

ing f

Ame

Gaze

the I

the v

York

patri

been

 Δme

aged

1762,

Wyth

ed a cil, a judge

age o place

he wa

unive

Henr

adher

Richr

non S in a q

ginia

57, at senate

tician.

and h

Conn.

grand

land

1719

1741.

was

Symp

ventu

out t

office ;

and co

RO

RO

R

 \mathbf{R}

Yale in 1795, and was minister of Brookfield, emotion of joy so powerful was excited in the Conn., from 1801 to 1802. He was in M. from 1803 to 1822. He removed to Goshen in Lebanon in 1823.

RITCHIE, WILLIAM, minister of Needham, Mass, died in 1842, aged about 60. Born at Peterborough, N. II., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1804, and succeeded S. Palmer in 1821.

RITCHIE, THOMAS, the editor of the Richmond Enquirer, died May 21, 1854. He was a native of Essex county, Virginia. For a long period he wielded a great political influence in his native State. In his last years he went to Washingron to relieve his poverty by the aid of the public printing. His father, Thomas R., died a few weeks after him, July 3, 1854, aged 76.

RITTENHOUSE, DAVID, LL. D., F. R. S., an eminent philosopher, died June 26, 1796, aged 64, at Philadelphia. He was descended from ancestors who emigrated from Holland, and was born in Germantown, Penn., April 8, 1732. The early part of his life was spent in agricultural employments; and his lough, the fences, and even the stones of the field were marked with figures, which denoted a talent for mathematical studies. A delicate constitution rendering him unfit for the labors of husbandry, he devoted himself to learning the trade of a clock and mathematical instrument maker. In these arts he was his own instructor. During his residence with his father in the country he made himself master of Newton's principia, which he read in the English translation of Mott. In this retired situation, while working at his trade, he planned and executed an orrery, by which he represented the revolutions of the heavenly bodies more completely than had ever before been done. This masterpiece of mechanism was purchased by the college of New Jersey. A second was made by him, after the same model, for the use of the college of Philadelphia. In 1770 he was induced, by the urgent request of some friends who knew his merit, to exchange his beloved retirement for a residence in Philadelphia. In this city he continued his employment for several years; and his clocks had a high reputation, and his mathematical instruments were thought superior to those imported from Europe. His first communication to the philosophical society of Philadelphia, of which he was elected a member, was a calculation of the transit of Venus, as it was to happen June 3, 1769. He was one of those appointed to observe it in the township of Norriton. This phenomenon had never been seen but twice before by any inhabitant of our earth, and would never be seen again by any person then living. The day arrived, and there was no cloud in the horizon; the observers waited for the predicted moment of observation; it came, and in the instaat of contact between the planet and sun, an of nature; he believed the Christian revolution.

breast of Mr. Rittenhouse, that he fainted. Nov. 9th he observed the transit of Mercury. An account of these observations was published in the transactions of the society. In 1775 he was appointed one of the commissioners for settling a territorial dispute between Pennsylvania and Virginia; and to his talents, moderation, and firmness was ascribed in a great degree its satisfactory adjustment in 1785. He assisted in determining the western limits of Pennsylvania in 1784, and the northern line of the same State in 1786. He was also called upon to assist in fixing the boundary line between Massachusetts and New York in 1787. In his excursions through the wilderness he carried with him his habits of inquiry and observation. In 1791 he was chosen president of the philosophical society, as successor to Dr. Franklin, and was annually re-elected till his death. His unassuming dignity secured to him respect. Soon after he accepted the president's chair he made to the society a donation of 300 pounds. He held the office of treasurer of Pennsylvania by an annual vote of the legislature from 1777 to 1789. In this period he declined purchasing the smallest portion of the public debt of the State, lest his integrity should be impeached. In 1792 he accepted the office of director of the mint of the United States, but his ill state of health induced him to resign it in 1795. In his last illness, which was acute and short, he retained the usual patience and benevolence of his temper. He died in the full belief of the Christian religion, and in the anticipation of clearer discoveries of the perfections of God in the eternal world. He was a man of extensive knowledge. From the French, German, and Dutch languages he derived the discoveries of foreign nations. In his political sentiments he was a republican; he was taught by his father to admire an elective and representative government; he early predicted the immense increase of talents and knowledge, which would be infused into the American mind by our republican constitutions; and he anticipated the blessed effects of our Revolution in sowing the seeds of a new order of things in other parts of the world. He believed political as well as moral evil to be intruders into the society of man. In the more limited circles of private life he commanded esteem and affection. His house and his manner of living exhibited the taste of a philosopher, the simplicity of a republican, and the temper of a Christian. He possessed rare modesty. His researches into natural philosophy gave him just ideas of the Divine perfections, for his mind was not pre-occupied in early life with the fictions of ancient poets and the vices of the heathen gods. But he did not confine himself to the instructions

He observed as an argument in favor of its truth, is me, if I preach not the gospel." that the miracles of our Saviour differed from all pretended miracles in being entirely of a benevolent nature. The testimony of a man possessed of so exalted an understanding outweighs the deelamation of thousands. He published an oration, delivered before the philosophical society, 1775, the subject of which is the history of astronomy; and a few memoirs on mathematical and astronomical subjects, in the first four volumes of the transactions of the society. Dr. Rush delivered an culogium on him, and memoirs of his life were published by W. Barton, 8vo., 1813.

RIVINGTON, JAMES, died in New York in 1802, aged 77. Born in Great Britain, ho was many years an eminent printer and bookselter in New York; he was king's printer in 1777. Having failed as a bookseller in England, he came to America in 1760. He commenced the New York Gazetteer in 1773. In 1777 he called his paper the New York Royal Gazette. He remained after the war, and his paper became Rivington's New York Gazette. That he lived undisturbed by the patriots is explained by his being known to have been a spy employed by Washington .- Cycl. of

the

Nov.

n neı the s ap-

ng a

Vir-

firmetory

ining

, and

boun-

York

vilder-

ry and ent of

o 1)r.

ill his

o him

ident's

of 300

'Penn-

re from

d pur-

ic debt

be im-

e of di-

but his

n it in

ite and benevo-

l belief

cipation

God in

xtensive

an, and eries of

ents he ather to govern-

increase infused

an cond effects

f a new

ld. He

to be in-ie more

ided es-

manner

oher, the per of a

His re-

him just nind was ctions of en gods.

tructions

velation.

ROANE, Spencer, judge, died Sept. 4, 1822, aged 60. He was born in Essex, Va., April 4, 1762, and thoroughly studied law with Mr. Wythe, and in Philadelphia. He was early elected a member of the assembly; then of the council, and senate. In 1789 he was appointed a judge of the general court, and in 1794, at the age of 33, a judge of the court of errors in the place of Mr. Tazewell, who resigned. In 1819 he was one of the commissioners for locating the university. His wife was a daughter of Patrick Henry. In his politics he was a republican, an adherent of Mr. Jefferson. He published in the Richmond Enquirer several essays, signed Algernon Sydney, asserting the supremacy of the State in a question of conflicting authority between Virginia and the United States.

ROANE, WILLIAM H., died May 11, 1845, aged 57, at Tree Hill, near Richmond, Va. He was a senator of the United States, and an ardent politician. He was also of an affectionate disposition, and had the love of many friends.

ROBBINS, Philemon, minister of Branford, Conn., died in 1781, aged about 71. He was the grandson of Nathaniel R., who came from Scotland in 1670, and died at Churlestown, Mass., in 1719; and the son of Nathaniel, who died in 1741. He graduated at Harvard in 1729, and was settled in 1732 a successor of S. Russell. Sympathizing with Mr. Whitefield in 1740, and venturing to preach in a neighboring parish without the minister's consent, he was deposed from office; but he contemned the injustice of the law,

In the end he triumphed. His second wife was widow Jano Mills, whom he married in 1778, the mother of S. J. Mills of Torringford. He published an account of ecclesiastical proceedings, 1743; a narrative, 1747; defence of it, 1748; at ordination of his son, C. Robbins, 1760; of his son, A. R. Robbins, 1761. — Sprague's Annals.

ROBBINS, NATHANIEL, minister of Milton, Mass., died May 19, 1795, aged 68. Born in Lexington, he graduated in 1747, and in 1750 succeeded at Milton John Taylor, remarkable for his scholarship and manners. He was a prudent, useful minister. He published a sermon at the ordination of P. Thacher, 1770; of B. Wadsworth, 1773; at election, 1770; at artillery election, 1772; on the Lexington tragedy, 1777.

ROBBINS, CHANDLER, D. D., minister of Plymouth, Mass., died June 30, 1799, aged 60. He was the son of Philemon R., minister of Branford, Conn.; was born Aug. 24, 1738; and was graduated at Yale college in 1756. Jan. 30, 1760, ho was ordained at Plymouth as successor of Mr. Leonard. Here he continued till his death. His wife was Jane Prince, daughter of a physician in Boston. His son, Samuel Prince R., minister of Marietta, a graduate of Harvard in 1798, died in 1823, aged 45. He was succeeded by James Kendall. He was a man of eminent talents, and he discharged the duties of a minister of the gospel with unabating zeal and fidelity. Searching the Scriptures for religious truth, and coinciding in the result of his investigations with the sentiments of the founders of the first church in New England, he inculcated the doctrines of the gospel with energy and fervor. He was unwearied in his endeavors to impress the thoughtless, and to render sinful men, holy. In private and social life he was amiable and exemplary. He published a sermon on the death of Mrs. E. Watson, 1767; of Mrs. Hovey; at the ordination of L. Le Baron, 1772; of E. Gillet, 1795; of W. Cotton, 1797; on the French Revolution, 1793; century sermon at Kingston, for E. Cohb, 1794; a reply to J. Cotton; some brief remarks on a piece by J. Cotton in answer to the preceding, 1774: election sermon, 1791; at the convention; on the landing of our forefathers, 1793; before the humane society, 1796. - Shaw's Sermon on his death; Sprague's Annals.

ROBBINS, CHARLES, published the Columbian Harmony, Portland, 1805.

ROBBINS, AMMI RUHAMAH, first minister of Norfolk, Conn., died Oct. 31, 1813, aged 73, in the fifty-third year of his ministry. He was the son of Rev. Philemon Robbins of Branford, graduated at Yale in 1760, and married Elizabeth Le Baron of Plymouth, a descendant of Governor Bradford. In 1776 he was a chaplain in the army and continued his labors: his next text was, "Woe in its retreat from Canada. He was a faithful minister and a good preacher and teacher. He | L. Clark, 1820; to military at Hartford, 1822; preached more than six thousand five hundred sermons. His funeral sermon was published by C. Lee. His son, James W. Robbins, a man of great worth, died at Lenox in 1847, aged 61. Another son was Rev. Dr. Thomas Robbins. He published a sermon at ordination of J. Knapp, 1772; at election, 1789; calamity among the wicked, 1797; a half-century sermon, 1811. - Sprague's Annals.

ROBBINS, SAMUEL PRINCE, son of Rev. C. Robbins, and minister of Marietta, Ohio, died in August, 1823, aged about 45. He died of an e ic fever, which prevailed along the waters ie Ohio. He was a graduate of Harvard in wive, and studied theology with Dr. Hyde of Lee. His wife was a grand-daughter of Gen. R. Putnam. - Hildreth.

ROBBINS, EDWARD II., lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts, died in Milton in 1829, aged about 74. He was the son of Rev. Nathaniel R. of Milton, and a graduate of 1775. He was speaker of the house and judge of probate. Of his children, Sarah Lydia married Judge Howe, and Anne Jean married Judge Lyman of Northampton. His son, Dr. Robbins, a graduate of 1812, died in 1850.

ROBBINS, ASHUR, LL. D., died at Newport, R. I., Feb. 25, 1845, aged 88. Born in Wethersfield, he was a graduate of Yale in 1782. For fourteen years he was a senutor of the United States. Ilis deep learning, his scholarship and forcible eloquence made him conspicuous in the senate. He had the misfortune to fall upon the ice two months before his death, and this was the cause of it. He published address on domestic industry, 1822; oration July 4, 1827; speech on domestic industry, 1832.

ROBBINS, ISAAC, a minister, died at Alexandria in May, 1846, aged 77. He was the son of Rev. Chandler R.

ROBBINS, SAMUEL H., M. D., died in Boston Jan. 10, 1850, aged 58.

ROBBINS, PETER GILMAN, M. D., died at Roxbury, Mass., May 18, 1852, aged 73. He was the son of Rev. Chandler R., and a man of worth, a beloved physician.

ROBBINS, THOMAS, D. D., secretary of the Connecticut historical society, died in Colebrook Sept. 13, 1856, aged 79. Born in Norfolk, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1796, and was minister of East Windsor from 1809 to 1827; then of Stratford from 1830 to 1831; then of Mattapoiset in Rochester, Mass., the successor of L. Le Baron. For years he lived in Hartford and was librarian of the historical society, to which he bequeathed his very valuable library. His mental powers failed him in his last days. He published a century sermon delivered at Danbury Jan. 1, on the death of E. B. Cook, 1823.

ROBERTS, NATHANIEL, first minister of Torrington, Conn., died in 1776, aged about 66. Graduated at Yale in 1732, he was settled in 1741. He was followed by A. Gillet and W. K. Gould.

ROBERTS, WILLIAM, published an account of the discovery and natural history of Florida, 4to., 1763.

ROBERTS, CHARLES, remarkable for longevity, died in Berkeley county, Virginia, Feb. 17. 1796, aged 116. He was a native of Oxfordshire, England, but had resided in America about eighty years. During his long life he never knew sick-

ROBERTS, Joseph, died at Weston in 1811, aged 91. A native of Boston, he graduated in 1741, and was minister of Leicester from 1754 to a

n

0 ei

is

p

m

20

in rı

P

cl

w al al la H re H ti w II hi in of the core to S d

ROBERTS, John, major, died in Rappahannock county, Virginia, in 1843, aged 85. He was a major in the Revolutionary war, and many years a member of the legislature.

ROBERTS, ROBERT R., died in Indiana March 26, 1843, aged 67; a venerable Methodist bishop. Born in Frederick county, Maryland, he was consecrated bishop in 1816; and was benevolent. zealous, and useful.

ROBERTSON, GEORGE. Congregational minister in Amelia county, Virginia, died March 8, 1838, aged 79.

ROBERTSON, ALEXANDER, an artist, a painter, died in New York May 27, 1841, aged 69. He was secretary of the academy of fine arts.

'ROBIE, THOMAS, eminent for science and scholarship, died in 1729. He graduated at Harvard in 1708, and was a tutor from 1714 to 1723, and librarian. He wrote much in the magazines and papers. He published a discourse to the students, the knowledge of Christ superior to all other knowledge, 1721. - Eliot.

ROBIN, a sachem of a remnant of the Pcquots, who lived at Mystic in Connecticut, and afterwards at Mashantucket. He died in 1692. His Indian name was Cassasinamon, which Miss Caulkins thinks is rather spicy, - cassia, cinnamon. - Miss Caulkins' New London.

ROBIN, MARIE, a colored woman, died at New Orleans in 1839, aged 107.

ROBINSON, John, minister of the English church at Leyden, a part of which first settled New England in 1620, died Feb. 19, 1625, old style, or March 1, new style. He was born in Great Britain in 1575, and educated at Cambridge. After holding for some time a benefice near Yarmouth in Norfolk, when a society of Dissenters was formed in the north of England about the year 1602, he was chosen their pastor with Clif-1801; a fast sermon, 1815; at installation of E. ton. Persecution drove his congregation into 1822: er of n:t 66. led in W. K. ccount lorida. ongeveb. 17. dshire, eighty w sickn 1811, ated in 1754 to pahan-He was l many March bishop. was conevolent, nal min-Iarch 8, painter, 69. He nce and uated at 1714 to in the discourse ist supeot. the Pcicut, and in 1692. ich Miss a, cinna-

English
st settled 1625, old born in ambridge.
fice near Dissenters
about the
with Clisstion into

Holland in 1608, and he soon followed them. At Amsterdam, where they found emigrants of the same religious sentiments, they remained about a year; but as the minister, J. Smith, was unsteady in his opinions, Mr. Robinson proposed a removal to Leyden. Here they continued eleven years, and their numbers so increased that they had in the church three hundred communicants. They were distinguished for perfect harmony among themselves and for friendly intercourse with the Dutch. Mr. Robinson, when he first went into Holland, was a most rigid Separatist from the Church of England; but by conversation with Dr. Ames and R. Parker he was convinced of his error and became more moderatc, though he condemned the use of the liturgy and the indiscriminate admission to the sacraments. In 1613, Episcopius, one of the professors of the university of Leyden, the successor of Arminius, and of the same doctrine with him, published some theses, which he engaged to defend against all opposers. Mr. Robinson, being earnestly requested to accept the challenge by Polyander, the other professor, who was a Calvinist, held the disputation in the presence of a numerous assemby, and completely foiled Episcopius, his antagonist. In 1617, when another removal was contemplated, Mr. Robinson entered zealously into the plan of making a settlement in America. His church was liable to be corrupted by the loose habits of the Dutch, and he wished it 's be planted in a country where it t in purity. The first settlers of might sv Plymout. in 16:0, who took with them Mr. Brewster, the ruling elder, were the members of his church, and it was his intention to follow them with the majority that remained; but various disappointments prevented. A part of his church and his widow and children came to New England in 1630. Isaac and John were his sons. He was a man of good genius, quick penetration, ready wit, great modesty, integrity, and candor. Ilis classical learning and acuteness in disputation were acknowledged by his opponents. He was also discerning and prudent in civil affairs. In his principles of church government he was himself an Independent or Congregationalist, being of opinion that every church is to consist only of such as appear to believe in and obey Christ; that the members have a right to choose their own officers, which are pastors or teaching elders, ruling elders, and deacons; that elders, being ordained, have no power but by consent of the brothren; that all elders and churches are equal; and that only the children of communicants are to be admitted to baptism. He celebrated the Supper every Lord's day. In his farewell address to the first emigrants to New England, he said to them: "If God reveal anything to you receive it as ever you were to receive any truth by my ministry; for I am verily persuaded, I am very confident, that the Lord has more truth yet to break forth out of his holy word. For my part, I cannot sufficiently bewail the condition of the reformed churches, who are come to a period in religion, and will go at present no further than the instruments of their reformation. The Lutherans cannot be drawn to go beyond what Luther saw; whatever part of his will our good God has revealed to Calvin, they will rather die than embrace it. And the Calvinists, you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things." He published, 1. a justification of separation from the Church of England, 1610; 2. of religious communion, 1614; 3. apologia justa et necessara, 1619, (translated into English, 1641); 4. a defence of the doctrine propounded by the synod of Dort, 1624; 5. a treatise of the lawfulness of learning of the ministers in the Church of England, 1634; 6. essays or observations, Divine and moral 1628 (second edition, 1638). His collected works were published by the Cong. Board of Publication, Boston, in 3 vols., 1851. - Belknap's Amer. Biog., II. 151-178.

ROBINSON, ISAAC, the son of John Robinson, died at or near Cape Ann, aged 92. He was at Duxbury, 1635; of Scituate in 1636, and of Barnstable in 1639. He bought land at Island Creek, Duxbury. His wife was a sister of Elder Faunce. His brother Abraham, not John as by one account, lived also on the Cape Ann side of the bay, and died in 1645, and was the father of Abraham, living in 1730, who died at the age of 102. He left a family of twelve children, one of whom was Andrew, from whom Mrs. President Webber descended. To Isaac's daughter, Mercy, Captain Standish bequeathed three pounds; of whom he said, "Whom I tenderly love for her grandfather's sake." Isaac's children were baptized at Barnstable : John in 1640 : Israel in 1651, Jacob in 1652; daughters Fear and Mercy, and a child, whose name is lost, in 1642. Deane's Scituate; Deane's Bradford.

In his principles of church government he was himself an Independent or Congregationalist, being of opinion that every church is to consist only of such as appear to believe in and obey Christ; that the members have a right to choose their own officers, which are pastors or teaching elders, ruling elders, and deacons; that elders, being born in D. in March, 1671; was graduated in town officers, which are pastors or teaching elders, ruling elders, and deacons; that elders, being born in D. in March, 1671; was graduated in 1695; and settled in 1702; dismissed in 1738, ruling elders, and deacons; that elders, being born in D. in March, 1671; was graduated in 1695; and settled in 1702; dismissed in 1738, when he removed to Lebanon, Conn., where he had two daughters married; Betty to Rev. J. Eliot, and Faith to Governor J. Trumbull. He and that only the children of communicants are to be admitted to baptism. He celebrated the Supper every Lord's day. In his farewell address to the first emigrants to New England, have no of Wiswall preceded, S. Veazie succeeded him. His wife, Hannah, the daughter of Mr. Wiswall, was drowned with his daughter Mary near Nansaid to them: "If God reveal any thing to you by any other instrument of his, be as ready to a large estate: lands and money to John; 2000 pounds to Ichabod, a merchant; 400 pounds to Althea. John and William, ministers, were the sons of Ichabod; and Althea married Rev. Daniel Ripley of Abington in Pomfret. - Sprague's Annals.

ROBINSON, Moses, LL. D., second governor of Vermont, died at Bennington May 26, 1813, aged 72. He succeeded Mr. Chittenden in 1789, and was succeeded by him in 1790. He was afterwards a senator of the United States, in the administration of Mr. Adams. His politics were republican; he was opposed to Jay's treaty. His son, Moses R., died at Bennington in Jan., 1825, ROBINSON, JONATHAN, chief justice of Vermont, the brother of the preceding, died at Bennington Nov. 3, 1819, aged 64. He was chosen chief justice in 1801, in the place of Mr. Smith, and succeeded him also in 1806 as a senator in congress. He was also a senator in 1815.

ROBINSON, WILLIAM, first minister of Southington, Conn., died Aug. 15, 1825, his birth-day, aged 71. Born in Lebanon, the son of Ichabod, a merchant, he graduated at Yale in 1773; he was pastor from 1780 to 1821, forty-one years; and was succeeded by D. L. Ogden. His wife, Naomi Wolcott of East Windsor, died of the small pox in 1782, aged 27. His second wife was Sophia Moseley of Westfield, Mass., who soon died. His third wife was Anna Mills of Simsbury. His fourth, in 1790, was Elizabeth Norton of Farmington; and by her he had six children, one of whom is Professor Edward Robinson, D. D., of New York. - Sprague's Annals.

ROBINSON, CHARLES S., minister of St. Charles, Missouri, died in 1828, aged 34. Born in Massachusetts, he graduated at Andover theological seminary in 1819.

ROBINSON, John, minister of Westborough, Mass., from 1789 to 1807, died in Lebanon, Conn., his native place, suddenly, in 1832, aged 71. He graduated at Yalc in 1750. He was the son of Ichabod, and grandson of Rev. John R. of Duxbury. He succeeded E. Parkman, and was succeeded by E. Rockwood.

ROBINSON, PETER, associate judge of the supreme court of Delaware, died in 1836.

RCBINSON, JAMES, died at Ottawa, Illinois, in 1843, aged 50; a judge of the supreme court, a man of integrity and courteousness. He was twelve years a senator of the United States.

ROBINSON, DAVID, general, died in Bennington Dec. 10, 1843, aged 89. He was born in Hardwick, Mass., Nov. 11, 1754, and came to Vermont with his father Samuel in 1761, to live in a log hut in the centre of the present town of B. There he lived 82 years. Capt. Stephen was another early settler, whose daughter he married. Temperate and active, he encouraged graduated in 1742, and was ordained in 1752, as all public institutions, civil and religious. He early became a member of the church.

6110

bo

mo

die

VAL

DE

180 mu

6,0

in i

Yo

he:

Cor

cap

bes

toia

His

 Δm

Ro

was

was

falo

Jun

sion

ber

res

Roc

Eng

He

to '

Joh

che

was

Gre

bor

piot

and

zea

in ?

fror

Cor

nat

in 1

ece

den

he

the two wit

1

Í

1

I

ROBINSON, Jonn, D. D., died in Cabarrus county, North Caroliua, Dec. 14, 1843, aged about 80, having been long a distinguished and useful minister.

ROBINSON, WILLIAM, Dr., died in Stonington, Mass., Dec. 28, 1845, aged 81; a successful practitioner in the town for fifty-seven years, much respected. Ho was a soldier of the Revo-

ROBINSON, CHARLES, missionary to Siam, died at sea on his return, March 3, 1847, aged 45. one week after leaving St. Helena. Mrs. R., with four children, arrived at New Bedford April 16. Born in Lenox, Mass., at the age of fifteen he made a profession of religion; he graduated at Williams college in 1829, and embarked June 10, 1833, with his wife, and Munson and Lyman and their wives, for Batavia. He proceeded to Bangkok. Ill health removed him from Siam in Nov., 1845. He died in peace, and his body was committed to the mighty deep. His wife was Maria Church of Riga, N. Y.

ROBINSON, M. M., died in Louisiana, May, 1850; a lawyer. He published sixteen volumes of reports, evincing great labor and fidelity, with marginal notes, which are models of exact-

ROBINSON, ELI P., captain, died in Windham, Greene county, N. Y., Dec. 14, 1851, aged 71. He served in the northern army in 1812 at the head of volunteers; and was both an ardent patriot and an exemplary Christian, embracing the faith of his ancestor, John R. of Leyden.

ROBINSON, ISAAC, D. D., minister of Stoddard, N. H., died July 0, 1854, aged 75, in the 52d year of his ministry. Born in Hudson, N. H., he improved his few literary advantages, and was settled in 1803. He preached one week before his death. On the day of his death he said, "If it be the will of the Lord, may my earthly labors end on this Sabbath." He was distinguished as a scholar and theologian. He published a tract on Universalism; sermon on the death of S. Payson; on the divinity of Christ; and answer to T. R. Sullivan's strictures. - Sprague's Annals.

ROBINSON, TRACY, died at Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 7, 1855, aged 77. Born in Windham, Conn., he removed to Chenango valley in 1800, to B. in 1810, when in that place was only a squad of eabins. He was a physician, postmaster, judge, and a warden in Christ's church; and died greatly lamented.

ROBINSON, John, died in Brookline, Jan. 13, 1855 aged 91 years. J'e was long a deacon of the church under the care of Dr. John Pierce, ROBY, JOSEPH, minister of Lynn, Mass., died Jan. 31, 1803, aged 79. Born in Boston, he successor of Mr. Cheever, and continued his labors fifty years. He was a faithful minister and an excellent Christian. He published a fast sermon, 1781, and 1794.

ROBY, THOMAS, minister of Harrison, Me., died in 1836, aged 76. He graduated at Harvard in 1779.

ROCHAMBEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE DONATIEN DE VIMEUR, count, marshal of France, died in 1807, aged 82. He was born in 1725. After much military service, he was appointed lieuten-autgeneral, and in 1780 sent with an army of 6,000 men to the assistance of the United States in the war with Great Britain. In the siege at Yorktown he rendered important services, for which he received the present of two cannon taken from Cornwallis. In the Revolution he narrowly escaped suffering death under the tyranny of Robespierre. In 1803 Bonaparte gave him a pension and the grand cross of the legion of honor. His memoirs were published, 8vo., 1800.—Encyc. Amer.

ROCHESTER, NATHANIEL, colonel, died at Rochester, N. Y., May 17, 1831, aged 79. He was an officer of the Revolution: the town of R.

was named after him.

ROCHESTER, WILLIAM B., judge, of Buffalo, was lost off the coast of North Carolina June 15, 1838, with many others, by the explosion of the steamboat Pulaski. He was a member of congress from 1821 to 1823, and was much respected.

ROCKWELL, WILLIAM, aneestor of the Rockwells in this country, came from Plymouth, England, with Warham and Maverick, in 1630. He was of the church in Dorchester and removed to Windsor. He was a deacon: and had sons

John and Samuel.

ROCKWELL, ALPHA, deacon, died in Winchester, Conn., June 1, 1818, aged 50. His name was given him, Alpha, the first letter of the Greek alphabet, because he was the first child born in the town of Colebrook. He became pious at the age of 17. He died in great peace and triumph. His excellent character, and his zeal to do good to all around him, are described in Mr. Beach's sermon at his funeral, extracts from which are in the Boston Recorder of July 7.

ROCKWELL, LATHROP, minister of Lyme, Com., died in 1828, aged about 60. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1789, and was ordained in 1700 as successor of S. Johnson, and was succeeded by C. Colton.

ROCKWELL, JAMES OTTS, died in Providence in 1831, aged 24. Born in Lebanon, Conn., he was self-educated, became a printer, and took the charge of the Providence Patriot for his last two years. He wrote many pieces of poetry, with the imperfections of an undisciplined genius. — Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

ROCKWELL, MARTIN, died in Colebrook, Conn., Dec. 11, 1851, aged 80, the youngest and last survivor of the brothers of that name, who as men of business, philanthropists, and Christians did no dishonor to their Puritun ancestry.

ROCKWELL, SAMUEL, died at Holland Patent, Oncida county, N. Y., May 27, 1855, aged 101.

ROCKWOOD, EBENEZER, M. D., died at Witton, N. II., in 1830, nged 87. He graduated at Harvard college in 1773; and was highly respected. His widow, Mary, died at the house of her son-in-law, Rev. Leonard Swett, in Hollis, in 1848, aged 94. His son, Ebenezer Rockwood, a lawyer of high promise, a graduate of 1802, died at Charlestown, Mass., May 8, 1815, aged only 32. He married the daughter of Ebenezer Hazard of Philadelphia.

RODGERS, John, D. D., minister in New York, died May 7, 1811, aged 83. He was born in Boston, Mass., Aug. 2, 1727. His parents having removed to Philadelphia, he was educated for the ministry by Mr. Blair. It was by means of the preaching of Mr. Whitefield that his mind was impressed by religious truth. He was ordained March 10, 1749, at St. George's, Delaware, where his labors were very useful until July, 1765, when the synod sent him to New York. Upon the death of Mr. Bostwick he beeame colleague pastor in the church in Wall street, then the only Presbyterian church in the city. He died in the triumph of the believer. His widow died March 15, 1812, aged 87. He was the intimate friend of Pres. Davies, after whose death the mother of Pres. D. resided in his family. As a preacher ho was energetic, zealous, and faithful. For his excellent character he was highly respected. Several of his sermons are found in the American preacher. His life was written by Samuel Miller.

RODGERS, George W., captain, commanding a squadron on the S. A. station, died at Buenos Ayres March 21, 1832, aged 45; a brother of

Com. John R.

RODGERS, John, commodore, died at Philadelphia Aug. 1, 1838, aged about 73 years; the senior commander in the navy. He had been fifteen months in the naval asylum, most of the time closely confined as a confirmed lunatic. He was born in Maryland, and educated for the nautical profession, and had high qualifications. In 1803 he commanded the New York and the John Adams in the Mediterranean: he assisted Preble. As commander of the marines he defended Baltimore in the war of 1812.

RODGERS, J. KEARNEY, M. D., died at New York Nov. 9, 1851, aged 58; surgeon in the hospital, one of the founders of the eye and car infirmary. He was the son of Dr. J. R. B. Rodgers, and grandson of Rev. Dr. R. He was an emi-harrus about useful

toningcessful years, Revo-

Siam,

ged 45, A., with pril 16. seen he ated at d June Lyman eded to n Siam is body lis wife a, May,

rolumes

fidelity,

Wind-51, aged 1812 at ardent ibracing den.

of Stod-, in the Hudson, rantages, one week he said, y earthly nguished lished a death of d answer Annals.

chamton, in Windvalley in was only an, postchurch;

ine, Jan. leacon of Pierce. , Mass., loston, he 1752, as nat

tio

Oa

anı der cce

for

unf

tler

dai

Da

sto

2 8

Na

son

ลดถ

die

wic

R., 178

or i

Ma

of t

was вре

pro

ame

of l

ter

vor

was dre

Sal

oth

ties

for me

ting

and rive

ane

Ne

Ma

De

Pre

in

N.

sor

vai

sec

wa

Na

Ex

Do

1

710

nent surgeon, and was once successful in tying the subelavian vein. He was not a writer, but a skilful and honest practitioner. - N. Y. Observer, RODMAN, John, Dr., a Quaker, fived on Block Island in July, 1689, when three French privateers took possession of the island and plundered the people. One of the ruflians insulted his wife: when he interposed for her protection the villain threatened to shoot him with his pistol. Opening his breast, the Dr. said, "Thee mayest do it if thou pleasest, but thou shalt not abuse my wife." His two slaves joined the privateer's men. A slave of Simon Ray, an aged inhabitant, was killed by them.

RODMAN, SAMUEL, a merchant, died at New Bedford Dec. 30, 1835, aged 83.

RODNEY, CESAR, president of Delaware, died in 1783. He was the descendant of an ancient English family, the son of William R.; was born in Dover, Delaware, about 1730. Ho inherited a large real estate. In 1765 he was a member of congress at New York. He early resisted the tyrannical claims of Great Britain. Being a member of the congress of 1774, he was placed on several important committees. He voted for the Declaration of Independence in 1776. His colleagues, M'Kean and Read, being divided in opinion, his vote determined the vote of the State. Indeed, Mr. M'Kean sent an express for him, as he was then absent, and he entered the hall with his spurs on his boots just before the great question was put. After the first constitution of Delaware was adopted, he was the president of the State from 1778 till 1782, when he was succeeded by John Dickinson; during this difficult period his energy afforded efficient aid to Washington in the prosecution of the war. A cancer on his face, which for many years had afflicted him, was the cause of his death. He was a man of patriotic feeling and generous character. -Goodrich.

ROE, AZEL, D. D., minister of Woodbridge, N. J., died Dec. 2, 1815, aged 77. He graduated at Princeton in 1756, and was the pastor fifty-six years. Mr. McDowell preached his funeral sermon.

ROESE, WILLIAM, died in Maryland in 1813, aged 108.

ROGERS, THOMAS, one of the passengers in the Mayflower, arrived at Plymouth in 1620, and died in the first sickness, about April, 1621. His son Joseph survived, and other children came over. His descendants were numerous.

ROGERS, NATHANIEL, minister of Ipswich, Mass., died July 3, 1655, aged 57. He was the son of Rev. John Rogers and Elizabeth Gold, of Dedham, in England, and a grandson of John Rogers the martyr. He was born in 1598, and

The evils to which his Puritan principles exposed him induced him to come to New England. He sailed June 1, 1636; but dld not east anchor in Massachusetts bay till Nov. 16. In the following year he was a member of the synod, together with Mr. Partridge, who came in the same vessel. He was settled in the place of Mr. Ward, as colleague with Mr. Norton at Inswich, Feb. 20, 1639. His son, John, was president of Harvard college; his only daughter married Rev. William Hubbard. As a preacher he possessed a lively eloquence, which charmed his hearers. Though one of the greatest men among the first settlers of New England, he was very humble, modest, and reserved. He published a letter to a member of the house of commons in 1643, in which he pleads for a reformation of church affairs, and he left in manuscript a vindication of the Congregational church government, in Latin. - Mag. III. 104.

108 : Sprague's Annals.

ROGERS, EZEKIEL, first minister of Rowley, Mass., died Jan. 23, 1661, aged 70. He was a cousin of the preceding; was born in England in 1590, the son of Richard Rogers of Wethersfield. After being educated at Cambridge, he became the chaplain of Sir Francis Barrington. His preaching was in a strain of oratory which delighted his hearers. He afterwards received the benefice of Rowley, where his benevolent labors were attended with great success. At length his nonconformity obliged him to seek a refuge from persecution in New England, where he arrived in 1638, bringing with him a number of respectable families. He commenced the plantation at Rowley in April, 1639, and Dec. 3 was ordained. He died after a lingering sickness. His third wife was the daughter of John Wilson. His library he bequeathed to Harvard college, and his house and lands to the town for the support of the ministry. In the latter part of his life it pleased God to overwhelm him with calamities. A fall from his horse deprived him of the use of his right hand; much of his property was consumed by fire; and he buried two wives and all his children. He was pious, zealous, and persevering. His feeble health induced him when in England to study the science of medicine. Though his strong passions sometimes misled him, yet he was so humble as readily to acknowledge his error. He preached the election sermon in 1643, in which he vehemently exhorted his hearers never to choose the same man governor for two successive years; but his exhortation was disregarded, for Mr. Winthrop was re-elected. - Magnalia, III. 101-104; Sprague's Annals.

ROGERS, John, president of Harvard college, died July 2, 1684, aged 53. He was graduated at this seminary in 1649. He was the son of N. Rogers, with whom he preached some time was educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge. as an assistant at Ipswich, but at length his inclination to the study of physic withdrew his attention from theology. After the death of President Oakes he was elected his successor in April, 1682, and was installed Aug. 12, 1683. He died suddealy the day after commencement, and was succeeded by Increase Mather. He was remarkable for the sweetness of his temper, and he united to unfeigned piety the accomplishments of the gentleman. His wife was Elizabeth Dennison; his daughter married President Leverett; his son, Daniel, a physician in Ipswich, died in a snowstorm on Hampton beach, Dec. 1, 1722, leaving a son, Daniel, the minister of Littleton 1 his son, Nathaniel, was the minister of Portsmouth; his son, John, the minister of Ipswich, who left three sons, who were ministers, - John of Kittery, who died Oct. 16, 1773, aged 82; Nathaniel of Ipswich, a colleague; and Daniel of Exeter. John R., the minister of Gloucester, who died Oct. 4, 1782, aged 63, was the son of J. R. of Kittery, or Eliot. Truly this was a family of ministers .-Magn. IV. 130; Sprague's Annals.

ROGERS, John, the founder of the small sect of the Rogerenes in New London county, Conn., was the son of James, who died in 1688, a respectable Quaker or seventh-day man. It was a provision in his will, "There shall be no lawing among my children;" he required them to decide any difference by lot. But they were regardless of his injunction. He matried Elizabeth, daughter of M. Griswold of Lyme; she obtained a divorce, and married Peter Pratt. His son, John, was a disciple: he was the father of twenty children. The fanaties of this family worked on the Sabbath, and sometimes disturbed the worship of others, and drew upon themselves various penalties. Once J. R. sent in a wig as his contribution for the support of a wigged ministry; but he lamented his folly. The sect is not yet quite extinct. John, the second, died in 1721, aged 73, and was buried on the Mamacock furm, on the river Thames. He published the midnight cry and other books. - Miss Caulkins' History of ROGERS, DANIEL, a physician in Ipswich, Mass, died in a snow-storm on Hampton beach, Dec. 1, 1722, aged about 56. He was the son of President J. Rogers, and graduated at Harvard in 1686.

ROGERS, NATHANIEL, minister of Portsmouth, N. H., died Oct. 3, 1723, aged about 56. The son of President Rogers, he graduated at Harvard in 1687, and was ordained in 1699. In consequence of building a meeting-house the church was divided into two churches. His sons were Nathaniel, who was the father of Judge R. of Exeter, and Daniel, who was a councillor. - ministry. He graduated in 1684, and was ordained in 1692. Wigglesworth preached a sermon on his death. His son, Daniel, was the minister of Exeter. He was himself the son of President John, a preacher, whose ancestors were ministers in this ascending order: Nathaniel of lpswich, John of Dedham, England, who was the grandson of John, the martyr of Smithfield, Feb., 1555. He published death the wages of sin, 1701; election sermon, 1706; on death of J. Appleton, 1739; an account of a revival in the Christian history.

Dec. 28, 1745, aged 79, in the 56th year of his by Lord Stirling. He soon went to England.

ROGERS, John, minister of Boxford, Mass., died in 1755, aged about 72. Horn in Salem, ho graduated at Harvard in 1705, and was pastor from 1709 to about 1743; and was succeeded by

E. Holyoke.

ROGERS, JOHN, minister of Kittery, Me., died in 1773, aged 81. The son of Rev. John R. of Ipswich, he graduated at Harvard in 1711, and was ordained in 1721. His parish became the town of Eliot in 1810.

ROGERS, NATHANIEL, son of Rev. John of Ipswich, and his colleague, died May 10, 1775, nged 72, having been pastor nearly fifty years. He graduated at Harvard in 1724. He was a man of eminent learning and goodness. The pastors of Ipswich were of the name of Rogers for more than one hundred years. The family descended from Rogers the martyr, the grandfather of Mr. Rogers of Dedham, England, whose son, Nathaniel, came to New England. He published a sermon on the death of J. Appleton, 1739; at the ordination of J. Treadwell; on the death of S. Williams, 1763.

ROGERS, ROBERT, major, the son of James R., an Irishman, an early settler of Dunbarton. N. II., commanded a company in the war of 1755, and "Rogers' Rangers" were celebrated for their exploits. March 13, 1758, with one hundred and seventy men he fought one hundred French and six hundred Indians; after losing one hundred men and killing one hundred and fifty he retreated. In 1759 he was sent by Amherst from Crown Point to destroy the Indian village of St. 1 rancis, which service was performed; two hundred Indians were killed. Obliged to return by the way of the Connecticut river, the party suffered great hardships. After serving in the Cherokee war he was appointed in 1766 governor of Michillimackinae. Accused of a plot for plundering the fort and joining the French, he was sent in irons to Montreal and tried by a court martial. In 1769 he went to England and was presented to the king; but was soon imprisoned for debt. In the war of the Revolution he joined the enemy, and, while commanding a corps at an outpost near Mamaroneck, narrowly escaped being ROGERS, JOHN, minister of Ipswich, died taken prisoner Oct. 21, 1776, by a party sent out ollengue 9. His ege; his Lubbard. oquence, e of the of New and rember of e pleads e left in egational ш. 104. Rowley, Ic was a gland in hersfield.

exposed

d. He chor in llowing

her with

el. He

o became on. His rhich decived the nt labors length his fuge from arrived in espectable n at Rowordained. His third son. His lege, and e support his life it calamities. the use of was conres and all nd persen when in medicine. es misled to acknowection sery exhorted nan goverxhortation re-elected. Annals. irvard colwas gradvas the son some time

h his incli-

His name is included in the act of New Hampshire against tories, of Nov. 19, 1778. His father was shot in the woods, being mistaken for a bear; his brother, Captain James R., died at Louisburg; his brother, Richard, was slain in 1756. He published a concise account of North America, London, 1765; journals of the French war, 1765; this was republished, entitled, reminiscenses of the French war, with the life of Stark, 12mo., Concord, 1831.

ROGERS, John, minister of Gloucester, Mass., dled Oct. 4, 1782, aged 65. Born in Kittery, Me., he graduated at Harvard in 1739, and was settled in 1744.

ROGERS, DANIEL, minister of Littleton, Mass., died in 1782, aged 76. He was the son of Dr. Daniel R.; graduated in 1725; and was ordained in 1732. He was a man of talents and research, and courtly in his manners. - Eliot.

ROGERS, DANIEL, first minister of the second church in Exeter, N. H., died Dec. 9, 1785, aged 78. The son of Rev. J. R., he graduated at Harvard in 1725; was tutor from 1732 to 1741; and was settled Aug. 31, 1748.

ROGERS, John, first minister of Leominster, Mass., died in Oct., 1789, aged about 80, and was succeeded by F. Gardner. Born in Boxford, he graduated at Harvard in 1732, and was settled Sept. 4, 1743; resigned in 1757. He published three sermons, 1756.

ROGERS, Susannan, published an account of Lovewell's fight.

ROGERS, CLARK, the first minister of Hancock, Mass., died Jan. 14, 1806, aged 76, in the thirty-fourth year of his ministry. He was a Baptist. His sons, Samuel and William, were also distinguished ministers.

ROGERS, HEZEKIAH, major, of the war department, died at Washington Sept. 4, 1810, aged 57. He was a gallant officer in the Revolutionary army; a man of worth. In great suffering, the gospel, which he had early embraced, sustained him.

ROGERS, SARAH, born without hands, died at Philadelphia in Oct., 1813. She could paint, holding the brush in her mouth.

ROGERS, WILLIAM, D. D., a minister in Ho Philadelphia, died April 24, 1824, aged 72. was born at Newport, R. I., July 22, 1751, and was the first student at the college of R. I., graduating in 1769. In May, 1771, he was ordained over the first Baptist church in Philadelphia. During five years he was a chaplain in the army. In 1789 he was appointed professor of belles lettres in the college of Philadelphia, which office he resigned in 1812. He published a ser- hill, Mass., was slain by the Indians Aug. 29, mon on the death of Rev. O. Hart, 1796.

Conn., died in 1824, aged about 68. He gradu- Harvard cellege in 1684; began to preach at II.

ated at Yale in 1777, and was settled in 1786. A. O. Stansbury was his successor.

ROGERS, ADAM, died in Mansfield, Conn., in Nov., 1834, aged 103.

ROGERS, ROBERT, colonel, died at Newport Aug. 5, 1835, aged 78, an officer in the Revolutionary army. He was a graduate in 1775 of Providence college. For many years he was at the head of a classical school, and librarian of the Redwood library. He was a highly respected member of the Baptist church, ROGERS, NATHAN, died at Bridgehampton, L. I., in 1844, aged 57. He was an artist of merit and reputation, a member of the national academy of design. He lent his ald to institutions of morals and charity.

ROGERS, John, chief of the Western Cherekees, died at Van Buren July 4, 1846, aged 70.

ROGERS, TIMOTHY F., minister of Bernardston, Mass., died in 1847, aged 66. Born in Tewksbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1802, and was settled in 1809. The church, of which he was the fourth pastor, was formed at Deerfield in 1741, when John Norton was ordained over what was called Fall Town. He published dedication sermon, 1825.

ROGERS, PETER, died at Waterloo, Ill., in 1849, aged 99; a minister. He was one of Washington's life guards.

ROGERS, J. SMYTH, M. D., died at New York March 30, 1851, aged 57. He was a man of education and accomplishments; professor of chemistry and mineralogy in Trinity college, Hartford.

ROGERS, WILLIAM M., minister in Boston, died Aug. 11, 1851, aged nearly 45. He was born in the island of Alderney, near the coast of France; his brother, an officer, was killed in the battle of the Nile. Left without parents, he was sent to this country and became a member of Dr. Codman's church, Dorchester. He graduated in 1827. For five years he was the minister of Townsend; then of Franklin-street church in Boston in 1835, removed to Winter street in 1841. He was buried at Leominster. He took a great interest in the welfare of seamen, and was a very popular and useful minister.

ROGERS, JAMES B., M. D., died at Philadelphia June 15, 1852. He was professor of chemistry in the university of Pennsylvania.

ROGERSON, ROBERT, second minister of Rehoboth, Mass., died in 1799, aged 77. He was born in Portsmouth, England, and succeeded D. Turner July 2, 1751. O. Thompson succeeded

ROLFE, BENJAMIN, second minister of Haver-1708, aged 45. The son of Benj. R. of New-ROGERS, Medad, minister of New Fairfield, bury, he was born Sept. 13, 1662; graduated at in 16 Indi tack wife ters who who ton. with the ! R field New settl R died died born 1799 R of S 60. Jan. His The uate Cart > high ence fron R Ulst He Dut R Yor only borr

179

the

RUCC

he s rem

strc

iste

181 sacl

Ma

type

May

ensa

Sche

appo

chur

Scho

effor

him

1786.

nn., in wport

evolu-75 of was at

of the peeted

mpton. f merit

acadeons of

Cherod 70. mards-

orn in 1802,

which Deerrdnined blished

Ill., in Wash-

w York of edf chemartford. Hoston, le was const of in the he was r of Dr. ated in ster of urch in reet in Ic took en, and hiladelf chem-

ster of He was eded D. cceeded

Haverug. 29, of Newinted at h at 11.

in 1689, and was ordained in Jan., 1694. The cemetery, bearing his name, was established by Indians and French from Canada made their attack on Haverbill on Sunday, and with him his wife and one child were also killed. Two daughters were preserved by Hagar, the maid servant, who covered them with tubs in the cellar; one of whom married Samuel Cheekley, minister of Hoston. The door of the parsonage house, pierced with bullet-holes, was united up as a memorial in the porch of the meeting-house.

ROLFE, HENJAMIN, first minister of Parsonsfield, Me., died in 1817, aged about 62. Born in Newbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1777; was settled in 1795; and dismissed in 1815.

ROLFE, WILLIAM, minister of Groton, Conn., died in 1837, aged about 70. His widow, Judith, died at Canterbury in 1849, aged 75. He was born in Plaistow; graduated at Dartmouth in 1790; and was pastor from 1803 to 1828.

ROMEYN, THEODORIC DIRCK, D. D., minister of Schenectady, N. Y., died April 16, 1804, aged 60. Ho was the son of Nichelas R.; war born Jan. 12, 1744, at New Barbadoes, New Jersey. His early studies were directed by his brother, Thomas R., then a minister in Delaware. He graduated at Princeton in 1765; was ordained by the Cotus over the Dutch church in Ulster county May 14, 1766, and afterwards installed at Hackensack, where he remained until his removal to Schenectady in Nov., 1784. In 1797 he was appointed professor of theology in the Dutch church. The establishment of the college at Schenectady is principally to be ascribed to his efforts. His colleague, Mr. Meyer, represents him as a son of thunder in the pulpit. He was highly instrumental in promoting the independence of the Dutch churches, or their separation from the jurisdiction of Holland.

ROMEYN, JEREMIAH, minister of Woodstock, Ulster county, N. Y., died July 17, 1818, aged 49. He was a professor of Hebrew in the Reformed Dutch church.

ROMEYN, JOHN B., D. D., minister in New York, died Feb. 22, 1825, aged 46. He was the only son of the minister of Schenectady; was born in 1778; graduated at Columbia college in 1795; and was settled in 1799 as the pustor of the Dutch church in Rhinebeck. in 1803 he succeeded Dr. Clarkson at Schenectady; in 1804 he succeeded Dr. Nott at Albany; and in 1808 was removed to the Presbyterian church in Cedar street, New York, of which he was the first minister. His sermons were published, 2 vols. 8vo., ROMEYN, JAMES V. C., minister at Hackensack, N. J., died June 27, 1840, aged 74.

RONALDSON, James, died at Philadelphia March 31, 1841. A native of Scotland, he was a occasions were published by his son, Joseph, in type-founder and horticulturist. The beautiful 1740. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

He was upright, frugal, honest.

ROOT, JESSE, judge, a patriot of the Revolution, died March 29, 1822, aged 85. He was the son of Ebenezer R., and grandson of Thomas R., both of whom removed from Northampton to Coventry, Conn. 1 was born in Jan., 1737 1 his mother was Sarah Strong, daughter of Joseph S., also from Northampton. Having graduated at Princeton college in 1756, he preached about three years, and then in consequence of the circumstances of his family was induced to study law. In 1763 he was admitted to the bar. Residing at Hartford, early in 1777 he raised a company and marched to join the army of Washington, and was made a lieutenant-colonel. From May, 1779, till the close of the war, he was a member of congress. In 1709 he was appointed a judge of the superior cour', and was chief justice from 1796 till his resignation in 1807, on reaching the age of 70. As a judge he was learned and dignified. He was through life a man of exemplary piety. To the great doctrines of the gospel he was ever strongly attached; and he abounded in nets of charity. At the age of 85 he was necustomed to attend prayer meetings and religious conformes. In the evening of his death he said, "I set out on a leasant journey in the morning, and I shall get du bugh to-night."

ROOT, OLIVER, colonel, died in Pittsfield May 2, 1926, aged 85. He served in the French war: wis present at the surrender of Burgoyne; and wis with Colonel Brown, when he was killed. skilfully conducting the retreat. He was a man of great worth, highly respected.

ROOT, ERASTUS, general, died in New York Dec. 24, 1846, aged 73. Born in Hebron, he graduated at Dartmouth. As a lawyer he settled at Delhi. He served in public life as representative, senator, and lieutenant-governor, and as a senator of the United States. He was a political disciple of G. Clinton. Tall and stout, he was bold, frank, zealous, and trustworthy.

ROPER, John, was killed by the Indians at Lancaster in 1676, aged about 55. He was a freeman of Dedham in 1641. His first wife was killed in 1675. His second wife, a daughter, and his son, Ephraim, were killed in 1697.

ROPES, GEORGE, an early settler of Salem, Mass., in 1637, died in 1670, leaving sons, John and George, whose descendants have been numerous and respectable.

ROPES, BENJAMIN, a brave officer in the war of 1812, died at Salem July 29, 1845, aged 71. He was in the battles on the Niagara river in Canada.

ROSE, AQUILA, a poet of Philadelphia, is spoken of by Franklin. His poems on several

ROSE, TIMOTHY, an early settler of Granville, | in Massachusetts in 1631, and removed to Wind-Ohio, died Nov. 16, 1815, aged 50. He was born in Granville, Mass., June 1, 1762, and was a soldier in early life, afterwards a deacon. He conducted a colony to Ohio; and Granville has now a college and two academies, and about a quarter of the inhabitants are professors of religion. He was a judge, and he left a character worthy of remembrance for enterprise, and benevolent, useful labors.

ROSE, DANIEL, M. D., died at Thomaston, Me , Oct. 25, 1833, aged 62. He was warden of the State prison, and agent for the sale of lands.

ROSE, ISRAEL G., minister of Chesterfield, Mass., died Feb. 6, 1842, aged 43. Born in Coventry, he graduated at Yale in 1821, and was first the minister of Canterbury, also of Wilbraham.

ROSS, GEORGE, judge, a patriot of the Revolution, died in July, 1779, aged 49. He was the son of an Episcopal minister at New Castle, Delaware, and was born in 1730. Having studied law with his brother in Philadelphia, he settled in Lancaster. Being a member of congress from 1774 to 1777, he signed the Declaration of Independence. For his public services the people of the county voted him 150 pounds out of the treasury; but he declined to receive it, deeming it the duty of a representative of the people to promote the public welfare without expecting pecuniary rewards. In April, 1779, he was appointed a judge of the court of admiralty. He died of a sudden attack of the gout. While he was a patriotic citizen and a learned and skilful lawyer, he was also kind and affectionate at home. - Goodrich.

ROSS, Robert, minister of Bridgeport, Conn., died in 1799, aged about 60. He graduated at Princeton in 1751, and was settled in 1760. S. Blatchford was his successor in 1797.

ROSS, ALEXANDER, died in New Hampshire in September, 1818, aged 120. - N. H. Patriot, Sept. 29. ROSS, WILLIAM, general, died at Wilkesbarre Aug. 9, 1842, aged 82; an early settler from New London county, a man of great wealth, the father of William S. Ross, of the senate of Pennsylva-

ROSS, James, died at Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 27, 1847, aged 85; a senator of the United States from 1794 to 1803.

ROSS, EDWARD C., LL. D., died at New York May 16, 1851; professor of mathematics in the free academy.

ROSSETER, BRYAN, Dr., was an early cettler of Guilford, Conn., in 1650. He purchased Dr. Desborow's house and lands when he returned to England. His son Josiah was a magistrate: one of his daughters married Rev. John Cotton of Plymouth. It is supposed that he was a freeman sor in 1640, by mistake called Bray Rosseter.

in

E

wi

80 da

in

by ch

th

M

by

in fas lisl

cot

W

wa

Gr

set

and poc

age

Ha

in

Nai

Eng

the

to

the ful

fore

and

geo

18: yea

was tee

in

ing

ple

or

Te

 $\Lambda 1$

18 ear

wh

que

live nec

to sol

ROSSETER, EBENEZER, third minister of Stonington, Conn., died in 1762, aged about 64. He graduated at Yale in 1718, and succeeded J. Noves in 1722, and was dismissed in 1730.

ROSSETER, ASHUR, second minister of Preston, Conn., died in 1791, aged about 60. Graduated at Yale in 1742, he succeeded S. Treat in 1744.

ROSSITER, EDWARD, an assistant in Massachusetts in 1629, came from England, but died in 1630. He was a man wealthy, grave, and pious, whose loss was deeply felt. - Eliot.

ROTCH, WILLIAM, died at New Bedford in May, 1828, aged 93.

ROUSE, PETER P., minister of the reformed Dutch church in New Brunswick, N. J., died in 1832, aged 37.

ROWAN, STEPHEN N., D. D., died in New York in 1835, aged 49. Born in Salem, N. Y., he graduated at Union college, and was the minister of the eighth Presbyterian church in New York from 1819 to 1830. He was succeeded by H. Hunter, who died before him in 1834.

ROWAN, JOHN, died at Louisville, Ky., July 13, 1843, aged 70. He was born in Pennsylvania. He held many offices, from 1804, when he was secretary of Kentucky, till he was elected to the senate of the United States in 1824. His literary attainments were great and his eloquence persuasive and commanding.

ROWLAND, DAVID SHERMAN, minister of Plainfield and Windsor, Conn., died in 1794, aged 74. Graduated at Yale in 1743, he succeeded J. Coit in 1748; was dismissed in 1761; settled at Windsor, 1776, and dismissed in 1789; and was succeeded by H. A. Rowland in 1790, probably his son. He published a farewell sermon, 1761; on the repeal of the stamp act, 1766; on his installation, 1776; before the ministers of Rhode Island, 1772; on death of Rev. II. Bissell, ROWLAND, HENRY A., minister of Windsor, Conn., died Nov. 28, 1835, aged 71. A graduate of Dartmouth in 1785, he succeeded, in 1790, D. S. Rowland, probably his father. By his wife Frances, the daughter of Moses Bliss of Springfield, he had eight children. Her mother was Abigail Metcalf, the daughter of William of Lebanon, who married Abigail, daughter of Rev. Timothy Edwards.

ROWLAND, WILLIAM FREDERIC, minister of Exeter, N. H., died in 1843, aged about 80. Born in Plainfield, Conn., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1784, and was settled in 1790. He published New Hampshire election sermons, 1796 and 1809.

ROWLAND, THOMAS, major, died at Detroit

Winda time he commanded the post at Detroit. ŀr. er of ut 64.

ROWLANDSON, JOSEPH, first minister of Lancaster, Mass., died at Wethersfield, Conn.. Nov. 24, 1678, aged about 44. He was born in England. His father, Thomas, came from Ipswich to Lancaster, and died in 1657. He was a solitary graduate of 1652 at Cambridge; was ordained, after preaching some years in the place, in 1660, at Lancaster, which town was destroyed by the Indians Feb. 10, 1676, when his wife and children were carried away captives. He was at that time in Boston. He next succeeded, in 1677. Mr. Bulkley, at Wethersfield, and was succeeded by J. Woodbridge. His son Joseph died in W. in 1712; and his son Wilson died in 1735. A fast sermon, preached Nov. 21, 1678, was published in 1682. His wife, Mary, published an account of her captivity: 5th ed., 1828.

ROWLEY, THOMAS, died at Cold Spring, Westhaven, Vt., in August, 1796, aged 75. He was a patriot and poet, and was called "the Green Mountain patriarch." He was an early settler in Vermont, and an associate in council and in the field, of Allen and Warner. He was a magistrate in Rutland county. His popular poetical writings appeared in various publications.

ROWSON, Susanna, died in Boston in 1824, aged 62. She was the daughter of William Haswell, a British naval officer, who was wrecked in 1769, on Lowell's Island, and then lived at Nantasket with his daughter. He returned to England; and there she married William Rowson, the leader of a musical military band. She came to America with her husband in 1793, under a theatrical engagement; and was for years usefully employed in the education of youth in Medford, Newton, and Boston. She published novels and plays, Charlotte Temple, etc.; poems, 1804; geography and history, 1806; biblical dialogues, 1822. - Encyc. of Amer. Lit.

ROYALL, ANNE, a notorious woman for some years, died in 1854. Born in Virginia, she was kidnapped by the Indians and detained fifteen years; she then married Capt. R., and lived in Alabama. She established papers in Washington, Paul Pry and the Huntress. From simple men she extorted money by her personalities or threats. She published sketches, 1826; the Tennesseean, 1827; the black book, 1828.

ROYCE, SAMUEL, died of the pestilence, near Alexandria, on Red river, Louisiana, in October, 1819, aged 28. His name is unknown upon the earth; but it will stand high in the roll of heaven, where the names of great statesmen and conquerors will not be found. His family friends lived in Clinton, N. Y. He graduated at Schenectady in 1813. Determined to devote himself to the benefit of the new settlements of the in 1849, a brave soldier in the war of 1812. For was licensed by the presbytery of Mississippi, consisting of four members, in 1816, and soon repaired to A., employed by the Connecticut missionary society. He went where no Protestant preacher ever went. He said: "I am fond of going foremost with the standard of Christ. There is not one religious person in the place." But he soon fell, in all the fervor of his self-sacrificing zeal.

RUDD, ABIGAIL, died in Bozrah, Norwich, Conn., in 1857, aged 99. Her name was Allen. She was married in 1780, and had a pension for her husband's Revolutionary services. She could repeat the whole of Milton's paradise lost, and much of the bible. Retaining her faculties to the last, she died in peace and hope.

RUDE, WILLIAM, died at Cumberland, R. I., Oct. 24, 1845, aged 97. He fought at Bunker

Hill and White Plains.

RUGGLES, Thomas, minister of Guilford, Conn., succeeded J. Eliot and died in 1728, aged about 58 or 63. Born in Roxbury, Mass., the son of John, a representative, he graduated at Harvard in 1690, and was ordained in 1695. One account says he was born in 1655, which is probably a mistake for 1665, as it would render his age 35 at the time of his graduation. His son Thomas succeeded him in 1729, and died in 1770, aged about 60: he graduated at Yale in 1723.

RUGGLES, SAMUEL, the second minister of Billerica, Mass., died in 1749, aged 68. Born in Roxbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1702, and was ordained in 1708, succeeding S. Whiting.

RUGGLES, TIMOTHY, minister of Rochester. Mass., died in 1768, aged 84. Born in Roxbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1707, and succeeded S. Arnold in 1710.

RUGGLES, THOMAS, minister of Guilford. Conn., died in 1770. He graduated at Yale in 1723; succeeded his father, T. R., in 1729; and from 1746 was one of the fellows of the college. He published the usefulness of soldiers, 1736: a sermon on the death of Dr. J. Eliot, 1763.

RUGGLES, BENJAMIN, minister of New Braintree, Mass., died in 1782, aged 82. He graduated at Harvard in 1721; was ordained at Middleborough in 1724; installed at N. B. in 1754; and received D. Foster as a colleague in 1778. - Sprague's Annals.

RUGGLES, THOMAS, minister of Cheshire, Conn., died in 1836, aged about 52. Born in Guilford, he graduated at Yale in 1805, and was pastor from 1809 to 1811.

RUGGLES, DAVID, Dr., a colored man, died at Northampton Dec. 16, 1849, aged 40. He established a water-cure; and was so much of a bewildered man or impostor, as to claim the skill of determining diseases by the greater or less rasouth, which were in a spiritual desolation, he pidity of perspiration, ascertained by feeling the

, N. Y., he minin New eded by y., July nnsylvawhen he

ded J.

f Pres-

Gradu-

eat in

Massa-

it died

e, and

ford in eformed

died in

n New

ected to 24. His loquence ister of in 1794, , he sucin 1761; in 1789; in 1790, well seract, 1766; nisters of H. Bissell, Windsor, graduate in 1790, y his wife of Springother was m of Lebof Rev.

, minister about 80. d at Dart-1790. He sermons.

at Detroit

a

C

cl st

E

bl

w er

H

П

 \mathbf{R}

st

be

to laı

gr

ter

wa

in

ho

his

611

Ju

in

II

an wl

bo 16

cc R II

H

in

G

B

70

skin. On the same spot on Mill river, two miles from the centre of the town, has grown up the large water-cure of Dr. Munde, from Germany.

RUMP, FREDERIC, a Revolutionary pensioner, died at Urbana, Ohio, Nov. 9, 1841, aged 106. A German, he served in the American war. He was twice married and had eighteen children.

RUMSEY, James, resided in Berkeley county, Va., and died in Philadelphia. In 1782 he invented a method of employing steam in navigation, for which he obtained a patent in Virginia in 1787. In 1784 he published a treatise on the subject, in controversy with J. Fitch, who claimed a similar invention. His method did not succeed in experiments made in this country and in Eagland. He died while employed in describing his invention.

RUNNELS, HARMAN, colonel, died near Monticello, Miss., in 1841, aged about 90; a soldier of the Revolution, a legislator of Georgia and Mississippi.

RUSH, BENJAMIN, M. D., a physician, died April 19, 1813, aged 67. He descended from ancestors who early emigrated from England to Pennsylvania. He was born at Byberry, fourteen miles northeast of Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1745. After the death of his father, his mother sent him to the academy of his uncle, Dr. Finley, in Nottingham, Maryland, where he lived eight years and became deeply impressed with moral and religious sentiments. Having graduated at Princeton in 1760, he studied physic with Redman and Shippen, and also at Edinburgh from 1766 to 1768. He returned to Philadelphia in 1769, and was elected the professor of chemistry in the college; in 1791 he was appointed professor of medicine. In his practice he relied much on the lancet and on cathartic medicines. In the yellow fever of 1793, when 4,044 persons died, he successfully resorted to his favorite remedies. Being a member of congress in 1776, his name is affixed to the declaration of independence. In 1777 he was appointed physician-general of the hospital in the middle military department; in 1787 he was a member of the convention for adopting the constitution of the United States; and for the last fourteen years of his life treasurer of the United States mint. He was president of the society for the abolition of slavery; vice-president of the Philadelphia bible society; and connected also with many other charitable and literary societies. His short inquiry into the effect of ardent spirits upon the human body and mind was a most valuable treatise and one of the earliest productions on the subject of temperance. He also wrote against the use of tobacco, describing the effect of its habitual use on health, morals, and property. His zeal for the interests of learning induced him to be one of the founders of Dickinson college at Carlisle; he also eloquently advocated the universal establishment of free schools. He died of the plcurisy, after an illness of five days. His wife was Julia, the daughter of Richard Stockton. Nine children survived him. Richard Rush, his son, was secretary of the treasury in the administration of John Q. Adams. In 1811 the emperor of Russia sent him a gold ring, as a testimony of respect for his medical character. Dr. Rush was one of the most eminent physicians and most learned medical writers of our country. His writings contain many expressions of piety. It was his usual practice at the close of each day to read to his collected family a chapter in the bible, and to address God in prayer. His character is fully described in Thacher's medical biography, where may be found a list of the subjects of his various writings. His medical works are in six volumes. He published also a volume of essays, literary, moral, and philosophical, 1798. - Thacher, II. 29-71.

RUSH, JACOB, LL. D., judge, brother of the preceding, was born in 1746; graduated at Princeton college in 1765; and was for many years president of the court of common pleas for Philadelphia, where he died Jan. 5, 1820, aged 74. In the controversy between Dickinson and Reed, he was a writer on the side of the former. He published his charges on moral and religious subjects, 1803.

RUSSELL, John, a Wedderdop'd shoemaker of Woburn, after the result of the synod of 1639, published a brief narrative concerning the first gathering of a church of Christ in gospel order at Boston, — in favor of the anabaptists. Hubbard says: "Surely he was not well aware of the old adage, 'Ne sutor ultra crepidam,' or else he would not have made such botching work." But this wittiesism proves nothing. Mr. Russell might have had just cause of complaint of persecution, RUSSELL, RICHARD, died in Charlestown, Mass., in 1676, aged 64. He came from Herefordshire, Eng., in 1640; and was speaker of the house, assistant, and treasurer of the colony. Among his descendants, of the fifth generation, was Judge Chambers Russell of the supreme court, the sen of Daniel, a graduate of 1731, who died in 1767, aged 53; also Thomas Russell, and Margaret, who married John Codman and was the mother of Rev. Dr. Codman.

RUSSELL, JOHN, the first minister of the Baptist church in Boston, was settled July 28, 1679, and died Dec. 24, 1680. The Russells of Providence descended from him. He might have been the son of John, a freeman of Woburn in 1640, and a Baptist, who died in 1676.

RUSSELL, John, the first minister of Wethersfield, Conn., and of Hadley, Mass., died in II. Dec. 10, 1692, aged 65. He was the son of John, who lived in Cambridge and in Connecticut; and was born in England. He graduated from 1689 to 1713, a graduate of Harvard in at Harvard in 1645. He was succeeded at Wethersfield by G. Bulkley. He came to Hadley in 1659; in his house the regicides, Goffe and Whalley, were concealed from 1664 for fifteen or sixteen years. His son, Samuel, graduated at Harvard in 1681; was ordained at Branford, Conn., in 1687; and died in 1731, aged 71. His elder son, Jonathan, was the minister of Barnstable. It is supposed the remittances to his English boarders enabled the poor country minister to educate his sons.

RUSSELL, JONATHAN, minister of Barnstable, Mass., died Feb. 21, 1711, aged 55. He was the son of John R., first minister of Wethersfield, then of Hadley. He was graduated at Harvard in 1675, and ordained Sept. 19, 1683. His successor, from 1712 to 1758, was Jonathan R., his son, a graduate of Yale in 1708. He was a minister of distinction. Dr. John R. of Barnstable, a graduate of 1704, is supposed to have been his son. He published the election sermon, 1704.

RUSSELL, NOADIAII, minister in Middletown, Conn., died Dec. 3, 1713, aged 54. He was the son of William, who came from England and died at New Haven in 1664; he was graduated at Harvard in 1681; was a schoolmaster at Ipswich; was ordnined Oct. 24, 1688. He was one of the twelve who founded Yale college in 1712, for which act he deserves to be held in honorable remembrance. Nathaniel Collins was his predecessor, settled Nov. 4, 1688; and his successor was his son, William Russell, ordained June 1, 1715, died June 1, 1761. From him descended Samuel and E. Augustus Russell, living in 1854. Rev. Mr. N. R., by his wife, Mary Hamlin, had nine children. Some poetic effusions on his death were reprinted in the Sentinel and Witness of Feb. 7, 1854, the longest of which was written by Rev. N. Collins of Enfield, born in M. June 13, 1677, graduated at Harvard 1697. His diary is in N. E. hist. register for Jan., 1853.

RUSSELL, SAMUEL, second minister of Branford, Conn., died in 1731, aged 70. He succeeded A. Pierson in 1687. The son of Rev. J. R. of Hadley, he graduated at Harvard in 1681. He was first the minister of Deerfield, Mass. His wife was the daughter of Major John Whiting. He published election sermon, 1699.

RUSSELL, SAMUEL, first minister of North Guilford, Conn., died in 1746, aged about 41. Born in Branford, he graduated at Yale in

RUSSELL, WILLIAM, forty-six years minister of Middletown, Conn., died in 1761, aged about 70. He graduated at Yale in 1709; was tutor and trustee; was ordained in 1715 as successor of his father, Noadiah Russell, the second pastor 1681. He was succeeded by E. Huntington. He published election sermon, 1730.

RUSSELL, DANIEL, first minister of Stepney, in Wethersfield, Conn., died in 1761, aged about 57. He graduated at Yale in 1724, and was settled in 1727. C. Chapin was one of his successors.

RUSSELL, WILLIAM, minister of Windsor, Conn., died in 1774, aged about 50. The son of Rev. William of Middletown, he graduated at Yale in 1745. In a class of twenty-seven his name stands the first, when the names were arranged according to family rank. He was tutor from 1748 to 1750. He was settled in 1751. D. S. Rowland succeeded him.

RUSSELL, NOADIAH, minister of Thompson. in the parish of Killingly, Conn., died in 1795, aged 65. The son of Rev. William R. of Middletown, he graduated at Yale in 1750, and was ordained in 1757, and was pastor nearly thirty-eight years. He and his predecessor, Marston

Cabot, both died of the apoplexy.

RUSSELL, THOMAS, died in Boston April 8, 1796, aged 55. He was the son of James R., and a descendant of Richard, born in Charlestown in 1740. A successful and wealthy merchant, he was abundant in charitable distributions and good works. The amount of his annual gifts most men would regard as a fortune. Of the gospel he was not ashamed, but made a public profession of his love to the Saviour of sinners. Dr. Morse published a sermon on his death.

RUSSELL, JAMES, a councillor of Massachusetts, was the descendant of Richard H., who settled in Charlestown in 1640 and was treasurer of the colony. He was born in C. Aug. 16, 1715, and died April 24, 1798, aged 82. He discharged the duties of a judge, and of other public offices, which he sustained, with the greatest fidelity. To the poor he was a steady and liberal friend. He respected the institutions of the gospel, and, while his family and his closet witnessed his constant devotions, his life adorned the religion which he professed. In his last illness he was supported and consoled by the truths of the gospel. He was the father of Thomas Russell.

RUSSELL, WILLIAM, colonel, died in Fayette county, Ky., in July, 1825, aged about 66. At the age of sixteen he entered the army of the Revolution as a soldier, and rose to the rank of captain: in all subsequent wars he also served about twenty campaigns.

RUSSELL, JONATHAN, commissioner of the United States at Ghent, died Feb. 16, 1832, aged

RUSSELL, H., widow, died in Nantucket in April, 1836, aged 99, the oldest person in N.

RUSSELL, BENJAMIN, major, died in Boston Jan. 4, 1845, aged 83. A soldier of the Revolu-ied of His ckton. sh, his adminhe cmı testir. Dr. sicians r counessions e close amily a God in bed in e found rs. Ilis ublished nd phie uni-

of the ated at or many leas for 0, aged son and the forral and oemaker

of 1639.

the first el order . Hubre of the r else he k." But ell might secution. rlestown, m Hereer of the eolony. eneration, supreme of 1731, s Russell, er of the July 28, ussells of night have Voburn in man and

of Wethlied in II. e son of Connecti-

he

wi

80 da

t h qu

Jo

wn

sit dy

lie

wn

Ro

Se

die

18

He

a g ble

of

ber

da

wa

eej

wit

lisl

ish

col

cio

Ju

Pr

for 16

of

pr St

an

of

CI

Ιn

tion, a practical printer, he edited for about forty | States, died in July, 1800. He was the son of years the Centinel, a semi-weekly paper at Boston of great influence, the frequent contributors to which were Ames, Lowell, Cabot, Higginson, and Pickering. The first number was issued March 24, 1784. He was a man cheerful and benevolent. He knew how to consult in his paper the taste of the people. "The Centinel was always as rich in deaths as a church-yard, and in marriages as prolific as an asparagus bed," - "the gate to terrestrial immortality of all the people of New England who died during its continuance."

RUSSWURM JOHN BROWN, governor, died in Africa in 1854, aged 52. He was a colored man, a graduate of Bowdoin college in 1826, and governor of Liberia by the appointment of the American colonization society.

RUST, HENRY, first minister of Stratham, N. H., died in 1749, aged 62. He graduated at Harvard in 1707, and was ordained in 1718.

RUTER, MARTIN, D. D., died May 16, 1838, aged 53. He was born at Charlestown, Mass., April 3, 1785; and, with little education, was licensed to preach. He studied with diligence while a preacher. He was president of Augusta college, in Kentucky, from 1827 to 1832, and of Alleghany college, at Meadville, Pa., from 1834 to 1837. Then he superintended a mission to Texas, where he died.

RUTGERS, HENRY, colonel, a patriot of the Revolution, died in Feb., 1830, aged 84. He fought at Brooklyn heights. The British occupied his house as a hospital and barracks. In 1807 he delivered an address on laving the corner stone of the Reformed Dutch church in Orchard street. He was a respected, useful citizen of New York; in his politics a decided partisan, but never engaging in any important measure without making it a special subject of prayer. It were well if politicians would follow his example; there would then be likely to be in their movements less of greedy selfishness and vindictive passion, and more of disinterestedness and of virtuous calmness. Being very rich, Col. Rutgers was abundant in his charities for almost all public objects and towards numerous individuals. He expended for others an immense sum. In one instance he received a note, in which the writer, then at the door, begged his assistance, intimating that in the failure of it he should kill himself. He conversed with the young man, and found that he had ruined himself by gambling. But he cautiously interposed, and saved him from the meditated crime, and rescued him from misery; and the same young man became respectable and pious. - McMurray's Sermon.

RUTIIRAUFF, J., minister of the German Reformed church, Greencastle, Pa., died Dec. 15,

Dr. John R., who, with his brother Andrew, a lawyer, emigrated from Ireland to Charleston about 1735. Having studied law at the Temple, he returned to Charleston in 1761, and soon proved himself an able lawyer and accomplished orator. He took an early and distinguished part in support of the liberties of his country, at the commencement of the American Revolution. He was a member of the first congress in 1774. When the temporary constitution of South Carolina was established in March, 1776, he was appointed the president and commander-in-chief of the colony, He continued in this station till the adoption of the new constitution in March, 1778, to which he refused to give his assent. He was opposed to it, because it annihilated the council, reducing the legislative authority from three to two branches, and was too democratic in its features. In 1779. however, he was chosen governor, with the authority, in conjunction with the council, to do whatever the public safety required. He soon took the field at the head of the militia. All the energies of the State were called forth. During the siege of Charleston, at the request of Gen. Lincoln, he left the city, that the executive authority might be preserved, though the capital should fall. Having called a general assembly in January, 1782, he addressed them in a speech, in which he depicted the perfidy, repine, and cruelty which stained the British arms. In 1784 he was a judge of the court of chancery; in 1789 a judge of the supreme court of the United States; in 1791 chief justice of South Carolina; and in 1796 chief justice of the United States. He was a man of eminent talents, patriotism, decision, and firmness. His son, Gen. John R., a distinguished member of congress, died at Philadelphia Sept. 1, 1819, aged 53.

RUTLEDGE, EDWARD, governor of South Carolina, brother of the preceding, died Jan. 23, 1800, aged 50. He was born in Charleston in Nev., 1749. In 1769 he went to England to complete his legal education at the Temple, and returned in 1773. In his practice he would not engage in a cause which he did not believe to be just. His powers of persuasion were not employed to support iniquity or to shield oppression. Being a member of congress from 1774 to 1777, he signed the declaration of independence. He had much of the esteem and confidence of Washington. He commanded a company of the militia in 1779, when the British were driven from Port Royal Island. Being taken a prisoner in 1780, he was sent with others to St. Augustine and detained nearly a year. After he was exchanged he resided near Philadelphia till the evacuation of Charleston by the enemy in Dec., 1782. After an exile of almost three years, he returned and RUTLEDGE, John, chief justice of the United | resumed his profession. In 1798 he was elected governor. In person he was above the middle | dance of Indian corn. He sent out persons to height, rather corpulent, of a fair complexion, and a pleasing countenance. His constitution was broken down by hereditary gout. By his wife, the daughter of Henry Middleton, he had a son, Major Henry M. R. of Tennessee, and a daughter. He had great address in moderating those collisions which often produce duels. His eloquence was less vehement than that of his brother John, but more insinuating and conciliatory.

RUTLEDGE, EDWARD, died at Savannah in 1832; he was president elect of Transylvania university. He graduated at Yale in 1817; and was professor of moral philosophy in the university of Pennsylvania.

RUXTON, GEORGE F., died at St. Louis of dysentery, Sept. 29, 1848, aged 88; he was a lieutenant in the British army. He wrote the series in Blackwood, of life in the far west, and was the author of adventures in Mexico and the Rocky Mountains.

RYALLS, HENRY, died at Darien, Georgia, Sept. 12, 1838, aged 110. A soldier of the Revolution, he retained his feculties to the last.

RYLAND, WILLIAM, chaplain of the navy, died at Washington Jan., 1846, aged 77.

SAFFORD, DANIEL, died in Boston Feb. 3, 1856, aged 63; a deacon of Mt. Vernon church. He was for many years a successful mechanic, a gentleman of princely beneficence, of remarkable courtesy, kindness and cheerfulness of disposition, and a devout and consistent Christian. The members of the church were, at the time of his death, upwards of seven hundred in num-

SAGE, SYLVESTER, minister of Westminster, Vermont, died in 1841, aged 74. Born in Haddam, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1787, and was the pastor of Westminster till his death, excepting that from 1807 to 1809 he was colleague with Mr. Weld of Braintree, Mass. He published farewell sermon at Braintree, 1809.

SALES, Francis, died at Cambridge Feb. 16. 1854, aged 82. He was instructor in the Spanish language. He published Spanish grammar; colmena Espanola, 1825; Cadalso, 1827; seleccion de obras maestras dramaticas, 1828.

SALLE, ROBERT DE LA, embarked at Rochelle July 14, 1678, and reached Quebec in September. Proceeding up the St. Lawrence, he laid the foundation of fort Niagara in the same year. In 1679 he passed up the Niagara river, the falls of which he estimated at six hundred feet! He proceeded to Michillimackinae, and the Sault de St. Marie. He visited the lake of the Illinois and Green Bay, and built a fort on the St. Joseph of lake Michigan; and another, called Creve-explore the Mississippi; and returned to fort Frontenac on lake Ontario in 1680. In the following year he prosecuted his discoveries. In April, 1683, he was at the mouth of the Mississippi. Returning by the way of the lakes to Quebec and France, he was again sent out by the king with four ships and two hundred men. Leaving Rochelle in July, 1684, he proceeded to the gulf of Mexico. In Feb., 1685, he built a fort in the bay of St. Louis, and founded a settlement; but was at last, in 1687 or 1688, assassinated by one of his own party. An account of his discoveries was published by the Chevalier Tonti; an account is also in New York hist. coll., SALTER, RICHARD, D. D., second minister of Mansfield, Conn., died in 1789, aged 65. Born in Boston, the son of John, a merchant, he graduated at Harvard at the age of sixteen. He then studied both medicine and theology. In 1744 he succeeded E. Williams. His successors were E. Gridley, J. Sherman, S. P. Williams, He had in his church great difficulty on account of the Separatists; of the members, twenty-four were excommunicated. He gave by deed a farm to Yale college, worth 2000 dollars, to promote the study of the Hebrew and other languages. His wife was Mary, the daughter of E. Williams; but his three children died in infancy. His second wife was a daughter of Rev. Solomon Williams. His health failed him in his last two years. He was a very great smoker of tobacco; whether that habit injured his health is not known. He was a man of a dignified and commanding appearance, of a powerful intellect, and of powerful passions, not always laid under restraint. In his preaching his morning sermon was usually doctrinal; in the afternoon he presented the practical bearings of the subject. He published the election sermon, 1768. - Sprague's Annals.

SALTONSTALL, RICHARD, Sir, one of the fathers of the Massachusetts colony, died in England about 1658; and from him descended those of the name in New England. He came over in the Arabella with Governor Winthrop in 1630. With Mr. Phillips he commenced the settlement of Watertown; but, discouraged, he returned to England the next year, leaving two sons behind. A liberal Puritan, he was through life a friend of the colony; he was also a patentee of Connecticut. His wife was a daughter of John Hampden.

SALTONSTALL, RICHARD, son of the preceding, died in England in 1694, aged 84. He settled at Ipswich, and was an assistant in 1637. He entered his protest against the introduction of negro slavery. A friend of Whalley and Goffe, ereur, in the midst of the tribes of the Illinois. he gave them in 1672 fifty pounds. He visited In trafficking with the Indians he found abun- England several times. His son Nathaniel, a on of rew. a leston emple, Soon lished part in e comle was When an was ed the colony, tion of ich he d to it. ng the anches, a 1779. the auto do le soon thority should n Janun which y which was a a judge ates: in in 1796 was a

All the

During

en. Lin-

ion, and guished ia Sept. South

Jan. 23, eston in land to ple, and ould not ve to be not empression. to 1777, ice. He of Washie militia om Port in 1780, and dcschanged racuation 2. After rned and s elected graduate of 1659, cettled in Haverhill on an estate known as the Saltonstall seat; and died in SALTONSTALL, GURDON, governor of Connecticut, died Sept. 24, 1724, aged 58. He was born in Haverhill, Mass., March 27, 1666, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1684. His father was Col. Nathan, the son of Richard of Watertown, who was the son of Sir Richard S. He was ordained Nov. 25, 1691, minister of New London, where he continued for several years, highly esteemed. In 1707, by the advice of the clergy, he was persuaded to undertake the chief direction of the civil affairs of the colony, and he was annually chosen governor till his death. He was both a profound divine and a consummate statesman. The complexion of the Saybrook platform was owing to his desire of bringing the mode of church government somewhat nearer to the Presbyterian form. To a quick perception and a glowing imagination he united correctness of judgment. The majesty of his eye and doportment was softened by the features of benevolence. As an orator, the music of his voice, the force of his argument, the beauty of his allusions. the case of his transitions, and the fulness of his diction gave him a high rank. His temper was ware, but he had been taught the art of selfcommand, for he was a Christian. His widow, Mary, the daughter of William Whittingham and the relict of Wm. Clark, died in Jan., 1730. She was distinguished for her intelligence, wit, wisdom, and piety. To Harvard college she bequeathed 1000 pounds, for two students designed for the ministry.

SALTONSTALL, RICHARD, judge, grandson of Nathaniel, died in Massachusetts in 1756, aged 53; a graduate of 1722. In 1736 he was made a judge of the supreme court. He was affable and polished, liberal to the poor, and generously hospitable. His third wife was Mary, daughter of E. Ccoke of Boston, the mother of Dr. Nathaniel S. He left three sons, and two daughters, married to Col. George Watson of Plymouth, and to Moses Badger, Episcopal minister in Providence.

SALTONSTALL, NATHANIEL, a physician, a descendant of Richard, and brother of Gurdon S., was the son of Richard S., a judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts, and was born at Huverhill Feb. 10, 1746. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1766, and died at Haverhill May 15, 1815, aged 69. His maternal ancestor was Governor Leverett. While his brothers were royalists, Dr. S. was a whig of the Revolution. He was an intelligent, skilful, humane physician, a friend of science and religion, and highly respected by his fellow citizens. - Thacher; 2 Hist. Coll. IV.

Salem May 8, 1845, aged nearly 62. The son of Dr. Nathaniel S. of Haverhill, he graduated in the large class of 1802, and practised law in Salem. He was a learned and faithful and honest lawyer, a member of congress, and connected with various literary and charitable societies. His care for the poor was such that he stored his cellar with reference to their wants in the winter. In his will he was a benefactor of Harvard college and of Exeter academy. He published a historical sketch of Haverhill. A memoir of him is in hist, col! Id series, vol. 1x.

SAMPLEMAN, GEORGE, slied in Clark county, Ohio, Jun , 1817. aged 110; how in Germany June 24, 1732.

ite

98 ol

siı

to 800

 Λ_1

ing

011

the

ths

on

con

pro

can tion

tab

in (

Da

in rej

Thi

dea

led.

err

vie

mo

18.

ate

gei uni

18 fiel

) rea

lish

a h

Ma

set

em

yea

tiai

tim

SAMPSON, Ezra, died in New York in 1823. aged 74. Born in Middleborough, the son of Uriah, he graduated at Yale in 1773, and was ordained at Plymouth in 1776, as colleague with J. Parker. In the first campaign he was a chaplain in the army at Cambridge. Being dismissed in 1796, he removed to Hudson, devoting himself to literature and preaching occasionally. His last years were spent with his sons in New York. He died in peace. He and Dr. Harry Croswell published the newspaper, the Balance. He published a sermon to soldiers, 1775; beauties of the bible, 1802; the historical dictionary. 1804; the sham patriot unmasked; the brief remarker. - Sprague's Annals.

SAMPSON, DEBORAH, several years a woman soldier, died about 1830. Born in 1758 in Plymouth county, she was the child of poor and unhappy parents. Yet she made every effort to acquire some education. She shared the patriotic feeling of the Revolution. By keeping school she gained twelve dollars, with which she purchased fustian, which she made into a suit of men's clothes, and joined the army as a man in October, 1778. For three years she performed all the duties of a soldier without the discovery of her sex, under the name of Robert Shirtliffe. While sick of a fever, Dr. Binney of Philadelphia made the discovery. When she was recovered, he sent her with a note to Washington, disclosing the fact. Washington said not a word, but gave her a discharge and a sum of money. As her conduct had been irreproachable, she married Benjamin Game " Sharon, a respectable ...other of three children : farmer, and became the eldest in 1805 was aged 19. She claimed of the court in Dedham in 1820 a reward for her services. Her husband died in February, 1837.

SAMPSON, WILLIAM C., missionary to Bombay, died Dec. 22, 1835. Born in Kingston, U. C., he went to B. in 1833. His wife was Mary L. Barker of Augusta, N. Y.

SAMPSON, WILLIAM, died at New York Dec. SALTONSTALL, LEVERETT, LL. D., died in 27, 1836, aged 73. He was an eminent counsellor at law, a native of Ireland. He published a report on a trial for libel, 1807; speech on the trial of James Chectham, 1810; trial of journeymen cordwainers; is a whale a fish? being a report, etc., 1819; discourse before the New York historical society, 1824.

SAMPSON, FRANCIS S., D. D., died before 1850; he was many years a teacher of the old school theological seminary in Virginia, and had reputation as a scholar. His critical commentary on the epistle to the Hebrews was published, edited by Dr. Dabney, in 1856.

SAMSON, DANIEL, died in Barre, N. Y., May 28, 1842, aged 83. He was a soldier of the Revolution, and for fifty-seven years a professor of religion and eminent Christian, of rare humility, simplicity, and benevolence. Before he removed to B. he lived in Cornwall, Vt.

SANDEMAN, ROBERT, the founder of the seet of Sandemanians, died at Danbury, Conn., April 2, 1771, aged 53. He was born at Perth in Scotland, and educated at St. Andrews. Having married a daughter of Mr. Glass, he became one of his followers. He represented faith as the mere operation of intellect, and maintained that men were justified without holiness, merely on speculative belief. This faith, however, he contended would always, wherever it existed, produce the Christian virtues; so that his system eannot be charged with opening a door to licentiousness. In 1762 he went to London and established a congregation. He came to America in October, 1764, and from Boston he went to Danbury. In that town he gathered a church in July, 1765. He published an answer to Hervev's Theron and Aspasio, in 2 vols., 8vo., 1757. This work is ingenious, though it exhibits a great deal of asperity. Mr. Hervey himself acknowledged that the author had pointed out some errors in his writings, and had the most exalted views of Divine grace.

SANDERS, DANIEL CLARK, president of Vermont university, died suddenly in Medfield in 1850, aged 82. Born in Sturbridge, he graduated at Cambridge in 1788; was ordained at Vergennes in 1794; and chosen president of the university of Vermont in 1801. He resigned in 1818, during the war, and was installed at Medfield in 1818, and dismissed in 1829. For fifty years he kept a meteorological journal. He published a sermon on the death of M. Russell, 1805; a history of the Indians, 1812.

SANDERS, Moses C., died in Peru, Ohio, May 18, 1856, aged 66. A native of Massachusetts, he removed to Ohio in 1818, and was an eminent physician and surgeon. He was for years an Infidel, but in 1837 he became a Christian. Practising physic in a new country, sometimes he was guided to his patients through pathless forests by a pocket compass.

SANDERSON, ALVAN, minister of Ashfield, Mass., died in 1817, aged 36 Born in Whately, he graduated at Williams college in 1802. After a mission in Maine, he was settled in A., the successor of Nehemiah Porter. Being dismissed in ill health in 1814, he established a grammar school. He was a faithful minister, gentle, conteous, an example of Christian gooduess. Having none in his house to provide for, he bequeathed 400 dollars to his religious society, 500 dollars for missions, and 1500 or 2000 dollars to his school.

SANDERSON, JOHN, died at Philadelphia in 1844, aged 61. He was the author of the biography of the signers of the declaration of independence, in several volumes, and also of the American in Paris, and sketches of Paris. — Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

SANDFORD, PETER P., D. D., a Methodist minister, died at Tarrytown, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1857, aged 76. He for some time labored in the city of New York, and was highly esteemed.

SANDS, ROBERT C., died at New York Dec. 16, 1832, aged 33. A graduate of Columbia college in 1815; he was a man of genius and an elegant writer. He was one of the editors of the Commercial Advertiser. He published Yamoy den, a poem, written principally by him; notice of Cortes; life of Paul Jones.—Cyclopedia of American Literature.

SANFORD, DAVID, minister of Medway, Mass., died in 1810, aged 73. Born in Milford, Conn., his father, an admirer of the character and preaching of David Brainerd, gave his son the name of David. He graduated at Yale in 1755; lived some years in Great Barrington under the teaching of Dr. Hopkins; and was settled in 1773, so that he was in the ministry about thirty-seven years. Among his people were extensive revivals in 1784 and 1785. The sermon at his funeral was preached by Dr. Emmons, and is in his works, vol. 1., p. 330. There was probably much of bluntness and straight-forwardness in his preaching. Mr. Bellamy and he married sisters. An anecdote as to the difference between his and Bellamy's preaching, may be found under the name of Bellamy. He published a dissertation on the law to Adam; also on the scene in the garden, 1810. - Sprague's Annals.

SANFORD, NATHAN, died on Long Island October, 1838. He was a senator of the United States from 1815 to 1821, and from 1825 to 1830, and chancellor of New York two years.

SANFORD, JOSHUA, died in Dublin, N. H., Dec. 12, 1856, aged 103 years and 8 months. He had a strong frame, took much exercise, and was temperate in all things.

SANGER, ZEDEKIAH, minister in South Bridgewater, died Nov. 17, 1820, aged 72. Born in Sherborn in 1748, he was a descendant of

91

e winarvard shed a of him

son

uated

aw in hon-

rected

ieties.

stored

rmany n 1823, son of nd was ounty.

ue with a chapsmissed
g himionally, in New
, Harry Balance.

; beautionary, ne brief in Plyand uneffort to patriotic g school she pursuit of a man in erformed discovery discovery Shirtliffe. ladelphia

ecovered, disclosvord, but
ney. As she mar-

e claimed rd for her ary, 1837, y to Bomspectable

children:

Kingston, wife was York Dec.

t counsel-

fi

a

m

in di

Se

Y

Ιt

th wl

he

Ne

ma

ing

uni

tra

ogy

18:

of .

and

stuc

Hol

shir

and

in 1

adju

desc

bein

con

ene

was

Wil

Bro

afte

Mai

fath

sho

deli

Lut

biar

at

had

in

skil

Sep

last

sch

rog gre 5

Richard S., a blacksmith, who removed from Sudbury to Watertown, and died in 1691; whose son Richard, born in 1667, married Elizabeth Morse; and his son Richard, born 1706, married Deborah Rider, and died 1786, his eighth child being Zedekiah. Mr. S. graduated at Harvard in 1771, and was ordained at Duxbury July 3, 1776, and dismissed in 1786. He was settled at Bridgewater Dec. 17, 1788, as colleague of John Shaw. His wife was Irene Freeman. His children were Richard, born 1778; Joseph, in 1781; Caroline, 1782. married Rev. Samuel Clark; Zedekiah, in 1784; Samuel F.; Rev. Ralph, graduated in 1808, married Charlotte Kingman, settled at Dover; and several daughters. He was a scholar and learned divine. Young men he prepared for college, and he had students in divinity. His successor at Duxbury was Dr. J. Allyn, SARGEANT, NATHANIEL PEASLEE, chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts, died at Haverhill in October, 1791, aged 60. The son of Christopher S. of Methuen, he graduated at Harvard college in 1750. In 1776 he was appointed a judge of the superior court, and chief justice in December, 1789.

SARGENT, John, colonel, was the first child born in Vermont. The time of his death has not been ascertained; but his widow died at Brattleboro in July, 1822, aged 87.

SARTI, Signor, died in Hoston Sept., 1850; manufacturer of fine anatomical figures in wax.

He was a native of Florence. SATTERLEE, A. B., Baptist missionary to Akyab, Arrican, died July 1, 1856, of cholera. A graduate of Brown, he had been in service but a few years, and was highly respected. SAUBERT, XAVIER, Dr., died Jan. 20, 1836; called the fire king. In making experiments with phosphoric ether, or prussic acid, it exploded and killed him.

SAUNDERS, PRINCE, a colored man, attorney-general of Hayti, was born at Thetford, Vt. He was well educated. About 1806 he taught a free colored school in Colchester, Conn.. and afterwards in Boston. Going to Hayti, Christophe employed him to improve the state of education in his dominions, for which purpose he was sent to England. His Christian name, Prince, being mistaken for his just title of dignity, he was conversant with the nobility. Returning from Hayti to this country, he studied divinity and preached at Philadelphia. But he went again to Hayti, where he died, as attorney-general, in February, 1839. He published several tracts, one concerning Hayti.

SAUSAMAN, John, was the son of an Indian convert. He was cunning and plausible, well skilled in the English language, and employed as a school-master at Natick. Upon some misdemeanor he left the English, and became secretary of King Philip in 1672. He was prevailed upon by the solicitations of Mr. Eliot to return to Xatick; ho was baptized, and became an Indian preacher, well gifted. He discovered a plot examinst the English, and communicated it to Gov. Winslow. Not long afterwards he was murdered by three of Philip's men. and his body was put under the ice in Assawampset pond. His murderers were seized and executed at Plymouth in 1675.

SAVAGE, THOMAS, major, the ancestor of the families of Savages in New England, died Feb. 14. 1682, aged 74. He came over from England as early as 1635, and was representative of Boston. Hingham, and Andover, and speaker of the house. He commanded the troops in the early part of Philip's war in 1675. He married Faith, the daughter of William and the celebrated Ann Hutchinson: and from them descended James Savage of Boston, the learned antiquarian, who still lives in a good old age. The generations and families are as follows: 1. Major Thomas Savage and Faith Huntington; 2. Lieut.-Colonel Abijah Savage and Hannah Tyng; 3. Lieut, Colonel Thomas Savage and Elizabeth Scottow; 4. Lieut.-Colonel Habijah Savage, who died in 1746, aged 71; 5. the father of Mr. S., whose name does not occur; 6. James Savage of Boston, born in 1784. If he bears no military title, yet he knows how to wield the pen instead of the sword.

SAVAGE, EDWARD, a painter, died at Princeton, Mass., in 1817, aged 56. He was born at P. in 1791. He was at first a goldsmith. After studying for a while under West in London, he repaired to Italy. Before he went abroad he painted the Washington 'amily, and, finding no engraver, engraved the picture himself. Of this print, it is said that he sold nine thousand copies at nine dollars each. He was a man of good talents; but his attention was too much divided among different pursuits to allow of his attaining the highest eminence as a painter. He commenced a museum in New York, and brought it to Boston; where it became a part of the old New England museum. — Knapp's Lect.

SAVAGE, MARY, died at Woolwieb, Mainc, in 1825, aged 102.

SAVAGE, SAMUEL, M. D., an eminent physician of Barustable, Mass., died in 1831, aged 83. He graduated at Harvard in 1766.

SAVAGE, SARAH, Miss, died at Salem, Mass., in 1837, aged 52, a lady worthy and refined. She wrote factory girl, and other works.

SAWYEİ, MICAJAH, M. D., a physician, the son of a physician, was born at Newbury, Mass., July 15, 1737; graduated at Harvard college in 1756; and, after practising physic more than fifty years in Newburyport, died Sept. 29, 1815, aged 77. He was an eminent physician and a may of pure morals and religion. — Thacher.

SAWYER, ELIZABETH, died in Bolton, Mass., in 1815, aged 105, retaining her faculties to the last. Her descendants were three or four hundred

SAXTON, or SEXTON, GILES, minister of Scituate, Mass., as early as 1630. He came from Yorkshire. He was admitted freeman in 1631. It is said he returned to England, and that on the voyage he cried out, in a perilous hour, "O, who is now for heaven? Who is bound for heaven."—Felt's Hist. New Eng.

SAY, Thomas, died Oct. 10, 1834, aged 46, at New Harmony, Ind. He was a merchant. He made abundant contributions to science. His writings on insects, on fresh-water and land-shells, on univalves, etc., are in the American philosophical transactions. He published American eutomology, 3 vols., 1824 and 1828; explanation of terms, 1825. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

SCAMMELL, ALEXANDER, colonel, a soldier of the Revolution, died Oct. 6, 1781, aged about 33. He was born in Mendon, now Milford, Mass., and graduated at Harvard college in 1769. He studied law with Gen. Sullivan; assisted Capt. Holland in surveys for his map of New Hampshire; and in 1775 was appointed brigade-major, and in 1776 colonel. In the battle of Saratoga in 1777 he was wounded. About 1780 he was adjutant-general of the American armies, and deservedly popular. At the siege of Yorktown, being officer of the day, Sept. 30, 1781, while reconnoitering he was surprised by a party of the enemy's horse, and after being taken prisoner was inhumanly wounded. Being conveyed to Williamsburg, he died of his wound. General Brooks and General Dearborn each named a son after their friend.

SCAMMELL, JOHN, Dr., died at Bellingham March 9, 1845, aged 83. His father and grandfather were physicians before him. He served a short time in the Revolutionary war.

SCHAEFFER, F. G., D. D., died in Philadelphia in March, 1831, aged 38; pastor in the Lutheran church, professor of German in Columbian college.

SCHAEFFER, FREDERIC DAVID, D. D., died at Frederic, Md., Jan. 27, 1836, aged 77. He had been pastor of a German Lutheran church in Philadelphia; and was a man of learning, skilled in languages; a native of Germany.

SCHERMERHORN, H. O., died at Utica Sept. 22, 1854, aged 36. He was seized with his last sickness on his return to New York from a wedding tour to Niagara. A distinguished scholar, he settled as a minister first at Ticonderoga, then in New York city. His lahors were great and incessant. He increased a Sabbath-school from forty to six hundred scholars. His wife was a daughter of Sheldon Martin.

SCHNEIDER, Mrs., wife of Rev. B. S., missionary to the Armenians, dled Sept. 28, 1856, at Aintab, agod 47.

SCHOLLLY, CATHERINE, Mrs., died in Scioto, Ohio, July 5, 1855, of neuralgia; the largest woman in the world, who was exhibited by Col. Wood. He had her life insured for 25,000 dollars.

SCHOOLCRAFT, LAWRENCE, colonel, died at Verona, N. V., June 7, 1840, aged 80; a soldier of the Revolution, a man much respected.

SCHOONMAKTR, JACOB, D. D., died at Jamaica, L. I., in 1856, aged 74. His father was minister at Aquackanock over forty years; his grandfather was the first minister at Jamaica. Dr. S. was paster both of Newtown and Jamaica till 1849. The old dominic preached his farewell discourse in 1850, assisted by his friend, Dr. Brodhead, at the Lord's Supper.

SCHOOP, JOHN, n Mohican Indian, died at Bethlehem in 1746; n convert, baptized in 1742. SCHUREMAN, JOHN, D. D., professor in the theological college of New Brunswick, N. J.

the theological college of New Brunswick, N. J., died in 1818, aged 39. He had been a minister of the Dutch church in the city of New York.

SCHUYLER, PETER, mayor of the city of Albany, was much distinguished for his patriotism, and for the influence which he possessed over the Indians. In the year 1691 he headed a party of three hundred Mohawks, and with about the same number of English, made a bold attack upon the French settlements at the north end of lake Champlain. He slew three hundred of the enemy. Such was the authority of Col. Schuyler with the five nations, that whatever Quider (for so they called him, as they could not pronounce Peter) recommended, had the force of law. In 1710 he went to England at his own expense, taking with him five Indian chiefs, for the purpose of exciting the government to vigorous measure against the French in Canada. The chief command in New York devolved upon him as the eldest member of the council in 1719; but in the following year Governor Burnet arrived. He often warned the New England colonies of expeditions meditated against them by the French and Indians. - Smith's New York, 66-152.

SCHUYLER, PILLIP, a major-general in the Revolutionary war, died at Albany Nov. 18, 1804, aged 72. He received his appointment from congress, June 19, 1775. He was directed to proceed from New York to Ticonderoga, to secure the lakes, and to make preparations for entering Canada. Being taken sick in September, the command devolved on Montgomery. On his recovery he devoted himself zealously to the management of the affairs in the northern department. The superintendence of the Indian

Naidiun
plot it to
was body
pond.
Ply-

etary upon

of the el. 14, and as oston, house, art of h, the d Ann James n, who rations Thomas

Lieut.cottow;
died in
, whose
of Bosary title, tend of

Prince-

born at

Colonel

. After don, he road he road he road he of good he divided is attaintie the old h, Maine, nent phy-831, aged 6.

em, Mass., ined. She sician, the ury, Mass., college in more than concerns claimed much of his attention. On the approach of Burgovne in 1777, he made every exertion to obstruct his progress ; but, the evacuation of Ticonderoga by St. Clair occasioning unreasonable jealousies in regard to Schuyler in New England, he was in August superseded by vates, and congress directed an inquiry to be made into his conduct. It was a matter of extreme chagrin to him to be recalled at the moment when he was about to face the enemy. He afterwards, though not in the regular service, rendered important services to his country in the military transactions of New York. He was a member of the old congress, and when the present government of the United States commenced its operations in 1789, he was appointed with Rufus King a senator from his native State. In 1797 he was again appointed a senator in the place of Aaron Burr. His daughter married Gen. Hamilton. Another daughter married John B. Church, an Englishman, contractor for the French army in the Revolutionary war, and afterwards member of parliament, who died April, 1818; she died in 1814. Distinguished by strength of intellect and unright intentions, he was wise in the contrivance, and enterprising and persevering in the execution of plans of public utility. In private life he was dignified, but courteous, a pleasing and instructive companion, affectionate in his domestic relations, and just in all his dealings. - Marshall, II. 237, 301-306; III. 3, 4, 226-258, 273; IV. 449.

SCHWEINTTZ, LOUIS DAVID DE, died at Bethlehem, Pa., Feb. 8, 1834, aged 52. He was a minister among the Moravians, their second head; and was the author of several valuable works on SCOBY, WILLIAM, one of the first planters of Londonderry, N. H., died in that town at the age of 104. He came over from Ireland with Mr. Maegregore. These planters lived on an average to eighty years, some to ninety, and others to one hundred.

SCOTT, CHARLES, brigadier-general, governor of Kentucky, died Oct. 22, 1807, aged 74. He was a Virginia soldier of the Revolution. His commission of brigadier is dated April 2, 1777. He was governor from 1808 to 1812, when he was succeeded by Shelby.

SCOTT, JONATHAN, minister of Minot, Me., died in 1819, aged 75. He was installed in 1796. His successor was Elijah Jones, whose labors were very successful. He was first a minister in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia; then in Poland, Me.; and about twenty-three years in Minot. He published a sermon on death of S. Foxcroft; before missionary society, 1808. — Sprague's Annals.

SCOTT, John, a lawyer and judge, died in Virginia in 1850, aged 68.

SCOTT, DANIEL, died at Philadelphia June 26, 1856; many years paster of the colored church.

SCOTTOW, Joshua, captain, died in Boston in 1698, aged about 80. His daughter, Elizabeth, married Colonel Thomas Savage, an ancestor of the learned antiquarian, James Savage, who will soon, it is said, tell the New England people more than any one else can tell them of their ancestors. He published a narrative of planting of Massachusetts colony, etc., 1694; old men's tears for their own declensions, 1691.

b

p

e

lie

ol:

811

Ωŧ

A

lis

for

de

M

Ϊlα

ves

but upe

sio

Sh

yea

Ne

lon

she

ver

An

the

Fe

Se

aft

and

Ya

pu bei

Lo

he

No

nic

in rei

wh

tlid

In

tio

tie

SCREVEN, William, died at Georgetown, S. C., in 1713, aged 84. A native of England, born in 1629, he came to Massachusetts, whence as an unwelcome Baptist minister he removed to Piscataway, where he married a Miss Cutts. Thence he went to Cooper's river, S. C., in 1683, and formed a church. His successors, Baptist ministers at Charleston, were Fry, White, Tilly, Simons, Chanler, Bedgewood, Hart, down to 1780. The late Col. Thomas Screven and Rev. Charles O. Screven were his descendants. He published ornament for church members. — Ramsay.

SCREVEN, THOMAS, brigadier-general, died in 1778. He was a descendant of William S. He commanded the militia when Georgia was invaded by East Florida in Nov., 1778. While a party of the enemy was marching from Sunbury towards Savannah, he had repeated skirmishes with them at the head of a hundred militia. In an engagement at Midway, the place of his residence, he was wounded by a musket ball, and fell from his horse. Several of the British immediately came up, and, upbraiding him with the manner in which a Captain Moore had been killed, discharged their pieces at him. He died soon after of his wounds. Few officers had done more for their country, and few men were more esteemed and beloved for their virtues in private SCREVEN, CHARLES ODINGSELLS, D. D., died at New York July 2, 1830, aged 57. He was of Sunbury, Georgia. Born at Midway, Liberty county, at the age of thirteen he was baptized by Dr. Furman of Charleston; graduated at Providence in 1795; and became the minister of the Baptist church in Sunbury in 1803. He was a faithful and successful minister.

SCUDDER, John, died at New York in 1821; proprietor of the American museum.

SCUDDER, Joins, M. D., missionary in Madras, died at the Cape of Good Hope, at Wynberg, Jan. 13, 1855, of apoplexy, aged 61. His venerable mother, Mary, aged more than 80, survived him. He was born in New Brunswick, N. J.; but his parents removed to Freehold, where he was brought up. He was graduated in 1811, and went to Tillipally in Dec., 1819, as a missionary physician, but was soon ordained. For sixteen ne 26. Cevlon. In 1836 he and Mr. Winslow were irch. transplanted to the city of Madras, where it was oston purposed to use a religious press in the Tamul abeth. language. From 813 to 1847 he was in the or of United States, promoting the cause of missions io will by visiting the churches, everywhere most impeople pressively addressing the children. He was edutheir eated in the Dutch Reformed church, of which anting he was the first missionary, and to which he was ever men's attached. By his wife, Harriet, he had fourteen children, of whom seven sons and two daughters survived him. Six of the sons devoted themselves to foreign missions, three of whom were, at the time of his death, in the field in India, at Arcot, seventy miles from Madras. His appeal > for passing over Jordan. SCUDDER, KATHARINE, wife of W. W. Scudder, missionary at Areot, died of the cholera March 11, 1849; she had been less than two years in India. She had no regret, and no fears. Her Saviour was with her. Sho died on board a vessel, anchored near the continent, and was baried in a grove of thorn trees, which looks out upon the ocean. She was the daughter of Thos.

> to the youth in behalf of the heathen was published in 1816; he wrote also a tract, provision

Hastings of New York.

SCUDDER, Mrs., wife of Dr. Seudder, missionary at Madras, died Nov. 19, 1849, aged 54. She had been connected with missions thirty years. Her name was Harriet Waterbury, of New York. She was married in 1816, and sailed in 1819 for India, with the wives of Messrs. Winslow, Spauldiag, and Woodward. From Ceylon she removed to Madras in 1836. For several years before 1846 she and her husband were in America. Just before she died she exclaimed, "Glorious heaven! glorious salvation!"

SEABURY, SAMUEL, D. D., first bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States, died Feb. 25, 1796, aged 68. He was the son of Mr. Seabury, Congregational minister at Groton, and afterwards Episcopal minister at New London. and was born in 1728. After being graduated at Yale college in 1751, he went to Scotland for the purpose of studying medicine; but, his attention being soon directed to theology, he took orders in London in 1753. On his return to this country he was settled in the ministry at Brunswick in New Jersey. In the beginning of 1757 he removed to Jamaiea on Long Island; and thence in Dec., 1766, to West Chester. In this place he remained till the commencement of the war. when he went into the city of New York. the return of peace he settled in New London. In 1784 he went to England to obtain consecration as bishop of the Episcopal church of Connectient, but, meeting with some obstruction to the years he labored at the station of Pandeteripo in | land, where, Nov. 14th, he was consecrated by three nonjuring bishops. After this period he discharged for a number of years at New London the duties of his office in an exemplary manner. He published the duty of considering our ways, 1789: a discourse at the ordination of R. Fowle, 1791; and two volumes of sermons, which evince a vigorous and well-informed mind. After his death a supplementary volume was published in

> SEAMAN, VALENTINE, M. D., died in New York in June, 1817, aged 17. He was the son of Samuel and descendant of Captain John, who settled at Hempstead, L. I., about 1660. He was of the society of Friends, and adhered to it. He studied with Dr. Nicholas Romeyn, and in Philadelphia, and was an eminent physician. For the good of the African race he toiled much, being a member of the manumission society. - Williams' Med. Biog.

> SEAMANS, Jon, a Haptist minister in New London, Conn., died in 1830, aged 82. Horn in Swanzey, Mass., he was first a minister in Attleborough, Mass., and removed to New London in 1788, when the Baptist church was formed.

> SEAMANS, Astron, a Baptist minister, died at Marion, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1856, aged 87. Born in Rehoboth, his father removed to Cheshire, Mass., and there became religious under the preaching of Elder Leland. For about forty years he was the pustor of the Baptist church in Northville, N. Y. In 1812 he removed to Iowa. His life was useful; his end peace.

SEARLE, John, the second minister of Sharon, Conn., died in Stoneham, Mass., in 1787, aged about 64. He graduated at Yale in 1745. and was succeeded by C. M. Smith in 1755, and removed to Stoneham, where he was pastor from 1758 to 1776. He published a sermon at the ordination of S. Peabody. - Sprague's Annals.

SEARLE, JONATHAN, first minister of Mason, N. H., died in 1812, aged 68. Horn in Rowley, he graduated at Harvard in 1764; was pastor from 1772 to 1781.

SEARLE, JONATHAN, first minister of Salisbury, N. 11., died in Dec., 1819, aged 74. Born in Rowley, he graduated at Harvard in 1765, and was pastor from 1773 to 1791, and was succeeded by Thomas Worcester.

SEARLE, THOMAS C., the minister of Madison, Ind., died Oct. 10, 1821, aged about 32. Born in Rowley, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1812, and studied theology at Princeton. He was a preacher of talents and eloquence. His zeal for the advancement of religion in the West induced him in 1819 to emigrate from his beloved New England. Probably not more than one or two Presbyterian ministers had been settled in Indiana before him. He opened an academy in accomplishment of his wishes, he went to Scot- Madison, and preached incessantly. His great etown, igland, whence ved to Cutts. a 1683, Baptist , Tilly. o 1780.

Charles

blished al, died lliam S. was in-While a Sunbury irmishes tia. In his resiall, and itish im-with the ad been

He died

nad done

re more n private D., died le was of Liberty ptized by at Provi-

He was a in 1821;

er of the

ry in Ma-Wynberg, His ven-), survived ck, N. J.; , where he 1811, and missionary or sixteen labors brought on a fatal fever. His widow, An- maica May 21, 1656. His widow married Rev. nette, a woman of rare excellence of character, the daughter of Professor II. Woodward of Dartmouth, died Nov. 27, 1824, aged 34.

SEARS, Joshua, a merchant of Boston, died in Feb., 1857, leaving property to the amount of 1,600,000 dollars. He bequeathed 15,000 dollars to the town of Yarmouth, his birth-place, to establish a nantical school | 8,000 dollars to the seamen's friend society of Boston; and legacies to his brothers and other relatives to the amount of 107,000 dollars. The remainder, nearly a million and a half, is left to his son of three years of age, whose guardian is Alpheus Hardy. The boy, on reaching twenty-one years, is to receive 30,000 dollars , then 4,000 dollars a year for three years; then 6,000 dollars a year till he reaches the age of thirty; and 10,000 dollars a year afterwards. It is said, Mr. S. has given to the poor of the town of Yarmouth within a few years 40,000 dollars. Had he given his son 100,000 dollars or half a million, and left one million for great charities, and especially to spread abroad the revealed truth of that God who intrusted him with his wealth, all enlightened Christian men would have approved of his bequest. Yet what other rich man has had the pleasure of distributing with his own hands 40,000 dollars among the poor of his native village P

SEAVY, HANNAH, widow, died at Kennehunk

Port in 1821, aged 101.

SECCOMBE, John, first minister of Harvard, Mass., died in Chester, Nova Scotin, in Jan., 1793, aged about 85. Born in Medford, he graduated at Cambridge in 1728; was from 1733 to 1757 the minister of Harvard; thence before 1772 he removed to Chester. He was a descendant of Richard, of Lynn from 1660 to 1694. He wrote Father Abbey's will, a short humorous poem ; and published a sermon on the death of Abigail Belcher, 1772; also at ordination of Hruin R. Comingoe over the Dutch congregation at Lunenburg, preached at Halifax, 1770, the first in Nova Scotia on such an occasion.

SECCOMBE, Joseph, died in 1760, aged 54. He was a brother of the preceding, a graduate of 1731, and was installed at Kingston, N. H., in 1737. He published ways of pleasure and paths of peace; rehearsal of the operations of Christ as God, 1740; and a sermon to a fishing party, a discourse written at sea.

SEEBER, HENRY, died in German Flats May 15, 1845, aged 104. He was born in Indian Castle, and served in the French and subsequent wars. At Oriskany he received three wounds, and bore a ball in his body to his death. He lived to see the sixth generation, and left two hundred and thirteen descendants.

SEDGWICK, ROBERT, general, died in Ja- 85. He was a native of Germany, and had been

Thomas Allen He was an early settler of Charlectown, Mass., a man of distinction, the head of the far illies of fledgwicks in this country. He engaged in the service of Cromwell, and commanded an expedition, designed against the Dutch at New York | but, as peace was made, he sailed from Boston against the French and captured St. John's and Port Royal. He was an enterprising man, a merchant; and, though far from an intolerant spirit, he was religious. His letters to Cromwell are in Thurloe's state papers. - Goodwin, p. 175.

SEDGWICK, THEODORE, LL. D., judge, died Jan. 24, 1813, aged 66. Born at West Hartford. Conn., in May, 1746, he was a descendant of Robert S., an early settler and distinguished milltary officer of Massachusetts, residing at Charlestown. His father, Benjamin S., relinquished mercantile business, removed to Cornwall, and at his death left a widow and six children. Of these Theodore S. was the youngest son. He settled as a lawyer at Shellield, then at Stockbridge in 1785. In the war of the Revolution he was an aid to General Thomas in 1776 in the expedition to Canada; and in the Shays rebellion he exerted himself most zealously in its suppression. In 1785 and 1786 he was a member of congress; also from 1789 to 1796. From 1796 to 1708 he was a senator of the United States. In 1799 he was a member of the house and was chosen speaker. From 1802 till his death he was a judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts. He died at Boston, and was buried at Stockbridge. His daughter, Catherine S., is known by her various writings. His life was active and useful. As his attachments and aversions were strong, he was zealous as a politician; in his manners he was dignified, and his habits were social. He was a communicant in the church of Dr. Channing at Boston.

SEDGWICK, THEODORE, the oldest son of Judge Sedgwick, a lawyer of Albany, and then a resident of Stockbridge for the last twelve or more years, died of the apoplexy at Pittsfield, while attending a political meeting, Nov. 7, 1839, aged about 60. He graduated at Yale in 1798. His three brothers, men much respected, are also deceased. Henry D., a lawyer of New York, a graduate of Williams in 1804, died in 1831, aged 45; Robert, a lawyer of New York, died at Sachem's Head in 1841, aged 54; and Charles, a lawyer, and for many years clerk of the Berkshire courts, died at Lenox in 1856, aged 64, highly esteemed for his social qualities and active benevolence, and greatly lamented by his numerous friends.

SEEGER, CHARLES L., a distinguished physician, died in Northampton in May, 1848, aged

. You 5 He chu at ? to (Mag S of . 51. ous S Dec year ary Hap S of ? He Tho in t nold prep he p at N

tuck

Eur S dian

He

set

list

era

con

181 istr

.

grad afte he the pre able nan 173, Ser lian the life by : lian his and Sir Mr

His

No

yea bric

lished oration July 4, 1810; lecture on the cholera, 1832.

SEIXAS, Geisnoun, minister of the Jewish congregation in the city of New York, died in 1816, aged 70, in the fiftieth year of his min-

SELDEN, DUDLEY, an eminent lawyer of New York, died in Paris, France, in 1855.

SELWIN, or SELYNS, HENRY, died in 1700. He was installed as the minister of the Dutch church in Brooklyn Sept. 3, 1660. He resided at New Amsterdam. He addressed a Latin poem to C. Mather, dated 1697, which is prefixed to the Magnalia.

SEMMES, Thomas, Dr., an eminent physician of Alexandria, Va., died about 1833, aged about 54. In the cholera of 1832 he was very assiduous in his labors. - Williams' Med. Bing.

SEMPLE, Robert B., D. D., died in Virginia Dec., 1831. He had been a preacher forty-two years, and was president of the Baptist missionary convention. He published a history of the Baptists in Va., 1809.

SENTER, ISAAC, M. D., an eminent physician of Newport, R. I., died in Dec., 1799, aged 44. He was born in N. H., and studied with Dr. Thomas Moffatt of Newport. He was a surgeon in the Revolutionary war, and accompanied Arnold in his expedition to Quebec, of which he prepared an account for the press. After the war he practised for a time in Pawtucket; then settled at Newport. His wife was Miss Arnold of Pawtucket. He wrote for periodicals in America and Europe. — Thacher's Med. Biog. SERGEANT, John, missionary among the Indians, died at Stockbridge July 27, 1749, aged 38. He was born at Newark, N. J., in 1710, and was graduated in 1729 at Yale college, where he was afterwards a tutor for four years. In Oct., 1731, he went to Houssatonnoe, an Indian village in the western part of Massachusetts, and began to preach to the Indians. That he might be enabled to administer to them the Christian ordinances he was ordained at Deerfield Aug. 31, 1735. Jonathan Edwards succeeded him. Mrs. Sergeant was a sister of Colonel Ephraim Williams, the daughter of Mr. E. Williams, one of the first settlers of Stockbridge. Pursons in his life of Pepperrell speaks of a faction, composed by her husband, Brigadier Dwight, and the Williamses, for displacing Jonathan Edwards from his charge of the Houssatonnoe Indian mission; and he publishes a letter of Secretary Willard to Sir William, written in 1753, in favor of Edwards. Mrs. Dwight was a teacher of the Indian girls. His son, Dr. Erastus S., died at Stockbridge in Nov., 1814, aged 72; his son, John S., sixty years a missionary to the Indians at New Stock-settled in N. nearly half a century. He pub- was supported in part by the commissioners of the society for propagating the gospel, and in part by individuals in England, whose munificence reached him through the hands of Dr. Colman of Boston. He had baptized one hundred and treaty due Indians, and forty-two were communicated the time of his death. With great labor he translated the whole of the New Testament, excepting the Revelation, into the Indian language, and several parts of the Old Testament. In his life ho was just, kind, and benevolent. The Houssatonnoe or Stockbridge Indians emigrated to New Stockbridge in the State of New York, and were for many years under the care of his son. He published a letter to Dr. Colman on the education of the children of the Indians, and a sermon on the causes and danger of delusions in religion, 1743. - Hopkins' Memoirs of Houss. Indians; Panoplist, II.; Sprague's Annals.

SERGEANT, Enastris, a physician in Stockbridge, Mass., died in 1814, aged 72. He was the son of Rev. John S.; studied two years in Princeton college, then studied physic with his uncle, Dr. Thomas William: of Deerfield; and commenced the practice in his native town in 1765. He was a skilful surgeon as well as physician; his business extended to the neighboring towns. He was sedate, kind, benevolent, adorned with the Christian graces. For many years he was a deacon of the church. In the war he was a major in the garrison at Lake Champlain in 1777. He died of a pulmonary disease. At dinner he was taken with bleeding and died immediately. It is remarkable, that though neither parent had a clouded reason, five of his children were insane. His son, Erastus, a physician in Lee, died in 1832, aged about 60; a graduate of Dartmouth in 1792.

SERGEANT, JOHN, died in Philadelphia Nov. 23, 1852, aged nearly 73. He graduated at Princeton in 1795. For more than half a century he was honored for his great ability as a lawyer; he was also distinguished in congress. In 1832 he was whig candidate for vice-president. Mr. Clay for president. He was a worthy member of the Episcopal church. His father, Jonaathan Dickinson Sergeant, was a grandson of President Dickinson, and son of Jonathan Sergeant. He was a patriot in the Revolution, and was the first attorney-general of the State. He died a victim to the yellow fever in 1793. His mother was a daughter of Rev. Dr. Elihu Spencer. His sister, Sarah, married Rev. Dr. Samuel Miller, and lived with him nearly fifty years. He published a eulogy on Adams and Jefferson; and a speech on the Missouri question, 1820.

SEVER, NICHOLAS, minister of Dover, N. II., died in Massachusetts in 1764, aged 84. Born in Roxbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1701, and bridge, N. Y., died Sept. 8, 1824, aged 77. He was tutor and fellow; he was settled in 1711.

harlesquished , and at If these settled ridge in was an pedition e exertion. In ingress; 1798 he 1799 he chosen e was a chusetts.

kbridge.

her vari-cful. As rong, he oners he

cial. He

r. Chan-

Rev.

er of

. the

untry.

l com.

Dutch

spiled

red St.

prising

intol-

ers to

Good-

e, died

ertford,

ant of

ed mil-

t son of d then a welve or Pittsfield, . 7, 1839, e in 1798. , are also v York, a 831, aged ed at Sa-Charles, a he Berk-shed phy-848, aged had been

aged 64,

and active

is numer-

th

tr

he

la

irı

w wi

th

D

su

lec

do

So

"(

he

mo

W sur

in 1

a s

of

The

sial

and ous

of 1

ord

mor

Thu

WOY

four love

tion

van

Hii

rio

57.

son

mo

Mit

gra

ins

yea

In

he

to

On

wa

sen ber

dea

be

liе

sar

ven

Pike; and after him J. Cushing, J. Belknup, R. Gray, etc.

SEVERANCE, LITHER, died in Augusta, Me., Jan. 25, 1855; editor of the Kennebec Journal. He was a member of congress, and a commissioner to the Sandwich Islands.

SEVIER, JOHN, governor of Tennessee, died He was a soldier of the Revin October, 1815. olution, and was distinguished in the battle at King's Mountain with Colonel Ferguson in 1780. He and Colonel Shelby projected and executed the enterprise, for which the legislature of North Carolina in 1813 voted him a sword. In 1789 he commanded the forces which defeated the Creek and Cherokee Indians. He was a general in the provisional army, and in 1798 governor of Tennessee.

SEVIER, AMBROSE II., colonel, died in the last hour of 1848, aged 49. Born in the mountains of East Tennessee, he settled in Arkansas, and was long a delegate to congress, first in 1827, and a member of the senate of the United States. Among his last services he perfected a treaty of peace with the republic of Mexico. He held public stations for a quarter of a century. He was sincere, straight-forward, zealous, faithful to his principles, energetic, honorable.

SEWALL, SAMUEL, chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts, died Jan. 1, 1730, aged 77. He was born at Bishop-Stoke, England, March 28, 1652. His father, Henry, had before this time been in America, and in 1634 began the settlement of Newbury. He finally established himself in this country in 1661, when his son was nine years old. In his childhood Judge Sewall was under the instruction of Mr. Parker of Newbury. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1671, and afterwards preached for a short time. In 1688 he went to England. In 1692 he was appointed in the new charter one of the council, in which station he continued till 1725. He was made one of the judges in 1692, and chief justice of the supreme court in 1718. This office, as well as that of judge of probate for Suffolk, he resigned in 1728, on account of infirmities. His brothers were John and Stephen. His wife, Hannah, was the only child of John Hull. His daughter, Elizabeth, married Grove Hirst, and her daughter married Sir William Pepperell; his daughter, Mary, married S. Gerrish, and Judith married Wm. Cooper in 1720, but died in the same year. By his wife he reeeived a large fortune, 30,000 pounds in sixpences, which he employed for the glory of God and the advantage of men. Eminent for piety, wisdom, and learning, in all the relations of life he exhibited the Christian virtues, and secured universal respect. For a long course of years he | do good, for which he was conspicuous among

The ministers before him were Maud, Rayner, of its greatest ornaments. He was constant in his attendance upon public worship, keeping his bible before him to try every doctrine. He read the sacred volume every morning and evening in his family, and his prayers with his household ascended to heaven. A friend to every follower of Christ, he was liberal, hospitable, and benevolent, For the praying Indians at Natick he at his own expense built a house of worship; and he uniformly, as a member of the council and of the society for propagating the gospel, exerted himself for the benefit of his copper-colored brethren. He deeply felt also for the enslaved negroes. Between 1700 and 1710 he published the selling of Joseph, in which he advocated their rights. He was critically acquainted with the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages. In his last sickness he was resigned, patient, and composed, placing his whole dependence for salvation upon the Redeemer. He left behind him several volumes of copies of letters, and a diary in three volumes, which embraces about forty years. From this it appears, that as one of the judges at the trial of the Salem witches in 1692, he concurred in the sentence of condemnation; but he afterwards of his own accord made a confession of his error. It was read by his minister, Mr. Willard, on a day of public fast, and is preserved in his diary. He published an answer to queries respecting America, 1690; proposals, touching the accomplishment of the prophecies, 4to., 1713; a description of the new heavens and earth, 4to... 2d edit., 1727. — Prince's Fun. Serm.

SEWALL, Joseph, D. D., minister in Boston. the son of the preceding, died June 27, 1769, aged 80. He was born Aug. 26, 1688, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1707. Having evinced a serious disposition from his earliest days, he now directed his attention to the study of theology. Though a member of one of the first families in the country, he sought no worldly object. it being his supreme desire to serve God in the gospel of his Son. He was ordained the minister of the old south church in Boston, as colleague with Mr. Pomberton, Sept. 16, 1713. After surviving three colleagues, Pemberton, Prince, and Cumming, he died in the fifty-sixth year of his ministry. His colleague, Samuel Blair, was dismissed in October of the same year, and in 1771 John Bacon and John Hunt were ordained ministers of this church. Dr. Sewall possessed respectable abilities, and was well acquainted with classical learning. In 1724 he was chosen presi dent of Harvard college, but such was his humility and the elevation of his views, that he deelined the appointment, wishing rather to continue in the office of a minister of the gospel. His chief glory was the love of God and the zeal to was a member of the old so th church, and one his brethren. Few ministers have ever lived ant in ng his e read ing in old aswer of volent. is own ie uniof the d himethren. egroes. e selll their ith the In his nd comalvation several in three years. judges he conbut he nfession ster, Mr. reserved o queries touching o., 1713;

1 Boston. 769, aged as gradug evinced days, he of theolfirst famlly object, od in the he miniscolleague After surrince, and ear of his , was disd in 1771 ned minissessed reduted with osen pres. his humilat he deto continue spel. His the zeal to ous among ever lived

rth, 4to.,

with such uniform reference to the great end of | ing. He united an uncommon degree of quickness their office. Deeply interested himself in the truths of religion, he reached the hearts of his hearers; and sometimes his voice was so modulated by his feelings, and elevated with zeal, as irresistibly to seize the attention. Though he was deliberate and cautious, he was courageous in withstanding error. He could sacrifice every thing for peace but duty, and truth, and holiness. During his last illness, which continued for a number of months, he was remarkable for his submission and patience. While he acknowledged himself to be an unprofitable servant, he looked to the atoning sacrifice of Christ for par-He spoke of dying with cheerfulness. Sometimes he was heard to say with great pathos, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." At length he died as one who was assured of a happy immortality. He married, Oct. 29, 1713, Elizabeth Walley, who died before him. Only one child survived him, his son, Samuel, who was a deacon in the church from 1763 to 1771. He published a sermon on family religion, 1716; on the death of Wait Winthrop, 1717; of King George I., Thomas Lewis, and Samuel Hirst, 1727; of his father, 1730; Benjamin Wadsworth, 1737; Josiah Willard, 1756; Thomas Prince, 1758; Alexander Cumming, 1763; a caveat against covetousness, 1718; election sermon, 1724; on a day of prayer for the rising generation, 1728; at the ordination of three missionaries, 1733; fast sermon before the general court, 1740; sermon at Thursday lecture; the Holy Spirit convincing the world of sin, of rightcourness, and of judgment, four sermons, 1741; on a day of prayer; on the love of our neighbor, 1742; sermon on Revelation v. 11, 12, 1745; on the reduction of Havana, 1762. — Chauncy's Fun. Serm.; Wisner's Hist., 98.

SEWALL, STEPHEN, chief justice of the superior court of Massachusetts, died in 1760, aged 57. The nephew of Samuel Sewall, he was the son of Major Stephen Sewall of Salem. His mother was Margaret, the daughter of Jonathan Mitchell. He was born in Dec., 1702, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1721. Having instructed a school in Marblehead for several years, he began to preach with great acceptance. In 1728 he was chosen a tutor in the college, and he filled this office till 1739, when he was called to take a seat on the bench of the superior court. On the death of Chief Justice Dudley in 1752 he was appointed to succeed him, though not the senior judge. He was also soon elected a member of the council, and continued such till his death, though it was with difficulty that he could be prevailed upon to accept the appointment, as he questioned the propriety of sustaining at the same time the two offices. His estate was insolvent. He was distinguished for genius and learn-of apprehension with a deeply penetrating and capacious mind. As a tutor, he proved that there was a perfect consistency between the most vigorous and resolute exertion of authority and the most gentle and complacent manners. Though he was a very humble and modest man he supported the dignity of a judge. He was an exemplary Christian, and while he constantly attended upon the institutions of the gospel, he offered up sacrifices to the Lord in his own house, though, as he was never married, his family eannot be supposed to have had the deepest interest in his affections. His charity to those in want was so great that it has been thought excessive. He had a deep reverence of the Supreme Being, and often spoke with approbation of the circumstance in the character of Sir Matthew Hale, that he never mentioned the name of God without making a pause in his discourse. — Mayhew's Fun. Serm.

SEWALL, STEPHEN, first Hancock professor of Hebrew in Harvard college, died July 23, 1804, aged 70. He descended from Henry S. of Newbury, by his second son, John. He was born at York, Maine, in April, 1734, and was graduated in 1761. He succeeded Mr. Monis in 1762. Hebrew had sunk into contempt in the hands of Mr. Monis, but it was now brought into honor. When Mr. Hancock founded the professorship of Hebrew, he was inaugurated June 17, 1765, and continued in office above twenty years. He took an early part in the Revolution. After he lost his professorship, he led a very retired life till his death. His wife was a daughter of Professor Wigglesworth. His lectures proved him to have possessed an elegant taste. He published a Hebrew grammar, 8vo., 1763; oratio funebris in obitum D. Edvardi Holyoke, 1769; an oration on the death of Professor Winthrop, 1779; translation of the first book of Young's night thoughts in Latin, 1780; earmina sacra, quæ Latine Græceque condidit America, 1789; the scripture account of the Scheehinah, 1794; the scripture history, relating to the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, and to the origin of the salt sea, or lake of Sodom, 1796. He wrote a Chaldee and English dictionary, which is in the library of Harvard college.

SEWALL. Jonathan, attorney-general of Massachusetts, died at Halifax in 1796. A descendant of Henry S., he was the nephew of Chief Justice Stephen S. Having lost his parents in early life, he was educated by the charity of his friends, and graduated at alarvard college in 1748; taught school in Salem till 1756; then studied law with Judge Chambers Russell of Lincoln; and commenced the practice in Charlestown. About 1767 he was appointed attorneygeneral. Being a tory in the Revolution, he retired from this country in 1775, and resided in Bristol. In 1788 he went to Halifax. His wife was Esther, daughter of Edmund Quiney of Quiney. One of his sons was attorney-general and the other chief justice of Canada. He had an insinuating eloquence, was an acute and learned lawyer, and one of the finest writers of his day in New England. He wrote various political papers, the chief of which, signed Massachusettensis, were answered by J. Adams, under whose name an account of them is given.

SEWALL, DAVID, I.L. D., judge, died Oct.

22, 1825, aged 90. He was a descendant of John, the second son of Henry S., who lived in Newbury in 1634; was horn at York, Maine, and graduated at Harvard college in 1755, being a classmate and friend of John Adams. In 1777 he was appointed a judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts; and in 1789 judge of the district court of the United States. He died at York. He was an honest lawyer; a learned and upright judge; a sincere patriot; and an exemplary Christian.

SEWALL, JONATHAN MITCHELL, a poet, was born in York in 1749. Being adopted by his uncle, Chief Justice Stephen S., he studied law, and in 1774 was register of probate for Grafton county, N. II. He afterwards removed to Portsmouth, where he died March 29, 1808, aged 59. His ode of war and Washington was celebrated, and was sung in the Revolutionary war. A volume of his poems was published, 1801. — Sprc. Amer. Poet. 1. 198.

brother of Gen. S.

SEWALL, SAMUEL, LL. D., chief justice of Massachusetts, died June 8, 1814, aged 56. He was the grandson of Joseph S., the minister of Boston; was born in Boston Dec. 11, 1757; his mother was a daughter of Edmund Quincy. He graduated at Harvard college in 1776. He settled at Marblehead, and in 1797 was a member of congress; in 1800 he was placed upon the bench of the supreme court of Massachusetts. After the death of Judge Parsons in 1813, he was appointed chief justice. He died suddenly at Wiscasset, and was succeeded by Chief Justice Parker. The gentlemen of the bar erected a monument to his memory. His sons, Samuel and Edmund Q., were ministers of Burlington and Danvers. - Knapp's Biog., 219-231.

SIWALL, DANIEL, died at Kennebunk, Me. Oct. 14, 1842, aged 87. Born in York, the brother of Jotham, he was early devoted to farming and mechanics, yet found time to study much, and became skilled in mathematics and natural philosophy. After being a while in the army, he became a teacher. He was register of probate from 1783 to 1820; then postmaster, and elerk of the supreme court. He held various other offices. No one doubted that he was a man of integrity and faithfulness. He was the SEWALL, THOMAS, M. D., died in Washington April 10, 1815, aged 58. Born in Augusta, Me., he studied medicine in Boston. From Essex he removed to Washington in 1820. In 1821 he was appointed professor of anatomy in the medical college, and retained this place till his death. He belonged to the Methodist church, and was never ashamed of the religion of Christ. A weekly prayer-meeting of pious members of congress was held at his house. He published a lecture, 1825; an essay on phrenology; and a learned tract on temperanee, which was translated into German and circulated in Europe; also charge, 1827; a sketch of Dr. Godman, 1830. — N. F. Observer, April 19, 1845.

m

П

B

w lin

П

ju

de

de

era

a n tra

182

the

pha

the

Pri

lab

inte

SHE

His

wa.

pre

29.

icar

πt

ske

of ser

her

De

die

Bo

Yo

me

te:

Cl

18

4

SEWALL, HENRY, general, died in Augusta, Me., in Sept., 1845, aged 93. Born in York in 1752, the brother of Jotham, he learned to be a mason of his father. He joined the army in 1775 and continued in it ill the peace. When the church was formed in Hallowell in 1791 he united with it, and was its deacon. He was useful, benevolent, and honored, during his long life, being an eminent Christian.

SEWALL, DUMMER, died at Chesterville, Me., in 1846, aged 85. He was a patriot of the Revolution and a pensioner. He went to C. in 1782, when it was an unbroken wilderness.

SEWALL, JOTHAM, died at Chesterville, Me., Oct. 3, 1850, aged 90. He was the son of Henry, a mason, the brother of Prof. Stephen S. He was born in York Jan. 1, 1760: in the early part of his life he was a mechanic. For many years he was employed as a missionary by societies in Massachusetts and Maine; and he was widely useful. His memoirs, by his son, were published in 1853. He was rigidly temperate: for forty years he had used neither tea nor coffee. Bread and milk and fruits were his diet. He had thirteen children. As an uneducated preacher he had remarkable power, with a voice of great depth, and a heart of great tenderness. He was nearly forty years old when he began to preach: vet he preached in fourteen States, in four hundred and thirteen different places, and twelve thousand five hundred and ninety-three times, Once, as he was the preacher at Brunswick, he said to President Appleton, "You have one fault: when you would be earnest in the pulpit or out. you open your eyes so wide as to show the white, which is a little unpleasant." The reply was, "Very well." After preaching himself, Mr. 8. asked for the president's friendly criticism, the text being "A golden bell and a pomegranate," Exod. XXVIII. 34, in the description of the priest's robe; the doctrine deduced being, that good fruit should attend a sounding profession. Dr. A. replied: "Your sermon, Mr. S., was valuable, but not the less so because it had no connection with your text." — Sprague's Annals.

SEWALL, HENRY, minister of Bethel and of | and was paster from 1717 to 1730, and was sucother towns, died at Sangerville, Me., in 1850, ceeded by D. Rogers. The time of his death is aged 78. Born in Bath, he began to preach as a missionary in 1808; he was settled in 1812 in Hebron and West Minot, and about 1820 in Bethel; in 1828 he removed to Sengerville and was the minister about sixteen years. He was a faithful preacher; but he was obliged to toil with his own hands for the support of his family.

SEWARD, WILLIAM, minister of North Killingworth, Conn., died in 1782, aged about 70.

He graduated at Yale in 1734.

SEWELL, JONATHAN, LL. D., judge, died at Quebee Nov. 12, 1839, aged 73. He was chief justice of Lower Canada.

ing-

ısta, rom

In

y in till

urch.

brist.

rs of ned a nd n lated

also

BO. —

gusta,

rk in

be a

my in

When

91 he

e was

s long

e, Me.,

e Rev-

a 1782,

e, Me.,

Henry,

5. He ly part y years

etics in widely ablished

or forty

Bread

ad thir-

cher he of great

He was preach;

our hun-

twelve

e times.

wick, he ne fault ;

t or out, ie white.

ply was, , Mr. S.

eism, the granate,"

e priest's

good fruit

)r. A. re-

able, but

tion with

SEYBERT, ADAM, M. D., died at Paris May 2, 1825, aged 52. Horn and educated in Philadelphia, in 1793 he went to Europe and studied at Paris, London, Edinburgh, and Gottingen, devoting especial attention to chemistry and mineralogy. On his return to Philadelphia he brought a go t eabinet. For eight years he was a member of congress. From 1819 to 1821 he travelled in Europe; and made a third voyage in 1824. He bequeathed 1,000 dollars for educating the deaf and dumb, and 500 dollars to the orphan asylum. He published statistical annals of the United States from 1789 to 1818, 4to.

SHAFER, JOSEPH L., D.D., died at Newton, N. J., Nov. 12, 1853, aged 66. A graduate of Princeton in 1808, he was settled in 1812. His labors were greatly blessed; in all he received into his church six hundred members. He toiled successfully for the establishment of an academy. His character was that of great excellence. He was gentle; but faithful, bold, and energetic as a preacher.

SHALER, WILLIAM, died at Havana March 29, 1833, of the cholera, aged 55. He was American consul at H. He was long consul-general at Algiers. He had no family. He published sketch of Algiers, 1826; on the language, etc., of the Berbers in Africa, in Am. phil. trans., new series, vol. II.

SHANKLIN, ANY, Mrs., died at the house of her grandsen, George W. Dunlop, Washington, Dec. 5, 1850, aged 116.

SHANKLIN, J. A., an Episcopalian minister, died in Charleston, S. C., in 1856.

SHARP, DANIEL, D. D., a Baptist minister of Boston, died June 23, 1853, aged 69. Born in Yorkshire, England, he came to New York as a merchant at the age of 19. As a Baptist minister he was first settled in Newark, N. J.; in Charles street, Boston, he was installed April 29, 1812. For his piety and useful labors forty-one years he was held in general and high respect in SHATTUCK, BENJAMIN, first minister of Littleton, Mass., graduated at Harvard in 1709, Shaw, 1760.

not known. His wife was a grand-daughter of John Sherman of Watertown. - Thacher, SHATTUCK, Benjamin, Dr., a distinguished physician of Templeton, Mass., died in 1791, aged 52. He was grandson of Henjamin, the first minister of Littleton. He graduated at Harvard in 1765. His wife was Lucy Barron, the daughter of a brave man, who fell in Johnson's fight in 1755. - Thacher's Med. Biog.

SHATTUCK, GEORGE C., M.D., died in Boston March 18, 1854, aged 70. He was the son of Dr. Benjamin Shattuck of Templeton, who married Lucy Barron, and died in 1794, aged 52, and who was the grandson of Benjamin Shattuck, the first minister of Littleton. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1803, and was president of the Massachusetts medical society. He published three dissertations, 1808.

SHAVER, John, died at Burlington, Boone county, Ky., April 22, 1851, aged 116.

SHAW, CAKES, minister of Barnstable, died Feb. 11, 1807, aged about 70. Born at Bridgewater, the son of Rev. John Shaw, he graduated at Harvard in 1758. He was settled as the minister of Great Marshes, West Barnstable, Oct. 1, 1760: the sermon was by John Shaw. A grateful monument was erected by his people, whom he faithfully served for forty-six years, commemorating his talents, piety, zeal, constancy, his sincerity and kind affections, and his many virtues. James Otis was born in his parish. Mr. S. was the father of Lemuci Shaw, the venerable chief justice of Massachusetts, at whose house in Boston his widow died in 1839 aged 94. He had a brother, who was a minister in Haverhill. - Burr's Sermon; Panoplist, 111. p. 43-45.

SHAW, JOHN, a physician and poet, died Jan. 10, 1809, aged 30. He was born at Annapolis, May 4, 1778; graduated at the college there in 1795; and in 1800 proceeded to the Mediterranean in the frigate Ph adelphia. At Tunis he was the secretary of Consul Enton. In the next year he pursued his medical studies at Edinburgh, and in 1803 accompanied Lord Selkirk to Canada. Settling afterwards at Baltimore, he was appointed professor of chemistry. He died while on a voyage for his health. His poems were published in one vol. 12mo., 18i0.

SHAW, John, second minister of Bridgewater, Mass., died in 1791, ager about 81, in the sixtieth year of his minis y. Born in East Bridgewater, he graduated at Harvard in 1729, and was ordained in 1731. He succeeded Benjamin Allen, who was settled in 1718; and was succeeded by Z. Sanger. Nunketest was the Indian name of the town. He published a sermon at ordination of M. Taft, 1752; of Oakes

SHAW, WILLIAM, D. D., died at Marshfield, | Pilgrims, Canonicus, and a review of Stuart on Mass., July 1, 1816, aged 73. The son of Rev. John S., and a graduate of Harvard in 1762, he was ordained April 2, 1766, the successor of Thomas Brown. His own successors have been M. Parris and Seneca White, who was installed in 1838. Mr. S. was the brother of Rev. Oakes Shaw. He published a sermon at ordination of J. C. Shaw, 1793; on the death of C. Robbins, D. D., at Plymouth, 1799.

SHAW, ICHABOD, an ingenious artist, of Plymouth, Mass., died in 1822, aged 87; a descendant of John, an early settler. He venerated the pilgrim fathers, and his manners were simple like SHAW, JEREMIAH, minister of Moultonborough, N. II., died in 1834, aged &S. He graduated at Harvard in 1767.

SHAW, PHILANDER, minister of Eastham, died Dec. 10, 1841, aged 72. The son of Rev. William S. of Marshfield, he graduated at Harvard in 1792, and was ordained in 1797. He published a sermon preached at Welfleet, 1803.

SHAW, John, died in Woolwich, Me., June 6, 1843, aged 91; a soldier during the Revolutionary war, a man held in esteem.

SHAW, ROBERT G., fifty-six years a merchant in Boston, died May 3, 1853, aged 78. He was president of the eye and ear infirmary.

SHAYS, DANIEL, captain, the leader of the rebels in Massachusetts, in 1787, was a captain in the Revolutionary war. In the rebellion he appeared at Springfield at the head of two thousand men, and attempted to seize the arsenal; but his forces were dispersed by Gen. Shepherd, He next assembled a force at Pelham; but in Feb., 1787, Gen. Lincoln by a forced march surprised the rebels and took one hundred and fifty prisoners, and put an end to the insurrection. Such was the lenity of the government, that not a man was executed. Even Shays, after hiding himself a year or two in Vernicot, obtained a pardon. He removed to Sparta, in New York. In his old age he had a pension of 20 dollars a month for his Revolutionary services. He died Sept. 29, 1825, aged 85. The elemency which he experienced, and which is honorable to Massachusetts, made him a good eitizen.

SHEAFE, Samson, died in 1772, aged 91. The son of Samson of Newcastle, N. H., he graduated at Harvard in 1702, and was a coun-

SHEDD, WILLIAM, a minister for only a year of Abington, Mass., died in 1830, aged 32. Born in Mount Vernon, N. II., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1819, was ordained as an evangelist in 1823, and at New Orleans toiled for the benefit of seamen; and by a voyage to England obtained aid for founding the Mariner's church in New Orleans. He wrote for the Spirit of the the Hebrews.

the e detec

day,

be k

was

He w mote

his I

he a miser

He

Sabb

to pr

ate d

He p

New

error

ness,

dinau

to wh

of the liever

ing o

shine

a tre

matte

Ball,

resolv God;

itation

his pr of th

1661 meml

tism,

tion o

thing

Spra

Mass

Thon

and v

Philli

Rev.

town,

in Lo

vard

1659, istry

Dec.

Latin guish

integ

dox the r

tion

is pre his s

cced

SI

SH

SHEFTALL, LEVI, a respected Jew, died at Savannah in Jan., 1809, at an advanced age. He had some agency for the U.S.

SHELBY, ISAAC, colonel, the first governor of Kentucky, died in Lincoln county in 1826, aged 75. He was a soldier of the Revolution and distinguished himself in the battle of King's Mountain; also on the Thames, in Upper Canada, in the war of 1812. He was governor from 1792 to 1796, when he was succeeded by Garrand: he also succeeded Scott in 1812, and was succeeded by Madison in 1816. He lost the use of his right arm by palsy in 1820; and died of apoplexy.

SHELDON, DANIEL, general, died at Newport, R. I., in 1822 or 1823, aged 71. He was a patriot of the Revolution, and many years majorgeneral of the militia.

SHELDON, DANIEL, Dr., an eminent physician of Litchfield, Conn., died in 1840, aged 89. Born in Hartford, he studied with the eccentric Dr. Seth Bird of L., and first practised in Woodbury, having for his partner Dr. Seth Hastings. father of the celebrated musician. He succeeded Dr. Lemuel Hopkins in L., on his removal to Hartford. — Williams' Med. Biog.

SHELDON, NOAH, minister of Stockbridge, Mass., died in 1856, aged 68. He graduated at Williams eollege in 1815.

SHELDON, SAMUEL, deacon, died at Suffield August 1, 1856, aged 99, in consequence of being thrown from his wagon.

SHEPARD, THOMAS, minister of Cambridge. Mass., died Aug. 25, 1649, aged 44. He was born near Northampton, England, Nov. 5, 1605, and was educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge, While in this seminary it pleased God in infinite mercy to awaken him from his natural state of thoughtlessness and sin, to convince him that he had been entirely selfish in his desires and conduct, to inspire him with holy principles, and to render him a humble disciple of Jesus Christ. He met afterwards with many kinds of temptations; but, as he said, he was never tempted to Arminianism, his own experience so perfectly eonfuting the freedom of the will. After he left the university he was eminently useful as a preacher. His Puritan principles exposing him to persecution, he narrowly escaped the pursuivants, and arrived at Boston in this country Oct. 3, 1635. After the removal of Mr. Hooker and Mr. Stone to Connecticut, he formed a church at Cambridge, and took the charge of it Feb. 1, 1636. Here he continued till his death. He was succeeded by Mr. Mitchell. As a preacher of evangelical truth and as a writer on experimental religion, he was one of the most distinguished men of his time. It was on account of

He or of aged d dislounla, in 1792 d; he eeded

t on

d at

Newwas a najor-

f his

apo-

physied 89. centric Woodstings, ceeded val to bridge, ited at Suffield of be-bridge, Ie was , 1605. bridge. infinite state of hat he ıd conand to Christ. emptapted to erfectly he left

l as a ng him pursuicountry Hooker church Feb. 1, h. He reacher experidistinount of the energy of his preaching, and his vigilance in | in 1685. - Magnalia, iv., 189-202; Oakes' Eldetecting and zeal in opposing the errors of the day, that when the foundation of a college was to be laid, Cambridge, rather than any other place, was pitched upon as the seat of the seminary. He was the patron of learning and essentially promoted its interests. He was distinguished for his lumility and piety. Under heavy afflictions he acknowledged that he deserved nothing but misery, and bowed submissive to the Divine will. He usually wrote his sermons so early for the Sabbath, that he could devote a part of Saturday to prepare his heart for the solemn and affectionate discharge of the duties of the following day. He published thesis sabbatica; a letter, entitled New England's lamentation for Old England's errors, 1645; cautions against spiritual drunkenness, a sermon; subjection to Christ in all his ordinances the best means to preserve our liberty, to which is added a treatise on ineffectual hearing of the word; the sincere convert; the sound believer, a treatise on evangelical conversion; singing of psalms a gospel ordinance; the clear sunshine of the gospel upon the Indians, 4to., 1648; a treatise of liturgies, power of the keys, and matter of the visible church, in answer to Mr. Ball, 4to., 1653; the evangelical call; select cases resolved and first principles of the oracles of God: these were republished, together with meditations and spiritual experiences, extracted from his private diary, by Mr. Prince of Boston, 1747; of the right use of liberty; reply to Gauden, 1661; the parable of the ten virgins; the churchmembership of children and their right to baptism, 1663; the saint's jewel and the soul's imitation of Jesus Christ, two sermons; the four last things, 4to. - Mather's Magnalia, III. 81-93; Sprague's Annals.

SHEPARD, SAMUEL, minister of Rowley, Mass., died in 1668, aged 27. The son of Rev. Thomas S. of Cambridge, he graduated in 1658, and was ordained in 1665 as colleague with Mr. Phillips. His wife was Dorothy, daughter of Rev. II. Flint.

SHEPARD, THOMAS, minister of Charlestown, Mass., the son of Rev. Thomas, was born in London April 5, 1635; was graduated at Harvard college in 1653; and ordained April 13, 1659, as colleague to Mr. Symmes. After a ministry of eighteen years he died of the small pox Dec. 22, 1677, aged 42. President Oakes in a Latin oration represents Mr. Shepard as distinguished for his erudition, prudence, modesty, and integrity, as a strenuous defender of the orthodox faith, and as holding the first rank among the ministers of his day. He published the elec-tion sermon, 1672. In Mather's Magnalia there is preserved a paper of excellent instructions to ecceed him at Charlestown in 1680, but died warmest gratitude; and he was liberal to the SHEPARD, JEREMIAH, minister of Lynn, Mass., died in 1720, aged 72, in the forty-second year of his ministry. The son of Rev. Thomas of Cambridge, he graduated in 1669. He first preached for a time in Rowley and Ipswich. He was faithful, courageous, zealcus, active; of a free, generous spirit and cheerful conversation. He published a Sort of believers never saved, 1711; election sermon, 1715.

SHEPARD, Mase, D. D., minister of Little Compton, R. I., died Feb. 14, 1821, aged 63, Born in Norton, he was a descendant of Thomas, who died in Milton, 1719. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1785, and was settled in September, 1787. He was a distinguished and successful preacher; a man of commanding presence and powerful voice, addressing the people with a warm heart, without any notes. In his conversation and conduct he won the affections of all. His chosen theme in preaching was the sovereign mercy of God. In one of several revivals of religion, he received in one year one hundred and twenty persons into his church. He was the father of Prof. Charles U. Shepard. - Sprague's Annals.

SHEPARD, STEPHEN, missionary printer at the Sandwich Islands, died July 6, 1834, at Honolulu. Born in Johnstown, N. Y., he embarked at Boston Nov., 1827, to succeed Mr. Loomis as printer soon after the printing of Luke was commenced. He was anxious to give the Scriptures to the islanders; but ill health took him off from his labors in 1831. His death was peaceful and joyful, his mind resting on the promises of the bible.

SHEPARD, THOMAS W., died at Northampton, Mass., in 1843, aged 49. He was postmaster, and publisher of the Hampshire Gazette.

SHEPARD, Mr., died near Cleveland, about 1846, aged 118.

SHEPARD, SAMUEL, D. D., minister of Lenox, Mass., died Jan. 4, 1846, aged 72. Born in Chatham. now Portland, Conn., the son of Daniel, he graduated at Yale in 1793. He lived at Lenox more than half a century. His brother. Deacon Daniel S., died in Portland, Conn., in 1850, aged 96. He published the election sermon, 1806; at execution of E. Wheeler; on fiftieth anniversary of his ordination, 1845. -Sprague's Annals.

SHEPARD, MICHAEL, died in Salem, Mass., Oct. 10, 1856. He had been forty-three years a member of the first Baptist church and a very exemplary Christian. Among his ways of doing good was the gift of thousands of dollars to the Newton theological institution and to a missionary society. He managed most wisely the property his son, a student at college, who afterwards suc- of many widows and orphans, securing their rest, trusting for salvation in the Lord Jesus III. 162-165.

SHEPHERD, SAMUEL N., son of Rev. Samuel S., and the minister of Madison, Conn., died Sept. 30, 1856, aged 57, having been a successful pastor thirty-one years, highly esteemed. He was a graduate of Williams college in 1821. In good health, he was selzed with illness in the morning and died in the afternoon.

SHEPHERD, LEVI, Dr., died at Northampton, Mass., in 1805. He was the father of Thomas, postmaster, who died in 1846, aged 68.

SHEPHERD, WILLIAM, general, died at Westfield Nov. 11, 1817, aged nearly 80, being born Dec. 1, 1737. He was the son of Deacon John S.; entering the army at the age of 17, he was six years a captain under Amherst, from 1759, and was in various battles, as of fort William Henry, Crown Point, etc. He married Sarah Dewey, who was fifty-seven years his wife. Entering the army of the Revolution as a lieutenant-colonel, he was in 1783 a brigadier-general. He fought in twenty-two battles. He was majorgeneral of the militia. From 1797 he was a member of congress for six years. A virtuous, good man, he was thirty-four years a professor of religion und a constant attendant upon public worship. His house was a house of prayer.

SHEPPARD, Moses, a retired merchant of Charleston, S. C., died Jan. 31, 1857. He left 600,000 dollars as a fund for an insane asytum.

SHEPLEY, John, a lawyer, died at Saco, Mc., 1857, aged about 70. There was a John Shepley in Salem, in 1630, who might have been the ancestor of men of the name in New England. He once lived in Fitchburg, Mass., and was a member of the legislature. Removing to Maine, he was a law-partner of his brother. Chief Justice Ether Shepley. He was reporter of the supreme court four years.

SHERMAN, JOHN, minister of Watertown, Mass., died Aug. 8, 1675, aged 71. He was born in England in 1613, and educated at Cambridge. His Puritan principles induced him to come to this country in 1634. After being a short time an assistant to Mr. Phillips at Watertown, he removed to Connecticut, where he preached occasionally. But after the death of Mr. Phillips in 1644, he returned to Watertown, and was minister in that place till his death. He was succeeded by John Bailey. Besides being a distinguished divine, Mr. Sherman was an eminent mathematician, and published a number of almanaes, to which pious reflections were added. Though he was a very humble man, in his preaching there was an unaffected loftiness of style, and his discourses were enriched with figures of oratory.

poor. He was ever devout; and he entered into | children, and twenty by his last. - Magnalia.

SHERMAN, Josian, minister of Woburn. Mass., died in 1789, aged about 55. He graduated at Princeton in 1754. He was the brother of Roger Sherman of Connecticut. His predecessors were T. Carter, Jabez Fox, John Fox, E. Jackson.

SHERMAN, ROGER, senator of the United States, died July 23, 1793, aged 72. He was a descendant of Capt. John S., who lived in Watertown, Mass., in 1637, and was a representative in 1663; he was born at Newton, Mass., April 19, 1721. His father, William S., a farmer, could give him no advantages for education, excepting those of a common school. Yet was he eager in the pursuit of knowledge. Apprenticed to a shoemaker, he often had a book open before him while at work on his seat. The care of a numerous family devolved on him on the death of his father in 1741. He kindly provided for his mother, and assisted two brothers, afterwards ministers, to obtain an education. He reme red in 1743 to New Milford, Conn., carrying his tools upon his back. He soon relinquished his trade and hecame the partner of an elder brother, a country merchant at New Milford. In 1745 he was appointed county surveyor. Having acquired a competent knowledge of the law, he was admitted to the bar in 1754. In the following year he was appointed a justice of the peace; he was also chosen a representative in the legislature, and a deacon in the church. Removing to New Haven in 1761, he was in 1766 chosen an assistant of the colony, and appointed a judge of the superior court, which office he held for twenty-three years. He was a member of the first congress in 1774, and continued a member nineteen years till his death. He was one of those who signed the act of independence in 1776. During the war he was a member of the governor's council of safety. After the adoption of the constitution of the United States, of the convention for framing which he was a conspicuous member, he was elected a representative to congress. Being chosen a senator in 1791, he continued in this station till his death. By two wives he had fifteen children. Jeremiah Evarts married a daughter. His son, Roger, died March 5, 1856, aged 88, the oldest man in New Haven. His talents were solid and useful; his judgment unfailing. Mr. Macon said of him: "Roger Sherman had more common sense than any man I ever knew." Mr. Jefferson pointed him out as a man "who never said a foolish thing in his life." He was eminently a self-taught man. Few young men can reach the political distinction of Roger Sherman; all may possess his integrity, He was twice married, having by his first wife six and industry, and love of science and truth.

Havi the a advoc which emin word own secur 813

Carm Newt 1753 and v SI died : A gra of Y south added he be schen He w He 1 which of his Mr. I ment. SII Wisco Have a tut

> SII Fairfi was l Josial gradi emine judge He w 1814. ture His v Goule SI Jacks a gra SI presid

missic

lian aged 81 and, he d SI at I.

SI at W mini foun

malia,

oburn, gradurother predeox, E.

United was a in Wantative . April r, could cepting ager in d to a ore him numerh of his mother. inisters, 1743 to pon his and becountry was apmired a idmitted r he was was also e, and a w Haven stant of superior ee years. in 1774. s till his ned the the war council e constinvention us memto con-, he contwo wives erts mar-March 5, w Haven. udgment " Roger any man im out as g in his an. Few nction of integrity, nd truth. Having made a public profession of religion at the age of twenty-one, he was never ashamed to wich, Conn., July 14, 1853, aged 89; a much readvocate the peculiar doctrines of the gospel, spected citizen. He became a member of the which are often so unwelcome to men of worldly eminence. His sentiments were derived from the in peace. His only son, T. L. Shipman, was then word of God and not from the exertions of his own reason. In the relations of private life he secured esteem and affection. - tioodrich.

SHERMAN, NATHANIEL, minister of Mount Carmel, Conn., died in 1797, aged 74. Born in Newton, Mass., he graduated at Princeton in 1753; was paster at Bedford from 1756 to 1767; and was installed at M. C. in 1768.

SHERMAN, John, minister of Mansfield, died at Trenton, N. Y., in 1828, aged about 54. A grandson of Roger Sherman, and a graduate of Yalc in 1792, he was settled in 1797 in the south parish of M. Soon in a revival many were added to his church. In his religious opinions he became anti-trinitarian, first adopting Watts' scheme, then becoming an Arian, next a Socinian. He was dismissed by a ministerial council in 1805. He published one God in one person only, which was answered by D. Dow; also statement of his difficulties. Judge Vanderkemp answered Mr. Dow; and Mr. Welsh answered the statement.

SHERMAN, DAVID A., died in Racine county, Wisconsin, Dec. 4, 1843, aged 63. Born in New Haven, he graduated in 1802, and was six years a tutor in the college; afterwards he was the president of a college in East Tennessee, and a missionary in Wisconsin.

SHERMAN, ROGER MINOTT, judge, died in Fairfield, Conn., Dec. 30, 1844, aged 71. He was born in Woburn, Mass.; the son of Rev. Josiah and the nephew of Roger Sherman, and graduated at Yale in 1792. As a lawyer he was eminent in Norwalk and Fairfield. He was a judge of the superior court from 1840 to 1842. He was a member of the Hartford convention in 1814. He united the embellishments of literature and science and the graces of Christianity. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. William Gould of Branford and New Haven.

SHERMAN, Joseph, L.L. D., president of Jackson college, Tenn., died in 1849, aged 49; a graduate of Bowdoin in 1826.

SHERWOOD, REUBEN, D. D., an Episcopalian minister, died at Hyde Park, N. V., in 1856, aged 67.

SHEW, Joen, died at Oyster Bay, Long Island, Oct. 6, 1855. An emineut water-eure doctor, he died of the dropsy.

SHINE, DANIEL, a Methodist minister, died at Louisburg, N. C., in 1829, aged 62.

SHIPHERD, John J., died Sept. 16, 1846, at Walton, Michigan, aged 42. He had been a minister at Elvria. He was the projector and founder of Oberlin institute and colony.

SHIPMAN, NATHANIEL, judge, died in Norchurch seven years before his death, and he died a minister of Jewett city.

SHIPPEN, EDWARD, one of the first settlers of Pennsylvania, was a native of England, and a member of the society of Friends. He came to Massachusetts to avoid persecution, and settled at Boston as early as 1669, but persecution drove him thence to Pennsylvania, in which colony he was speaker of the house of assembly, and member of the governor's council. He was also the first mayor of Philadelphia. His descendants have been persons of distinction to the present day. - Miller, 11. 340.

SHIPPEN, WILLIAM, Dr., a physician of Philadelphia, died in 1801, aged 89. He was born in P.; and was one of the founders of the college of New Jersey, and a valuable member for seventy years of the Presbyterian church. -

Thacher's Med. Biog.

SHIPPEN, EDWARD, LL. D., chief justice of Pennsylvania, a descendant of Edward S., received this appointment in 1799, but resigned it in Feb., 1806. He died April 15, 1806, aged 77. SHIPPEN, WILLIAM, M. D., first professor of anatomy in the university of Pennsylvania, died at Germantown July 11, 1808, aged 74. He was a descendant of Edward S., and was graduated at the college in New Jersey in 1754. The son of Dr. William S., after studying medicine for some time in Philadelphia, he completed his medical education at Edinburgh. After his return he commenced in 1764 a course of lectures on anatomy at Philadelphia, which were the first ever pronounced in the new world. Being one of the founders of the medical school, he was appointed professor of anatomy in 1765. He had to struggle with many difficulties, and his life was sometimes endangered by a mob in consequence of his dissections. But he lived to see the institution divided into five branches, all of which were supplied with able professors, his own pupils, and become a rival to the medical school at Edinburgh. Instead of the ten students, whom he first addressed, he lived to address two hundred and fifty. About the year 1777 he was appointed director-general of the medical department in the army of the United States, in the place of Dr. Morgan. The death of an only son in 1798 eaused an almost entire abandonment of his duties as a practitioner and lecturer; but he partially recovered his spirits and delivered a course of lectures in 1807. As a demonstrator of anatomy and a physician he was very distinguished. He resigned his professorship in 1806 into the hands of his colleague, Dr. Wistar.

SHIRLEY, WILLIAM, governor of Massachusetts, died at Roxbury in 1771, aged 60 or 70. He was a native of England, and was bred to the law. After his arrival at Boston about the year 1733, he practised in his profession till he received his commission as governor in 1741, in the place of Mr. Belcher. He planned the successful expedition against Cape Breton in 1745; but, while his enterprising spirit deserves commendation, some of his schemes did not indicate much skill in the arts of navigation and war. He went to England in 1745, leaving Spencer Phipps, the lieutenant-governor, commander-in-chief, but returned in 1753. In 1754 he held a treaty with the eastern Indians, and explored the Kennebee, erecting two or three forts. In 1755, being commander-in-chief of the British forces in America, he planned an expedition against Niagara, and proceeded himself as far as Oswego. In June, 1756, he was superseded in the command of the army by Abercrombie. He embarked for England in September, and was succeeded by Mr. Pownall. After having been for a number of years governor of one of the Ilahama islands, he returned to Massachusetts. Though he held several of the most lucrative offices within the gift of the erown in America, yet he left no property to his children. The abolition of the paper currency was owing in a great degree to his firmness and perseverance. His penetration and unremitting industry gained him a high reputation. But it was thought, that, as a military officer, he was not sufficiently active in seizing the moment for success. During his administration England learned the importance of this country, and the colonists learned to fight, and thus were trained for the mighty contest which in a few years commenced. His instructions to Pepperell, with a full account of the expedition against Louisburg, are preserved in the first volume of the historical collections. He published Electra, a tragedy, and birth of Hercules, a masque, 1765.

SHORT, WILLIAM, died in Philadelphia Dec. 5, 1850, aged 91. A native of Virginia, a classmate at college with Judge Marshall, in 1774 he was secretary of legation under Jefferson to France. Under the present constitution he was the first citizen nominated to a public office, holding a commission from Washington as charge to the French republic; and by him was appointed minister at the Hague, and to Spain. His State papers were written with great research and clearness.

SHOSHANIM, the last sachem of the Nashaway Indians, joined Philip in his war. He was taken prisoner and executed at Boston.

SHOVE, George, minister of Taunton, died in 1687, aged about 42. Born in Dorchester, he was ordained in 1665.

procure a fixed salary, an object which Dudley had sought without effect. His right of negativing the speaker was denied, and his powers as son of Rev. George S.; graduated at Harvard in 1687; and was settled in 1697.

SHOVE, SETH, the first minister of Danbury, commander-in-chief were assumed by the house.

chi

the ten

215

Ma

hor vor

of t

the

of o

ortl

infi

was

the lish

sern

gua

ring

sust

rare

aan

mair

of th enou

thong gues

bec,

bisho

Conn

ated

of N

1774.

in Ill

West

Bapti

1850.

and s

of th

Sept.

1832 utter

in 18

a mii

holde

ecale

and

He n

with ward

Peab

leave

ances

SI

ŜΠ

SI

SI

SI

SI

S

.

SHREVE, HENRY M., died in St. Louis March 6, 1851; for forty years identified with western navigation. He invented the steam snagbout, and was superintendent of western ziver improvements. — Democratic Review.

SHUBRICK, IRVINE, lieutenant in the navy, died at Philadelphia in 1840, aged 52. He was a native of South Carolina, and was distinguished in various actions in the war of 1812.

SHUCK, Eliza G., wife of J. L. Shuck, Baptist missionary in China, died in 1851, aged 28.

SHULTZ, JOHN A., governor of Pennsylvania, died in Lancaster in 1852, aged 80. He was chosen governor in 1823 and 1826.

SHURTLEFF, WILLIAM, minister of Portsmouth, died May 9, 1747, aged about 60. Horn in Plymouth, Mass., he was graduated at Harvard in 1707; ordained at New Castle in 1712, and removed in 1732; installed in the south parish of Portsmouth Feb. 21, 1733, as successor of Mr. Emerson; he was followed by Job Strong. He was a faithful minister. In 1742 there were added to his church sixty-three persons. He published these sermons: at the ordination of N. Morrill, 1726; on the sufferings of shipwrecked mariners; at ordination of N. Gookin: on the execution of two persons, 1739; at a lecture in Boston, 1741; account of the revival at Portsmouth in Christian history; a letter to his brethren refusing to admit Whitefield into their SHURTLEFF, BENJAMIN, M. D., died at Boston April 12, 1847, aged 71. A graduate of Brown university in 1796, he was a physician in extensive and successful practice.

SHUTE, SAMUEL, governor of Massachusetts, died in 1742, aged 80. He was the son of an eminent citizen of London. His mother was the daughter of Mr. Caryl, a dissenting minister of distinction. His early education was under the care of Charles Morton. From London he was sent to Leyden, and afterwards he entered the army of King William, served under Marlborough, and became a lieutenant-colonel. He was wounded in one of the principal battles in Flanders. Arriving at Boston as governor Oct. 1, 1716, in the place of Dudley, he continued in office a little more than six years. He embarked Jan. 1, 1723, on his return to England, with complaints against the province. Governor Burnet succeeded him. During his administration he maintained a warm controversy with the house of representatives. He endeavored in vain to procure a fixed salary, an object which Dudley ing the speaker was denied, and his powers as commander-in-chief were assumed by the house.

the governor in the rights for which he had contended. He died in England. - Hutchinson, II. 215-217, 238; Minot, 1. 61.

SHUTE, DANIEL, D. D., minister of Hingham, Mass., died Aug. 30, 1802, aged 80. He was born July 19, 1722, and was graduated at Harvaril college in 1743. He was ordained pastor of the second church in II., Dec. 10, 1746. By the failure of his sight being under the necessity of quitting his public labors, Mr. Whitney was ordained his colleague Jan. 1, 1800. Under the infirmities of age he was serene and patient. He was a member of the convention which formed the constitution of the United States. He published artillery election sermon, 1767; election sermon, 1768; on the death of E. Gay, 1787.

SIBLEY, MARK II., judge, died at Canandaigua Sept. 8, 1852, aged 56. Born in Great Barrington, he settled in 1814 as a lawyer in C. He sustained various offices; was eloquent, and had rare colloquial powers.

rard

arch

tern mat.

.01.6-

lavy,

was shed

Bap-vania,

e was

Ports-

Born

rvard

nd re-

ish of f Mr.

. He were

He

ion of

ship-

ookin;

t a lee-

ival at

to his

o their

lied at unte of

ician in husetts,

of an

was the ister of

der the

he was

red the

Marlbo-

He was

n Flan-

Oct. 4.

nucd in nbarked

ith com-

Burnet

ation he ie house

vain to

Dudley

negativ-

owers as ie house.

lanatory

28.

SICCARY, Dr., died in Virginia. Mr. Jefferson says he introduced the tomato plant. He maintained that by eating in sufficient abundance of the plant one need not die. He did not eat enough, according to his theory; for he died, though in a good old age. He was a Portuguese Jew.

SIGNAY, JOSEPH, Catholic archbishop of Quebec, died Oct. 3. 1850, aged 71. He was made bishop in 1833, and arehbishop in 1844.

SILLIMAN, ROBERT, minister in Saybrook, Conn., died in 1786, aged about 70. He graduated at Yale in 1737. He was the first minister of New Canaan, about 1770, and went to S. in 1774.

SILLIMAN, GERSHOM, a Baptist elder, died in Illinois in 1857, aged 73. He was born in Weston, Conn., and was one of the fathers of the Baptist church in the west.

SILSBEE, NATHANIEL, died at Salem July 1, 1850, aged 77. He was a successful merchant, and sustained various offices; he was a senator of the U.S. from 1826 to 1835.

SIMMONS, GEORGE F., died in Concord, Mass., Sept. 5, 1855, aged 41, a graduate of Harvard in 1832; and much of a martyr to his opinions and utterances concerning slavery. He was ordained in 1838 as an evangelist in Boston, and soon was a minister in Mobile; but, offending the slaveholders by a sermon, he was obliged to tlee, concealed in a vessel, - such are the selfish higotry and ruffian tyranny of sonthern slave-masters. He next was a minister in Waltham, a colleague with his father-in-law, Mr. Ripley; and afterwards in Springfield, as the successor of W. B. O. Peabody; but both places he was compelled to leave on account of his anti-slavery pulpit utterances. He next was settled in Albany; his ill- sixty years. He died in Christian hope. From charter was procured in 1724, which confirmed | health carried him to Concord, the place of his

SIMMONS, CHARLES, died at North Wrentham May 12, 1856, aged 58. He was a minister, and known as the author of Scripture manual, and also of a laconic manual.

SIMONDS, BENJAMIN, colonel, died at Williamstown April 11, 1807, aged 81. He was an early settler, a soldier at the age of twenty, a man of enterprise and wealth.

SIMPKINS, John, minister of Brewster, died at Boston Feb. 28, 1843, aged 75. A son of Deacon John S. of Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1786, and in 1791 was ordained at Harwich, now Brewster, as successor of J. Dunster, who was pastor forty-three years. He was a good scholar and divine, evangelical but liberal. For some years he was in poor health and had retired from the ministry.

SIMPSON, Samson, a Jew, died at New York in 1857, leaving 50,000 dollars, the interest to be applied to meliorate the condition of the Jews at Jerusalem, by promoting education and skill in various arts.

SIMS, EDWARD D., died suddenly April 15, 1845. He was professor of English literature in the university of Alabama; and a member of the Methodist church.

SITGREAVES, JOHN, district judge of North Carolina, was an officer in the Revolutionary war, and a member of congress after the peace. He died at Halifax, N. C., in March, 1802.

SKELTON, SAMUEL, one of the first ministers of Salem, Mass., died Aug. 2, 1634. He was a preacher in Lincolnshire, England, and, being persecuted for his nonconformity, came to this country in June, 1629, and was ordained with Mr. Higginson at Salem August 6th. After the death of his colleague he had for his assistant Roger Williams. Though strict in discipline, he was a friend to the utmost equality of privileges in church and State. His fears of the assumption of authority by the elergy made him jealous of the ministers, who used to hold a meeting once a fortnight for mutual improvement. - Magnalia, 1. 16; 111. 74, 76; Savage's Winthrop, 1. 26, 31; Morton, 82-86; Prince, 183-191; Neal, 1. 140, 157; Hist. Coll. vi. 244.

SKENONDOU, an Indian chief, died at Oncida, New York, in 1816, aged 106 or 110. In his youth he was very savage and addicted to drunkenness. In 1755 he was present at a treaty made at Albany. At night he was drunk, and in the morning he found himself in the street, stripped of his ornaments and clothing. Indignant at his own folly, he resolved that he would never again deliver himself over to the power of strong water. Through the inst actions of Mr. Kirkland, a missionary, he lived a reformed man for more than attachment to Mr. Kirkland, he had often expressed a desire to be buried near his minister, that he might, as he said, "Go up with him at the great resurrection." At the approach of death, after listening to the prayers, which were read at his bedside by his great-grand-daughter, he repeated his request. Accordingly his corpse was conveyed to the village of Clinton, where he was buried, March 13, with distinction; an address being made to the Indians by Dr. Buckus, president of Hamilton college, and interpreted by Judge Dean of Westmoreland. After the funeral the only surviving son of Skenondou returned thanks for the respect shown to his father. In person he was tall and brawny, but well made. His countenance expressed the dignity of an Indian chief. He was a brave and intrepid warrior in youth, and an able counsellor in age. He watched the Canadian invasions with the cunning of the fox, and repelled them with the agility and fierceness of the mountain cat. To his vigilance the inhabitants of German Flats on the Mohawk were indebted for preservation from massacre. His influence brought his tribe to our assistance in the war of the Revolution. Among the Indian tribes he was called "the white man's friend." For several years he kept his dress for the grave prepared. He often went to Clinton to die, that his body might lie near his Christian teacher. A short time before his death, he said to a friend by an interpreter: "I am an aged hemlock; the winds of an hundred winters have whistled through my branches: I am dead at the top. The generation to which I belonged have run away and left me; why I live, the Great Good Spirit only knows. Pray to my Jesus, that I may have patience to wait for my appointed time to die."

EKINNER, RICHARD, governor of Vermont, died at Manchester May 23, 1833, aged 55. He was born at Litchfield, Conn., in 1778; removed to Manchester in 1800; was a member of congress in 1813; judge of the supreme court in 1816; chief justice in 1817; and governor in 1820-1822. He was again chief justice from 1824 to 1829. For his private worth and his public services he was much respected.

SKINNER, DANIEL, died in Corinth, Me., in 1841, aged 98. Born in Mansfield, he served in the French war. He was a member of the Freewill Baptist church, an exemplary Christian. The thought, that all temporal as well as spiritual good came through the sufferings of Christ, deeply and long affected him.

SKINNER, John, Dr., died at New Haven, Conn., in 1850, aged 85.

SKINNER, JOHN S., colonel, died at Baltimore in 1851, aged about 70. He was postmaster twenty years. He was a writer on agriculture; und editor of the Plough, the Loom, and the Anvil.

SKINNER, THOMAS, minister of Colchester, Conn., died in 1762, aged about 52. He gradunted at Harvard in 1732. He published a sermon on the death of his wife 17-13.

pai

Ita

ph ind

tlet

a c chi

pai

gaz

pai

the pain

of I

coll

his

of 1

Vir

was carl

in d

of t moi

but

mer

teer

Afte

tact

whi

out in a barl

a te

islaı

thei

they

min

goin

of tl

his e hun

Reg

that figh

acce

back

kille

ante

que

sion

was

Smi

afte

ran

he

tion

ing

obta

the

con

8

SKINNER, ICHAROD LORD, died at Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 29, 1852, aged about 80. He gradnated at Yale in 1793.

SKINNER, EZEKIEL, M. D., a Baptist minister in Ashford and Westport, Conn., died in 1855, aged 78. He made three voyages to Africa for the benefit of the Baptist mission and the colony, SLATER, SAMUEL, died at Webster, Mass., April 20, 1835, aged 67. He was the father of cotton manufactures of the United States. The first manufactory built in this country was built by him in Pawtucket, R. I. He acquired a great estate. — Life by J. L. Blake.

SLATER, John, died at Slaterville, R. I., June 3, 1843, aged 67. The beautiful village of his name was built up under his direction. He left, besides that, an immense estate.

SLUYTER, RICHARD, minister of the Dutch church of Claverack, N. Y., died in 1843, aged 55. In 1815 he was settled as colleague with Mr. Gebhard over the churches of C. and Hillsdale. He was born in Nassau. In his church were revivals in 1821–1823, 1833, 1835, 1838, 1842. He received into the communion eleven hundred souls.

SMALL, ISAAC, died at Canterbury, N. H., in 1821, aged 101; his widow, Hannah, died in 1822, aged 102.

SMALLEX, John, D. D., minister of Berlin, Conn., died June 1, 1820, aged nearly 86. He was born in Lebanon Crank, now Columbia, Conn., in 1734, the son of Benjamin. His parents, especially his mother, led him in the path of piety. He graduated at Yale college in 1756, and was ordained April 10, 1758. He was a distinguished theologian and a faithful and successful preacher. He published sermons on natural and moral inability, 1760; eternal salvation not a just debt, against John Murray, 1785; concio ad clerum; at the election, 1800; sermons on connected subjects, 1803; sermons, 2 vols.— Sprague's Annals.

SMALLWOOD, WILLIAM, general, governor of Maryland, died in 1792. He was appointed a brigadier in 1776, and major-general Sept. 15, 1780. In the defeat on Long Island in August, his brigade suffered most severely. Among the two hundred and fifty men whom he lost, were many from the first families of Maryland. He was in the battle of Canuden and in that of Germantown in 1777. In 1785 he was a delegate congress. He succeeded Paca as governor in 1785, and was succeeded by Howard in 1788.

SMIBERT, JOHN, an eminent portrait-painter, died in 1751, aged 67. He was born in Edinburgh in 1684. After serving his time as a houseserklyn, grad-

ster.

adu-

ninis-1855, a for dony. lass., er of The built

, June of his e left,

great

Dutch ed 55. h Mr. lsdale. ere re-2. He mdred

II., in ied in Berlin, 3. He lumbia, lis pae path n 1756, s a disuccessnatural ion not eoncio ons on vols. - overnor pointed ept. 15, August. ong the st, were d. He of Geregate to rnor in 1788.

painter, n Edina housepainter, he repaired to London, and thence to with the first emigrants, who made a permanent Italy, where he spent three years in copying Rassettlement, in the Chesapenke, April 26, 1607. A phael, Titian, Vandyck, and Rabens. He was colony was begun at Jamestown, and the governchildren at his death. His son, Nathaniel, n painter of great promise, died in early life. The gazette of May 5, 1757, speaks of his death. He painted Mr. Lovell, his schoolmaster. Many of the portraits of Mr. S. are regarded as good paintings. His head of Cardinal Hentivoglio, and of Dr. Mayhew, have been commended. At Yale college his large painting of Dean Berkeley and his family is preserved. Smibert himself is one of the figures, with an expressive countenance.

SMITH, JOHN, the father of the colony of Virginia, died in Lond tt, aged 51. He d. in 1579. He was born in Lincolns early discovered a ro d delighted in daring and extrav At the age of thirteen he sold his .chel to raise money in order to convey turn If rivately to sea, but was prevented. Being an apprentice to a merchant he quitted his master at the age of fifteen, and went to France and the low countries. After his return he studied military history and tactics, and, having recovered a part of the estate which his father left him, he was enabled to set out again on his travels at the age of seventeen, in a better condition than before. Having embarked at Marseilles for Italy with some pilgrims, a tempest obliged them to anchor near a small island off Nice. As his companions attributed their unfavorable voyage to the presence of Smith. they threw the heretic into the sea; but by swimming he was enabled to reach the shore. After going to Alexandria, he entered into the service of the emperor of Austria against the Turks. By his exploits he soon obtained the command of two hundred and fifty horsemen. At the siege of Regal the Ottomans sent a challenge, purporting that the lord Turbisha, to divert the ladies, would fight any captain of the Christian troops. Smith accepted it, and, meeting his antagonist on horseback in view of the ladies on the battlements, killed him and bore away his head. A second antagonist met the same fate. Smith then requested, that, if the ladies wished for more diversion, another champion might appear. His head was added to the number of the others, though Smith narrowly escaped losing his own. He was afterwards taken prisoner; but by killing his tyrannical master he escaped into Russia. When he returned to England, he formed the resolution to seek adventures in North America. Having persuaded a number of gentlemen in 1606 to obtain a patent of south Virginia, he engaged in command of Christopher Newport, and arrived | 1615; description of New England, 1617; New induced in 1728 to come to this country; he set- ment was in the hands of a council, of which tled in Boston, where he married a woman with Smith was a member. When Newport returned, a considerable fortune, whom he left with two more than one hundred persons were left in Virginia. They would have perished with hunger but for the exertions of Smith in procuring corn of the Indians. When he could not effect his object by purchase, he resorted to force. He once seized the Indian idol, Okce, made of skins stuffed with moss, for the redemption of which as much corn was brought to him as he required. While exploring the Chickahominy river he was taken prisoner, after having killed with his own hand three of the enemy. He was carr' 3 to the emperor Powhatan, who received hin , had bed in a robe of raccoon skins, and scated and kent of throne, with two beautiful girls dangate. 19 near him. After a long consultation is sarge stones were brought in, and his head was laid upon one of them. At this moment, when the war-clubs were lifted to dispatch him, Pecahontas, the king's favorite daughter, shielded him from the blows, and by her entreaties saved his life. He was sent to Jamestown, where, by his resolution, uddress, and industry, he prevented the abandonment of the plantation. In 1608 he explored the whole country from Cape Henry to the river Susquehannah, sailing about three thousand miles. On his return he drew a map of the bay and rivers, from which subsequent maps have been chiefly copied. In this year, when he was president of the council, by his severity and his example he rendered the colonists exceedingly industrious. It happened, however, that the blistered hands of several young gentlemen, who had known better times in England, called forth frequent expressions of impatience and profaueness. Smith caused the number of every man's oaths to be noted daily, and at night as many cans of water to be poured inside his sleeve. This discipline so lessened the number of oaths, that scarcely one was heard in a week, and it perfectly restored the subjects of it to good humor. In 1609, being much injured by an explosion of gunpowder, he returned to England for the benefit of medical assistance. In 1614 he ranged the coast of what was then ealled north Virginia, from Penobscot to Cape Cod, in an open boat with eight men. On his return he formed a map of the country, and desired Prince Charles, afterwards the royal martyr, to give it a name. By him it was for the first time called New England. For all his services and sufferings he never received any recompense. He published the sixth voyage made to Virginia, 1606; the first voyage to New England with the old and new the expedition, which was fitted out under the names, 1614; a relation of his second voyage,

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580 (716) 872-4503

STATE OF THE STATE

England's trials, declaring the success of twentysix ships, employed thither within these six years, etc., 1620; the general history of Virginia, New England, and the Summer Isles, with the names of the adventurers, etc., from 1584 to 1626, also the maps and descriptions of all those countries in six books, folio, 1627; his friend, Mr. Purchas, had published in his pilgrims most of the narrative part before; the true travels, adventures, and observations of Captain John Smith in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, from 1603 to 1629, folio, 1630; 2d edit., 2 vols., 8vo., Richmond, 1819; this is preserved entire in Churchill's collections; advertisements for the inexperienced planters of New England, 4to., 1630. - Smith's Travels; Belknap's Amer. Biog., 1. 240-319.

SMITH, RALPH, the first ordained minister of Plymouth, Mass., died at Boston in 1662. He was pastor from 1629 to 1635. Elder Brewster had previously officiated as the religious teacher, although he did not administer the ordinances. He graduated at Cambridge, England, in 1613, and John Rayner succeeded him at Plymouth. In 1645 he was called to preach in Manchester, Cape Ann. - Sprague's Annals.

SMITH, HENRY, minister of Wethersfield, Conn., died in 1648, aged 91. He was born in 1557, the first of fifteen children.

SMITH, JOSEPH, of Hartford, Conn., married in 1650 Lydia, daughter of Rev. E. Huit, and was the father of Joseph, who removed to Hadley in 1680, and was the ancestor of Rev. Ethan | Having become a prisoner of war at Charleston, Smith. There lived in Hadley about the same time Philip Smith, a representative and deacon, and Samuel, also a representative. they were brothers of Joseph is not known.

SMITII, CALEB, minister of Orange, N. Y., died Oct. 22, 1762, aged 38. Born on Long Island, he was educated at Yale; ordained Nov. 30, 1748; married Martha, daughter of Jonathan Dickinson. He published a sermon on the death of Aaron Burr.

SMITH, CHARLES JEFFERY, died on. Long Island Aug. 10, 1770, aged 29. He was found dead, his gun by his side. He had gone out a gunning; his gun was so placed, as if he had shot himself. Some believed he was murdered. By some his death was ascribed to suicide; but his friends knew that he was subject to a violent pain in his breast, passing to his head, and by some it was thought his death was occasioned by this disease. He was ordained as a missionary at Lebanon June 30, 1763. He was eminent for his gifts and graces, extensively known, and very useful, especially at the South. Ho died in the prime of life. Mr. Buell, who was his intimate friend, published a sermon on his death, relating to the mysterious events of providence. He was the only son, and | 1734. Among his predecessors were J. Hull and inherited the estate of his father, who lived at T. and P. Thacher. His successor was J. Nor-Brookhaven, L. I., and died in 1748. His estate ton. His wife was Elizabeth, the daughter of in Long Island, in lands and money, amounted to six or seven thousand pounds. After being for a time with the Indians, he labored for the instruction of slaves in Virginia; and, having purchased property in that State, he returned to Long Island to settle up his affairs. He published a sermon on regeneration, 1766.

SMITH, SAMUEL, a historian, was a native of Burlington, N. J., in which place he died in 1776. He published a history of New Jersey from its settlement to 1721, 8vo., 1755, which is a judicious compilation.

SMITH, WILLIAM, chief justice of the province of New York, the son of William S., an eminent lawyer and judge of the supreme court, who died Nov. 22, 1769, aged 73, was graduated at Yale college in 1745. In the Revolution he was a tory, and afterwards chief justice of Canada. He published a history of the province of New York, from the first discovery to the year 1732, 4to., 1757; 2d ed., 1814. A continuation from 1732 to 1762 was written by his son, William S.

SMITH, JOSIAH, minister in South Carolina. died in 1781, aged 76. He was the first native of that province who received a literary degree. He was born in Charleston in 1704, being the grandson of Gov. Thomas Smith, and graduated at Harvard college in 1725. He was ordained in Boston as minister for Bermuda July 11, 1726, and afterwards became minister of Cainhoy, and pastor of the Presbyterian church in Charleston. he was sent on parole in 1781 to Philadelphia, where he died. He maintained, in the early part of his ministry, a learned disputation with Hugh Fisher on the right of private judgment. He published a sermon at his own ordination; the Spirit of God a holy fire, 1727; the duty of parents to instruct their children, 1727; the young man warned; Solomon's caution against the cup, 1729; human impositions proved unscriptural; answer to a sermon of Hugh Fisher; the divine right of private judgment, 1730; on the preaching of Mr. Whitefield, 1740; on the death of Hannah Dart, 1742; letters to W. Cooper, 1743; Jesus persecuted in his disciples; zeal for God encouraged and guarded, 1745; a volume of sermons, 8vo., 1752; the church of Ephesus arraigned, the substance of five short sermons contracted into one, 1765. - Sprague's Annals.

of

th

ab

er

in

ble

hi lo

of

Pr

in pu

th

in

Ty

He

mo pre

he

me

tio

sic

ele

and

vol ent

len

nat

Me

5011

SMITH, AARON, minister of Marlborough, Mass., died in 1781, aged about 67. He graduated at Harvard in 1735; was ordained in 1740; was dismissed for ill health in 1778.

SMITII, WILLIAM, minister of Weymouth, died in 1783, aged 77. Born in Charlestown, he graduated at Harvard in 1725, and was settled in chased ng Isshed a tive of n 1776. om its dicious

ted to

for a struc-

e prov-S., an e court, aduated ation he Canada. of New ar 1732, ion from illiam S. Carolina, st native y degree. being the graduated ordained 11, 1726, nhoy, and harleston. harleston, iladelphia, early part vith Hugh nent. He ation; the luty of pathe young st the cup, scriptural; the divine he preache death of oper, 1743; al for God volume of of Ephesus rt sermons e's Annals. arlborough, Weymouth, rlestown, he as settled in J. Hull and was J. Nordaughter of

He gradu-

ed in 1740;

tree. She died in 1775, aged 53. He was the son of Daniel, who married Anna Shepard, the daughter of Rev. Thomas S. His daughters married distinguished men. He had three daughters; Mary, who married Richard Cranch; Abigail, who married John Adams; and Elizabeth, who married first Rev. John Shaw, and then Rev. Mr. Peabody. The following family anecdotes are repeated: that Mr. Cranch and Mr. Adams were suitors of Mary, and that the former, who was in good business, was preferred by Mary and the family, the father preaching on the marriage from this text, " Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away." In the course of time, Abigail, who had a strong and cultivated mind, was married to John Adams, and, as the father asked her what text he should preach from, she replied, "And John came, neither eating nor drinking, and ye say, he hath a devil." She lived to see her chosen one chosen by the people the president of the United States.

SMITH, THOMAS, minister of Pembroke, Mass., died in 1788, aged 83. Born in Barnstable, he graduated at Harvard in 1724, and succeeded in 1754 Daniel Lewis, the first minister, who was ordained in 1707.

SMITH, ROBERT, D. D., minister in Pennsylvania, died about 1785, aged 62. He was born of Scotch parents in Londonderry, Ireland, about the year 1723, and was brought to this country about the year 1730. At the age of about seventeen years he became the subject of that Divine influence, which so eminently accompanied and blessed the preaching of Mr. Whitefield during his first visit to America. His classical and theological studies he pursued under the instruction of Samuel Blair. In 1751 he was settled in the Presbyterian church at Pequea in Pennsylvania, in which station he continued to officiate with reputation and usefulness till his death. His wife, the sister of Mr. Blair, was intelligent and pious; in his absence, she conducted the family worship. Two sons were physicians and three ministers. He was one of the most able theologians, the most profound easuists, and the most successful preachers of his age. Soon after his settlement he founded a school at Pequea. Many young men, who have since filled very honorable stations in church and state, received in it their classical education. It was his care to instil with the elements of literature the principles of a pure and ardent piety. In the American preacher, vol. Iv., there are published three of his sermons, entitled, the nature of saving faith; the excelleacy of saving faith; practical uses from the nature and excellency of saving faith.

SMITH, THOMAS, first minister of Portland, Me., died May 23, 1795, aged 93. He was the

Col. John Quincy of Mount Wollaston in Brain- | March 21, 1702, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1720. In 1725 he went to Falmouth, now Portland, as chaplain to the troops stationed there, and preacher to the inhabitants. He was ordained March 8, 1727, the day on which a church was gathered. Though he received for his colleague Mr. Deane in 1767, he preached till the close of 1784, and officiated in public prayer till within a year and a half of his death. He renounced all self-dependence, and placed his hope in the mercy of God through the merits of the Redeemer. He published a sermon at the ordination of Solomon Lombard at Gorham, and a sermon to seafaring men. - Sprague's Annals.

> SMITH, ELIHU HUBBARD, a physician, died of the yellow fever in 1798, aged 27. He was born at Litchfield, Conn., and was graduated at Yale college in 1786. After pursuing a regular course of medical studies under the direction of his father, he commenced the practice at Wethersfield in 1792, but removed to New York in 1793. In 1797 he commenced the medical repository in conjunction with Drs. Mitchell and Miller. At his early age he had explored a vast extent of medical learning. His writings display singular acuteness, great force of reasoning, and the talent of accurate and extensive observation. Besides his medical productions in the repository, he published Edwin and Angelina, or the banditti, an opera in three acts, 1797.

SMITH, JOHN BLAIR, first president of Union college at Scheneetady, the son of Dr. Robert S., died Aug. 22, 1799, aged 43. In early life he exhibited marks of uncommon energy of mind. He was the subject of many pious prayers, and those prayers were heard in heaven. When he was about fourteen years of age, it pleased God to excite among the youth in the academy at Pequea a serious attention to religion. His mind was at this period deeply impressed by the truths of the gospel; he was renewed by the agency of the Holy Spirit; and in a short time he avowed himself a disciple of Jesus. From the year 1773, when he was graduated at the college of New Jersey, he devoted himself almost entirely to theological studies, under the direction of his brother, Samuel S. Smith, at that time president of Hampden Sidney college in Virginia. In 1779 he was settled over a church in Virginia, and at the same time he succeeded his brother as principal of the seminary. Here he was eminently honored by the Great Head of the church in being made instrumental in promoting a general religious solicitude and reformation among the people of his charge and of the neighborhood. As he was now called to extraordinary exertions, he generally preached once at least every day, and in the evenings he was commonly engaged in religious conversation. His engagements interson of Thomas S., merchant of Boston; was born fering with the attention due to the college, he resigned this part of his charge, that he might give himself wholly to the work of the Christian ministry. His zeal was rewarded by the success which attended his labors; but, as his health was enfeebled, he was persuaded to accept an invitation from the third Presbyterian church in Philadelphia, where he was installed in Dec., 1791. When Union college was founded in 1795, he presided over it for three years with high reputation. But, amidst his literary occupations, the duties of the sacred office most warmly interested him. He improved every opportunity for preaching the gospel of his Redeemer. Being again invited to his former charge in Philadelphia, he returned to that city in May, 1799. His successor in the care of the college was Dr. Edwards. In a short time he was seized with the yellow fever, of which he died in resignation and joyful

SMITH, ROBERT, D. D., first bishop of the Episcopal churches in South Carolina, was consecrated bishop in 1795, and died at Charleston in Nov., 1801, aged 72. He had for forty-seven years discharged the duties of a minister of St. Philip's church.

SMITH, WILLIAM, D. D., first provost of the college in Philadelphia, died May 14, 1803, aged 76. He was a native of Scotland, received his education at the university of Aberdeen, where he was graduated in 1747. After being employed as a private tutor in the family of Gov. Martin on Long Island, he was invited to take the charge of the college in Philadelphia, and he accepted the invitation. After revisiting England, and receiving regular ordination in the Episcopal church in Dec., 1753, he returned to America, and in May, 1754, was placed at the head of the infant seminary. His popular talents and taste in polite literature contributed greatly to raise the character of the college. He was principally assisted by Dr. Allison. After being for many years a distinguished preacher and writer, and rendering important service to the literary interests of America, he died at Philadelphia. He published a sermon to freemasons, 1755; discourses on several public occasions during the war, 1759, and 2d edit., with sermons added, 1763; concerning the conversion of the heathen in America, 1760; an account of the charitable corporation for the widows of clergymen, 1769; an oration before the American philosophical society, 1773; on the present crisis of American affairs, 1775; an oration in memory of Montgomery, 1776; on temporal and spiritual salvation, 1790; eulogium on Franklin, 1792. His works were published in two vols., 8vo., 1803.

SMITH, James, colonel, a patriot of the Revolution, died in 1806, aged about 92. He was a native of Ireland. He settled as a lawyer and a surveyor in York, Penn. He raised in 1774 the convict him.

first volunteer company in the State for the purpose of resisting Great Britain. In 1776 he was a member of congress and signed the declaration of independence. In Nov., 1778, he resumed his professional pursuits. For many years he was a professor of religion.

11

fr

Λ

P

ye

tie

17 th

ag

pr

an

of

gr

an

Fr

Br

vic

cor

of

ing

discor

the

jud

ard

con

mei

este

with

edu

sch

hop

fol

of]

69.

was cou

in two lar was

com

that

prof

was

In

of c volv

was infi

succ

ter

J. A

SMITH, COTTON MATHER, minister of Sharon, Conn., died Nov. 27, 1806, aged 75. The son of Samuel of Suffield, who was grandson of Rev. Henry Smith, he graduated at Yale in 1751; was ordained at Sharon Aug. 28, 1755; and continued fifty-one years. He succeeded J. Searle and was succeeded by D. L. Perry. He was an excellent minister, a man of eminent virtues. Several of his contemporary neighboring brethren attained a great age, as Lee of Salisbury, Farrand of Canuan, Champion of Litchfield, and Mills of Torringford. He was the father of Gov. Smith. His wife was Temperance, the widow of Dr. Moses Gale of Goshen, N. Y., daughter of Rev. W. Worthington. She died at the house of her sonin-law, Judge Jacob Radcliff of Albany, in 1800. Sprague's Annals.

SMITH, John, D. D., professor of languages at Dartmouth college, died at Hanover in May, 1809, aged 56. He was born at Byfield, Mass., Dec. 21, 1752, and was graduated in 1778 at Dartmouth, where he was a tutor from 1774 to 1778, and professor from 1778 till his death. He was a preacher, as well as a teacher of the ancient languages. His daughter, Sarah, who had a fine taste for poetry, and of whom a memoir is given in the panoplist, IX. 385, died Aug. 17, 1812, aged 23. He published a dedication sermon, 1795; Hebrew grammar, 1803; Greek grammar, 1809; Latin grammar, 3d edit., 1812; a sermon at dedication, Hanover, 1796; at ordination of T. Eo and 1801.—Sprague's Annals.

 \mathbf{S}^* ISRAEL, governor of Vermont, died in 4 51. He was born in Connecticut April 4, 1759, and graduated at Yale college in 1781. He studied law with his brother at Bennington. He lived first at Rupert, then at Rutland. In 1791 he was elected one of the first representatives from Vermont, and continued in that body till 1797, when M. Lyon was elected. At this period he was chosen by the legislature chief justice; but in 1798, in the prevalence of federalism, another was elected. From Dec., 1801, till 1803 he was a member of congress. From 1803 to 1807 he was a senator of the U.S. In 1807 he was chosen governor, but ere his term of office ended his nervous system became so impaired as to terminate in derangement. He died at his residence in Rutland. His diffidence was allied to bashfulness. He was a man of strict integrity, with a metaphysical turn of mind. On the trial of Judge Chase he voted to acquit him on every article; on that of Judge Pickering he voted to ie purhe was aration ned his he was Sharon, of Rev. il; was utinued and was xcellent veral of attained d of Caof Terth. His . Moses Rev. W.

her son-

in 1800.

anguages in May, ld, Mass., 1778 at 1774 to eath. He ie ancient had a fine ir is given 17, 1812, ı sermon. grammar, a sermon nation of nt, died in onnecticut college in er at Benen at Rute first repued in that ected. At ature chief e of federe., 1801, till From 1803 In 1807 m of office mpaired as lied at his was allied et integrity, n the trial m on every ne voted to

SMITH, WILLIAM LOUGHTON, LL. D., ambassador to Spain, died in South Carolina in 1812. He was elected in 1789 a member of congress from South Carolina, and with great ability supported the administrations of Washington and Adams. Ir. 1797 he was appointed minister to Portugal, and in 1800 to Spain; but the next year, on the accession of Mr. Jefferson, his functions ceased. He published an oration July 4, 1796; a comparative view of the constitutions of the States and of the U.S., 1797; a pamphlet against the pretensions of Mr. Jefferson to the presidency; essays signed Phocion. His speeches and letter to his constituents were republished, London, 1795.

SMITH, ISAAC, a judge of the supremé court of New Jersey, died in 1807, aged 67. He was graduated at the college in that State in 1755, and afterwards commenced the practice of physic. From the beginning of the troubles with Great Britain he was distinguished for his patriotic services in the cause of his country. In 1776 he commanded a regiment, and during the periods of gloom and dismay he was firm and persevering. He associated valor with discretion, the disciplined spirit of the soldier with the sagacity of the statesman. Soon after the termination of the struggle, he received his appointment as judge, and for eighteen years discharged the arduous duties of that station. After the present constitution of the U. S. was formed, he was a member of the house of representatives, and was esteemed by Washington and Adams. Endowed with fine talents, and having enjoyed a classical education, he united the character of a Christian, scholar, soldier, and gentleman. He died in hope of mercy through the Redeemer. - Portfolio, new series, I. 135, 136.

SMITII, SAMUEL STANHOPE, D. D., president of Princeton college, died Aug. 21, 1819, aged 69. He was the son of Robert Smith, D. D.; was born at Pequea, town of Salisbury, Lancaster county, Penn., March 16, 1750; and graduated in 1769 at Princeton, where he was afterwards two years a tutor. Being an eloquent and popular preacher in Virginia, Hampden Sidney eollege was instituted with the design that he should become its president. After being at the head of that college a few years, he was appointed in 1779 professor of moral philosophy at Princeton; and was succeeded in Virginia by his brother, John S. In the absence of Dr. Witherspoon as a member of congress, much of the care of the college devolved upon him; and after his death in 1794 he was elected his successor. In consequence of his infirmities he resigned his office in 1812. He was succeeded by Dr. Green. His wife was a daughter of Dr. Witherspoon; his daughter married J. M. Pintard, consul at Madeira. He published sionary in Natchez from 1816 to 1820, when he a sermon on the death of R. Stockton, 1781; an essay on the causes of the variety of the complexion and figure of the human species, 1788; in which he ascribed all the variety to climate, the state of society, and the manner of living; sermons, 8vo., 1801; lectures on the evidences of the Christian religion, 12mo., 1809; on the love of praise, 1810; a continuation of Ramsay's history of the U. S., from 1808 to 1817; lectures on moral and political philosophy; the principles of natural and revealed religion.

SMITH, JOHN, the second minister of Dighton, Mass., died in Kentucky, about 1815 or 1820, aged about 70 or 75. Born in Plainfield, Conn., he graduated at Princeton in 1770; was settled in 1772 as the colleague of N. Fisher; and was dismissed in Dec., 1801. The sermon at his ordination, by Levi Hart of Preston, was printed by S. Southwick, Newport. In 1802 he removed as a missionary to the neighborhood of Canandaigua, N. Y. In his liberality he gave a deed of six thousand acres of land to found a seminary of learning in C. Afterwards he was a missionary and settled on a farm in Athens township, Bloomfield, Lycoming co., Penn., where he remained till 1811 or 1812. He next removed to Kentucky, where his son Francis was a lawyer, at Shepherdsville, Nelson county; and there he acted for a time as a missionary. Francis removed to Monmouth, Ill., and died highly respected in 1838, aged 72, leaving a large family. Other sons were John, a lawyer in Washington; Lemuel. a farmer now living near Alton, Ill.; Henry, a merchant of Portland, Me., who died in 1853, and whose son is Rev. Dr. Henry B. Smith, now professor of theology in Union theological seminary, in the city of New York.

SMITH, GEORGE WILLIAM, governor of Virginia, was elected as successor of Mr. Monroe in 1811. Being one of the attendants at the theatre in Richmond in the evening of Dec. 26, 1811, when it took fire, he lost his life with Mr. Venable and seventy others.

SMITII, ISAAC, the first minister of Gilmanton, N. H., died in 1817, aged 72. Born in Sterling, Conn., he graduated at Princeton in 1770, and was settled Nov. 30, 1774. L. A. Spofford was his successor.

SMITH, EDWARD DARRELL, M. D., professor of chemistry and mineralogy in the college of So. Carolina, died near St. Louis, Missouri, Aug. 17, 1819. He translated Desault's surgical works, two vols., 8vo., 1814.

SMITH, DANIEL, died in Louisville, Ky., in 1822, aged 33. Born in Bennington, Vt., he graduated at Middlebury in 1810; studied theology at Andover; and went with Mills in an exploring tour to the southwest. He was a misremoved to L. He had intellect, and taste, and | in 1831, aged 65. He was born in Belchertown, piety, and was an excellent preacher. - Sprague's

SMITH, NATHANIEL, judge, died at Woodbury, Conn., March 9, 1822, aged 60. He was born Jan. 6, 1762, and with few advantages for education rose to distinction. He practised law in his native town. In 1705 he was a member of congress: from 1806 till 1819 he was a judge of the supreme court. He was learned in the law; his mind was acute and powerful; and he was respected for his integrity and piety.

SMITH, EBENEZER, a Baptist minister, died in Fredonia, N. Y., in 1824, aged 89. Two persons, who heard him preach his first sermon in 1753, heard him after seventy years preach his last in 1823, in a place five hundred miles distant from the place where they heard the first sermon, such is the tide of emigration in our country.

SMITH, JONATHAN, died at Hadley in 1829, aged 80. He graduated at Harvard in 1768, and was a preacher on Martha's Vineyard forty years, SMITH, ISAAC, died in Boston in 1829, aged 79; chaplain to the alms-house. He graduated at Harvard in 1767, and was tutor and librarian.

SMITH, NATHAN, M. D., professor in the medical schools of Dartmouth, Yale, and Bowdoin colleges, died at New Haven Jan. 26, 1829, aged 66. He was born in Rehoboth, Mass., Sept. 30. 1762. As his parents removed to Chester, Vt., he was brought up as a farmer at the foot of the Green Mountains. At the age of twenty-four he began the study of physic. After practising a few years at Cornish he projected a medical institution at Dartmouth college. Being chosen a professor, he went to Europe in 1796 for his improvement in science. In 1798 the school was opened; for twelve years he lectured on the various branches usually taught; in 1810 Dr. Cyrus Perkins was appointed professor of anatomy. In 1813 he was chosen professor of the theory and practice of physic and surgery at Yale college, and removed from Hanover to New Haven. In 1821 he was the first lecturer in the medical school of Maine at Bowdoin college, and he lectured there for five years. His son, Nathan Ryno Smith, is a distinguished physician and professor at Baltimore. Dr. S. was eminent both as a physician and surgeon, and had practiced more extensively in New England than any other man. His manners were pleasing and interesting; in his friendships he was steady; and he was beloved by his numerous pupils. His works, entitled medical and surgical memoirs, were published, 8vo., 1831. - Williams' Med. Biog.

SMITH, Guy, a minister, died in Wilkes county, Geo., Aug., 1830, aged 73.

SMITH, JOHN, D. D., professor of theology

Mass., in 1766; graduated at Dartmouth college in 1794; and, having studied theology with Dr. Emmons, was ordained at Salem, N. H., in 1797. After twenty years he was dismissed and settled at Wenham, Mass. In 1810 he succeeded A. Wines as professor of theology at Bangor, where he died in Christian peace. His successor was Rev. Mr. Pond. He published a treatise on baptism; two fast sermons; on the peace, 1815; to the senior class, 1822; to missionary society, 1830; at ordination of S. H. Peckham. -Sprague's Annals.

SMITH, JOHN M., professor of languages in the Wesleyan college in Middletown, Conn., died in 1832, aged 37. He was a Methodist minister.

SMITH, Peter Thacher, died in Oct., 1826, aged 95. The son of Rev. Thomas, he gradnated at Harvard in 1753; was ordained at Windham, N. II., in 1762; and dismissed in 1790.

SMITH, PRESERVED, minister of Rowe, died in 1834, aged 75. Born in Ashfield, he graduated at Brown in 1786, and was pastor from 1787 to 1832, excepting the interval between 1804 and 1812, in which time he was settled in Mendon. He published masonic sermon, 1798; farewell sermon, 1804.

aı

tu

8O

CŁ

in ia olu

ley

109

Su

wh

old

801 die

Pet

coll

in crn

ins

He

a s

ກກຕ່ din

old

8011 ary

age

pin

miss

not die.

non

8

SMITH, NATHAN, a senator, brother of Judge Nathaniel, died suddenly at Washington, Dec. 6. 1835, aged 68. He was born in Woodbury, Conn., in 1770. He commenced the practice of law in New Haven, where he made his home till his death. None understood law better than he: such was his regard for the right, that he would not undertake a cause obviously unjust. He was U. S. attorney for Connecticut; in 1833 he was elected to the Senate. He was of the democratic party.

SMITH, CHARLES, LL. D., judge, died at Philadelphia March 18, 1836, at an advanced age. He arranged and published the laws of Pennsylvania.

SMITH, SARAH LANMAN, the wife of the missionary to Syria, Dr. Eli Smith, died at Boujah, a village near Smyrna, Sept. 30, 1836, aged 34. She had been three years in the cast. She was the daughter of Deacon Jabez Huntington of Norwich, Conn. Her mother, an excellent Christian, had the name of Lanman. Born in 1802, she became early pious. In 1830 and 1831 she and Sarah Breed established and conducted a Sabbath school among the Mohegan Indians, the remnants of the tribe of Samson Occom, at Mohegan or Montville, five miles distant. In 1833 she married Rev. Eli Smith, and sailed from Boston in September. She arrived at Malta in November and at Alexandria in December. Her brief but useful missionary labors were chiefly at Beirut. In 1836, in ill health, on a voyage to in the theological seminary at Bangor, Me., died Smyrna, she was wrecked on the coast of Asia Minor, but escaped in a boat. Her private jourrtown, nals were lost. She survived only a few weeks. h col-She died at the house of Mr. Adger, and was y with buried in the cemetery of Boujah, a village four H., in or five miles from Smyrna. Just before her ed and death she said, "Tell my friends, I would not for ceeded all the world lay my remains anywhere but here, langor, on missionary ground." Her last words were, ccessor "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit!" An interestitise on , 1815 ; ing memoir of her life was published by Dr. E. W. Hooker, in 1839. society, ham. -

SMITH, THOMAS G., a minister in the Dutch Reformed church, died at Tarrytown, N. Y., April

10, 1837, aged 79.

SMITH, PETER, judge of Madison county, died at Schenectady of apoplexy in 1837. He was enterprising and wealthy; the father of Gerrit Smith.

SMITH, SAMUEL, general, died at Baltimore April 25, 1839, aged 86. He was a merchant, and held various public offices. He was in the house or senate from 1703 to 1833. He had returned from a ride, and was found dead on the sofa. He had been mayor of the city; and was a soldier of the Revolution.

SMITH, ISAAC, Dr., an eminent physician of Chatham, Conn., died in Christian faith and hope in 1839, aged 67. - Williams' Med. Biog.

SMITH, JOHN, major, died at Hadley, Mass., in 1840, aged 88. He was a patriot of the Revolution, an officer of the Mass. line.

SMITH, SIBYL WORTHINGTON, died in Hadley, Mass., perhaps about 1830 or 1840, aged 102. She was the widow of Deacon Elijah Smith of Belchertown, who died about 1769, when his son, Rev. Ethan S., was seven years old. Deacon Jacob Smith of Hadley was her

SMITH, JEREMIAH, LL. D., governor of N. H., died in 1842, aged about 62. He was born at l'eterborough, N. II., and graduated at Rutgers' college, N. J., in 1790. He was a representative in congress from 1791 to 1797. He was governor in 1809, and was for several years chief justice of the superior court, residing at Exeter. He died at Dover. He was highly respected as a statesman and jurist, as a lawyer and judge; and was of a good literary taste. His extraordinary mental powers were unimpaired in his old age. His life was written by J. II. Morrison, 1845.

SMITH, MARIA WARD, wife of the missionary, Eli Smith, died at Beirut May 27, 1842, aged 23. She was the daughter of Moses Chapin of Rochester, N. Y., and embarked on her mission a year before death. She said, she was not sorry she had come to Syria, though but to die. On her sick bed she received a letter, an-had earnestly prayed.

SMITH, ROBERT, died at Baltimore Nov. 26. 16:2, aged 85. He was a volunteer soldier in the Revolutionary war; appointed by Jefferson secretary of the navy, and by Madison secretary of State, in which office he continued one year.

SMITH, JOSEPH, the founder of the Mormons, died June 27, 1814. He was born in Vermont in 1805: in his boyhood his parents removed to Palmyra, N. Y. After the age of twenty he began his imposture. He pretended to have received golden plates from an angel: these, with the help of O. Cowdery, he says he translated, and thus made the back of Mormon. He lived in Kirtland, Ohio; and thence removed to Illinois. His book was made up of a manuscript story of Mr. Spaulding, written in 1809, which fell into Smith's hands. About 1843 he had as many as ten thousand followers. Such is the amazing madness of men. In consequence of a dispute of two rival newspapers, Joseph was cast into prison, and a mob murdered him and his brother Hiram, June 27, 1844. The next prophet was Brigham Young, by whom the Mormons were removed to Utah, the central wilderness of the west, where it was thought he had convened 100,000 followers and slaves in 1855. Young is a shameless impostor. He has seventy young women enslaved as his wives; and his disciples choose as many wives as they can feed. Doubtless, if common sense is not entirely lost in these women, they will make a revolt and overthrow the atrocious tyranny which keeps them as prostitutes.

SMITH, ELI, died in Northford, formerly a part of Branford, Conn., July 7, 1845, aged 79; a humble, devoted Christian. He could count twenty-five persons, who became converts, while members of his family. His son, Rev. Dr. Eli Smith, the missionary in Syria, visited him in his sickness.

SMITH, SAMUEL H., died at Washington Nov. 1, 1845, aged 73. He edited a paper, the New World, in Philadelphia in 1796, and at Washington, when it became the seat of government, he established the National Intelligencer, which he edited till 1810. He was a friend of Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe.

SMITII, OLIVER, died at Hatfield Dec. 22, 1845, aged 80; leaving an estate of half a million of dollars, of which 20,000 dollars was for the establishment of an agricultural school in Northampton, and 360,000 dollars to eight towns for orphan and poor children, and 10,000 dollars to the colonization society.

SMITH, JOHN COTTON, LL. D., governor of Connecticut, died at Sharon Dec. 7, 1845, aged 80. He was born in Sharon Feb. 12, 1765. Graduating at Yale in 1783, he settled in his nanouncing the conversion of brothers for whom she | tive town as a lawyer. For several terms he was a member of congress, but resigned in 1806. In n., died ninister. t., 1826, e gradt Wind-790. we, died ages in e graduom 1787 1804 and Mendon. farewell of Judge

n, Dec. 6, ry, Conn., of law in ne till his than he: he would He was 33 he was he demo-died at advanced e laws of of the mis-

Boujah, a

aged 34.

She was tington of lent Chrisn in 1802, 1831 she onducted a ndians, the om, at Mo-In 1833 I from Bosalta in No-aber. Her e chiefly at voyage to

st of Asia

1809 he was a judge of the supreme court, and | and Hanover, Mass. He was descended from governor from 1813 to 1817. He was also president of the American board of commissioners, and of the American bible society. He was tall and slender, and graceful; of dignified manners, yet courteous and persuasive. At this period some may be glad to learn what was his dress. He wore breeches, black silk stockings and shoebuckles; his hair powdered, turned back, with a queue, and a friz over his ears. His boots, when he appeared in them, were white-topped. He was a zealous federalist in his political principles; and an exemplary Christian professor, a man of piety and benevolence. - Goodrich's Recollec-

SMITH, SUSAN, widow of Prof. John Smith, died at Hanover Dec. 20, 1845, aged 82. She was his second wife, the daughter of Col. David Mason of Boston and Springfield. She wrote a memoir of her husband. She had a strong and well-furnished mind, and was a woman of benevolence and earnest piety and great usefulness.

SMITH, DANIEL, minister of Stamford, Conn., died in 1846, aged 78. Born in New Canaan, he graduated at Yale in 1791, and was ordained in lius, N. Y., he graduated at Yale college in 1837. 1793.

SMITH, AMASA, a minister in Maine, died at Cumberland in 1847, aged 91. One minister, still older, in Maine, Mr. Sawyer, survived him, and now lives, 1857, aged 101. He was born in Belchertown, Mass., the brother of Rev. Eli S. He was first settled at Turner, then in Cumberland, in 1806, remaining fourteen years; then was elsewhere a preacher.

SMITH, ELI, minister of Hollis, N. II., died in 1847, aged 86. Born in Belchertown, he graduated at Brown university in 1792, and was pastor from 1793 to 1830.

SMITII, JOSEPH, died at Mercer, Penn., July 31, 1849, aged 84. Born in the county of Derry, Ireland, in 1765, at the age of nine his parents brought him to this country. His ancestors were pious, and he early became pious. His trade was that of a millwright. He settled at M. in 1800, and was an elder of the new-formed church : and was an eminent Christian: a son was a minister. A long account of him by Dr. W. S. Plumer is in the N. Y. Observer March 16, 1850. He became a Hebrew scholar: the bible was his constant companion.

SMITH, ETHAN, minister of Hopkinton, N. II., a descendant of Rev. Henry S., of Wethersfield, died Aug. 29, 1849, aged 86. He died at the house of his son-in-law, Rev. W. H. Sanford, of Boylston. He was born in Belchertown Dec. 19, 1762, the son of Deacon Elijah; graduated at Dartmouth in 1790; was a minister at Haverhill, N. H., nine years, and then from March 12, 1800, for eighteen years at Hopkinton, N. H. He also lived some years at Hebron, N. Y., Poultney, Vt., Rev. E. Huit. His mother died at Hadley aged 102. His wife was a daughter of Rev. D. Sanford. On the Sabbath before his last illness he preached with animation. His last words were, "Joy and peace in believing." He published a dissertation on the prophecies; view of the Trinity, in answer to N. Worcester; lectures on baptism; key to the figurative language of the bible; memoirs of Mrs. Bailey; key to the Revelation; prophetical catechism; a tract to prove the Indians to be descendants of the ten tribes; two sermons on episcopacy; farewell sermon; one at Hopkinton; two sermons on vain excuses of man; on the moral perfections of God; on the daughter of Zion; on the death of Mrs. Harris; at the ordinations of S. Martindale and II. Smith. - Sprague's Annals.

SMITH, WATERS, M. D., died in Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 19, 1850. He was surgeon of the U. S. naval hospital, one of the oldest and mest skilful surgeons in the navy.

SMITH, AZARIAH, M. D., missionary at Aintab, died June 3, 1851, aged 34. Born at Manand studied both physic and theology. He was ordeined in 1842, and embarked for Western Asia in November. He married in 1848; his wife, Corinth I. Smith, survived him. He was a man of skill as a physician, of eminent piety, of unwearied diligence, self-denying, and liberal, entirely consecrated to his work.

SMITH, DANIEL, died in Kingston, N. Y., in June, 1852, aged about 45; an eminent Methodist minister, formerly in New York city. He was the author of several excellent books for youth and Sunday school libraries.

SMITH, JOHN R., died at Salem, N. C., Dec. 16, 1852, aged 68. As a preacher in the United Brethren's church he spent years among the Indians in Canada and the Cherokees.

SMITH, Junius, died in Astoria, N. Y., Jan. 23, 1853, aged 72. Born in Plymouth, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1802: for many years he lived in London as a merchant. He devoted much of his life to two objects, steam navigation and the introduction of the tea plant into this country. He cultivated it at Greenville, S. C. He published oration, July 4, 1804.

SMITH, THEOPHILUS, minister of New Canaan, died Aug. 29, 1853, aged 53. He graduated at Yale in 1824, and was a scholar, skilled in biblical literature, a man of sound judgment, a diligent preacher and faithful pastor.

SMITH, WILLIAM MOORE, published peems written in Penn., 1785. His son, Richard P. Smith, died near Philadelphia in 1854. He published novels, stories, and plays. - Cycl. of Amer.

SMITH, S. LISLE, one of the most brilliant

th F th яt. hε

to

th

bo

Co

I

tl

e tl

d

30

of

No be gr yea ear de 18: of Dv euj

Pe

sta

als

ter in Ιn ton of yea gav die and

ten

Rol

In typ ond Cha few rut. com

184 Ma

orators of the west, died at Chicago July 30,

SMITH, JONATHAN, Baptist minister at Chieopee, died at Hartford Jan. 2, 1855, aged 94. Born in Norton, he was a Revolutionary soldier three years: he was present when the British evacuated Boston. He then became a Baptist minister and labored seventy years in preaching the gospel. His residence was Chicopee.

SMITH, ROBERT, an Episcopal missionary, died at Cavalia, West Africa, May 25, 1855, aged He was a native of Tennessee, a graduate of Yale, and a theological student of Alexandria.

SMITH, JACOB J., died at Cleves, O., Dec.

12, 1855, aged 101.

SMITII, WORTHINGTON, D. D., president of the university of Vermont, died at St. Albans Feb. 13, 1856, aged 62. He was born in Hadley, the son of Deacon Seth Smith. He graduated at Williams college. As a minister and as the head of the college he was highly respected.

SMITH, ELI, D. D., the eminent missionary to Syria, died at Beirut, in Syria, of a cancer of the stomach, Jan. 11, 1857, aged 55. He was born in 1801, the son of Eli Smith of Branford, Conn., Northford society, about ten miles from New Haven; a village remarkable for the number it has furnished of educated youth. He graduated at Yale collego in 1823, and at Andover theological seminary in 1826. In the same year he embarked as a missionary of the American board for Malta; went to Cairo; crossed the desert to Syria in Feb., 1827; was at Beirut till 1828, when he returned to Malta and had care of the press. In 1830 and 1831 he and Dr. Dwight made an exploring tour in Armenia, occupying almost a year. They were at Tebreez in Persia in Jan., 1831. They returned to Constantinople in May; to Molca in July. He made also two exploring tours with Dr. Robinson. After an absence of six years he visited this country in 1832, and published his researches in Armenia. In 1833 he married Miss Sarah Lanman Huntington, the daughter of Deacon Jabez Huntington of Norwich, Cona., and sailed for Malta in that year. He soon settled down at Beirut. She gave him important aid in his labors; but she died in 1836 at Boujah, a village near Smyrna, and there was buried. Her memoir was written by Dr. Hooker. In 1838 he and Professor Robinson made an exploring tour in the east. In 1839 he superintended the casting of Arabic types in Leipsic. Dr. Smith married for his second wife Miss Chapin, the daughter of General Chapin of Rochester, N. Y.; but she, too, after a few years was taken away and was buried at Beirut. In the course of time he sought another companion in America, and was married in Oct., 1846, to Miss Hetty S. Butler of Northampton, Mass., the daughter of Mr. Daniel Butler; and work of giving the whole Word of God to six she now is left a desolate widow at her beautiful and late happy abode at Beirut on the shore of the Mediterranean. He left a son by his second wife and four children by his last, two sons and two daughters. From the beginning of his missionary life it was the great object of Dr. Smith to make himself skilled in the Arabic language, so as to be able to translate into it, as now spoken in the east, God's holy book; and in his work he had made very considerable progress, having it is believed translated the Pentateuch and New Testament; the Psalms and the lesser Prophets; and Isaiah. It must be for his future biographer to describe the variety and extent of his efforts in accomplishing the object dear to the missionary of the cross, - that of communicating to the misguided and uninstructed the knowledge of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Mediator between God and man, the Saviour of all them that believe. The memorable fact that this son of America sleeps in distant Syria, at the foot of Mount Lebanon, whither he went from the new world to earry back the triumphs of the cross to the old world, to Syria, and Egypt, and Persia, and to gladden Jerusalem with the doctrine of redemption, - this fact compels the remark, that the glory of this zealous missionary casts contempt on the fame of Alexander, the great warrior; for this mighty conqueror spread only dismay and terror, desolution and death over the wide east; but the missionary sought to spread over the same region the beams of eternal truth, the principles of virtue, the elements of happiness, the hopes of bliss beyond the grave, and the sure possession of ineffable joy, of immortal glory. He was buried the day after his death, the services being performed in the American chapel, the consuls of the Protestant nations being present, and a crowded congregation of afflicted natives. Rev. Mr. Calhoun made an address in English, and Rev. Mr. Ford in Ara-His body was then placed in its grave in the ne shboring Protestant burying-ground, under the shade of the cypress, next to the grave of his second wife, near the graves of the eminent missionaries, Pliny Fisk and George B. Whiting. Will not theirs be the resurrection of the just? As to some of the labors of Dr. Smith, in superintending the casting of Arabic types in Germany, he made an improvement in the form of the letters, rendering them more distinct and agreeable, nearer to the style of writing than to the old characters, to the great satisfaction of the natives and of the learned in Europe. In his great labor of translating he had the assistance of Professor Bistany and of other natives; and thus he toiled incessantly for eight years. Happily he had finished the New Testament and other parts of the Bible; it must be for another to complete the avigation into this lle, S. C. New Cae gradur, skilled frem

aged

San-

ess he were,

shed a

Trin-

n bap-

of the

Reve-

prove tribes;

n; one

ises of

on the

Harris;

nd II.

ooklyn,

ı of the nd most

at Ain-

at Man-

in 1837.

He was

Western

348; his

Ie was a

piety, of

eral, en-

, N. Y.,

nt Meth-

ity. He ooks for

C., Dec.

e United

the In-

Y., Jan.

Conn., he

years he devoted udgment, d poems chard P. He pub-of Amer. t brilliant

millions of the human family. A friend at Bel- | was also the first pastor of the third church from rut wrote a few days after his death a letter concerning him, in which he said: "The precision and logical order of his mind were its prominent features. He had not the vehemence and warmth which enter into high oratory; while there was a seriousness, a force of argument, a tenderness, and apparent conscientionsness, whose influence was far better and more enduring. His field of knowledge was wide, his scholarship ripe, and his modesty equal to his attainments. But his moral qualities were his chiefest glory. He had subjected his whole nature to reason, and his reason to the teachings of God. The study of that blessed book, which was constantly before him, brought him into contact with the pure and the heavenly, and seemed to bathe his spirit with holy influences. A scholar, and largely nequainted with the world, he was still a very child in simplicity, loving all, laboring for all, and not ashamed of the most humble service. His faith in the Divine goodness seemed never to forsake With collectedness and screnity he met the darkest adversities in life, and smiled as he advanced to the dominions of death. When near his end he said that he felt that he was a great sinner, but there was a greater Saviour; that he had no righteousness of his own, and relied entirely on the blood of Christ; that for aught he knew he had more friends in heaven than remaining on the earth, and soon he should be with them and all the holy in the presence of God. I heard the grave-clods fall upon the coffin of that accomplished scholar and meck, guileless, devoted Christian; and never did they sound more harshly. And yet, truly interpreted, they were the notes of triumph, such only as the dead can give, when they pass into the regions of immortality: 'O death! where is thy sting? O grave! where is thy victory?'" He published researches in Armenia, 2 vols., 1832; missionary sermons and addresses, 1834. - Jour. Commerce, Feb. 27.

SNELLING, WILLIAM, an early physician of Newbury, Mass., came from Devon, England, and removed to Boston in 1654, and there died.

SNEYD, SAMUEL S., a Methodist minister, - died at Philadelphia in 1840, aged 47.

SNIDER, ANDREW, died at Intercourse, Lancaster county, Pa., Nov. 1, 1845, aged 112; a soldier of the Revolution.

SNODGRASS, JAMES, died in 1846, aged 82; minister of West Hanover, Penn., father of Rev. S. of New York.

NOW, JOSEPH, minister of Providence, R. I., died April 10, 1803, aged 89. He was the son of Joseph, and was born in P. and settled in 1743. Among his successors were J. Wilson, Cyrus Ma- Island. After being a journeyman printer he son, Mark Tucker in the second church, of which established and edited the Albany Register, a he was the first pastor, from 1743 to 1793. He leading democratic paper; but, quarreling with 1703, in which T. Williams and W. Preston were

SNOW, ELISHA, a Baptist minister, died in Thomaston, Me., in 1832, aged 92.

SNOWDEN, SAMUEL FINLEY, died in Brownville, N. Y., May 21, 1845, aged 77. Born at Philadelphia, son of Isaac S., whose seven sons were educated at Princeton, he was pastor in Princeton, N. J.; then in New Hartford, N. Y.; then of Sackett's Harbor.

SNYDER, SIMON, governor of Peansylvania, died in Nov., 1819. He succeeded Gov. McKean SOMERBY, ANTHONY, an early schoolmaster of Newbury, Mass., died in 1086, aged 76. He came from Lincolnshire, England, in 1639.

SOMMER, LUTHER, minister of Scoharic, N. Y., died after Sept., 1786, then aged 76; in that month he suddenly recovered his sight after being blind seventeen years. He awaked in the morning, and looked out and saw distinctly; and went to church without his usual guide.

SOUTHALL, DANIEL, a Methodist minister. died at Washington, Dist. Col., Oct. 15, 1830, aged 67.

SOUTHARD, SAMUEL L., governor of New Jersey, died June 26, 1842, aged 55. He was born June 9, 1787, at Baskenridge, and graduated at Princeton in 1804. In 1815 he became a judge of the supreme court. He was a senator of the United States in 1823, and in the same year secretary of the navy: attorney-general of New Jersey in 1829, governor in 1832, and again a senator in 1833 and 1838. Of the senate he was the president in 1841. His wife was a Miss Harrow. He was distinguished for talents and eloquence, and for his private virtues. He published reports in the supreme court of New Jersey, 1819; an eulogy on Chief Justice Ewing, 1832.

SOUTHMAYD, JOHN, minister of Waterbury, Conn., died in 1755, aged about 80. He graduated at Harvard in 1697, and was pastor from 1705 to 1735. J. Peck was the first minister from 1669 to 1699.

SOUTHMAYD, DANIEL S., first minister of the Trinitarian church in Concord, Mass., died in 1837, aged 35. Born in Castleton, Vt., he graduated at Middlebury college in 1822, and was settled in 1827, and resigned in 1832, and was succeeded by J. Wilder. He then was an editor in Lowell and in New York. He died in Texas. He published sermon on the advancement of gospel truth, 1830.

SOUTHWICK, Solomon, died at Albany in 1839, aged about 65. He was a native of Rhode his party, it died in 1817. He established other papers, the Christian Visitant, and the Plough lloy; in 1827 he established an anti-masonic paper. He was even a candidate for governor: his thirty thousand votes gave Mr. Van Huren a plurality over Smith Thompson. He experienced reverses and misfortunes, and his political dreams vanished. From an Infidel becoming a Christian, he connected himself with the Methodist church. For years he was a public lecturer on temperance, biblical literature, and self-education. thus obtaining a precarious support.

SOUTHWORTH, THOMAS, a younger brother of Constant S., was born in 1616 and died Dec. 8. 1669, aged 53. He was selected to succeed Elder Brewster; but his father-in-law, Gov. Bradford, wished him to enter upon civil affairs. He was a commissioner of the United Colonies from 1659 for several years, and governor in 1664 of the colony's territory in Maine, and was highly esteemed for his good judgment and piety. married his cousin, Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. John Rayner; and his only child, Eliza, married Joseph, son of the pilgrim John Howland, Mrs. Rayner then was the sister of Mrs. Bradford, as was also the wife of Dr. Samuel Fuller, and the wife of William Wright of Plymouth. name was Carpenter: their unmarried sister. Mary Carpenter, a godly woman, died at Plymouth March 19, 1720, aged 90. It appears also that J. Cooper of Scituate in 1634 called Olive Bradford his sister; so that probably his wife was another sister of the Curpenter family.

SOUTHWORTH, CONSTANT, died at Duxbury in 1687, aged about 72. He was born in England, the son of Alice S., who married Gov. Bradford when he was about eight years old. He came over in 1628 when he was thirteen years old. The Plymonth company paid ten pounds for his passage, and for diet eleven weeks at one shilling and eight pence per week. His father's name is not known; but it was probably Edward. Southworth was a Basset-Lowe family in England. There was an Edward in 1614, the son of Robert, the sen of Richard, the son of Aymond. There was also a Thomas at Clarkborough and a William at Heyton. Rebert about 1604 consorted with the Puritans. Constant's oldest and youngest sens were called Edward and William. He married Elizabeth, the daughter of William Collier, and sustained various offices, civil and military. In Philip's war he was commissarygeneral and accompanied the army. Captain B. Church married his daughter Alice. Two of his sons were with Church in his expeditions. He left three sons, Edward, Nathaniel, and William. The first occupied the homestead; the sons of the two last lived in Tiverton. In his estate of 360 pounds was included an Indian boy at 10 pounds. His daughter Mercy married Samuel ordained in 1736.

Freeman; Mary married Daniel Alden. Elizabeth had bequeathed to her two beds and furniture, "provided she do not marry William Fobbes; but if she do, then to have five shillings," Like most other young ladies, she chose to decide the question of a husband for herself. She accepted the five shillings. Mr. Fobes lived in Duxbury and Little Compton: his son John died in Bridgewater in 1661. Mr. S.'s son Edward had a son Thomas, whose son Jedidiah was a deacon of the church in North Yarmouth, Me. ; and his son, Deacon John, died in 1814, aged 81. From the daughters of this family there were many descendants.

SPAIGHT, RICHARD D., governor of N. C., a miserable, unprincipled duellist, died as a fool dieth, in 1802. On account of some insult given or received in a political dispute, he set himself up as a mark to be shot at by John Stanley, and was killed. Stanley was convicted and sentenced to death for murder, but obtained a pardon.

SPALDING, Samson, the first minister of Tewksbury, Mass., died in 1796, aged 86; in the sixtieth year of his ministry. He graduated at Harvard in 1732, and was settled in 1737. T. T. Barton was settled in 1792; J. Coggin in 1806.

SPALDING, LYMAN, M. D., died at Portsmouth Oct. 31, 1821, aged 46. His death was eaused by a wound in the head. He was born in Cornish, N. H., and graduated at Harvard in 1797. He settled at Portsmouth. In 1812, being appointed president of the college of physicians at Fairfield, N. Y., and professor of anatomy and surgery, he removed to the city of New York. He was a skilful physician and surgeon. With him originated the plan of a pharmacoparia of U. S. He published a nomenclature of chemistry, 1799; inaugural address, 1813; history of scutellaria; reflections on yellow fever, 1819. — Thacher's Med. Biog.

SPALDING, Joshua, minister in Salem, Mass., died at Newburg, or South-East, N. Y., in 1825, aged 65. About 1780, at the age of twenty, he was settled over the Tabernacle church in S., where he continued till 1802; then for three years he was in New Jersey. Returning to Salem, ho preached in the Branch church till 1813, when he removed to South-East in New York. For four years he lingered under an attack of the palsy. For forty years he was a zealous, devoted minister. He published a sermon at the execution of Coombs, 1787; defence, 1802; at opening of the Branch church; the Lord's songs, 1805; to a charitable society, 1808.

SPARHAWK, JOHN, minister of Bristol, R. I., died in 1718, aged 46. He graduated at Harvard in 1689, and was ordained 1695. His son was the minister of Salem, Mass., and died in 1755, aged 41. A graduate of Harvard in 1731, he was Walpole, N. H., Feb. 12, 1817, aged 90. Born in Brighton, he was graduated at Harvard in 1777.

SPARLING, HULDAIL, Mrs., died at Oswego in March or April, 1852, aged 110. She was born at Walpack, N. J., and was wounded by the Indians in the old French war.

SPAULDING, JOSIAH, minister of Buckland, Mass., died in 1823, aged 72. He graduated at Yale in 1778; was first the minister of Plainfield, Conn., and was installed at II. in 1794. He published a sermon on inability, 1782; Universalism confounds and destroys itself, 1805.

SPAULDING, THADDEUS, a patriot of the Revolution, and an eminent Christian, died in Townsend Feb. 10, 1836, aged 78: his wife, Olive Blood, died Feb. 10, aged 70. His son, Dr. Thaddeus Spaulding, died at South Reading in 1844, aged 52; a good physician, and useful civilian, and respected Christian. - Thacher.

SPAULDING, EPHRAIM, missionary at the Sandwich Islands, died in Westborough June 28, 1840. Horn in Ludlow, Vt., he graduated at Middlebury ln 1828. From 1831, for several years, he was a missionary; but a bleeding at his lungs compelled his return. - Anderson's Serm.

SPEECE, CONRAD, D. D., died in Staunton, Va., in 1836; a Presbyterian minister. His degree was given by Princeton in 1820.

SPENCE, JOHN, M. D., died in Dumfries, Va., in 1829, aged 63; a native of Scotland. He zealously promoted the vaccine inoculation; he wrote for the journals. - Williams' Med. Biog.

SPENCER, JOSEPH, a surgeon, died in the early part of this century at Vienna, Wood county, Va., leaving six sons and five daughters, He was the son of Gen. Spencer; was a surgeon in the army of the Revolution; and in 1794 emigrated from New York to Ohio, and, with Col. Abner Lord, purchased a tract of land, lying five miles on the river at Marietta. His daughters married Gen. Cass of Detroit, Gen. Hunt of Maumee, Rev. Matthew Wallace of Indiana. Another was Mrs. Martha Brainerd Wilson, who died at Marietta in 1852, aged 69, and who was born at Lebanon, Conn.

SPENCER, ELIIIU, D. D., minister of Elizabethtown and Trenton, N. J., died in 1784. He was a graduate of Harvard in 1746. A native of East Haddam, he was a descendant of Jared, who lived in Cambridge in 1634, then in Lynn, Hartford, and Haddam, where he died in 1685. His daughter married Jonathan D. Sergeant, who died in 1793, leaving ten children, of whom the eminent John Sergeant was one.

SPENCER, Joseph, major-general in the army of the Revolution, died in 1789, aged 75. He received this appointment in Aug., 1776; he had been previously a brigadier, and in the war of SPARHAWK, George, a physician, died at | was with the army in the expedition to Rhode Island and in the retreat in 1778. On his resignation he was chosen a member of congress. He died at East Haddam, the place of his birth. His father was Isaac; his wife was Martha, the sister of David Brainerd. His brother, Elihu S., D. D., successively minister of Jamaica, L. I., and of Trenton, N. J., died Dec. 27, 1784. His nephew, Oliver S., son of Capt. Samuel S., married a daughter of Robert Ogden; commanded a regiment in the battle of Princeton; and after the war was judge of probate in Ohio, where he died Jan. 22, 1811.

SPENCER, SAMUEL, LL. D., judge of the supreme court of N. C., died in 1793, aged about 54. He graduated at Princeton in 1759.

SPENCER, JACOB, died in Washington, N. J., Oct. 13, 1830, aged nearly 100. He had seven wives, and left one child.

SPENCER, AMBROSE, chief justice, a descendant of William S., of Cambridge and Hartford at their settlement, died at Lyons, N. J., March 13, 1848, aged 82. He was born in Salisbury, Conn. His father, Philip, a mechanic and farmer, educated his two sons in Yale and Harvard; at Harvard they graduated in 1783. He studied law in part with J. Cunfield of Sharon, whose daughter, Laura, he married, and settled in Hudson. He was attorney-general in 1802, and a judge of the supreme court in 1819. A federalist at first, he early joined the republicans and was the warm friend of De Witt Clinton, two of whose sisters he married for his second and third wives. In 1823 he retired from the bench and resumed the practice of the law. From the neighborhood of Albany he removed to Lyons in 1839, there living in his calm old age, yet presiding at the whig national convention at Baltimore in 1844, which nominated Clay and Frelinghuysen for president and vice-president.

SPENCER, WILLIAM A., captain in the navy, brother of the preceding, died in New York March 3, 1854, aged 61. He fought in the battle of lake Champlain under Mellonough. He married two daughters of Peter Lorillard of N. Y.

SPENCER, ICHABOD SMITH, D. D., minister in Brooklyn, died Nov. 23, 1854, aged 57. He was born in Rupert, Vermont, Feb. 23, 1797, and studied at Salem academy, N. Y. He graduated at Union college in 1822. While teaching school at Schenectady and Canandaigua, he studied theology. He was first settled in the ministry at Northampton, Sept. 11, 1828, as colleague with Mr. Williams, and toiled there with great success between three and four years, the additions to the church being two hundred. He was dismissed March 12, 1832, and became the first pastor of the second Presbyterian church in Brooklyn, where he remained till his death. At his funeral 1758 had served as a major and colonel. He Dr. Spring preached the sermon; the bearers and ill f wee ney "]H peac min wor sket by J 185 S N. 1 of th

Barr

S. of

wer

Cor

SI S., d 1855 from and s andai He v offlee utes He w He be Van l SP was health pursu Bingl He w went introd gram SP much Aug.

Sunda merch cillor. all th ners. For th the c a mon sons, Thack SPO his no gradu Dr. D ship-o under hode CHIE-He irth. ı, the m S., L. I., His marded a after re he f the about

N. J., seven

seendford at ch 13, Coun. r, edut Harlaw in ughter, 1. 11e of the irst, he e warm sisters es. In ed the he whig , which resident ie navy, k March attle of married rood of

e living

minister 57. He 797, and aduated g school ied thenistry at rue with success tions to ismissed astor of rooklyn, s funeral bearers

were ministers with scarfs, of the Reformed Dutch, settled in Boston, where he ultrained a good Congregational, Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal, and Presbyterian denominations. He had been ill for two years; his sufferings for the last three weeks were great. He had a disease of the kidneys and ulceration of the bladder. When asked, "Is it peace with you?" he replied, "It is all peace." He was a faithful and very successful minister, giving himself wholly to his proper work. He published two volumes of pastoral sketches, and various single sermons. His sermons, with a sketch of his life, were published by J. M. Sherwood, with a portrait, in 2 vols., 1855.

SPENCER, ELIPITALET M., minister of Carroll, N. Y., died March 26, 1855, aged 68, a member of the Otsego Presbytery. He was born in Great Barrington, Mass., and was a brother of Joshua

S. of Utica.

SPENCER, JOHN C., son of Judge Ambrose S., died of the consumption at Albany, May 17, 1855, aged 67. He was a member of congress from Ontario in 1816; secretary of war in 1841-4; and secretary of the treasury. He lived in Canandaigua till 1845, when he removed to Albany. He was a successful lawyer, and held various offices in public life. By his revision of the statutes of New York he gained high reputation. He was a man of intellect and intense energy. He belonged to the anti-masonic party, when Mr. Van Buren was governor.

SPENCER, GEORGE, died at Clinton, Iowa, Aug. 20, 1856, aged 60. He lived in Utien, and was for years principal of the academy; but ill health compelled him to abandon his literary pursuits. He was secretary of the railroad to Binghamton; and he invented a car ventilator. He was serene and resigned in suffering. He went to Iowa for his health. He published an introduction to Latin, and an elaborate English grammar.

SPOONER, EPHRAIM, deacon, a venerable, much esteemed citizen of Plymouth, Mass., died Sunday, March 22, 1818, aged 82. He was a merchant and a judge, a representative and councillor. He was most courteous, and he performed all the acts of kindness promised by his manners. In the Revolution he was a zealous patriot. For thirty-four years he was a faithful deacon of the church. His wife, Elizabeth Shurtleff, died a month before him; he departed in peace. His sons, James and Ebenezer, survived him. -Thacher's Plymouth.

SPOONER, WILLIAM, M. D., died in Boston, his native town, in 1836, aged nearly 76. He graduated at Harvard in 1778. He studied with Dr. Danforth, and then served as a surgeon in a ship-of-war. He afterwards studied at Edinburgh share of medical practice. He was benevulent and public-spirited, and in his manners attable and courteous. His eldest son, William Jones S., a lawyer of Hoston, died in 1821; the author of a phi beta kappa oration, whose memoir is in the hist, coll., vol. X .- Williams' Med. Biog.

SPOTSO, DANIEL, was an Indian teacher at Nantucket in 1698, There were then on the island two churches, five congregations, and five hundred Indians. Some of the other preachers were Job Mukemuk, John Asherman, Netowah, Winnohson, and Noah.

SPRAGUE, RICHARD, c ptain, an early settier of Charlestown, Mass., died in 1668, aged 63, bequeathing about 30 pounds to the church. He and his brothers Ralph and William began the settlement of C. in 1628, two years before Winthrop and his company arrived in the Arabella. His son, Captain Richard, died in 1703, bequeathing a parsonage-house and lands to the church. William removed to Hingham. H. Sprague of Hingham published an account of the Spragues in 1828. - Budington's Hist. of Charles-

SPRAGUE, John, a physician in Newburyport, died in 1784, aged 73. He graduated at Harvard in 1730.

SPRAGUE, JOHN, M. D., a physician in Boston, died in 1797, aged 84. He was graduated in 1737; married the daughter of Dr. Lewis Dal-Honde, a French physician; and had extensive. profitable practice. He retired to Dedham with a second wife, a lady of fortune. In 1779 he was a member of the Massachusetts constitutional convention. - Thacher.

SPRAGUE, EDWARD, minister of Dublin, N. H., died in 1817, aged 78. He was the son of Dr. Sprague, an eminent physician of Dedham. and graduated at Harvard in 1770. He was ordained at Dublin before 1780. Coming into possession, by inheritance, of a large estate, which ho sold for 50,000 dollars, the consequence was injurious by reason of his foolish expenses. He died from wounds by the upsetting of his carriage. He left his estate to his parish.

SPRAGUE, DEBORAH, wife of Seth Sprague, died at Duxbury Nov. 2, 1843, aged 82. She lived with her husband sixty-four years, and was the mother of fifteen children, all of whom lived to have families; in all, her descendants at the time of her death were one hundred and seventy-

SPRAGUE, SAMUEL, died in Boston June 20, 1844, aged 90; a soldier of the Revolution. He was an enterprising and successful mechanic, many public buildings being the monuments of his skill and labor. He lived happy with his wife under Cullen, Monro, and Black. In 1786 he and children, and respected and esteemed by his many friends. Sprague, skilled in the construction of good verse, is well known.

SPRAGUE, SETH, the son of Phineas of Duxbury, was born July 4, 1760, and died July 8, 1847, aged 87. A soldier of the Revolution, he settled in Duxbury in husbandry and other business, and was long a magistrate and scnator. He was a democrat in politics. In various moral reforms he took an early part. He was the father of many children, one of whom is Peleg, born April 27, 1793, judge of the U.S. district court.

SPRAGUE, TIMOTHY D., editor of the literary magazine at Andover, Conn., died in Oct., 1849, aged 30. He graduated at Yale in 1845.

SPRAGUE, JOSEPH E., sheriff of Essex, died of apoplexy at Salem Feb. 22, 1852, aged 69. Born in S., the son of Dr. William Stearns, he assumed the name of his grandfather Sprague, and graduated at Harvard in 1804. A member of the Essex bar, he was an active politician of the Jefferson school. He was clerk of court, postmaster, and high sheriff. He published orations, July 4, 1810, and 1813.

SPRAGUE, WILLIAM, governor of Rhode Island, died in Providence Oct. 19, 1856, aged 56. He was the son of William of Cranston; was a representative to Congress in 1835; governor in 1838; senator of the United States in 1842. He was connected with the largest cotton manufactory in the State. He had talent and judgment, firmness and integrity, and in his habits was plain and abstemious.

SPRING, ALPHEUS, minister of Eliot, Maine, died in 1791, aged about 46. He graduated at Princeton in 1766, and was settled in 1768. John

Rogers, the first minister, was settled in 1721. SPRING, SAMUEL, D. D., minister of Newburyport, Mass., died March 4, 1819, aged 73. He was born in Northbridge Feb. 27, 1746, and graduated at Princeton college in 1771. He was the only chaplain in Arnold's detachment, which penetrated through the wilderness of Maine to Quehec in 1775. On his return in 1776 he left the army. He was ordained Aug. 6, 1777. His wife was a daughter of Dr. Hopkins, minister of Hadlev; his two sous were ministers in New York and in Hartford, Conn. Besides his labors as minister, Dr. Spring performed various other important public services; he was one of the founders of the Massachusetts missionary society in 1799, and its president; he assisted also in founding the theological seminary at Andover, and the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, of which he was one of the prudential committee. In his theological views he accorded with Drs. Hopkins, Bellamy, and West, who were his teachers. He was distinguished for metaphysical acuteness. He published friendly

The name of his son, Charles tion and strictures on Rev. D. Tappan's letters to Philalethes, 1789; thanksgiving sermon, 1794; a missionary sermon, 1802; at the ordination of B. Bell, 1784; of C. Coffin, 1804; of S. Walker. 1805; inauguration of E. D. Griffin; at three thanksgivings; on the death of Washington; of T. Thompson; of N. Noyes, 1810; on sinners coming to Christ immediately, 1780; on family prayer; to missionary society, 1802; to humane society, 1807; on agency of God and man in salvation, 1807; to benevolent society, 1818; on the duel between Hamilton and Burr, 1804; two discourses on Christ's self-existence, 1805; two fast sermous, 1809, which occasioned a letter from Mr. Aikin; before the American foreign mission society, 1818. - Sprague's Annals.

SPRING, MARSHALL, M. D., a physician. died in Jan., 1818, aged 75. He was born in Watertown, Mass.; graduated at Harvard college in 1762; and settled at Waltham, where he had extensive practice. He disapproved of the resistance to Great Britain, and was a tory; yet in 1801 he was a democrat, or an adherent of Mr. Jefferson. To his son he left a fortune of between two and three hundred thousand dollars; but bequeathed nothing to religious or charitable institutions. He had a high reputation for medical skill. Many resorted to him as to an oracle. He was a man of keenness of wit. -Thacher.

SPROAT, JAMES, D. D., minister in Philadelphia, died in 1793, aged 71. He was born at Scituate, Mass., April 11, 1722, and was graduated at Yale college in 1741. While a member of this seminary he heard a sermon by Gilbert Tennent, which made the most permanent impressions upon his mind. He was ordained Aug. 23, 1743, a minister in Guilford, where he was highly popular and very useful. Thence he removed to Philadelphia, and succeeded Mr. Tennent at the close of the year 1768. Here he continued till his death. Dr. Green, his colleague, survived him. The manner of his funeral showed the high esteem in which he was held. It was at the time when the yellow fever made such ravages in the city, and when even two or three mourning friends were seldom seen attending a corpse to the grave. About fifty persons followed him, and some religious negroes voluntarily offered themselves to carry the bier. He was a respectable divine, and in his preaching he loved to dwell on the peculiar doctrines of the gospel. His life exhibited a most amiable view of the influence of religion. The copious extracts from his diary in the assembly's magazine evince his piety and submission to the will of God under the heaviest afflictions, and give an affecting account of the distress occasioned by the yellow fever.

SPROAT, EBENEZER, colonel, died at Marietta dialogue on the nature of duty, 1784; disquisi- suddenly in Feb., 1805, aged 53. He was the

8 also Ply pre witl sold serv how

Dec

New

who

S

I

n

OI

w bo

กท

hii

Bu

for

IIi

Bo

nei

car

bcc

En

8011

and

of t

of h Mas in 1 patr toric prise New S ton, lie :

tled

Ran

took

in 1

This John whic S died ton, was

he re

letters 1794; ion of Talker, three on; of sinners family aumane
in salil8; on 04; two oe; from

hysician, born in and colwhere he d of the crent of me of bedollars; charitaation for as to an of wit.—

Philadel-

born at mission

as gradumember by Gilbert anent imned Aug. re he was ce he rc. Mr. Ten-Here he colleague, al showed It was at ch ravages mourning rpse to the him, and red themespectable o dwell on His life affuence of als diary in by and subte heaviest unt of the nt Marietta le was the son of Col. Ebenezer S. of Middleborough, Mass. In the war he had the rank of major; and was noble in appearance, six feet four inches high, with a model form. He loved his fellow-soldiers, and he loved a joke. Once three soldiers dined on poor fare at his mother's inn: when the bill was asked for, he went to his mother, and inquired "How much it was worth to pick those bones?" She said, "A shilling." He returned, and from the money-drawer paid each man a shilling, much to their satisfaction. He was appointed a surveyor of lands in Ohio. The Indians called him Hetuck or Big Buckey; hence the name of Buckeye to the natives of Ohio. He was sheriff fourteen years of the county of Washington.— Hiddreth's Biog. Memoirs.

SPURZHEIM, JOHN GASPAR, M. D., died at Boston Nov. 10, 1832, aged 55. He was born near Treves on the Moselle in Germany, and became acquainted with Dr. Gall in 1800, and became his fellow-laborer. After lecturing in Europe he came to America, and commenced some courses of lectures on phrenology Sept. 17, and soon died after an illness, by the typhus fever, of three weeks.

SQUANTO, a noted indian at Plymouth, called also Sisquantum and Tisquantum, was a native of Plymouth, and joined the Pilgrims as their interpreter in 1621. He had been carried off in 1614 with seven other Indians by Thomas Hunt, and sold as a slave at 20 pounds in Malaga. His services were important. He taught the people how to plant corn and catch fish. He died in Dec., 1622.

SQUAW, SACHEM, queen of the Indians in New England, was the wife of Webbacowitts, who was a powah or powwow, and king in right of his wife. She submitted to the jurisdiction of Massachusetts in 1644.

STACEY, WILLIAM, colonel, died in Marietta in 1804. A native of Massachusetss, he was a patriot soldier. He was taken prisoner by the tories and Indians at Cherry Valley, and was a prisoner four years. In 1789 he emigrated from New Salem to Marietta. — Hildreth.

STACEY, JOSEPH, the first minister of Kingston, died in 1741, aged 47. Born in Cambridge, he graduated at Harvard in 1719, and was settled in 1720. His successors were Maccarty, Rand, and Willis. He was very abstemious, and took delight in fishing and fowling; but diligent in his ministerial duties and of eminent piety. This parish was set off from Plymouth, and Major John Bradford gave him two acres of land, on which he built his house.

STAFFORD, Ward, minister in New York, died in 1831, aged about 60. Born in Washington, N. II., he graduated at Yale in 1812; and tain's hill." Mr. Hubbard says of him: "A little chimney is soon fired; so was the Plymouth capwas settled over the Bowery church, which place he resigned in 1828. He was afterwards settled but and angry temper. He had been bred a son of Col. Ebenezer S. of Middleborough, Mass. at Youngstown, Ohio. His successors at New In the war he had the rank of major; and was York were J. S. Christmas and Dr. Woodbridge.

STANDISH, Milles, the hero of New England, died in Duxbury, Mass., Oct. 3, 1656, aged about 72. He was born in Lancashire about the year 1584. After having served for some time in the army in the Netherlands, he settled with Mr. Robinson's congregation at Levden. Though not a member of the church, he embarked with the company that came to New England in 1620, and was chosen captain or chief military commander at Plymouth. In every hazardous enterprise, he was foremost; he was resolute and daring; and often, when in great danger, was guarded by the providence of God. His wife, Rose, died Jan. 29, 1621. His second wife was Barbara. His children were Alexander, Miles, Josiah, and Lora; also Charles and John, who died early. Alexander married Sarah Alden, and left children; Miles married Sarah Winslow, and lived in Boston; Josiah, eaptain, lived in Norwich or Preston, Conn., and had nine children. Lora died before Her sampler is preserved in Pilher father. grim's hall, Plymouth, as follows:

"Lora Standish is my name.
Lord, guide my heart that I May doe thy will. Also fil
My hands with such convenient skill,
As may conduce to virtue void of shame;
And I will give the glory to thy name."

In 1623 he was sent to Wessagusset or Weymouth, to protect the settlers there from a conspiracy of the Indians, which Massassoit had disclosed. Having chosen eight men, he went to the plantation under pretence of trade, and he found it in a most perilons condition. The people, by their unjust and disorderly conduct, had made themselves contemptible in the eyes of the Indians. To give the savages satisfaction on account of eorn which had been stelen, they pretended to hang the thief, but hung in his stead a poor, decrepid old man. After Standish arrived at Weymouth he was insulted and threatened by the Indians, who had been name't as conspirators. Taking an opportunity, when a number of them were together, he killed five, without losing any of his men. He himself seized Peeksuot, a bold chief, snatched his knife from his neek, and killed him with it. The terror with which this enterprise filled the savages was of great advantage to the colonists. When the report of this transaction was carried to Holland, Mr. Robinson, in his next letter to the governor, exclaimed, "O that you had converted some, before you killed any!" Captain Standish was one of the magistrates or assistants as long as he lived. At Duxbury he had a tract of land, known by the name of "Captain's hill." Mr. Hubbard says of him: "A little chimney is soon fired; so was the Plymouth captain, a man of a very small stature, yet of a very soldier in the low countries, and never entered into the school of Christ, or of John the Baptist." It does not appear, however, that in his military expeditions he exceeded his orders. Morton says, that he fell asleep in the Lord. - Belknap's Amer. Biog. I. 310-336.

STANDISH, WILLIAM, a descendant of Miles S., died in Pembroke, Mass., in November, 1828, aged 93.

STANFORD, JOHN, D. D., a Baptist minister, died in New York Jan. 14, 1834, aged 80.

STANFORD, JOSHUA, died in Dublin, N. II., Dec. 12, 1856, aged 103 years and 8 months.

STANLEY, John, an eminent lawyer of North Carolina, died in 1833. He was a member of STANLEY, ANTHONY D., died in East Hartford March 16, 1853, aged 42, professor of mathematics in Yale college, where he was graduated in 1830. He published a treatise on spherical trigonometry, an edition of Day's algebra, and a set of mathematical tables; and left projected labors unfinished.

STANTON, EDWARD, died in Stonington in 1832, aged 71; a defender of fort Griswold. Shot through the body, Col. Van Buskirk gave him a silk cap to place in the wound, and gave him a cup of water, - the only acts of kindness that day: honor to the name of this British officer. S. kept the cap till his death.

STANTON, HENRY, brigadier-general, died at fort Hamilton Aug. 2, 1856, aged about 70. He was of the quartermaster's department.

STANWIX, colonel, commanded a considerable force in 1757, designed for the protection of the western frontiers. In 1758 he erected a fort on the north side of the Mohawk, at the carryingplace to Wood creek, and called it fort Stanwix. It was designed in part for the security of the friendly Indians. He then had the rank of brigadier-general.

STAR, COMFORT, a minister in England, died at Leeds in Sussex in 1711, aged 86. His father, of the same name, a physician, came from Ashford, E., and lived in Cambridge in 1634; then in Duxbury; last in Boston, where he died in 1660. Born in Ashford, he graduated at Harvard in the fifth class in 1647, and was a tutor and fellow. Returning to E., he was a minister in Cumberland till deprived by the act of uniformity; then at Leeds.

STARK, John, major-general, died May 8, 1822, aged 93. He was the son of Archibald S., a native of Glasgow, who married in Ireland; was born at Londonderry, N. II., Aug. 28, 1728. In 1736 his father removed to Derryfield, now Manchester, on the Merrimac. While on a hunting expedition, he was taken prisoner by the St. Francis Indians in 1752, but was soon redeemed N. H., Sept. 8, 1851, aged 67. The son of Dr.

wright of Boston. To raise this money, he repaired on another hunting expedition to the Androscoggin. He afterwards served in a company of rangers with Rogers, being made a captain in 1756. On hearing of the battle of Lexington, he repaired to Cambridge, and, receiving a colonel's commission, enlisted in the same day eight hundred men. He fought in the battle of Breed's hill, June 17, 1775, his regiment forming the left of the line, and repulsing three times, by their deadly fire, the veteran Welsh fusileers, who had fought at Minden. His only defence was a railfence, covered with hay to resemble a breastwork. In May, 1776, he proceeded from New York to Canada. In the attack on Trenton he commanded the van of the right wing. He was also engaged in the battle of Princeton. Displeased at being neglected in a list of promotions, he resigned his commission in March, 1777, and retired to his farm. In order to impede the progress of Burgoyne, he proposed to the council of New Hampshire to raise a body of troops, and fall upon his rear. In the battle of Bennington, so called, though fought six miles northwest from B., in the borders of New York, Saturday, Aug. 16, 1777, he defeated Col. Baum, killing two huudred and seven, and making seven hundred and fifty prisoners. The place was near Van Schaack's mills, on a branch of the Hoosuck, called by Dr. Holmes Walloon creek; by others Walloomsack, and Walloomschaick, and Looms-chork. This event awakened confidence, and led to the capture of Burgoyne. Of those who fought in this battle, the names of T. Allen, J. Orr, and others, are recorded in this volume. In September he enlisted a new and larger force, and joined Gates. In 1778 and 1779 he served in Rhode Island, and in 1780 in New Jersey. In 1781 he had the command of the northern department at Saratoga. At the close of the war, he bade adicu to public employments. In 1818 congress voted him a pension of 60 dollars per month. John, his third son, died in Manchester, N. H., in 1844, aged 82 .- He was buried on a small hill near the Merrimac; a granite obelisk has the inscription. "Maj. Gen. Stark." A memoir of his life was published, annexed to reminiscences of the French war, 12mo., 1831.

le

Sold

J a sı te

di in his s g tl w

STARK, ANDREW, LL. D., pastor of the associate Presbyterian church, New York, thirty years, died in Scotland Sept. 18, 1849, aged 58, a faithful and useful minister.

STARR, PETER, minister of Warren, Conn., died in 1829, aged 84. Born in Danbury, he graduated at Yale in 1764; was a pastor sixty years; and was the oldest minister in the State. Hart Talcott was settled in 1825.

STARR, JOHN, a physician, died at Northwood, at an expense of 103 dollars, paid by Mr. Wheel- Ebenezer S. of Dunstable, he graduated at Harvard in 1804, and studied physic with Dr. M. | uel Gile, 1807; of T. Skelton, Foxborough, 1808; Spaulding. He commenced practice in Peterough. After three years he removed to thwood, where he toiled in his profession acty-six years.

STAUGHTON, WILLIAM, D. D., died at Washington Dec. 12, 1829, aged 59; a Baptist, formerly president of Columbia college. He was on his way to Georgetown college, Ky. He came from England in 1798; and had been pastor of a church in Philadelphia six years, from 1805. He published an culogium on Dr. Rush, 1813; address at opening of Columbia college at Washington, 1822.

STAUNTON, BENJAMIN, an eminent physician of Newport, R. I., died at a very advanced age in 1760. Other physicians of N., who died before him, were James Noyes and Clarke Rodman, and his son William.

STEARNS, JOSIAH, died in Epping, N. H., July 25, 1788, aged 56, in the thirtieth year of his ministry. He was the son of John of Billerica, and of Esther, who was descended from the celebrated Capt. Edward Johnson. His ancestor John lived in B. at its incorporation in 1665, and his earliest ancestor in this country was Isaac of Watertown, in 1630, who died Aug. 29, 1676, leaving sons Isaac, Samuel, and probably others. He graduated at Harvard in 1751. He had two wives, Sarah Abbot of Andover, and Sarah Ruggles of Billerica, and had six sons and six daughters. He published two sermons on the love of God, preached at Exeter for the benefit of the students of the academy; also at ordination of S. Gile, 1807; of T. Skelton, 1808; of E. P. Sperry, 1813; on the death of D. Bacon, 1810; of E. Stone, 1822; on the peace, 1815; at a dedication, 1817; to society for Christian knowledge, 1820. - N. H. Repos.; Sprague's Annals.

STEARNS, CHARLES, D. D., died at Lincoln July 26, 1826, aged 74. A native of Leominster, a graduate of 1773, he was ordained in 1781 the successor of William Lawrence, the first minister. He published a sermon on music, 1792; a poem, 1797; principles of religion, 1807; on the death of E. Brooks, 1807; before a bible society; convention sermon, 1815.

STEARNS, SAMUEL, son of Rev. Josiah S., died at Bedford, Mass., Dec. 26, 1834, aged 66, in the thirty-ninth year of his ministry. He was highly respected. He was a grandson of Rev. Samuel Ruggles of Billerica, and father of W. A. Steams, president of Amherst college. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1794, and studied theology with Rev. Jonathan French of Andover, whose daughter he married. Ordained April 27, 1795, he, in consequence of a division, became, June 5, 1833, the minister of the Trinitarian Congregational society, yet pastor of the same church. He published a sermon at the ordination of Sam- N. J., in 1841, aged 68.

on the murder of David Bucon, 1810; at the ordination of E. P. Sperry, Dunstable, 1813; at the dedication of a meeting-house in B. in 1817; before Mass, society for promoting Christian knowledge, 1820; at the funeral of Mr. Stone, of Reading; address at Dracut on the return of peace, 1814. - Boston Recorder, Jan. 2, 1835;

April 24.

STEARNS, SAMUEL HORATIO, a minister in Boston, died in Paris July 15, 1837, aged 35. He was the son of the preceding, born at Bedford Sept. 12, 1801; was graduated at Harvard in 1823; and ordained over the old south church in Hoston April 16, 1834. In ill health, he was invited by Rev. E. E. Salisbury to visit with him the south of Europe. He died in France. A volume of his life and discourses was published in 1838. The interesting account of him, in one hundred and ninety-two pages, was prepared by his brother, W. A. Stearns, now president of Amherst college. - Sprague's Annals.

STEARNS, ASAHEL, LL. D., professor of law at Cambridge, died Feb. 5, 1839, aged 64. He was born at Lunenburg in 1774, graduated at Harvard in 1797, and practised law many years at Chelmsford. He was a member of Congress in 1815-1817. He was professor from 1817 till 1829, when he resigned his place. He died at Cambridge. He published a volume on real actions, 1824, and was one of the commissioners to revise the statutes of the commonwealth. He was a skilful lawyer, a zealous advocate, and a man of integrity.

STEARNS, SILAS, a Baptist minister, died in Bath, Me., in 1840, aged 55.

STEARNS, JOHN, M. D., died in New York March 18, 1848, aged nearly 78; president of the N. Y. medical society. A native of Wilbraham, Mass., he graduated at Yale college in 1789. He was a devoted practitioner and a consistent Christian, being connected with Dr. Milnor's church. He was one of the founders of the tract society, and chairman of the finance committee. He died in peace.

STEBBINS, STEPHEN WILLIAMS, minister of Westhaven, Conn., died Aug. 15, 1843, aged 85. Born in Longmeadow in 1758, the grandson of Dr. Stephen Williams, he graduated at Yale in 1782. He declined an invitation to succeed his grandfather at L., and was settled at Stratford, where he remained twenty-nine years, and then for twenty-eight years was the pastor of Westhaven. His form was erect and noble, his countenance was bland and expressive: he had intellect, judgment, feeling. He was humble. self-denying, condescending, and holy; and his death was peace.

STEBBINS, CYRUS, D. D., died at Waterford, ay, Aug. two huudred and Schaack's d by Dr. Valloomns-chork. ed to the fought in Orr. and Septemnd joined n Rhode 1781 he rtment at pade adieu ress voted

he re-

he An-mpany

tain in ton, ho

olonel's

it hun-

Breed's

the left

y their ho had a rail-

stwork.

York to e com-

was also spleased

ions, he and re-

ie prog-

uncil of

ops, and

nington,

est from

he French the assohirty years, 58, a faith-

h. John,

., in 1844,

Il near the nscription,

s life was en, Conn., anbury, he aster sixty the State.

Northwood, son of Dr. ted at Harton, Mass., Oct. 7, 1856, aged 90 years and 6 months. He was the son of Joseph of Wilbraham, a descendant of Roweland, who came from England in 1634 and was among the first settlers of Springfield in 1636. To this ancestor, from whom Dr. S. descended in the seventh generation, he erected a granite monument in Northampton, where he died in 1671. He graduated at Yale in 1788, leaving only two survivors of his class, Rev. Daniel Waldo, chaplain in congress, aged 94, and Judge John Woodworth of Troy. He was educated as a physician, and practised a few years. He came to Northampton in 1806. For thirty-five years he was the county treasurer, annually chosen by the people. He was a man of integrity and piety, industrious, interested in all the objects which conduce to the public welfure. His last days were embittered by suffering, and by the decay of his intellectual powers; but he cherished the hope, through the gospel, that they would flourish anew, subject to no second decay.

STEDMAN, C., published a history of the American war, 2 vols. 4to., London, 1794.

STEEL, STEPHEN, the first minister of Tolland, Conn., died in 1759, aged 62, in the thirty-seventh year of his ministry. Born in Hadley, Mass., he graduated at Yale in 1718. Nathan Williams was his successor.

STEELE, JOHN, a useful magistrate at Hartford in 1636, was the first secretary of the government. He removed to Farmington in 1651, and died in 1664. He was one of the legislators, who, to what was called Newtown, gave the name of Hartford, probably because Mr. Stone was born in H., England. The scal of Hartford, by Mr. Hartley, is a hart fording a stream; the crest an eagle, with the motto, "Post nubila Phœbus." It is described in "Hartford in the olden time."

STEELE, John, general, died near Salisbury, N. C., August, 1815. He was a member of congress soon after the adoption of the constitution, and comptroller of the treasury; a man of profound knowledge and strong reasoning powers.

STEELE, MARSHFIELD, minister of Machias, Me., died in 1832, aged 60. Born in Hartford, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1790, and was ordained in 1800.

STEELE, JOHN, M. D., missionary, died at Madura Oct. 6, 1842, aged 38. Born in Hebron, N. Y., he embarked at Boston in 1836. He was highly respected; his end was perfect peace. His wife was Mary Snell of Plainfield, Mass.

STEERS, GEORGE, a distinguished shiphuilder, died on Long Island Sept. 25, 1856. He was riding, when his horse ran away and threw him, the injury causing his death. He constructed the famous yacht America, which won the race at a boy, and said, "I have brought you a recruit." Cowes in 1851. The steamers Niagara and Adri-

STEBBINS, Daniel, Dr., died in Northamp- atic, built by him, exhibited great beauty and in, Mass., Oct. 7, 1856, aged 90 years and 6 symmetry.

tl

m

h

h ec

to

th es

fo

rc

wa

de

"

be wn

yo

off

w

len

"7

mo

SOT

ask

wei

two

of

No

wha

who

Mr

he hap

at a

tion

her

arn

han

Mo

star

gar

me

bar

dau

tena

he

wha

wan

hon

lar, whe

bles

Jers

him

250 a lo

his

STEPHENS, John L., a traveller, died at New York Oct. 13, 1852, aged 46. Born in Shrewsbury, N. J., he graduated at Columbia college in 1822. He studied and practised law. but ill health compelled him to travel. From 1834 to 1836 he visited Europe, Greece, and Turkey. President Van Buren sent him as ambassador to Central America in 1839 in order to negotiate a treaty. He was concerned in the first lines of steamers to Europe; was a director in the ocean steam navigation company, and president of the Panama railroad company, and passed the winter of 1851 on the isthmus of Darien. The iron track between the Atlantic and the Pacific will be forever associated with his name. He published incidents of travel in Egypt, etc., 1837; in Greece, Turkey, etc., 1838; in Central America, 1841; in Yucatan. - Cycl. of Am. Lit.

STEPHENSON, JAMES, D. D., died in Maury county, Tenn., in 1832.

STETSON, ELLEN, Miss, a missionary to the Cherokees, died at Dwight Dec. 29, 1848, aged 65. Born at Kingston, Mass., she entered upon her labors as teacher of the female school in 1821 at "Old Dwight." In 1829 she removed to the new station. She was very humble, yet full of peace; a most faithful and useful laborer for the good of Cherokee girls during 27 years.

STEUBEN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, baron de, a major-general in the American army, died at Steubenville, N. Y., in 1794, aged 61. He was a Prussian officer, who served many years in the armies of Frederick, and afterwards entered the service of Prince Charles of Baden. He had the rank of lieutenant-general, and was also a canon of the church. With an income of 2500 dollars a year, he passed his winters at Paris, and there became acquainted with Franklin. He arrived at Portsmouth, N. H., in Nov. 1777, with strong recommendations to congress. He claimed no rank, and only requested permission to serve as a volunteer. He was soon appointed to the office of inspector-general with the rank of major-general. He established a uniform system of manœuvres, and by his skill and persevering industry effected during the continuance of the troops at Valley Forge a most important improvement in all ranks of the army. He was a volunteer in the action at Monmouth, and commanded in the trenches of Yorktown on the day which concluded the struggle with Great Britain. He was an accomplished gentlemun and a virtuous citizen, of extensive knowledge and sound judgment. His aids were North, Popham, and Walker. The following anecdotes will illustrate his character. When in Virginia, a militia-colonel rode up with y and ed at orn in umbia d law, From d Turibassanegoe first ctor in l presipassed Darien. he Pae. Ile ., 1837 :

Maury to the 8, aged ed upon in 1821 l to the full of r for the

Amer-

it.

aron de, , died at He was rs in the ered the had the a canon 0 dollars nd there arrived h strong imed no serve as the office ajor-genm of maindustry troops at ement in unteer in ed in the concluded e was an us eitizen, udgment. ker. The eharacter.

le up with a recruit."

and asked

his age, and in his indignation at the cheat ordered the colonel to be dismounted, unspurred, and turned into the ranks; and said to the lad, "Go. my boy, take the colonel's spurs and horses to his wife; - make my compliments, and say, her husband has gone to fight for the freedom of his country, as an honest man should do. By platoons! to the right wheel! forward march!" the arrival of the corps at Ronnoke, the colonel escaped, and applied in vain to Governor Jefferson for redress. At a review in Morristown he arrested a Lieut. Gibbons for a fault of which he was innocent; but, ascertaining his innocence, he desired him to come to the front, when he said : "Sir, the fault which was committed would have been perilous in the presence of an enemy, but it was not yours; I ask your pardon; return to your command;" and this was said with his hat off, and the rain pouring on his reverend head. What officer would not respect the veteran? On leaving a sick aid-de-eamp in Virginia, he said, "There is my sulkey, and here is half of my money; I can do no more." For amusement he sometimes miscalled words in English, similar in sound. Mrs. Washington, at the dinner-table, asked him once what he had eaught, when he went a-fishing. He replied that he had caught two fish, adding, "I am not sure, but I think one of them was a whale."-" A whale, baron, in the North river?" -- "Yes, I assure you, a very fine whale; was it not?" appealing to one of his aids, who replied, "An eel, baron." At the house of Mrs. Livingston, the mother of the chancellor, he was introduced to a Miss Sheaff. "I am happy," said he, "to be presented to you, though at a great risk; from my youth I have been cautioned against mischief, but I had no idea that her attractions were so powerful!" When the army was dishanded, and the old soldiers shook hands in farewell, Lieut. Col. Cochran, a Green Mountain veteran, said, "For myself I could stand it, but my wife and daughters are in the garret of that wretched tavern, and I have no means of removing them."-"Come," said the baron, "I will pay my respects to Mrs. C. and her daughters;" and when he left them their countenances were brightened, for he gave them all he had to give. This was at Newburg. On the wharf he saw a poor wounded black man, who wanted a dollar to pay for his passage to his home. Of whom the baron borrowed the dollar, it is not known; but he soon returned, when the negro hailed the sloop, and eried, "God bless you, master baron!" The State of New Jersey gave him a small farm. New York gave him 16,000 acres in Oneida county; a pension of 2500 dollars was also given him. He built him a log house at Steubenville, gave a tenth part of his land to his aids and servants, and parcelled out the rest to twenty or thirty tenants. His library was his chief soluce. Having little exercise, he died of the apoplexy. Agreeably to his request he was wrapped in his clonk and buried in a plain coffin without a stone. He was a believer in Jesus Christ, a member of the reformed Dutch church, New York. An abstract of his system of discipline was published in 1779, and in 1784 he published a letter on the subject of an established militia and military arrangements.

STEVENS, JOSEPH, minister of Charlestown, Mass., the son of Joseph S., died of the small pox Nov. 16, 1721, nged 40. He was born in Andover; was graduated at Harvard college in 1703; and was ordained colleague with Mr. Bradstreet Oct. 13, 1713. He was a fervent and elequent preacher, cheerful though serious in conversation, gentle as a father, and beloved by all his congregation. There was published from his manuscript his last sermon, entitled, another and a better country in reserve for all true believers; and annexed to it a discourse on the death of Mr. Brattle of Cambridge. He was the great-grandfather of Joseph Stevens Buckminster.

STEVENS, TIMOTHY, first minister of Glastenbury, Conn., died April, 1726, aged 60. He was the son of Timothy of Roxbury, and graduated at Harvard in 1687. His wife was Eunice. the daughter of John Chester; his second wife was Alice, the widow of Rev. John Whiting of Lancaster.

STEVENS, Phinemas, first minister of Boscawen, N. II., died in 1755, aged about 43. He was born in Andover, and graduated at Harvard in 1734; was settled Oct. 8, 1740. Three of his successors were R. Morrill, N. Merrill, S. Wood.

STEVENS, BENJAMIN, D. D., minister of Kittery, Maine, the son of Rev. Joseph, was gradnated at Harvard college in 1740, and ordained May 1, 1751. He died May 18, 1791, aged 70, having been respected in life as an able minister of the gospel, an exemplary Christian, and a modest and humble man. His only child, Sarah, married Rev. Joseph Buckminster. He gave his library to the ministers of York and Kittery. He published a sermon on the death of Andrew Pepperell, 1752; on the death of Sir W. Pepperell, 1759; at the election, 1760; at the convention, 1764. - Sprague's Annals.

STEVENS, EDWARD, general, a soldier of the Revolution, died in Virginia Aug. 17, 1820. A native of Virginia, he served with distinction during the whole war. He was the friend of Washington and Greene. At the battle of the Great Bridge near Norfolk, he commanded a battalion of rillemen. At the battle of Brandywine for his good conduct he received the public thanks of the commander-in-chief; and in the same way was honored at the battle of Germantown. Promoted to the command of a brigade, he fought in the battle of Camden. In that of Guilford court-house, he was severely wounded in the thigh; but he brought off his troops in good order. His military eareer ended at the siege of Yorktown. From the adoption of the State constitution until 1790 he was a member of the senate of Virginia.

STEVENS, EBENEZER, major-general, a soldier of the Revolution, died in 1823, aged 71. He was born in Boston in 1751, and entered the army as an artificer. He obtained the rank of lieutenant-colonel of artillery. On the return of peace he settled in New York, and was an enter-prising merchant. For many years he commanded the division of the artillery of the State.

STEVENS, EDWIN, missionary to China, died at Singapore Jan. 5, 1837, aged 36. Born at New Canaan, he graduated at Yale in 1828, at New Haven seminary in 1831. He was a chaplain at Canton in 1832, and was skilled in the Chinese language.

STEVENS, JOHN H., died at Stoneham, Mass., July 9, 1851, aged nearly 85; for thirty-two years pastor of the church at S. Born at Canterbury, Conn., he was pastor of Methuen, Mass., from 1791 to 1795; of Stonehum from 1795 to 1827; of the east parish of Haverhill from 1828 to 1833. He published two sermons on the death of a young man, 1803; and two fast sermons. Sprague.

STEVENS, JOHN, died in Talbot county, Md., in April, 1856. He had recently given 36,000 dollars for a packet to be in the service of the Liberian colonization.

STEVENS, ROBERT L., died at Hoboken April 20, 1856, aged 68. He was remarkable for his inventive powers. His father, John S., was connected with John Fitch in the improvement of navigation by steam. His inventions are described in the Tribune of April 22. He is said to have died worth two millions of dollars.

STEVENSON, JAMES, D. D., died in Maury county, Tennessee, in 1832.

STEVENSON, WILLIAM, a Methodist minister, died at Rock Run, Md., in 1839, aged 74. Edward S., also a Methodist minister, died at Snow Hill, Md., in 1839, aged 45.

STEVENSON, ANDREW, a Virginia statesman, died of the pneumonia in Albemarle county, in 1857, aged 73. He was in early life an eminent pleader at the bar. As a member of congress he was chosen speaker of the house, and presided with great dignity and ability. Next to Mr. Clay he was regarded as best qualified for that station. From congress he was sent as a minister to England, and in that position was distinguished, for Haven, Conn.; was born Dec. 15, 1727. He was his character was dignified, his appearance splen- graduated in 1746, and in 1749 was chosen tutor, ginia, to which he devoted much care, as also to the pursuits of agriculture.

STEWARD, ANTIPAS, first minister of Ludlow, Mass., died in Belchertown in 1814, aged 80. Born in Marlborough, he graduated at Harvard in 1760; was ordained in 1793, and dismissed in 1803. He well understood Hebrew and was a good scholar.

STEWARD, Joseph, a painter, died in April, 1822, aged 69. He graduated at Dartmouth college in 1780. He became a preacher; but losing his health he devoted himself to painting. being instructed by Trumbull. He established a museum at Hartford, Conn.

STEWART, DANIEL, general, died in Liberty county, Georgia, in 1829, aged 69; a patriot of STEWART, ZURIAH, widow of David S., died at Kingwood, N. J., Oct. 31, 1843, aged 103. By her first husband, G. Opdycke, she had eleven children. She left eighty-four grandchildren, one hundred and eighty great-grandchildren, and thirty-nine great-great-grandchildren.

STEWART, SARAH, wife of Rev. C. S. Stewart, died June 16, 1854; a woman of great excellence of character. - Observer, July 17.

STEWART, JAMES, M. D., died at Baltimore Jan. 31, 1846, aged 90. Born in Annapolis, he studied medicine in Edinburgh; in 1780 he came to B., and served in the army. He saw in the city an increase from fifteen thousand inhabitants to one hundred thousand.

STILES, ISAAC, died at North Haven May 14, 1760, aged 62. He was the son of John, whose father John came from Milbrook, England, and settled in Windsor in 1635. Born in Windsor, a graduate of 1722, he was ordained at North Haven Nov. 11, 1724; and was succeeded by Dr. Trumbull. His predecessor, Mr. Wetmore, had become an Episcopalian. He was a zealous and eloquent preacher. His wife was a daughter of Rev. Edward Taylor; and President Stiles was her only child. He published election sermon, 1742; at the ordination of his son at Newport, 1755; duty of soldiers, 1755. - Sprague's An-

STILES, ABEL, minister of Woodstock, north society, died July 25, 1783, aged 74, in the fortysixth of his ministry. A brother of the preceding, he graduated in 1733, was a tutor, a good scholar, and eminent theologian. Besides these two sons, John, their father, had twelve children.

STILES, EZRA, D. D., president of Yale college, died at New Haven May 12, 1795, aged 67. He was the son of Isaac Stiles, minister of North did, his social accomplishments remarkable. On in which station he remained six years. After his return he was rector of the university of Vir- having preached occasonally, his impaired health Nev But Oct. tion Mai cong Dig In 1 08 SI stati jour pose kins "Th ble : man ing f impl. are t sin a ity; dren tized corru them dency him, but t other ing t Stiles whom ough

and

tian

law

had 1 he re verse ledge his fa divine had s of the mate He w for he deepe canno philos came. mente labor reaso

ploye

langu he w consid

Syria

so to Ludaged Hard disebrew April, mouth r; but inting, shed a Liberty riot of S., died 3. By eleven en, one n, and . Steweat exıltimore polis, he he came v in the abitants May 14, , whose ind, and Windsor, t North d by Dr. iore, had lous and ghter of tiles was sermon, Newport, ue's An-

ck. north the fortye preced-r, a good des these children. Yale col-, aged 67. c of North . He was sen tutor. rs. After red health and some doubt respecting the truth of Chris- faith; the great truths respecting our disease and tianity induced him to pursue the study of the law. In 1753 he took the attorney's oath at New Haven, and practised at the bar till 1755. But, having resumed preaching, he was ordained Oct. 22, 1755, minister of the second Congregational church in Newport, Rhode Island. In March, 1776, the events of the war dispersed his congregation, and induced him to remove to Dighton. He afterwards preached at Portsmouth. In 1777 he was chosen president of Yale college, as successor of Mr. Clap, and continued in this station till his death. It seems, from the private journal of Mr. Stiles, that he was earnestly opposed to the new-fangled doctrines of Dr. Hopkins and Stephen West, of which he speaks thus: "The people begin to be tired of the unintelligible and new points, as 1. that an unconverted man had better be killing his father than praying for converting grace; 2. that true repentance implies a willingness to be damned; 3. that we are to give God thanks that he caused Adam to sin and involved all his posterity in total deprayity; that Judas betrayed, etc.; 4. that the children of none but communicants are to be baptized; 5. that the church and ministers are so corrupt that no communion is to be held with them." When he was a candidate for the presidency of the college, Dr. James Dana wrote to him, that there was a party for Elizur Goodrich, but that if he was chosen "there would be another college." The nine ministers, constituting the trustees, with Mr. Goodrich, chose Mr. Stiles. He was one of the most learned men of whom this country can boast. He had a thorough knowledge of the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin languages, the former of which he learned when he was about forty years of age; he had made considerable progress in the Samaritan, Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabie; on the Persic and Coptic he had bestowed some attention; and the French he read with great facility. He was also well versed in most branches of mathematical knowledge. Next to sacred literature, astronomy was his favorite science. He had read the works of divines in various languages, and very few have had so thorough an acquaintance with the fathers of the Christian church. He possessed an intimate acquaintance with the Rabbinical writings. He was a most impressive and eloquent preacher, for he spoke with that zeal and energy which the deepest interest in the most important subjects cannot fail to inspire. His early discourses were philosophical and moral; but he gradually became a serious and powerful preacher of the momentous truths of the gospel. In the room of labored disquisitions, addressed rather to the reason than to the conscience and heart, he employed his time in preaching repentance and ever get to heaven, and through many tribula-cure; the physician of souls and our remedy in him; the manner in which the sinner is brought home to God in regeneration, justification, sanctification, and eternal glory; the terrors and blessings of the world to come; the influence of the Holy Spirit and the efficacy of the truth in the great change of the character, preparatory for heaven. The doctrines of the trinity in unity, of the divinity and atonement of Christ, with the capital principles of the great theological system of the doctrines of grace, he believed to have been the uninterrupted faith of eight-tenths of Christendom from the ascension of Jesus Christ to the present day. He delighted in preaching the gospel to the poor. Among the members of his church at Newport were seven negroes. These occasionally met in his study, when he instructed them, and, falling on their knees together, he implored for them and for bimself the blessing of that God with whom all distinction excepting that of Christian excellence is as nothing. In the cause of civil and religious liberty he was an enthusiast. He contended that the right of conscience and private judgment was unalienable; and that no exigences of the Christian church could render it lawful to erect any body of men into a standing judicatory over the churches. He engaged with zeal in the cause of his country. He thought that the 30th of January, which was observed by the Episcopalians in commemoration of the martyrdom of Charles I., "ought to be celebrated as an anniversary thanksgiving, that one nation on earth had so much fortitude and public justice as to make a royal tyrant how to the sovereignty of the people." He was eatholic in his sentiments, for his heart was open to receive all who loved the Lord Jesus in sincerity. He was conspicuous for his benevolence, as well as for his learning and piety. The following extracts from his diary furnish evidence of his Christian goodness: "The review of my life astonishes me with a sense of my sins. May I be washed in the blood of Jesus, which cleanseth from all sin. Purify and sanctify me, O blessed Spirit! I hope I love my Saviour for his divine excellences, as well as for his love to sinners; I glory in his divine rightcousness; and earnestly beseech the God of all grace to endue me with true and real holiness, and to make me like himself. I have earnestly importuned the youth of this university to devote themselves to that divine Jesus who hath loved them to the death. And, praised be God, I have reason to hope the blessed Spirit hath wrought effectually on the hearts of sundry, who have, I think, been brought home to God, and experienced what flesh and blood cannot impart to the human mind. Whether I shall do

te

fre

pa

pr

lib

of hu

Sc

Ch

38 ph

Ba

the cia

bui

Or

18 8

Jer

50.

of I

lan

Pri

first

Ogo

In :

cou

con

sign

ven

and his inte

his

Mr.

BUCC kne

of t offic sup

tiva

sive

His

yer thir

at I

cou

ton

in I

tive a da

had

S

5

know, that I am the most unworthy of all the

He was a man of low stature, and of a small though well-proportioned form. His voice was clear and energetic. His countenance, especially in conversation, was expressive of benignity and mildness; but, if occasion required, it became the index of majesty and authority. He published a funeral oration in Latin on Governor Law, 1751; a discourse on the Christian union, preached before the Congregational ministers of Rhode Island, 1760; in this work he recommends harmony among different Christians, and shows an intimate acquaintance with the ecclesiastical affairs of the country; a sermon at the installation of S. Hopkins, 1770; a Latin oration on his induction into his office, 1778; the United States elevated to glory and honor, an election sermon, preached May 8, 1783, which exhibits the elequence, and patriotism, and glowing sentiments of liberty, with which the august occasion could not fail to inspire him; account of the settlement of Bristol, 1785; a sermon at the ordination of II. Channing, 1787; history of the three judges of King Charles I., Whalley, Goffe, and Dixwell, 12mo., 1795; in this work he discloses very fully his sentiments on civil liberty, and prediets a republican renovation in England. He left an unfinished ecclesiastical history of New England, and more than forty volumes of manuscripts. An interesting account of his life was published by his son-in-law, Dr. Holmes, in 1798. - Sprague.

STILLMAN, SAMUEL, D. D., minister in Boston, died March 13, 1807, aged 70. He was born in Philadelphia Feb. 27, 1737. When he was but eleven years of age his parents removed to Charleston, South Carolina, and in an academy in that city he received the rudiments of his education. The preaching of Mr. Hart was the means of teaching him that he was a sinner, and of converting him. Being ordained at Charleston Feb. 26, 1759, he immediately afterwards settled at James Island; but his impaired health induced him in 1760 to remove to Bordentown. New Jersey, where he preached two years, and then went to Boston. After being an assistant about a year in the second Baptist church, he was installed the minister of the first, as successor of Mr. Condy, who now resigned his office, Jan. 9, 1765. In this church he continued his benevolent labors, universally respected and beloved, till his death by a paralytic shock. As an eloquent preacher of the gospel Dr. Stillman held the first rank. Embracing the peculiar doctrines of the Christian religion, he explained and enforced them with clearness and with anostolic intrepidity and zeal. He possessed a pleasant and most commanding voice, and, as he felt what prised in the volume. Besides the copious ma-tions enter into rest, God only knows. This I he spoke, he was enabled to transfuse his own feelings into the hearts of his anditors. The total moral depravity of man was a principle on which in his preaching he much insisted, and he believed that the Christian was dependent on God's immediate agency for the origin and continuanco of every gracious exercise. From his clear apprehension of the eternal personal election of a certain number of the human race to salvation, he was led to believe the perseverance unto eternal glory of all those who are regenerated by the Spirit of God. The Godhead and atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ were his frequent themes. He was a preacher of rightcousness, and his own life was holy. In the chamber of sickness and affliction he was always among different denominations a welcome visitor. His uncommon vivacity and energy of feeling were united with a perfect sense of propriety, and with affability, ease, and politeness. He published a sermon on the repeal of the stamp act, 1766; enlistments, 1769; dangers of youth, 1771; at the artillery election, 1770; at the ordination of S. Shepard, 1771; of Stephen S. Nelson, 1797; of Thomas Waterman, 1801; of Lucius Bowles, 1805; on the death of Mary Stillman, 1768; of S. Ward, 1776; election sermon. 1779; on charity, 1785; before a society of freemasons, 1789; apostolic preaching in three discourses, 1790; on the death of N. Brown, 1791; of Washington, 1800; of H. Smith, 1805; at the execution of Levi Ames, 1773; thanksgiving sermon on the French revolution, 1794; on the national fast, 1799; on opening the Baptist meeting-house in Charlestown; on the first anniversary of the female asylum, 1801; on the first anniversary of the Massachusetts Baptist missionary society, 1803. A volume of twenty sermons was published, 8vo., 1808, of which eight had never before been published.

STILLWELL, JARRAT, general, died in New York in 1843, aged 86; a Revolutionary soldier. STILLWELL, WILLIAM, Methodist minister, died at Astoria, N. Y., Aug. 9, 1851, aged 64. He was thirty-one years pastor in Christic street, New York. He performed the marriage service eight thousand times; the funeral service seven thousand times.

STIRLING, earl of, see William Alexander. STITH, WILLIAM, president of William and Mary college, Virginia, was a native of that colony, and for some years a respectable elergyman. He withdrew from the laborious office which he sustained in the college, soon after the year 1740, and died in 1750. He published a bistory of the first discovery and settlement of Virginia, Williamsburg, 8vo., 1747. It brings down the history only to 1624. An appendix contains a collection of charters relating to the period coms own

The to-

ple on ınd he ent on

d con-

om his il elec-

race to erance

egener-

ad and

ere his right-

In the

always visitor.

feeling

opricty,

Ho pub-

mp act,

youth,

the or-

hen S.

801; of

ry Still-sermon.

of free-

rce dis-

a, 1791;

; at the

ving ser-

on the

ist meet-

anniver-

first anissionary

nons was ad never

in New

soldier.

minister,

aged 64.

ie street,

e service

ice seven ander.

liam and that col-

ergyman.

which he ear 1740,

ory of the

nia, Wil-

the his-ontains a

riod com-

ious materials of Smith, the author derived assistance from the manuscripts of his uncle, Sir John Randolph, and from the records of the London company, put into his hands by Col. William Byrd, president of the conneil, and from the valuable library of this gentleman. Mr. Stith was a man of classical learning, and a faithful historian; but he was destitute of taste in style, and his details are exceedingly minute.

STOCKBRIDGE, CHARLES, M. D., died at Scituate, Mass., in 1806, aged 72, leaving a son Charles, a physician, who died in S. iu 1827, aged 38. His father, Benjamin, was a distinguished physician before him in S. — Dean's Hist. of S. STOCKBRIDGE, JOSEPH, captain, died at Bath, Maino, Aug. 9, 1835, aged 76; a soldier of the Revolution, engaged in various battles. STOCKBRIDGE, CHARLES, M. D., a physician of Scituate, died in Oct., 1827, aged 38.

STOCKING, JEREMIAH, minister of Glastenbury, Conn., died in 1853, aged 85.

STOCKING, WILLIAM R., late missionary at Oroomiah, Persia, died at New York April 30, 1854, nged 44. STOCKTON, RICHARD, a statesman of New Jersey, died near Princeton Feb. 28, 1781, aged 50. He was the son of John S., and grandson of Richard S., who died in possession of a large landed estate at Princeton in 1720; was born at Princeton Oct. 1, 1730; was graduated in the first class in 1748; and studied law with David Ogden of Newark. In 1766 he visited England. In 1774 he was appointed a judge of the supreme court of New Jersey, and in 1776 a member of congress. In debate he took an active part, and signed the declaration of independence. November 30th, a party of royalists captured him and threw him into prison at New York, where his sufferings destroyed his health. Congress interposed for his release. The enemy destroyed his library and devastated his lands. At the bar Mr. S. appeared with unrivalled reputation and success, refusing to engage in any cause which he knew to be unjust, and standing forth in defence of the helpless and the injured. He filled the office of judge with integrity and learning. His superior powers of mind, which were highly cultivated, were united with a flowing and persuasive eloquence; he was also a sincere Christian. His son, Richard S., LL. D., a distinguished lawyer and a senator of the United States, and for thirty years a trustee of Princeton college, died at Princeton in 1828.

STODDARD, Anthony, the first in this country of the family of Stoddards, died at Boston March 15, 1687, aged about 70. He lived in Boston as early as 1639, and was a representative more than twenty years. His first wife was a daughter of Emanuel Downing, and by her he had sons, Solomon, Samson, and perhaps Simeon.

His second wife was Barbarn, the widow of J. Weld, and her son was Stephen. His third wife was Christiana, and by her he had Authony, Joseph, and Ebenezer.

STODDARD, Solomon, minister of Northampton, Mass., died Feb. 11, 1729, aged 85. He was the eldest son of Anthony Stoddard, was born in Boston in 1643, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1662. He was afterwards appointed a fellow. His health being impaired, he went to Barbadoes as chaplain to Gov. Serle, and preached to the dissenters on that island near two years. After his return, being ordained Sept. 11, 1672, as successor to Mr. Mather at Northampton, he continued in that place till his death. His ministerial labors were interrupted for but a short time. His colleague, Mr. Edwards, survived him. His wife was Esther, the daughter of John Warham, and widow of his predecessor, E. Mather; she died in 1736, aged 91. Besides his children, here mentioned, Authory and John, he had sons Samuel and Aaron, and daughters Mary, the wife of Rev. Stephen Mix; Esther, of Rev. Timothy Edwards; Christina, of Rev. William Williams of Hatfield; and Sarah, of Rev. Samuel Whitman of Farmington. Mr. Stoddard was a learned man, well versed in religious controversies, and himself an acute disputant. He engaged in a controversy with Increase Mather respecting the Lord's supper, maintaining that the sacrament was a converting ordinance, and that all baptized persons, not scandalous in life, may lawfully approach the table, though they know themselves to be unconverted, or destitute of true religion. As a preacher his discourses were plain, experimental, searching, and argumentative. He was blessed with great success. He used to say that he had five harvests; and in these revivals there was a general cry, What must I do to be saved? He was so diligent in his studies, that he left a considerable number of sermons which he had never preached. He wrote so fine a hand, that one hundred and fifty of his discourses are contained in a small 12mo. manuscript volume. He published the trial of assurance, 1696; doctrine of instituted churchos, London, 4to., 1700, in which he maintained that the Lord's table should be accessible to all persons not immoral in their lives; that the power of receiving and censuring members is vested exclusively in the elders of the church; and that synods have power to excommunicate and deliver from church censures. He published also the necessity of acknowledging offences, 1701; the danger of degeneracy, 1702; election sermon, 1703; sermon on the death of John Pynchon, 1703; on the neglect of the worship of God, relating to the supper, etc., 1707; the falseness of the hopes of many professors, 1708; at Chency, 1718; examination of the power of the the principles and the doctrines of the first fathfraternity, 1718; appeal to the learned on the Lord's supper, against the exceptions of I. Mather, 1709; plea for tithes; divine teachings, 1712; a guide to Christ, or the way of directing souls in the way to conversion, compiled for young ministers, 1714; three sermons, showing the virtue of Christ's blood to cleanse from sin, that natural men are under the government of self-love, that the gospel is the means of conversion, and a fourth annexed to stir up young men and maidens to praise the Lord, 1717; a treatise concerning conversion; the way to know sincerity and hypocrisy, 1719; answer to cases of conscience. 1722; defects of preachers, 1723; whether God is not angry with the country for doing so little towards the conversion of the Indians, 1723; safety of appearing at the judgment in the righteousness of Christ; this work was republished at Edinburgh, 8vo., 1792. - Colman's Sermon on his Death.

STODDARD, SAMPSON, minister of Chelmsford, Mass., died in 1740, aged about 60. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1701, and was settled in 1706. His predecessors were J. Fiske and T. Clark. He was succeeded by E.

Bridge and H. Packard.

STODDARD, ANTHONY, minister of Woodbury, Conn., died Sept. 6, 1760, aged 82. He was the son of Solomon S. of Northampton, born in 1678; graduated at Harvard in 1697; was ordained as successor of Z. Walker, May 27, 1702: and preached sixty years with great success, having four hundred and seventy-four admissions to his church. He was also clerk of probate forty years, and was to his people a lawyer and physician; and was one of the largest farmers in the town. His wife from 1701 to 1714 was Prudence Wells; he next married Mary Sherman, who died in 1720. He had eleven children. Among his descendants were Major Amos, of Boston, and Col. Henry Stoddard of Ohio. He published election sermon, 1716. - Cothren's Hist. Woodbury.

STODDARD, ISRAEL, sheriff of Berkshire county, died in Pittsfield in 1782, aged 41. He was the son of John and the grandson of Rev.

STODDARD, John, a member of the council of Massachusetts, the son of Rev. Solomon, died at Boston June 19, 1748, aged 66. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1701. He discharged the duties of several important stations with great ability and uprightness. He was many years in the council, was chief justice in the court of common pleas, and colonel of a regiment. With a vigorous mind and keen penetration he united an accurate acquaintance with the concerns of the colonies and of the neighboring tribes of Indians. Thoroughly established in ers of New England, he greatly detested what he considered the opposite errors of more modern divinity. His wife was Prudence Chester of Wethersfield. - Edwards' Sermon.

STODDARD, Amos, major, died in 1813, aged 54. His father was Anthony of Woodbury, Conn., who was a grandson of Rev. Anthony S. Ile was a soldier from 1779 to the close of the war: then clerk of the supreme court in Boston. He settled as a lawyer in Hallowell, Me., about 1792; in 1799 he was appointed a captain of artillery in the army. In the battle at fort Meigs he was wounded by a shell, and in consequence died of the lockjaw. He was civil commander of upper Louisiana. He was a man of talents. He published the political crisis, London; and sketches of Louisiana, 12mo., 1812.

STODDARD, Solomon, Jun., died at Northampton Nov. 11, 1847, aged 47. A graduate of Yale college in 1820, he was a professor of languages at Middlebury college. He was a deseendant of Solomon, the second minister of Northampton. His father, Solomon of Northampton, still lives, aged 86 years, Feb. 18, 1857, the son of Solumon, high sheriff of Hampshire, who was the son of Colonel John. His mother was a daughter of Benjamin Tappan. In 1836 he united with Professor Andrews in preparing their Latin grammar. He was a good scholar and highly esteemed teacher and professor.

STODDARD, HARRIET, wife of David T. S., missionary in Persia, died of the cholera at Trebizond Aug. 2, 1848, aged 26; the daughter of Dr. C. Briggs of Marblehead. She was a most active and useful member of the mission at Oroomiah. Mr. S., with his family, was on a journey for his health to Constantinople. - N. Y. Observer, Nov. 25.

STODDARD, SILAS, captain, died in Macedon. Conn., July 3, 1850, aged 91. He served and fought in the war of independence on board the ship Discovery.

STOLL, JACOB, seventy years a minister of the Dunkers, died in Lancaster county, Pa., in April,

1822, aged 91.

STONE, SAMUEL, one of the first ministers of Hartford, Conn., died July 20, 1663. He was a native of Hertford, England, and was educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge. To escape persecution he came to this country with Mr. Cotton and Mr. Hooker, and was settled as an assistant of the latter at Cambridge Oct. 11, 1633. He removed with him in 1636 to Hartford. While he was regarded as one of the most accurate and acute disputants of his day, he was also celebrated for his wit, pleasantry, and good humor. Being eminently pious, he abounded in fastings and prayer, and was a most strict observer of the Christian Sabbath. His wife was Elizabeth Alm wl ter rie hi qu the ch is I de 110 no

80

62, wic

As

5 m fre

at

eri was 172 the 8 died 44. crn vid dan ceiv

ing

con

den

gres con sm who ami of s in I He mai fath son Gui was W. dau son

182 self bull Roc

len, who lived till 1681. His daughter Elizabeth served in the war, and then lived at Brookfield, married William Sedgwick, the son of Robert, He reared his log cabin at Belpre, Ohio, in from whom she was divorced on account of his absence in the West Indies and neglect, and then married John Roberts. He left a son Samuel, who was a preacher: he fell down the bank of a rivulet in the evening and was killed. His daughter Mary married Joseph Fitch, and Sarah married Thomas Butler. His estate was 563 pounds; his books were estimated at 127 pounds, nearly a quarter of the whole estate of this minister in the wilderness. He published a Congregational church, etc., London, 1652. In this work, which is a curious specimen of logic, he emleavors to demolish the system of a national, political church. He left in manuscript a confutation of the antinomians, and a body of divinity. The latter was so much esteemed as to be often transcribed by theological students. - Mather's Magnalia, III. 62, 116-118.

STONE, NATHANIEL, first minister of Harwich, now Brewster, died in 1755, aged about 85. A graduate of 1690, he was ordained at the gathering of the church, Oct. 16, 1700: his successor was J. Dunster. He published election sermon, 1720; before the superior court April 24, 1728; the state of man by the fall, 1731.

STONE, THOMAS, a patriot of the Revolution, died at Port Tobacco, Md., Oct. 5, 1787, aged 44. He was a descendant of William S., governor of Maryland in 1649, the son of Da-Having studied law, and married a daughter of Dr. G. Brown, with whom he reecived 1000 pounds, he purchased a farm. Being in 1776 and in subsequent years a member of congress, he signed the declaration of independence. In 1783 and 1784 he was also in congress. A deep melancholy settled upon him in consequence of the death of his wife by the small pox. He died suddenly, leaving a son, who died in 1793, and two daughters. He was amiable in disposition, and a professor of religion of sincere piety. - Goodrich.

STONE, TIMOTHY, first minister of Goshen, in Lebanon, Conn., died in 1797, aged about 56. He was a descendant of Rev. Samuel S., a clergyman in England in the reign of Elizabeth, the father of Rev. Samuel S. of Hartford, by his son John, an emigrant to Salem in 1636, and to Guilford. He graduated at Yale in 1763, and was ordained in 1767. His successors were W. B. Ripley and E. Ripley. His wife was a daughter of Rev. Dr. Williams of Lebanon. His son Timothy, minister of Cornwall from 1803 to 1827, died in 1852. He published a sermon on selfishness, 1778; on the death of Faith Trumbull, 1780; at election, 1792; at ordination of L. Rockwell at Lyme, 1794. - Sprague's Annals.

STONE, JONATHAN, captain, died in 1801, aged 50. Born in New Braintree, Mass., he Dec., 1789. His son, Col. John, occupied the farm in 1852. - Hildreth.

STONE, JOHN HOSKINS, governor of Maryland, died in 1804. He was a patriot of the Revolution. In early life and at an early period of the Revolution he was the first captain in the celebrated regiment of Smallwood. At the battles of Long Island, White Plains, and Princeton, he was highly distinguished. In the battle of Germantown Oct. 4, 1777, he received a wound which deprived him of bodily activity for the remainder of his life. But he still bent his exertions to promote the same cause for which he had bled. He was governor from 1794 to 1797. He died at Annapolis, leaving behind him the reputation of an honest and honorable man, an intrepid soldier, a firm patriot, and a liberal, hospitable, friendly citizen.

STONE, ELIAB, minister of Reading, Mass., died Aug. 31, 1822, aged 85. Born in Framingham, the son of Micah, he graduated at Harvard in 1758; was ordained in 1761; and was pastor sixty-one years. He published a sermon at ordination of E. Hubbard, 1783; of M. Stone, his son, at Brookfield, 1801; at funeral of I. Morrill. 1794; at the fast, 1799; on the death of C. Prentiss, 1803; a half-century sermon, 1811.

STONE, DAVID, governor of N. C., died at Raleigh in 1818. He had been a judge, and a senator of the U.S.

STONE, BENJAMIN, the first preceptor of Leicester academy, died in 1832, aged 76. Born in Shrewsbury, he graduated in 1776, and began his labors in the academy June 7, 1784. After three years of useful service he became the preceptor of Westford academy; but for many years he lived in retirement on a farm in Shrewsbury, where he died. The first boy who entered his school, became the governor of a neighboring State, - W. L. Marcy, late secretary of State of the U.S.

STONE, Atossa, missionary in India, died at Bombay Aug. 7, 1833, aged 35. She was the daughter of Col. Joseph Frost of Marlborough, N. H., and educated at Keene, Plainfield, and Bradford, Mass. She married Rev. Cyrus Stone, missionary, and embarked for Calcutta in June, 1827, in company with Mrs. Allen; and she was buried near her and Mrs. Hervey. In her sickness she referred to the hymn in Worcester's book, beginning with "Thou dear Redeemer," as expressive of her state of mind. It was sung at her funeral. She died, as an English officer at Bombay wrote, - onn.. He war; He 1792; illery e was ied of fath-

what nod-

er of

aged

upper He and Northate of f lan-

a deiter of North-, 1857, pshire, nother ı 1836 paring scholar

T. S., Trebiof I)r. ost ac-Orgo ourney Y. 0bserved n board er of the n April, isters of e was a ducaced ape per-. Cotton assistant 33. Ile While rate and lebrated Being ngs and of the beth Al-

Mace-

[&]quot; Scattering the good seed on the moral waste. Compar'd with her's, earth's highest deeds how mean Achievements anthem'd in a nation's shout, The pompous vapors of a little day!"

and better, if the masters of soldiers felt so.

STONE, ISAAC, minister of Douglass, Mass., dled in 1837, aged 89. Born in Shrewsbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1770, and was pastor from 1771 to 1805. W. Phipps was the first minister, in 1747.

STONE, WILLIAM M., Episcopal bishop of Maryland, died in 1838, aged 58.

STONE, JOHN, M. D., died in Springfield, Mass., in 1838, aged 73. Born at Rutland, he commenced practice at Greenfield, whence about 1819 he removed for a short time to Providence; afterwards he lived at S. He died universally lamented. - Williams' Med. Biog.

STONE, Josian, a Haptist minister, died at

New Boston, N. H., in 1839, aged 76.

STONE, WILLIAM, minister at East Ridge,

N. Y., died in 1840, aged 82.

STONE, WILLIAM L., died at Saratoga Springs Aug. 15, 1844, aged 52; for many years editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser. His wife was a sister of President Wayland. He published a memoir of Brant, in 2 volumes; the life of Red Jacket; and a work on the history of Wyoming. For many years he was the useful superintendent of the common schools in the city of New York.

STONE, NOAH, Dr., died at Oxford, Conn.,

1851, aged 68,

STONE, Exos, colonel, died Oct. 23, 1851. aged 76. He was the first settler of Rochester, N. Y., and built the first house there.

STONE, TIMOTHY, died in S. Cornwall, Conn., May 14, 1852, aged 78; many years pastor of the church. His end was peace. He was active in forming the Cornwall mission school.

STONE, MICAH, minister of Brookfield, Mass., died Sept. 20, 1852, aged 82. Born in Reading in 1770, the son of Rev. Eliab Stone, he graduated at Harvard in 1790, and was pastor of South Brookfield from 1801 to 1827. Then he withdrew, with the church, from the parish, and formed a new society. His last sermon, at the age of eighty, was delivered on the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination, and gave evidence of unimpaired intellect. As a neighbor, friend, and minister he was highly esteemed. He published a sermon on the death of Mary Reed, 1804; a fast sermon, 1812; a semi-centennial sermon, 1851.

STORER, SETH, minister of Watertown, Mass., died in 1774, aged 72. Born in Saco, the son of Col. Joseph S., he graduated at Harvard in 1727, and was settled in 1724 as successor of H. Gibbe.

STORER, EBENEZER, an officer in the Revolution a war, die at Gorham, Me., Jan. 20, 1846, egad 87. He was born in Wells: his mother Was a sister of Cov. Langdon. He was a mer- | tions.

It were well if all soldiers felt like this one i chant of Portland and New York, and a Christlan. - Christian Mirror, Feb. 12.

STORK, WILLIAM, published a description of East Florida, with a journal of J. Bartram, 4to.,

STORKE, CHARLES A. G., minister at Rowan. N. C., died in 1831, aged 66,

C

lis

eli

die

J.

gri

ing

8.13

in i tle

pla

Fre

of etti

Mu

on

Rel

mil

mei

as 1

the

but

the

at l

15,

land

was life

wes

gre

ful

nan

succ S

in 14

ton

Bra

his

istr

lishe

givii

ton

sho

Sep

of I

Sep He

and of e

a ju

thir

app

STORRS, John, minister of Southold on Long Island, died in Mansfield, Conn., in 1799, aged about 65. He graduated at Yale in 1756; was a tutor in 1761; was ordained in 1763. In consequence of the war he left his charge from 1776 to 1782, living in Mansfield, where his patrimony lay, and acting sometimes as chaplain in the army. He resigned his charge at Southold in 1787, and returned to Mansfield. He was the father of Rev. R. S. Storrs; and published a sermon at his ordination, 1786.

STORRS, RICHARD SALTER, minister of Long. mendow, Mass., died Oct. 3, 1819, aged 54. Born in Mansfield, Conn., the son of Rev. John & L graduated at Yale in 1785, and was ordained Dec. 7, 1785, succeeding S. Williams, and was succeeded by B. Dickinson in 1823. His preaching was fervent and rich in evangelical truth, and his ministry was very acceptable. His wife was Sally, a daughter of Rev. N. Williston: he was the father of distinguished sons, one of whom is Rev. Dr. S. of Braintree, who is the father of a distinguished son, Rev. Dr. S. of Brooklyn. His earliest ancestor in America was Samuel of Mansfield, the son of Samuel of Sutton in England: next was Samuel, then John, then again John, then Samuel of Mansfield, then Rev. John Storrs of Southold, who was his father. He was named after Rev. Richard Salter, who adopted and eduented him in consequence of some family ties.

STORRS, WILLIAM, minister of Ashford, Conn., died in 1824, aged about 50. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1788.

STORRS, CHARLES B., president of a college in Ohio, died at Braintree, Mass., Sept. 15, 1833, aged 39. He was the son of Rev. Richard S. Storrs, and studied theology from 1817 three years at Andover seminary. From 1822 to 1828 he was the pastor of Itavenna, Ohio. Afterwards he was professor of theology and president of the Western Reserve college at Hudson, Ohio. In ill health be visited his brother, Rev. Dr. Storrs at Brabate. there to die. If was a man resolars in purpose and persevering in effort, of learning and deep piety.

STORRS, HENRY RANDOLPH, died in New Haven July 29, 1837, aged 49. Born in Middletown, he graduated at Yale in 1804. He settled as a lawyer at Utica, and was a member of congress 1819-21, 1823-31; of powerful elocution, and a debater of high rank. From Utica he removed to New York. - Goodrich's Recollec-

STORRS, NATHANIEL, died in Boston June fortune of any lawyer from his practice and his 16, 1851, aged 77; a distinguished teacher many years. He was a native of Lebanon, N. H.

STORRS, Josts. minister of Winehendon, Mass, died in 1854, aged 52. Born in Mansfield, Conn., he had been pastor in Barre and Holliston, also in Norwich, Conn.; and was agent of the American bible sot ety.

STORY, DANIEL, first minister of Marietta, died Dec. 30, 1804, aged 49. At uncle of Judge J. Story, he was bortt in Boston in 1755, and graduated at Dartmouth in 1780. While preaching at Worcester, he was engaged in 1789 to go as a chaplain to Ohlo, and commenced his labors in the spring, preaching at Marietta and at the settlements of Waterford and Helpre; at the latter place under the shade of a wide-branching tree. From 1701 to 1705 he preached in the chamber of the block-house of Campus Martins at Marietta. He preached also at the mouth of the Muskingum on the left bank, fort Harmer being on the right bank. He was accustomed to go to Helpre, fifteen miles, and to Waterford, twenty miles, in a canoe. He collected a church of members from various places in 1796, over which as pastor he was ordained, - not on the spot, for there was no minister west of the mountains, but at Danvers in Mass., Mr. Cutler preaching the sermon, Aug. 15, 1797. He was dismissed at his own request, being in bad health, March 15, 1804; and died in the same year. He owned lands; but he left debts, which the sale of them was only sufficient to pay. His property and his life were sacrificed for the religious benefit of the west. He was a good preacher; in prayer greatly gifted. In his conversation he was cheerful and animated. He was never married. His name is remembered with honor. Mr. Robbins succeeded him. - Hildreth's Biog. Memoirs.

STORY, ISAAC, minister of Marblehead, died in 1816, aged about 70. He graduated at Princeton in 1768; was ordained colleague with S. Bradstreet of Marblehead in 1771; and married his daughter. After thirty years he left the ministry and engaged in secular business. He published an epistle from Yarieb to Inkle; a thanksgiving sermon, 1774, 1795; eulogy on Washington; oration at Woreester, 1801; Parnassian shop, 1801. - Sprague.

STORY, JOSEPH, judge, died in Cambridge Sept. 10, 1845, aged nearly 66. He was the son of Dr. Elisha Story of Marblehead, and was born Sept. 18, 1779, and graduated at Harvard in 1798. He became a member of the legislature in 1805, and was elected speaker: he was also a member of eongress. Mr. Madison appointed him in 1811 a judge of the supreme court, an office he held thirty-four years till his death. In 1830 he was Cambridge. It is said he acquired the largest thing more than an inspired man: not one word books; the income from his books being 10,000 dollars a year. His wife, Sarah Waldo Wetmore, was the daughter of Judge William Wetmore. He left a song also a daughter, who married George W. Curtos. In regard to lawyers' fee. Judge Story relates a pleasant ancedote. Judge Parsons was once committed by letter, and his opinion asked, and a fee of 20 dollars was sent. He made no answer. After a while came a second letter, to which the judge replied that he had examined the case and formed an opinion, but "somehow or other it stock in his throat." The gentleman took the hint as sent him 100 dollars. In his politics Judge St. was a republican, demominated a jacobla, an ad ent of Mr. Jefferson; and he drew upon himser not a little odium, living in the midst of warm fed alists. But he rapidly rose to distinction as lawyer, for he was always a hard studen , and he had talents and genius. His political attaches bts did not prevent him from making some in tant discoveries and from uttering some inc. mant New England feelings: "Virginia has ru. 1 as by the old maxim, divide and conquer." " We have foolishly suffered ourselves to be wheedled by southern politicians, until we have almost for gotten that the honors and the constitution the Union are as much our birthright and protection as of the rest of the United Stat He combined in his character some traits where are seldom united. He was a writer of poetry and a learned, philosophical jurist; he was the life of social parties, and almost unequalled in conversation, yet a hard and laborious student. In the extent of his invaluable legal writings he stands almost alone. His commentaries and his written judgments in his circuit make twenty-seven volumes; and his judgments in the supreme court form an important part of thirty-four volumes more. The reporters of the circuit cases were J. Gallison, W. P. Mason, C. Sumner, and W. W. Story. His commentaries on the constitution of the United States are in three volumes ; and on the conflict of laws in one volume; on equity jurisprudence in two volumes; on the law of pleadings in one; on the law of bailments in one. He wrote also on the law of agency; of partnership; of bills of exchange; of promissory notes. In his last sickness he said to his wife: "I shall die content, and with a firm faith in the goodness of God. We shall meet again." He was a member of the Unitarian church in Cambridge; but, although the author of the account of his life says of him, "he believed in the inspiration and doctrines of Christ, in the immortality of the soul, in the unity of God," there does not seem to be any evidence, in the two volumes of appointed Dane professor in the law school at his life, that he regarded the Son of God as any d on 1799. 17561 . In from patain in hrls-

on of 4to.,

man.

as the a ser Long. Horn

S . L.

dained

athold

id was preachth, and ife was he was rhom is er of a n. Ilis f Mansngland; n John, n Storrs s named ınd edu-

ties.

Ashford,

gradua col-Sept. 15, Richard 17 three to 1828 terwards nt of the hio. In r. Storrs inn resoin New n Middle-Ie settled er of conclocution. Utien he Recolleceffort, of

incarnation of the Son of God, and his death as Jews. a propitiation for the sins of the world. In notieing the diversities of construction among learned men of the same Divine word, every refleeting man must feel it to be his duty to judge for himself, and not to build his faith on the persuasion of another. As to his poetry, if the labor. remarks of a critic are true, the defects of his Power of solitude, written in early life, are "an exaggeration of feeling, confusion of imagery, and a want of simplicity of expression. The style is stilted and artificial." His life was published by his son, William Wetmore Story, in 2 laud; was colleague with Mr. Hook at Taunton, vols., 1851.

STOUGHTON, WILLIAM, lieutenant-governor of Mass., died at Dorchester July 7, 1701, aged 70. He was the son of Col. Israel Stoughton, who commanded the Massachusetts troops in the Pequot war. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1650, and becoming a preacher was for some years resident in England. After the restoration in 1660 he was ejected from a fellowship in Oxford, and repaired to New England in 1662. Though not a settled minister he was appointed to preach the election sermon in 1668. This sermon has been ranked among the hest delivered upon the occasion. After the death of Mr. Mitchell he declined an invitation to become his successor in the care of the church at Cambridge. In 1671 he was chosen a magistrate, and in 1677 went to England as an agent for the province. He was a member of the council, and chief justice of the superior court. Being appointed lieutenant-governor in 1692, he was commanderin-chief from 1694 to 1699, and again in 1700. He was a man of great learning, integrity, prudence, patriotism, and piety. He was a generous benefactor of Harvard college, giving to that institution about 1,000 pounds. Stoughton hall died at Surry, N. H., in 1808, aged 70. was erected at his expense in 1698. He left a tract of land for the support of students, natives of Dorchester, at the college, and another tract for the benefit of schools. He was never married. - Willard's Sermon.

STOUGHTON, JUAN, don, Spanish consul, died at Boston in 1820, aged 75. He had been consul at B. for thirty years.

STOW, SAMUEL, first minister of Middletown, Conn., died May 8, 1704, aged 82. He was the son of Thomas of Concord, and was born in England; was graduated in 1645, in the third Harvard class; and went to Middletown in 1645, remaining in the ministry ten years. He then perate. - Thacher's Med. Biog. relinquished his profession, and was for the remainder of his life a much-respected citizen. His wife was Hope, daughter of William Fletcher of Concord: his daughter Hope married George lumbia college in 1793. He studied medicine in Phillips of Middletown. He gave a lot of land part in Edinburgh. He succeeded Mitchell as occurs in them intimating his belief of the teach- to the town for the benefit of education. He left ings of Scripture concerning the pre-existence and in manuscript ten Essays for conversion of the

fo

ist

to

Be

17 οť

me

Al

het

Sti

of

Co

age

Ma

sep

and 175

was min

tow

the

He

Gra

one

Spi

hers

No

gra

but poi

He

pio deve

tics

in 1

was bur

to 1

astr

ture

han Bor

in 1

ister bein

STOWE, WILLIAM B., died at Ridgeville, O., in 1855, aged 73. Born in Marlborough, he graduated at Williams college in 1811, and was for many years a minister in New England and New York, and performed much missionary STRAWBRIDGE, WILLIAM, a Baptist minister, died at Lower Providence, Pa., in 1830, aged 73.

STREET, NICHOLAS, minister of Taunton and New Haven, died in 1674. He came from Engwhere he remained twenty years; and then was colleague with Mr. Davenport in 1659, and remained at New Haven till his death. He was pious, modest, judicious, and a good preacher. His first wife was a sister of Elizabeth Pool; his second, the widow of Gov. Newman. - Spraque's STREET, SAMUEL, minister of New Haven, the son of Nicholas S., died Jan. 16, 1712, aged 82. He had been minister forty-two years. Ilis daughter married Theophilus Yale.

STREET, SAMUEL, first minister of Wallingford, Conn., died Jan. 16, 1717, aged 82, 416 was the son of Rev. Nicholas S., and ordained in 1674, then 40 years of age. The church was strictly Congregational, rejecting the Saybrook platform, when formed. Mr. Whittelsey was ordained in 1710.

STREET, NICHOLAS, minister of East Haven, Conn., died in 1806, aged 76. He graduated at Yale in 1751, and was settled in 1755, succeeding the first pastor, J. Hemingway. He was distinguished for piety, prudence, and benevolence.-Sprague.

STREETER, ZEBEDEE, a Universalist minister,

STRICKLAND, John, a minister, died at Hudson, N. II., in 1823, aged 84. Born at Hadley, he graduated at Yale in 1761. He was pastor at Oakham, Mass., from 1768 to 1773; was installed at Nottingham West in 1774; at Turner, Me., in 1774; at Andover, N. H., in 1786.

STRINGER, SAMUEL, Dr., died at Albany in 1817, aged 82. Born in Maryland, he was a surgeon in the army in 1758, and after the war settled and married in Albany. In the Revolutionary war, he was director-general of the hospitals at the north. He was esteemed as a physician. In his habits he was frugal and tem-

STRINGHAM, JAMES S., M. D., a physician of New York city, died at St. Croix in 1817, aged about 42. Born in N. Y., he graduated at CoHe left of the

lle, O., gh, he nd was nd and sionary

st minı 1830,

ton and m Englaunton, hen was and re-He was creacher. col; his prague's Haven, 12, aged ars. His Walling-82. Ho dained in urch was Saybrook by was orst Haven, duated at ucceeding ras distinolence.—

t minister, ed at Hudit Hadley, s pastor at is installed er, Me., in Albany in was a surer the war he Revoluof the hosemed as a 1 and tem-t physician 1817, aged ated at Comedicine in Mitchell as professor of chemistry in Columbia college; then was professor of medical jurisprudence. He wrote for various journals. — Thacher's Med. Biog.

STRONG, Jon, died Sept. 30, 1751, aged 27, at Portsmouth, N. H., where he had been a minister two years. He was a native of Northampton; a graduate of Yale in 1747; a missionary among the Indians a short time. A letter of his is preserved in Brainerd's life.

STRONG, Thomas, first minister of New Marlborough, died Aug. 23, 1777, aged about 60. Born in Northampton, he graduated at Yale in 1740, and was settled Oct. 31, 1741. T. Tattlow of Marlborough, Conn., bequeathed Henry's commentary, in six large volumes, to the clurch, to be lert out to the members: they were a treasure in the wilderness. His successors were C. Alexander and J. Catlin. Mr. S. married Elizabeth Barnard; and his son, Thomas Barnard Strong, a graduate of Yale in 1800, is a citizen of Pittsfield.

STRONG, NATHAN, minister of Coventry, Conn., the first in the north society, died in 1795, aged about 75. He graduated at Yale in 1742.

STRONG, JOSEPH, minister of Williamsburg, Mass., died in 1803, aged 73. The son of Joseph of Coventry, he graduated at Yale in 1749, and was first the minister of Granby, Conn., from 1752 to 1770; was a chaplain in the army; and was settled in W. in 1781. His son, Joseph, minister of Glastenbury, Sonth Hadley, Belchertown, and Preble, N. Y., died in 1823, aged 67; the father of Prof. Theodore Strong of Clinton. He published a sermon at the ordination of S. Graves; on the death of G. Mills; the church one, 1783; two sermons in a volume, 1799.—Sprayue's Annals.

STRONG, SIMEON, I.L. D., judge, died at Amherst, Mass., Dec. 14, 1805, aged 69. Born in Northampton, his father removed to Amherst; he graduated at Yale in 1756; was at first a preacher, but was admitted to the bar in 1761, and was appointed a judge of the supreme court in 1800. He was a learned lawyer, an upright judge, a pious Christian, conversant with family and closet descripts.

STRONG, NEHEMIAH, professor of mathematics in Yale college, died in 1807, aged 79. Born in Northampton, he graduated at Yale in 1755; was tutor three years; then ordained in Simsbury, now Granby; and was professor from 1770 to 1781. He died at Bridgeport. He published astronomy improved, the substance of three lectures.

STRONG, CYPRIAN, D. D., minister of Chatham, now Portland, Conn., died in 1811, aged 67.

Born at Farmington, Conn., he graduated at Yale at two thanksgivings; at ordination of J. Strong, in 1763, and was settled in 1767. The first minister was Daniel Newell, settled in 1721, the town being then a part of Middletown. Dr. Strong's bility of life; on the use of time; a century ser-ministry continued fifty-four years. He published a sermon on owning the covenant, 1780; remarks on sermons of J. Lewis, 1789; inquiry on baptism, 1793; at ordination of S. Shepard, 1795; of E. Gridley, 1797; of J. Hushnell, 1809; at election, 1799; at the request of masons; a fast sermon. — Sprague's Annals.

STRONG, JONATHAN, D. D., minister of Randolph, Mass., died Nov. 9, 1814, aged 50. He was born in Bolton, Conn., Sept 4, 1764; his parents removed to Orford, N. H. He was graduated at Dartmouth college in 1786; ordained as the colleague of Mr. Taft in Jan., 1789. His successor was Thaddeus Pomeroy. His daughter married W. Cogswell, D. D. In three periods of successful toil during his ministry he numbered more than two hundred converts. He was a faithful preacher, of unpolished but powerful eloquenee, firm in his attachment to the great truths of the gospel. A memoir of him by Rev. Mr. Storrs is in the panoplist, vol. XII. He wrote much for the Massachusetts missionary magazine, and also for the panoplist. He published a sermon at the thanksgiving, 1795; at the ordination of L. White, 1798; on the landing of our forefathers, 1803; on the death of Dr. Z. Bass, 1804; before the missionary society, 1808; on the national independence, 1810; at a dedication, 1814.-Sprague's Annals.

STRONG, JOHN, general, died at Addison, Vt., in 1816, aged 79. He was a soldier of the Revolution, and first judge of Addison county.

STRONG, NATHAN, D. D., minister of Hartford, Conn., died Dec. 25, 1816, aged 68. He was the son of Nathan S., minister of Coventry; was born in 1748; graduated at Yale college in 1769; and was ordained Jan. 5, 1774. In the war he was a patriot and a chaplain in the army. He was a learned and very useful minister, distinguished for his discernment and knowledge of men. Of the missionary society of Conn. he was the principal founder in 1798. For some years he was the editor of the Connecticut evangelical magazine. Dr. S. issued a prospectus for his sermons. As the poet Trumbull one day met him, he inquired, "When are your sermons to be out?" The Dr. replied, "I cannot exactly tell; I am waiting to find a text to suit a man who never comes to ehurch, except when he has a child to be baptized." He published the doctrine of eternal misery reconciled with the benevolence of God, in answer to Huntington, 8vo.; a sermon at the execution of M. Dunbar, 1777; of R. Doane, 1797; on the death of Washington; of S. Williams, 1800; of C. Backus, 1804; of J. Cogswell, 1807; of C. Goodrich, 1815; at election, 1790; at two thanksgivings; at ordination of J. Strong, 1778; of J. L. Skinner, 1794; at convention of a church; before a benevolent society; on muta-

n

1

Λ

h

1

11 it

0 d

k

ខា aı

de

lo

sh

ice

do

th en

to an bei

be

un.

dis

18

the tho

he

the afr

ger " T

gu

sen

din

wh

an

a d

Lo

un

Ye

of

the

Ch

the fat

tha

sta of ide

th

Th

ete ati

de

mon. 1801: sermons. 2 vols. - Sprague's Annals; Am. Quar. Reg., Nov., 1840.

STRONG, CALEB, LL. D., governor of Massachusetts, died suddenly at Northampton, Nov. 7, 1819, aged 74. He was the son of Caleb S., descended from John S., who arrived from Taunton, England, in May, 1630, and settled at Dorchester, and thence removed to Windsor, and in 1659 to Northampton. He was born at N. in Jun., 1745, and graduated at Harvard college in 1764. He studied law with Mr. Hawley, but from ill health did not commence the practice till 1772. In 1776 he was a member of the legislature with Mr. Hawley, and continued in that body an active friend of his country till 1780, when he was chosen a councillor. In 1779 he assisted in forming the constitution of Massachusetts, and in 1787 that of the United States. Under the new national government he was eight years a senator, from 1789 to 1797. He was governor from 1800 till 1807, when Mr. Sullivan was elected; and was again chosen governor during the difficult period of the war, from 1812 to 1815. His wife, the daughter of John Hooker, the minister of Northampton, died in 1817. He was a man of sound judgment, and of exemplary piety. He wrote the address of the government to the insurgents in 1786. His speeches from 1807 to 1808 were published, 8vo., 1808.

STRONG, Joseph, D. D., died at Norwieh, Conn., Dec. 18, 1834, aged 80. He descended from John Strong; his grandfather removed from Windsor to Woodbury; his father, Rev. Nathan S., of the second church in Coventry, was graduated in 1742. He was a brother of Nathan Strong of Hartford. His son, Henry Strong, LL. D., died at Norwich, Nov. 11, 1852, aged 64. Dr. S. succeeded B. Lord. J. Fitch was the first pastor. He had as a colleague C. B. Everett. He published a sermon on the death of Gov. Huntington, 1796; of Washington; of Dr. J. Lathrop, 1803; of J. Murdock; of A. Hooker, 1813.

STRONG, Titus, D. D., Episcopal minister in Greenfield, died June 11, 1855, aged 68.

STRYKER, ISAAC P., missionary for Borneo, died at Batavia March 27, 1842. He sailed from Boston in 1840, Capt. John Codman giving him a free passage to Batavia in the ship Sarah Purker. After a residence for some time at B., he had embarked for Borneo, when he was attacked with a fatul fever.

STUART, GILBERT, or Gilbert Charles, a portrait-painter, died Wednesday, July 9, 1828, aged 73. He was born in Newport, R. I., in 1755. He was a pupil of Benjamin West in London. He was applauded in England, but he returned to America in 1790 or 1794, and resided chiefly when he removed to Boston. He was long racked with the gout. He left a daughter, Mrs. Stebbins, a painter. He was thoroughly acquainted with his art, and as a portrait and historical painter was unequalled in this country. He was also a man of a strong mind and interesting conversation. His picture of Washington presents a head of calm and majestic wisdom. familiar to all Americans. His pictures of Madison and Jefferson are in the gallery of Bowdoin STUART, DUNCAN, an early shipbuilder in Newbury, Mass., died in Rowley in 1717, aged 100. He removed to R. before 1680.

STUART, ROBERT, died at Chicago Oct. 20. 1848, aged 63. He lived as an enterprising merchant at Mackinaw, connected with the great west; but his chief residence was Detroit. Ile went to Illinois for a temporary abode, as conneeted with the internal improvements in that State. Full of joyous hopes as to rejoining his family in Detroit, he fell a victim to the great destroyer. But he was an exemplary Christian and an elder in the church. He was Indian agent, and held various offices of trust. - Obs.. Nov. 18.

STUART, DAVID, died at Detroit, Nov. 22. 1853, aged 88; one of Astor's agents in his expedition to Columbia river in 1810.

STUART, ROBERT, D. D., died near Nicholasville, Aug. 10, 1856; the oldest minister of the synod of Kentucky, an excellent and venerable

STUART, Moses, died at Andover Jan. 4, 1852, aged 71. The son of Isaac, he was born at Wilton, Conn., March 26, 1780; was graduated at Yale in 1799; was two years tutor, from 1802 to 1804. He first studied law, then theology, and was ordained as successor of Dr. Dana over the central church, New Haven, March 5, 1806; but in 1810 removed to Andover as professor of sacred literature, where he passed the remainder of his life. He had been a preacher forty-seven years, a teacher forty-one, a professor in the theological seminary thirty-eight. In person he was tall; he was frank, noble, independent. simple in manners; though at times sarcastic and severe, yet always honest and highly respected for his integrity and directness. His wife, Hannah Clark of Danbury, died in 1855. Three sons graduated at Yale, two of whom entered the profession of law, and one that of medicine. One of his daughters married Professor Phelps of Andover, and died in 1852: she was a gifted writer. Professor Stuart may be regarded as eminently the father of biblical literature in this country. His more important writings may be divided into four or five classes. First, his gramin Philadelphia and Washington till about 1801, mars and other aids to the theological student; next, his various commentaries on several books long of the Old Testament, and on the epistle to the Mrs. Romans, on that to the Hebrews, and on the ac-Apocalypse of the New Testament. Then come hishis letters relating to the Unitarian writings of ntry. Dr. Channing of Boston; and lastly his contronterversy with Professor Miller of Princeton. But igton it was in the lecture-room that, in the judgment dom. of Professor Stowe, who was one of his stu-Madidents, he was more remarkable than even in his wdoin writings, for "his readers can never feel the kindling enthusiasm that was never wanting er in among his hearers." The controversy in 1822 aged and 1823 between this learned professor at Andover and Dr. Miller, the head of the theoct. 20. logical school at Princeton, concerning the Sonmership of Christ, is an event of note in the theologgreat ical history of our country. What was the doctrine of Professor Stuart? He believed that s conthe title of Son was not given to Christ in refern that ence to his pre-existing nature, but only in respect ng his to his human nature, and that he was the Word, great and not the Son of God from eternity. He also ıristian believed that "infinite power, wisdom, justice, Indian benevolence, etc., all belong to God in his simple Obs., unity," and that these attributes are not to be distinguished from his substance or essence, which ov. 22. is numerically one. Dr. Miller maintained, with his exthe ancient fathers of the church, that Christ was the Son of God in his pre-existing nature, before icholashe came into the world, and was generated from of the the divine essence of the Father. Yet he was ncrable afraid to use the word derived, though the word generated can have no other meaning. He says: Jan. 4. "The generation of the Son was eternal. This lanas born guage is to be understood in a Divine and ineffable gradusense, excluding derivation, inferiority, or suboror, from dination." It were well for all our theologians n theolwho wish to teach any thing, not to use words in r. Dana an "ineffable sense." So also Mr. Stuart denies larch 5, a derivation of the Logos: "I believe that the as pro-Logos is really and verily Divine, - self-existent, ssed the uncaused, independent, immutable in himself." ireacher Yet he admits that he departs from the opinion professor of antiquity, saying, "the Nicene fathers and In perthe Greek commentators, one and all, held that pendent. Christ as to his divine nature was derived from astic and the Father." It was also the doctrine of the espected fathers of the three first centuries, as he admits, fe, Hanthat the Son was derived from God. Notwith-Three standing, in his view, whatever was the opinion entered of the ancients, it is impossible "to make the medicine. idea of time and proper divinity harmonize with or Phelps that of derivation and consequent dependence." a gifted The ancient fathers believed that the self-existent, arded as eternal God had a Son generated before the crere in this ation of the world, in time or before all time, being called the Word or the Son was underived, independent, equal with him who is called the Father, God himself, or one of three equal persons or beings, constituting God. So that the controversy between them relates entirely to the application of the term Son to Christ before he came into the world. The conscientious inquirer, who wishes to settle the question whether the bible does not teach that Christ was the Son of God in heaven, by whom God created the world, and that he came to the earth to tabernacle in human flesh, himself to suffer, in order to make atonement for the sins of man, will not build his faith on human authority; though, if authority were to govern, the ancient fathers stand higher than the modern professors. But he will search the Scriptures with his own eyes and reason. It is pleasant to record it, that both these eminent men recommend a free, untrammeled, manly inquiry after truth. Dr. Miller says, "I rejoice that our lot is east in an age and a country, in which the most unlimited freedom of inquiry reigns," Mr. Stuart expresses the hope that the time will come when we shall "hold ourselves more and more free to canvass the opinions of uninspired men, and faster bound to the simple instructions of the bible." Surely, what is plainly taught in God's book is to be received, however discordant it may be with the teaching of venerated creeds and of learned professors and doctors of theology. Among Mr. Stuart's writings are his communications to the biblical repository; Hebrew grammars; commentaries on the Hebrews, Romans, Daniel, Ecclesiastes, Proverbs. Apoealypse; a critical history of the Old Testament canon; a volume of miscellanies, including his letters to Dr. Channing on the trinity; two sermons at New Haven, 1810; letters to Dr. Miller on the eternal generation of the Son, 1822; two sermous on the atonement, 1824; at a dedication; at election, 1827; at ordination of W. G. Schaufiler; on the Lamb of God; on the death of Mrs. Woods; at ordination of T. Punderson; of Fisk, Spaulding, etc., 1819; on finishing the seminary building, 1821; sketch of Mrs. E. Adams; on distilled liquors, 1830; hints on the prophecies; letters to Dr. Channing on religious liberty; on the Old Testament canon; on the wine question, 1848; various translations of learned works; course of Hebrew study, 1830; on baptism, 1833; a grammar of the New Testament dialect; conscience and the constitution, 1851; commentary on Ecclesiastes; on the Proverbs. — Sprague's Annals.

STUBER, HENRY, Dr., died in Philadelphia, about 1792, aged about 22. He was a young man of learning and of great promise. He wrote a continuation of the life of Franklin. - Wilican professors, on the contrary, believed that the | liams.

derived from God the Father. These two Amer-gs may be his gram-

student;

of

the

edi

dis

age

mil

car

1101 law

une

an

to

for

the

and a m set

oth

con

tor

app

afte

ren

mei

stit

178

to '

the mai

gati

yea

mer

and wes

rep

in eil

wa

he

to suc

by arti

dar

pro

ลแเ fire

yea

800 gr

de

aft

his lor

na

wh

we

as

16, 1844, aged 110 years and 11 months. Born near Albany, he served in the Revolutionary war; in Kentucky he fought the Indians; he finally lived with a son near Kaskaskias. He was three times married.

STURTEVANT, ZENAS, a soldier, died at Plympton April 5, 1851, aged 81. By his grandmother Sturtevant he was the sixth in descent from Robert Cushman and from Isaac Allerton. He was in the army of Gen. St. Clair in the Indian battle near the forks of the Miami in Ohio, Nov. 4, 1791. In the disastrous defeat he was twice wounded and fell, but conecaled himself from the Indians and reached fort Jefferson in three days. His company were all killed and wounded but three: among the killed was Lieut. Winslow Warren, son of Gen. James W. of Plymouth, and Ensign Cobb, son of Gen. D. Cobb of Taunton.

STURTEVANT, NEWELL, a merchant of Boston, died of apoplexy Oct. 20, 1856, aged 48. On the same day, from the same cause, died another Boston merchant, E. D. Peters; both natives of Maine. Mr. S. was born in Winthrop. He was a pioneer in shipping coal from Pennsylvania, in which business he acquired an ample fortune. He was honorable, and was esteemed.

STUYVESANT, PETER, the last Dutch governor of New York, began his administration in 1647. He was continually employed in resisting the encroachments of the English and Swedes upon the territory intrusted to him. In 1664 an expedition from England was sent out against the Dutch possessions. Three or four frigates under the command of Col. Nichols appeared before New Amsterdam or New York, and Gov. Stuyvesant was summoned to surrender; but, as he was a good soldier, having lost a leg in the service of the States, he was by no means disposed to comply. He returned a long letter vindicating the claims of the Dutch, and declaring his resolution to defend the place. He was, however, obliged to capitulate Aug. 27. The whole of the New Netherlands soon became subject to the English. He remained in this country, and at his death was buried in a chapel on his own farm a few miles from New York .-Smith's New York, 5-23.

STUYVESANT, PETER G., of New York, died at Niagara Falls Aug. 16, 1847, aged 75. In good health, he died in the plunging bath near the hotel. He was an early member of the historical society and its president, and vice-president of the American bible society. His property was reported to amount to 15,000,000 dol-

SULLIVAN, JOHN, LL. D., major-general in

STUFFLEBEAN, JOHN, died in Illinois Jan. | shire, died in Durham Jan. 28, 1795, aged 54. He was appointed by congress a brigadier-general in 1775, and in the following year, it is believed, a major-general. He superseded Arnold in the command of the army in Canada June 4, 1776; but was soon driven out of that province. He afterwards, on the illness of Greene, took the command of his division on Long Island. In the battle of Aug. 27, he was taken prisoner with Lord Stirling. In a few months, however, he was exchanged. When Lee was carried off, he took the command of his division in New Jersey, Dec. 20. Aug. 22, 1777, he planned and exceuted an expedition against Staten Island, for which, on an inquiry into his conduct, he received the approbation of the court In Sept. he was engaged in the battle of Brandywine, and Oct. 4 in that of Germantown. In the winter he was detached to command the troops in Rhode Island. In Aug., 1778, he laid siege to Newport, then in the hands of the British, with the fullest confidence of success; but, being abandoned by the French fleet under D'Estaing, who sailed to Boston, he was obliged, to his unutterable chagrin, to raise the siege. Aug. 29 an action occurred with the pursuing enemy, who were repulsed. On the 30th, with great military skill, he passed over to the continent, without the loss of a single article, and without the slightest suspicion on the part of the British of his movements. In the summer of 1779 he commanded an expedition against the six nations of Indians in New York. Being joined by Gen. Clinton, Aug. 22, he marched towards the enemy under the command of Brant, the Butlers, and others, at Newton, between the south end of Seneca Lake and Tioga river; attacked them in their works; and completely dispersed them. He then laid waste the country, destroyed all their villages, and left not a single vestige of human industry. This severity was necessary to prevent their ravages. General Sullivan had made such high demands for military stores, and had so freely complained of the government for inattention to those demands, as to give much offence to some members of congress and to the board of war. He in conscquence resigned his command Nov. 9. He was in 1774 a member of the first congress, and also a member in 1780. In the years 1786, 1787, and 1789 he was president of New Hampshire, in which station, by his vigorous exertions, he quelled the spirit of insurrection which exhibited itself at the time of the troubles in Massachusetts. In Oct., 1789, he was appointed district judge.

SULLIVAN, JAMES, LL. D., governor of Massachusetts, the brother of the preceding, died in Boston Dec. 10, 1808, aged 64. He was born at the American army, and president of New Hamp- Berwick, Me., April 22, 1744. His father, a man of liberal education, came to this country about not assisted in his progress to distinction by the 54. the year 1723: he took the sole charge of the eral education of his son, James, and lived to see him ved. distinguished in the world; dying in July, 1795, the aged 105. Governor Sullivan was destined for 776; military life; but the fracture of a limb in his He early years induced him to bend the vigorous the powers of his mind to the investigation of the ı the law. After pursuing the study of this science with under his brother, General Sullivan, and opening was an office at Biddeford, on Saco river, he soon rose took to celebrity, and was appointed king's attorney Dec. for the county of York, in which he resided. On ed an the approach of the Revolution he took an earty)11 nn and active part on the side of his country. Being robaa member of the provincial congress of Massachued in setts in 1775, he was intrusted, together with two iat cf other gentlemen, with a difficult commission to Tied to conderoga, which was executed in a very satisfac-Aug.tory manner. Early in the following year he was ands appointed a judge of the superior court. Soon sucafterwards he purchased a farm in Groton and fleet removed his family to that place. He was a e was member of the convention which framed the cone the stitution of the State in 1779 and 1780. In Feb. pur-1782, he resigned his office of judge, and returned 30th. to the practice of the bar, first at Cambridge, o the then at Boston, where he resided during the ree, and mainder of his life. He was appointed a deleof the gate to congress in 1783; and in the ensuing ner of year was one of the commissioners in the settlest the ment of the controversy between Massachusetts Being and New York respecting their claims to the irched western lands. He was repeatedly chosen to Brant, represent the town of Boston in the legislature; en the in 1787 he was a member of the executive counr; ateil and judge of probate for Suffolk; and in 1790 pletely was appointed attorney-general, in which office untry, he continued till June, 1807, when he was called single to the chief magistracy of the commonwealth, as ty was successor of Governor Strong. He was appointed eneral by President Washington agent under the fifth or miliarticle of the British treaty for settling the bounof the daries between the United States and the British nds, as provinces. Of the American academy of arts of conand sciences he was one of the members from its consefirst institution; a principal founder and many Ic was years president of the Massachusetts historical nd also society; and president of the Massachusetts Con-87, and gregational charitable society. He was the prohire, in jector of the Middlesex canal, to which object he ns, he devoted a great portion of time and labor. Soon exhib-Massaafter his second election to the office of governor pointed his health became enfeebled, and he suffered a long and distressing confinement, which terminated in his death. The various public offices, of Mas-

died in

born at

, a man

which he sustained during a period of forty years, were cenferred upon him by the free and unbi-

advantage of opulence or family connections, the stations which he held were a proof of his talents, of his indefatigable industry, and of the confidence that was reposed in his integrity. As a judge he was universally acknowledged to have displayed the most perfect impartiality. As the public prosecutor of the State he tempered the sternness of official severity with the rarer tenderness of humanity. His style of eloquence was original, and adapted, with judicious discrimination, to the occasion, the subject, and to the tribunal before which it was called forth. Deeply versed in the science of the law, and equally well acquainted with the sources of persuasion in the human mind, he was alike qualified for the investigation of the most intricate and complicated questions of legal discussion, and for the development of the issues of fact before juries. As the chief magistrate of the State, he considered himself as the delegated officer, not of a political seet, but of the whole people, and endeavored to mitigate the violence of parties. In all the relations of domestic and social life his conduct was exemplary. He early made a profession of Christianity, und his belief of its truth was never shaken. When his frame was evidently shattered, and he had reason to think that God was calling him to his great account, the faith of Jesus was ever gaining a new ascendency in his views, and his thoughts expatiated with singular clearness on the scenes which awaited him, on the merey of his God, his own unworthiness, and the worth of the Redeemer. His private prayers and his domestic devotions, expressing at times both the joy and the anguish of his feelings, proved that his passions were not all given to the world. He closed his laborious life with the unshaken assurance of renewing his existence in another and better state. Amidst the great and constant pressure of business which occupied him, he still found time for the pursuits of literature and science. He was ever ready to contribute the efforts of his powerful and original mind to the purposes of public utility. He published observations on the government of the United States, 1791; dissertation on the stability of the States; the path to riches, or dissertation on banks, 1792; history of the district of Maine, 8vo., 1795; history of land titles in Massachusetts, 8vo., 1801; dissertation on the constitutional liberty of the press, 1801; history of the Penobsect Indians in the historical collection. - Buckminster's Sermon on his Death.

SULLIVAN, GEORGE, died at Exeter, N. II., June 14, 1838, aged 64. He was born at Derham, the son of Gen. John S., an officer of the Revolutionary army, was graduated at Harvard assed suffrages of his countrymen. As he was in 1790, and for more than forty years practised law at Exeter. He was a member of congress in 1811 and 1813, and attorney-general of New Hampshire from 1816 to 1835. He was highly respected for his talents, his useful life, and his religious character.

SULLIVAN, WILLIAM, LL. D., brigadiergeneral, died in Boston Sept. 3, 1839, aged 64. He was the son of Governor James S.; was graduated in 1792; and for many years practised law in Boston. He published orations in 1803 and 1813; familiar letters; moral class-book, 1831; political class-book, 1831; on temperance, 1832.

SUMMERFIELD, John, a minister, died at New York June 13, 1825, aged 27. He was born in Laneashire, England, Jan. 31, 1798. After early dissipation he became pious, and preached in the Methodist connexion in Ireland. He came to New York in 1821, and preached almost with the popularity of Whitefield. His ill health induced him in 1823 to visit France, where, as a delegate from the American bible society, he addressed the Paris bible society. Few ministers have exhibited such meckness, humility, disinterestedness, and benevolence in life; few have been so eloquent in discourse. His memoirs by J. Holland, with his portrait, were published, 8vo., 2d edit., 1830. SUMNER, INCREASE, governor of Massachusetts, died in Roxbury June 7, 1799, aged 52. He was the son of Increase, who died in 1774: his previous ancestors were Edward, George, and William of Dorchester, who was born in England in 1605. He was born in Roxbury Nov. 27, 1746, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1767. After entering upon the profession of the law he was chosen a representative of his native town in the legislature, and then a senator. In 1782 Governor Hancock placed him on the bench of the supreme court. As a judge he was dispassionate, impartial, and discerning. In 1797 he was chosen governor as successor of S. Adams, and he was reëlected in the succeeding years till his death. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of William Hyslop. His son, William Hyslop Sumner, a graduate of 1799, still lives. He possessed a strong and well-balanced mind. His judgment was correct, and, though he maintained an unusual degree of self-command, yet his coolness of temper was to be ascribed rather to the influence of religious discipline, than to constitutional temperament. He was mild, eandid, and moderate, being remarkably free from every appearance of party spirit. In the intercourse of domestic and private life he was affectionate and faithful. Soon after he commenced the practice of the law, he made a public profession of his belief in Christianity, and his life was exemplary. An interesting memoir by his son, W. H. Sumner, with a fine portrait, is in New England Register, April, SUMNER, JOSEPH, D. D., died at Shrewsbury Dec. 9, 1824, aged 84. Born in Pomfret. he graduated at Yale in 1759, and was ordained as the successor of J. Cushing in 1762. He was present at the regular administration of the Lord's supper for sixty-two years. In the Revolution he was an earnest patriot, a useful friend of learning, long a trustee of Leicester academy. His white wig and venerable air gained respect. He published a sermon at the ordination of his son Samuel at Southborough, 1791; at thanksgiving. 1799; at ordination of Wilkes Allen, 1803; halfcentury sermon, 1812.

SUMNER, CHARLES P., died in Boston April 2, 1839, aged about 62. He graduated at Harvard in 1796, and was the sheriff of Suffolk. He was the father of the eminent senator of the United States, Charles Sumner; also of George Sumner, whose memoir of the pilgrims at Levden is in hist. coll., vol. 1X., third series. IIc published the compass, a college poem, 1795; eulogy on Washington, 1800; letter on freemasonry, 1829; discourse on the sheriff's office,

SUMTER, THOMAS, general, a soldier of the Revolution, died June 1, 1832, aged 97. After the capture of Charleston, S. C., by the British, he fled to North Carolina. But he soon returned at the head of a little band of exiles. July 12, 1780, a part of his corps routed a detachment of the British; this success soon increased his troops to six hundred men. Gov. Rutledge promoted him and Marion from the rank of colonels to that of brigadiers in the militia. He was younger than Marion; of a larger frame, fitted for the toils of war; with a stern countenance, and determined patriotism, and indomitable courage. He attacked, August 1st, three times unsuccessfully the post of Rocky Mount; August 6th, he attacked the British at Hanging Rock, and destroyed Col. Brown's regiment. About the time that Gates was defeated at Camden, he captured a British eonvoy. But through his own negligence he was surprised near Catawba ford, by Tarleton, August 18th, at the head of nine hundred and sixty men, and his force of eight hundred men instantly dispersed, and his artillery lost. He retrieved his character in the remainder of the campaign. He resolutely kept the field for three months. Nov. 12th he defeated the British under Major Wemyss, and Nov. 20th, at Blackstock hill, near Tyger river, he repulsed Tarleton, who in vain attempted to dislodge him. The wounded of the enemy were left to the humanity of Sumter. In this action he was himself severely wounded, and in consequence long detained from the field; but he was consoled by the thanks of congress and the applause of his country. In 1811 he was chosen a senator of the United States. He died suddenly at his residence at South Mount, near

184 S S. o near sou, S tapl

T

goo

Can

Wo Sav equi pres S N. I age that pub S Can land S died Har S died Mas first Wel S Con ingt orde

W. batt of I fish Mas trac twee age Chi wer

year

Dor

S

Mai ord Har Aug Camden. His only son, Col. Thomas, died in 1854, bequeathing 10,000 dollars to furnish the 1840, aged 72.

SUMTER, THOMAS, colonel, only son of Gen. S, of Revolutionary memory, died at his residence near Stateburg, S. C., in 1840, aged 71. His son, J. L. S., was a member of congress.

SUNSEETO, a Mohegan Indian, whose epitaph is at Norwich:

ews.

fret.

ined

was ord's ution

arn-

His

He

son

ving,

half

Anril

Har-

110 f the

corge

Ley-

He

795 :

eema-

office,

of the

After

ritish.

urned

ly 12,

ent of troops

moted

o that

r than oils of mined

Ie atlly the acked

d Col. Gates

British

he was

lugust v men,

tly dis-

ed his ı. lle

Nov.

Major

l, near

n vain

l of the

er. In

ed, and

d; but ss and he was

Ie died

it, near

" Horo lies the body of Sunsecto. Own son to Uneas, grandson to Onecko, Who were the famous sachems of Mohegan: But now they are all dead, I think it is Werheegen."

The meaning of Werheegen is, all's well, or good news. The epitaph was written by Mr. Worthington of Norwalk, son of Rev. Mr. W. of Saybrook. His irregularity of measure is almost equal to that of some of our popular poets at the present day.

SUTHERLAND, DAVID, minister of Bath, N. H., died of disease of the heart, July 25, 1855, nged 78. He was long a very useful minister in that part of the State in which he resided. He published election sermon, 1815.

SUTHERLAND, Colin, died at East Corra, Canada, Oct. 15, 1856, aged 103, a native of Scot-

SWAIN, JOSEPH, minister of Wenham, Mass., died in 1792, aged about 70. He graduated at Harvard in 1744, and was ordained in 1750.

SWAN, Josian, minister of Dunstable, N. H., died in 1777, aged about 66. Born in Lancaster, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1733. The first minister, from 1695 to 1702, was Thomas Weld.

SWAN, ROSWELL S., minister of Norwalk, Conn., died in 1819, aged 40. Born in Stonington, he graduated at Yale in 1798, and was ordained in 1807. The admissions to his church were two hundred and sixty-one persons in twelve years. - Sprague's Annals.

SWAN, JAMES, colonel, died in Boston or Dorchester about 1831. He went with Judge W. Lathron from Cambridge, and fought in the battle of Bunker Hill. He was a representative of Dorchester. He published an essay on the fisheries, 1784; observations on the fisheries of Massachusetts, 1786; dissuasion from the slave trade; on the obstructions to the commerce between this country and France, in French, 1790.

SWAN, TIMOTHY, died at Northfield in 1842, aged 82; skilled in sacred music, the author of China and other pieces.

SWEAT, Moses, first minister of Sanford, Maine, died in 1822, aged about 60. He was ordained when the church was formed in 1786. Harvard gave him a degree in 1790.

SWEET, BENONI, died in Lebanon, Conn., August, 1840, aged 80; a celebrated surgeon.

poor with cooking-stoves,

SWETT, BENJAMIN, captain, was killed by the Indians at Black Point, N. H., 1677. He removed from Newbury, Mass., to Hampton before 1664.

SWETT, JOHN BARNARD, M. D., died of the vellow fever at Newburyport in 1796, aged 41. The son of Samuel S, of Marblehead, he graduated at Harvard in 1767, and studied physic in Edinburgh. On his return he joined the Ameriean army as a surgeon. After settling in 1780, he had a wide surgical practice. He was intelligent, social, frank, good-humored, of polished manners, a general favorite. His widow, a daughter of W. Bourne of Marblehead, married Gov. John T. Gilman. - Thacker's Med. Biog.

SWETT, John A., Dr., was born in Boston, graduated in 1828, practised with high reputation in New York, and died in 1854, uged 45. His work on diseases of the chest, 1852, is a valuable text-book. He was connected with the New York city hospital, and was a professor of the theory and practice of physic in the university of New York.

SWIFT, John, the first minister of Framingham, Mass., died in 1745, aged 67. Born in Milton, he graduated at Harvard in 1697, and was settled in 1701 His successors were M. Bridge, D. Kellogg, G. Trask, and D. Brigham. Two other churches have been formed. His son John was a graduate of 1733, and minister of Acton thirty-seven years from 1738, dying in 1775, aged 72. He published a sermon on the death of R. Breck, 1731; election sermon, 1732.

– Spraque's Annals. SWIFT, Job, D. D., minister of Bennington, Vt., died Oct. 20, 1804, aged about 61. He was born in Sandwich, Mass., in 1743, and was graduated at Yale college in 1765. About the year 1766 he was ordained at Richmond, where he continued seven years, making every exertion to instruct his people in the peculiar doctrines of the gospel. He was afterwards the minister of Nine Partners in New York; of Manchester, Bennington, and Addison in Vermont. In Bennington he lived about sixteen years. While he was on a mission, in the northern part of Vermout, undertaken at his own expense, he died at Enoshurgh. He rejoiced that his life was to terminate at a distance from his friends, without witnessing the distresses of his family. The patience with which he endured the pains of his last sickness, and the composure with which he met the king of terrors, excited the greatest astonishment in an unbeliever who was present. While suffering a great variety of evils in life, he never uttered a complaining word; and, when SWEETZER, THOMAS W., died in Salem in he discovered uneasiness or discontent in any of the members of his family, he inculcated upon | Episcopal minister and useful teacher. He was them the duty of submission, and reminded them of the undeserved blessings which they were yet permitted to enjoy. His wife was Mary Ann, the sister of Judge Sedgwick. She died in 1826. Benjamin, a senator from Vermont, and Samuel, secretary of State, were their sons. A volume of his sermons was published, 12mo., 1805.

Sprague's Annals.

SWIFT, SETH, minister of Williamstown, Mass., died in 1807, aged 58. Born in Kent, the brother of Rev. Job S., he graduated at Yale in 1774; studied theology with Dr. Bellamy; and was ordained in 1776, the successor of the first minister, Whitman Welch, and was succeeded by Walter King. Ho was the father of Rev. E. G. Swift of Stockbridge, and of Rev. Elisha P. Swift, professor in the Alleghany theological seminary. He was warm in his temper, and zealous and energetic, yet prudent, revered, and loved.

SWIFT, ZEPHANIAH, LL. D., chief justice of Connecticut, died Sept. 27, 1828, aged 64. He was born in Warcham, Mass., in Feb., 1759; his father removed to Lebanon. He graduated at Yale college in 1778. After being a member of congress from 1793 to 1796, he accompanied Mr. Ellsworth as secretary to France. In 1801 he was elected a judge. From 1806 to 1819 he was ehief justice. In 1814 he was a member of the Hartford convention. He died at Warren while on a visit to Ohio. An oration on account of his death was pronounced by S. Perkins at Windham, the place of his residence. He left a widow, Lucretia Webbs, and seven children. Unaided by family friends, he rose to distinction. He was a learned and upright judge. He published oration on domestic slavery, 1791; a system of the laws of Connecticut, 2 vols., 1795; a digest of the law of evidence, and a treatise on bills of exchange, 1810; digest of the laws of Connecticut, 2 vols., 1823.

SWIFT, HEMAN, Dr., died in Bennington Jan. 30, 1856, aged 62; an eminent physician and Christian. The son of Rev. Dr. Swift, he graduated at Middlebury in 1811.

SYKES, JAMES, M. D., of Maryland, died of the gout in 1722, aged 61. He was born near Dover. As a physician he practised four years at Cambridge, on the eastern shore; then removed to Dover. While there he discovered that a dreadful cholic, causing many deaths, was produced by adulterated Peruvian bark. A workman in Philadelphia, employed in pulverizing bark, had mixed with it oxide of lead, to increase the weight. In 1814 he removed to New York; but after a few years returned to Dover. Thacher's Med. Biog.

SYME, ARCHIBALD, D. D., died in Peters-born in Scotland.

SYMMES, ZECHARIAH, the second minister of Charlestown, Mass., the son of Rev. William S., died Feb. 4, 1671, aged 71. He was born in Canterbury, April 5, 1599; came to New England in 1634 in the same ship with Ann Hutchinson and J. Lathrop; and settled as colleague with Mr. James, being chosen teacher Dec. 22, 1634. His son, Zeehariah, the first minister of Bradford, was born in 1638; was ordained Dec. 27, 1682, and died March 27, 1707, aged 69. He preached the election sermon, 1648. - Sprague's SYMMES, THOMAS, second minister of Bradford, Mass., died Oct. 6, 1725, aged 47. He was the son of Zechariah S., the first minister of that town. He was born Feb. 1, 1678; was graduated at Harvard college in 1698; was ordained the first minister of Boxford Dec. 30, 1702, but was dismissed from that town in 1708, and suceceded his father at Bradford in the same year. He was a man of strong powers of mind and of very considerable learning; an animated, popular, faithfui, and successful preacher. His exertions to do good in private and public were rewarded by large accessions to his church. He was remarkable for the sanctity of his life, for secret devotion, and for his regard to days of fasting and prayer. He published monitor to delaying sinners; artillery election sermon, 1720; against prejudice; at the ordination of J. Emerson, 1721; joeo-serious dialogue on singing, 1723; on the support of ministers, 1724; historical memoirs of the fight of Piggwaeket, May 9, 1725, with a sermon on Lovewell's death. An account of his life was published by J. Brown, to which is annexed his advice to his children and to the church.

SYMMES, WILLIAM, D. D., minister of Andover, Mass., died in 1807, aged 77. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1750, and from 1755 to 1758 was a tutor in that seminary; he was ordained Nov. 1, 1758. His sermons were written with great care and in a style remarkably neat and correct. He was distinguished for his prudence; was hospitable, dignified in his manners and pure in his principles and conduct. He published election sermon, 1785, and two other occasional discourses.

SYMMES, JOHN CLEVES, captain, author of the theory of the hollow earth, died at Hamilton, Butler county, Ohio, June 19, 1829. He was a native of New Jersey, but emigrated at an early age to the west. He was the son, as I suppose, of J. C. S., a judge of the supreme court of New Jersey, a member of congress, and in 1788 a judge of the northwest territory, who died at burgh, Va., Oct. 26, 1845, aged 92; a respected Cincinnati in March, 1814, whose wife was Su-

Du by l abl of t app sup for sev the Ί Ma ord 167 chu ble

ing

and moi

Of guis

faitl

san dat

Fo

the mor So whe his : his ! Chr pau pre son, writ Nu T war Wy was had T tree don ord Dr. 66.

that occ sion the ativ Ma he der > set me

sanna, daughter of Gov. Livingston, and whose | electors, 1811; on impressments, 1813; on final daughter married Gen. William H. Harrison. For some years he was a captain in the army. During the war of 1812, he distinguished himself by his intrepidity on the Niagara. He was an amiable and exemplary man. On his strange theory of the earth he lectured in many cities and towns, apparently in full persuasion of its truth. He supposed that the hollow earth, open at the poles for the admission of light, had within it six or seven concentric hollow spheres, also open at their poles.

TACKANASII, JOHN, Indian minister on Martha's Vineyard, died Jan. 22, 1684. He was ordained colleague with Hiacoomes Aug. 22, 1670, the day of the formation of the first Indian church on the island. He possessed considerable talents, and was exemplary in his life. Allowing himself in few diversions, he studied much, and seemed to advance in piety, as he became more acquainted with the truths of the gospel. Of Indian preachers he was the most distinguished. In prayer he was devout and fervent; faithful in his instructions and reproofs; strict in the discipline of his church, excluding the immoral from the ordinances till they repented. So much was he respected, that the English. when deprived of their own minister, attended his meetings and received the Lord's supper from his hands. He died in the peace and hope of the Christian. His place of residence was at Nunpaug at the east end of Martha's Vineyard. The preacher in 1698, at the visitation of Mr. Rawson, was Joseph Tackquannash, as his name was written, having charge of eighty-four Indians at Nunnepong. - Mayhew's Indian Conv. 15-16.

TADEUSKUND, principal chief of the Delawares, died in 1763. He was burnt to death at Wyoming on the Susquehannah. It is supposed that he was made drunk, and then that his house was set on fire, with the rest of the village. He had been a useful man to his tribe.

TAFT, Moses, one of the ministers of Braintree, died in 1791, aged about 60. Born in Mendon, he graduated at Harvard in 1751, and was ordained in 1752. E. Eaton preceded him, and Dr. J. Strong succeeded him.

TAFT, BEZALEEL, the son of Senator B. Taft, was born in Uxbridge, and died in 1846, aged 66. A graduate of Harvard in 1804, he had no occasion to depend for his support on the profession of the law, but lived on a beautiful farm on the banks of the Blackstone. He was representative, senator, and councillor.

TAGGART, SAMUEL, minister of Colerain, Mass., died in 1825, aged 71. For some years he was a member of congress. Born in Londonderry, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1774; was member of congress. He published address to times of refreshing; but Gov. Law was rather perseverance, 1801.

TAGGART, CYNTHA, a writer of poetry, died in 1849, aged 47. She was born in Rhode Island. Her gran. or, an old soldier, had a farm at Middletown . . . miles from Newport, which in the war the British laid waste, and made her father a prisoner. From the juil at Newport he escaped through a window which had wooden bars, and he crossed to the main land at Bristol ferry on a raft of rails. She was many years an invalid. Many pieces of poetry, of a melancholy east, sho wrote on her sick bed. Some of them were collected and published in a small volume. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TAILER, WILLIAM, lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts, died in 1732, aged 55. He came from England with his commission from tho queen in 1711, and was stern for the prerogative, and an Episcopalian; but pleasant and facetious. Marrying a relative of Gov. Stoughton, he came in possession of his estate at Dorchester .- Eliot's TALCOTT, Joun, major, probably of Hartford, a distinguished officer in the Indian war of 1676, resigned the office of treasurer of Connectient on receiving his military appointment. A small army of four hundred and fifty men, of whom two hundred were Mohegan and Pequot Indians, was assembled at Norwich, and he marched in June into the Nipmuck country. where nineteen Indians were killed and thirtythree made prisoners. Thence he marched to Quabaug or Brookfield, and Northampton. After he arrived at N., about seven hundred Indians attacked the garrison at Hadley; but he crossed the river for its relief, and thus saved the town, and probably other towns, from destruction. He scoured the country as far as the falls above Deerfield. Then he marched to Providence and did good service in the Narraganset country. In ail, about four hundred and twenty Indians fell in battle and were captured. He returned to Connecticut in July, and having recruited, marched to Westfield, and thence to the Houssatonnoe river, where he again fought the enemy successfully. The sachem of Quabaug was killed, and forty-one Indians killed or taken. About the same time Capt. Church killed King Philip, Augr 12, 1676, and the savages generally submitted to the English or fled. Major T. was probably the son of John T., who was of Cambridge in 1632, and was an assistant at Hartford in 1654. -Trumbull's Hist. Conn.

TALCOTT, Joseph, governor of Connecticut from 1724 to 1741, died Oct. 11, 1741, full of days, and was succeeded by Gov. Law. He had long served his country. Eminent for piety, he settled in 1777 and resigned in 1818. He was a called the periods of revival in his last years lliam rn in Engtehineague

nister

c. 22. ter of Dec. . He ague's

Brade was of that gradudained 12, but d suce year.

and of popus exerere rea. He ife, for of fastto de-1720;

Emer-, 1723; storical May 9, h. An own, to en and of An-Ie was d from ıry; he as were arkably for his anners

Te pub-

er occa-

thor of milton, was a in early uppose, of New 1788 a died at vas Su-

disposed to suppress by rash legal enactments | what he deemed enthusiasm. His sister married R. Edwards.

TALCOTT, HART, minister of Warren, Conn., died suddenly in 1836, aged 45. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1812. He was pastor of Killingworth, the successor of A. Mansfield, from 1818 to 1824. He succeeded P. Starr at W. in TALCOTT, SAMUEL A., attorney-general of New York, died at New York in 1836, aged 45. Born at Hartford, he graduated at Williams college in 1809. He had brilliant talents, but, unhappily wanting self-discipline, he was the grief of his friends. With what mighty weight for good ought the notes of such warnings to come upon the ears of the young and tempted?

TALIAFERRO, John, died in Virginia in 1853, aged 85. For more than twenty years he was a member of congress, and for several years was librarian of the treasury department at Washington.

TALLMADGE, JAMES, colonel, died at Poughkeepsie in 1828, aged 78. He was a soldier of the Revolution, and commanded a company of volunteers at the capture of Burgoyne.

TALLMADGE, BENJAMIN, colonel, died at Litchfield, Conn., March 6, 1835, aged 81. He was born at Brookhaven, L. I.; was graduated in 1773; from 1776 he served in the army until the close of the war, and was a distinguished officer. He had the custody of Major André, and regarded him with great affection. In many actions he was unhurt, and he gratefully acknowledged the divine protection. Frem 1784 till his death he lived as a merchant in Litchfield. In 1817 he was a member of congress. His religious impressions began in 1793, from reading the life of Col. Gardiner. He was an eminent Christian, and he died in triumph.

TALLMADGE, JAMES, general, died suddenly at New York in 1853, aged 75. He was born in Stamford, Dutchess county, N. Y.; his father, James, was born in Sharon, Conn., and was a soldier of the Revolution. In 1798 he graduated at Brown university; from Dutchess county he was sent to congress in 1817. He opposed Mr. Clay in regard to the extension of blavery beyond the Mississippi, maintaining the principles of the Wilmot proviso in an able speech; and it is said Mr. Clay's hostility prevented him from being in the cabinet of J. Q. Adams, or from being sent as a minister to England. He visited Russia in 1835. For twentyfive years he lived in New York in the winter, and at his seat on Wappinger's Creek in the summer; and there he was a practical and skilful farmer. He had great talents as a public speaker. Of the American institute he was the president.

Me., in 1841, aged 72. Born at Tiverton, R. L. he entered the privateering service in 1778, at the age of fourteen. In 1780 one of his arms was shot off. From 1781 to 1783 he was a prisoner. He next commanded a merchant vessel, and he became a rich merchant.

vet

Ju

in wo

lib

col

he

of

 \mathbf{F}_0

str

lec

tai

ลม

in

he

an

H

M

Be

He

fer

He

cri

gu

to pri

pri

of

rui

ato

the ne

of

in

lig Ch

his sin

he

the ful

afl

W

by ea.

wl

นม cu

th

di

K

a

hi

la

80 ex

m

TALMADGE, MATTHIAS BURNET, general. died at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1819, aged 45. Born at Stamford, N. Y., he graduated at Yale in 1795. He was a judge of the district court. His wife was a daughter of George Clinton. His only daughter married John Suydam

TALMAGE, JEHIEL, died at Bloomfield, N. J., Sept. 26, 1854, aged 69. He was twenty-three years pastor of Knowlton, and then a minister in Ohio, laborious and earnest. He was buried beside his Christian parents in Somerville. His son, P. S. T., is minister of Bloomfield, at whose house he died.

TANTEQUIGGEN, LUCY, an Indian, the widow of John T., died at Mohegan, Conn., in June, 1830, aged 97. She was the sister of Samson Occom, the celebrated Indian preacher, and a descendant by her mother from Uncas. She was regarded as a pions woman; in her last days she expressed her willingness to die, that " she might go where she should sin no more." A few weeks after her death a Sunday-school was opened at her house, where three or four generations of her descendants lived, and this commencement of benevolent efforts for the remnant of a once powerful tribe has led to the erection of a meeting-house and the establishment of a teacher among these Indians.

TAPPAN, or TOPPAN, PETER, Dr., was the son of Abraham, a settler in Newbury, Mass., in 1637, and Susannah Goodale. He was born in England in 1634; his sons were Peter, Samuel, and Christopher. His last child was born in 1674. He was killed by a fall. One of the sons or grandsons of Abraham emigrated to Nev. York, and from him, it is supposed, the town of Tappan and Tappan Sea derived their name.

TAPPAN, EDMUND, a physician in Hampton. N. II., died in 1739, aged about 40. He was the son of Christopher, and grandson of Dr. Peter. His mother was Sarah Angier of Cambridge.

TAPPAN, Amos, minister of Kingston, N. H., died in 1771, aged 35. Born in Newbury, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1768.

TAPPAN, DAVID, D. D., professor of divinity in Harvard college, died Aug. 27, 1803, aged 51. He was the son of Benjamin Tappan, minister of Manchester, and was born April 21, 1753. The name was formerly written Toppan. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1771. After pursning the study of divinity for two or three years he commenced preaching, and was ordained minister of the third church in Newbury in April, TALLMAN Peleg, a merchant, died in Bath, 1774. In this place he continued about eighteen

8, at arms prisessel. neral,

R. I.,

aged ed at istrict Clinvdanı. N. J., -three ster in ed be-His whose t, the on., in f Samer, and . She st days " she A few openea ions of cement a once meet-was the lass., in born in Samuel. orn in he sons o Nev. own of me. ampton, teacher

was the . Peter. lge. , N. H., , Mass., divinity iged 51. iister of 3. The He was . After or three ordained in April, eighteen

His successor was Leonard Woods. In June, 1792, he was elected professor of divinity in Harvard college in the place of Dr. Wigglesworth, who had resigned, and after anxious deliberation and the advice of an eeclesiastical council he was inaugurated Dec. 26, 1792. When he was introduced into this office, the students of the university were uncommonly dissolute. For some time they had received no regular instruction in theology, and the tide of opinion began to run in the channel of Infidelity. But the lectures of Dr. Tappan, which combined entertainment with information, which were profound and yet pathetic, elegant in style and conclusive in argument, and which came warm from a pious heart, soon checked the progress of profaneness and dissipation, and put open irreligion to shame. He was succeeded by Dr. Ware. His widow, Mary, died in Sept., 1831, aged 72. His son. Benjamin T., was the minister of Augusta, Me. He possessed much activity and vigor of mind, fertility of invention, and force of imagination. He had a facility in fixing his attention, and discriminating and arranging his thoughts. His readiness of conception and command of language enabled him both in speaking and writing to express what he thought and felt with propriety, perspicuity, and force. The religious principles which he embraced were the doctrines of the eternal counsels of Jehovah; man's fallen, ruined state; the electing love of God; the atonement of Christ; justification by grace; and the efficacy of the Divine Spirit in renewing sinners and preparing them for glory. The doctrine of rederaption by a crucified Saviour constituted in his view the basis of the gospel. In such a light did he regard the proper divinity of Jesus Christ, that he declared it to be "the rock of his eternal hopes." To benevolence and candor, sincerity in speech, and uprightness in conduct, he joined the careful cultivation and practice of the personal virtues. He was superior to all fretful and anxious thoughts about his temporal affairs, and to all vanity of external appearance. When tried by the ignorance and stupidity or by the perverseness and injustice of men, he was calm and collected. For the conduct of those, who had treated him with the most painful unkindness, he invented the most charitable excuses, and even sought opportunities of doing them good. His religion as well as his nature disposed him to sympathy, tenderness, and love. Kind affections lighted up his countenance, gave a glow to his conversation, and cheerfulness to his active benevolence. When arrested by his last sickness, and warned of his approaching dissolution, he was not discomposed. With many expressions of humility and self-abasement intermingled, he declared his hope in the infinite mercy of God through the atoucment of Christ.

When s wife expr d some of the feelings which re excited the thou with him, he said: "It God is 6 1,1 am made forever. Can't you lav he lat?" T his sons, he said: "I charge y o love Con supremely, and to love your near as yourselves; for without these there true religion." He had such a sense of the last of sa and of his own ill desert, that nothing could afford him consolation but the all-sufficient grace of the Redeemer. In Jesus Christ his soul found rest. He published two discourses, preached on the Sabbath after his ordination, 1771; a discourse on the character and best exertions of unregenerate sinners, 1782; a sermon on the fast, 1783; on the peace, 1783; on the death of M. Parsons, 1784; of eight persons drowned, 1794; of J. Russell, 1796; of Washington, 1800; of S. Phillips, 1802; of Dr. Hitchcock, and Mary Dana, 1803; two friendly letters to Philalethes, 1785; at the ordination of J. Dickinson, 1789; of J. T. Kirkland, 1794; of J. Kendall; of N. H. Fletcher, 1800; installation of H. Packard, 1802; address to the students of Andover neademy, 1791; at the election, 1792; before an association at Portsmouth, 1792; farewell sermon at Newbury; on the fast, 1793; a discourse to graduates; address to students at Andover; to the class which entered college, 1791, 1796, and 1798; on the thanksgiving, 1795; before the convention, 1797; on the fast, 1798. Since his death there have been published sermons on important subjects, 8vo., and lectures on Jewish antiquities, 8vo., 1807. — Panoplist, 1.

TAPPAN, SAMUEL, died at Portsmouth April 29, 1806, uged 45; the highly esteemed teacher of one of the public schools, a very eminent Christian. He was the son of Rev. Mr. T. of Manchester.

TAPPAN, Amos, died in Portsmouth, N. II., in 1821, aged about 53. He was the son of Rev. Benjamin T.; was graduated at Harvard in 1788; and for nearly thirty years taught a classical school in P. His wife was Isabella, the sister of Rev. Joseph Buckminster.

TAPPAN, BENJAMIN, minister of Manchester, Mass., died in 1790, aged about 70. He was the son of Samuel, a farmer of Newbury, and grandson of Dr. Peter T., and his wife, Abigail Wigglesworth, was the daughter of the minister of Malden. He had twelve children; two of his sons, David and Amos, were graduates. He wished also to educate Benjamin; but, settled on a salary of eighty pounds, his son, who overheard him speaking of his poverty, nobly resolved that he would not go to college. He graduated at Harvard college in 1742; his name appears in the catalogue as Toppan.

TAPPAN, BENJAMIN, a merchant of Northampton, Mass., died Jan. 29, 1831, aged 83. Of his ancestors, who wrote the name Toppan instead of Tappan, Abraham was the first in this country; he came from Yarmouth, England, and settled at Newbury in 1637, dying in 1672, leaving sons, Peter, Abraham, Jacob, John, and Isaac, whose descendants have been many. He was the son of Rev. Benjamin T., and the eldest of twelve children. He served his time with William Homes, a goldsmith of Boston, a descendant of Rev. W. H., and the grandfather of Henry Homes, and whose wife was a daughter of Mrs. Mary Dawes, Dr. Franklin's sister, the mother of William Dawes, a worthy citizen. He settled In Northampton as a goldsmith in 1769, and afterwards was a merchant, of the firm of Tappan and Whitney. He was a patriot of the Revolution, and marched with other volunteers from Northampton to meet the forces of Burgoyne at Saratoga. He was a man of most exemplary character, of integrity and prudence, of Christian principle and feeling, who brought up his large family in the paths of virtue and honor, and who lived to be rewarded, as many other New England parents have been, by seeing his children industrious, upright, enterprising, prosperous, and some of them men of distinction in our country. Instead of remembering and honoring such a citizen and head of a family, why is it that a mere adventurer, of no principle, who in perhaps an unjust war loses an arm or only feels the breath of a cannon-ball, is applauded through the land, and elevated to some office, and pensioned with an annual bounty from the public treasury during the remainder of his life? Is it not because the race of fools is not extinct? or, to speak more enlmly, because we the people are not wise? The children of Mr. Tappan knew how to honor the memory of such parents as God had given them. There assembled in the place of their birth, June 1, 1848, from different States six - brothers, - still living in 1857, - and three sisters, between the ages of 60 and 77, namely: Benjamin, a democratic lawyer of Ohio, who had been a senator of the United States; William, a farmer of Binghamton, N. Y.; John, long a merchant in Boston, whose life forty years before Providence had preserved, when the ship Jupiter, in which he was returning from England, struck an iceberg and sunk with most of the passengers, and who is well known for his benevolent deeds; Arthur, one of the founders of Oberlin college, a merchant of New York, who had failed with high honor, for with a debt of a million of dollars he paid up the whole; Charles, a bookseller in Boston; Lewis, a merchant in New York, whose talents and zeal have been manifested in the anti-slavery cause; Sarah, since deceased, the wife of Solomon Stoddard of Northampton; Rebecca, the wife of Col. William Edwards of New York; Lucy, the widow of Rev. Dr. bounty. Such a record is most honorable to his John Pierce of Brookline. Of this family of nine there were a hundred children, among them six or eight ministers, or the wives of ministers, one, David Tappan Stoddard, a missionary in Persia. Besides these, Mr. Tappan's daughter Elizabeth, who died in 1819, was the wife of a minister, Rev. Alexander Phenix.

Bi

D

ha

tle

fal

16

Fe

ha

fir

bii

of

lat

Cu

ve

on

th

H

he eo

th

th th

m ar di ey so to ho di lo

TAPPAN, SARAH, wife of Benjamin T., died at Northampton March 26, 1826, aged 78. She was the daughter of William Homes, goldsmith. who was an excellent Christian, a descendant of Rev. W. Homes. Her mother was a daughter of Thomas Dawes of Boston. Her life was a Christian life and her end was peace. She left nine children, and sixty-one grandchildren. Her memoir was published in 1834.

TAPPAN, ENOCH S., M. D., died in Augusta, Me., in 1847, aged 65. The son of Professor T., he graduated at Harvard in 1801.

TAPPAN, CHRISTOPHER, died at Newbury July 23, 1747, aged 75, having been minister of the first church fifty years. He was the son of Peter T.; graduated at Harvard in 1691, and was ordained in 1696. He was a man of learning and piety, a very successful minister, and a useful physician and surgeon, demanding no fees.

TAPPAN, WILLIAM BINGHAM, a religious poet, died in West Needham, Mass., in 1849, aged 541 general agent of the American Sunday school union. His father was Samuel T. of Bevcrly, a teacher, who died when he was twelve years old. His only schooling was for six months. An apprentice, he ascribed much in the preservation of his morals to his mother's prayers. He toiled and studied; for four years he was not absent from church. Of twelve apprentices with him, all but two came to ruin. He was a successful teacher six years in Philadelphia. After his marriage he became a religious man. Removing to Boston, he zealously engaged in Sabbath schools, and was salesman of the Sunday school union. In Cincinnati he prosecuted the same benevolent object; also again four years in Philadelphia; then the rest of his life in Boston. In 1840 he obtained a liceuse to preach, and he preached with great interest at Mattapoisett the last Sabbath before his death. His attack was sudden and violent, but his faith failed not; he said, "I'm going, - my sight is gone, - wife, daughter, farewell; Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Such a benefactor of men deserves honorable remembrance. He died a poor man at Grantville, Needham. He published several volumes of poetry, but without peeuniary profit.

TAPPAN, JAMES, colonel, died at Gloucester Feb. 6, 1853, aged 85. His death was occasioned or hastened by a fall on the ice. As he was the early schoolmaster of D. Webster, he frequently in his old age was the grateful recipient of his great scholar, who preceded him in the descent | Dr. Chauncy, to whom he left his papers with to the grave.

TAPPEN, JOHN, an officer in the Revolutionary war, died at Fallsburgh in 1846, aged 92.

TARLETON, II., lieutenant-colonel in the British service, published a history of the southern campaigns of 1780 and 1781, 4to., London, 1787.

TASH, THOMAS, colonel, a brave officer in the French and Revolutionary wars, died in New Durham, N.H., in 1809, aged 87. Born in Durham, he lived twenty years in N. D., in the settlement of which town he was active.

TASSEMAKER, Mr., the first minister settled in Scheneetady, was murdered with all his family by the Indians, who burned that city in 1690. He was of the Dutch church. Rev. J. Fonda could obtain no information of his age and character, the annals of the Dutch church having perished.

TATIIAM, WILLIAM, an engineer and drunkard, threw himself before the mouth of a gun, fired at Richmond, Va., Feb. 22, 1819, on the birthday of Washington, and was blown to pieces, aged 67. A native of England, a lawyer ia North Carolina, Mr. Mouroe gave him an office in the arsenal in Virginia. He compiled an analysis of Virginia, and published two tracts relating to the canal between Norfolk and North Carolina.

TAWANQUATUCK, the first sachem converted to Christianity on Martha's Vineyard, lived on that island when the English first settled there in 1642. He died about the year 1670. His conversion, through the labors of Mr. Mayhew, was a circumstance very irritating to his copper-colored brethren, who were indignant that he should turn away from the religion of their fathers. One night, after an assembly of the Indians, as Tawanquatuck lay asleep upon a mat by a little fire, an Indian approached him and let fly a broad-headed arrow, intending to drench it in his heart's blood; but it struck his eyebrow, and being turned in its direction by the solid bone, glanced and slit his nose from the top to the bottom. The next morning Mr. Mayhew visited the sagamore, and found him praising God for his great deliverance. He afterwards became a Christian magistrate to his people, and discharged faithfully the trust reposed in him as long as he lived. - Mayhew's Indian Converts.

TAYLOR, JOSEPH, minister of Southampton, L. I., died in 1682, aged 30. Ho graduated at Harvard in 1669, and succeeded Rev. Robert Fordham in 1680.

TAYLOR, JOHN, minister of Milton, Mass., died in 1749, aged 56. Born in Boston, he grad-1728, the successor of P. Thacher. His successor was N. Robbins. He was a classmate of copy Aug. 2, 1776. — Goodrich.

orders to burn them, and who says of him that few men were more universally beloved, - Hist. Colt., vol. X.

TAYLOR, NATHANIEL, minister of New Milford, Conn., died in 1800, aged 78, in the fiftysecond year of his ministry. Born in Danbury, he graduated at Yale in 1715, and was ordained in 1748. He was a scholar and a teacher of youth preparing for college, and a trustee of the college. In 1759 he was a chaplain at Ticonderoga, and a patriot in the war of the Revolution, in one year relinquishing his salary to his people. S. Griswold became his colleague in 1790. By his first wife, who was a daughter of Rev. D. Boardman, the first minister of New Milford, he had a son, Nathaniel, who was the father of Rev. Dr. N. Taylor of the theological seminary at New Haven. He published a sermon at Crown Point. 1762; at the ordination of D. Brownson, 1764. - Sprague's ⊿tunals.

TAYLOR, EDWARD, first minister of Warronoco or Westfield, Mass., was born in Leices shire, England, in 1642, and died June 29, 17. uged 87. A graduate of Harvard in 1671, he in the same year went to Westfield to preach; Philip's war delayed his settlement till Aug. 27, 1679. N. Bull was his colleague in 1726. sequent ministers have been J. Ballantine, N. Atwater, I. Knapp and E. Davis. He married in 1674 Elizabeth, daughter of James Fitch of Norwich. His second wife, in 1692, was Ruth, daughter of Samuel Wyllys of Hartford. By her he had five daughters, who married ministers; Ruth, who married Rev. B. Colton of West Hartford; Naomi, who married Rev. E. Devotion of Suffield; Anne, who married Rev. B. Lord of Norwich; Mehitable, who married Rev. W. Gager of Lebanon; and Keziah, who married Rev. Isaae Stiles, and was the mother of President Stiles. He had four other daughters, who married ministers in Connecticut. Ilis descendants remain in W. Among his descendants is H. W. Taylor of Canandaigua, a judge of the supreme court of New York. He left fourteen quarto volumes of four hundred pages each; much of it in poetry. - Holland's Hist. II. 142; Sprague's Annals.

TAYLOR, GEORGE, a patriot of the Revolution, died at Easton Feb. 23, 1781, aged 65. He was born in Ireland in 1716. On his arrival at Durham on the Delaware, he engaged in labor in the iron works of a Mr. Savage, who paid the expenses of his voyage. Advanced to be elerk, after the death of Mr. S. he married his widow, and became a man of fortune. Being a member uated at Harvard in 1721, and was ordained in of eongress soon after the declaration of independence was passed, he signed the engrossed i; he wife, irit." le rene six

in ter

ied

She

ith,

of ter

s n

left iler

sta, T., ury

r of n of

was ning

seful

rious

849.

nday

Bev-

relve

aths.

eser-

He

t ab-

with cess-

r his wing bath

chool

e be-

hila-

. In

d he

t the

. was

tville, s of ester ioned

s the ently of his

o his

N. C., in Oct., 1794, aged 114. He was a native tate was worth 3 or 4,000,000 of dollars. of Virginia.

TAYLOR, HEZEKIAH, first minister of Newfane. Vt., died in 1814, aged 66. Born in Graf- 65. The son of Col. Richard T., he was born in ton, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1770 and Orange county, Va., Sept. 24, 1784. Perhaps was settled in 1774.

TAYLOR, JOHN, colonel, a senator of the United States, died suddenly in Caroline county, Va., Aug. 20, 1824, at an advanced age. He In the war of 1812 he served at the west; in was distinguished for his attention to agriculture. He published construction construed; an inquiry into the principles and policy of the government of the United States, 1814; and other works.

TAYLOR, RICHARD, commodore, died in Oldham county, Ky., in 1825, aged 78. He was an officer in the Revolutionary war.

TAYLOR, JAMES, minister of Sunderland, Williams college in 1804.

TAYLOR, JOHN, colonel, governor of South Carolina from 1826 to 1828, died in 1832. He had been a member of congress.

TAYLOR, JOHN, a Baptist minister, died in Franklin county, Ky., in 1835, aged 82.

TAYLOR, SARAH LOUISA, died in 1838, aged 27. Her memoir was written by Rev. Lot Jones.

TAYLOR, JOHN, minister, died at Bruce, Mich., in 1840, aged 77. He graduated at Yale chester, Mass., died Dec. 18, 1851, aged 50.

TAYLOR, JOHN, minister of Deerfield, Mass., died in 1840, aged about 76. Born in Westfield, he graduated at Yale in 1784, and was pastor from 1787 to 1806, the successor of J. Ashley, and was succeeded in 1807 by Rev. Dr. Willard, who still lives in this year, 1857. He published century sermon, 1804; farewell at Deerfield, 1806.

TAYLOR, PHILIP W., a minister for sixty years, died in Shelby county, Ky., about 1840, aged upwards of 80. Born in Caroline county, Va., he was a soldier of the Revolution, and present at the surrender of Cornwallis. In 1781 he was a pioneer settler in Kentucky. He was not only a preacher, but for two years high sheriff.

TAYLOR, JOHN M., colonel, died in Philadelphia in 1843, aged 92. He was commissarygeneral of the American army in 1775, at the siege of Quebec, and he remained in the service with honor till 1779.

TAYLOR, SAMUEL AUSTIN, missionary to Constantinople, died at Worcester in 1847, aged 28. He graduated at Amherst in 1837, and at Andover theological seminary in 1842.

TAYLOR, JAMES, general, died at Newport, Ky., in 1848, aged 80. His last political act was voting, on his sick bed, on the day of his death, for his relative, President Taylor. He served in seminary; but, not concurring in the acts of the

TAYLOR, WILLIAM, died in Pitt county, the war of 1812. It was thought his landed es-

TAYLOR, ZACHARY, president of the United States, died at Washington July 9, 1850, aged Zachary Tailor, who arrived in Virginia in 1635. was his ancestor. In 1808 he entered the army. In 1810 he married Margaret Smith of Maryland. 1816 he commanded at Green Bay. He served under Scott in the Black Hawk war. He was also in the Florida war, and was intrusted with the command of all the troops. At the close of the war he purchased an estate and settled at Baton Rouge. He distinguished himself greatly in the Mexican war, and among other victories. gained, Feb. 23, 1847, the memorable one of Mass., died in 1831, aged 47. He graduated at Buena Vista over Santa Anna. The whig convention of 1848, smitten with his military fame, nominated him for the presidency. He was inangurated March 4, 1849. He was ill only five days, was in office sixteen months, and was succeeded by Mr. Fillmore. He left a widow, one son, and two daughters: Ann, married to Dr. R. C. Wood, surgeon in the army; Bessy, to Major W. W. S. Bliss. A daughter deceased, Sarah Knox, was married to Col. Jefferson Davis.

Ί

1

d

0 ti

1

B

A

a

TAYLOR, OLIVER ALDEN, minister of Man-Born at Yarmouth, his mother was the daughter of Rev. T. Alden. His parents emigrated to Hawley, where he had no advantages of early education. At the age of sixteen he joined the church with fifty-three others. Having prepared to enter college at an academy, he borrowed 10 dollars, and made a journey on foot to Alleghany college, where his uncle, T. Alden, was president. He graduated at Union college in 1825, and studied theology at Andover, where he lived twelve years, devoted to literary pursuits. He was the minister of M. from 1839 till his death; and was eminent for learning and piety. His wife was a daughter of Dr. N. Cleaveland. In 1836 he was a teacher of sacred literature in the seminary at Andover. He published various articles in the biblical repository and spirit of the pilgrims; brief views of the Saviour, for the young, 1835; the music of the Hebrews, a translation; memoirs of Reinhard; catalogue of the seminary library, 1838; memoir of Andrew Lee, 1844; also some poetical effusions. A memoir of him by his brother, Rev. T. A. Taylor, was published in 1853. - Sprague's Annals.

TAYLOR, STEPHEN, D. D., died at Richmond, Va., in 1853, aged 56. He graduated at Williams college in 1815, and was for a quarter of a century one of the most useful ministers in Virginia. He was a professor in the theological general assembly in 1838, he resigned that office. | pistol from his holster, Johnson laid him dead at He had peace in death.

TAYLOR, RICHARD, second chief of the Indian Cherokee nation, died at Tahlequah, Arkansas, in 1853. He commanded under Jackson in the Creek war.

TAYLOR, JOHN W., a distinguished statesman, died at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1854, aged 70. He died in the family of his son-in-law, W. 1). Beattie. Born in Saratoga county, N. Y., he studied law in Albany, and was a member of congress from 1813 to 1833, and was speaker in 1821. He was most earnestly opposed to the admission of Missouri as a slave State. He survived the great debaters on that subject, King, Tallmadge, Clay, Holmes, Randolph, Pinckney, and Storrs.

TAYLOR, STEPHEN W., LL. D., president of Madison university, Hamilton, N. Y., died in 1856, aged 66. He had been wasting away by disease two or three years. He was a graduate of Hamilton college, having borrowed the money necessary to defray the expenses of his education. About 1816 he was at the head of Black river academy at Lowville; in 1834 he took charge of the grammar school at Hamilton. In 1846 he went to Pennsylvania and built up a Baptist college. In 1850 he became president of Madison university. His son, B. F. Taylor, was an editor at Chicago; and his son, A. H. Taylor, principal of Hamilton academy. He was gentlemanly, affectionate, and generous. He had an iron will. He said to students in poverty, "Every boy in this country can acquire a liberal education, if he wills it."

TECUMSEH, an Indian chief, died Oct. 5, 1813, aged 43. He was the son of a Shawance warrior, and was born on the Scioto river, Ohio. He was engaged in many incursions into Kentucky, and intercepted many boats descending the Ohio. It is supposed that about 1806 he and his brother, Elskwatawa the prophet, formed the project of uniting all the western Indians in a war against the Americans. When Gen. Harrison attacked and defeated the prophet in the battle of Tippecanoe, Nov. 7, 1811, Tecumsch was absent, on a visit to the south. In the war of 1812 he was an ally to the British, with the rank of brigadier-general. At the siege of fort Meigs, and at the second assault in July, he was present, being at the head of two thousand warriors. In the battle at Moravian town, on the Thames, Gen. Harrison had for his aids Gen. Cass and Com. Perry. Col. R. M. Johnson commanded on the left, and came in personal conflict, it is said, with Teeumsch. His horse being killed and himself wounded by three balls in his right thigh and two in the left arm, the savage chief rushed upon him with his tomahawk; but, drawing a - Sprague's Annals.

his feet. In this battle, Col. J.'s brother, Lient,-Col. James J., was killed. The project of uniting all the western Indians against the Americans, and the efforts made to execute the project, display a savage energy and perseverance, but indieate very little wisdom. The prophet as well as the warrior being now deceased, such a combination will probably never be made again. King Philip; Pontiae, the Ottawas chief, who in 1763 captured Michillimackinae and invested Detroit; the Prophet, and Teeumseh, may be regarded as the most remarkable of the savage warriors of America. His life was written by Dr. Daniel Drake, 1841.

TEFFT, ELIZA, wife of Rev. J. C. Tefft, missionary in Africa, died at the Mendi station June 10, 1851, aged 26. She was the daughter of E. C. Benton of Pittsfield, Mass., afterwards of Seville, Ohio.

TELFER, Dr., died at Toronto, Upper Canada, March 7, 1857, an eminent physician.

TEMPLE, DANIEL, a missionary in Malta, died in Reading, Mass., Aug. 9, 1851, aged 61. Born in Reading, the eldest of thirteen children. he worked at the trade of a shoemaker till the age of twenty-one, when he became a Christian convert. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1817; at the theological seminary in Andover in 1820. Having been an agent for the American board of missions one year, he was ordained in 1821. He sailed as a missionary for Malta in 1822, and earried with him the first printing-press for the east. His wife, Rachel, the daughter of Col. T. Dix of Boseawen, N. H., died in Malta in 1827. In 1830 he married Martha Ely of Longmeadow, Mass., and sailed again for Malta. From 1833 to 1844 he lived in Smyrna, occupied with his press. But now, a change being determined upon in the Greek department of the mission in Turkey, to which he was specially devoted it was deemed best that he should return to America. He was employed as an agent of the board, and in preaching in various places. In 1847 he was installed at Phelps in New York, where he continued two years. He died in his paternal home, in the midst of his relatives, in the confidence that he was going to his eternal home in the heavens. He said: "I am a happy man. I am looking forward to an eternity of blessedness." His name was venerated in the east by Turks and Greeks. They knew him long and well. He was not only noble in looks, but truthful and generous in character. He published a sermon at Boston, 1822. In connection with his press he prepared books in the modern Greek, Italian, and Armenian languages; he wrote many Seripture histories, and edited a magazine in Greek.

r, was Richted at uarter ters in logical

of the d es-

nited

aged rn in haps

1635.

rmy.

land.

t; in erved

e was

with se of

ed at reatly

ories.

ne of

con-

fame,

as in-

y five

was

w, one

o Dr.

sy, to eased.

Davis. Man-

d 50.

laugh-

ted to

' carly

ed the epared

ed 10

ghany sident.

i, and lived

. He

death :

. Ilis d. In

in the

ous arof the

or the transof the

w Lee,

ıemoir

a

tl

tl b

e tl

ti

I

a ti

ti

81

a

1 o C

n

e iı

p o tl

b

at Portland, Me., died at Danvers, Mass., in 1849, aged 57.

TEN EYCK, SARAH, died in Somerset county, N. J., in 1844, aged 101 years.

TENNENT, JOHN, a physician of Virginia, published at Williamsburgh, in 1736, an essay on the pleurisy, which was reprinted in New York in 1742. In this work he first brought into view the virtues of the Seneca snake-root. The immediate cause of a pleurisy or peripneumony, in his opinion, is a viscidity of blood of the same nature with that produced by the venom of the rattlesnake; and, as the rattlesnake root had been found a cure for the bite of the snake, he proposed it as a cure for the pleurisy. - Ramsay's Rev. 36.

TENNENT, WILLIAM, a useful scholar and minister of a Presbyterian church at Neshaminy, Penn., died about 1743. He received Episcopal ordination in Ireland, and emigrated to this country in the year 1718, with four sons, Gilbert, William, John, and Charles. After his arrival he renounced his connection with the Episcopal church, and was admitted into the synod of Philadelphia. He spent a short time in the State of New York, and then in 1721 or 1722 removed to Bensalem, Penn. Here he remained not more than four or five years; for in 1726 he settled at Neshaminy, about twenty miles north of the city of Philadelphia, where he became pastor of a small Presbyterian congregation. Here he established a seminary of learning, which soon received the name of the "log college," by which it was long known. But this institution, though humble in name, was the nursery in which many ministers of the gospel were trained up for eminent usefulness. Among these were his four sons, who were educated under his sole instruction, and Messrs. Rowland, Campbell, Lawrence, Beatty, Robinson, and Samuel Blair. He had the happiness to see all his sons employed in the service of the church for several years before his death. As the calls for ministerial service were urgent, he sent them out as soon as they were qualified for the work. Of these, John died in early life, and the others lived to an advanced age, and were among the most useful and respectable ministers of their time. He was a man of great integrity, simplicity, industry, and piety; and to his labors and benevolent zeal the American churches are in no small degree indebted. - Boudinot's Life of T.

TENNENT, GILBERT, minister of Philadelphia, the son of the preceding, died about 1765, aged 62. He was born in Ircland. At the age of 14 he began to be anxious for the salvation of his soul; he was often in great agony of mind, but at length the character of Jesus Christ as the Saviour of sinners filled him with peace. Still he transaction illustrates his character. An ardent

TEN BROECK, Petrus, Episcopal minister | was diffident of his Christian character, and in eonsequence pursued the study of physic for a year, but afterwards devoted himself to theology, In the autumn of 1726 he was ordained minister of New Brunswick in N. J. For some time he was the delight of the pious, and was honored by those who were destitute of religion. But, when God began to bless his faithful labors to the awakening of secure sinners, and to their conversion from darkness unto light, he presently lost the good opinion of false professors; his name was loaded with reproaches, and the grossest immoralities were attributed to him. But he bore all with patience. Though he had sensibility to character as well as other men, yet he was willing to encounter disgrace, rather than neglect preaching the truth, however offensive to the sinful, whom he wished to reclaim. Towards the close of the year 1740 and in the beginning of the year 1741, he made a tour in New England, at the request of Mr. Whitefield. An astonishing efficacy accompanied his labors. Visiting various towns, he was everywhere remarkably useful. In this tour the dress, in which he commonly entered the pulpit, was a great coat, girt about him with a lenthern girdle, while his natural hair was left undressed. His large stature and grave aspect added a dignity to the simplicity or rather rusticity of his appearance. In 1743 he established a new church in Philadelphia, consisting of the followers of Mr. Whitefield. In 1753, at the request of the trustees of New Jersey college, he went to England to solicit benefactions for that seminary. After a life of great usefulness he died in much peace, and was succeeded by Dr. Sproat. For more than forty years he had enjoyed a habitual, unshaken assurance of his interest in redeeming love. As a preacher, he was in his vigorous days equalled by but few. His reasoning powers were strong, his language foreible and often sublime, and his manner of address warm and earnest. His eloquence, however, was rather bold and awful than soft and persuasive. When he wished to alarm the sinner, he could represent in the most awful manner the terrors of the Lord. He was bold, courageous, ardent, and independent. A number of Presbyterians, both among the clergy and laity, who were considered as mere formalists in religion, violently opposed Mr. Whitefield and Mr. T. The consequence was that the synod of Philadelphia was split into two synods, which treated each other with great eensoriousness. At length Mr. T., who had been principally concerned in promoting the separation, became desirous of restoring harmony, and labored with great industry for this purpose. · His longest and most elaborate publication, entitled the peace of Jerusalem, was upon this subject. The synods were united in 1758. The whole id in

for a

logy.

nister

ne he ed by

when

o the mver-

y lost

name

st im-

bore lity to villing

reach-

sinful,

e close

of the

ind, at ishing

various

d. In

ntered

n with

as left

aspect

er rus-

blished

of the

he re-

ge, he or that he died

Sproat.

yed a t in re-

iis vig-

soning

le and warm

rather

When

present

e Lord.

depen-

ong the s mere

d Mr.

ce was lit into ı great

id been separa-

ıy, and

e. His entitled

subject.

whole ardent

love to what he conceived to be truth and duty | peatedly stated that, after he had apparently always triumphed over all considerations of a personal kind. He published the righteousness of the scribes and pharisees considered; a sermon on justification; remarks upon a protestation to the synod, 1741; the examiner examined, or Gilbert Tennent harmonious, in answer to Mr. Hancock's pamphlet, entitled the examiner, or Gilbert against Tennent; three sermons on holding fast the truth against the Moravians; at the ordination of C. Beatty, 1743; on the victory of the British arms; two sermons at Philadelphia, on account of a revival of religion in Prince's Christian history, 1744; on the success of the expedition against Louisburg; discourses on several subjects, on the nature of justification, on the law. and the necessity of good works vindicated, 12mo., 1745; on the lawfulness of defensive war, 1747; on the consistency of defensive war with true Christianity; defensive war defended; a fast sermon; before the sacramental solemnity, 1748; essay on the peace of Jerusalem; at a thanksgiving; on the displays of divine justice in the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ, 1749; sermons on important subjects, adapted to the present state of the British nation, 8vo., 1758; at the opening of the Presbyterian church. - Assembly's Miss.

Mag. 1. 238-248; 11. 46. TENNENT, WILLIAM, minister, of Frechold. N. J., died March 8, 1777, aged 71. He was the brother of the preceding, and was born in Ireland, June 3, 1705. He arrived in America when in the 14th year of his age. Having resolved to devote himself to the ministry of the gospel, his intense application to the study of theology under the care of his brother at New Brunswick so impaired his health as to bring on a decline. He became more and more emaciated, till little hope of life was left. At length he fainted and apparently expired. The neighbors were invited to attend his funeral on the next day. In the evening his physician, a young gentleman who was his particular friend, returned to the town and was afflicted beyond measure at the news of his death. On examining the body he affirmed that he felt an unusual warmth, and had it restored to a warm bed, and the funeral delayed. All probable means were used to restore life; the third day arrived, and the exertions of the doctor had as yet been in vain. It was determined by the brother that the funeral should now be attended, but the physician requested a delay of one hour, then of half an hour, and finally of a quarter of an hour. As this last period nearly expired, indications of life were discovered. The efforts were now renewed, and in a few honrs Mr. T. was restored to life. His recovery, however, was very slow; all former ideas were for some time blotted out of his mind, and it was a year before he was perfectly restored. To his friends he re- circumstance being proved by the testimony of expired, he found himself in heaven, where he beheld a glory which he could not describe, and heard songs of praise before this glory which were unutterable. He was about to join the throng when one of the heavenly messengers said to him, "You must return to the earth." At this instant he grouned and opened his eyes upon this world. For three years afterwards the sounds which he had heard were not out of his ears, and earthly things were in his sight as vanity and nothing.

In Oct., 1733, he was ordained at Freehold, as the successor of his brother, John T. It was not long before his inattention to worldly concerns brought him into debt. In his embarrassment a friend from New York told him that the only remedy was to get a wife. "I do not know how to go about it," was the answer. "Then I will undertake the business," said his friend; "I have a sister-in-law in the city, a prudent and pious widow." The next evening found Mr. T. in New York, and the day after he was introduced to Mrs. Noble. Being pleased with her appearance, when he was left alone with her he abruptly told her that he supposed she knew his errand, that neither his time nor inclination would suffer him to use much ceremony, and that if she pleased he would attend his charge on the next Sabbath, and return on Monday and be married. With some hesitation the lady consented; and she proved an invaluable treasure to him. About the year 1744, when the faithful preaching of Mr. T. and John Rowland was the means of advancing in a very remarkable degree the cause of religion in New Jersey, the indignation and malice of those who loved darkness rather than light, and who could not quietly submit to have their false security shaken, were excited against these servants of God. There was at this time prowling through the country a noted man, named Tom Bell. One evening he arrived at a tavern in Princeton, dressed in a parson's frock, and was immediately accosted as Rev. Mr. Rowland, whom he much resembled. This mistake was sufficient for him. The next day he went to a congregation in the county of Hunterdon, and, declaring himself to be Mr. Rowland, was invited to preach on the Sabbath. As he was riding to church in the family wagon, accompanied by his host on an elegant horse, he discovered, when he was near the church, that he had left his notes behind, and proposed to ride back for them on the fine horse. The proposal was agreed to, and Bell, after returning to the house and ritling the desk, made off with the horse. Mr. Rowland was soon indicted for the robbery, but it happened that on the very day in which the robbery was committed he was in Pennsylvania or Maryland; and this

Mr. T. and two other gentlemen, who necompanied him, the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. Mr. Rowland could not again be brought before the court; but the witnesses were indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury. The evidence was very strong against them, for many had seen the supposed Mr. Rowland on the elegant horse. Mr. T. employed John Coxe, an eminent lawyer, to conduct his defence. He went to Trenton on the day appointed, and there found Mr. Smith of New York, one of the ablest lawyers in America, and of a religious character, who had voluntarily attended to aid in his defence. He found also at Trenton his brother Gilbert, from Philadelphia, with Mr. Kinsey, one of the first counsellors in the city. Mr. Tennent was asked who were his witnesses; he replied that he had none, as the persons who accompanied him were also indicted. He was pressed to delay the trial, as he would most certainly be convicted; but he insisted that it should proceed, as he trusted in God to vindicate his innocence. Mr. Coxe was charging Mr. T. with acting the part of an enthusiast, when the bell summoned them to court. The latter had not walked far in the street, before he was accosted by a man and his wife, who asked him if his name was not Tennent. The man said that he lived in a certain place in Pennsylvania or Maryland; that Mr. T. and Mr. Rowland had lodged at his house, or at a house where he and his wife had been servants, at a particular time, and on the next day preached; that, some nights before he left home, he and his wife both dreamed repeatedly that Mr. T. was in distress at Trenton, and they only could relieve him; and that they in consequence had come to that town, and wished to know what they had to do. Mr. T. led them to the court house, and their testimony induced the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, to the astonishment of his enemies. He was well skilled in theology, and professed himself a moderate Calvinist. The doctrines of man's depravity, the atonement of Christ, the necessity of the all-powerful influence of the Holy Spirit to renew the heart, in consistency with the free agency of the sinner, were among the leading articles of his faith. With his friends he was at all times cheerful and pleasant. He once dined in company with Gov. Livingston and Mr. Whitefield, when the latter expressed the consolation he found in believing, amidst the fatigues of the day, that his work would soon be done, and that he should depart and be with Christ. He appealed to Mr. T. whether this was not his comfort. Mr. T. replied: "What do you think I should say if I was to send my man, Tom, into the field to plough, and at noon should find him lounging under a tree, complaining of the heat, and of his difficult work, and begging to be discharged of his hard service? What should I say? Why, that he was an idle, lazy fellow, and that it was his business to do the work that I had appointed him." He was the friend of the poor. The public lost in him a firm asserter of the civil and religious rights of his country. Few men have ever been more holy in life, more submissive to the will of God under heavy afflictions, or more peaceful in death. His account of the revival of religion in Frechold and other places is published in Prince's Christian history.—Assembly's Miss. Mag. II. 97–103, 146, 202, 233.

ir

C

m

1 ir

a

to

to

m fe

H

vi

tŀ

ju

116 οι

w

he

П

of

R

pr

at di

18 tu 20 sh

HY mHA

TENNENT, WILLIAM, minister of Norwalk, Conn., died in 1777, aged about 40. He graduated at Princeton in 1758; was settled in 1763, the successor of M. Dickinson, and was succeeded by M. Burnet.

TENNEY, DANIEL, died at Hopkinton, N. H., in 1816, aged 82; a soldier in the Revolutionary war, whose brother was killed at his side in the battle of Bunker Hill.

TENNEY, SAMUEL, M. D., a physician and judge, died in 1816, aged about 65. He was born at Byfield, Mass., and graduated at Harvard college in 1772. Having studied physic, he repaired to the army on the day of Breed's Hill battle, and was employed in the night in dressing the wounded. He served in the Rhode Island line during the war, at the close of which he settled at Exeter, N. II., but did not resume his profession. He was judge of probate from 1793 till 1800, when he was elected a member of congress. He was a man of literature, and science, and religion. In the collections of the historical society he published an account of Exeter, and communications in various journals.—

Thacher.

TENNEY, DAVID, a missionary, died at Shoal Creek, Ill., Oct. 21, 1819, aged 34; a native of Massachusetts.

TENNEY, TABITHA, the widow of Dr. Samuel T., died at Exeter, N. H., in 1837, aged 75. Her father was Samuel Gilman; her mother was of the name of Robinson. She published the new pleasing instructor; female quixotism, 2 vols., 1829. — Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TENNEY, ČALEB JEWETT, D. D., died at Northampton, Mass., Sept. 28, 1847, aged 67. He was a son of William T., of Hollis, N. H., adescendant of Thomas, who came over from England with Rev. E. Rogers in 1638, and settled at Rowley. His mother was Phebe Jewets of Rowley. He was born in Hollis May 3, 1780. At the age of twelve a good Providence preserved his life, as the wheel of a cart, londed with wood, went over him, across his hips as he lay on his face. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1801, receiving the highest appointment, the valedictory oration, at commencement. Daniel Webster was a member of his class. He had become pious at the age of sixteen, in consequence of reading Da-, lazy vies' sermons, by request of his mother. Having studied theology a little while with Drs. Burton and Spring, he was ordained at Newport, R. I., in September, 1804, as successor of Dr. Hopkins, and there remained twelve years: and there he married Ruth Channing, the daughter of John Channing. For twenty-four years he was the minister of Wethersfield, Conn., from 1810 to 1840, although from ill health he ceased to preach C'hrisin 1833. So successful were his labors in 1820 -103, and 1821, that two hundred persons were added to his church. His predecessors in this ancient town were H. Smith, Russell, Bulkley, Rowlandson, Woodbridge, Mix, Loekwood, Marsh. Removing in 1842 to Northampton, he there suffered the great affliction of the death of his wife. His last years were spent in the acceptable ser-N. II., vice of the colonization society. He was a learned theologian and a useful preacher, doctrinal, instructive, solemn, affectionate, and carnest; a judicious and faithful pastor; and a man of eminent and steady picty, amiable, just, and generle was ous, a true philanthropist. He was sick but one week, and not thought dangerous till just before > 1832. - N. Y. Observer, April 1, 1848; Sprague's Annals. TERRELL, WILLIAM, M. D., died in Sparta, Geo., July 4, 1855; a member of congress from 1817 to 1821. He took an interest in agriculture, and in 1853 made a liberal donation of 20,000 dollars to found an agricultural professorship in the university of Georgia.

he died. He said, "I have a comfortable hope."

His wife, Ruth, the daughter of John Chaming, of Newport, died in 1842, aged 60: his daughter,

Ruth, has died since his decease. His diary is preserved. He published a sermon on baptism ; at ordination of R. Robbins, 1816; New England distinguished, 1827; on the death of Dr. Marsh, 1821; of Dr. Austin, 1830; of A. Mitchell,

TERRY, NATHANIEL, died at his son's in New Haven June 14, 1844, aged 76. A graduate of Yale in 1786, he lived in Hartford, and was a member of congress, a useful and respected man. His father was Ephraim of Enfield, who married Ann Collins, the daughter of Rev. N. Collins, and a descendant by her mother, Alice Adams, from Gov. Bradford. Besides Seth Terry of Hartford, he had brothers, Samuel, Ephraim, Elijah, Eli-

TERRY, ELI, died at Terrysville, Conn., Feb. 24, 1852, aged 80; the most extensive clock manufacturer in the United States.

TESCHEMACHER, J. E., died in 1853; a geologist and naturalist.

TETARD, Lewis, a professor in Columbia college, N. Y., died in 1787. He came from church in New York, and a chaplain in the army. | Sprague's Annals.

THACHER, THOMAS, first minister of the old south church in Boston, died Oct. 15, 1678, aged The son of Rev. Peter T. of Old Sarum, ho was born in England May 1, 1620, and arrived in this country June 4, 1635. He pursued his studies under the direction of Chauncy. Jan. 2, 1644, he was ordained minister of Weymouth; but after the death of his wife in 1664 he was induced to remove to Boston. When a new church was formed out of the first by persons displeased with the settlement of Mr. Davenport, Mr. Thacher was installed its pastor Feb. 16, 1670. His colleague, Mr. Willard, survived him. His wife was a daughter of Rev. Ralph Partridge. His son, Ralph, was a minister at Martha's Vineyard. Being well skilled in the Hebrew, he composed a lexicon of the principal words in that language. President Stiles speaks of him as the best Arabic scholar in the country. As a preacher he was very popular, being remarkably fervent and copious in prayer. He was also a physician. He published a fast sermon, 1674; a brief rule to guide the common people in the small pox and measles, 1677; 2d ed., 1702. - Magnalia, III. 148-153; Sprague's Annals.

THACHER, PETER, first minister of Milton, the son of the preceding, died Dec. 17, 1727, aged 76. He was born at Salem in 1651, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1671. In a few years he went to England, where he became acquainted with a number of eminent divines. On his return he was ordained at Milton, June 1, 1681. His successor was John Taylor. His wife was Theodora, daughter of Rev. John Oxenbridge; his second wife, the widow of Rev. J. Bailey; his third, the widow of J. Gee. His daughter by his first wife married Rev. S. Miles. In his natural temper there was a great deal of vivacity, which gave an interest to his conversation and to his public performances. While he was cheerful and affable, he was eminent for sanctity and benevolence. Besides the ordinary labors of the Lord's day he preached a monthly lecture, and encouraged the private meetings of his neighbors for religious purposes. Having studied the Indian language, he also at a monthly lecture imparted to the Indians of a neighboring village the gospel of salvation. Being a physician, his benevolence prompted him to expend a great part of his yearly salary in the purchase of medicines for the sick and indigent. His death was sudden. The last words which he uttered were, "I am going to Christ in glory." He published unbelief detected and condemned, to which is added the treasures of the fathers inheritable by their posterity, 1708; election sermon, 1711; Christ's forgiveness a pattern, 1712; on the death of Samuel Man, 1719; a divine riddle, he that is Switzerland, and was the minister of the French | weak is strong, 1723; the perpetual covenant. -

o the the im a its of more God leath. ehold rwalk, radu-1763, eeded ionary in the n and arvard he re-'s Hill dressde Ishich he me his n 1793 ber of ınd sciof the of Exenals. — ative of r. Samged 75. her was ed the , 2 vols.,

died at

t Shoal

ged 67. N. 11., a m Engettled at of Row-At the rved his th wood, y on his 1801, reledictory ster was pious at tha's Vineyard in 1697; dismissed in 1714. He in 1737, and was ordained in 1748. He pubwas the son of Rev. Thomas, of Boston. His lished a sermon on the death of H. Weld, 1782, successors were Holmes, Boardman, and Jonathan Smith, ordained in 1788; Joseph Thaxter death.

was then pastor of Edgartown.

THACHER, PETER, minister in Boston, died Feb. 26, 1739, aged 61. He was born in that town, the son of Rev. Thomas T., and was graduated at Harvard college in 1696. While a member of college it pleased a sovereign God to give him a deep sense of his sin, and at length to inspire him with a cheerful faith in the Saviour. After living at Hatfield some time as a schoolmaster, he was settled in the ministry at Wevmouth, where he remained eleven or twelve years. He was installed pastor of the new north church in Boston, as colleague with Mr. Webb, Jan. 27, 1720. In consequence of some divisions in the society, and some irregularity in the measures which were adopted to obtain Mr. Thacher. the association refused to assist in his settlement. He possessed a strong masterly genius. Mr. Cooper calls him the evangelical reasoner. In the gift of prayer he was almost unequalled. During his last sickness he was eheerful, for he hoped in the mercy of God through the Redeemer. He published the election sermon, 1726, and a sermon on the death of Mrs. Gee. -Sprague's Annals.

THACHER, PETER, minister of Middleborough, Mass., died April 22, 1744, aged 55. He was the son of Rev. P. Thacher, of Milton. He was born Cet. 6, 1688, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1706. After preaching two years in Middleborough, he was ordained Nov. 2, 1709. He was succeeded by Sylvester Conant. He was very distinguished for the sanctity of his life. At one period his faithful exertions as a minister were the means of adding near two hundred members to his church in less than three years. He published an account of the revival of religion in Middleborough, in the Christian history, where is a minute account of his life by Mr. Prince. -

Recorder, Feb. 9, 1843.

THACHER, OXENBRIDGE, a representative of Boston in the general court, died July 8, 1765, aged 45. He was the son of Oxenbridge T., who died in 1772, aged 92, and grandson of Rev. Peter T., of Milton. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1738. He was a learned man and good writer. He published a pamphlet on the gold coin, 1760; and the sentiments of a British American, occasioned by the act to lay certain duties in the British colonies, 1764.

THACHER, ROLAND, minister of Wareham, died in 1775, aged about 63. He graduated at Harvard in 1733.

THACHER, PETER, minister of Attleborough,

THACHER, RALPH, was a minister at Mar- | T. of Middleborough, he graduated at Harvard A volume of his sermons was published after his

THACHER, PETER, D. D., minister in Boston, the son of Oxenbridge T., died Dec. 16, 1802, aged 50. He was born in Milton, March 21, 1752, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1769. Sept. 19, 1770, he was ordained the minister of Malden. As a preacher he was admired. His oratorical powers, his fluency in prayer, and the pathos of his expression were applauded by the serious and intelligent, and rendered him uncommonly acceptable to the multitude. No young man preached to such crowded assemblies. Mr. Whitefield, in his prayers, called him the young Elijah. Being a strict Calvinist in his sentiments, he contended zealously for the faith of his fathers. When the controversy began with Great Britain. he exerted himself in the pulpit, in conversation, and in other ways, to support the rights of his country. He was a delegate from Malden to the convention which formed the constitution of Massachusetts in 1780. Being democratic in his sentiments, he contended that there should be no governor; and, when a decision was made contrary to his wishes, he still made objections to the title of Excellency, given to the chief magistrate. But afterwards, as he became better acquainted with the policy of government, he was warmly attached to those parts of the constitution which he had once disapproved. He was installed minister of the church in Brattle street, Boston, as successor of Dr. Cooper, Jan. 12, 1785, and in this vineyard of the Lord he continued till his death. Being afflieted with a pulmonary complaint, his physicians recommended the milder air of a more southern climate. He accordingly sailed for Savannah, where he died. He was succeeded by Mr. Buckminster. Just before he set sail from Boston, he was visited by Dr. Stillman, to whom he expressed his belief that he should not recover, and said, with peculiar energy: "The doctrines I have preached are now my only comfort. My hopes are built on the atonement and righteousness of Christ." The last words which he uttered were, "Jesus Christ, my Saviour." In the chamber of sickness he was remarkably acceptable. To the distressed and afflicted his voice was that of an angel of comfort. In prayer he was uncommonly eloquent, uttering in impressive and pathetic language the devout feelings of his own heart, and exciting deep emotions in the hearts of his hearers. He published an oration against standing armies, March 5, 1776; on the death of A. Elliot, 1778; three sermons in proof of the eternity of future punishment, 1782; observations on the state of the clergy in New England, with stric-Mass., died in 1785, aged 69. The son of Peter | tures upon the power of dismissing them usurped vard

pub-

1782.

r his

ston.

aged

1752,

1769.

er of

Ilis

d the y the ncom-

young

Mr.

young

ments,

thers.

ritain,

sation,

of his

to the

on of

in hia

be no

e con-

to the istrate.

uainted

mly at-hich he ainister

as suc-

in this death.

unt, his

a more for Saded by il from whom recover.

trines I

rt. My glitcous-uttered

hamber

To the

ın angel

nly elo-

etic lan-

art, and

ia hear-

tanding

A. El-

cternity

s on the

th stricusurped by some churches, 1783; a reply to strictures | acknowledge that he was shot. This ended the upon the preceding; on the death of J. Paine, 1788; of Gov. Howdoin, 1791; of Gov. Hancock, 1793; of S. Stillman, jun., 1794; of T. Russell and N. Gorham, 1796; of Dr. Clarke and Rebecca Gill, 1798; of Gov. Sumner, 1799; of Washington, 1800; at the ordination of E. Kellogg, 1788; of W. F. Rowland, 1790; at the ordination of his son, T. C. Thacher, 1794; memoirs of Dr. Boylston, 1789; before the Massachusetts Congregational charitable society, 1795; before a society of freemasons, 1797; at the artillery election, 1798; a century sermon, 1799.-Sprague's Annals.

THACHER, THOMAS, minister of Dedham, Mass., brother of the preceding, was graduated at Harvard college in 1775, and died Oct. 19, 1812, aged 56. He published a sermon on benevolence, 1784; at a thankagiving, 1795; on the death of N. Robbins, 1795; of Washington, 1800; after the execution of J. Fairbanka, 1801; on death of S. Adams, 1804; at Christmas, 1799; at the ordination of E. Dunbar; of J. Tuckerman; before the humane society, 1800; century sermon, 1801; Dudleian lecture, 1805; at the dedication of Milton academy, 1807; at a fast; character of Dr. West, 1808.

THACHER, SAMUEL COOPER, minister in Boston, died Jan. 2, 1818, aged 32. He was the son of Rev. Peter T.; was born Dec. 14, 1785; was graduated at Harvard college in 1804; and in 1806 went to Europe with Mr. Buckminster. He was ordained as the successor of J. T. Kirkland in Boston May 15, 1811, and died in Moulina in France, whither he went for his health. He published a memoir of Mr. Buckminster, and many reviews in the monthly anthology, that of the constitution of Andover theological seminary exciting the most attention. After his death a volume of aermons, with a memoir, was published, 8vo., 1824.

THACHER, GEORGE, judge, died at Biddeford, Me., in 1824, aged about 70. He graduated at Harvard in 1776, and was a member of congress, and a judge of the aupreme court of Mas-He had wit and humor and selfsachusetts. command. When in congress, a bill was reported in respect to the eagle to be imprinted on the American coin. He opposed it, saying, the cagle was a royal bird, not suitable for our democracy; but the figure of a goose would be very proper to be stamped on the dollar, in which case goslings would be right for the dimes. It is said that he was challenged for this speech by the reporter of the bill; and that he replied to the second, that he would write a note consulting Mrs. Thacher on the subject: in the mean while the challenger might mark his size on a wall and fire at it with a pistol, and, if he hit it, he would Martha's Vineyard, died July 18, 1827, aged THACHER, PETER O., judge, died in Boston Feb. 22, 1843. The son of Dr. T., he was born in Malden in 1776; graduated at Harvard in 1796; and was appointed a judge of the municipal court in Boston in 1823, in which office he faithfully served for twenty years, much respected for his integrity and humanity.

THACHER, JAMES, Dr., died at Plymouth May 24, 1844, aged 90. He was born in Barnstable. A surgeon in the Revolutionary army, he was present in the principal battles. At the close of the war he settled in Plymouth as a surgeon, and was eminent and in successful practice during most of his life. He was a public-spirited, disinterested citizen. He published a military journal; new dispensatory; on hydrophobia; modern practice of physic; American orchardist. 1822; American medical biography, 2 vols. 8vo., 1828; on the management of bees; on demonology, ghosts, etc., 1831; history of Plymouth, 1832; also communications to societies and periodicals. - Williams' Med. Biog.

THACHER, THOMAS C., minister of Lynn, Mass., died in 1849, nged 79. The son of Dr. Peter T. of Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1790, and was pastor from 1794 to 1313, being succeeded by Isaac Hurd.

THACHER, WASHINGTON, an agent of the American home missionary society, died at Utica June 29, 1850, aged 56. A native of Attleborough, Mass., he was a descendant of Thomas Thacher of Boston. His ministerial life was earnest and useful.

THATCHER, ORLANDO G., minister of Bradford, N. H., died in 1837, aged 39. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1823.

THATCHER, BENJAMIN B., died in Boston July 14, 1840, aged 30, after a year of illness. Born in Maine, a graduate of Bowdoin college in 1826, he was eminent for talents and acquirements. His father, Samuel, was a member of congress. He wrote during ten years for the reviews; he wrote poetry with skill; and he published a history of the Indians.

THAXTER, THOMAS, the ancestor of the Thaxters of Hingham and its vicinity, fived there as early as 1638, and died in 1654. His son John, who died in 1687, had twelve children, of whom Samuel was a colonel and councillor, one of whose daughters, Elizabeth, married first Capt. John Norton, then Col. Benjamin Lincoln, the father of Gen. B. Lincoln. - Lincoln's Hist. of Hingham.

THAXTER, THOMAS, a physician in Hingham, died in 1813, aged 64.

THAXTER, JOSEPH, minister of Edgartown, about 83. He was the last of the Revolutionary chaplains. Born in Hingham, he graduated at Harvard in 1708, and was ordained Nov. 8, 1780. His predecessors were T. Mayhew, J. Dunham, S. Wiswall from 1713 to 1746, J. Newman from 1747 to 1768, S. Kingsbury from 1761 to 1778. As to other ministers on the Vineyard, J. Mayhew was the first at Tisbury; then Torrey, Hancock, Damon, Morse, Hatch; and R. Thacher, the first at Chilmark; then Holmes, Boardman, Smith.—Hist. Coll., second series, vol. III.

THAXTER, ROBERT, M. D., died at Dorchester, of ship fever, in 1852, aged 75. He was the son of Dr. Thomas, an eminent physician of Hingham, and graduated at Harvard in 1798. In 1802 he settled in Hingham, but removed to Dorchester in 1809. For thirty years he was not kept from business one day by illness.

THAYER, EZRA, minister at Ware River, died in 1775, aged about 40. He graduated at Harvard in 1754.

THAYER, EBENEZER, minister of Hampton, N. H., died in 1792, aged 56; supposed to have been a descendant of Nathaniel, an early settler of Boston. He graduated at Harvard in 1763, and was tutor from 1760 to 1766, when he was ordained the successor of Ward Cotton. He was succeeded by J. Appleton. Some of the previous ministers were J. Wheelwright and Seaborn Cotton. He was the father of Rev. Dr. Nathaniel T.

THAYER, EBENEZER, first minister of the second church in Roxbury, died in 1733, aged about 45. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1708 and was settled in 1712; succeeded by N. Walter. He published two sermons, on the first and last days of the year, 1722; at election, 1725.

last days of the year, 1722; at election, 1725.

THAYER, ELHU, D. D., minister of Kingston, N. H., died in 1812, aged 65. Born in Braintree, the son of Nathaniel, he graduated at Princeton in 1769, and was settled in 1776. He was a good scholar and excellent minister. He fitted many young men for college. His wife was a daughter of Colonel John Calef of Kingston; by her he had six sons and five daughters. He published a sermon on the death of Gov. Bartlett, 1795; a summary of Christian doctrines and duties. A volume of his sermons was published, 1813.— Sprague's Annals.

THAYER, NATHANIEL, D. D., died at Rochester, N. Y., June 23, 1840, aged 71; pastor of the church of Lancaster, Mass. He was born at Hampton, N. H.; graduated at Harvard college in 1789; and was ordained in 1793. His mother was a daughter of Rev. J. Cotton of Newton. He was a man of talents and acquirements. More than twenty of his occasional discourses were published; among them, to masons, 1797; artillery election, 1798; at installation of W. Emerson, 1799; ordination of S. Willard.

1807; at a fast; on death of F. Gardner, 1814; on leaving old meeting-house, 1817; at election, 1823; at a dedication, 1828; at thanksgiving, 1828; at Townsend, Feb. 10, 1828.

I

THAYER, CAROLINE MATILDA, Mrs., died in Louisiana in 1844, a grand-daughter of Gen. Warren. She was a writer for periodicals, in prose and poetry.

THAYER, MINOTT, died at Braintree, Mass., in 1856, aged 85; a useful citizen, and for years a representative of the town. Families of the name of Thayer were among the early settlers; Richard, son of Richard of Boston, and Thomas, lived in Braintree in 1650; and from the latter there were between two thousand and three thousand descendants.

THOMAS, WILLIAM, one of the fathers of Plymouth, died at Marshfield in 1651, aged 76. Ile came to Plymouth in 1630. He was an assistant seven years. His son, Nathaniel, who served in Philip's war, died in 1718, aged 74.

THOMAS, JOHN, an Indian, remarkable for longevity, died at Natick, Mass., in 1727, aged 110. He was among the first of the praying Indians. He joined the church, when it was first gathered at Natick by Mr. Eliot, and was exemplary through life. — Belknap.

THOMAS, John, a major-general in the American army, died May 30, 1776. He descended from a respectable family in the county of Plymouth, Mass., and served in the war of 1756, against the French and Indians, with reputation. In April, 1775, residing at Kingston, Mass., he raised a regiment and marched to Roxbury. He was soon appointed by congress a brigadier-general, and during the siege of Boston he commanded a division of the provincial troops at Roxbury. In March, 1776, he was appointed major-general, and after the death of Montgomery was intrusted with the command in Canada. He joined the army before Quebec on the first of May, but soon found it necessary to raise the siege and commence his retreat. He died of the small-pox at Chamblee. On his death the command devolved for a few days on Arnold, and then on Gen. Sullivan. His aid-de-camp was Maj. Joshua Thomas, judge of probate, who died at Plymouth in Jan., 1821. Gen. T. was a man of sound judgment and fixed courage, and was beloved by his soldiers and amiable in the relations of private life.

THOMAS, JAMES A., died in Tatnall county, Ga., April 11, 1804, aged 133. He was temperate, and he retained his eyesight and his faculties to the last.

Newton. He was a man of talents and acquirements. More than twenty of his occasional discourses were published; among them, to masons, 1707; artillery election, 1798; at installation of W. Emerson, 1799; ordination of S. Willard, III and a brother, a capitain, served during the etion, iving, ied in Gen.

1; on

Mass.. years of the tlers; omas. latter

three

ls, in ers of ed 76. an asl, who 74. ole for

, aged ng Inis first exemin the

He decounty of 1756. itation. ss., he y. He er-genie comops at pointed ntgom-Canada. he first ise the I of the e com-he relacounty, tempers facul-old, and np was ho died

a man

ınd was

n 1818, Mass., n in the father. ing the Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he died. In his conduct he was honorable, just, and benevolent. For wit and humor he was unrivalled. Col. Wm. North relates, that once at dinner at headquarters, Dr. T. told a story, which caused Gen. Washington to laugh heartily; it was concerning an inquisitive Yan e at Taunton, who journeyed to Rhode Island to see Rochambeau's French army, and who on his return said: "The fools, who call a hat a chapeau: why couldn't they call it a hat at once, and done with it?"

THOMAS, THOMAS, general, a patriot and officer of the Revolution, died in Westchester co., N. Y., in 1824, aged 80.

THOMAS, ISAIAH, LL. D., an eminent printer, died at Worcester, Mass., April 4, 1831, aged 82. He was a descendant of Peter of Boston, who was born in 1682, the son of George. The son of Moses T., he was born in Boston in 1749. His father being dead, he was at the age of six apprenticed to Z. Fowle, a printer, and remained with him eleven years. In 1770 he published the Massachusetts Spy in Boston. For an artiele in his paper in 1771, Gov. Hutchinson and council ordered Thomas to appear, but he expressly refused to go; the attorney-general then presented in vain a bill of indictment to the grand jury, and next was directed to file an information against him; but such resistance was made that the measure was dropped. In 1775 he removed his press to Worcester, where he printed the Spy, May 3d. A few days before, he was in the battle of Lexington. In 1788 he opened a bookstore in Boston, under the firm of Thomas and Andrews, and opened printing-houses and bookstores in other towns, still residing at Worcester. At one time he had sixteen presses in use, and eight bookstores. In 1791 he printed an edition of the bible in folio, and many subsequent editions. He was the founder and president of the American antiquarian society, for which he erected a brick house at Worcester, and to which he presented many books, and made a large bequest. He was also a benefactor of Leicester academy. He published a valuable history of printing in America, 2 vols. 8vo., 1810.

THOMAS, PELEG, died at Lebanon, Conn., in April, 1834, aged 98: from early life he esteemed the bible more than all other books.

THOMAS, Joseph, died at Plymouth, Mass., in 1838, aged 84; a captain of artillery during the war of the Revolution.

THOMAS, JAMES, governor of Maryland in 1835, died in 1845, aged 61; a man of worth, highly esteemed.

THOMAS, NEHEMIAH, minister of Scituate, Mass., died in 1831, aged about 62. He graduated at Harvard in 1789, and was ordained in whole war, at the close of which he settled at Baker, Cushing, Pitcher, Bourne, Grosvenor, and Dawes.

THOMAS, DANIEL, minister of South Abington, died Jan. 5, 1847, aged 68. A memoir of him, written with great skill and beauty, occupies two columns of the Hoston Recorder of Feb. 18. A native of Middleborough, he graduated at Brown university in 1803, and was ordained June 1, 1808, the first inister of South Abington. He was a clear, intelligent preacher: the gospel with him was a theme of ineffable love. In his person he was neat, immaculate: he was tall and thin, his dark eye beamed kindly, his swelling forehead was shaded with venerable locks, his sallow features wasted by toil and age. He was never married; but, betrothed to a very lovely woman of his own parish, whose illness continued for thirty-seven years, he all this time cherished her affection, was true, gentle, and happy in this trial! He published an oration, 1810; a letter to J. Norton on the Trinity, 1815; at the funeral of J. W. Dawes, 1824.

THOMAS, PHILEMON, general, died at Baton Rouge Nov. 18, 1847, aged 83. He was a member of congress. He headed the insurrection against Spain in West Florida.

THOMAS, CALVIN, M. D., died at Tyngsborough, Mass., in 1851, aged 85.

THOMAS, JOHN B., died at Plymouth in 1852, aged 65. A graduate of Harvard in 1806, he was a lawyer and clerk of the courts, and president of the Old Colony bank.

THOMPSON, John, died in Petersburgh, Va., in 1799, aged 22. His writings in the Petersburg Gazette, with the signatures of Casca and Gracehus, were in hostility to the federal administration. His life was written by Mr. Hay. His letters, signed Curtius, addressed to Chief Justice Marshall in 1798, were published, 12mo., 1804.

THOMPSON, EBENEZER, Dr., secretary of State in New Hampshire, died at Durham in 1802, aged 65. He sustained various civil offices, and was also a physician.

THOMPSON, Sir BENJAMIN, count Rumford, died Aug. 20, 1814, aged 61. He was a descendant of Jona. T. of Woburn in 1659; was born in Woburn, Mass., March 26, 1753. His father died while he was young; his mother, Mrs. Ruth Pierce, in 1811. Being placed as a clerk to a merchant in Salem, he was disqualified for business by his devotion to the mechanic arts. Through the kindness of Sheriff Baldwin he obtained permission to attend the philosopical lectures of Prof. Winthrop at Cambridge. He afterwards taught school in Rumford, now Concord, N. H., where he married Sarah, the widow of B. Rolfe and the daughter of Rev. Mr. Walker. By this marriage his pecuniary circumstances were rendered easy. In about two years his ad-1792. His predcessors were Lathrop, Chauncy, herence to the British cause induced him to leave his family in 1775 and to repair to England, | bullets and balls whistled around her. Soon, after where he was attenized by Lord Germaine. His personal appearance and manners recommended him. He was under secretary in the northern department. Near the close of the contest he went to New York, and commanded a regiment of dragoons, and became entitled to half pay. On his return the king knighted him. His acquaintance with the minister of the duke of Bavaria induced him to go to Munich, where he introduced important reforms in the police. The prince raised him to high military rank and created him a count of the empire. He added the title of Rumford. In 1800 he was in London, and projected the royal institution of Great Britain. He died at Autreuil, France. His first wife died at Charlestown, N. II., in Feb., 1792. It would seem that he abandoned her. How this is to be reconciled to good moral principle is yet to be explained. His daughter, Sarah, Countess Rumford, died in Concord, N. H., in 1852, aged 70. He bequeathed 50,000 dollars to Harvard college, and appropriated other sums to promote discoveries in light and heat. His own discoveries gave him high reputation, and caused him to be elected a member of many learned societies. His essays were published at London, 1796.

THOMPSON, JAMES, a preacher forty years, was drowned in the Kentucky river at Frankfort in 1818, aged 74.

THOMPSON, JOHN, minister of South Berwick, Me., died in 1828, aged 88. Born in Scarborough, he graduated at Harvard in 1765, and was settled in 1783. J. Wade, J. Wise, and J. Foster were ministers before him.

THOMPSON, JOHN, the minister of Standish and South Berwick, Me., died Jan. 20, 1829, aged 87, in the sixty-first year of his ministry. He was the son of Rev. Wm. T., who was minister of Searborough from 1728 to 1759, and was graduated at Harvard in 1765; was minister of Standish from 1768 to 1783, in which year he was installed at Berwick.

THOMPSON, WILLIAM, died at Hickory Hill, Baltimore county, Md., July 22, 1835, aged 111. He left twelve surviving children, the eldest 91, the youngest 25.

THOMPSON, ELIZA N., missionary at Jerusalem, wife of Rev. William M. Thompson, died at Jerusalem July 22, 1834, aged 34. Her name was Eliza Nelson Hanna, and she was born in Baltimore: she lived in Jamaica, Long Island. Her time of service in Syria was short. She and Mrs. Dodge opened a school for Frank children early in 1833 at Beirut. Removed to Jerusalem, she found herself, in May, 1834, in circumstances of great alarm and suffering. An earthquake shook down a part of her house, which was near the castle. Then occurred the struggle between the rebel Fellahs and the government, when the a sickness of a few days, she died. She was buried on the top of Zion near the sepulchre of David. Dr. Dodge died the next January. Others, the noble-minded from distant America, sleep with them in the holy land and will share in a glorious resurrection. J. W. Alexander wrote:

> " Mourn not for her, who falls On consecrated ground, Whom God from Zlon calls In heav'n his praise to sound. Mourn not for her, who gains Jerusalem above; Her soul, let loose, attains The golden streets of love."

THOMPSON, BENJAMIN, Dr., died at Washington in 1840, aged 54. His previous residence was at Concord, N. II. He made himself famous as a botanical physician.

THOMPSON, LATHROP, minister of Sharon and Chelsea, Vt., and of Southold, L. I., died in Chelsea in 1843, aged 82. He was born in Farmington, Conn.: but his father removed to Windsor, Vt. After being in Southold from 1810 to 1826, he returned to Chelsea and lived with his son-in-law, Rev. Calvin Noble. He survived four

b

THOMPSON, JOHN, professor of mathematics and philosophy in Wabash college, died at Crawfordsville, Ind., in 1843.

THOMPSO 7, SMITH, judge, died in Poughkeepsie Dec. 18, 1843, aged 76. Having studied law with Chancellor Kent, he became district attorney, and was judge of the supreme court of New York in 1801; in 1814 he was chief justice. In 1818 he was secretary of the navy; but in 1823 he became an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, which place he held till his death. Learned as a judge, his private life was pure and exemplary.

THOMPSON, WADDY, died near Greenville. S. C., Feb. 9, 1845, at a very advanced age. He was for many years a judge; a man of distinction in South Carolina, of integrity and talents.

THOMPSON, JONATHAN, died at New York in 1846, aged 73. From 1820 to 1829 he was collector of the port of New York. He collected and exactly accounted for upwards of a hundred millions of dollars. Gen. Jackson removed him from office.

THOMPSON, ABRAHAM G., died in New York in Nov., 1851. His estate was 380,000 dollars. of which he left 347,000 to public charities. To the bible society he gave 65,000; to the tract society and seamen's friend society, 54,000 each; to the colonization and home mission society, 43,000 each; to the education society and American board of missions, 32,000 each; to the institutions for the deaf and dumb and for the blind, 10,800 each.

THOMPSON, John, Dr., died at New Lisbon,

Ohio, in 1852, aged 75. He was a member of | congress from 1825 to 1827, and from 1829 to

THOMPSON, ISAAC, M. D., died in Connecticut in 1852. He was the inventor of a famous eye-water.

THOMPSON, JAMES, D. D., died at Barre. Mass., in 1854, aged 75. A graduate of 1799, he was settled at Barre in 1804. His doctrines were Unitarian. He preached a half-century sermon.

THOMPSON, THOMAS F., died in New York July 28, 1856, bequeathing 14,000 dollars to various charitable institutions.

THOMSON, CHARLES, secretary of congress, a patriot of the Revolution, died Aug. 16, 1824, aged 94. He was born in Ireland in 1730, and came to this country with his three elder brothers about 1741. He landed at Newcastle with slender means of subsistence. Having been educated by Dr. Allison, he kept the Friends' academy. He afterwards went into Philadelphia, where he obtained the advice and friendship of Dr. Franklin. At the first congress in 1774 he was called upon to take minutes of their measures; from that time he was sole secretary of the Revolutionary congress. He resigned his office in July, 1789, having held it fifteen years. An Indian tribe, which adopted him, gave him the name of "The man of truth." He was strictly moral and his mind was deeply imbued with religious principles. In his last years he was principally employed in preparing for his removal into the eternal world. He died in Lower Merion, Montgomery county, near Philadelphia. His wife was Hannah Harrison. His mind was enriched with various learning, and his character was marked by regularity, probity, firmness, and patriotism. He translated the Septuagint, which was published, entitled, holy bible translated from the Greek, 4 vols. 8vo., 1808.

THOMSON, CATHARINE, wife of F. B. Thomson, missionary to Borneo, died at Batavia Nov. 17, 1839, aged 26. Her name was Catharine Wyckoff of New Brunswick, N. J. She died in peace. When asked if she was sorry she had come to make a sacrifice of her life, she said she was not: "Tell my dear parents and friends I do not regret it in the least. I am only sorry that I have done so little."

THOMSON, SAMUEL, Dr., died in Boston in 1843, aged 74. He was the originator of what was called the Thomsonian system in medical treatment.

THOMSON, FREDERIC B., missionary to Borneo, died at Berne, Switzerland, April 2, 1848, aged 38. Born in New Brunswick, N. J., he was a graduate of 1831. He embarked May, 1838. When he died, he was on his way to this country reaching the residence of his late home he was taken with his last illness.

THORNDIKE, ISBNEL, a merchant, died May 10, 1832, aged about 75. He was the son of Andrew, a descendant of Paul, a representative, who married in Beverly in 1668. He was a native of Heverly, Mass. In the Revolutionary war he was in part the owner and the commander of an armed ship. His emises were successful. For many years he was a partner with his brother-inlaw, Moses Brown, and afterwards engaged in commerce to the East Indies and China, which he continued till his death. He was a large owner in manufacturing establishments. After a long residence in Beverly, he passed his last years in Hoston, where he died. He purchased in 1818 the library of Professor Ebeling of Hamburg, of more than three thousand volumes, of great value in relation to American history, and presented it to Harvard college. It includes three hundred and fifty volumes of newspapers printed in this country. To three sons he bequeathed each about half a million of dollars, and other sums to another son, to his widew and daughters; in all about 1,800,000 dollars to his relations. Some poor man may be inclined to say, that were he the owner of one or two millions of dollars, he would bequeath much to the great charities of the world; but, perhaps, on gaining the power, he would lose the disposition to benefit others beyond his own family, and would forget, that of them to whom much, as the stewards of heaven's bounty, is given, much will be required.

THORNDIKE, ROBERT, died at Camden, Mc., in 1834, aged 103; he was born in Beverly, Mass.

THORNTON, THOMAS, minister of Yarmouth, Mass., died at Boston Feb. 15, 1700, aged 92. He was one of the ejected ministers of England in 1662. The next year he was in Yarmouth, a neighbor to Mr. Walley of Barnstable, also ejected, and remained till 1675. His charge embraced also the present towns of Dennis, and of Brewster and Harwich, in part; several hundred Indians were under his friendly inspection. As a physician he had occasion to traverse often his wide purish. A brook, hill, and pond are yet called by his name. Few Americans who love to trace a long line of ancestry can be so much gratified as the descendants of Mr. Thornton, for he was descended in the seventh generation from John Thornton, lord mayor of York, in England. From him descended the Thorntons of Maine and John Wingate Thernton, a lawyer of Boston, who is of the seventh generation from him. The ancestors of J. W. T. from Thomas were Timothy, Ebenezer, and Timothy of Boston, merchants; Thomas G. of Saco, Maine, physician; and James B. of Saco, merchant. One important to obtain a reinforcement of the mission; but on and most beneficial influence of the minister of Washsidence famous

after.

Was

ire of

Oth-

sleep

e in a

rote:

Sharon died in Farm-Wind-810 to rith his ed four

t Craw-Poughstudied

ematics

trict atourt of ' justice. but in h place dge, his eenville, ge. He distinctalents. w York) he was collected hundred red him ew York dollars, ies. To he tract 00 each: society, d Amerthe infor the Lisbon,

Yarmouth was in his securing the good will of the | to 1769, and was succeeded by D. Sanford. He Indians on the cape, so that they dwelt in peace. Had they joined King Philip in his war, the event would have been disastrous. In 1673 the number of praying or Christian Indians in Yarmouth, Harwich, and Harnstable, was one hundred and twenty-two, so that the whole number of Indians was probably five hundred, supposed not to be exceeded by the white population of Yarmouth.

THORNTON, MATTHEW, colonel, a patriot of the Revolution, died June 24, 1803, aged 88. He was a native of Ireland. His father lived a few years at Wiscasset, then removed to Worcester. Mr. T. settled as a physician in Londonderry, N. II. He accompanied Pepperell as a surgeon in the expedition to Louisburg in 1745. Of the provincial convention in 1775 he was the president, and, taking his seat as a member of congress Nov. 4, 1776, he signed the declaration of independence, but was not present to vote for it, as were not Rush, Clymer, Wilson, Ross, and Taylor. He was soon appointed a judge of the superior court, in which office he remained till 1782. About 1780 he removed to Merrimac on the banks of the Merrimac. He died while on a visit to his daughters at Newburyport. On his grave is the inscription : " An honest man."

THORNTON, THOMAS G., a physician, died at Saco, Mc., Murch 4, 1824, aged 55. He was born in Boston, the son of Timothy, a merchant, a descendant of Rev. Thomas T. In the administrations of Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, he was U. S. marshal for Maine. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Thomas Cutts.

THROOP, WILLIAM, minister of Southold, L. I., died in 1756, aged about 36. He graduated at Yale in 1743, and was paster of the second church in Mansfield, Conn., from 1744 to 1746, when he removed to Southold, where he had considerable success in his labors.

THROOP, BENJAMIN, the minister of Bozrah, in Norwich, Conn., died in 1785, aged about 72. He graduated at Yale in 1734, and from 1738 was pastor forty-seven years. He published a sermon on the death of B. Sylvester, 1753; election sermon, 1758.

THROOP, BENJAMIN, colonel, died at Oxford, N. Y., in 1822, aged 80. He was a brave officer in the war of the Revolution. He led one hundred warriors of the Mohegan tribe to Canada in 1776, most of whom died of the small-pox and by the fate of war. He was then a captain and lieutenant-colonel in the line. He fought in the battles of Long Island, White Plains, Saratoga, and Monmouth.

THURBER, DANIEL, M. D., died at Mendon, Mass., in 1836, aged 70.

THURSTON, DAVID, first minister of the second church in Medway, was pastor from 1752 but strangely forgot to mention the time of his graduated at Princeton in 1751.

THURSTON, GARDNER, a Baptist minister. died at Newport, R. I., in 1802, aged 80. He was born in N., and succeeded Mr. Eyers in 1750, and was succeeded by Joshua Bradley. He was eminently pious. - Benedict.

THURSTON, PEARSON, minister of Somersworth, N. H., died at Leominster, Mass., in 1819. aged 55. Born in Lancaster, Mass., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1787; and was pastor from 1792 to 1812. In this last year his house was burnt, with the church records, communion service, and a social library.

THURSTON, JOHN BUCKNER, judge, died at Washington Aug. 30, 1845, aged 82. A native of Virginia, he emigrated to Kentucky. He was a senator of the U.S. 1805-1810, and an associate judge of the circuit court till his death.

THWING, BENJAMIN, was a member of the Boston church in 1642, and had sons Edward and John. He was a proprietor of Watertown.

TIBBETS, GEORGE, mayor of Troy, died in 1849, aged 86. From poverty he rose to great wealth; for many years he was a State senator.

TICHENOR, ISAAC, governor, died at Bennington, Vt., in Dec., 1838, aged 84. He was a senator of the United States in 1706, and from 1815 to 1821; also a judge of the supreme court of Vermout; governor from 1797 to 1808.

TICKNOR, ELISHA, an excellent teacher, died in Boston in 1821, aged about 60. He was a descendant of William T., who settled in Scituate as early as 1646. He was the son of Col. Elisha T., who at the age of seventeen removed with his father from Connecticut to Lebanon, N. II., and who was an officer in the war of the Revolution, and a highly respected citizen, dying in 1822, aged 85. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1783, and was from that year preceptor of Moor's school till 1786, when he removed to Boston, and had the care of a grammar-school until 1794. Afterwards he was a prosperous merchant. He took great interest in education, and in the establishment of the savings institution. He married in 1791 Betsey, the widow of Dr. Benjamin Curtis, and by her was the father of George Ticknor, the eminent author, of Boston.

TICKNOR, CALEB, M. D., of New York, died about 1842 or 1843, aged 36. Born in Salisbury, Conn., he was one of three brothers, who were physicians. His medical education was at the Berkshire institution. He adopted Hahnemann's system, or that of homocopathy. He was a man of skill and integrity. He wrote much for the medical journals. He published philosophy of living, a work much admired. Dr. Williams, in his medical biography, devoted an article to him;

He nister, bury, died in 1841. An address at his funeral is He spoken of in Boston med. and surg. jour., vol. era in adley.

mers-

1819, gradu-

r from

e was

n ser-

ied at

tive of

was a sociate

of the

rd and

lied in

o great

enator.

t Ben-

Ie was

6, and

upreme

o 1808.

er, died

was a

Seitu-

of Col.

emoved

ebanon,

of the

ı, dying

tmouth

ptor of

to Bos-

ol until

erehant. l in the le mar-

enjamin ge Tick-

rk, died

alisbury,

ho were

at the

emann's

s a man for the ophy of

liams, in to him :

ne of his

TICKNOR, LUTTER, M. D., died at Salisbury. Conn., in 1840, aged 55; president of the Connectieut State medical society. Born in Jericho, Vt., at the age of fifteen he lost his father, who was killed by the falling of a tree. He was a selfmade man, of great energy and indomitable perseverance; liberal-hearted, generous, benevolent. In his death he was greatly lamented. His brother, Dr. Caleb Ticknor of New York, died before him. - N. Y. Jour. of Med., May, 1846.

TILDEN, THOMAS, arrived at Plymouth in the ship Ann in 1623, and was probably the brother of Joseph, who died in Scituate in 1670. Joseph T., who died at Boston in 1853, was a member of the American academy and of the historical society of Massachusetts TILDEN, Mr., published in thirty pages his poems, designed to animate the soldiers, 1756. He was then 70 years old; but nothing more is known concerning the author. - Cycl. Am. Lit.

TILESTON, John, died in Boston in 1826, aged 92. He was many years master of the north writing-school; and was probably a descendant of Thomas, a freeman of Massachusetts

TILCHMAN, WILLIAM, chief justice of Pennsylvania, died April 30, 1827, aged 70. He was born Aug. 12, 1756, in Talbot county, on the eastern shore of Maryland. His father, James, was secretary of the proprietary land office. His mother's lather was Tench Francis, an eminent lawyer of Philadelphia, the brother of Richard Francis, who was the author of maxims of equity, and of Mr. Philip Francis, the translator of Horace. After the removal of his family to Philadelphia he studied law in that city, under the direction of Benjamin Chew, from 1772 to 1776. In 1783 he was admitted to the courts of Maryland; but in 1793 he returned to Philadelphia, and practised law till his appointment by Mr. Adams, March 3, 1801, chief judge of the circuit court of the United States. The law establishing this court being repealed in about a year, Mr. Tilghman again practised law till he was appointed, in July, 1805, president of the courts of common pleas in the first district. In Feb., 1806, he succeeded E. Shippen as chief justice of the supreme court. His wife was Margaret Allen, daughter of James A. of Philadelphia. Besides his ordinary official duties, he, in obedience to the legislature, reported about 1809 the English statutes in force within the State; a work of great labor, and requiring an intimate knowledge of the written law of England and of the fession, and lived on a farm in New Castle county.

death, which was probably in 1833 or 1843. His colonial legislation. It was also his great and brother, Luther, died after him in 1846. His constant toil to incorporate the principles of seiwife, Mary, the daughter of Samuel Lee of Salis- entific equity with the law of Pennsylvania. published on eulogium on Dr. Wistar, 1818

TILLARY, James, M. D., died in New York city; but the year of his death his biographer, Dr. Thacher, neglects to mention. It was probably about 1810 or 1820. He came from Scotland, and was more than forty years a much respected physician in New York. During the yellow fever in 1795 and 1798, he remained nobly at his post and refused no service of danger. He cheered the poor and forsaken. The gratitude of the people made him afterwards resident physician. He was president of the St. Andrew's society. He was a philanthropist, also a Christian. - Hosack's Address; Thacher.

TILLEY, EDWARD, was one of the one hundred pilgrims in the Mayflower to Plymouth in 1620, with Ann his wife; but they both died in the first sickness. Henry Samson, of their family, a cousin, lived and left descendants. He was a man of judgment, who with Hradford was associated with the first exploring party to give good advice. - Bradford's Hist.

TILLEY, JOHN, was one of the one hundred pilgrims in the Mayflower to Plymouth in 1620. with his wife; but they both died soon after coming ashore. Their daughter, Elizabeth, survived the early general sickness, and married John Howland, leaving ten children. He was of the second exploring party. - Bradford's Hist.

TILLINGHAST, PARDON, a minister, was born near Beachy Head in England, in 1622, and succeeded Mr. Olney, a Baptist minister at Providence, in 1645. About 1700 he built at his own expense at the north end of the town a meetinghouse, which was replaced by a larger one in 1718. He published in 1689 a tract on water baptism, which drew a reply from George Keith, the Quaker. - Benedict.

TILLINGHAST, JOSEPH L., died suddenly at Providence Dec. 30, 1844, aged more than 50. He was a ripe scholar, and repeatedly a member of congress.

TILTON, JOSEPH, doetor, died at Exeter, N. II., Dec. 5, 1837, aged 94; a surgeon in the army of the Revolution.

TILTON, JAMES, M. D., a physician, died May 14, 1822, aged 77. He was born in Delaware June 1, 1745; was sent early to Finley's Nottingham academy; and settled as a physician at Dover. In 1776 he served as a surgeon in the army; in 1777 he was called to the hospital department, and continued as hospital surgeon till the close of the war. He introduced the hospital huts, with a fire in the middle, and a hole in the roof for the escape of smoke. With his pecuniary resources exhausted, he resumed his pro-

The office of commissioner of loans, given him | rian church, Albany. Her only son was Platt in 1785, he held for some years. In the war of 1812 he was appointed physician and surgeongeneral of the army of the United States. He visited the hospitals of the northern frontier. At the age of seventy a disease of his knee rendered amputation necessary. He died near Wilmington. He was never married. His height was about six feet and a half; in person, manners, speech, and all his habits he was an original. He was a Christian. In his last siekness the Scriptures were his principal study. Of the vicarious righteousness of Christ he was fond of conversing. He published observations on military hospitals, and some papers on agriculture. He maintained that a farmer should live on the produce of his own land, and of course should reject tea and coffee. As for himself, he kept no tea-cups and saucers. - Thacher's Med. Biog.

TILTON, NATHAN, minister of Scarborough, Me., died in 1851, aged 79. Born in East Kingston, N. H., he graduated at Harvard in 1796. He was settled in 1800 and resigned his charge

in 1827.

TILTON, JOSEPH, a respected lawyer, died in Exeter, N. H., 1856, aged 81; a graduate of Harvard in 1797. He was associated at the bar with eminent men, as Webster, Mason, Smith, Sullivan, Woodbury, Bartlett, Cutts, and Haven.

TIMROD, WILLIAM H., died in 1838, aged 46. He was a mechanic, and wrote poetry. -

Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TINKER, THOMAS, was one of the one hundred pilgrims in the Mayflower to Plymouth in 1620, with his wife and son; but they all died in the first sickness.

TITCOMB, WILLIAM, of Newbury, Mass., died in 1676. He came from Newbury, England, as early as 1642. He had five sons and seven daughters. One of his descendants was Colonel T., who was killed in the French war in 1755.

TITCOMB, BENJAMIN, died at Brunswick, Me., Oct., 1848, aged 88; minister of a Baptist church. His son, Benjamin, also a Baptist preacher, died in Brunswick in 1829, aged 40. He published the Cumberland gazette, the first newspaper in Maine.

TITUS, PHŒBE, Mrs., died at Huntington, L. I., about Jan., 1846, aged 91; a woman of courage and energy. Her name was Platt. She was a young wife, when in the war two brothers were captured and imprisoned in the pestilential jail of New York. She heard they were starving. "They shall not starve," said this bold sister. Amidst many perils she made her way to the prison-house week after week with a basket of provisions. When they were sentenced to be shot, she went to the British commander and begged their lives. One of these, Ananias Platt, left about 15,000 dollars to the Presbyte-

Titus of Troy.

TOBEY, SAMUEL, minister of Berkley, Mass., died in 1781, aged 66. Born in Sandwich, he graduated at Harvard in 1733 and was ordained TODD, John, lived in Rowley in 1650, was representative in 1686. Fifteen of the name graduated at Yale, and one at Harvard.

TODD, SAMUEL, first minister of Plymouth, Conn., died in 1789, aged about 75. He graduated at Yale in 1734, and was settled in Waterbury, now Plymouth, from 1740 to 1766, when

A. Storrs succeeded.

TODD, JONATHAN, second minister of East Guilford, Conn., now Madison, died in 1791, aged 77, in the fifty-eighth year of his ministry. The son of Jonathan of New Haven, he graduated at Yale in 1732. He was the successor of John Hart. He participated in the controversy relating to the settlement of J. Dana. In his old age he was tranquil. He had no children. He published a sermon, young people warned, 1740; at the election, 1749; on the death of N. Chauncy. 1756; narrative relating to the church at Wallingford, 1759; reply to Eells' remarks; on the death of T. Ruggles, 1770; of T. Hill, 1781; of A. Redfield, 1783. - Sprague's Annals.

TODD, ELI, M. D., died in 1833, aged about 64. He was physician of the retreat for the insane at Hartford, Conn., was born in New Haven, the son of Michael, a merchant; graduated at Yale college in 1787; and after practising many years in his profession at Farmington, removed to Hartford in 1819, and exerted an important agency in founding the retreat for the insane, of which he was the physician. He was a man of superior talents and extensive acquirements, and respected and beloved as a physician, philanthropist, and Christian, though once an Infidel. - Williams' Med. Biog.

TODD, CLARISSA, Mrs., missionary, died at Madura June 1, 1837. Her name was Clarissa Emerson. Born in Chester, N. H., she married first Edmund Frost, missionary at Bombay; next, in 1826, Henry Woodward, missionary; and then, in 1836, William Todd, missionary at Madura.

TODD, SAMUEL, died in Albany, Vt., May 30, 1840, aged 98 years. He served in the Revolutionary war, was in Bunker Hill battle, and helped build the fort at Crown Point.

TOHKUKQUONNO, John, an Indian sachem at Little Compton in 1698, had a good character.

TOKKOHWOMPAIT, DANIEL, Indian minister at Natick in 1698, ordained by Eliot, had a church of seven men and three women, and under his eare fifty-nine men and fifty-one women, and seventy children under sixteen years of age. He died in 1716, aged 64. After his death, O. Peabody was sent to preach to these Indians.

Platt lass.

h, he ained , was

name nouth.

radu-Vaterwhen

East . aged The ated at John relatld age e pub-1740; auncy. t Walon the 81; of about the inew Haduated ctising ton, rean imfor the He was cquireysician, nce an lat Massa Emied first next, in then, in ra. May 30, Revolu-d helped

sachem aracter. an minot, had a and unwomen, s of age. leath, O. ians.

TOL, JOHN C., died in Glenville, N. Y., Oct. | leave that colony for his nonconformity to the 25, 1848, aged 68. A graduate of Union college in 1799, he was the minister of Canajoharie.

TOLER, RICHARD II., editor twenty-three years of the Lynchburg Virginian, died at Richmond in 1848, aged 49.

TOMLINSON, GIDEON, died at Stratford, Conn., in 1766, aged 34. An officer in the army, he was at the capture of Ticonderoga. His son, Jabez II., died in 1849, aged 88. His grandson, Gideon, was governor of Connecticut from 1827 to 1831.

TOMLINSON, DANIEL, minister of Oakham. Mass., died Oct. 29, 1842, aged 83. Born in. Derby, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1781, was ordained June 22, 1786, and was pastor fifty-six years; for the last ten years he had a colleague.

TOMLINSON, GIDLON, governor of Connecticut, died at Fairfield Oct. 8, 1854, aged 74. Born at Stratford, he graduated at Yale in 1802. From 1818 to 1827 he was a member of eongress, then governor four years, and six years senator of the United States.

TOMPKINS, DANIEL D., vice-president of the United States, died at Staten Island June 11, 1825, aged 50. He was born June 21, 1774, the son of the Revolutionary patriot, Jonathan G. T., who died in May, 1823, aged 86, at Fox Meadows, or Searsdale, on the river Bronx, in Westchester county, N. Y. He graduated at Columbia college in 1795, and settled at New York as a lawyer. In the party struggles of 1799-1801 he was a conspicuous republican. In 1803 he suceceded Mr. Lewis as chief justice of the superior court, and in 1807 was elected governor. In 1812 he prorogued the legislature, in order to prevent a corrupt system of banking. During the wor, which began in 1812, he was as governor extremely active and devoted to the cause of his country. His efforts had an important bearing on the result of the war. At the close of the war he purchased a farm in Richmond county, in view of the city. In 1817 he was elected vice-president; Mr. Munroe being president.

TOMPKINS, GEORGE, judge, died near Jefferson city, Mo., in 1846, aged 66. He was a judge of the State supreme court, a man of legal knowledge and moral worth, well acquainted with the history of the west.

TOMPSON, WILLIAM, first minister of Braintree, Mass., died Dec. 10, 1666, aged 68. He was a native of England, was first settled in Lancashire. After his arrival in this country, when a church was gathered at Mount Wollaston, or Braintree, now Quincy, he was chosen its pastor, and was installed Sept. 24, 1639. Mr. Flynt was settled as his colleague March 17, 1640. In the year 1612 he accompanied Mr. James and Episcopalian worship.

TOMPSON, SAMUEL, of Braintree, son of Rev. William, died in 1695, aged 63. Born in England, he came with his father in 1637, was deacon of the church, and representative fourteen years.

TOMPSON, EDWARD, minister of Marshfield, Mass., died in 1705, aged 39. The son of Benjamin, he graduated at Harvard in 1684, and taught a school several years at Newbury. His predecessors were E. Bulkley, S. Arnold; his suceessors J. Gardner and S. Hill. On his gravestone near the Winslow tomb is this inscription: "Here in a tyrant's hand doth captive lie a rare synopsis of divinity." His last sermons, heaven the best country, were published in 1712.

TOMPSON, BENJAMIN, the son of Rev. William T., died in 1714, and was buried at Roxbury, aged 71. He graduated at Harvard in 1662, and was a preacher in Boston from 1667 to 1770, when he removed to Cambridge. He was also a physician and a poet. He wrote an elegy on S. Whiting, printed in Mather's Magnalia. - Cycl. of Am. Lit.

TOMPSON, JOSEPH, of Billerica, son of Rev. William T., died in 1732, aged 91. He was schoolmaster, captain, selectman, town-elerk, deacon, and representative. Among his descendants were Benjamin and Colonel William of B.

TOOLEY, HENRY, a useful man, died at Natchez in 1848, aged 75; mayor of the city, a Methodist professor for sixty years, and a preacher for his last fifteen years. He understood Hebrew, and was much interested in astronomy, and was the father of temperance in Natchez.

TOOTHACHER, Roger, an early settler of Billerica in 1660; had a son, grandson, and greatgrandson, all physicians and named Roger.

TORREY, WILLIAM, captain, an early author in Massachusetts settled at Weymouth and was a freeman in 1642 and a representative several years. He might have died as late as 1663. He was a good penman, skilled in Latin, and usually clerk of the deputies. He published a small book on the millennium, " written by a very old man, in continual expectation of his translation into another life and world," 2d ed. 1757.

TORREY, SAMUEL, minister of Weymouth, Mass., died April 21, 1707, aged 75, the successor of T. Thacher. He was the son of Capt. William. He had been in the ministry fifty years, and was an able and faithful preacher. He was educated at Harvard, but did not take a degree, as he did not comply with a new law, requiring four years' residence. Such was his gift in prayer that he was always chosen, as Mr. Prince says," to bring up the rear of their religious exercises." He was very liberal. At a public fast in Mr. Knowles to Virginia, in order to carry the 1696, after the other exercises, he finished by a gospel to the ignorant, but was soon obliged to prayer of two hours in length, so regular, pertinent, free, lively, affecting, that, towards the end, glancing upon some new seenes of thought, a rare lawyer, Mr. Reed, said to Mr. Prince, " We could not help wishing him to enlarge upon them." So deep were his views, that the governor and council invited him to assist them with his wisdom and advice. After the death of President Rogers of Harvard college in 1686 he was chosen his successor, but declined the office. His wife was a daughter of Secretary Rawson. He published the election sermon in the years 1674, 1683, and 1695 - Eliot's Biog.

TORREY, JOSIAH, first minister of Tisbury, Martha's Vineyard, died in 1723, aged about 45. He graduated at Harvard in 1698, and was a trustee. He was ordained in 1701. J. Mayhew had preached at T. before him. His successors were Hancock, Damon, Morse, and Hatch, ordained in 1801. R. Thacher was at the same time minister at Chilmark.

TORREY, JOSEPH, minister of South Kingston. R. I., died in 1792, aged 03. He graduated at Harvard in 1728.

TORREY, DOROTHY, died at Windsor, Conn., Jan. 16, 1838, aged 106, with no disease. Her husband died aged 91.

TORREY, CHARLES T., died in Baltimore May 9, 1846, aged 33. Born in Scituate, Mass., he graduated at Yale in 1833. He was a minister at Providence, R. I., and Salem, Mass. Attempting to carry away and liberato some slaves in Maryland, he was sentenced to the State prison, in which he died of the consumption.

TOTO, a friendly Windsor Indian, gave notice of the proposed Indian attack on Springfield in 1675 or 1676.

TOURO, JUDAH, died at New Orleans, Jan. 18, 1854, aged 78, worth nearly two millions of dollars, by him chiefly bequeathed to the public institutions of New Orleans. Born in Newport, R. I., in 1776, he went to N. O. in 1802, and was wounded in its defence in the war of 1812. He was of the Jewish faith.

TOWN, ITHIEL, architect, died in New Haven June 13, 1844, aged 60; a native of Thompson.

TOWNER, WILLIAM, M. D. and general, died in Williamstown, Mass., in 1813, aged 58. He was an early settler and a useful physician.

TOWNSEND, PENN, colonel, died in Boston, Aug. 25, 1727, aged 75. He was the son of William, who lived in Boston as early as 1636. He was speaker, chief judge of the common pleas, and colonel. He used to pray in the field with the militia, as well as in his family and closet. He was an encourager of learning, and one of the managers of the society for propagating the gospel among the Indians.

TOWNSEND, JONATHAN, first minister of ceeded by Dr. West, who was transferred to Boston. He published two fast sermons, 1729; caveat against strife, 1749. Perhaps this last sermon was by J. T. of Medfield.

TOWNSEND, JONATHAN, minister of Medfield, Mass., died in 1776, aged about 56. He graduated at Harvard in 1741. He published convention sermon, 1758; two sermons on the reduction of Quebec, 1760.

TOWNSEND, Solomon, minister of Barrington, R. I., died in 1798, aged 82. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1735, and was pastor from 1741 to 1798. The previous pastors were

J. Wilson, S. Torrey, and P. Heath.

TOWNSEND, DAVID, M. D., a respectable physician of Boston, a member of the Mass. medical society, died in 1829, aged 74. His son, Alexander, a graduate of the class of 1802, died a lawyer in Boston, in 1835; he published a 4th of July oration, 1810; address to charitable fire society.

TOWNSEND, ISAAC H., died in New Haven in 1847, aged 43. He graduated in 1822. In 1842 he was associated with Judge Hitchcock in the arrangement of the law school of Yale, at the reörganization of which he was one of the pro-

t

d

ti

C

in tl B

a h

jo w H

fessors in 1846.

TOWNSEND, JOHN, died in Albany, Aug. 26, 1854, aged 71. He was mayor of the city, and held many important stations, and was universally respected. The son of Henry T., he was born at Stirling Iron-works, back of Newburg, N. Y., and came to Albany as clerk to his brother Isaiah, in 1802; and became his partner in the iron and hardware trade, and acquired a princely fortune. He was one of the original owners of Syracuse, and there established the manufacture of salt by solar evaporation. He was president of the Commercial bank of Albany. He survived his brother many years. His wife was the daughter of Judge A. Spencer; and seven children survived him. - Sprague's Sermon on his Death.

TOWNSEND, ELIZA, died in Boston in 1854, aged 65. She wrote poetry for the anthology, Unitarian miscellany, and portfolio. She was esteemed for her intellect and amiable qualities.

Cycl. of Am. Lit.

TOWNSEND, SAMUEL, of Madison county, Ala., died in 1856, aged 55; the wealthiest planter of Kentucky. By his will about forty slaves were to be liberated and removed from the State, and a large portion of his property to be distributed among them.

TOWSON, NATHAN, major-general, died at Washington July 20, 1854, aged 71. He acquired a military reputation in the war of 1812, at the battles of Chippewa and Bridgewater. In Needham, Mass., died in 1762, aged 64. He his last years he was paymaster-general. He graduated at Harvard in 1716. He was suc- was a native of Maryland. His wife, who died July 21, 1852, was Sophia Bingham, the daughter | died Jan. 10, 1834, in Maury county, Tenn. of Caleb Bingham of Boston.

TRACY, ELISIA, Dr., died in Norwich, Conn., in 1752. He was eminent as a physician, and was a classical scholar, and adorned with the moral and social virtues.

TRACY, URIAH, a statesman, died at Washington June 19, 1807, aged 53. He was graduated at Yale college in 1778, and afterwards, directing his attention to the law, he soon rose to eminence in that profession. The last fourteen years of his life were devoted to the service of his country in the national councils, where he was admired by his friends, and respected by his opponents. After having been a member of the house of representatives for some time, he was chosen a senator, and he continued in this high station till his death. In the beginning of March, 1807, while in a feeble state of health, he exposed himself by attending the funeral of Mr. Baldwin of the senate. From this period he declined. His three daughters married three judges, namely, Gould of Litchfield, Howe of Northampton, and Metcalf of Dedham; Mrs. M. died in 1857. His devotion to the public service precluded him from that attention to his private interests which claim the principal regard of most men. His speeches displayed a vigorous and well-informed mind. In wit and humor he was unrivalled; in delivery graceful, and lucid in argument. He was sometimes severe; but the ardor of debate, the rapidity of his ideas, and the impetuosity of his eloquence constituted an apology. He was an instructive and agreeable companion.

TRACY, STEPHEN, first minister of Norwich, Mass., died in 1822, aged 73. Born in Norwich, Conn., he graduated at Princeton in 1770, was pastor from 1781 to 1799, when he was succeeded by B. R. Woodbridge.

TRACY, ELISHA, died at Norwich, Conn., in 1842. He was an eminent and much respected

TRACY, ADELINE, missionary to China, died in Streetsborough, O., in 1851, aged 41. She was the daughter of Deacon Alfred White of West Brookfield, a descendent of Peregine White. She married Ira Tracy in China in 1834. After a few years' service she returned, in very poor health.

TRACY, RACHEL, died in Utica April 7, 1852, aged 73. She was the daughter of Judge Benjamin Huntingdon, of Norwich, Conn., and the widow of Wm. G. Tracy, a merchant of Whitestown, who died in 1830. Her brothers, Henry and George H., were conspicuous men in Oneida county. She possessed great excellence of character, and was a model of goodness. - N. Y. Observer, April 29.

TRACY, EBENEZER, Dr., died at Middletown July 29, 1856, aged 99.

aged 154. She was born in Germany, and emigrated to North Carolina in 1710. For the last twenty years her vision was good. At the age of 65 she bore her only child, who survived TRASK, WILLIAM, captain, an early settler of Salem, died in 1666, leaving sov Wanam and John and daughters. He came with governor. Endecott in 1628, and was representative of Salem, Mass., five years. - Felt.

TRASK, NATHANIEL, the first minister of Brentwood, N. H., died in 1789, aged 67. Born in Lexington, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1712, and was settled in 1748.

TRASK, NAHUM, Dr., died at Windsor, Vt., 1837, aged 76.

TRAXALL, ABRAH M, preacher to the society of the United Brethren fifty years, died near Mount Pleasant, Pa., in 1825, aged 74.

TREADWELL, DANIEL, professor of mathematics in King's college, N. Y., died in 1760, aged about 26. Born at Portsmouth of parents who came from Ipswich, Mass., he graduated in 1754. He was an eminent mathematician, though young. - Eliot.

TREADWELL, JOHN, minister of Lynn, Mass., died in 1811, aged 73. Born in Ipswich in 1738, he graduated at Harvard in 1758, and was pastor from 1763 to 1782. His predecessors were S. Batchelor, who died in 1661, aged 100; S. Whiting, who died in 1679, aged 83; T. Cobbet, who died in Ipswich, aged 77; J. Shepard, who died aged 72; J. Whiting, who died aged 82; and N. Henchman, who died aged 62.

TREADWELL, John, LL. D., governor of Connecticut, died Aug. 19, 1823, aged 77. The son of Ephriam T., he was born in Farmington, Nov. 23, 1745; graduated at Yale college in 1767; and, having studied law with Titus Hosmer of Middletown, settled in his native town, but did not engage in the practice. He was an only son, and the heir of a competent estate. After sustaining various offices, as judge of probate and of other courts and lieutenant-governor, he was in 1809 chosen governor as successor of Trumbull, but was succeeded by Griswold in 1811; thus being thrown out of all public employments, which had occupied him thirty years. This was painful. For twenty years he was a deacon of the church of which he became a member at the age of twenty-six under the salutary influence of affliction by the loss of a daughter. He was the first president of the American foreign mission society, and continued in that place till his death. His wife was a daughter of Joseph Pomeroy, of a family from Northampton. Gov. T. was not a man of popular address or character, but he was a man of unbending integrity, and great usefulness; TRANTHAM, or TRENTHAM, BETSEY, Mrs. | he was also an eminent Christian, bowing meekly ectable . medis son, , died a 4th of ole fire

ed to 1729;

last

lfield.

radu-

nyen.

uction

rring-

oston.

pastor

were

Haven 22. In cock in , at the he prov, Aug. he city, vas uni-, he was ewburg, brother r in the princely eners of ufacture resident survived was the ven chil-n on his in 1854. nthology, She was qualities.

n county, st planter aves were State, and listributed died at He acof 1812, at vater. In eral. He who died to God's will under heavy afflictions, and dving in the joyous hope of the believer. In his last years he wrote a series of theological essays, which were not published.

TREADWELL, JOHN D., M. D., died at Salem, Mass., June 6, 1833, aged 65. H€ graduated at Harvard in 1788.

TREADWELL, John G., M. D., a graduate f Harvard in 1825, died in Saiem Aug. 8, 1856, Ged about 51. He bequeathed his property, over 100,000 dollars, - after the death of his mother, aged 80, - to Harvard college, to estabash professorships of physiology and anatomy. If the prescribed conditions were not accepted, the whole property was to go to the Massachusetts general hospital.

TREAT, ROBERT, governor of Connecticut, died at Milford July 12. 1710, aged 88. He was the son of Richard of Wethersfield. He was chosen one of the magistrates in 1673. After Philip's war commenced, he was sent to Westfield at the head of the Connecticut troops, and, when the enemy attacked Springfield, he marched to its relief and drove them from the town. He also attacked the Indians in their assault upon Hadley Oct. 19, and put them completely to flight. In 1676 he was chosen deputy-governor, and in 1683 governor, to which office he was annually elected for fifteen years. From 1698 to 1708 he was again deputy-governor. His character was very respectable, and he had rendered the most important services to his country.

TREAT, SAMUEL, first minister of Eastham, Mass., the son of the preceding, died March 18, 1717, aged 68. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1669. He was ordained in 1672, a church having been established for more than twenty years. Soon after his settlement he studied the Indian language, and devoted to the Indians in his neighborhood much of his time and attention. Through his labors many of the savages were brought into a state of civilization and order, and not a few of them were converted to the Christian faith. In 1693 he wrote a letter to Increase Mather, in which he states that there were within the limits of Eastham five hundred adult Indians, to whom he had for many years imparted the gospel in their own language. He had under him four Indian teachers, who read in separate villages on every Sabbath, except on every fourth, when he himself preached the sermons, which he wrote for them. He procured schoolmasters and persuaded the Indians to choose from among themselves six magistrates, who held regular courts. He passed near half a century in the most benevolent exertions as a minister of the gospel. His second wife was the widow of Rev. B. Estabrook and daughter of S. Willard. His daughter was the mother of Judge Paine. He was a consistent and strict was ordered away on a cruise; - such sometimes Calvinist, who zealously proclaimed those truths which are calculated to alarm and humble the sinner; and it pleased God at different times to accompany his labors with a Divine blessing. An extract from one of his sermons, which proves that the author was able to array the terrors of the Lord against the impenitent, is preserved in the historical collections. He was mild in his nutural temper, and his conversation was pleasant and sometimes facetious, but always decent. He published the confession of faith in the Nauset Indian larguage; and the election sermon, 1713. - Sprague's Annals.

TREAT, RICHARD, first minister of Brimfield, Mass., graduated at Yale in 1719. He was born in Glastenbury, Conn.; was settled in 1725.

and resigned in 1734.

TREAT, SALMON, minister of Preston, Conn., died in 1846, aged about 73. He was a grandson of Richard T., one of the first settlers of Wethersfield, and the son of James. A graduate of Harvard in 1694, he was ordained at Preston in 1698, and resigned in 1744.

TREAT, Joseph, general, died at Bangor Feb. 27, 1853, aged 77. He was skilled in the Indian languages of the eastern part of Maine.

TRECOTHICK, JAMES, died in London, in Sept., 1843, aged 90. A native of Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1773. His father was James Ivers, who took by will the estates and assumed the name of his uncle, Barlow Trecothick, a merchant of London and member of parliament.

TRESCOTT, LEMUEL, colonel, died at Lubec, Me., in 1826, aged 75; one of the vest field-officers in the war of the Revolution. He commanded a battalion of the light infantry under Lafayette, and he enjoyed the confidence of Washington. He was the best disciplinarian. Struggling with poverty, he yet devoted himself to the cause of liberty. After the return of peace, as he acquired an estate, his house and heart were ever open to distress. He was an upright man, a patriot, a christian. If he has left descendants, they may speak with satisfaction of their ancestor. He was probably a deseendant of John, who died in Dorchester in 1740, aged 89; and of William, a freeman of Dorchester in 1643. - Farmer.

TREVETT, SAMUEL R., M. D., died of the yellow fever on board the Peacock at Norfolk. Nov. 4 1822, aged 39. Born in Marblehead, he was graduated at Harvard in 1804, and served as a surgeon in the United States frigate at the capture of the Macedonian, and was captured in the President. He was surgeon in the navyyard at Charlestown, of which office it is said he was deprived, because he displeased his superiors by his honest evidence in a case under trial, and ot in ag Te lan

to no

wl

pre Ph mu we Car the esp

upo

at ( 81100 revi befo T ing he Uni stov tool sciz see to 1 of the die gia, and the of ord

in the six vae Ma

resi

are the pitiable malignity and oppressions of Harvard in 1710. His predecessors were S. the holders of power. - Thacher's Med. Biog.

TREVORE, WILLIAM, was a seaman, who, with one Ely, a seaman, was hired by the one hundred Pilgrim settlers in the Mayflower to remain for one year, after which time they returned to England. They were passengers indeed; but not properly to be reekoned among the Pilgrims, who sought a new home, any more than the other seamen, employed for a shorter time.

TRIMBLE, John, a judge of several courts in Kentucky, died in Harrison county in 1852, aged 69; an able lawyer and upright man. He was the brother of Robert T.

TROOST, GERARD, M. D., died at Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 15, 1850, aged 74; long a professor in the university of N. He was born in Holland; came to this country in 1810; was first president of the academy of natural sciences at Philadelphia. In 1825 he joined Owen's community in Ohio. As State geologist, his reports were deemed very valuable. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TROTT, NICHOLAS, chief justice of South Carolina, was born in England in 1663. In 1700 he was speaker of the assembly, and a friend of the people. Being appointed chief justice, he espoused the cause of the proprietors, and drew upon himself the popular resentment. He died at Charleston in 1740, aged 77; Richard Alleyn succeeded him. He was learned in Hebrew. He revised and published the laws of South Carolina before 1734.

TROTTER, GEORGE, general, died near Lexington, Ky., in 1815, aged 37. Born in Virginia, he served under Harrison in the war of 1812. Until a few weeks before his death he had bestowed no thoughts upon religion. Then he took up his bible, and continued to read, until seized with a fatal disease. His last words seemed to be this prayer: "O Lord, be merciful to me a sinner."

TROUP, ROBERT, colonel, died at New York in 1832, aged 84. He was an officer in the war of the Revolution. He published a letter on the lake-canal policy of New York, 1822.

TROUP, GEORGE M., governor of Georgia, died in South Carolina in 1856. Born in Georgia, he was senator of the United States in 1816, and was governor in 1823. In a dispute with the general government respecting the removal of the Creeks, he disregarded the treaty, and ordered the State militia to be in readiness to resist any troops of the United States. He left the chair of State in 1827, and from 1828 served six years again in the senate. He was a great advocate of southern State rights, of which party he was a candidate for the presidency in 1852.

TROWBRIDGE, CALEB, minister of Groton,

Willard, G. Hobart, D. Bradstreet; his successor was S. Dana.

TROWBRIDGE, EDMUND, a judge of the supreme court, died at Cambridge in 1793, aged 94. His original name was Goff. Born in Newton in 1709, he graduated at Harvard in 1728; was attorney-general in 1749; was appointed judge in 1767; but, being attached to the royal government, resigned in 1772. It was before him that Capt. Preston, defended by Mr. Adams, was TROWBRIDGE, AMASA, Dr., of Watertown, N. Y., was killed by being run over, as he was riding, by horses in a lumber wagon, in 1841, aged 27. He was eminent as a physician and surgeon; and so was his father of the same name, who removed from Watertown to be a professor in the Willoughby institute, Ohio. -Williams' Med. Biog.

TROWBRIDGE, HENRY, died in New Haven in 1849, aged 70: bequeathing to the board of foreign missions 5,000 dollars; and 5,000 to the home missionary society; 2,000 to the bible society; 2,000 to the seamen's friend society; 2,000 to the poor of the first Congregational society, etc., - in all, 25,000 dollars.

TRUE, HENRY, the first minister of Hampstead, N. H., died in 1782, aged about 57. He graduated at Harvard in 1750, and was ordained in 1752. Daniel Kelley succeeded him.

TRUE, JABEZ, Dr., died at Marietta, of an epidemic fever, in 1823, aged 63. He was born in Hampstead, N. H., the son of Rev. Henry True, and studied physic with Dr. Flagg. He emigrated to Marietta in the summer of 1788. His professional services were often attended with danger from the Indians in the bridle-paths of twenty or thirty miles. In 1799 he joined the church and became its deacon. He was cheerful, benevolent, pious; and he had an excellent wife, an aid to him in his deeds of charity. He once caught a boy on a tree in his garden, who was in pursuit of the summer sweeting; and said: "Ah, James! you are on the wrong tree; come down, my lad." And when he came down, he showed him the best tree, and with a pole helped him to apples, telling him to call, when he wanted the The boy was eured of his habit. good apples. Hildreth.

TRUE, BENJAMIN, a printer in Boston, died in 1845, aged 80. He published the Boston Yankee, and was then associated in the Boston Statesman. He was patriotic, honest, benevo-

TRUMBULL, JONATHAN, governor of Connecticut, died Aug. 17, 1785, aged 74. He was the son of Joseph T. of Lebanon, descended from John T., who came from England and lived Mass., died in 1760, aged 68. He graduated at in Rowley, Mass., in 1640-43, whose son, John, rey under ence of inarian. himself eturn of ouse and ruths

the es to

An

roves

ors of

ed in n his pleas-

ecent.

Nau-

rmon,

Brim-

le was 1725,

Conn..

grand-

lers of

gradu-

t Pres-

Bangor

in the don, lin

ton, he

ier was

es and

Treco-

iber of

: Lubec.

field-of-

Ie com-

laine.

was an he has satisfacbly a denester in eman of l of the Norfolk, chead, he served as te at the ptured in he navys said he superiors trial, and ometimes moved to Suffield, and his son, Joseph, settled at Lebanon. He was born in 1710, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1727. He was chosen governor in 1769, and was annually elected till 1783, when he resigned, having been occupied for fifty years without interruption in public employments, and having rendered during eight years' war the most important services to his country. Having seen the termination of the contest in the establishment of the independence r rien, he withdrew from public labors, that ight devote himself to the concerns of religand to a better preparation for his future existence. His wife was Faith Robinson, a descendant of John R. of Leyden, by whom he had four sons and two daughters; Joseph was commissnry-general in 1775, and died unmarried; John was aid to Gen. Lee; David died in Lebanon Jan. 17, 1822, aged 71; Faith married Gen. Huntington; Mary married Gen. William Williams of Lebanon. On the death of his wife, Faith Trumbull, T. Stone published a sermon in 1780. Washington, in a letter of condolence on his death to one of his sons, wrote thus: "Under this loss, however great as your pangs may have been at the first shock, you have every thing to console you. A long and well-spent life in the service of his country placed Gov. Trumbull among the first of patriots; in the social duties he yielded to none; and his lamp from the common course of nature being nearly extinguished, worn down with age and cares, but retaining his mental faculties in perfection, are blessings which attend rarely his advanced life. All these combining have secured to his memory universal respect here, and no doubt increasing happiness hereafter." A long letter of Gov. T. upon the war is printed in the historical collec-

TRUMBULL, JONATHAN, governor of Connecticut, the son of the preceding, died Aug. 7, 1809, aged 69. He was born in Lebanon March 26, 1740; graduated at Harvard college in 1759; and settled in his native town. From 1775 to the close of the campaign in 1778, he was paymaster to the army in the northern department. In 1780 he was appointed secretary and first aid to Washington, in the enjoyment of whose confidence and friendship and in whose family he remained until the end of the war. In March, 1789, he was a member of congress; in 1791 speaker of the house; and in 1794 a senator of the United States. In 1798 he succeeded Wolcott as governor, and remained in office eleven years till his death. He died of dropsy of the heart at Lebanon Aug. 7, 1809, aged 69. He had no children. His wife, Eunice Backus, died at New Haven Feb., 1826, aged 76. In deliberative assemblies he presided with great language. His incorruptible integrity was united with a sound judgment and extensive knowledge. To the ancient religious principles of New England he was zealously attached. It was with serenity and Christian hope, founded on the atonement made for sin, that he met the king of terrors.

TRUMBULL, BENJAMIN, D. D., an historian, minister of North Haven, Conn., died Feb. 2. 1820, aged 85. He was the grandson of Benoni T., the brother of the first Gov. T.'s father. He was a native of Hebron, and lived long in the fn.nily of Dr. Wheelock. He graduated at Yale college in 1759; was ordained Dec. 25, 1760. His widow died in June, 1825, aged 92. His daughter Martha, widow of Rev. Aaron Woodward, died in 1851. With a salary not exceeding 400 dollars he left a good estate, the result of his prudence and industry. In the sermon at his ordination, Dr. Wheelock urged upon the people the duty of providing for him; but said he should not, if he believed him to be "a sensual, sleepy, lazy, dumb dog, that cannot bark." His historical works are valuable. He published essays in favor of the claim of Connecticut to the Susquehannah country, in the Journal, 1774; sermon at a thanksgiving, 1783; a trentise on divorces, 1788; at the ordination of Mr. Holt. 1789; a century sermon, 1801; address on prayer and family religion, 1804; twelve discourses on the Divine origin of the Scriptures; history of Connecticut, vol. I., 8vo., 1797; vol. II., 1818; history of the United States to 1765, vol. I., 1819. - Spraque's Annals.

i

w ea lie

of he m an la in

in

grade Eth 9,

cc

TRUMBULL, JOHN, LL. D., judge, a poet, died May 10, 1831, aged 81. A descendant of John T. of Suffield, he was the son of John T., minister of Watertown, Conn., who died Dec. 13, 1787, aged 72; his mother was Sarah Whitman, daughter of Rev. Samuel W. of Farmington, and grand-daughter of S. Stoddard. He was born in 1750. His father directed his carly studies, and at the age of seven he was judged qualified for admission to college. He was graduated at Yale in 1767. From 1771 to 1773 he was a tutor, and in this period he published his poem, the progress of dulness, which had a great sale. Having studied law with John Adams at Boston, he settled at Hartford in 1781, and became distinguished in his profession. In 1784 he published his celebrated poem, McFingal, which had thirty editions. About the year 1797 his feeble health withdrew him from business. He was the victim of hypochondria. But from 1801 to 1819 he was a judge of the superior court. In 1820 he revised his works, for which he received a handsome compensation. Having in 1825 removed with his wife to Detroit, to reside in the family of his son-in-law, Mr. Wooddignity, being graceful in manner and elegant in bridge, he there died. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Col. Leverett Hubbard of New Ha- of Philadelphia, and remained in that office till Perkins of West Hartford, and the other Rev. Timo. Langdon of Danbury. From early life he was a professor of religion, whose consolations he experienced in his last days. His poetical works were published in 2 vols. 8vo., 1820.

TRUMBULI., JOHN, colonel, the painter, died in New York Nov. 10, 1843, aged 87. He was the son of Gov. T., and born at Lebanon, and graduated at Harvard in 1773. In the war he was a member of Washington's family, his aid-decamp; and adjutant under Gates. After the war he went to Europe to perfect himself in the art of painting, and studied with Benjamin West. He was a fifth commissioner under the Jay treaty, with Pinckney and Gore, for the settlement of American claims upon England. His four great historical paintings are in the Capitol at Washington, - the Declaration of Independence, the Surrender at Saratoga, the Surrender of Cornwallis, and the Resignation of Washington. The Trumbull gallery, which he presented to Yale college, contains fifty-five of his paintings. -N. Y. Observer, Nov. 15.

TRUSSELL, Moses, died at New London, N. H., in 1843, aged 83. At Bunker Hill battle, while speaking to a friend, a ball from a ship took off one of his hands and also one of his friend's. TRUX': N, THOMAS, a naval commander, died , aged 67. The son of a lawyer, he was bern on Long Island Feb. 17, 1755. He early went to sea. Early in 1776 he sailed as a lieutenant in the private armed ship, the Congress; captures were made off Havana, and of one of the prizes he took the command and brought her to New Bedford. In June, 1777, he commanded the Independence, fitted out by himself and Isaac Sears, and off the Azores captured three large and valuable ships. He afterwards sailed in the Mars. His prizes were numerous. Sailing in the St. James of twenty guns, in a severe engagement he disabled a British ship of thirty-two guns. He returned from France with a most valuable cargo. After the war, residing at Philadelphia, he was extensively concerned in trade to Europe and Asia. In 1794 he was intrusted with the command of the Constellation, in which, Feb. 9, 1799, he captured the French ship, L'Insurgente, of superior force, losing one man killed and two wounded; the enemy lost twenty-nine killed and forty-four wounded. Feb. 1, 1800, he gained a victory over La Vengeance, of fifty-four guns and 500 men, but one of his own masts falling, the silenced vessel escaped in the night. For this action congress gave him a golden medal. Being appointed to command the expedition against Tripoli, but denied the assistance of a captain to command his flag ship, he declined the service. Jefferson for ven. He had two sisters; one married Dr. Caleb 1819. He died at Philadelphia. His only remaining son, William, died at Key West in April. 1830.

TRYON, WILLIAM, died Jan. 27, 1788. He was once governor of New York. He and Commodore Collier conducted the attack upon New Haven in 1779, when twenty-seven were killed, and among the wounded was Dr. Daggett, professor of divinity, who was barbarously treated. Barber's Conn. Hist. Coll.

TUCK, HENRY, a minister, died in Lincoln county, N. C., in 1837, aged 97.

TUCKE, JOHN, minister of Gosport, Isles of Shoals, a graduate of 1723, died Aug. 12, 1773, aged 71. Hull, Brock, Belcher, and Moody had previously preached on the Isles. His son, John. was a chaplair in the army. He was an industrious, faithful, learned minister, and a useful physician. He published a sermon at the ordination of his son, 1761.

TUCKE, John, first minister of Epsem, N. H., died in 1777, aged 36. Born in Gosport, the son of J. T., he graduated at Harvard in 1758, and was pastor from 1761 to 1774.

TUCKER, John, D. D., minister of Newbury, Mass., died March 22, 1792, aged 72. He was born at Amesbury, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1741. He was ordained colleague with Christopher Tappan, Nov. 20, 1745. As there was not a perfect union in the invitation which was given him, he hesitated long; but, as the opposition arose from contrariety of sentiment which, probably, would continue to exist, he was induced to accept the call. Those who dissented, formed with others the Presbyterian society, of which Jonathan Parsons was the first minister. Mr. Moor succeeded him. He possessed a strong and well-furnished mind, and in argumentation exhibited peculiar ingenuity. He was habitually meek and placid, but when called to engage in controversy he defended himself with courage and with the keenness of satire. He published a sermon at the ordination of Edmund Noyes, 1761; four sermons, on the danger of sinners hardening their hearts, on God's special eare over the righteous under calamities, on the reconciliation of sinners to God, and on being born of God, 1756; at a thanksgiving, 1756; on the doctrines and uncharitableness of J. Parsons, as exhibited more especially in his late discourses, 1757; at the ordination of A. Moody, 1765; account of an ecclesiastical council, to which is annexed a discourse, being a minister's appeal to his hearers as to his life and doctrines, 1767; two discourses on the death of J. Lowell, 1767; remarks on a sermon of A. Hutchinson; the reply of A. Hutchinson considered, 1768; a letter to J. Chandler; a reply to Mr. Chandler's answer, 1768; remarks this dismissed him. In 1816 he was high sheriff on Mr. Chandler's serious address, 1768; at the cont Yale , 1760. His Woodxceed-nited

edge.

Eng-

with ı the

ing of orian,

eb. 2.

Benoni

. He

in the

esult of n at his ie peosaid he sensual, ." His iblished t to the 74; sertise on r. Holt. n prayer irses on istory of ., 1818: r., 1819.

a poet,

ndant of

John T., Dec. 13, Vhitman. mington, He was his early s judged was grad-1773 he lished his h had a John Adl in 1781, ssion. In MeFingal, year 1797 business. But from e superior , for which . Having roit, to re-

Mr. Wood-

as Sarah,

vention of ministers, 1768; two sermons, on the condition of salvation, and on the nature and necessity of the Father's drawing such as come to Christ, 1769; at the election, 1771; remarks on a discourse of J. Parsons, 1774; the Dudleian lecture, 1778; and a sermon at Newburyport, 1788. — Sprague's Annals.

TUCKER, JEDIDIAH, first minister of Loudon, N. H., died in 1818, aged 57. He was settled in 1789.

TUCKER, JAMES W., minister in Rowley, Mass., died in 1819, aged 32. He graduated at Yale in 1807. He published a sermon on the national fast, 1815.

TUCKER, THOMAS TUDOR, treasurer of the United States, died in Washington May 1, 1828, aged 83. He was a patriot of the Revolution, a member of the first congress, a faithful public officer, and estimable in private life. He died in a resigned and pious frame of mind.

TUCKER, Sr. George, judge, died in Nelson county, Virginia, in Nov., 1827, aged 75. Born in Bermuda, he was educated at William and Mary college. Ho had been a judge of the State court, and was appointed in 1813 judge of the district court of the United States, in the place of Tyler, deceased. In 1778 he married the mother of John Randolph. He succeeded E. Pendleton as judge of the court of appeals in 1803. He wrote poetry. A piece of three stanzas is admired, the two first relating to his "youth." The last stanza is the following:

"Days of my ago, ye will shortly be past; Pains of my ago, yet a while ye can last; Joys of my ago, in true wisdom delight; Eyes of my ago, be religion your light; Thoughts of my ago, thead ye not the cold sod; Hopes of my ago, be ye fix'd on your God."

He was a patriot of the Revolution, a man of taste and of an amiable character. He published an examination of the question, how far the common law of England is the law of the United States; a treatise on slavery, 1796; letter on the alien and sedition laws, 1799; commentaries on Blackstone. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TUCKER, SAMUEL, commodore, died at Bremen, Me., in 1833, aged 85. Born in 1747, the son of a shipmaster at Marblehead, he was placed on board the frigate Royal George, at the age of twelve. As commander of the ship Phenix he sailed from Boston to London just before the war. Returning in a vessel of Robert Morris, he was the means of saving it in a storm. Washington soon sent him a commission in the navy as captain, which was soon followed by that of commodore, Manley being sick at Beverly. In every battle he conquered. His last years were employed in agricultural pursuits, the war having left him in affluence.

TUCKER, EBENEZER, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Tuckerton, N. J., in 1845, aged 87. He held various offices, and was a member of congress.

TUCKER, HENRY ST. GEORGE, judge, died at Winchester, Va., Aug. 28, 1848, aged 69. He was professor of law in the university of Virginia, and a judge in the State and national courts; also a member of congress. He was learned and accomplished. He published various treatises of law.

TÜCKER, EBENEZER, the first minister of Philipston, died at Heath in 1848. He graduated at Harvard in 1783; was pastor of P. from 1785 to 1799; then removed to Heath as his place of residence.

TUCKER, BEVERLEY, judge, professor in William and Mary college, died at Winchester, Va., Aug. 26, 1851, aged 67. He was the son of Henry St. George T.; studied law; removed from Virginia to Missouri in 1815, and there was appointed a judge. In 1830 he returned to Virginia. He held to the States-right doctrines. He published a work on pleading; lectures on government; three novels, George Balcombe, Partisan Leader, and Gertrude. —Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TUCKER, EDWARD, a minister of the Universalists, died at Jamaica Plain in 1863, aged 76. He was a minister in Salem in 1808; then in Charlestown and Portsmouth. Next, at Charleton, he was connected with a Unitarian society.

TUCKERMAN, JOSEPH, D. D., died April 20, 1840, aged 62. He was born at Boston in 1778; was graduated in 1798; and was pastor in Chelsea from 1801 to 1826. Out of regard to the neglected poor in Boston, he acted as a minister at large, and was the almoner of many charities. He died at Havana in Cuba.

TUDOR, SAMUEL, first minister of Wintonbury church in Windsor, Conn., died in 1757, aged about 50. He graduated at Yale in 1728; and was a descendant of Owen Tudor from Wales, an early settler of Windsor, whose son Samuel commenced the settlement on the east side of Connecticut river.

TUDOR, ELIHU, M. D., died at East Windsor March 6, 1826, aged 93. He graduated at Yale in 1760. His wife was Miss Brewster, a descendant of Elder B. Though an Episcopalian he wes a communicant in the Congregational church. He was a son of Rev. Samuel. He was a surgeon with Wolfe in 1759, and at the capture of Havana in 1762, and afterwards in the hospitals of England. Discharged at his own request on half-pay, he returned to America and lived on the paternal farm sixty years. He lived to be the oldest surviving graduate of Yale. — Thacher's Med. Biog.

TUDOR, WILLIAM, an author, died March 9, 1830, aged about 51. He was the son of William T., a lawyer and distinguished citizen of Boston, who died July 8, 1319, and grandson of John T., who died in 1796, aged 86; was graduated at Harvard college in 1796, and settled in Boston as a lawyer. He died at Rio de Janeiro, where he was American charge d'affaires. He published a discourse before the humane society, 1817; letters on the eastern States, 1820; miscellanies, 1821; the life of James Otis, 8vo., 1823.

TUFTS, PETER, died in Malden in 1700, aged 82. He came from England in 1654, and left sons, Peter, Jonathan, and John, and four daugh-

TUFTS, Simon, Dr., the son of Peter, died in 1746, aged 46, the first regular-bred physician in his native town, Medford, Mass. He graduated at Harvard in 1724. His circle of practice embraced ten or twelve neighboring towns. On his death sermens were preached at Medford, Boston, Charlestown, and Cambridge. To the poorer class of students he made no charge for his services. He had two sons, eminent physicians, of whom Simon died in Medford in 1786, aged 60. - Thacher's Med. Biog.

TUFTS, JOHN, minister of the second church in Newbury, Mass., died in 1750, aged about 63. He was a descendant of Peter, and graduated at Harvard in 1708. He published a discourse at the ordination of B. Bradstreet, 1729.

TUFTS, COTTON, M. D., a physician in Weymouth, the son of Dr. Simon T. of Medford, died Dec. 8, 1815, aged 84. He graduated in 1749. His practice in early and middle life was extensive. He was a member of the convention for adopting the constitution of the United States, and a member of the State senate. He was also a deacon of the church. - Thacher's Med. Biog.

TUFTS, AARON, doctor, died in Dudley, Mass., in 1843, aged 73. A native of Charlestown, he studied medicine with Dr. Eaton of Dudley; after a practice of a few years he engaged in manufactures, and acquired a handsome fortune, and occupied a beautiful estate. But affliction came upon him. His son, G. A. Tufts, a graduate of 1818, a senator, died in 1835, greatly lamented.

TULLAR, DAVID, died at Sheffield, Mass., in 1839, aged 90. He graduated at Yale in 1774, and was the minister of many towns: of Milford, Conn., from 1780 to 1803; of Rowley from 1803 to 1810; of Hawley; of Windsor, Vt.; of Caledonia, N. Y.; of Ipswich Line-brook church from 1823 to 1831, laboring there with great success.

TULLY, JOHN, died in Middletown, Conn., in 1701. He came from England, and was a maker of almanacs from 1681 to his death.

TUPPER, THOMAS, of Lynn, removed to Sandwich in 1637, and died in 1676, aged 96. Ann, his wife, died in 1675, aged 96. He and Richard Bourne were the purchasers of the Sandwich lands in 1637, both men of wealth. In his re- dred Pilgrims in the Mayslewer to Plymouth in gard for the spiritual interests of the Indians he preached to them, although he was not educated for the ministry. He founded an Indian church near Herring river, supplied with a succession of ministers of his name. A pastor, his great grandson, died in 1787. - Hist. Coll. III. 188, and 1. 201: N. E. Memorial.

TUPPER, BENJAMIN, general, died at Marietta, Ohio, in June, 1792, aged 56. Born in Stoughton, now Sharon, he was apprenticed to Mr. Wilkington, a farmer in Dorchester. He lived in Easton and Chesterfield, serving in the war, and reaching the rank of colonel. He and Rufus Putnam originated the Ohio company. He travelled with wagons to the Ohio, and reached Marietta Aug. 9, 1788. A professor of religion, he encouraged public worship in the new settlement. Daniel Story was the first minister. His wife was II. White. Of his children, Maj. Anselm died at Marietta in 1808; Col. Benjamin died at Putnam in 1815; Gen. Edward W. died at Gallipolis, in 1823; Resanna married Winthrep Sargent, and died in 1790; Sophia married Nathaniel Willis, and died in 1789; Minerva married Col. Nye, and died at Marietta in 1836. Only Edward W. T., of Putnam, is left as a representative of the family. - Hildreth's Biog. Mem.

TUPPER, WILLIAM, colonel, died at Monson in 1825, aged 90, formerly of Marlborough.

TURELL, JANE, the wife of Rev. Ebenezer Turell, died at Medford in 1735, aged 27. She was the daughter of Rev. B. Colman. Her mental powers were very early unfolded. At the age of four she could repeat the catechism and many psalms. At the age of eleven she began to write poetry. Her memoirs with her poems were published in 1735. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

TURELL, EBENEZER, second minister of Medford, Mass., died Dec. 5, 1778, aged 76. He was a native of Boston; was graduated at Harvard college in 1721; and was ordained Nov. 25, 1724, as successor of Aaron Porter. Dr. Osgood was his successor. He was an eminent preacher, of a ready invention, a correct judgment, and fervent devotion, who delivered Divine truth with animation, and maintained discipline in his church with boldness tempered with prudence. To his country he was a zealous friend in all its interests. After following to the grave three wives, he died in Christian hope. He published a sermon at ordination of S. Cooke; direction as to prevent times, 1742; dialogue abou the times; exhortation on the past; on witchcraft, in hist. coll.; the life and character of Dr. Colman, 8vo., 1749.

TURNBULL, ROBERT T., died at Charleston. S. C., in 1833, aged 60; reputed as the ables. writer on the side of "nullification."

TURNER, JOHN, was one of the one hun-

Univerged 76. then in t Charlciety. April 20, in 1778; in Chell to the minister

harities.

evolu-

d 87.

er of

ed at

He

rginia.

s; also nd ac-

of law.

f Phil-

ated at 785 to

lace of

or in hester.

son of

ed from vas ap-

to Vir-

es. He

n gov-

, Parti-

er. Lit.

atonbury 57, aged 28; and Vales, an uel com-Connec-

Windsor at Yale descendnn he was l church. as a surapture of hospitals equest on lived on ved to be Thacher's

March 9, n of Wil1620, with two sons; but they all died in the first soldier, died in Philadelphia in 1843, aged 93, sickness. A daughter came over afterwards, and He was born in England. In the war he had a was married at Salem.

TURNER, HUMPHREY, a settler of Scituate in 1633, died in 1673, leaving among other children a son, John, who married Mary Brewster, a daughter of Jonathan Brewster. John's son Ezekiel lived in New London, and died in 1704, leaving a son, Ezekiel, and ten daughters, all of whose descendants are of course descendants of Elder Brewster of Plymouth. Thomas Turner, a aettler in New London after 1729, from whom many families are descended, is supposed to have been a descendant of Humphrey. - Miss Caulkins' Hist. New London.

TURNER, DAVID, first minister of Rehoboth, Mass., died in 1757, aged 63. Born in Scituate, he graduated at Harvard in 1718, and was settled in 1721. The church grew under him from ten members to one hundred and seventy. R. Rogerson from England succeeded him, and then O.

Thompson.

TURNER, PHILIP, a celebrated surgeon, died in 1815, aged 74. He was born in Norwich, Conn., in 1740; studied with Dr. Elisha Tracy, whose daughter he married; and served as a surgeon in the French war from 1759 to 1763. He then settled in Norwich. In the Revolutionary war he was surgeon-general of the eastern department. In 1800 he removed to New York. He was soon appointed a surgeon in the army. He died at York Island. - Thacher.

TURNER, CHARLES, minister of Duxbury, Mass., died in 1816, aged about 66. He graduated at Harvard in 1752. He published a sermon at ordination of G. Damon, 1760; of T. Haven, 1770; the election sermon, 1773; a Plymouth discourse, 1773; two fast sermons, 1783.

TURNER, a hermit of this name, died on the East Rock in New Haven, Nov. 2, 1823. He was found dead in his cabin, built of mud and stone, on the top of the rock, in which he had lived for years. He kept two or three sheep. He begged his food. Of his history little was known.

TURNER, JAMES, governor of North Carolina, died in Warren county in 1824, aged 57. He was a senator of the U.S.

TURNER, JAMES, a minister in Bedford county, Va., died in 1828, aged 68.

TURNER, WILLIAM, doctor, died at Newport, R. I., in 1837, aged 62; a surgeon in the U.S.

TURNER, EDWARD, professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Middlebury college, died in 1838, aged about 40. He graduated at Yale in 1818.

TURNER, ANDREW, colonel, a patriot of the Revolution, died in Harford county, Md., in 1840, aged 89.

TURNER, GEORGE, captain, a Revolutionary 77. — Holland's Hist. II. 65.

command in S. C., and was distinguished in severe engagements. Washington esteemed him.

TURNER, DANIEL, commodore, died in Phil. adelphia in 1849 or 1850. Ilis first commission in the navy was in 1808. In the battle of lake Erie in 1814 he commanded the Caledonia, TURNER, GEORGE F., M. D., died at Corpus Christi in 1854, aged 47. He graduated at Harvard in 1826. He was assistant surgeon in 1833. and surgeon in the army in 1840. He served in Florida, and afterwards at the falls of St. Anthony. In the Mexican war he was medical surveyor.

TURRILL, STEPHEN, died in Charlotte, Vt., Feb. 28, 1844, aged 101. He was a soldier under Abercrombie in 1758, and served during the Revolutionary war.

TUSTEN, colonel, and a physician, commanded the troops assembled at Minisink to withstand the 300 Indians, who had destroyed the settlement July 20, 1779. The question was, whether to seek the enemy at Grassy Swamp brook. Col. T. gave reasons for not going then into the woods; but a Major Mecker, mounting his horse and flourishing his sword over his head, desired the brave to follow him and the cowards to stay behind. They marched seventeen miles, when Col. Hathorne arrived and took the command. He was also averse to the pursuit. But again Major Meeker flourished his sword and prevailed. The troops were drawn into an ambush, and after fighting the whole day were defeated, with the loss of forty-four valuable citizens of Goshen, among whom were Jones, Little, Duncan, Vail, Townsend, and Knapp. Dr. Tusten dressed the wounds of thirteen men in a nook of the rocks; but he and they all fell under the tomahawk. Such was the consequence of yielding to rash counsel.

TUTHILL, A. G. D., died at Montpelier, Vt., June 12, 1843, aged 67; late of Buffalo. He was a pupil of Benjamin West, and known as an artist. skilled in historical and portrait painting.

TUTTLE, Moses, the first minister of Granville, Mass., died in Southold, L. I., in 1785, aged 65. He graduated at Yale in 1745, and was settled in 1747, and dismissed in 1754. His successors were J. Smith and Dr. Cooley. \ His wife was Martha, the daughter of Rev. Timothy Edwards. If report is true, her temper was not sweet. On the appointed day of marriage he failed to appear, in consequence of a flood in the Connecticut. When he appeared, she at last consented to an interview, when she asked, "Why did you not come on the day agreed upon?" To his answer, "The flood made the river impassable," she replied, "That is no excuse at all." Perhaps she thought he was as good a swimmer as Leander. She died in 1794, aged by a bullet through his heart at the storming of Chapultepec in Mexico, Sept. 13, 1847. He was the son of Gen. T. of Ga., and had served his country thirty-four years.

TWITCHELL, Amos, M. D., died in Keene, N. H., May 26, 1850, aged 69. He was a skilful physician and surgeon; and rode for forty years forty miles a day. He successfully tied the earotid artery of a man in Sharon, wounded by a pistol. He was earnestly engaged in the cause of temperance and against the use of tobacco. -N. Y. Independent, June 20.

TYLER, ANDREW, minister in Dedham, west church, died in 1775, aged about 60. He was born in Boston, and graduated at Harvard in 1738, and succeeded Josiah Dwight, the first minister in 1743, and was dismissed in 1772. T.

Thacher was his successor.

TYLER, SAMUEL, a judge in chancery, died in Williamsburg, Va., in 1812.

TYLER, JOHN, rector in the Episcopal church, died at Norwich, Conn., in 1813, aged 86.

TYLER, ROYALL, judge, died in Brattleboro', Vt., in Aug., 1826, aged 66. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1776. He was aid to Gen. Lincoln in the Shays rebellion. Settling in Vermont, he was a successful advocate. He was a judge of the supreme court twelve years, chief justice half of that period. He was a poet, scholar, and an erudite judge, of elegant manners and social habits. He published reports in the supreme court of Vt., 2 vols., 1809-1810; the Algerine captive; several comedies, and some poems, specimens of which may be found in the cyclopedia of Amer. literature. — N. Y. Statesman, Aug. 25.

TYLER, ROYAL, minister of Salem, Coun., died in 1826, aged about 60. He was graduated at Dartmouth in 1788. He was minister in Coventry, Andover society, from 1792 to 1818; of Salem, Conn., from 1818 to 1822.

TYLER, EDWARD R., editor of the New Englander, died at New Haven Sept. 28, 1848, aged 48; the son of Judge R. Tyler, of Brattleboro', Vt. He graduated at Yale in 1825, and was n minister in Middletown, and then in Colebrook. He founded with others the New Englander, and became its editor and proprietor in 1843.

TYLER, WILLIAM, bishop of the Roman Catholic church, died at Providence, R. I., in 1849.

TYLER, JOSEPH D., an Episcopal minister, died in Staunton, Va., in 1852, aged 48. Born in Brattleboro', Vt., he graduated at Yale in 1829. Of the State institution for the deaf and dumb at S. he was the principal for fifteen years.

TYNG, WILLIAM, a merchant of Boston, died in 1653, leaving five daughters and an estate of 2774 pounds. He was a freeman in 1638; was representative, and treasurer of the colony.

TYNG, EDWARD, general, a merchant of Bos-

TWIGGS, or TWIGG, LEVI, major, was killed | ton, died in Dunstable, in 1681, aged 80. He was brother of William; was in B, as early as 1639; was representative, assistant fourteen years, and colonel of Suffolk regiment. Of his daughters, Hannah married H. Savage, Equice married Rev. S. Willard, and Rebecca married Gov. J. Dudley. His son, Edward, was appointed governor of Annapolis, but was taken prisoner on his passage and died in France; and this Edward's son Edward was a brave naval commander who died 1755, and his daughter Mary married Rev. John Fox, and his daughter Elizabeth married a brother of Dr. Franklin.

> TYNG, John, major, of Chelmsford, was killed by the Indians in Aug., 1710, aged about 40. He graduated at Harvard in 1691, leaving two sons: Col. Eleazer, a graduate of 1712, who died in 1782, aged 92; and Judge John of Tyngsborough, a graduate of 1725, who died in 1797, aged 92.

TYNG, ELEAZER, colonel, died at Dunstable in 1782, aged 92. The son of Col. John of Woburn, he graduated at Harvard in 1712.

TYNG, John, died April 17, 1797, aged 93. The son of John of Chelmsford, he graduated at Harvard in 1725, and was a justice of the common pleas court.

TYNG, DUDLEY ATKINS, LL. D., died in Boston in 1829, aged about 70; a graduate of 1781. He was the son of Dudley Atkins, a merchant of Newburyport. He assumed the name of Tyng for the following reason: James Tyng, having large landed estates in Tyngshorough, died without a male heir. His sister and heir was Mrs. Winslow, a descendant of Gov. Dudley. She determined to make Mr. Dudley Atkins her heir, because he also was descended from Dudley, though related to her only as her sixth eousin; he in consequence took the name of Tyng. His farm of one thousand acres was only a burden and an injury to him; for it diverted him from his high prospects in his profession. For years he was the excellent collector of Newhuryport; but lost his office on the necession of Jefferson. He then succeeded E. Williams as reporter of the supreme court, which station he honorably held during the rest of his life. An interesting account of his character, by his friend, John Lowell, is in hist. coll., 3d series, vol. II.

TYTLER, JAMES, eminent for learning, was a native of Scotland, and emigrated to this country about the year 1796. He died at Salem, Mass., in Jan., 1804, aged 53. He was poor, and lived on a point of land at a little distance from the town. Returning to his house in a dark night, he fell into a clay pit and was drowned. His conduct in life was marked by perpetual imprudence; yet he was a man of no common seience and genius. He was one of the editors of the Edinburgh edition of the Encyclopedia Britan-

1 sehim. Philission lake ornus

1 93.

nd a

Har-1833, ved in hony. ır. , Vt., under

Reve-

mandhstand settlehether . Col. to the horse lesired to stay , when mand.

again evailed. ad after ith the Joshen, n, Vail, sed the ks; but . Such counsel. ier, Vt., He was n artist, f Gran-85, aged was set-His suc-His wife othy Edwas not riage he od in the at last asked, agreed made the no exs as good 94, aged nica. He published an answer to Paine's age of no encouragement to the preaching of Mr. Fitch. reason, and a treatise on the plague and yellow fever.

ULMER, GEORGE, major-general, died at Waldoborough, Me., in Jan., 1826, aged 70. Born in W. of German parents, at the age of 20 he could neither read nor write. Enlisting in the army, he was with Montgomery at Quebec, at the capture of Hurgoyne, and in the battles of Brandywine and Monmouth. In this period he learned to read. Settling at Ducktrap, he became a merchant, and was a representative and senator of Massachusetts, afterwards of Maine. As a legislator he manifested powers of intellect and of eloquence. He was for years sheriff of Hancock county, Me.

ULRICK, Mrs., died at Hollis, N. H., in 1789,

aged 104.

UNCAS, sachem of the Mohegan Indians in Connecticut, is said to have been a Pequot by birth and of royal descent. Rebelling against Sassacus, he was expelled from the Pequot country and by his enterprise became chief of the Mohegans. To the English he was an uniform friend, at the time of their first settlement in Connecticut and for many subsequent years. When all the other Indians of New England were by the arts of Philip combined for the destruction of the whites, the sachemdom of Moliegan alone remained in friendship. He was a brave warrior; but oppressive to his captive subjects. In 1637 he with seventy Mohegan warriors accompanied Capt. Mason in his expedition against the Pequots. At the destruction of the Mystie fort and of the l'equot race he and his Indians formed the second line. He received a part of the one hundred and eighty captives. As he had given some umbrage to the Massachusetts government, he went to Boston in 1638, and making a present of wampum to the governor, formed a treaty of friendship, to which he was faithful. In Sept. he made a treaty with the colonists of Connecticut, and he conveyed to them in 1640 Colchester and all his land excepting Mohegan. In 1643, when the Narragansett sachem attacked him with one thousand men, he took Miantunnomu prisoner, and, having obtained the advice of the commissioners of the united colonies, Winthrop, Winslow, Hopkins, etc., he cut off his prisoner's head. This seems a savage act. The wonder in this case is, that Christian white men should give such advice. In 1654 he subdued the chief at Simsbury. In King Philip's war two hundred Mohegan and Pequot Indians marched with two hundred and fifty whites under Major Talcott to Brookfield and Northampton; and this little Dec. 19, 1842, aged 89, and was buried in the army, June 12th, defeated seven hundred Indiana at Hadley and saved the town. In the summer there was a great drought at Mohegan; the corn was dried up in August. Uncas, who had given at Oyster Bay, L. I., about 1672. His descend-now went to the good man, with many Indians, asking his prayers for rain, and engaging to ascribe the blessing, if granted, to the mercy of God in hearing prayer. A day of fasting and prayer was observed; and the day following there was copious rain. Uneas was now an old man. He probably died soon afterwards. His brother was Nowequa. Onecho, his eldest son, assisted the English in the war of 1676. The family declined in power with the decay of the tribe. Isaiah Uncas attended Dr. Wheeloek's school. About 1800 Noah and John Uncas were living; but the name is now extinct at Mohegan. The regal burying-ground is not at Mohegan, but at Norwich city, on the plain, near the house of the late Calvin Goddard, and near the falls of the Yantic. There are several gravestones. The inscription on the stone, not of the sachem Uncas, as Dr. Holmes represents, but of Samuel Uncas, his great grandson, who died in 1741, aged 27, is this :

>  For beauty, wit, and sterling sense, For temper mild and eloquence, For courage bold and things Werheegan, He was the glory of Mohegan. His death has caused great lamentation Both to the English and the Indian nation,"

a

C

H

fi ni g

The "things Werheegan" are either things pertaining to warfare, or things agreeable and welcome. There are less than a hundred Mohegans, including those of mixed blood, now remaining. Something of their history may be known by looking at the articles Fitch, Occom, Jos. Johnson, and Tantequiggen, in this book. The French and Revolutionary wars, and above all the use of spirituous liquors, have nearly exterminated the tribe. However, there is now reason to hope for amendment. They retain of their large territory two thousand seven hundred acres of good land, and have several houses, which they rent to white men; they have now schools and a preacher. If they can renounce strong drink, and should cultivate their remaining land diligently, and especially if the power of religion should be felt among them, they would become a respectable and happy community.

UNCAS, BENJAMIN, Indian sachem, died at Mohegan in 1769. He left his estate to his cldest son, on condition of his opposing Mason's claim.

UNCAS, GEORGE PEGEE, died at Mohegan, or Montville, Conn., July, 1833; the last of the royal race. He was buried in the grave-yard of his ancestors at Norwich.

UNCAS, JOHN, an Indian, died at Norwich royal Mohegan burying-ground; the last male descendant of the early Uncas.

UNDERHILL, JOHN, captain, of Boston, died ants, mostly Quakers, remain on Long Island. He came to New England in 1630; was representative of Boston; then engaged in the Pequot war. He lived in Dover; then settled in Stamford, Conn., in 1646 he removed to Flushing. Winthrop gives an account of his sitting on the stool of repentance in the Boston church, for some offence, with a white cap on his head. -Eliot: Wood's Hist. of L. I.

UNDERWOOD, NATHAN, minister of Harwich, Mass., died in 1841, aged 89. Born in Lexington, he was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, in the battles of Lexington, Bunker Hill, White Plains, and Trenton. A graduate of 1788, he was a preacher for forty years; the pastor of

H. from 1792 to 1828.

UPDIKE, DANIEL, died in East Greenwich, R. I., June 15, 1812, aged 81 years. His father was Ludowick U., an accomplished man; his grandfather was Daniel U., attorney-general. Having studied law with J. M. Varnum, he was admitted to the bar in 1784. He was attorneygeneral in 1790. He had a good library. Among his cherished relies of the past was a silver coffeepot, presented to his grandfather by Bishop Berkeley. His parents died in old age; his surviving brothers and sisters were eight in number.

UPHAM, CALEB, minister of Truro on Cape Cod, died in 1786, aged 62. He graduated at Harvard in 1744, and was ordained in 1755. He was a good scholar, an animated preacher, and friend to his country. In his writings he indicated a strong taste for poetry.

UPHAM, EDWARD, a Baptist minister at Newport, R. I., died in 1797, aged about 83. He was born in Malden, probably a descendant of Nathaniel, a freeman of M. in 1653, and graduated at Harvard in 1734.

UPHAM, TIMOTHY, first minister of Deerfield, N. II., died in 1811, aged 62, in the thirtyninth year of his ministry. Born at Malden, he graduated at Harvard in 1768, and was settled Dec. 9, 1772. Ilis sons were Nathaniel of Rochester, the father of Prof. Thomas C. Upham of Bowdoin college, and Timoth; of Portsmouth. He published a masonic discourse, 1792. - N. E. Geneal. Reg., vol. I.

UPHAM, SAMUEL, captain, a Revolutionary soldier, died at Montpelier, Vt., in 1848, aged 85. He was one of the earliest settlers of M.; and the father of Senator Upham.

UPSHUR, ABEL P., secretary of State, died Feb. 28, 1844, aged 53, killed by the bursting of a large wrought-iron gun on board the steamer Princeton in the Potomac river. There were also killed Mr. Gilmer, Mr. Maxey, and others. The president was on board. Born in Virginia, he studied law with Wirt, and became a judge of the general court. In 1841 he was appointed by secretary of State. He published a pamphlet, reviewing Story on the constitution.

UPSON, HENONI, D. D., minister of Herlin, Conn., died in 1826, aged 76. He graduated at Yale in 1776, and was a trustee of the college.

USHER, John, Episcopal minister at Bristol. R. L. died in 1804, aged 81. He graduated at Harvard in 1743.

USHER, John, lieutenant-governor of New Hampshire, died at Medford, Mass., in 1726, aged 77. The son of Hezekiah of Cambridge in 1639, of Boston in 1646, he was a bookseller and stationer in Boston, a colonel and a councillor. He was five years in his N. H. office from 1692, and was reappointed L. 1702. He married a daughter of Samuel Ali m, chose claims in N. H. he supported. From ! artsmouth he removed to Medford. His son, John, was a graduate of Harvard in 1719, was a minister, and died in 1775, aged 76, leaving a son John, an Episcopal minister of Bristol, R. I., who graduated in 1743 and died in 1804, aged about 81. - Farmer.

VAILS, JOSEPH, minister of Hadlyme in East Haddam, Conn., died in 1838, aged 86. He graduated at Dagmouth in 1778. G. Rawson preceded him. He had three sons, who were ministers, Joseph, William, and Franklin.

VALLET, FEIER, an eminent merchant of New York, died in 1753. born in France, he fled to this country from religious intolerance, and was one of the supporters of the old French church in New York.

VAN ALSTYNE, JACOB, died in Fonda, N. Y., May 11, 1844, aged 05. He was a soldier of the Revolution.

VAN ARSDALE, ELIAS, LL. D., died at Newark, N. J., in 1846, aged 75, a distinguished member of the bar, long president of the State bank at N.

VAN BUREN, John, died in Kingston, N. Y., in 1855, one of the oldest lawyers of Ulster bar. He was a member of congress from 1841 to 1843.

VANCE, Joseph, governor of Ohio, died near Alabama, Ohio, in 1852. He was an old resident in the State; was a member of congress from 1821 to 1835, and governor in 1836.

VAN DER HEYDEN, JACOB D., the patroon of Troy, N. Y., died in 1809, aged 50.

VAN DER KEMP, Francis Adrian, LL. D., died at Trenton, N. Y., in 1829, at an advanced age. He was a native of Holland and a man of literature.

VANDERLYN, PETER, Dr., died at Kingston,

N. Y., in 1802.

VANDERLYN, JOHN, an excellent painter, died in Kingston, N. Y., his native place, Sept. 23, 1852, aged 76. From 1796 he remained in Paris five years. His first historical composition was the murder of Miss McCrea by the Indians. President Tyler secretary of the navy, and in 1843 | Marius on the ruins of Carthage was his master-ga perid welregans, aining. wn by . John-French o use of ted the ope for itch, liens.

0 8#-

ey of

and wing

n old

His

son.

The

f the lock's

were egan.

egan,

r the r the zrave-

of the

out of

ied in erritory d land, to white her. If ld cultiid espebe felt pectable

died at is eldest 's claim. ohegan, t of the -yard of Norwich d in the st male ton, died descend-

piece; it was removed to Paris in 1808. He in March, 1854, leaving in legacies 70,000 dollars, made many copies from Correggio, Titian, and other old masters, as the Danac, the Antiope, etc. He returned in 1815. His panoramie exhibitions proved unsuccessful and occasioned pecuniary embarrassments. In 1832 the government employed him to paint a full length portrait of Weshington for the representatives' hall. For a panes in the rotunda of the capitol, he also painted the landing of Columbus. He at last exhibited a full length picture of Gen. Taylor. His two prints of the falls of Niagara were published in

VAN DYCK, ABRAHAM, a distinguished lawyer, died at Coxsackie, N. Y., in 1835, aged 56.

VANE, Sir HENRY, governor of Massachusetts, was born in England about 1612, and edueated at Oxford. He then went to Geneva, where he became a republican, and found arguments against the established church. After his return to London, as his nonconformity displeased the bishop, he came to New England in the beginning of 1635. In the next year, though he was only twenty-four years of age, he was chosen governor; but, attaching himself to the party of Mrs. Hutchinson, he was in 1637 superseded by Gov. Winthrop. He soon returned to England, where he joined the party against the king, though he was opposed to the usurpation of Cromwell. In 1651 he was a commissioner to Sectland. Mackintosh declared, that he possessed one of the most profound minds, not inferior, perhaps, to Bacon's. Milton addressed a beautiful sonnet to him. His life, by C. W. Upham, is in library of American biography, vol. IV. After the restoration he was tried for high treason, and beheaded June 14, 1662, aged 50. He published a number of speeches; the retired man's meditations, or the mystery and power of godliness, showing forth the living word, etc., 4to., 1655; a healing question, 1656; a needful corrective, or balance in popular government; the love of God and union with God; an epistle general to the mystical body of Christ, etc., 1662; the face of the times, or the enmity between the seed of the woman and of the serpent, 1662; meditations concerning man's life; meditations on death; and a number of political tracts, and pieces relating to his trial.

VAN GELDER, Mr., died at Pinotaway town, N. J., Feb. 28, 1818, aged 116 years.

VANHINING, HENRY, died in Norton, O. io, in 1840, aged 102; a soldier of the Revolution, an early settler of O.

VAN HORN, JOHN, Dr., of Springfield, Mr.ss., died in 1805, aged 78.

VAN HORNE, ABRAHAM, minister at Fonda, N. Y., died in 1840; forty years pastor of the Dutch church.

VAN HORNE, John P., died at New York and the residue of his estate, about 150,000 dollars, to the bible society.

VAN LENNEP, EMMA L., wife of a missionary, died in Smyrna Sept. 12, 1840, aged 20. She was the daughter of Henry Bliss of Putney, Vt., and West Springfield, Mass., and sailed for Smyrna in Dec., 1839. Among her last words, she said, "Christ is sufficient."

VAN LENNEP, MARY E., Mrs., wife of Henry Van Lennep, missionary at Constantinople, died Sept. 27, 1844. She was the only daughter of Rev. Dr. Hawes of Hartford, Conn., married in 1843. Her sickness was the typhus fever. A memoir of her by her mother was published in 1847. She left this country in Oct., 1843. She rejoiced in the privilege of being a missionary. In her last morning, unable to speak, she yet "whispered words of strong hope and joyful expecta-

I

d

N

6 ar

er

tu

se

11

No

Al

ch

ing

ye

eit

eal

H

the

his eo.

cie

for

de

ch

m ag 17

a

ap

In

ar

lik

th

th

na

ni

VAN NESS, WILLIAM W., judge, the son of Wm. W. V., who died in 1821, aged 83, was born at Claverack, N. Y., in 1775, and practised law at Hudson. He was a judge of the supreme court of New York from 1807 till his resignation May 1, 1822, when he returned to the bar at New York. Repairing to the south for his health, he died at Charleston, Feb. 28, 1823, aged 47. His eldest daughter married Henry Livingston. Without any peculiar advantages of education or patronage he rose to distinction by the force of his talents. He was a learned, impartial, respected judge. In his manners he was courteous. and in private life he was amiable and beloved. He died as a Christian, invoking the mercy of the Saviour of sinners. At a meeting of the bar in New York, Mr. Jay and Mr. Griffin described his eminent and excellent character.

VAN NESS, JOHN P., general, died at Washington March 7, 1846, aged 76. A native of New York, he married a daughter of David Burns, who inherited a fortune in Washington. To the improvement of the city he much contributed. He presented a lot for a church in 1845. He was a member of congress.

VAN NESS, CORNELIUS P., governor of Vermont, died in Philadelphia Dec. 16, 1852, aged 71. He had been collector of Burlington, chief justice, and governor of Vermont: minister to Spain nine years; and collector of the port of New VAN NEST, PETER, died in Pemberton, N. J., Sept. 17, 1850. He had been a Methodist itinerant minister fifty-four years.

VAN RENSSELAER, JEREMIAH, the founder of the family of that name in the State of New York, a man of wealth and a director of the Dutch West India company, emigrated to New York about 1660. Others of the same name emigrated about the same time. He brought out dolsion-20.

lars.

tney, d for ords, Ienry died Rev. 1843. emoir 1847. joiced In her whisrpectason of as born ed law upreme gnation at New health. ged 47. ingston. ation or force of tial, reurteous, beloved. ey of the e bar in lescribed

at Washnative of id Burns, To the ntributed. 845. Ile or of Ver-352, aged ton, chief inister to ort of New ton, N. J., odist itin-he founder te of New tor of the ed to New ame name rought out settlers from Holland and purchased of the Indians an extensive tract around Albany. The purchase was confirmed by the Dutch government and a patent was obtained. After Nicolls' conquest of the Dutch settlements in 1664, the duke of York granted another patent, which was confirmed by Queen Anne, giving the right of holding courts and of sending a representative to the assembly. By one of the family the manor was accordingly represented till the Revolution. His lands have descended from generation to gencration, and are now held by the heirs of his descendant, Stephen Van R., formerly lieutenantgovernor of New York.

VAN RENSSELAER, JEREMIAH, a patriot of the Revolution, and lieutenant-governor of New York, was for some years a member of congress. He died at Albany Feb. 22, 1810, aged

VAN RENSSELAER, HENRY K., general, a patriot of the Revolution, was a colonel in the army of the United States, and afterwards general of the militia of New York. At the capture of Burgoyne he was wounded. For his services he received a pension from his country. He died at Albany in Sept., 1816, aged 72. His son, Solomon Van R., was adjutant-general of New York in 1809.

VAN RENSSELAER, PHILIP S., mayor of Albany, was elected in 1798, and amidst all the changes of party was annually reëlected, excepting in two years, till 1323. For twenty-three years he was a faithful chief magistrate of the city, assiduous in promoting its moral and political interests. He died Sept. 25, 1824, aged 58. He was a much respected and useful citizen. Of the Albany bible society he was at the time of his death the president, and a trustee of Union college. He was the principal founder of the Albany academy, and of the Lancaster school society. His fortune and talents were employed for the promotion of benevolent objects. In his death, while the poor lost their best friend, the church was deprived of an exemplary member.

VAN RENSSELAER, STEPHEN, LL. D., major-general, died at Albany Jan. 16, 1839, aged 74. He was born in New York in Nov., 1764, and graduated at Cambridge in 1782. He was six years lieutenant-governor of New York; a member of congress from 1822 to 1829; was appointed in 1810 one of the canal commissioners. In the war of 1812 he commanded on the Ningara frontier. He was called the patroon; a title, like that of seignior in Lower Canada, denoting the proprietor of large estates in lands. He was the fifth in descent from Kilian Van R., the original proprietor in 1637 of a territory forty-eight miles long and twenty-four broad. He was the tors, with Paulding and Williams, of André, was friend of Washington, Hamilton, and Jay. He born at Greensburgh, Westchester county, N. Y., was munificent in deeds of benevolence and in the promotion of learning.

VAN RENSSELAER, WILLIAM K., died in New York June 18, 1845, aged 82. He was a member of congress ten years, but lived in retirement his last twenty years; and was a man much

VAN RENSSELAER, NICHOLAS, colonel, died at Albany March 29, 1848, aged 93. He was a soldier with Montgomery at Quebec, and also at Ticonderoga.

VAN RENSSELAER, SOLOMON, general, died near Albany April 23, 1852, aged 78. He was the son of Gen. H. K. Van R., a soldier; and served under Wayne in 1794, and was wounded through the lungs. He was adjutantgeneral of New York, and a member of con-

VAN SANTVOORDT, CORNELIUS, was born at Leyden in 1687. A call being sent from Staten Island to Holland for a minister, who was able and willing to preach in the French and Low Dutch languages, he declared his acceptance of it, and entered upon the duties of his office in 1718. He labored at Staten Island about twenty-two years. In 1740 he was removed to Schenectady, where he continued in the exercise of his ministry until his decease Jan. 6, 1752, old style, aged 65. He was a man of talents, learning, and piety, and sound in the doctrines of grace. While on Staten island he preached in French and Low Dutch. He published, it is believed, in Low Dutch, an anonymous conciliatory pamphlet on the Freighlinghuisen controversy about the year 1725; and a translation in the same language of John à Marck's Latin exposition of the Apocalypse, Leyden, 4to., 1736.

VAN SINDEREN, ADRIAN, a merchant in New York, died in Brooklyn in 1843. His father was a minister of the Dutch church in King's county, N. Y. Having acquired a competence. he retired to Newtown; then to Brooklyn. In both places he was an eminently worthy citizen and useful Christian, - munificent and active. He was president of the seamen's friend society, and twenty-eight years of the Long Island bible society.

VAN VLECK, JACOB, a Moravian minister, died at Bethlehem, Pa., in 1831, aged 80.

VAN VOAST, JOHN J., died in Glenville, N. Y., in 1844 aged 103.

VAN VRANCKEN, NICHOLAS, minister of the Dutch churches of Fishkill, Hopewell, and New Hackensack, N. Y., died May 20, 1804, aged 42. He was an excellent man, greatly beloved.

VAN WART, ISAAC, colonel, one of the cap-

Mount Pleasant May 23, 1828, aged 80. He was a worthy man, sober, industrious, moral, and religious, and much respected in his neighborhood. His account of the capture of André was this: He was at the encampment at North Castle, where Col. Jameson commanded, when Paulding proposed to go on a scout below. They started in the afternoon, and Williams joined them. At Mount Pleasant they passed the night in a barn. The next morning at nine o'clock they lay in wait on the North river post-road, in a field, now the property of Mr. Wiley, three-quarters of a mile from Tarrytown. He was sentinel, lying in the bushes by the fence, while the others played cards. In thirty minutes, seeing a man riding a black horse on the rising ground, opposite Tarrytown academy, he summoned his companions to take their firelocks and stand by the fence. Having captured André, they took off his boots and found the papers in his silk stockings. In conveying him to the encampment, they allowed him to ride, but avoided the highway; "big drops of sweat kept falling from his face." He once expressed a wish that they had blown his brains out when they stopped him. Having arrived at Sands' mills, ten miles from the place of capture, they surrendered him to Col. Jameson.

VAN ZUREN, CASPER, was a Dutch minister on Long Island before 1677.

VARICK, RICHARD, colonel, third president of the American bible society, was born in 1752. In 1783 he was one of Washington's military family, being recording secretary. He was a mayor of the city of New York in 1789; also so late as 1801, when he was removed and Edward Livingston appointed in his place. After Mr. Jay, who succeeded Mr. Boudinot, he was elected president of the bible society. He died at Jersey city July 30, 1831, aged 79. His life was upright. For many years he was a member of a Christian church. In his manners he was dignified, and fixed in his principles, political and religious.

VARNUM, JAMES MITCHELL, general, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 10, 1789, aged 40. He was the son of Joseph and grandson of Sam. V., who came from Wales to this country in 1649 and settled in Drscut, Mass. He was born in 1749, and graduated at Providence college in the first class in 1769, and afterwards studied law and resided at East Greenwich. In Feb., 1777, he was appointed a brigadier-general in the army of the United States. In Nov., he commanded at Red Bank, and served under Sullivan in Rhode Island in Aug., 1778, but resigned in 1779. In 1786 he was a delegate to congress, and in Oct., 1787, was appointed a judge of the Northwestern Territory. A letter to his wife, on the value of religin 1748, and died at his residence in the town of ion, is in Massachusetts magazine, Nov., 1790. She was Martha Childe, of Warren, and died at the age of 88, leaving no children. An account of her life is in Hildreth's biographical memoirs.

VARNUM, JOSEPH BRADLEY, general, a soldier of the Revolution, brother of the preceding, was born about 1750, and resided at Dracut. After the adoption of the constitution he was elected a member of congress, in which body he remained twelve years. He was the speaker four vears. Of Mr. Jefferson's administration he was a zealous supporter. In 1811 he succeeded Mr. Pickering as senator of the United States. Of three conventions of Massachusetts he was a useful member. He died suddenly Sept. 11, 1821, aged 71, being then major-general of a division of the militia.

VASSALL, WILLIAM, an associate in the charter of Massachusetts, came over at the settlement; but returned to England in 1631. He again came and settled at Scituate in 1635; thence he went to Barbadoes, where he died. Lewis, John, and William, graduates of Harvard in 1728, 1732, 1733, were his descendants. -

i

I

p

w H it m

Smil

Eliot's Biog.

VAUDREUIL, MARQUIS DE, governor of Canada, received the government of Montreal in 1689, and in 1703 succeeded to the government of the whole province of Canada. He continued in this office till his death Oct. 10, 1725. His administration was distinguished by vigilance. firmness, and success. He was succeeded by the Chevalier de Beauharnois, who sent one of his officers to penetrate to the south sea. This object was effected.

VAUGHAN, WILLIAM, poet and physician, died about 1640, aged 63. He came from Walcs to Newfoundland. He published the golden fleece, in prose and verse, 1626; and church militant, a poem, in 1640. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

VAUGHAN, WILLIAM, Dr., chief justice of New Hampshire, died at Portsmouth in 1719. aged about 70. His wife was Margaret, daughter of Richard Cutt. His son George, a graduate of Harvard in 1696, was lieutenant-governor of New Hampshire. - Belknap; Farmer.

VAUGHAN, John, M. D., died in Delaware in 1807, aged 31. He was the son of John, a Baptist minister in Chester county, Penn., and studied at Philadelphia. In 1799 he settled at Wilmington, Del. He soon gained a high reputation, was the friend of great men, and a member of various societies. From 1806 he occasionally preached the gospel to his Baptist brethren. He published an edition of Smith's letters; numerous communications to the medical museum, and New York medical repository; observations on animal electricity, in favor of Perkins' tractors, 1797.

VAUGHAN, BENJAMIN, LL. D., died at Hallowell Dec. 8, 1835, aged 84. His father was a the close of his life. Dr. Hooper was his conwealthy planter in Jamaien, whence he removed to London. At the age of sixteen he was placed under the instruction of Dr. Priestley. He then went to Cambridge, and studied law and medicine. In politics he was the associate of Franklin. Priestley, and Price. In 1792 he was a memher of parliament. In 1797 he came to Maine. He had a fine library, a part of which he liberally gave to Bowdoin college. He was a man of learning, devoted to scientific and literary pursuits; he was also social, courteous, hospitable, and benevolent.

VAUGHAN, CHARLES, died at Hallowell, Me., in 1839, aged 87. The brother of Benjamin, he was born in England. He was a man of knowledge, and made efforts for the improvement of agriculture. His brother, John, died in Philadelphia in 1841, aged 85; secretary of the American philosophical society, a much respected eitizen, at whose decease an aged brother was living in London.

VAUX, ROBERTS, died at Philadelphia Jan. 7, 1836, a member of the society of Friends, He was a justice of the court of common pleas: and long distinguished for his zeal in promoting philosophy, education, and human improvement.

VEAZIE, SAMUEL, minister of Duxbury, Mass., died in 1797, aged 86. He graduated at Harvard in 1736. He was pastor from 1739 to 1750, and was succeeded by C. Turner. His predecessor was John Robinson. The earlier preachers were Brewster, Partridge, Holmes, and Wiswall. After Turner were Sanger and Allyn. He was pastor of Hull from 1753 to 1767; and it is believed that he was afterwards a teacher many years, and died at Harpswell or Brunswick, VENABLE, ABRAHAM B., a senator of the United States from Virginia, perished with Gov. Smith and about seventy others, principally females, in the conflagration of the theatre at Richmond, Dec. 26, 1811. Mr. Bott, a lawyer, and his wife, Miss Almerine Marshall, daughter of Chief Justice M., and Miss Clay, daughter of a member of congress, were among the victims.

VENNER, THOMAS, a conspirator against Cromwell, was a wine-cooper in Boston. Going to England, he was in 1657 at the head of a fanatical company of insurgents. Brought before the protector, he behaved with pride, insolence, and railing. He again led out a rabble of forty men, and was, in Jan., 1661, drawn and quartered.

VERGNIES, FRANCIS, Dr., died at Newbury-

port in 1830, aged 83.

VIGNERON, CHARLES ANTHONY, Dr., a German, an eminent physician of Newport, R. I., died about 1760 or 1770, aged over 100. He was learned and popular, and practised till near 31, 1840, aged 73; a graduate of Dartmouth in temporary

VIGO, FRANCIS, colonel, a patriot worthy of remembrance, died in Knox county, Ind., March 22, 1836, aged upwards of 90. A native of Sardinia, he in early life emigrated : having amassed a fortune, he applied the whole of it to supply the starving army of Gen. George Rogers Clark at the west. For many years he in consequence lived in comparative indigence. At last two friends prosecuted his claims for him, and were allowed, just before his death, 30,000 dollars for money and supplies to the Virginia troops.

VINAL, WILLIAM, minister of Newport, R. I., died in 1781, aged 63. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1739, and was pastor from 1746 to 1768. Dr. Hopkins succeeded the next year. His predecessors were John Clarke, N.

Clapp, J. Gardner, and J. Helyer.

VINCENT, PHILIP, a minister in England, made a visit to this country in 1637, and published the true relation of the battle between the English and the Pequots, 1638. It is reprinted in the Massachusetts historical collections, vol. VI., third series. Jeseph Hunter's letter concerning it is in historical collections, 4th series, vol. I.

VINCENT, JOHN, captain, an Indian, died at Parkerstown, Vt., in Aug., 1810, aged 95. Born at Loretto, Canada, he had a command in the Cagnawaga tribe. He was present at Braddock's defeat. In the Revolutionary war he joined the Americans, believing the Great Spirit was with Washington, whom his young warriors could not hit, when Braddock was killed. He piloted our troops through Maine to Quebec. He was a Catholic, and kept a French bible, and was not negligent of daily worship. He was a pensioner of Vermont.

VINCENT, Louis, an Indian chief, was edueated at Moor's school and at Dartmouth college, where he was graduated in a class of four in 1781. In the preceding year Peter Pohquonnappeet, a Stockbridge Indian, was graduated. Vincent was one of the chiefs of the Hurons or Wyandots near Quebec. In his last years he was a schoolmaster. He died at Loretto, Canada, in May, 1825, aged about 65. His son, a grand chief, was then in England.

VINCENT, JOSEPH, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Salem, Mass., Nov., 1832, aged 96.

VINTON, JOHN R., major, was killed at the siege of Vera Cruz March 22, 1847, aged 46; a soldier, scholar, and Christian. Born in Providence, R. I., he served in the Florida war.

VINTON, ANNE ADAMS, relict of Josiah V., died in Braintree Dec. 18, 1851, aged 95; a descendant of John Alden, and a Christian.

VOSE, John, died in Atkinson, N. H., March 1790.

ed at

count

moirs.

a sol-

eding,

racut.

e was dy he er four ie was

d Mr.

s. Of a use-, 1821,

livision

in the

settle-

1. He 1635;

e died.

Iarvard

ants. —

of Cantreal in govern-

He con-

6, 1725.

igilance,

d by the ie of his

is object

hysician,

m Wales

e golden

ureh mil-

justice of

in 1719,

daughter

aduate of

vernor of

Delaware

of John, a

enn., and

ne settled

d a high

men, and

. Lit.

1 1806 he is Baptist of Smith's the medirepository; n favor of ed at Hal-

b

I

d

r

C

p

P A

ti

th C

su

of

bι

or 1 was H

1795. He was the son of Samuel of Bedford, estate, called Hopewell, in the northeast corner who was the son of Robert of Milton, Mass. The earlier ancestors were Henry and Thomas, and Robert, from Lancashire in 1633, who had a farm in that part of Dorchester which is now Milton. For twenty-one years he was the learned preceptor of Atkinson academy; then eleven years of Pembroke academy. As a senator and in other public trusts he was faithful; a friend of temperance and of Sunday schools; an exemplary Christian. He published a phi beta kappa oration, 1805; on 4th of July, 1809; on agriculture, 1813; a system of astronomy, 1827; and a compendium, 1832; original works. - N. H. Repository, July, 1846.

WABAN, an Indian, welcomed Mr. Eliot to his wigwam in Newton, Oct. 28, 1646, when he first preached to the Indians, and became an eminent Christian and a useful magistrate. Removing to a tract of three thousand acres in Natick, the Indians cultivated the land and were much civilized. He died in 1674, aged 70. One of his exhortations is preserved in Neal's history. As to his views of administering justice, it is said that, when asked by a younger justice, "When Indians get drunk and quarrel, what you do den?" He replied, "Hah! tie um all up, and whip um plaintiff, and whip um 'fendant, and whip um witness!" The following is the form of a warrant he issued: "You, you big constable, quick you catch um Jeremiah Offscow, strong you hold um, safe you bring um afore me. Waban, justice peace." This is similar to the warrant mentioned by Judge Davis: "I Hihoudi, you Peter Waterman, Jeremy Wicket: Quick you take him, fast you hold him, straight you bring him before me, Hihoudi." This simplification of legal writings rather exceeds the proposed improvements of modern reformers of law.

WADE, JOHN, first minister of South Berwick, Me., died in 1703, aged about 30. He graduated at Harvard in 1693, and was settled in 1702.

He was succeeded by J. Wise.

WADE, DAVID E., died at Cincinnati in 1842, aged 80. A native of New Jersey, he was one of the first settlers of C.; he helped to found the first church, of which he was forty years an elder, and lived to see fifty churches spring up in the fifty years of his residence at C.

WADE, RICHARD D. A., lieutenant-colonel of U. S. artillery, died in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1850. He fought in Florida and Mexico.

WADDELL, JAMES, D. D., the eloquent blind minister of Virginia, died Sept. 17, 1805, aged 66. Born in Ireland in 1739, he was educated by Dr. Finley in Pennsylvania; in 1762 he became pastor of Lancaster and Northumberland; in 1775 he removed to the church of Tinkling Spring in Augusta county, west side of the Blue Ridge, Va. His last removal was to an son of Capt. Samuel W., he was born at Milton, of Albemarle county, on the east side of the Blue Ridge, adjoining Orange and Louisa counties, Va. At this, his home, he died. He was a man of great learning and eloquence, arousing the deepest sympathies. For some years he was blind by cataracts. By couching he recovered the sight of one eye. His daughter, Janetta, who married Rev. Dr. Alexander, was accustomed to read Latin to him. In regard to his preaching, Mr. Wirt speaks of entering his old, decayed house of worship in the forest. Ho was struck with the appearance of a blind, tall, very spare old man, whose head, covered with a white linen cap, whose shriveled hands and voice, were all shaking under the influence of the palsy. His subject was the passion of the Saviour, and the sacrament was to be administered. As he descended from the pulpit to distribute the symbols, the bread and wine, there was a deep selemnity in his appearance. He then drew a picture of the sufferings of our Saviour; of his trial before Pilate, of his ascent to Calvary, of his crucifixion. and death. His voice trembled on every syliable, and every heart trembled in unison. He presented the original scene to the eyes of the assembly, and all were indignant. He touched upon the patience and the forgiving meekness of the Redcemer, and as he represented his eyes lifted in tears to heaven for man, and his voice breathing a prayer for the pardon of his murderers, the voice of the preacher, which had all along faltered, grew fainter and fainter, until, his utterance being completely broken, he raised his handkerchief to his eyes and burst into a loud and irresistible flood of grief. The groans and sobs of the congregation mingled in sympathy. When he was enabled to proceed, he broke the awful silence in a manner which did not impair the dignity and solemnity of the subject. Removing his white handkerchief from his aged face, wet with tears, and slowly stretching forth the palsied hand which held it, he said, adopting the words of Rousseau, " Bocrates died like a philosopher;" then pausing, raising his other hand, pressing both, as clasped together, with warmth and energy to his breast, lifting his sightless eye-balls to heaven, and pouring his soul into his tremulous voice, he added, "but Jesus Christ like a God!" - British Spy in Va.; Evan. Intel., March, 1808; N. Y. Spectator, Oct. 19, WADSWORTH, SAMUEL, captain, of Milton, was killed with Lieut. Sharp and twenty-six soldiers by the Indians at Sudbury, April 18, 1676. His son, President W., erected a monument in S. to his memory.

WADSWORTH, BENJAMIN, president of Harvard college, died March 16, 1737, aged 67; the and was graduated at Harvard in 1690, and was ordained minister of the first church in Boston, as colleague with Mr. Allen, Sept. 8, 1690. Here he continued till his election as the successor of President Leverett. Into this office he was inducted July 7, 1725, Mr. Foxeroft, his colleague, remaining in the church at Boston. His successor was President Holyoke. His learning was considerable, and he was most pious, humble, prudent, and a very pathetic and excellent preacher. A tenth part of his income he devoted to charitable uses. He published artillery election sermon, 1790; exhortations to early piety, 1702; three sermons, 1706; on the day of judgment, 1709; on assembling at the house of God, 1710; the well ordered family, 1712; five sermons; advice to the sick and well; explanation of assembly's catechism, 1714; invitation to the gospel feast in eleven sermons, 12mo.; saint's prayer to escape temptation; on the death of I. Addington, 1715; of President Leverett; election sermon, 1716; twelve sermous, 1717; zeal against flagrant wickedness; essay for spreading the gospel into ignorant places, 8vo., 1718; Christ's fan is in his hand; imitation of Christ a Christian duty, 1722; a dialogue on the Lord's supper, 1724; it is honorable not shameful to suffer, 1725; the benefits of a good and mischiefs of an evil eonscience, in fourteen sermons; none but the righteous saved. - Sprague.

WADSWORTH, DANIEL, minister of Hartford, Conn., died in 1747, aged about 41. He graduated at Yale in 1726, and succeeded T. Woodbridge in 1732. His successors were E.

Dorr, N. Strong, J. Hawes.

WADSWORTH, JEREMIAH, of Connecticut, commissary-general during the greater part of the Revolutionary war, died at Hartford in 1804, aged 60. He was a member of congress.

WADSWORTH, JAMES, general, died at Durham, Conn., in 1817, aged 88.

WADSWORTH, BENJAMIN, D. D., minister of Danvers, Mass., was born in Milton July 29, 1750; graduated at Harvard college in 1769; was ordained in 1773; and died in Jan., 1826, aged 75, in the fifty-fourth year of his ministry. He was eminently pious, and a prudent, faithful minister. He published a sermon at the ordination of J. Badeoek, 1783; at thanksgiving, 1795 and 1796; eulogy on Washington; at a dedication, 1807; before a society for suppressing intemperance, 1815; to bible society; at installation of M. Dow; on death of S. Holten, 1816.

WADSWORTH, PELEG, major-general, a soldier of the Revolution, died in Nov., 1829, aged about 80. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1769. In 1780 he was sent from Boston to command in the district of Maine. In Feb., 1781, a party of the enemy captured him in his Castine. From his prison in the fort he and Major Burton effected their escape in June, by most extraordinary efforts, crossed the Penolscot in a canoe, and travelled through the wilderness to St. Georges. Of his captivity and escape Dr. Dwight gives a long account in the second volume of his travels. For many years he was a member of congress from Cumberland district. He died at Hiram, Me. His son, Lient. Henry W., was blown up in a fire-ship in the harbor of Tripoli, with Capt. Somers, Midshipman Izard, and a few men, in Sept., 1801.

WADSWORTH, WILLIAM, general, died at Genesce, N. Y., in Feb., 1833; an early settler in western New York.

WADSWORTH, JAMES, died at Geneseo. N. Y., in 1844, aged 76. A native of Durham. Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1787. Associated with his brother, he purchased a large tract of land on the Genesec river, and thus became a man of great wealth, of which he made a generous use in promoting the diffusion of knowledge. He endowed the first normal school in the State of New York.

WADSWORTH, DANIEL, died in Hartford, Conn., July 28, 1848, aged nearly 77. He was the son of Col. Jeremiah II., the principal founder of the Wadsworth athenœum in Hartford. Ho also built a tower and country-seat on Talcott's mountain, which he left to the public. His picture gallery he gave to the city of Hartford. Though his property amounted to 300,000 dollars, he left nothing to any of the great charitable and religious societies. S. G. Goodrich says the elegant seat of Talcott's mountain is now occupied by a thriving manufacturer of axes. Ilis wife was a daughter of the second Gov. Trumbull. - Goodrich's Recollections.

WAGGAMAN, GEORGE A., died at New Orleans March 23, 1843, aged 53. He had been secretary of State and a senator of the United States; yet, if he may be justly termed a fool for being killed in a duel, what term may be applied to the ruler of a people who sacrifices one hundred thousand lives in a war not defensive and not needful?

WAGNER, JOHN, Dr., died at Charleston, S. C., in 1841, aged about 48. He graduated at Yale in 1812, and then studied medicine in New York, London, and Paris. He was an eminent surgeon. In 1829 he was a professor in the medical college, and in 1832 was appointed to the chair of surgery. Much suffering by disease was his lot in life. — Williams' Med. Biog.

WAINWRIGHT, ARTHUR, D. D., died at Pottsville, Penn., in 1839.

WAINWRIGHT, Dr., died in New York of the bite of a rattlesnake, Dec. 9, 1847, aged 36. He was the son of a banker in London, and had own house, and conveyed him to Bagaduce or been some years in extensive practice in New Ilis d the he dembols, emnity ure of before difixion. y sylinn. He of the ouched ness of is eves is voice nurderll along s uttersed bis a loud ins and

rner

Blue

. Va.

n of deep-

blind

sight

rried

read

ching.

cayed

struck

spare

linen

re all impair t. Reis aged g forth l, adoptled like is other er, with is sighthis soul it Jesus mpathy.

oke the

Oct. 19, f Milton, -six sol-18, 1676. ment in t of Har-67; the t Milton, York. The snake was received from a brotherin-law in Alabama; he was carelessly handled by the dector, his fangs entering between his fingers. The flesh near the wound was cut out, and several doctors lent their aid vainly. As his arm swelled, he begged an amputation, but it was refused. As he was near his end, the pain leaving his hand and arm, the ease creeping upward, he said: "This is horrible! to know that death is feeling his way to my vitals. That arm is dead already I and "- placing the other hand at his heart - "the destroyer will soon be HERE!" These words are fearfully monitory to the sinner. The religions character of Dr. W. is not known; but the dying sinner, impenitent and unbelieving, will have reason to lay his hand upon his heart and to cry out in auguish and horror, "The destrover will soon be here!"

; Evan.

WAINWRIGHT, JONATHAN MAYHEW, D. P., bishop in New York, died Sept. 21, 1854, aged 62. He was a grandson of J. Mayhew, and son of Peter W. of Boston. He graduated at Harward in 1812. His ministerial labors began in 1819 in Hartford. He was afterwards rector of Grace church in New York, and Trinity church in Boston. He became bishop in 1852. He published a sermon before the foreign missionary society of the Episcopal church, 1848.

WAITE, BENJAMIN, M. D., died at South Kingston, R. I., in 1811, aged 85. Besides being a skilful physician, he was forty-five years a Baptist minister in the town of his residence.

WAKELEY, ABEL, a soldier of the Revolution, died in Greenville, Greene county, N. Y., in 1850, aged 89. He was born in Roxbury, Conn. He served during the whole war, and was in the front rank in the storming of the redoubt at Yorktown. He was also a soldier of the Cross, for more than half a century a member of the church of which Beriah Hotchkin was the pastor.

— N. Y. Observer, April 27.

WALDO, SAMUEL, brigadier-general, died instantly of the apoplexy on the Penobscot, May 23, 1759, aged 63. He was the son of Jonathan W., a wealthy merchant of Boston, who died in 1731. There were in his life remarkable coincidences with the life of his friend, Sir William Pepperrell. They lived in Maine and were rich bachelors; they were councillors together; they commanded regiments and were together at Louisburg; they passed a year together in England; they were born the same year and died nearly at the same time. He lived, when in Maine, at Falmouth. He was an accomplished man, active and enterprising; and was a distinguished officer. He had crossed the ocean fifteen times. He was pointing out to Gov. Pownall the boundary of his land, when he fell dead. His daughter, Hannah, was for four years engaged to be married to Andrew Pepperrell, the son of Sir William, when through his fault she dissolved the engagement. In six weeks she married T. Fluker, secretary of Massachusetts; and her daughter married Gen. Knox, who was enabled to save and rescue much of the Waldo property from confiscation. Daughters of Knex married Mr. Swan, John Holmes and Judge Thacher. Audrew P. died unmarried in 1751, aged 28. His son, Col. Samuel, died in 1770, aged 49.—Parsons Pepperrell.

tl

e el

B

n

F

in

1 15

d

lo

WALDO, ALEIGERRY, Dr., of Pomfret, Conn., died in 1794, eged about 44. He was a skilful surgeon in the array. — Thacher's Ved. Biog.

WALDO, Dealet, aied at Morcester July 9, 1845, aged 82. His father was an eminent merchan. A Boston, but in the war removed in 1782 to Worcester. With him his son was a partner in business, and remained a merchant forty years. He was remarkable for justice, courtesy, and liberality. He left to Leicester academy a legacy of 6,000 dodlers, and other noble bequests.— Sweetzer's Serm.; Washburn's Leic. Academy.

WALDO, ELIZABETH, Miss, died at Worcester in Aug. or Sept., 1845. She bequeathed about 12,000 dollars to each of six societies, namely, the American bible; the foreign evangelical; the American Protestant; the colonization; the American bethel; and the Bangor theological seminary.

WALDO, SARAH, Miss, died in Boston, 1851. She bequeathed more than 50,000 dollars to various charitable societies and theological seminaries, and made the American home missionary society residuary legatee. — Boston Adver., April 5, 1851.

WALDRON, RICHARD, major, president of New Hampshire, was killed by the Indians, June 29, 1689, aged 80. He was an early settler of Dover, came from Somersetshire, England, about 1635, and began a plantation at Cocheco, or I)over, about 1640. From 1654 he was a representative to the general court at Boston twenty-two years, and several years the speaker of the house, and president, after Cutt, in 1681. He was chief military officer. In the war of 1676 two companies were sent to him from Massachusetts with orders to seize all Indians concerned in the war. There assembled at his buse four hundred Indians. The English ain wished to attack them, but Major W. substituted a stratagem in the place of an open attack. He proposed to the Indians a sham-fight, and after they had fired the first volley he made them all prisoners. Dismissing those whom he deemed friendly, he sent to Beston about two hundred, some of whom were hung, and the rest sold as slaves in foreign parts. This occurrence awakened in the savage breast the desire of revenge, which after thirteen years was gratified. The Indians adopted the following stratagem: To each of the garrisoned houses in Dever they sent two squaws to ask a lodging, for the purpose of opening the doors in the night to the assailants. June 29, 1689, the Indians thus entered Major Waldron's house, and made prisoner of the brave old soldier, who fought them with his sword in hand. Scating him in an elbow chair on a long table in the hall, they asked him, "Who shall judge Indians now?" and then horribly mangled and killed him. His descendants have been men of distinction.

WALDRON, WILLIAM, first minister of the new brick church in Boston, died of a fever in 1727, aged 30. He was the son of Richard of Portsmouth, and was graduated in 1717; was ordained in 1722. His wife was Eliza Allen of Martha's Vineyard; his daughter married Col. J.

Quiney. - Sprague's Annals.

WALES, JOHN, the first minister of Raynham, Mass., died in 1765, aged 65. Born in Braintree, he graduated at Harvard in 1728, and was succeeded by P. Fobes. He was a faithful and pathetic preacher; in public prayer he was almost unequalled in appropriate excellence. He was the father of Prof. Wales of Yale college.

WALES, SAMUEL, D. D., professor of divinity in Yale college, the son of the preceding, died Feb. 18, 1794, aged about 46. He graduated in 1767, and was the minister of Milford from 1770 to 1782. He succeeded Prof. Daggett June 12, 1782. His mind for two years was broken down by the epilepsy. He brought to the theological chair great abilities, a pure and energetic style, exemplary piety, and dignity and solemnity of manner. He published election sermon, 1783. — Sprague.

WALES, ATHERTON, minister of Marshfield, Mass., died in 1795, aged 92, in the fifty-seventh year of his ministry. Born in Braintree, he graduated at Harvard in 1726; and was settled as the first pastor of the second church in 1739. E. Leonard succeeded him. He was eminently pious and faithful.

WALES, JONATHAN, M. D., died at Randolph,

Mass., in 1843, aged 65.

WALES, THOMAS B., died in Boston June 15, 1853, aged 77. The son of Dr. Ephraim W. of Randolph, he graduated at Cambridge in 1795. His father graduated in 1768. He was a very successful and respected merchant.

WALES, HENRY, M. D., of Boston, died in 1856, aged about 36. He graduated in 1838, and he bequeathed his library, of about one thousand four hundred volumes of splendid books, to Harvard college.

WALKER, ZECHARIAH, first minister of Woodbury, Conn., died Jan. 20, 1700, aged 62. He was settled at W. in June, 1678. Born in Boston in 1637, he preached first at Jamaica, I. I., from 1663 to 1668; and then was installed, May was a learned man, a powerful preacher, of good travelled over the bleak hills of Berkshire with judgment, and much beloved. During his ministry one hundred and eight were admitted to the church. At S. there was an unhappy division between his friends and those of a rival preacher, Israel Channeey.

WALKER, ROBERT, judge of the supreme court of Connecticut, a descendant of Robert W., who lived in Boston in 1634, and of Zechariah, his son, the minister of Jamaica, L. I., and of Stratford and Woodbury, Conn., was graduated at Yale college in 1730, and died at Stratford in 1772. He was judge from 1760 to 1772, and was succeeded by W. S. Johnson. One of his daughters married Mr. Wetmore, minister of Stratford, and another John M. Breed, mayor of Norwich. His son, Gen. Joseph Walker of Stratford, died at Saratoga Aug. 11, 1810.

WALKER, TIMOTHY, first minister of Concord, N. H., died in 1782, aged 77. Born in Burlington, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1725, and was settled Nov. 18, 1730. He was nearly fifty-two years in the ministry. His successors were I. Evans, A. McFarland, N. Bouton.

WALKER, BENJAMIN, colonel, died at Utica in 1818. He was aid and friend of Baron Steuben. He generously scattered his wealth among the poor.

WALKER, TIMOTHY, judge, died May 5, 1822, aged 85. He was a patriot of the Revolution, the son of T. W., the minister of Concord, N. H. He graduated at Harvard college in 1756; and in 1776 was one of the committee of safety. He commanded a regiment of minutemen, and served a campaign at Winter Hill under Sullivan. For several years he was chief justice of the court of common pleas. His son, Charles, a lawyer, graduated at Harvard in 1789, and died in 1834; his grandson, Charles, graduated in 1818, and died in 1843 in New York.

WALKER, SAMUEL, minister of Danvers, died July 7, 1826, aged 47. A graduate of Dartmouth in 1802, he was ordained in 1805, and was faithful and useful and respected.

WALKER, WILLIAM, judge, resided in Berkshire county, Mass. In 1775 he was an officer in the army at Cambridge. For many years he was the judge of the county court and judge of probate. He died at Lenox in Nov., 1831, aged 80. In his politics he was a republican in the party times of 1801. He was tall, with white locks, of great personal dignity; Gov. Lincoln remarked, that he was the most venerable man he ever saw. He was indeed venerated by those who knew him, not only for a long life of faithful public service, but for his social virtues, his pure morals, his disinterested benevolence, and ardent piety. Of the church at Lenox he was an exemplary member; of the Berkshire bible society, 5, 1670, over the second church in Stratford. He president. In one of the last years of his life he Conn., skilful iog. r July minent oved in was a erchant e, courr acad-

noble

's Leic.

ment.

ary of

1 Gien

much

augh-

olmes

arried

died in

orcester d about namely, cal; the e Amerminary. n, 1851. s to vasemina-

ssionary

r., April dent of ns, June ettler of d, about , or Doepresenenty-two ie house, vas chief compaetts with the war. dred Ino attack tagem in ed to the fired the Dismiss-sent to om were ign parts. e breast en years following houses in lging, for the sole object of arousing his fellow-citizens in different towns to a sense of the value of some moral and charitable institution designed for their benefit.

WALKER, JACOB, a slave, a very remarkable man, twenty-seven years the pastor of a Baptist church, died at Augusta, Ga., May 26, 1846, aged 76. He was a slave till his death, having refused freedom, offered him by his people, lest he should be lifted above his flock. He was luved by his large communion of fourteen hundred persons, as few ministers have been loved. His people placed a marble tablet over his grave.

placed a marble tablet over his grave.

WALKER, Mrs., wife of William Walker, missionary in West Africa, died in April, 1849.
By her cheerful labors several persons were converted to God.

WALKER, JOSEPH, minister of Parls, Me., died in 1851, aged 59. He graduated at Bowduin in 1818.

WALKER, PEREZ, captain, died at Sturbridge, Mass., in 1851 or 1852, a philanthropist and christian. He was a benefactor of Amherst college; for years he sustained a missionary at the west. He bequeathed 1750 dollars to various societies.

WALKER, SEARS COOK, well-skilled in astronomy, died in 1853, aged about 48.

WALKER, CHARLES, M. D., a respectable physician of Northampton, Mass., died Jan. 17, 1855, aged 52. He graduated at Yale college in 1824.

aged 52. He graduated at Yale college in 1824. WALKER, TIMOTHY, LL. D., judge, died at Cincinnati Jan. 15, 1856, aged 53. A native of Wilmington, Mass., and descendant of William Brewster, he graduated in 1826. Having studied law, he settled in Cincinnati. In 1833, he with Judge Wright established a law school; but he resigned his professorship in 1844, from which time he was in full practice as a lawyer. He was an excellent teacher, a profound and learned jurist. In 1838 he gave a course of lectures on commercial law. He edited the Western law journal, and published introduction of American law. — Boston Adv., July 16, 1856, WALL, ARTHUR, died in Wake county, N. C., in 1840, aged 130, "or thereabouts."

WALL, GARRET D., judge, died at Burlington, N. J., in 1850, aged 67. He was chosen governor in 1829, but declined the appointment. From 1835 to 1841 he was a senator of the United States, succeeding Mr. Frelinghuysen. He was a judge of the court of errors and appeals.

WALLACE, Andrew, a soldier of the Revolution, died at New York in 1835, aged 105. Born in Scotland, he served in the army from 1776 to 1813.

WALLACE, JAMES, D. D., died in South Carolina Jan. 15, 1851. He was professor of mathematics in the S. C. college, as he had previously been in Columbia college, N. Y., and Georgetown college, D. C. He published a treatise on globes, and practical astronomy.

WALLACE, Horace B., of Philadelphia, killed himself in consequence of a disease of the brain, in Paris, in 1852, aged 35. He was the son of John B. Wallace, an eminent layer of Philadelphia. He graduated at Princeton in 1835. From his papers was published after his death a volume entitled, art, scenery, and philosophy in Europe, 1852.—Cycl. of. Amer. Lit.

WALLACE, MATTHEW G., died at Terre Haute in July, 1854, aged about 80; a Preshyterian minister nearly sixty years, one of the first in Cincinnati, a champion of the truth. 11

11

w ol

bu

fro

lis

die

tic sig

ed Pl

sc th

ct

ag fr

ai lis

be we as con a grant in

WALLCUTT, THOMAS, died at the McLean asylum, Boston, June 5, 1840, aged 82. In his last days he had epileptic fits. Born in Boston, he lived in the family and was educated in the school of Dr. Wheelock, of Hanover, and went a missionary to the St. Francis Indians. In the war he was a steward in the army. Being a fair penman, he long served at Boston as a clerk in the office of the secretary of State. He was secretary of the historical society and of the peace society. Having collected many books, he committed about eight hundred volumes to William Allen, who married a daughter of his friend President Wheelock, and by him they were presented to Bowdoin college. The remainder of his library he gave to the antiquarian and historical societies. — Boston Recorder, June 19.
WALLER, JOHN, died in South Carolina, July

WALLER, John, died in South Carolina, July 4, 1802, aged 62. Born in Virginia, he was ordained as a Baptist minister in 1770, and was very successful. In Virginia he baptized more than 2,000 persons and assisted in forming eighteen churches and ordaining twenty-seven ministers. For some years he was pastor over five churches; he counted 1500 church-members. In his persecutions he was five times imprisoned, in all one hundred and thirteen days.

WALLEY, THOMAS, minister of Barnstable, Mass., died March 24, 1670, aged 61. He was ejected from a parish in London in 1662, and in 1663 sought a refuge in America, and was settled in Barnstable. His prudence was the means of restoring the harmony of the church, which had been interrupted. He was an secomplished scholar and an eminent Christian, remarkable for humility. He published balm in Gilead to heal Zion's wounds, an election sermon in Plymouth, June 1, 1669.

WALLEY, John, a judge of the superior court of Massachusetts and a member of the council, died at Boston Jan. 11, 1712, aged 68. In the year 1690 he accompanied Sir W. Phipps in his unsuccessful expedition against Canada, being intrusted with the command of the land forces. He was one of the principal founders of the town and church of Bristol. The high trusts, reposed in h'm by his country, were discharged with ability and fidelity, and he exhibited an uncommon sweetners and candor of spirit and the various virtues of the Christian. His journal of the expedition to Canada is preserved in Hutchinson.

WALLEY, JOHN, minister of Ipswich, died in 1784, aged 68. He graduated at Harvard in 1734. He was ordained at Ipswich in 1747; installed at Bolton in 1773; and died at Roxbury. He was a faithful, diligent preacher, solicitous to bring the truth to the hearts of his hearers.

WALLEY, SAMUEL II., a worthy citizen of Boston, died at Burlington, Vt., in 1850. His wife was a daughter of Deacon William Phillips. His good deeds made him highly respected. He was the brother of Thomas, who became a Catholic and lived at Brookline, and died in 1848, aged 79. They were the sons of Thomas, and the fourth in descent from Rev. Thomas of Barnstable.

WALN, NICHOLAS, died in Philadelphia in 1813; formerly a distinguished member of the bar, latterly a preacher among the Friends.

WALN, ROBERT, JUN., a poet, was born in Philadelphia in 1794, and was liberally educated, but did not pursue any profession. On his return from a voyage to Canton as supercargo he published in 4to. numbers a history of China. He died July 4, 1825, aged 31. After the publication of the 3d volume of the biography of the signers of the declaration of independence, he edited that work. He published the hermit in Philadelphia, a satirical work, 1819; a second scries of do.; the American bards; touches at the times, with other poems, 1820; life of Lafayette, 1824. - Spec. Am. Poet., III. 213.

WALN, ROBERT, died at Philadelphia in 1836, aged 71; a merchant, and a member of congress from 1798 to 1801.

WALSH, MICHAEL, died at Amesbury, Mass., in 1840, aged 77. He was a native of Ireland, an eminent teacher and useful citizen. He published mercantile arithmetic.

WALTER, NEHEMIAH, minister of Roxbury, Mass., dicd Sept. 17, 1750, aged 86. He was born in Ircland in December, 1663. His father, who settled in Boston, brought him to this country as early as 1679; he was graduated at Harvard college in 1684. He soon afterwards went to Nova Scotia, and lived in a French family. Thus acquiring a correct knowledge of the French language, he was enabled in the latter periods of his life to preach to a society of French Protestants in Boston, in the absence of their pastor. After his return he pursued his studies for some time at Cambridge, where he was appointed a fellow of the college. He was ordained at Roxbury Oct. 17, 1688, as colleague with the apostolic Eliot. After a ministry of more than sixty-eight years he died in peace and hope. His wife was Sarah, of England. After his arrival in this country he daughter of Increase Mather. His daughter married G. Firmie. His ministry and that of Mr. Eliot occupied a space of near one hundred and twenty toars. He preached a few years after his settlement without notes, in the usual manner of the day; but, his memory having been impaired by a fit of sickness, he from that cause kept his notes before him. He was eminent in the gift of prayer. It was a maxim with him, that those religious principles might well be suspected which could not be introduced in an address to Heaven ; and he was pleased in observing that those, who in their preaching opposed the system of Calvin, were wont to pray in accordance with it. His whole life was devoted to the great objects of the Christian ministry. He presented a bright example of personal holiness. Mr. Whitefield, who saw him in 1740, calls him a good old Puritan, and says, "I had but little conversation with him, my stay was so short; but I remember he told me, he was glad to hear I said that man was half a devil and half a beast." In his own preaching it was the care of Mr. Walter to humble man, and to exalt the grace of God. He published the body of death anatomized, an essay on indwelling sin, 12mo., 1707; on vain thoughts; the great concern of man; the wonderfulness of Christ; the holiness of heaven, 1713; a convention sermon, 1723; unfruitful hearers detected and warned, 1754; a posthumous volume of sermon on the 55th chapter of Isaiah, with his life, 8vo., 1755. - Sprague.

WALTER, THOMAS, minister of Roxbury, Mass., the son of the preceding, was born in 1696, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1713. He was ordained a colleague with his father Oct. 29, 1718, but died Jan. 10, 1725, aged 28. He was one of the most distinguished scholars and acutest disputants of his day. He was a champion of the doctrines of grace. In his last illness he was for some time very anxious for the salvation of his soul, as the follies of his youth were fresh in his view; but at length his apprehensions were removed. He said, "I shall be a most glorious instance of sovereign grace in all heaven." He published a sermon at the lecture for promoting good singing, 1722; the Scriptures the only rule of faith and practice, 1723; and two other sermons. - Sprague.

WALTER, NATHANIEL, minister of the second church in Roxbury, died in 1776, aged about 67. The son of Rev. Thomas, he graduated at Harvard in 1729, and was ordained in 1734. He was the father of Rev. William; and his daughter Rebecca married Rev. M. Byles, jun., and Maria married Gen. Joseph Otis, of Barnstable. He succeeded E. Thayer, and was succeeded by Abbot, Bradford, Flagg, and Whiting.

WALTER, THOMAS, a botanist, was a native ops in his

e council, . In the e on lphia,

of the

ie son

Phila-

1835.

hy in

Terre

resby-

e first

leLean

In his

loston.

in the

went a

In the

a fair

lerk in

Ie was ie peace

e com-

William

friend

ere pre-

nder of

l histor-

na, July

was or-

and was

ed more

ig eigh-

en min-

over five

nembers.

orisoned,

rnstable,

He was

2, and in

as settled

neans of hich had mplished

kable for

I to heal

lymouth,

rior court

9.

, being inid forces. f the town s, reposed became a planter a few miles from Charleston in | pelier, Vt., in 1855, aged 66; editor of the Ver-South Carolina, and died towards the close of mont Watchman. the last century. He published flora Caroliniana, 1788.

'VALTER, WILLIAM, D. D., died in Boston Dec. 5, 1800. He was the son of Thomas W., by Rebecca, a daughter of Rev. Joseph Belcher. Born in 1737, he graduated at Harvard in 1756. He was rector of Trinity church from 1764 to 1776, and rector of Christ's church in 1702. He was the grandson of Rev. Nathaniel W., of Roxbury, and the father of Lynde and William W., merchants of Boston.

WALTER, WILLIAM BICKER, a poet, was born in Boston; the only son of William, a merchant, and grandson of the Rev. William, D. D.; graduated at Bowdoin college in 1818; and died in Charleston S. C., April 23, 1823, aged 27. He published Sukey, a poem, 1821; a volume of poems, 1821-Spec. Am. Poet. II., 161.

WALTERS, DANIEL D., doctor, a physician in extensive practice in New York, died in 1824, aged 51. He published a diary concerning the yellow fever in 1822. This fever, he maintained, originated in a specific poison brought from abroad. His family belonged to the society of Friends: he confided for religious teachings in Barclay's books. Williams' Med. Biog.

WALTON, WILLIAM, first minister of Marblenead, died about 1668. He came from England in 1637, and was succeeded by S. Cheever.

WALTON, GEORGE, colonel, governor of Georgia, died Feb. 4, 1804, aged 63. He was the only son of William, and a patriot of the Revolution; was born in Frederick county, Va., in 1740, and was early apprenticed to a carpenter, whose economy would not allow his young apprentice a candle to read at night. In his zeal for knowledge he found a substitute in pine knots. In 1774 he commenced the practice of the law in Georgia. Being from Feb., 1776, till Oct., 1781, a member of congress, he signed the declaration of independence. With a colonel's commission in the militia he assisted in the defence of Savannah in Dec., 1778, and was wounded in the thigh, and kept a prisoner till Sept., 1779. In the next month he was chosen governor; and again in 1789. He was also a senator of the United States, and for fifteen years a judge of the superior court. To such eminence did this self-taught man rise by the force of his talents, his industry, and the favor of Providence. In his last years he suffered from the gout. - Goodrich.

WALTON, JOSEPH, minister in Portsmouth, third church, died in 1822, aged 80. Born in Newcastle, he was settled in 1789.

WALTON, WILLIAM C., pastor of a free church in Hartford, Conn., died in 1834, aged 40.

P

ti

h

h

n

m es

in

G

aı

la

di

in

al

a

at di br

di

rie

th

th

0

ΙĮ

re the man with for right to a fill an till it man se

fi

WAMPUS, JOHN, an Indian sachem, was one of the native owners of the town of Sutton, Mass. His sale of the land was confirmed to the purchasers in 1704.

WAPLES, SAMUEL, captain, an officer of the Revolutionary army, died in Accomac county, Va., in 1834, aged 60.

WARD, NATHANIEL, first minister of Ipswich, Mass., died in 1653, aged about 83. He was born in Haverhill, England, in 1570, the son of John W., a minister of the established church. He was educated at the university of Cambridge. Being settled in the ministry at Standon in Hertfordshire, he was ordered before the bishop, Dec. 12, 1631, to answer for his noncomformity; and, refusing to comply with the requisitions of the church, he was at length forbidden to continue in the exercise of his elerical office. In April, 1634, he left his native country, and arrived in New England in June. He was soon settled as pastor of the church at Agawam or Ipswich. In 1635 he received Mr. Norton as his colleague; but in the following year he was by his own request released from his engagement as a minister, and Nathaniel Rogers was settled in his place. In 1641 he was chosen by the freemen without the consent of the magistrates to preach the election sermon. In Dec. of the same year the general court established one hundred laws, called "the body of liberties," which were drawn up by Mr. Ward in 1639, and had been committed to the governor and others for consideration. In 1647 he returned to England, and soon after his arrival published a work entitled, "the simple cobbler of Aggawam in America," which was written during the civil wars of Charles I., and designed to encourage the opposers of the king, and the enemies of the established church. He resumed his profession, and in 1648 was settled at Shenfield in Essex, where he remained till his death. He was a man of great humor. Besides his simple cobbler at Aggawam, which was printed at London in 4to. and at Boston 1713, and which is a curious specimen of his wit and the vigor of his mind, he published several other humorous works; but they are now forgotten, excepting a trifling satire upon the preachers in London, entitled, Mercurius antimecharius, or the simple cobbler's boy with his lap full of caveats, etc. 1647. — Sprague.

WARD, James, doctor, the son of Nathaniel W., went with him to England and became a physician. He graduated at Harvard in 1645.

WARD, JOHN, first minister of Haverhill, Mass., died Dec. 27, 1693, aged 87. The son Hartford, Conn., died in 1834, aged 40.

WALTON, EZEKIEL P., general, died at MontNov. 5, 1606. He came to this country in 1639, preached for some time at Agamenticus, but in him in business. The fatal spotted fever of 1823, 1641 was settled at leaverhill. Here he continued and after, demanded of him much labor and fatill his death. About a month before this event he preached an excellent sermon. His firm health in his advanced age was owing to his temperance in eating, drinking, sleeping, and to his much exercise. He sometimes walked thirty miles without any difficulty. He was very modest and diffident; plain in his dress and prudent in his whole conduct. He was a physician as well as a minister. His successors were Rolf, Gardner, Brown, Barnard, Shaw, Abbot, Dodge, and Phelps. - Sprague's Annals.

WARD, SAMUEL, doctor, died in Greenwich. N. J., Feb. 17, 1774. He was a man of benevolence, and venerable for his religion.

WARD, SAMUEL, governor of Rhode Island, died March 26, 1776. He was chosen governor in 1762, and again in 1765 and in 1766. also chief justice of the supreme court. He was a member of the first congress in 1774. attending his duty as a member of this body, he died at Philadelphia of the small pox. brother, Henry W., a patriot of the Revolution, died in Dec., 1797. He was not only a firm patriot, but a sincere Christian, a devout attendant on the Lord's supper, and a useful member of the church with which he was connected.

WARD, ARTEMAS, the first major-general in the American army, died at Shrewsbury, Mass., Oct. 28, 1800, aged 73. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1748, and was afterwards a representative in the legislature, a member of the council, and a justice of the court of common pleas for Worcester county. When the war commenced with Great Britain, he was appointed by congress first major-general, June 17, 1775. After the arrival of Washington in July, when a disposition was to be made of the troops for the siege of Boston, the command of the right wing of the army at Roxbury was intrusted to him. He resigned his commission in April, 1776, though he continued some time longer in command, at the request of Washington. afterwards devoted himself to the duties of civil life. He was a member of congress both before and after the adoption of the present constitution. He had a long decline, in which he exhibited the most exemplary patience. He was a man of incorruptible integrity. His life presented the virtues of the Christian.

WARD, EPHRAIM, minister of West Brookfield, died in 1818, aged 77; highly respected. He was a native of Newton, a graduate of Harvard in 1763, and was settled in 1771 over the church of the then first parish of Brookfield.

He published several sermons.

WARD, JOSIAH M., Dr., died in Berlin, Conn., in 1825, aged 43. Born in Guilford, he studied medicine with Dr. Percival of B., and succeeded in 1836, aged 100.

tigue. Some of his own children died in 1825, and in that year he followed them. - Thucher.

WARD, SAMUEL, colonel, died at New York Aug. 16, 1832, aged 75. The son of Gov. Ward of Rhode Island, he graduated in 1771, in the third class of Brown university. In 1774 he was enrolled in the patriot company of the Kentish guards. As a captain he was in the camp at Cambridge in 1775, and accompanied Arnold through the wilderness of Maine to Quehee. He was made prisoner, but exchanged. As a major in Greene's regiment he fought at Red Bank fort, and served bravely during the whole war. His military operations were then exchanged for those of the merchant. He made a voyage from Providence to Canton in 1783, and then established himself in business in the city of New York. His affairs carried him to Europe. On his return he settled on a farm at East Greenwich, R. I., where he lived to see his children educated to usefulness. At last, to be near his children, who were in business in New York, he removed to Jamaica, L. I. Here he lived as a patriarch until it pleased God to remove him from the earth. His wife was a daughter of Gov. William Greene of Rhode Island, and thus he was again connected, as he had been before by military services, with the soldiers of that name.

WARD, SAMUEL, died in New York Nov. 27, 1839, aged 53; president of the bank of commerce. He was the head of the banking-house of Prime, Ward, and King. He had intelligence, a sound judgment, and integrity; and was a man of strong religious feelings, zealous to promote the objects of benevolence.

WARD, NATHANIEL, died in Irwington, Ga., in 1840, aged 08. He was a Virginian, and served several campaigns under Washington; a poor man, but nobly patriotic.

WARD, John, died in St. John's, New Brunswick, Aug. 5, 1846, aged 92; the father of the city. Born in Westchester, he was a tory and soldier: in 1783 he embarked with his regiment of loyal Americans for New Brunswick, where he held various offices and lived in high esteem.

WARD, ARTEMAS, LL. D., died at Boston Oct. 7, 1847, aged 84, chief justice of the court of common pleas. He was a graduate of Harvard in 1783, a member of congress in 1815, and was appointed a judge in 1821, holding his place nincteen years. Of learning and courtesy, he was respected on the bench and esteemed in domestic and social life.

WARD, SAMUEL, governor of Rhode Island, died in Jan., 1851; a supporter of law during the Dorr rebellion.

WARDEN, JOHN, died in New Scotland, N. Y., one fass. pur-

f the

Ver-

. Vn., wich, e was on of urch. ridge. Hert-. Dec. and.

f the ntinuo April, red in led as h. In ague; wn renister, place. ithout h the ar the

, called up by tted to n. In fter his simple h was I., and king, a. IIe settled till his

Besides printed l which igor of morous

London, simple its, etc. thaniel pting a

came a 1645. ıverhill, he son Ingland

in 1639,

WARDEN, DAVID H., U. S. consul at Paris, travelled a year in Europe. On his return he died in that city in 1845; a man of scientific and literary acquirements. A native of Ireland, he was consul and secretary of legation to France for forty years before his death. He published account of the United States, 3 vols., 1819; the same in French at Paris; on consular establishments, 1813; the same in French; bibliotheca Americana, collection of books relating to N. A., 1831; and bib. Americo-sept., Paris, 1820. -Goodrich's Recollections.

WARDWELL, DANIEL, M. D., died at Andover, Mass., April 14, 1851, aged 67. He enjoyed an extensive practice and was much beloved. WARE, HENRY, D. D., Hellis professor of theology at Harvard college, died at Cambridge July 12, 1845, aged 81. He was born at Sherbern April 1, 1764, and was of the fifth generation from Robert Ware, who lived in Dedham from 1642 to 1690. The intervening ancestors after Robert, were John, Joseph, and John. His brother, Joseph Ware, a farmer, was the father of Judge Ashur Ware of Maine. He graduated in 1785, and was ordained at Hingham as successor of Dr. Gay Oct. 24, 1787. He became professor in 1805, as successor of Dr. Tappan, and remained in office till 1840. His first wife was Mary, daughter of Rev. Jonas Clarke of Lexington: his second, married in 1807, was Mary, daughter of James Otis and widow of Benjamin Lincoln, jun. ; his third wife, married Scpt., 1807, was Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Bowes. Of his daughters, Lucy Clark married Rev. Joseph Allen, D. D., of Northborough; Harriet, by his third wife, married Rev. Edward B. Hall, D. D., of Providence; Elizabeth Ann married Rev. George Putnam, D. D., of Roxbury; and Caroline Rehecca married Edward Warren, M. D., of Newton. His children, the offspring of two wives, were nineteen in number. Of his sons were Rev. Henry and Rev. William, John, M. D., Charles Eliot, M. D., George Frederic, Thornton Kirkland. In 1839, at a family meeting, fifty of his descendants were present. In his last years he was nearly blind. On his appointment as professor of divinity, a warm controversy sprung up on the propriety of placing a Unitarian in that office. Dr. Morse was one of the writers on the occasion. Dr. Ware published letters to Trinitarians and Calvinists, and other tracts in answer to Dr. Woods; lectures on the evidences and doctrines of Christianity.

WARE, HENRY, junior, D. D., died in Framingham, Mass., Sept. 22, 1843, aged 49. He was born in Hingham in 1793, the son of Rev. Dr. W., and graduated at Harvard in 1812. Jan. 1, 1817, he was ordained pastor of the second ehurch in Boston, as successor of Dr. J. Lathrop. After thirteen years he was dismissed, and his retreat to Manchester. Called to the aid of R. W. Emerson was his successor. He then Stark Aug. 16, 1777, he arrived in season to meet was profer, of of pulpit eloquence in the divinity school, Cambringe. At last he had long infirmities and illness.

and

thu

ton

Gat

177

Wo

cati

whi

in s able

of s

die

dre

flov

by

the wid

had

Rol

He ren

em

lan

day

cha

nej

the

Λm

17, anc

Hi

san

a fi

as lad

em

17-17-fev cia

wi wa ing

ad tic an be for ye in th A WARE, WILLIAM, minister in New York, dled at Cambridge Feb. 19, 1852, aged 54. The son of Rev. Prof. Ware, he graduated at Harvard in 1816, and was pastor of the Unitarian church in New York from 1821 to 1836. He was then a minister at West Cambridge from 1843 to 1845. He travelled in Europe. He delivered various lectures. He published Zenobia: Probus: letters from Palmyra.

WARHAM, John, first minister of Windsor, Conn., died April 1, 1670. He was an eminent minister in Exeter, England, before he came to this country. Having taken the charge of a church which was gathered at Plymouth, consisting of persons about to emigrate to America, he accompanied them as teacher and Mr. Maverick as pastor. They arrived at Nantasket May 30, 1630, and in June began a settlement at Dorchester. In 1635 this church removed and settled at Windsor. Mr. Maverick, while preparing to follow them, died Feb. 3, 1636; but Mr. W. joined them in Sept. Here he continued about thirty-four years till his death. Though he was distinguished for plety and the strictest merals, yet he was sometimes the prey of religious melancholy. He was known to administer the Lord's supper to his brethren, while he did not participate with them, through apprehension that the seals of the new covenant did not belong to him. It is supposed that he was the first minister in New England who used notes in preaching ; yet he was animated and energetic in his manner. - Mather's Magnalia, III. 121; Sprague.

WARNER, SETH, colonel, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Woodbury, Conn., in 1785, aged 41. He was born in Woodbury about 1744, In 1773 he removed to Bennington, Vt., where he became an indefatigable hunter. In the controversy with New York he and Ethan Allen were the leaders of the people. New York passed an act of outlawry against him March 9, 1774. At the head of troops which he raised, he marched with Allen to capture Ticonderoga in 1775. Receiving a commission from congress he also raised a regiment and joined Montgomery in Canada; but on the approach of winter his mon were discharged. After the death of Montgomery he raised another body of troops in 1776 and marched to Quebec. He covered the retreat to Ticonderoga. Forced to ahandon that post, July 6, 1777, the enemy evertook him at Hubbardton July 7, and attacked the three regiments of Hale, Francis, and Warner. Francis fell; Hale surrendered with his regiment; but Warner made good and defeat the reinforcement of the enemy, and orator of the town on the anniversary of the thus to participate in the renown of the Benning-He then joined the army under Gates. In vain did the New York convention in 1777 solicit congress to revoke his commission. Worn down by his toils, he sunk under a complication of disorders, and died at Woodbury, whither he had removed his family. Vermont, in gratitude to this brave soldier, granted a valuable tract of land to his widow and children.

WARNER, AUGUSTUS L., M. D., professor of surgery in Hampden Sidney college, Virginia, died in 1847.

WARREN, RICHARD, one of the one hundred pilgrims who came to Plymouth in the Mayflower in 1620. His name, in the compact signed by the company, is one of the ten names having the title of Mr. prefixed. He died in 1628; his widow, Elizabeth, died in 1673, aged 90. They had two sons and five daughters. Mary married Robert Bartlett of Duxbury, who came in 1623. Her brother Benjamin's daughter, Rebecca Warren, married William Bradford in 1679.

WARREN, PETER, Sir, commodore, long employed on the coast of America, died in England in 1752. He cooperated with Pepperrell in the capture of Louisburg. His wife was Susan, daughter of J. Delancy of New York. He purchased lands on the Mohawk, and invited his nephew, William Johnson, to take charge of them. - Parsons' Life of Pepperrell.

WARREN, JOSEPH, a major-general in the American army, was killed at Bunker's Hill June 17, 1775, agod 35. He was descended from an ancestor who was an early settler of Boston. His mother's name was Stevens, whose sister Susanna married John Sumner. His father, Joseph, a farmer in Roxbury, Mass., was killed in 1755, as he was gathering apples, by falling from the ladder: he was a worthy, respected man, an exemplary Christian. He was born at Roxbury in 1740, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1759. Having studied under Dr. Lloyd, he in a few years became one of the most eminent physicians in Boston. But he lived at a period when greater objects claimed his attention than those which related particularly to his profession. He was a bold politician. While many were wavering with regard to the measures which should be adopted, he contended that every kind of taxation, whether external or internal, was tyranny, and ought immediately to be resisted; and he believed that America was able to withstand any force that could be sent against her. From the year 1768 he was a principal member of a secret meeting or caucus in Boston, which had great influence on the concerns of the country. In this assembly the plans of defence were matured. After the destruction of the tea, it was no longer lept secret. He was twice chosen the public years speaker of the house of representatives.

mussacre, and his orations breathe the energy of a great and daring mind. It was he who on the evening before the battle of Lexington, obtained information of the intended expedition again t Concord, and at ten o'clock at night disputched an express to Hancock and Adams, who were at Lexington, to warn them of their danger. He himself, on the next day, the memorable 19th of April, was very active. After the departure of Hancock to congress, he was chosen president of the provincial congress in his place. Four days previous to the battle of Bunker's or Breed's Hill he received his commission of major-general, When the intrenchments were made upon the fatal spot, to encourage the men within the lines, he went down from Cambridge and joined them as a volunteer on the eventful day of the battle, June 17. Just as the retreat commenced, a hall struck him on the head, and he died in the trenches. He was the first victim of rank that fell in the struggle with Great Britain. In the spring of 1776 his bones were taken up and entombed in Boston. Congress made provision for the education of his four children. With warm zeal he was yet judicious in council, and candid and generous towards those who had different sentiments respecting the controversy. His mind was vigorous, his disposition humane, and his manners affable and engaging. In his integrity and patriotism entire confidence was placed. To the most undaunted bravery he added the virtues of domestic life, the eloquence of an accomplished orator, and the wisdom of an able statesman. He published orations in 1772 and in 1775, commemorative of the 5th of March, 1770,

WARREN, JAMES, a patriot of the Revolution. died at Plymouth Nov. 17, 1808, aged 82. He was descended from Richard W., one of the first settlers of Plymouth in 1620, and was born in the year 1726. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1745. Directing his attention to commercial affairs, he was for many years a respectable merchant. About the year 1757 his father died and left him a handsome patrimonial estate. which had descended from Richard W. He was at this time appointed a high sheriff, as successor of his father, and he retained this office till the commencement of the war, notwithstanding the active part which he took in opposing the measures of the British ministry. In May, 1766, he was chosen a member of the general court from Plymouth, and he uniformly supported the rights of his country. The government, who knew his abilities and feared his opposition, tried the influence of promises and threats upon him; but his integrity was not to be corrupted. In 1773 his proposal for establishing committees of correspondence was generally adopted. He was for many arious letters ndsor. ninent me to of a onsistica, he averiek lay 30, t Dord setoreparn he vinity

firmi-

, died

e son

ard in reh in hen a

18-15.

ut Mr. tinued ugh he st mereligious ter the did not on that long to t minisaching; nanner.

of the 1785, it 1744. , where he conen were ssed an 74. At arched 5. Reo raised anada ; ere disaery he 76 and treat to st, July bardton of Hale, surren-

de good

e aid of

to meet

Preferring an active station, in which he could of his country. He delivered various public oraserve his country, he refused the office of lieutenant-governor, and that of judge of the supreme court, but accepted a seat at the navy board, the duties of which were very arduous. At the close of the war he retired from public employments to enjoy domestic ease and leisure. Amidst public cares, which demanded his abilities and much occupied him, he never neglected the more humble duties of domestic life, or the more exalted claims of religion.

WARREN, MERCY, an historian, wife of the preceding, the daughter of James Otis of Barnstable, was born in 1727, and died at Plymouth in Oct., 1814, aged 87. Before the Revolution she wrote some political pieces. She published poems, dramatic and miscellaneous, 1790; a history of the American Revolution, 3 vols. 8vo., 1805.

- Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

WARREN, JOHN, M. D., a physician, died in Boston April 4, 1815, aged 61. He was brother of Gen. Joseph W.; was born in Roxbury July 27, 1753; and graduated at Harvard college in 1771. Being settled in the practice of physic at Salem, he marched as surgeon to the scene of battle at Lexington. He was soon appointed hospital surgeon; other Massachusetts surgeons in the war were Foster, Eustis, Adams, Townsend, Hart, Fiske, and Bartlett. In 1772 he followed the army to Long Island and New Jersey. In 1777 he was intrusted with the military hospitals of Boston, in which post he remained during the war. In 1780 he gave a course of dissections; and in 1783 he was appointed a professor of anatomy and surgery in the medical school of Cambridge. In 1796 he indorsed the notes of a medical friend, who had purchased lands in Maine, and in consequence of his failure was obliged to pay for and receive the lands, which caused him immense vexation and great loss of property. For years he was subject to an organic disease of the heart, but he died of an inflammation of the lungs. His wife was a daughter of Gov. Collins; his son, Dr. John Collins W., succeeded him as professor of anatomy and surgery. He was the most eminent man in New England, unless Dr. Nathan Smith might be considered as equally skilful. As an eloquent anatomical lecturer he was unequalled. For industry and temperance he was remarkable. Firmly believing the Christian religion, he was not regardless of its duties. He attended on the Sabbath public worship, and was careful to instruct his family in religious worship. He had himself been instructed by a pious mother. At times he was subject to great depression of spirits, the consequence of afflictions; so that he lost the wish to live to old age. He was liberal, generous, charitable in pri- the English family. He published a work on vate life, and a disinterested, enlightened friend the mastodon of this country and the gencaltions and addresses. - Thacher II. 254-271.

WARREN, EDWARD, a missionary to Ceylon, was born in 1786; graduated at Middlebury college in 1838; and studied theology at Andover. He sailed for Ceylon in Oct., 1812. After a residence of some years, falling into consumption, he for his health sailed with Mr. Richards in April for Cape Town, where he died Aug. 11, 1818, aged 32. Archdeacon Twistleton said of him and Mr. R., " Men of more amiable manners and purer lives I never saw."

WARREN, Moses, minister in Wilbraham. Mass., died in 1831, aged about 68. Born in Upton, he graduated at Harvard in 1784, and was pastor of the south parish from 1788 to 1829.

WARREN, Isaac, died in Charlestown March 19, 1834, aged 76. He liberally endowed Warren academy in Woburn, and was a benefactor of Middlebury college.

WARREN, SAMUEL, colonel, died in Pendleton, S. C., in 1841, aged 80. He was a Revolutionary officer, and a legislator, a man of a high

WARREN, DELIVERANCE, Mrs., died in Readfield, N. Y., in Jan., 1843, aged 104 years and 8 months. She had been a member of the Baptist church more than 80 years.

WARREN, MARY, Mrs., died in 1851, aged

WARREN, SILAS, a useful teacher, died in Jackson, Me., Jan. 7, 1856, aged 88. Born in Weston, he graduated in 1795, and from 1812 was ten years the minister of Jackson. The remainder of his life he spent on a farm and in teaching. - Boston Adv., July 16, 1856.

WARREN, JOHN COLLINS, M. D., died in Boston May 4, 1856, aged 77, the son of Dr. John W., and a graduate of 1797. His mother was the daughter of Gov. Collins of R. I. After studying physic he spent several years in the hospitals of London and Paris. He was the eminent professor of anatomy and surgery at Cambridge nearly forty years; and president of the Boston society of natural history, and a member of many learned societies. He and his friend Dr. James Jackson originated the general hospital and McLean asylum. Six children survived him, by his first wife, Susan, a daughter of Jonathan Mason; his second wife, Anna, daughter of T. L. Winthrop, died in 1850. The remains of his uncle, Gen. Warren, he placed in a stone urn, in whose skull was visible the hole made by the fatal ball. He published a book on the family of the De Warrens, etc., at the expense of 4,000 or 5,000 dollars; but unluckily, as Mr. Savage remarked, he did not prove the connection with

ogy of paper tiser, WZ

navy, was a Willia navy i war w was ar

WA Mass., the acc his son Vermo Washl WA ton, Co and wa induce climate from N his bo cessor cditors volume death, WAS

of the

Britain

died at

67. H ton, and Westm grandfa Sulgrav land, al years . estate Washir engage In hon ed the estate of 15, well as the Bri vessel ginia, reading timid him to and we to be t This 1 her h dren r of wis

conten

sank

ogy of Warren, 1854; and also contributed many ! papers to the Mass. med. society .- Boston Advertiser, July 16, 1856.

WARRINGTON, LEWIS, a captain in the navy, died at Washington in 1851, aged 68. He was a native of Williamsburg, Va., educated at William and Mary college; and he entered the navy in Jan., 1800, and was distinguished in the war with Tripoli, and with England in 1812. He was amiable, and of a modesty which won esteem.

WASHBURN, SETH, colonel, died at Leicester, Mass., in 1793, aged 70; one of the founders of the academy. He fought at Bunker Hill. Among his sons were, it is believed, Judges Reuben of Vermont and Ebenezer of Alabama, and Gov. E. Washburn of Woreester.

WASHBURN, JOSEPH, minister of Farmington, Conn., was graduated at Yale college in 1793, and was ordained in 1795. His declining health induced him in 1805 to seek a more southern climate. While on his passage with his wife from Norfolk to Charleston, he died Dec. 25, and his body was deposited in the ocean. His successor was Noah Porter. He was one of the editors of the Connecticut evang. magazine. volume of his sermons was published after his death, in 12mo.

n, 'Y r. .

n,

m

m.

in vas

rch

กร-

of

dle-

olu-

iigh

ead-

and ₿որnged

d in

rn in 1812 e red in

ed in

John

r was

After

a thể

s the

ry at ent of

mem-

friend

d hos-

rvived

Jona-laugh-

mains

stone

ade by e fum-

f4,000

Savage

n with ork on geneal-

WASHINGTON, GEORGE, commander-in-chief of the American army during the war with Great Britain, and first president of the United States. died at Mount Vernon, Va., Dec. 14, 1799, aged 67. He was the third son of Augustine Washington, and was born at Bridges creek, in the county of Westmoreland, Va., Feb. 22, 1732. His great grandfather had emigrated to that place from Sulgrave, Northamptonshire, the north of England, about the year 1657. At the age of ten years he lost his father, and the patrimonial estate descended to his elder brother, Lawrence Washington, who in the year 1740 had been enengaged in the expedition against Carthagena. In honor of the British admiral, who commanded the fleet employed in that enterprise, the estate was called Mount Vernon. At the age of 15, agreeably to the wishes of his brother, as well as to his own urgent request to enter into the British navy, the place of midshipman in a vessel of war, then stationed on the coast of Virginia, was obtained for him. Every thing was in readiness for his departure, when the fears of a timid and affectionate mother prevailed upon him to abandon his proposed career on the ocean, and were the means of rotaining him upon the land to be the future vindicator of his country's rights. This mother had not ceased, since the death of her husband, to gather her little flock of children round her daily, and to read to them lessons of wisdom, usually from Sir Matthew Hole's contemplations, - the excellent maxims of which mother he ever preserved with care. All the advantages of education, which he enjoyed, were derived from a private tutor, who instructed him in English literature and the general principles of science, as well as in morality and religion. After his disappointment with regard to entering the navy, he devoted much of his time to the study of the mathematics; and in the practice of his profession as a surveyor, he had an opportunity of acquiring that information respecting the value of vacant lands, which afterwards greatly contributed to the increase of his private fortune. At the age of 19, when the militia of Virginia were to be trained for actual service, he was appointed adjutant-general with the rank of major. It was for a very short time that he discharged the duties of this office. In the year 1753 the plan formed by France, for connecting Canada with Louisiana by a line of posts, and thus of inclosing the British colonies, and of establishing her influence over the numerous tribes of Indians on the frontiers, began to be developed. In the prosecution of this design possession had been taken of a tract of land then believed to be within the province of Virginia. Mr. Dinwiddie, the lieutenant-go vernor, being determined to remonstrate against the supposed encroachment and violation of the treaties between the two countries, dispatched Vajor Washington through the wilderness to the Ohio, to deliver a letter to the commanding officer of the French, and also to explore the country. This trust of danger and fatigue he executed with great ability. He left Williamsburg Oct. 31, 1753, - the very day on which he received his commission, - and at the frontier settlement of the English engaged guides to conduct him over the Alleghany mountains, After passing them, he pursued his route to the Monongahela, examining the country with a military eye, and taking the most judicious means for securing the friendship of the Indians. He selected the forks of the Monongahela and Alleghany rivers, as a position which ought to be immediately possessed and fortified. At this place the French very soon creeted fort du Quesne, which fell into the hands of the English in 1758 and was called by them fort Pitt. Pursuing his way up the Alleghany to French creek, he found at a fort upon this stream the commanding officer, to whom he delivered the letter from Mr. Dinwiddie. On his return he encountered great difficulties and dangers. As the snow was deep and the horses weak from fatigue, he left his attendants at the mouth of French creek, and set out on foot, with his papers and provisions in his pack, accompanied only by his pilot, Mr. Gist. At a place upon the Alleghany, called the Murdering town, they fell in with a hostile Indian, who was one of a party then lying in wait, and sank into George's mind. This book of his who fired upon them not ten steps distant. They

a

tl

81

I

e ei

W

er

tl

m pi

ye

111

Q

in

be ar

re

of

de

be tlı

of

m

No

ble

pr

đο

wa

th fle for nicion he his to at pe w tie ci w

took him into custody and kept him until nine o'clock, and then let him go. To avoid the pursuit which they presumed would be commenced in the morning, they travelled all night. On reaching the Monongahela they had a hard day's work to make a raft with a hatchet. In attempting to cross the river to reach a trader's house, they were inclosed by masses of ice. In order to stop the raft, Major Washington put down his setting pole; but the ice came with such force against it as to jerk it into the water. He saved himself by seizing one of the raft logs. With difficulty they landed on an island, where they passed the night. The cold was so severe that the pilot's hands and feet were frozen. The next day they crossed the river upon the ice. Washington arrived at Williamsburg Jan. 16, 1754. His journal, which evinces the solidity of his judgment and his fortitude, was published. As the French seemed disposed to remain upon the Ohio, it was determined to raise a regiment of three hundred men to maintain the claims of the British crown. The command was given to Mr. Fry, and Major Washington, who was appointed lieutenant-colonel, marched with two companies early in April, 1754, in advance of the other troops. A few miles west of the Great Meadows he surprised a French encampment, in a dark, rainy night, and only one man escaped. Before the arrival of the two remaining companies Mr. Fry died, and the command devolved on Colonel Washington. Being joined by two other companies of regular troops from South Carolina and New York, after erecting a small stockade at the Great Meadows, he proceeded towards fort du Quesne, which had been built but a short time, with the intention of dislodging the French. He had marched only thirteen miles to the westernmost foot of the Laurel hill, before he received information of the approach of the enemy with superior numbers, and was induced to return to his stockade. He began a ditch around it, and called it fort Necessity; but the next day, July the 3d, he was attacked by 1500 men. His own troops were about 400 in number. The action commenced at ten in the morning and lasted until dark. A part of the Americans fought within the fort and a part in the ditch filled with mud and water. Colonel Washington was himself on the outside of the fort during the whole day. The enemy fought under cover of trees and high grass. In the course of the night articles of capitulation were agreed upon. The garrison were allowed to retain their arms and baggage, and to march unmolested to the inhabited parts of Virginia. The loss of the Americans in killed and wounded was supposed to be about 100, and that of the enemy about 200. In a few months afterwards orders were received for settling the rank of the officers, and those who were commissioned by the king being directed to take rank of the provincial officers, Col. Washington indignantly resigned his commission. He now rotired to Mount Vernon, that estate by the death of his brother having devolved upon him. But in the spring of 1755 he accepted an invitation from Gen. Braddock to enter his family as a volunteer aid-de-camp in his expedition to the Ohio. He proceeded with him to Wills' creek, afterwards called fort Cumberland, in April. After the troops had marched a few miles from this place, he was seized with a raging fever; but, refusing to remain behind, he was conveyed in a covered wagon. By his advice, twelve hundred men were detatched in order by a rapid movement to reach fort du Quesne before an expected reinforcement should be received at that place. These disencumbered troops were commanded by Braddock himself, and Col. Washington, though still extremely ill, insisted upon proceeding with them. After they arrived upon the Monongahela he advised the general to employ the ranging companies of Virginia to scour the woods and to prevent ambuscades; but his advice was not followed. July 9, when the army was within seven miles of fort du Quesne, the enemy commenced a sudden and furious attack, being concealed by the wood and high grass. In a short time Col. Washington was the only aid who was unwounded, and on him devolved the whole duty of carrying the orders of the commander-in-chief. He was cool and fearless. Though he had two horses killed under him, and four balls through his coat, he escaped unhurt, while every other officer on horseback was either killed or wounded. Dr. Craik, the physician, who attended him in his last sickness, was present in this battle, and says: "I expected every moment to see him fall. Nothing but the superintending care of Providence could have saved him from the fate of all around him." After an action of three hours the troops gave way in all directions, and Col. Washington and two others brought off Braddock, who had been mortally wounded. He attempted to rally the retreating troops; but, as he says himself, it was like endeavoring " to stop the wild hears of the mountains." The conduct of the regular troops was most cowardly. The enemy were few in number and had no expectation of victory. In a sermon occasioned by this expedition, Samnel Davies of Hanover county thus prophetically expressed himself: "As a remarkable instance of patriotism, I may point out to the public that heroic youth, Col. Washington, whom I cannot but hope Providence has hitherto preserved in so signal a manner for some important service to his country." For this purpose he was indeed preserved, and at the end of twenty years he began to render to his country more important services than the minister of Jesus could have k of dig-

ro-

eath

But

ation

vol-

Ohio.

after-

After

this

it. re-

l in a ndred

move-

nected

place.

ded by

hough

g with nonga-

rang-

ds and as not within

y com-

ng con-

a short

vho was ole duty

in-chief.

ad two through

y other

ounded.

m in his

nd says:

Noth-

ovidence

l around

ie troops

shington

who had

d to rally

imself, it

bears of regular

my were

f victory.

ion, Sam-

phetically

nstance of ublic that

I cannot

erved in so

service to ras indeed

years he important

ould have anticipated. From 1755 to 1758 he commanded ciple of taxation asserted by the British parliaa regiment which was raised for the protection of the frontiers, and during this period he was incessantly occupied in efforts to shield the exposed settlements from the incursions of the savages. His exertions were in a great degree ineffectual, in consequence of the errors and the pride of government, and of the impossibility of guarding with a few troops an extended territory from an enemy which was averse to open warfare. He in the most earnest manner recommended offensive measures as the only method of giving complete protection to the scattered settlements. In the year 1758, to his great joy, it was determined to undertake another expedition against fort du Quesne, and he engaged in it with zeal. Early in July the troops were assembled at fort Cumberland; and here, against all the remonstrances and arguments of Col. Washington, Gen. Forbes resolved to open a new road to the Ohio instead of taking the old route. Such was the predicted delay, occasioned by this measure, that in November it was resolved not to proceed further during that compaign. But intelligence of the weakness of the garrison induced an alteration of the plan of passing the winter in the wilderness. By slow marches the army was enabled, on the 25th of Nov., to reach fort du Quesne, of which peaceable possession was taken, as the enemy on the preceding night, after setting it on fire, had abandoned it, and proceeded down the Ohio. The works in this place were repaired, and its name was changed to that of fort Pitt. The success of the expedition was to be attributed to the British fleet, which intercepted reinforcements destined for Canada, and to events in the northern colonies. The great object which he had been anxious to effect being now accomplished, and his health being enfeebled, Col. Washington resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of all the troops raised in Virginia.

Soon after his resignation he was married to Martha, the widow of Mr. Custis, a young lady to whom he had been for some time strongly attached, and who to a large fortune and a fine person added those aminine accomplishments which fill with silent felicity the scenes of domestic life. His attention for several years was principally directed to the management of his estate, which had now become considerable. He had nine thousand acres under his own management. So great a part was cultivated, that in one year he raised seven thousand bushels of wheat and ten thousand of Indian corn. His slaves and other persons employed by him amounted to near a thousand; and the woollen and linen cloth necessary for their use was chiefly manufactured on the estate. He was at this period a member of the legislature of Virginia, in which he took a decided part in opposition to the prin- in the highlands. While he met the most em-

ment. He also acted as a judge of a county court. In 1774 he was elected a member of the first congress, and was placed on all those committees whose duty it was to make arrangements for defence. In the following year, after the battle of Lexington, when it was determined by congress to resort to arms, Col. Washington was unanimously elected commander-in-chief of the army of the united colonics. All were satisfied as to his qualifications, and the delegates from New England were particularly pleased with his election, as it would tend to unite the southern colonies cordially in the war. He accepted the appointment with diffidence, and expressed his intention of receiving no compensation for his services, and only a mere discharge of his expenses. He immediately repaired to Cambridge in the neighborhood of Boston, where he arrived on the 2d of July. He formed the army into three divisions, in order the most effectually to inclose the enemy, intrusting the division at Roxbury to Gen. Ward, the division on Prospect and Winter hills to Gen. Lee, and commanding himself the centre at Cambridge. Here he had to struggle with great difficulties, with the want of ammunition, elothing, and magazines, defeet of arms and discipline, and the evils of short enlistments; but instead of yielding to despondence he bent the whole force of his mind to overcome them. He soon made the alarming discovery that there was only sufficient powder on hand to furnish the army with nine catridges for each man. With the greatest caution to keep this fact a secret, the utmost exertions were employed to procure a supply. A vessel, which was dispatched to Africa, obtained in exchange for New England rum all the gunpowder in the British factories; and in the beginning of winter Capt. Manly captured an ordnance brig, which furnished the American army with the precise articles of which it was in the greatest want. In September, Gen. Washington dispatched Arnold on an expedition against Quebec. In February, 1776, he proposed to a council of his officers to cross the ice and attack the enemy in Boston, but they unanimously disapproved of the daring measure. It was, however, soon resolved to take possession of the heights of Dorchester. This was done without discovery on the night of the 4th of March, and on the 17th the enemy f and it necessary o evacuate the town. The recovery of Boston induced congress to pass a vote of thanks to Gen. Washington and his brave army.

In the belief that the efforts of the British would be directed towards the Hudson, he hastened the army to New York, where he himself arrived April 14th. He made every exertion to fortify the city, and attention was paid to the forts the enemy in seizing his person, and some of his own guards engaged in the conspiracy; but it was discovered, and some who were concerned in it were executed. In the beginning of July, Howe landed his troops at Staten Island. His brother, Lord Howe, who commanded the fleet, soon arrived; and as both were commissioners for restoring peace to the colonies, the latter addressed a letter upon the subject to "George Washington, Esquire;" but the general refused to receive it, as it did not acknowledge the public character with which he was invested by congress, in which character only he could have any intercourse with his lordship. Another letter was sent to "George Washington, &c. &c. &c." This for the same reason was rejected. After the disastrous battle of Brooklyn on the 27th of August, in which Stirling and Sullivan were taken prisoners, and of which he was only a spectator, he withdrew the troops from Long Island, and in a few days he resolved to withdraw from New York. At Kipp's bay, about three miles from the city, some works had been thrown up to oppose the enemy; but on their approach the American troops fied with precipitation. Washington rode towards the lines, and made every exertion to prevent the disgraceful flight. He drew his sword, and threatened to run the cowards through; he cocked and snapped his pistol, but it was all in vain. Such was the state of his mind at the moment, that he turned his horse towards the advancing enemy, apparently with the intention of rushing upon death. His aids now seized the bridle of his horse and rescued him from destruction. New York was on the same day, Sept. 15, evacuated. In October he retreated to the White Plains, where, Oct. 28, a considerable action took place, in which the Americans were overnowered. After the loss of forts Washington and Lee, he passed into New Jersey in November, and was pursued by a triumphant and numerous enemy. His army did not amount to three thousand, and it was daily diminishing; his men, as the winter commenced, were barefooted and almost naked, destitute of tents, and of utensils with which to dress their scanty provisions; and every circumstance tended to fill the mind with despondence. But Gen. Washington was undismayed and firm. He showed himself to his enfeebled army with a serene and unembarrassed countenance, and they were inspired with the resolution of their com-Dec. 8, he was obliged to cross the Delaware; but he had the precaution to secure the boats for seventy miles upon the river. While the British were waiting for the ice to afford them a passage, as his own army had been reinforced by several thousand men, he formed the resolution of carrying the eantonments of the enemy by surprise. On the night of Dec. York, he moved towards the Hudson, in order to barrassing difficulties, a plan was formed to assist | 25 he crossed the river nine miles above Trenton, in a storm of snow mingled with hail and rain, with about two thousand four hundred men. Two other detachments were unable to effect a passage. In the morning, precisely at eight o'clock, he surprised Trenton, and took one thousand Hessians prisoners, one thousand stand of arms, and six field pieces. Twenty of the enemy were killed. Of the Americans, two privates were killed and two frozen to death; and one officer and three or four privates were wounded. On the same day he recrossed the Delaware with the fruits of his enterprise; but in two or three days passed again into New Jersey, and concentrated his forces, amounting to five thousand, at Trenton. On the approach of a superior enemy under Cornwallis, Jan. 2, 1777, he drew up his men behind Assumpinek creek. He expected an attack in the morning, which would probably result in a ruinous defeat. At this moment, when it was hazardous if not impracticable to return into Pennsylvania, he formed the resolution of getting into the rear of the enemy, and thus to stop them in their progress towards Philadelphia. In the night he silently decamped taking a circuitous route through Allenstown to Princeton. A sudden change of the weather to severe cold rendered the roads favorable for his march. About sunrise his van met a British detachment on its way to join Cornwallis, and was defeated by it; but as he came up he exposed himself to every danger and gained a victory. With three hundred prisoners he then entered Princeton. During this march many of his soldiers were without shoes, and their feet left the marks of blood upon the frozen ground. This hardship and their want of repose induced him to lead his army to a place of security on the road to Morristown. Cornwallis in the morning broke up his camp, and, alarmed for his stores in Brunswick, urged the pursuit. Thus the military genius of the American commander, under the blessing of Divine Providence, rescued Philadelphia from the threatened danger, obliged the enemy, which had overspread New Jersey, to return to the neighborhood of New York, and revived the desponding spirits of his country. Having accomplished these objects, he retired to Morristown, where he caused his whole army to be inoculated with the small pox, and thus was freed from the apprehension of a calamity which might impede his operations during the next campaign.

On the last of May he removed his army to Middlebrook, about ten miles from Brunswick, where he fortified himself very strongly. An ineffeetual attempt was made by Sir William Howe to draw him from his position, by marching towards Philadelphia; but, after Howe's return to New defen pecta was After and Wasl of P Bran killed he w termi rain a he wa treati lis S made camp the d discip of tw priso at Va kill, l delph tress reduc seize a cor gress comn Gates high was t admit discor posec which soldid weak in wh attacl solve this Cadv wrote the g were duty, man also if th easily appr indu when marc

follor

coun

June

favor

defend the passes in the mountains, in the expectation that a junction with Burgoyne, who was then upon the lakes, would be attempted. After the British general sailed from New York and entered the Chesapeake, in August, Gen. Washington marched immediately for the defence of Philadelphia. Sept. 11, he was defeated at Brandywine, with the loss of nine hundred, in killed and wounded. A few days afterward, as he was pursued, he turned upon the enemy, determined upon another engagement; but a heavy rain so damaged the arms and ammunition that he was under the absolute necessity of again retreating. Philadelphia was entered by Cornwailis Sept. 26. Oct. 4, the American commander made a well-planned attack upon the British camp at Germantown; but, in consequence of the darkness of the morning, and the imperfect discipline of his troops, it terminated in the loss of twelve hundred men, in killed, wounded, and prisoners. In Dec. he went into winter quarters at Valley Forge, on the west side of the Schuylkill, between twenty and thirty miles from Philadelphia. Here his army was in the greatest distress for the want of provisions, and he was reduced to the necessity of sending out parties to scize what they could find. About the same time a combination, in which some members of congress were engaged, was formed to remove the commander-in-chief and to appoint in his place Gates, whose recent successes had given him a high reputation. But the name of Washington was too dear to the great body of Americans to admit of such a change. Notwithstanding the discordant materials of which his army was composed, there was something in his character which enabled him to attach both his officers and seldiers so strongly to him that no distress could weaken their affection or impair the veneration in which he was generally held. Without this attachment to him the army must have been dissolved. Gen. Conway, who was concerned in this faction, being wounded in a duel with Gen. Cadwallader, and thinking his wound mortal, wrote to Gen. Washington, "You are in my eyes the great and good man." Feb. 1, 1778, there were about four thousand men in camp unfit for duty, for the want of clothes. Of these scarcely a man had a pair of shees. The hospitals were also filled with the sick. At this time the enemy, if they had marched out of winter quarters, could easily have dispersed the American army. The apprehension of the approach of a French fleet inducing the British to concentrate their forces, when they evacuated Philadelphia, June 17, and marched towards New York, Gen. Washington followed them. Contrary to the advice of a council he engaged in the battle of Monmouth, June 28, the result of which made an impression favorable to the cause of America. He slept in letter to the governors of the several States, con-his cloak on the field of battle, intending to renew the attack the next morning, but at midnight the British marched off in such silence as not to be discovered. Their loss in killed was about three hundred, and that of the Americans sixtynine. As the campaign now closed in the raiddle States, the American army went into winter quarters in the neighborhood of the highlands upon the Hudson. Thus, after the vicissitudes of two years, both armies were brought back to the point from which they set out. During the year 1779, Gen. Washington remained in the neighborhood of New York. In Jan., 1780, in a winter memorable for its severity, his utmost exertions were necessary to save the army from dissolution. The soldiers in general submitted with heroic patience to the want of provisions and clothes. At one time they are every kind of horse food but hay. Their sufferings at length were so great, that in March two of the Connecticut regiments mutinied, but the mutiny was suppressed and the ringleaders secured. In Sept. the treachery of Arnold was detected. In the winter of 1781, such were again the privations of the army that a part of the Pennsylvania line revolted and marched home. Such, however, was still their patriotism that they delivered up some British emissaries to Gen. Wayne, who hanged them as spies. Committing the defence of the posts on the Hudson to Gen. Heath, Gen. Washton, in August, marched with Count Rochambeaux for the Chesapeake, to cooperate with the French fleet there. The siege of Yorktown commenced Sept. 28, and Oct. 19 he reduced Cornwallis to the necessity of surrendering, with upwards of seven thousand men, to the combined armies of America and France. The day after the capitulation, he ordered that those who were under arrest should be pardoned, and that divine service, in acknowledgment of the interposition of Providence, should be performed in all the brigades and divisions. This event filled America with joy, and was the means of terminating the war.

Few events of importance occurred in 1782. In March, 1783, he exhibited his characteristic firmness and decision in opposing an attempt to produce a mutiny by anonymous letters. His address to his officers on the occasion displays in a remarkable degree his prudence and the correctness of his judgment. When he began to read it he found himself in some degree embarrassed by the imperfection of his sight. Taking out his spectacles he said, "These eyes, my friends, have grown dim, and these locks white, in the service of my country; yet I have never doubted her justice." He only could have repressed the spirit which was breaking forth. April 19, a cessation of hostilities was proclaimed in the American camp. In June he addressed a t a ght one and the priand vere the ıt in sev, five of a , he

He

ould

on.

ain,

ien.

moable resoand Philped. town ther e for ritish , and osed tory. tered s solt the This road roke runslitary r the ladell the ey, to , and mtry. red to him

my to s was which t cammy to swick, n inefowe to wards New der to gratulating them on the result of the contest in | received every testimony of respect and venerthe establishment of independence, and recommending an indissoluble union of the States under one federal head, a sacred regard to public justice, the adoption of a proper peace establishment, and the prevalence of a friendly disposition among the people of the several States. It was with keen distress, as well as with pride and edmiration, that he saw his brave and veteran soldiers, who had suffered so much, and who had borne the heat and burden of the war, returning peaceably to their homes without a settlement of their accounts or a farthing of money lu their pockets. Nov. 25, New York was evacuated, and he entered it, accompanied by Gov. Clinton and many respectable citizens. Dec. 4, he took his farewell of his brave comrades in arms. At noon the principal officers of the army assembled at Francis' tavern, and their beloved commander soon entered the room. His emotions were too strong to be concealed. Filling a glass with wine he turned to them and said: "With a heart full; of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you; I most devoutly wish that your latter days may be as prosperous and happy as your former ones have been glorious and honorable." Having drunk, he added: "I cannot come to each of you to take my leave, but shall be obliged to you if each of you will come and take me by the hand." Gen. Knox, being nearest, turned to him. Incapable of utterance, Gen. Washington grasped his hand and embraced him. In the same affectionate manner he took leave of each officer. In every eye was the tear of dignified sensibility, and not a word was articulated to interrupt the silence and the tenderness of the scene. Ye men who delight in blood, slaves of ambition! When your work of carnage was finished, could ye thus part with your companions in crime? Leaving the room, Gen. Washington passed through the corps of light infantry, and walked to Whitehall, where a barge waited to carry him to Powles' Hook. The whole company followed in mute procession with dejected countenances. When he entered the barge, he turned to them, and, waving his hat, bade them a silent adieu, receiving from them the same last affectionate compliment. On the 23d of Dec. he resigned his commission to congress, then assembled at Annapolis. He delivered a short address on the occasion, in which he said: "I considered it an indispensable duty to close this last solemn act of my official life by commending the interests of our dearest country to the protection of Almighty God, and those who have the superintendence of them to his holy keeping." He then retired to Mount Vernon to enjoy again the pleasures of domestic life. Here the expressions of the gratitude of his countrymen, in affectionate addresses, poured in upon him, and he

for

tio

wa

Sta

ran

nat

cer

wis

In

At

pre

pec

dor

frie

ind

tion

the

of exi

per

not rop of

Kr

nci

hea En

in

Its ide

sis Br

po of far pl to

pr pu tre to eic

In his retirement, however, he could not overlook the public interests. He was desirous of opening by water carriage a communication between the Atlantic and the western portions of our country, in order to prevent the diversion of trade down the Mississippi, and to Canada, from which he predicted consequences injurious to the union. Through his influence two companies were formed for promoting inland navigation. The legislature of Virginia presented him with one hundred and fifty shares in them, which he appropriated to public uses. In the year 1786 he was convinced, with other statesmen, of the necessity of substituting a more vigorous general government, in the place of the impotent articles of confederation. Still he was aware of the danger of running from one extreme to another. He exclaims, in a letter to Mr. Jay: "What astonishing changes a few years are cap, ble of producing! I am told that even respectable characters speak of a monarchical form of government without horrer. From thinking proceeds speaking; thence to acting is often but a single step. But how irrevocable and tremendous! What a triumph for our enemies to verify their predictions! What a triumph for the advocates of despotism to find that we are incapable of governing ourselves, and that systems, founded on the basis of equal liberty, are merely ideal and fallacious!" In the following year he was persuaded to take a seat in the convention which formed the present constitution of the United States, and he presided in that body. In 1789 he was unanimously elected the first president of the United States. It was with great reluctance that he accepted this office. His feelings, as he said himself, were like those of a culprit going to the place of execution. But the voice of a whole continent, the pressing recommendation of his particular friends, and the apprehension that he should otherwise be considered as unwilling to hazard his reputation in executing a system which he had assisted in forming, determined him to accept the appointment. In April he left Mount Vernon to proceed to New York, and to enter on the duties of his high office. He everywhere received testimonies of respect and love. At Trenton the gentler sex rewarded him for his successful enterprise, and the protection which he afforded them, twelve years before. On the bridge over the creek which passes through the town, was erected a triumphal arch, ornamented with laurels and flowers and supported by thirteen pillars, each encircled with wreaths of evergreen. On the front of the arch was inscribed in large gilt letters :

> "THE DEFENDER OF THE MOTHERS WILL BE THE PROTECTOR OF THE DAUGHTERS."

At this place he was met by a party of matrons, leading their daughters, who were dressed in white, and who with baskets in their hands sung with exquisite sweetness the following ode, written for the occasion:

"Welcome, mighty chief, once more Welcome to this grateful shere. Now no mercenary foe Aims again the fatal blow. Alms at THEE the fatal blow, Virgins fair and matrons grave Those thy conquering arms did save, Bulld for thee triumphal bowers; Strew, ye fair, his way with flowers, Strew your HERO'S way with flowers,"

At the last line the flowers were strewed before him. After receiving such proofs of affectionate attachment he arrived at New York, and was inaugurated first president of the United States, April 30. In making the necessary arrangements of his household, he publicly announced that neither visits of business nor of ceremony would be expected on Sunday, as he wished to reserve that day sacredly to himself. In Oct. and Nov., 1789, he visited New England. At the close of his first term of four years, he prepared a valedictory address to the American people, anxious to return again to the scenes of domestic life; but the carnest entreaties of his friends and the peculiar situation of his country induced him to be a candidate for a second election. During his administration of eight years the labor of establishing the different departments of a new government was accomplished; and he exhibited the greatest firmness, wisdom, and independence. He was an American, and he chose not to involve his country in the contests of Europe. He accordingly, with the unanimous advice of his cabinet, Messrs. Jefferson, Hamilton, Knox, and Randelph, issued a proclamation of neutrality April 22, 1793, a few days after he heard of the commencement of the war between England and France. This measure contributed in a great degree to the prosperity of America. Its adoption was the more honorable to the president, as the general sympathy was in favor of the sister republic, against whom it was said Great Britain had commenced the war for the sole purpose of imposing upon her a monarchical form of government. He preferred the peace and welfare of his country to the breath of popular applause. Another act, in which he proved himself to be less regardful of the public partialities and prejudices than of what he conceived to be the public good, was the ratification of the British treaty. The English government had neglected to surrender the western posts, and by commercial restrictions and in other ways had evinced a hostile spirit towards this country. To avert the 1795, the treaty which Mr. Jay had made was powers. Against the spirit of party, so peculiarly submitted to the senate, and was ratified by that body on the condition that one article should be altered. While the president was deliberating upon it, an incorrect copy of the instrument was made public by a senator, and the whole country was thrown into a state of extreme irritation. At this period he, in August, conditionally ratified it, and in Feb., 1796, when it was returned from his Britannic Majesty with the proposed alteration, he declared it to be the law of the land. After this transaction, the house of representatives requested him to lay before them the papers relating to the treaty, but he with great independence refused to comply with their request, as they could have no claim to an inspection of them except upon a vote of impeachment, and as a compliance would establish a dangerous precedent. He had before this shown a disposition to maintain the authority vested in his office, by declining to affix his signature to a bill which had passed both houses. As the period for a new election of a president of the United States approached, and after plain indications that the public voice would be in his favor, and when he probably would be chosen for the third time unanimously, he determined irrevocably to withdraw to the shades of private life. He published in Sept., 1796, his farewell address to the people of the United States, which ought to be engraved upon the hearts of his countrymen. In the most earnest and affectionate manner he called upon them to cherish an immovable attachment to the national union, to watch for its preservation with jealous anxiety, to discountenance even the suggestion that it could in any event be abandoned, and indignantly to frown upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest. Overgrown military establishments he represented as particularly hostile to republican liberty. While he recommended the most implicit obedience to the acts of the established government. and reprobated all obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberations and action of the coustituted authorities, he wished also to guard against the spirit of innovation upon the principles of the constitution. Aware that the energy of the system might be enfeebled by alterations, he thought that no change should be made without an evident necessity, and that in so extensive a country as much vigor as is consistent with liberty is indispensable. On the other hand he pointed out the danger of a real despotism, -- by breaking down the partitions between the several decalamity of another war, Mr. Jay was nominated partments of government, by destroying the as envoy extraordinary in April, 1794. In June, reciprocal checks, and consolidating the different

ner-

vers of beas of n of from ) the nnies ition. with h he 1786 the neral ticles danother. at asf pro-charnment peakstep. hat a redic-of deserning e basis ious!" take a resent c pre-mously States. ecepted lf, were of exent, the friends. herwise reputaassisted the aprnon to e duties ved teston the il enter-

d them, over the vn. was h laurels pillars, On the letters :

RS

ten

but thi

to

to

con

elia

ent

mn

red

of i alm

yet

sup

plet

his son

son

cers

con

If h

achi

wan

pru

cou

He

neit

his pro

jud

hun

pop

wer

thou

try.

sinc

Stat

on v

was tho

of ;

end

he

tici

Wh

he

wit

lati

me

his

wa

sev

for sun offe

bet

wit

cor sta

1

baneful in an elective government he uttered the utmost exertions of medical skill were applied his most solemn remonstrances, as well as against inveterate antipathies and passionate attachments in respect to foreign nations. While he thought that the jewlousy of a free people ought to be constantly and impartially awake against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, he wished that good faith should be observed towards all nations, and peace and harmony cultivated. In his opinion, honesty, no less in public than in private atfairs, is always the best policy. Providence, he believed, had connected the permanent felicity of a nation Other subjects, to which he with its virtue. alluded, were the importance of credit, of economy, of a reduction of the public debt, and of literary institutions; above all he recommended religion and morality as indispensably necessary to political prosperity. "In vain," says he, "would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and of citizens." Bequeathing these counsels to his countrymen, he continued in office till the fourth of March, 1797, when he attended the inauguration of his successor, Mr. Adams, and with complacency saw him invested with powers which had for so long a time been excessed by himself. He then retired to Mount Version, giving to the world an example most humiliating to its emperors and kings, - the example of a man voluntarily disrobing himself of the highest authority, and returning to private life, with a character having upon it no stain of ambition, of covetousness, of profusion, of luxury, of oppression, or of injustice.

It was now that the soldier, the statesman, and the patriot hoped to repose himself, after the toils of so many years. But he had not been long in retirement before the outrages of republican France induced our government to raise an army, of which, in July, 1798, he was appointed commander-in-chief. Though he accepted the appointment, his services were not demanded, and he himself did not believe that an invasion would be made. Pacific overtures were soon made by the French directory, but he did not live to see the restoration of peace. On Friday, Dec. 13, 1799, while attending to some improvements upon his estate, he was exposed to a light rain which wetted his neck and hair. Unapprehensive of danger, he passed the afternoon in his usual manner; but at night he was seized with an inflammatory affection of the wind-pipe. The disease commenced with a violent ague, accompanied with some pain and a sense of stricture in the throat, a cough and difficult deglutition, which were soon succeeded by fever and a quick and laborious respiration. About twelve or fourteen ounces of blood were taken from him. In the morning his in vain. The appointed time of his death was near. Believing from the commencement of his complaint that it would be mortal, a few hours before his departure, after repeated efforts to be understood, he succeeded in expressing a desire that he might be permitted to die without being disquieted by unavailing attempts to rescue him from his fate. After it became impossible to get any thing down his throat, he undressed himself and went to bed, there to die. To his friend and physician, who sat on his bed, and took his head in his lap, he said with difficulty, " Doctor, I am dying, and have been dying for a long time; but I am not afraid to die." Respiration became more and more contracted till half-past eleven on Saturday night, when, retaining the full possession of his intellect, he expired without a struggle. Thus Dec. 14, 1799, in the 68th year of his age, died the father of our country, "the man first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his fellow-citizens." This event spread a gloom over the country, and the tears of America proclaimed the services and virtues of its hero and sage, and exhibited a people not insensible to his worth. The senate of the United States, in an address to the president on this melancholy occasion, indulged their patriotic pride. while they did not transgress the bounds of truth, in speaking of their WASHINGTON. "Ancient and modern names," said they, " are diminished before him. Greatness and guilt have too often been allied; but his fame is whiter than it is brilliant. The destroyers of nations stood abashed at the majesty of his virtues. It reproved the intemperance of their ambition, and darkened the splendor of victory. The scene is closed, and we are no longer anxious lest misfortune should sully his glory; he has travelled on to the end of his journey, and carried with him an increasing weight of honor; he has deposited it safely where misfortune cannot tarnish it, where malice cannot blast it." Mary, his mother, died at Fredericksburg Aug. 25, 1789, aged 82. She lived about four months after the inauguration of her son as president of the United States. Martha, his widow, died May 22, 1802; in her sickness the Lord's supper was administered to her.

Gen. Washington was rather above the commonstature; his frame was robust and his constitution vigorous. His exterior created in the bcholder the idea of strength united with manly gracefulness. His eyes were of a gray color, and his complexion light. His manners were rather reserved than free. His person and whole deportment exhibited an unaffected and indescribable dignity, unmingled with haughtiness, of which all who approached him were sensible. attachment of those who possessed his friendfamily physician, Doctor Craik, was sent for; but ship was ardent, but always respectful. His

ed

vas

his urs

Le

sire

ing

him

get elf

and ead

Dny

but

ame

ven

DOS-

it a year

the

t in vent

ears

tues

e not

nited

elan-

ride.

ruth.

cient

ished

often

it is ished

1 the

ened

losed,

rtune

o the creas-

safely

nalice

Fred-lived

of her

ıa, his

s the

com-

onsti-

ie be-manly

r, and

rather

eport-

ibable

which friend-

His

temper was humane, benevolent, and conciliatory; | members of congress were late. He said to them: but there was a quickness in his sensibility to any thing offensive, which experience had taught him to watch and correct. He made no pretensions to vivacity or wit. Judgment rather than genius constituted the most prominent feature of his character. As a military man he was brave. enterprising, and cautious. At the head of a multitude, whom it was sometimes impossible to reduce to proper discipline before the expiration of their time of service, and having to struggle almost continually with the want of supplies, he vet was able to contend with an adversary superior in numbers, well disciplined, and completely equipped, and was the means of saving his country. The measure of his caution has by some been represented as too abundant; but he sometimes formed a plan, which his brave officers thought was too adventurous, and sometimes contrary to their advice he engaged in battle. If his name is not rendered illustrious by splendid achievements, it is not to be attributed to the want of military enterprise.

He conducted the war with that consummate prudence and wisdom which the situation of his country and the state of his army demanded. He also possessed a firmness of resolution, which neither dangers nor difficulties could shake. In his civil administration he exhibited repeated proofs of that practical good sense, of that sound judgment, which is a most valuable quality of the human mind. More than once he put his whole popularity to hazard in pursuing measures which were dictated by a sense of duty, and which he thought would promote the welfare of his country. In speculation he was a real republican, sincerely attached to the constitution of the United States, and to that system of equal political rights on which it is founded. Real liberty, he thought, was to be preserved only by preserving the authority of the laws, and maintaining the energy of government. Of incorruptible integrity, his ends were always upright, and the means which he employed were always pure. He was a politicinn to whom wiles were absolutely unknown. When any measure of importance was proposed, he sought information and was ready to hear without prejudice whatever could be said in relation to the subject; he suspended his judgment till it was necessary to decide; but after his decision had been thus deliberately made, it was seldom shaken, and he wer as active and persevering in executing, as he had been cool in forming it. He possessed an innate and unassuming modesty, which adulation would have offended, which the plaudits of millions could not betray into indiscretion, and which was blended with a high sense of personal dignity, and a just consciousness of the respect which is due to station. He dined at four o'clock. Sometimes poor. Let no one go hungry away. If any of

"Gentlemen, we are punctual here. My cook never asks whether the company has arrived, but whether the hour has," In 1789 an escort to Salem was to attend him at Boston at eight; but the escort did not overtake him until he reached Charles river. He said, "Major, I thought you had been too long in my family not to know when it was eight o'clock."

With regard to the religious character of General Washington there have been different opinions. In the extracts from some of his private letters, which have been published by the historian of his life, the name of the Supreme Heing is once or twice introduced in a manner which in common conversation is deemed irreverent. It is also understood that in a few instances during the war, particularly when he met Gen. Lee retreating in the battle of Monmouth, his language was unguarded in this respect. It may not be impossible that a good man in a moment of extreme irritation should utter a profune expression; but perhaps it is less possible that such a man, when his passion has passed away and his sober recollections have returned, should not repent bitterly of his irreverence to the name of God. On the other hand, General Washington. when at the head of the army, issued public orders, calling upon his officers to discountenance the habit of profanity; he speaks in his writings of "the pure and benign light of revelution," and of the necessity of imitating "the charity, humility, and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine author of our blessed religion;" he gratefully acknowledged the interpositions of Providence in favor of this country; his life was upright and virtuous; he principally supported an Episcopal church in the neighborhood of Mount Vernon, where he constantly attended public worship; during the war he not unfrequently rode ten or twelve miles from camp for the benefit of the institutions of religion; and it is believed that he every day had his hour of retirement from the world for the purpose of private devotion. In a letter to Dr. Rodgers, June 11, 1783, he said: "Glorious indeed has been our contest, if we consider the prize for which we have contended, and glorious its issue. But in the midst of our joys I hope we shall not forget that to Divine Providence is to be ascribed the glory and the praise."

General Washington was blessed with abundant wealth, and he was not ignorant of the pleasure of employing it for generous purposes. His style of living was dignified, though he maintained the strict st economy. While he was in the army he wree to the superintendent of his estate in the following terms: "Let the hospitality of the house be kept up with regard to the

this sort of people should be in want of corn, 1776. His official letters to the American consupply their necessities, provided it does not encourage them in idleness. I have no objection to your giving my money in charity, when you think it is well bestowed; I mean, that it is my desire that it should be done. You are to consider that weither myself nor my wife are in the way to do these good offices." Thus was he beneficent, while at the same time he required an exact compliance with engagements. A pleasing proof of the generous spirit which governed him is exhibited in his conduct towards the son of his friend, the Marquis de Lafayette. The marquis, after fighting in this country for American liberty, had returned to France; but in the convulsions of the French Revolution he was exiled and imprisoned in Germany. General Washington gave evidence of sincere attachment to the unhappy nobleman, not only by exerting all his influence to procure his release from confinement, but by extending his patronage to his son, who made his escape from France, and arrived with his tutor at Boston in 1705. As soon as he was informed of his arrival, he wrote to a friend, requesting him to visit the young gentleman and make him acquainted with the relations between this country and France, which would prevent the president of the United States from publicly espousing his interest, but to assure him of his protection and support. He also directed this friend to draw upon him for moneys to defray all the expenses, which young Lafayette might incur. Towards his slaves General Washington manifested the greatest care and kindness. Their servitude lay with weight upon his mind, and he directed in his will that they should be emancinated on the decease of his wife. There were insuperable difficulties in the way of their receiving freedom previously to this event. On the death of Mrs. Washington in 1802, his estate, as he had no children, was divided according to his will among his and her relations. It amounted by his own estimate to more than 500,000 dollars.

The public addresses and other productions of General Washington's pen are written in a style of dignified simplicity. Some have seen so much excellence in his writings, that they have been ready to transfer the honor to his secretaries; but nothing has appeared under his name to which his own powers were inadequate. A volume of epistles, confidential and domestic, attributed to him, was published in 1777, and republished about the year 1796. Of these General Washington, in a letter to the secretary of State in 1797, declared the following to be forgeries; a letter to Lund Washington, dated June 12, 1776; a letter to John Parke Custis, dated June 18, 1776; letters to Lund Washington, dated July 8, July 16, July 15, and July 22, 1776; and a letter to Mrs. Washington, dated June 24, office, which he retained till his death. At the gress, written during the war, were published in two volumes, 8vo., 1795. Since his death his letters to Arthur Young and Sir John Sinelair, on agriculture and the rural economy of the United States, have been published, - Marshall's Life of Washington; his Life by Ramsay, and Bancroft, and freing.

WASHINGTON, MARTHA, the widow of George W., died May 22, 1802, aged 70. She was the daughter of Mr. Dandridge of the county of New Kent in Virginia, and was born in May, 1732. Her first husband was Col. Daniel P. Custis, who lived on the Pamunkey river, a branch of York river. Of the children by this marriage Martha died in womanhood at Mount Vernon in 1770, and John Custis in 1781, at the siege of Yorktown, aged 27, leaving several children. She married Washington in 1759. During the war she was accustomed to spend the winters at head-quarters. The remains of husband and wife rest in the same vault. She was amiable and dignified, and adorned with the Christian virtues, and cheered with the Christian hope as she went down to the grave.

WASHINGTON, WILLIAM, colonel, a soldier of the Revolution, a relative of George Washington, died in South Carolina in 1810. He was born in Stafford county, Va. He served as a captain under Mercer; he fought at the battle on Long Island, and distinguished himself in that of Trenton, in which he was wounded. He was afterwards major and lieutenant-colonel. At the battle of the Cowpens he commanded the eavalry, and contributed much to the victory. For his good conduct he received a sword from congress. In the battle of Eutaw Springs he was wounded and taken prisoner. After the war he resided at Sandy Hill, S. C., the family seat of his wife, Jane Elliott. In 1798 George Washington selected him as one of his staff, with the rank of brigadier-general. His son, William, died at Charleston in March, 1830, aged 45.

WASHINGTON, THOMAS, brigadier-general. a brave and skilful officer in the Revolutionary war, died in Rutherford county, Tenn., in 1818, aged 55.

WASHINGTON, LAWRENCE AUGUSTINE, died at Wheeling, Va., in 1824, aged 49; a nephew and one of the heirs of George Washington.

WASHINGTON, BUSHROD, judge, died at Philadelphia Nov. 26, 1829, aged 70. The first president of the American colonization society, the nephew of George Washington and heir of his books and papers, he was born in 1759, and studied law with James Wilson. At the siege of York he was a private soldier under Mercer. In 1797, he was appointed by Mr. Adams a judge of the supreme court of the United States, an he deli yout co institu Black nepher W.), t Mount He was ners, d patriot in the 1798-8 WA first a

ington Va., an He ent was su tured t Rogers rancan WA' died at non of He was WA' Cambri Newpor placed ergill. and at exceller chosen the ren was a memoir publish Anthol Earl of use of t pox, et and otl WA'

Conn., ated a to 178 Of Ply to 181 ters th WA Conn., ordain Bridge 11, 18 vert, a wards. 1300; of N. of F. Calvin first annual meeting of the colonization society he delivered an address, which expresses his devout confidence in the blessing of God upon the lostitution. His widow, the daughter of Mr. Blackburne, died in a few days after him. His nephew, John Augustine W. (the son of Corbin W.), to whom he bequeathed the mansion at Mount Vernon, died June 14, 1832, aged 43. He was a man of integrity and simplicity of manners, devoted to the performance of his duties, a patriot, and a Christian. He published reports in the court of appeals of Virginia, 2 vols., 1798-9.

WASHINGTON, BALLEY, Dr., died in Washington Aug. 4, 1854, aged 67. He was born in Va., and was a relative of George Washington. He entered the navy as sur on in 1810. He was surgeon of the large on under tured the Boxer. It Rogers, Elliott, and Mediterranean.

e

fe

d nt

er

has a tle

in He

At

he ry.

om

he var

cat

sh-

the

am,

ral,

ary

318, licd

hew

first

icty,

r of

and

e of

In

ıdge

s, an

the

WATERHOUSE, Jo. SILL, M. D., died at Charleston, S. C., in 1817, aged 26. The son of Dr. W., he graduated at Harvard in 1811. He was a physician, a naturalist, and an orator.

WATERHOUSE, BENJAMIN, M. D., died at Cambridge, Oct. 2, 1846, aged 92. Born in Newport, he was sent to London in 1775, and placed under the care of his relative, Dr. Fothergill. His studies were continued at Edinburgh. and at Leyden, where he graduated. After an excellent medical education, he returned and was chosen a professor at Cambridge, where he passed the remainder of a long life. In his polities he was a follower of Mr. Jefferson. A particular memoir of him is in the Polyanthos, vol. II. He published the botanist, in twelve numbers, in the Anthology; a work aiming to prove that the Earl of Chatham was Junius; a lecture against the use of tobacco; a treatise on the small pox, kine pox, etc.; a discourse on the history of medicine, and other medical treatises.

WATERMAN, SIMON, first minister of Welles, Conn., died in 1813, aged about 74. He graduated at Yale in 1759, and was pastor from 1761 to 1780 of the second society in Wallingford. Of Plymouth, Conn., he was minister from 1700 to 1810. The previous and subsequent ministers there were A. Storrs and L. Hart.

WATERMAN, ELIJAII, minister of Bridgeport, Conn., was graduated at Yale college in 1791; ordained at Windham in 1704; installed at Bridgeport in 1800; and died at Springfield Oct. 11, 1825, aged 50. He published the noble convert, a sermon, at the request of Pierpont Edwards, 1809; an oration, 1794; a century sermon, 1300; at execution of C. Adams, 1803; on death of N. Strong, 1807; of A. Hawley; of D. Ely; of F. Lockwood; catechism of Geneva; life of Calvin, 8vo., 1813. — Sprague's Annals.

WATERMAN, WILLIAM, a soldier of the Revolution, died in Royalton, Vt., in 1845, aged 87. He was wounded through the thigh at White Plains, and was a prisoner in a ship off New York, from which he escaped by swimming to Long Island.

WATERS, NICHOLAS B., M. D., died in Philadelphia in 1796, aged 32. His medical degree he received in 1788. His wife was Hester, the daughter of David Rittenhouse. He published an abridgment of Benjamin Bell's system of surgery, in a large volume, 1791. — Thatcher's Med.

Biog.

WATERS, ISRAEL, captain, a benefactor of Leicester Academy, died about 1823, at Charlton. His important legacy to the academy consisted to about 8,000 dollars. He was a manufactory of leather. — Washburn's Sketch WATERS, Cornellus, minister of Gofistown, N. H., from 1781 to 1795, died in 1824, aged 76. Born at Milbury, Mass., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1774. He was succeeded at G. by Gov. Morrill. Next he was pastor at Ashby, Mass., from 1707 to 1916.

WATKINS, TOBIAS, doctor, died at Washington Nov. 14, 1855, aged 75; many years United States auditor of accounts. He was an able contributor to several journals and magazines.

WATKINS, John L., M. D., died at Cleves, O., Dec. 12, 1855, aged 75; born in New Jersey, and a graduate of Princeton in 1814.

WATROUS, John, colonel, died at Colchester, Conn., in Jan., 1817, aged 91.

WATROUS, JOHN R., M. D., an eminent physician and surgeon, died at Colchester, Conn., in 1843, aged 91. He was a surgeon in the army of the Revolution, the companion of Dr. Hall of East Hartford. He was a member of the general assembly of Connecticut in 1795.

WATSON, Johns, died at Plymouth, Mass., in 1826, aged 78. He graduated at Harvard in 1766, and was president of the pilgrim society. He was proprietor of Clark's Island, and lived there about forty years, pleased with its antiquarian associations. He left sons and daughters. WATSON, ELKANAH, died at Port Kent, N. Y., Dec. 12, 1842, aged 84. Horn in Plymouth in 1758, he in early life travelled in Europe. He lived many years in Pittsfield, Mass., and removed to Albany in 1815, to Port Kent on Lake Champlain in 1825. He wrote much on agriculture and internal improvements. In London he published on account of his early journey in the wilderness of New York. He published history of the canals, 1820. His memoirs, entitled men and times of the Revolution, were published by his son, Winslow C. W., in 1856, containing his journal of travels in Europe, etc., from 1772 to 1842.

10

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580 (716) 872-4503

SIM SELLEN ON THE SELLEN ON TH

0

I

tŀ

re

n

ti

of 1 fo

m el

17

81

H W

die

va

ag

gr

W

he Ste

Dr

du ter sys

die

tra

168

his clu

thit

bu

gra

ord

nea

77.

offi

tan

gag of

abl

in

he

pre

dou

tale

self

Aug. 31, 1851, aged 71. Born at Marblehead, a utes, and then retreated with the utmost expedidescendant of Winslow, he graduated at Harvard tion. in 1800, and studied law with Judge Parsons, but this movement, and, apprehensive of an ambusbecame a merchant, and was president of the cade from Lafayette, would not allow of a purmercantile marine insurance company.

WAWWAW, an Indian chief, lived at Wells, Me., about the year 1740, and laid claim to the territory there.

WAY, JOHN, captain, died in New London in 1831, aged 92. In returning from the funeral of his neighbor, John Starr, aged 90, he fell and expired. He never had a day's sickness.

WAYNE, ANTHONY, major-general, died in general assembly, where, in conjunction with Dickinson, Mifflin, Thompson, and other gentlemen, he tock an active part in opposition to the claims of Great Britain. In 1775 he quitted the councils of his country for the field. He entered the army as a colonel, and at the close of the year accompanied Gen. Thompson to Canada. When this officer was defeated in his enterprise against the Three Rivers in June, 1776, and taken prisoner, Wayne received a flesh wound in the leg. His exertions were useful in the retreat. At the close of the campaign he was made a brigadier-general. In the campaign of 1777 in the battle of Brandywine he distinguished himself, though he was in a few days afterward surprised and defeated by Major-general Gray. He fought also in the battle of Germantown, as well as in the battle of Monmouth in June, 1778. In his most daring and successful assault upon Stony Point in July, 1779, while he was rushing forward with his men under a tremendous fire of musketry and grape-shot, determined to carry the works at the point of the bayonet, he was struck by a musket ball upon his head. He was for a moment stunned; but, as soon as he was able to rise so as to rest on one knee, believing that his wound was mortal, he cried to one of his aids, "Carry me forward and let me die in the fort." When he entered it, he gave orders to stop the effusion of blood. In 1781 he was ordered to march with the Pennsylvania line from the northward, and form a junction with Lafayette in Virginia. July 6th, after receiving information that the main body of the enemy under Cornwallis had crossed James' river, he pressed forward at the head of eight hundred men to attack the rear-guard. But to his utter astonishment, when he reached the place, he found the whole British army, consisting of four thousand men, drawn up ready to receive him. At this moment he conceived of but one way to escape. He rushed upon the enemy, and commenced a died in peace and joy April 16, 1750, aged 62.

WATSON, BENJAMIN M., died at Newton gallant attack, which he supported for a few min-The British general was confounded by suit. After the capture of Cornwallis, he was sent to conduct the war in Georgia, where with equal success he contended with British soldiers, Indian savages, and American traitors. As a reward for his services the legislature of Georgia presented to him a valuable farm. At the eonclusion of the war he retired to private life. In 1787 he was a member of the Pennsylvania convention, which ratified the constitution of the Dec., 1796, aged about 51. He was born in United States. In 1792 he succeeded St. Clair Easttown, Chester county, Penn., in 1745. In in the command of the army to be employed 1773 he was appointed a representative to the against the Indians. In the battle of the Miamis, Aug. 20, 1794, he gained over them a complete victory and afterwards desolated their country. On the 3d of Aug., 1795, he concluded a treaty with the hostile Indians northwest of the Ohio. While in the service of his country he died in a hut at Presque Isle, and was buried on the shore of lake Erie.

> WAYNE, ISAAC, colonel, only son of Majorgeneral W., died in Chester co., Penn., Oct. 26, 1852, aged 82. He was a State senator and an excellent citizen. In 1814 he was a candidate for governor against Snyder.

WEARE, MESHECH, president of the State of the middle States he took a very active part. In New Hampshire, died Jan. 15, 1786, aged 72. The son of Nathaniel W. of Hampton, he was graduated at Harvard college in 1735. In 1754 he was appointed a commissioner to the congress at Albany, afterwards one of the justices of the superior court, and in 1777 chief justice. Chosen president of New Hampshire in 1776, he was invested at the same time with the highest offices. legislative, judicial, and executive, in which he was continued by annual elections during the whole war. When a new constitution was adopted, he was again in 1784 elected president; but he resigned before the close of the year. He died at Hampton Falls, worn out with public services. He "dared to love his country and be poor."

> WEATHERFORD, Mr., a Baptist minister. died in Pittsylvania county, Va., in 1833, aged 90. WEATHERS, JAMES, a minister, died in Granville county, N. C., in 1843, aged 93. He > was a soldier of the Revolution. WEBB, Joseph, minister of Fairfield, Conn., died in 1732, aged about 60. He graduated at Harvard in 1684, and was ordained in 1694.

> WEBB, JOHN, minister in Boston, was graduated at Harvard college in 1708. He was ordained the first minister of the new north church in Boston, Oct. 20, 1714. After surviving one colleague, Mr. Thacher, and enjoying the assistance of another, Dr. Eliot, for eight years, he

His colleague pronounced him "one of the best | manner give them instruction. The beauties of of Christians and one of the best of ministers." He published the following sermons: to a society of young men, 1718; on the advantages of early piety, 1721; before the general assembly, 1722; warning against bad company keeping, 1726; on the death of W. Waldron, 1727; the believer's redemption by the blood of Christ; on the payment of vows, 1728; directions to obtain salvation in seven sermons, 1729; the great concern of New England; at the ordination of a deacon, 1731; the duty of a degenerate people to pray for the reviving of God's work; a sermon to two malefactors, 1734; the government of Christ, an election sermon, 1738; on the death of P. Thacher, 1739; Christ's suit to the sinner while he stands and knocks at the door.

WEBB, NATHAN, first minister of Uxbridge, Mass., died in 1772, aged 66. He graduated at Harvard in 1725. He was ordained in 1731 and was pastor forty-one years. Wacantuck was the Indian name of the town.

WEBB, ISAAC, an eminent naval architect, died at New York in 1840, aged 46.

WEBBER, SAMUEL, D. D., president of Harvard college, died of the apoplexy July 17, 1810, aged 51. He was born in Byfield in 1759; was graduated in 1784; and in 1789 succeeded Dr. Williams as professor of mathematics. In 1796 he examined the boundary between the United States and New Brunswick. After the death of Dr. Willard he was elected president, and inducted into his office May 6, 1806. His daughter married Prof. J. F. Dana. He published a system of mathematics, 2 vols. 8vo., 1801; an eulogy on President Willard, 1804.

WEBSTER, JOHN, governor of Connecticut, died at Hadley, Mass., in 1665. He was a magistrate of Connecticut in 1639, and governor in 1656. About 1660 he, with Rev. Mr. Russell and his associates, purchased the territory now included in Hadley and other towns, and removed thither. He was the ancestor of Noah Webster.

WEBSTER, SAMUEL, D. D., minister of Salisbury, Mass., was born in Bradford in 1718; was graduated at Harvard college in 1737; and was ordained Aug. 12, 1741. After a ministry of nearly fifty-five years, he died July 18, 1796, aged 77. At the time when he entered the sacred office, his mind was so impressed with the importance of the work in which he was about to engage, that he was ready to abandon all thoughts of the calling. In his preaching he was remarkably clear and plain. There was an earnestness in his manner which convinced his hearers that he himself felt what he delivered. He did not preach the things which he considered as of doubtful disputation. He possessed a happy talent in visiting his people, and could adapt himself to their circumstances, and in a pleasing Christian virtue were exhibited in his whole life. He published a sermon, 1756; at ordination of S. Webster, 1772; the duty of an enslaved people. a fast sermon, 1774; to two companies of minutemen, 1775; election sermon, 1777; two discourses on infant haptism, third edit., 1780; on the death of J. Tucker.

WEBSTER, EBENEZER, captain, a soldier of the French and the Revolutionary wars, died at Salisbury, N. H., in 1816, aged 76. He was the son of Ebenezer of Kingston, six miles from Exeter, and of Susannah, daughter of Rev. S. Bachelder, and he was the son of Ebenezer, who settled in K. in 1700. The next ancestor was Thomas of Hampton, then John of Ipswich, who came from Ipswich in England. He was the father of Daniel Webster, by his second wife, Abigail Eastman of Salisbury. Among the children by his first wife was Abigail, who married Mr. Haddock, the father of Prof. Haddock of Dartmouth college.

WEBSTER, DAVID, colonel, died at Plymouth, N. H., June 28, 1824. He was the oldest inhabitant, one of the first settlers. Coming from Hellis with his wife and child, there was no road nor path frem Boscawen to Plymouth, a journey of two days on foot in winter. His valuable estate was near the mouth of Baker's river. He was the first sheriff of Grafton county.

WEBSTER, EZEKIEL, an eminent lawyer, the brother of Daniel, lived at Boscawen, N. H., and died in the court-house at Concord in 1829, aged about 48. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1804, and was a State senator.

WEBSTER, NATHANIEL, minister of Biddeford, Me., died at Portland in 1830, aged 81.

He graduated at Harvard in 1769.

WEBSTER, CHARLES R., died July 18, 1834, aged 71. He was a bookseller in Albany as early as 1784. He established and conducted for forty years the Albany Gazette.

WEBSTER, JOSIAII, minister of Hampton, N. H., died in 1837, aged 65. He was born in Chester Jan. 16, 1772, and graduated at Dartmouth college in 1798. From 1799 to 1806 he was minister at Chebacco in Ipswich. He was installed at Hampton as the successor of Mr. Appleton, June 8, 1808, and was pastor nearly twenty-nine years. E. D. Eldredge was his successor. He published a sermon at the installation of J. Lord, Thomaston, 1809; at ordination of J. W. Dow, Tyringham, 1811; at the thanksgiving, 1812; before the general association of New Hampshire, 1819; at ordination of J. C. Webster, 1837, as seamen's chaplain for Russia.

WEBSTER, REDFORD, died in Boston in 1838, aged 77. He wrote poetry and miscella.

WEBSTER, NOAH, LL. D., died at New congress s of the Chosen was int offices, hich he ring the adopted, ; but he He died services.

min-

epedi-

ed by mbus-

pure was

e with ldiers,

s a re-

eorgia

e con-

e. In ia con-

of the

t. Clair

ployed

fiamis,

mplete

ountry.

treaty

e Ohio.

ed in a ie shore

Major-

Oct. 26,

and an andidate

State of ged 72.

he was

In 1754

oor." minister, aged 90. died in 93. Ile d, Conn., uated at 694. as gradue was or-

h church ving one he assistyears, lic aged 62.

Haven May 28, 1843, aged 84. Born in West | the commissioners on his estate, that his assets Hartford, a descendant of John of Hartford, he graduated at Yale in 1778. After being admitted to the bar he engaged in the business of instruction. In 1783 he wrote an English grammar, and also some political pieces. In 1793 he commenced at New York the Commercial Advertiser; in 1708 he removed to New Haven, and in 1807 began to compile his English dictionary, first published in 1828. In the edition of 1840 were printed 4394 new words, freely furnished by the author of this Biographical work, the acknowledgment for which has not yet been made by the editor. He lived some years in Amherst. For the last forty years he was incessant in his studies, and had vigorous health. He died in composure and resignation. He published various elementary school books; sketches of American policy, 1784; and his dictionary of the English language in 1828. A quarto edition, revised by C. A. Goodrich, was published at Springfield by G. and C. Merriam, 1854.

WEBSTER, JOHN W., professor of chemistry and mineralogy in the medical school connected with Harvard college, was hung as a murderer in the yard of the Leverett street jail in Boston, Aug. 30, 1850, aged about 56. He graduated at Harvard in 1811; was appointed professor in 1827. He murdered in 1849 in the medical building in Boston, Dr. George Parkman, out of revenge, or to evade the payment of a debt. This execution on the gallows of such a man for such a crime is honorable to the administration of justice in Massachusetts. What security can there be for human life, if the life of the murderer is spared through a pitiable, falsely-called humanmand, "He that sheddeth ity? It is God's man's blood, by shall his blood be shed." He published a 1 of chemistry; description of the island of St. Michael, 1821.

WEBSTER, DANIEL, LL. D., died at Marshfield, Mass., Oct. 24, 1852, aged 70. He was boan in Salisbury, N. H., Jan. 18, 1782, the son of Capt. Ebenezer W. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1801, being one of the two first scholars of his class. He practised law in Boscawen and in Portsmouth. In 1813 he was a member of congress. He removed to Boston in He was an able writer and a successful teacher; 1816: was re-elected to congress in 1822, and in 1828 entered the senate of the United States. His famous debate with Hayne was in 1830, and that with Calhoun in 1833. He visited Europe in 1839, and was secretary of State from 1841 to 1843. He negotiated the Ashburton treaty; afterwards he served in the Senate; his last office was that of secretary of State under President Fillmore. It is stated by Mr. Ticknor that after he had signed his will he prayed aloud for some minutes, ending with the Lord's prayer and the usual ascription. It was announced by amounted to 35,000 or 36,000 dollars, and his debts to about 155,000 dollars. Thus, it would seem, he knew nothing of the economies of private life. Yet among our public men of his day none were superior to him in talents, learning, and forcible eloquence. He aimed to be president of the United States; but failed. Had he held that station for the last four years, it is not supposable that his strong arm would have failed to shield the new settlers and citizens of the far west from the outrages of border-ruffinnism. It will be honorable to his memory to repent his words, which he uttered in his speech in Fancuil Hall in Boston, Nov. 1, 1844: "What! when all the civilized world is opposed to slavery, - when morality denounces it, - when every thing respected, every thing good bears united witness ngainst it, - is it for America, - America, the land of Washington, - the model republic of the world, - is it for America to come to its assistance, and insist that its maintenance is necessary to the support of her institutions?" works, in 6 vols., 8vo., were published 1851.

WEBSTER, RICHARD, minister of Mauch Chunk, Penn., died in 1855 or 1856. He wrote a history of the Presbyterian church, which in Aug., 1856, J. W. Wilson, of Philadelphia, proposed to publish in one volume of seven hundred pages, with a biography by Dr. Van Rensselner.

WEEKES, DANIEL, died at Ship Harbor, Neva Scotia, Dec. 29, 1851, aged 116; having been born on Long Island Dec. 3, 1735. At the age of twenty-four he served in the British army, when Wolfe fell. Adhering to the royal cause, he received a grant of land in Nova Scotia. In 1838 he recovered his sight. He toiled in the woods bareheaded till within two years of his death. His children were twenty-one, his descendants some hundreds.

WEEKS, HOLLAND, minister of Abington, Mass., died at Henderson, N. Y., in 1843, aged about 70. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1795. He became at last a fanatic or enthusiast, and was dismissed from his pastoral charge.

WEEKS, WILLIAM R., D. D., of Newark, N. J., died at Oneida June 26, 1848, aged 66.

a man of an excellent character.

WEEMS, Mason L., a writer and Episcopal minister, resided in Virginia, but died at Beaufort, S. C., May 23, 1825, after long sickness. Before the Revolution he was rector of Mount Vernon parish, when the old church at Polick had George-Washington for an attendant on his ministry. A large family compelled him to seck a better income than his parish afforded, and he became a book agent for Matthew Cary. The bible, Marshall's life of Washington, and his own pepular books he scattered over the south, travelling

w W Co

in

Th

we

pu

8 li

F

fc

F

G

tr

res Ha and wn 112 the scc bur

field

yea Dar ate C. and was a la a pl disa him sion alli air, Ma frie on of : Sal cen pre

on

with a few sermons in his knapsack, that he might occasionally preach. He had a peculiar extravagance of style; but he had energy, humor, pathos, and skill in awakening enthusiasm. Immediately after the decease of Washington, he published a history of his life and death, virtues and exploits, dedicated to Mrs. Maytha Washington, Feb. 22, 1800. The eleventh edition, fully unfolded, was published of the life of G. W., 1811. Afterwards, he published the life of Benjamin Franklin; the life of William Penn; the life of Gen. Francis Marion. He published also God's revenge against murder, a tragedy; and various tracts. — Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

WELBY, AMELIA B., Mrs., a poetess, died at Louisville, Ky., May 3, 1852, aged 31. She was horn in Maryland and married Mr. George Welby of Louisville. Her poems were published in 1850. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

WELCH, DANIEL, minister of Mansfield, Conn., died suddenly in 1782, aged about 56. Born in Windham, he graduated at Yale in 1749, in the class of Dr. Hopkins, and succeeded Mr. Throop in the north society. His successors were M. C. Welch and W. Ely. He had good pulpit talents, and was beloved by his people and respected by a large acquaintance.

WELCH, SAMUEL, the oldest native of New Hampshire, was born at Kingston Sept. 1, 1710, and died at Bow April 5, 1823, aged 112. He was always a man of temperance. At the age of 112 he retained his faculties, and conversed on the events of past days. When asked, if it seemed to him that he had lived so long, he replied: "O no, but a little while." Weary of the burthen of life, he expressed a willingness to die.

WELCH, Moses C., D. D., minister of Mansfield, Conn., died in 1824, aged 70, in the fortieth year of his ministry. He succeeded his father, Daniel, who was a native of Windham, a graduate of Yale in 1749, and who died in 1782. Dr. C. graduated at Yale in 1772. He studied law and physic and taught school for some years, and was ordained in 1784. His son, Jonathan A., was a lawyer in Brooklyn, Conn.; his son, Archibald, a physician of Hartford, was killed in the railroad disaster at Norwalk. His fourth wife survived him. He was a man of talents, of strong passions, impetuous, witty, and satirical, a very popular preacher, sometimes in his preaching touching on the democracy of the day, which he thought allied to French atheism. He had a dignified air, but was pleasant in private intercourse. Many pupils fell under his care. He was the friend of Samuel Nott. He published a sermon en the death of S. White, 1794; of B. Chaplin; of Mrs. Pond; of A. Miller, 1801; of Mary J. Salter; of J. W. Judson; of J. Gurley, 1812; a century sermon, 1801; election sermon, 1812;

1805; to Windham association; at ordination of W. Andrews; and several controversial pamphlets.— Sprague's Annals.

WELCH, Thomas, M. D., died in Boston in Feb., 1831, aged 80. Born in B., he graduated in 1772, and served as a surgeon in the army. The marine hospital at Charlestown was under his care, and he was also quarantine physician for Boston. He was greatly respected. — Boston Med. Jour. IV.

WELCH, SARAH, Mrs., died in Boston in 1850, aged 101. She was a native of Gloucester and daughter of Jonathan Coates.

WELCH, ARCHIBALD, M. D., of Hartford, was killed by the railroad plunge into the river May 6, 1853, aged 58. He was horn at Mansfeld, Vt., where he practised physic twenty years; for the last fifteen he lived in Wethersfield and Hartford, in good reputation. He was a son of Rev. M. C. Weleh, and grandsen of Rev. Daniel W. By his mother he descended from Rev. W. Williams of Hatfield, and Rev. J. Ashley of Deerfield. He married in 1810 Cynthia Hyde of Lehanon: two of his sons, Henry and Moses, were graduates of Yale.

WELCOTT, NANNIE, died at Oxford, Me.,

July 17, 1848, aged 114.

WELD, THOMAS, first minister of Dunstable, N. H., died in 1702, aged 40. Born in Roxbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1671. chechurch was gathered and he ordained Dec. 16, 1685. By his wife, Mary Savage, he was the father of Rev. Habijah W.

WELD, Habhah, minister of Attleborough, Mass., died in 1782, aged 79. Born in Dunstable, he graduated at Harvard in 1723 and was ordained in 1727, the successor of E. White: M. Short was the first minister. He was succeeded by J. Wilder. His wife was Mary, the daughter of Rev. John Fox of Woburn: she died aged 92. They had fifteen children, of whom Elizabeth married Rev. O. Shaw of Barnstable, and Lucy married Rev. O. Noble of Coventry, and Hannah married Caleb Fuller of Hanover. Mr. W.'s father was the first minister of Dunstable. He had a very loud and pleasant voice, and was highly esteemed as a preacher and minister, and very successful. — Thacher's Scrm.; Sprague.

WELD, EZRA, minister of Braintree, Mass., died in 1816, aged 80. Born in Pomfret, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1759, and was ordained in 1762. He was a very faithful and useful minister. His predecessors were H. Adams and S. Niles; his successors S. Page, R. S. Storrs, E. A. Park. He published a sermon at the ordination of S. Niles; on union, 1794; at a fast, 1799.

of Mrs. Pond; of A. Miller, 1801; of Mary J.

Salter; of J. W. Judson; of J. Gurley, 1812; a ded in 1844, aged 78. The son of Rev. Ezra of century sermon, 1801; election sermon, 1812; at the execution of S. Freeman for murder, was ordained in 1792; and dismissed in 1824.

ra of his, his deAbington, 343, aged in 1795.
siast, and Newark,
aged 66.
I teacher; Episcopal at Beau-sickness.

of Mount

at Pehick

ant on his

n to seek a

and he be-

The bible,

own pop-

travelling

assets

d his would

f pri-

ie day

rning,

presi-

ad he is not failed

of the

anism.

cat his

Fancuil

hen all

- when

ing re-

witness

ica, the ublic of

o its as-

s neces-

" His

Mauch

le wrote

vhich in iia, pro-

hundred

sselaer.

or, Nova

ing been the age

h army,

al cause,

otia. In d in the 51.

He afterwards preached at Fabius, N. Y. He | had thirteen children. He was a theologian of died at Belleville, N. J., near the residence of his son, Theodore D. W., in full hope of a blessed immortality. His widow, Elizabeth, daughter of John Clark of Lebanon, Conn., died Aug. 31, 1853, aged 81. He was a man of talents and distinguished usefulness.

WELD, LEWIS, Rev., died in Hartford Dec. 30, 1853, aged 57; principal of the American asylum for the deaf and dumb. Born in Hampton, Conn., the son of Rev. L. W., he was a graduate in 1818. In 1822 he was principal of the institution in Philadelphia for the deaf and dumb. As the successor of Mr. Gallaudet in the same office, he lived twenty-three years at Hartford, and was successful and greatly respected. He was unceasing in a regard to the spiritual interests of his pupils, as became an enlightened, far-looking Christian. His wife was Mary, daughter of Dr. Mason F. Cogswell of Hartford.

He left five children. WELDE, THOMAS, first minister of Roxbury, Mass., died in England in 1662. He was a native of England, and was a minister in Essex before he came to this country. Refusing to comply with the impositions of the established church, he determined to seek the quiet enjoyment of the rights of conscience in America. He arrived at Boston June 5, 1632, and in July was invested with the pastoral care of the church in Roxbury. In Nov. following, he received J. Eliot as his colleague. In 1639 he assisted Mr. Mather and Mr. Eliot in making the tuneful New England version of the Psalms. In 1641 he was sent with Hugh Peters to England as an agent for the province, and he never returned. He was settled at Gateshead, but was ejected in 1662. His sons, Edward, John, and Thomas, were ministers: the two first not in this country, but Thomas, of Dunstable, died in 1702, aged 50. He published a short story of the rise, reign, and ruin of the antinomians, familists, and libertines that infected the churches of New England, 4to., 1644; 2d edit., 1692; an answer to W. R.'s narration of the opinions and practices of the New England churches, vindicating those godly and orthodoxal churches from more than one hundred imputations, etc., 1644. With others he wrote the perfect pharisee under monkish holiness, against the Quakers, 1654. - Sprague.

WELDE, THOMAS, grandson of Rev. T. W., was the minister of Dunstable, Mass., from 1756 to his death in 1702, aged 50. He was the son of Thomas, a representative in the general court, and graduated at Harvard in 1671.

WELLES, NOAH, D. D., minister of Stamford, Conn., was graduated at Yale college in Welsh origin. By his wife, Abigail Woolsey, he Revolutionary war he settled in Brattlebore', great distinction, and he took an active part in the controversy respecting an American episcopate. He published a discourse in favor of the Presbyterian ordination; a vindication of the validity and divine right of Presbyterian ordination, as set forth in Mr. Chauncy's Dudleian lecture and Mr. Welles' discourse, in answer to the exceptions of J. Leaming, 1767; a funeral sermon on Mr. Hobart, 1773. - Sprague.

WELLES, SAMUEL, died at Paris Aug. 31. 1841, aged 63. A native of Boston, he was long a well-known American banker in Paris, eatablished there in 1815. He was a man of ability and integrity, friendly, hospitable.

WELLES, JOHN, a rich merchant, died in Boston Sept. 25, 1855, aged 90. He was the son of Arnold W., and graduated in 1782, outliving his class and all preceding graduates. He was successively in business with his father, with Samuel, and with Benjamin W. He was a representative, senator, and councillor. His summers he spent on a valuable farm in Natick, which had been in possession of the Welles family from the days of the apostle Eliet, the teacher of the Natick Indians.

WELLINGTON, TIMOTHY, Dr., died of disease of the heart, at West Cambridge, Mass., in 1853, aged 71. The son of Timothy of Lexington, he graduated at Harvard in 1806. His practice was extensive and successful. His son is Dr. William W. Wellington of Cambridgeport.

WELLS, THOMAS, governor of Connecticut, died at Hartford Jan. 14, 1660, aged 62. He was appointed deputy-governor in 1654, and governor in 1655. His successor was John Webster. At this time the number of rateable persons in the colony of Connecticut, as distinct from New Haven, was only 775. In 1657 J. Winthrop was governor and Mr. Wells deputy-governor. Hugh, the brother of Gov. W., was one of the founders of Hartford, but removed to Hadley about 1660. These brothers were the sons of Thomas, a wealthy merchant and zealous Puritan of London; and Samuel Welles of Boston and Paris, and John Welles of New York, were of this family, though the name differs a little.

WELLS, THOMAS, the first minister of Amesbury, Mass., died in 1734, aged 87. He was the first man who received an honorary degree at Harvard, in 1703. He was settled in 1672. His successor was E. March, who died aged 88.

WELLS, THOMAS B., minister of North Guilford, Conn., died in 1808, aged 70, in the fortysecond year of his ministry.

WELLS, HENRY, Dr., a physician in Montague, Mass., died in 1814, aged 72. Born in 1741, and was ordained Dec. 31, 1746. He died New York in 1742, he graduated at the early about 1776. Born in Colchester, he was of age of fifteen at Princeton in 1757. Before the ino ger nul him of e 1 Lor his the fessi Care glan dew and cal Am

W

dr

or

an ha

effe

ing

sich

born Bron 1814 atallo villag was 1 Harv book prede Reev tled i W anato

W

tlebo

Main He v Hary medi and sprin profe lectu he re lectu: at Br he wa turer one i a me Lowe W Mass and thence he removed to Montague. He was widely consulted as a physician. Dr. Richard W., late of Canandaigua, was his son. He dressed much like the Quakers. He wore velvet or buckskin small-clothes, a long vest with flaps and pockets, and a broad-brimmed, low-crowned hat. The following anecdote shows the good effect of his cheerfulness and facetiousness. Having spent an evening with a patient dangerously aick, as he went to find his bed, the patient, being inoculated with his good humor, sent a messenger to him with a boot-jack, "to enable him to pull off his buckskin breeches." - "Go and tell him," said the doctor, " he need be under no fear of dying at present." — Williams' Med. Biog.

WELLS, WILLIAM CHARLES, Dr., died in London in 1817, aged 60. Born in Charleston, his father, a Scotchman, was a tory, and so was the son. From 1775 to 1778 he studied his profession at Edinburgh. From 1780 he was in South Carolina for some years; but in 1784 went to Enggland. He is chiefly known by his experiments on dew. He published a volume of essays on vision and dew, 1816; also some papers in the philosophical transactions; and miscellanies. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

WELLS, WILLIAM, D. D., minister of Brattleboro', Vt., died in 1827, aged 83. He was born in England in 1744, and was a minister at Bronsgrove about twenty years. From 1794 to 1814 he was the minister of B., though not installed; then formed a new church in the east village. In his principles he was an Arian. He was the father of William Wells, a graduate of Harvard in 1796; an excellent tutor, afterwards bookseller in Boston, still living. Dr. Wells' predecessor at B., the first minister, was A. Reeve, a graduate of Yale in 1731, who was settled in 1770, and died in 1798, aged 90.

WELLS, JOHN DOANE, M. D., professor of anatomy and surgery in the medical school of Maine, died at Boston July 25, 1830, aged 31. He was born in B. March 6, 1799; graduated at Harvard college in 1817; and, having finished his medical education in Europe, succeeded Dr. Smith, and delivered his first course of lectures in the spring of 1823. In Sept., 1826, he was chosen professor in the medical school at Pittsfield, and lectured there four years. At the close of 1829, he repaired to Baltimore to deliver a course of lectures; and thence in March, 1830, to his post at Brunswick, Me. But, exhausted by his labors, he was able to lecture only one week. As a lecturer on anatomy, it has been thought that no one in this country was superior to him. He was a member of the church in Boston, of which Dr. Lowell was pastor.

WELLS, Rufus, the first minister of Whately, Mass., died Nov. 8, 1834, aged 90. A native of the regents of the university.

Deerfield, he graduated at Harvard in 1764, and was ordained in 1771. He was succeeded by Bates and Ferguson.

WELLS, SAMUEL W., died at Salem, Mass., in 1751, aged about 48; for many years a teacher of navigation. He graduated at Harvard in 1823.

WELLS, DANIEL, judge, died at Cambridge, June 23, 1854, aged 63, chief justice of the common pleas. He was appointed attorney-general in 1838; chief judge in 1844. He was born in Greenfield, where he lived most of his life: a graduate of Dartmouth in 1810. His death was sudden by disease of the heart.

WELSH, THOMAS, a physician, died in Boston in 1831, aged 89. He graduated at Harvard in 1772; was a surgeon in the Revolutionary army, taking care of the wounded at Lexington and Bunker Hill; and subsequently had extensive practice in Boston, where he was quarantine physician, and he was connected also with the marine hospital at Charlestown. He was a consulting physician of the Massachusetts general hospital. He published oration March 5, 1783; eulogy on N. Gorham, 1796.

WELSTEED, WILLIAM, minister in Boston, died in 1753, aged 58. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1716; was a tutor several years; succeeded Mr. Waldron in 1728 in the new brick church; and had E. Gray as a colleague for ten years. He was an excellent Christian, an accomplished gentleman, an exemplary minister. He published election sermon, 1751. - Sprague.

WENDELL, OLIVER, judge, died in Boston Jan. 15, 1818, aged 85. He graduated at Harvard in 1753. He was a descendant of Evart Janson Wendell, who came from Embden to Albany: his father Jacob, a merehant in Boston, married Sarah, daughter of Dr. James Oliver of Cambridge. Mild, benevolent, exemplary, faithful in public life, he enjoyed in his failing years great peace and the hopes of a blessed immortality though the propitiation made by Christ. His wife was Mary, daughter of Edward Jackson, and her mother was Dorothy Quincy. His daughter Sarah married Rev. Dr. Holmes, of Cambridge, and was the mother of Oliver Wendell Holmes, physician and poet.

WENDELL, JOHN H., general, died suddenly at Albany, while attended an association of the reformed Dutch church, July 11, 1832, aged 88. He was a soldier of the Revolution. At the beginning of the contest he abandoned the law and was a captain in the army. He was in the battle of Monmouth, and at the surrender of Burgoyne. He died under his paternal roof; and was long a man of piety.

WENDELL, PETER, died at Albany, Oct. 29, 1849, aged 63; the oldest physician, chancellor of

. 31, was s, esbility

d in

a of

t in seo-

the ration,

ture

cep-

n on e son living e was with reprenmera h had m the of the of dis-188., in exing-. His son is port. ecticut, Hewas overnor er. At in the n New top was Hugh, ounders it 1660. mas, a of Lond Paris, of this

f Ames-He was y degree n 1672. ged 88. rth Guilne forty-in Mon-Born in he early efore the ttleboro', Wentworths of New England, died at Dover, N. II., about 1690 or 1700, more than 80 years old. He was of Exeter in 1639, and was a ruling elder of the church of Dover.

WENTWORTH, JOHN, lieutenant-governor of N. II., died at Portsmouth in 1730, aged 58. He was the son of Samuel of Portsmouth or Dover, and grandson of William, and was born in 1672. He was in office from 1717 to 1729. His commission had annexed to it the name of Joseph Addison, then secretary in England. His administration was acceptable to the people; but in a few years the harmony was interrupted, and he had the misfortune also to lose the favor of Gov. Belcher. The office-seekers in those days quarrelled, as they do now. He was the father of sixteen children. - Eliot.

WENTWORTH, BENNING, governor of New Hampshire, the son of lieutenant-governor Wentworth, died in 1770, aged 74. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1715. After having been a member of the assembly and of the council, his mercantile business called him to London, where he solicited and obtained the commission of governor. He began his administration in 1741 and continued in this office near twenty years. He was superseded in 1767 by his nephew, John Wentworth. He possessed strong passions and his resentments were lasting. Closely attached to the interest of the church of England, in his grants of lands, by which he enriched himself, he reserved a right in every township for the society for propagating the gospel, of which he was a member. Bennington in Vermont has its name from him, and he granted many other towns in that State. Though during his administration he declined giving a charter for a college in New Hampshire unless it was put under the direction of the Bishop of London, yet he afterwards gave a lot of five hundred acres of land to Dartmorth college, and on this land the college edifice was erected. He co-operated with the assembly in giving to Harvard college 300 pounds towards repairing the library which had been destroyed by fire. In his appointment of civil and military officers he was frequently governed by motives of favor; but his administration in other respects was beneficial. He was frequently visited by the gout, and from these visits he did not acquire much patience.

WENTWORTH, JOHN, LL. D., governor of New Hampshire, died April 8, 1820, aged 83. He was a descendant of W. Wentworth of Dover, and the son of Mark Hunting W., and was born in 1736. He graduated at Harvard college in 1755. At the age of 31 he was appointed governor in 1767 as successor of B. Wentworth, and remained in office till the Revolution of 1775. He gave the charter of Dartmouth college. He WENTWORTH, WILLIAM, ancestor of the In 1792 he was appointed lieutenant-governor and commander-in-chief of Nova Scotia, but was succeeded by Prevost in 1808. He resided at Halifax, where he died. Ills wife, whom he married in 1760, was Miss Hilton. He had a pension of 500 pounds per annum given him by the British government in 1808. He was a man of large and liberal views, of sound judgment, and cultivated taste. He did much to encourage agriculture, cultivating a farm and building an elegant house at Wolfsboro', on the border of lake Winnipiscogee.

1

I

C

in di

he

17

be let 880 che

sci ася

life pos

Du

no :

he '

any tim

him

Was

wer

voic

nes

stre

His

dep

tem

ing

the titue

of S anni

177 infa

in v

and pari

essa wro

repl

voli

be

the

that

WEQUASII, sachem of the Niantic Indians in Connecticut, died at an early period after the settlement of Lyme, and is buried at the Christian Indian burying-ground on the west side of the bay near the mouth of the Niantie river. His memorial-stone says, " He was the first convert among the New England tribes." This may be a mistake. Mr. Griswold was a missionary to these Indians. It would be well if some measures were taken to preserve this Indian grave-yard, near the surges of the bay, from deseecration. Mr. Shepard wrote concerning this Pequot: " Wequash, the famous Indian at the river's mouth, is dead and certainly in heaven. Ho knew Christ, he loved Christ, he preached Christ up and down, and then suffered martyrdom for Christ." - Felt's Eccl. Hist. N. E.

WERAUMAUG, an Indian, was a Pootatuck sagamore, who became sachem of the Wyantenucks in New Milford. He lived two miles below the village. He had a reservation of two thousand acres in Washington, called the hunting-grounds of Raumaug. He died about 1735. Under the watchful instruction of Rev. D. Boardman he became a Christian, and died such, though the Indians with him remained in heathenism. In 1736 a part of his people removed to Schaghticoke and were there taught by the Moravian missionaries. Mr. Boardman called him a distinguished sachem, of great abilities and eminent virtues, the most potent prince in the colony.

WERDEN, PETER, a Baptist minister of Cheshire, Mass., died in 1808, aged 80. He was ordained at Warwick in 1751, and removed to Cheshire in 1770, and was there pastor 38 years.

- Benedict's Hist.

WERTMULLER, ADOLPH ULRIC, an eminent painter of Philadelphia, died near Mareus Hook, Oct. 5, 1811, aged 61. Boru in Stockholm, he studied and pursued his profession several years in Paris, and first came to Philadelphia in 1794; but returned to Europe in 1796. Losing a large sum of money by the failure of others, he returned to Philadelphia in 1800, and obtained an income by exhibiting his picture of Danae. In 1801 he married a rich lady of Swedish descent. His last residence was a farm at Marcus Hook, was a very acceptable and popular governor. on the Delaware. His Danae sold at New York for 1500 dollars; a small copy at Philadelphia! for 500. His picture of Washington is thought not to be accurate.

WESSELHOEFT, ROBERT, doctor, died at Leipsie in Nov. or Dec., 1852: he was the founder of the Brattleboro' water-cure establishment, Vt.

WEST, SAMUEL, D. D., minister of New Bedford, Mass., died at Tiverton, R. I., Sept. 24, 1807, aged 77, and was buried at New Bedford. He was born in Yarmouth March 4, 1730, and was early occupied in the labors of husbandry. Discovering traits of genius, a few intelligent and good men resolved to give him a liberal education. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1754, having gained a rank among the most distinguished of his class. About the year 1764 he was ordained at New Bedford. The year 1765 awakened his attention to politics, and he became a whig partisan. He wrote many forcible pieces in the newspapers. He deciphered the letter of Dr. Church. He was a member of the convention for forming the constitution of Massachusetts and of the United States; and was chosen honorary member of the academy of sciences at Philadelphia, and a member of the academy at Boston. In the latter part of his life his memory almost entirely failed him. He possessed an original mind of vigorous powers. During the last thirty years of his life he used no notes in preaching. It was his practice, when he was not in his own pulpit, to discourse upon any text which was pointed out to him; and sometimes the most difficult passages would be given him for the purpose of trying his strength. He was not, however, a very popular preacher. There were defects in the tone and inflection of his voice, and there was a singularity and uncouthness in his manner, for which the ingenuity and strength of his arguments could not compensate. His manners were unpolished; his figure and deportment were not very attractive; nor was his temper very nild and amiable. Notwithstanding his singularities, no man could accuse him of the wilful violation of any principle of moral reetitude. He published a sermon at the ordination of S. West, 1764; election sermon, 1776; at the anniversary of the landing of the forefathers, 1777; at the ordination of J. Allyn, 1788; on infant baptism; essays on liberty and necessity, in which the arguments of President Edwards and others for necessity are considered, the first part in 1793, the second in 1795. To these essays Dr. Edwards, the son of the president, wrote an answer, and Dr. West left behind him a reply almost completed. He maintains that volition is not an effect, for which a cause is to he sought in nature, or out of man, but, being the mind willing, is itself an efficient cause; volitions are effects; that divine prescience and two were Indians. His predecessor was Mr. Edpermissive decree do not imply the necessity of events; and that man has a self-determining power, or that he himself determines, though acting with motives. He adopted Berkeley's ideal theory, denying the existence of matter. The following anecdote relating to his faith has been preserved. At a minister's meeting, when Berkeley's scheme was discussed, father Farrand of Canaan was present. On coming away, it was discovered that Dr. West's horse was gone. "Stolen," said F.; " you must advertise him; but can you describe him?" W. replied, "I could tell every white hair on him."—"But have you a perfect idea of him ?" - "Yes." - "Well, then, saddle it, and ride!"

WEST, SAMUEL, D. D., minister in Boston, died April 10, 1808, aged 69. He was born at Martha's Vineyard Nov. 19, 1738. His father, Thomas W., was the colleague of E. Mayhew, but afterwards removed to Rochester. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1771, and soon afterwards was appointed chaplain at fort Pownall in Penobscot, where he had a good opportunity for pursuing his theological studies. He was ordained minister of Needham April 25, 1764, and was installed pastor of the church in Hollis street, as successor of Mr. Wight, March 12. 1789. He had a lingering illness of several years. He was succeeded by Mr. Holley. Being of a mild disposition, he was never disposed to intolerance, polemical discussion, or acrimonious censure of others. He could live in habits of friendship with men whose opinions were opposite to his own. His sentiments in the latter period of his life, it is represented, suffered considerable change. Having an excellent memory, he was in the practice of preaching without the use of notes, though his sermons were always the fruit of deep study and reflection. He published a sermon at the ordination of Jonathan Newell, 1774; at a funeral; two fast sermons, 1785; election sermon, 1786; at his own instalment, 1789; at the artillery election, 1794; at a thanksgiving, 1795; on the death of George Washington, 1800; essays in the Columbian Centinel of an old man, from Nov. 29, 1806, to Aug. 22, 1807.

WEST, BENJAMIN, LL. D., postmaster at Providence, R. I., died in 1813, aged 63. He was professor at Brown university of mathematics, astronomy, and natural philosophy, from 1786 to 1798.

WEST, STEPHEN, D. D., minister of Stockbridge, Mass., was born in Tolland, Conn., in 1736; was graduated at Yale college in 1755; and ordained June 13, 1759. He died May 13, 1819, aged 83. Ephraim G. Swift was his colleague for a few years. During his ministry of nearly sixty years, five hundred and four persons that human volitions are not effects, unless divine were admitted to the church, of whom twenty-an eminent reus Hook, kholm, he veral years ia in 1794 ;

mor

Was

d at ad a n by man

ment,

urage

ig an er of ndiana

er the

Christ side

river.

st con-

is may sionary

f some

Indian

m dese-

ng this

at the heaven.

reached martyr-

ootatuck

Wyante-

les below

thousand

-grounds

Inder the

dman he

ough the

ism. In aghticoke

n mission-

inguished

irtues, the

inister of

He was

emoved to r 38 years.

sing a large others, he nd obtained Danae. In ish descent. arcus Hook, t New York on moral agency, published in 1772, in which his metaphysical doctrine is the antipode of that of Dr. Samuel West of New Bedford. He maintains that volition in every case is an effect, the production of God's immediate agency; so that he represents man to be a passive instrument, a mere machine. Yet he speaks of moral agency and human liberty, and these as consisting in "voluntary exertion," not in the power of choice, but in actual willing; not reflecting that brutes have voluntary exertion as well as man. This doctrine, though he was himself eminently pious, is well calculated to destroy the sense of accountableness and to promote the opinions of the Universalists. He published also a treatise on the atonement, 1785; life of Dr. Hopkins, 1805; and about twenty occasional sermons and tracts. - Sprague.

WEST, Benjamin, died March 18, 1820, aged 82; a distinguished painter, president of the royal academy in England. He was born at Springfeld, near Philadelphia, in 1738, of Quaker parents. His taste for painting was very early indicated. In 1760 he went to Italy; thence to Paris, and in Aug., 1763, to London, where he settled. He married a Miss Shewell of Philadelphia. From 1764 for forty years he exposed his works to the public entertainment. He introduced modern dresses. Many of his subjects were from the Scriptures. The catalogue of his paintings in 1805 occupied ten pages of small print; among them are Death on the pale horse, and Christ healing the sick.

WEST, JOEL, minister in Chatham, Conn., died in 1826, aged 60, in the thirty-fifth year of his ministry.

WEST, NATHANIEL, a rich merchant, died in Salem, Mass., in 1851, aged 98.

WESTBROOK, THOMAS, one of the Pejepscott proprietors in Maine, died Feb. 11, 1743-4. The town of Westbrook may be named from his father or ancestor. There was a John W. of Portsmouth in 1665.

WESTERLO, ELIARDUS, D. D., minister in Albany, died in 1790. He was a native of Holland. He had just finished his studies in the university of Groningen, when he was invited to the Dutch church in Albany. He came to America in 1760. In 1771 he readily imparted his aid, in conjunction with Dr. Livingston and others, towards effecting a union of the Dutch churches, then divided into parties, and he had the happiness of seeing this object completed in the following year. He was highly popular and useful as a preacher. He was a man of strong mind, of eminent piety, and of great erudition in theology, and in oriental literature.

WESTON, FRANCIS, of Salem, a representa- 1833, aged 86.

wards. He is principally known for his essay tive in the first general court in 1634, removed on moral agency, published in 1772, in which his to Providence, and was one of the founders of metaphysical doctrine is the antipode of that of the first Baptist church in America.

WESTON, NATHAN, an early settler of Hallowell, Me., died in 1832, aged 92.

WESTON, DANIEL, minister of Gray, Me., died in 1837, aged 73. He graduated at Harvard in 1705.

WESTWOOD, WILLIAM, a respected early settler in Hartford, Conn., about 1636, died in Hadley April 9, 1669, aged 62. He was a native of Essex, England, and came to Cambridge about 1632. He lived in Hadley eleven years. His daughter, Sarah, married Aaron Cook, son of Capt. A. C. of Northampton. To her he gave his lands in Hartford, which were inherited by her son, A. C. of Hartford.

WETHERELL, WILLIAM, first minister of the second church of Scituate, died in 1694, aged 84. He was of Cambridge in 1635, and was pastor at S. from 1645 till his death. He wrote an elegy on Sarah Cushing in 1679.

WETMORE, JAMES, an Episcopalian missionary, died May 14, 1760, aged about 66. He was graduated at the college in Saybrook in 1714; ordained the first minister of North Haven in Nov., 1718; but in Sept., 1722, he announced his conversion to the Episcopal persuasion. This was the time at which Dr. Cutler changed his sentiments. After going to England for orders in 1723, Mr. W. was on his return established rector of the church at Rye, in the province of New York, under the patronage of the society for propagating the gospel. In this place he continued till his death. His successor at North Haven, Isaac Stiles, died on the same day. Such was his zeal for Episcopacy, that he once declared he would rather join in worship with a Jewish synagogue than with a Presbyterian church. He published a letter against Dickinson in defence of Waterland's discourse on regeneration, about the year 1744; a vindication of the professors of the Church of England in answer to Hobart's sermon in favor of Presbyterian ordination, 1747; a rejoinder to Hobart's serious address; an appendix to Beach's vindication.

li

do fic

cla

an co he de as hi

us of te

S

bu

of

H

m

in

Is

ed

an po

of

wl

WETMORE, NOAH, minister of Brookhaven, N. Y., died in 1796, aged 76. He graduated at Yale in 1757.

WETMORE, IZRAHIAH, minister of Huntington, Conn., died in 1798, aged 69. He graduated at Yale in 1748.

WETMORE, LEONIDAS, captain, died in a steamboat in Missouri in 1849. He fought with the Indians in Florida, and was in various battles in Mexico.

WHARTON, CHARLES HENRY, D. D., Episcopal minister in Burlington, N. J., died July 23, 1833 aged 86

WHARTON, LEVI, M. D., died at Providence | national law at Cambridge. He published a Aug. 29, 1851, aged 90; a surgeon in the Revolutionary army.

WHEAT, or WHEET, NATHANIEL, Dr., died in Manchester, N. H., in 1856, aged 74. Born in Canaan, he was fifty years in the practice of his profession, and always ready to visit the poor.

WHEATLEY, PHILLIS, a poet, was a native of Africa, and was brought to America in 1761, when she was between seven and eight years old. She soon acquired a knowledge of the English language, and made some progress in Latin. While she was a slave in the family of John Wheatley in Boston, she wrote a volume of noems. Africa may well boast that one of her daughters, not twenty years of age, should produce the following lines. They are extracted from the poem on imagination :

"Though winter frowns, to fancy's rantured eyes
The fields may flourish, and gay seenes arise;
The frozen deeps may break their iron bauds, And bid their waters murmur o'er the sauds; Fair Flora may resume her fragrant reign, And with her flowery riches deck the plain; Sylvanus may diffuse his honors round, And all the forest may with leaves be crown'd; Showers may descend, and dews their gems disclose, And nectar sparkle on the blooming rose,"

She afterwards was married to Mr. Peters, and died at Boston Dec. 5, 1794, aged 31. She published, besides other separate pieces, poems on various subjects, religious and moral, 8vo., London, 1773.

WIIEATON, LABAN, judge, died at Norton, Mass., March 23, 1846, aged 92. Born in Marshfield, he graduated at Harvard in 1774, in the class of Fisher Ames. He studied both theology and law; for eight years he was a member of congress. After the death of a beloved daughter he founded, with a part of the property he had devoted to her, an important seminary, known as the Wheaton female seminary, which ranks high among similar seminaries, and has been very useful. He was humble, lamenting the course of his life. For the last seventeen years he attended on orthodox preaching. - Holmes' Fun. Sermon.

WHEATON, HENRY, LL. D., died in Roxbury, Mass., March 11, 1848, aged 67; a native of Providence, and a graduate of Brown in 1802. He was a descendant of Robert W., a Baptist minister, an emigrant, who first settled in Salem in the time of Charles I., and then in Rhode Island. Having studied law, in 1812 he was the editor of the National Advocate at New York, and soon a judge in the marine court. As reporter of the supreme court of the United States from 1815 to 1827, he published twelve volumes of reports. In 1837 he was minister to Prussia, where he continued in high reputation many years. On his return he was professor of inter- ing the revival about 1740 he preached with treatise on the law of captures; elements of international law; sketch of the law of nations; digest of the reports; life of W. Pinckney; a history of the Northmen; a correspondence with the department of State | and various addresses and discourses. - Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

WHEATON, ROBERT, the son of Henry, died in 1851, aged 25. He had been admitted to the bar. There was published a volume of selections from his writings, in 1851. - Cycl. of Am. Lit.

WHEATON, LEVI, M. D., died at Providence Aug. 29, 1851, aged 90. He graduated at Brown university in 1782, and was appointed professor of the theory and practice of medicine in 1815.

WHEELER, THOMAS, captain, died in 1676. He was of Concord, Mass., and served in Philip's war. He published a narrative of his expedition to the Nipmug country in 1675, which may he read in N. II. hist. coil.

WHEELER, HANNAH, widow, died in Keene. N. H., in 1824, aged 103.

WHEELER, ELUAH, minister of Great Barrington, Mass., died in 1827, aged 53. Born in Pomfret, Conn., he was for some years an Infidel physician; but becoming a Christian, he studied theology with Dr. West of Stockbridge, and was a successful minister from 1806 to 1823, admitting one hundred and fifty-two members. The first minister was S. Hopkins. - Sprague.

WHEELER, CHARLES S., died at Leipsic June 13, 1843, aged 25. A graduate of Harvard in 1837, he published an edition of Herodotus with notes.

WHEELER, Nelson, professor, died at Royalston, Mass., in 1855, aged 41. He was an eminent teacher in Worcester when he was chosen, in 1852, professor of Greek in Brown university.

WHEELOCK, ELEAZAR, D. D., first president and founder of Dartmouth college, died April 24, 1779, aged 68. He was a descendant of Ralph W., a native of Shropshire, educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge, and an eminent preacher, who came to this country in 1637, and settled first at Dedham, and thence removed to Medfield, where he died in 1683, aged 83, leaving numerous descendants in various towns. His grandfather, Eleazar W. of Medfield, afterwards of Mendon, distinguished not only as a Christian, but also as a soldier in the Indian wars, died in 1731. His father, Ralph W., a deacon of the church, died at Windham, Conn., in 1748, aged 66; his mother was Ruth Huntington, the daughter of Christopher H. of Norwich. He was an only son, and was born in Windham in April, 1711; was graduated at Yale college in 1733; and was ordained in 1735 the minister of the second society in Lebanon, where his labora were attended with a remarkable blessing. Durarly d in ative bout ved

of

Ial-

Me.,

Iar-

His n of gave d by er of

aged

s pasote an issionle was 1714:

ven in ed his This ed his orders blished nce of society he con-

North . Such leclared Jewish ch. He defence n, about ssors of Hobart's n, 1747; an apkhaven, uated at | Tuntingraduated lied in a ight with us battles

D., Epis-1 July 23,

great seal and effect in many towns of New England. Yet he successfully withstood the enthuslasm of the Separatists. While he had under his care a few English youth, Samson Occom, a Mohegan Indian, solicited admission into his school in Dec., 1743, and was received, and remained in his family five years. In consequence of the education of Occom, Dr. Wheelock was induced to form the plan of an Indian missionary school. He conceived that educated Indians would be more successful than whites as missionarise among the red men. The project was new, for the labors of Sergeant and the Brainerds, as well as those of Eliot and the Mayhews, were the labors of missionaries among the Indians. and not labors designed to form a band of Indian missionaries. Two Indian boys of the Delaware tribe entered the school in Dec., 1754, and others soon joined them. In 1762 Dr. W. had more than twenty youth under his care. For the maintenance of these Indians, funds were obtained by subscription of benevolent individuals, from the legislatures of Connecticut and Massachusetts, and from the commissioners in Boston of the Scotch society for propagating Christian knowledge. Joshua Moor, a farmer at Mansfield, having made a donation of a house and two acres of land in Lebanon, contiguous to Dr. Wheelock's house, the institution received the name of Moor's Indian charity school. Of this school several gentlemen were associated with Dr. W. as trustees; but in 1764 the Scotch society appointed a board of correspondents in Connecticut, who in 1765 sent out white missionaries and Indian school-masters to the Indians in New York. For the enlargement of this school Mr. Whitaker, minister of Norwich, and Samson Occom, were sent to Great Britain in 1766. The money which they collected for Moor's school was put into the hands of a board of trustees in England, of which the Earl of Dartmouth was the head, and into the hands of the Scotch society. As the school increased, Dr. W. determined to remove it to a more favorable location, nearer to the Indians, and to establish in connection with it a college for instruction in all the branches of science. Efforts were made to induce Dr. W. to establish the college at Pittsfield, Stockbridge, and Albany; but larger tracts of land being offered in New Hampshire, he concluded to transplant his school to Hanover, and there to found the college, of which a charter was given by Gov. Wentworth in 1769. It was an error not to have located the college at Pittsfield or Albany, which had offered a subscription of about 10,000 dollars. In 1770 he procured a dismission from his people, of whom he had been the faithful minister about thirty-five years, and removed his school to the wilderness on the of the war were to be procured, and a multitude also laid the foundations of the college. The school was not merged in the college, as has been supposed, but it ever has been and is still distinct, with a separate incorporation, obtained at a subsequent period from New Hampshire. Of Moor's school the earl of Dartmouth was a benefactor, but not of Dartmouth college, to the establishment of which he and the other trustees of the fund were opposed, as being a departure from the original design. It would be but an act of justice were this college called Wheeloek college, or even Wentworth college, or Phillips college, rather than Dartmouth. The patriarch and his family, pupils, and dependants, consisting of about seventy souls, resided at first in log houses; but the frame of a small two-story college was soon set up. The first commencement in the college was held in 1771, when four students graduated, one of whom was J. Wheelock. At this period the number of his scholars, destined for missionaries, was twenty-four, of whom eighteen were whites and only six Indians. This alteration of his plan was the result of experience. He had found that of forty Indian youth who had been under his care, twenty had returned to the vices of savage life. The celebrated Brant was one of his pupils. Among the missionaries whom he employed were Occom, C. J. Smith, T. Smith, T. Chamberlain, S. Kirkland, L. Frisbie, and D. McClure. The Revolutionary war obstructed in a great degree the benevolent project which had been commenced. After being at the head of the college about nine years, he died in Christian peace, and was succeeded in his office by his son, John Wheelock. Two of his daughters married Profs. Woodward and Ripley. His daughter, Ruth Patten, died at Hartford, Conn., Dec. 5, 1831, aged 91. His son, Col. Eleazar, died in Ohio, suddenly, about Jan., f

0

I

a ra

cc

80

Ir

bi ki

m lis

sp

of 63.

Le

fatl

elas

Tw

177 to t

of

of

app

and

arn

det

of

Ind

he unt

dea

offic ates

Wo

178 pro

ters

and

ton

and for tur

left

Jan

poi

Dr. Wheelock was one of the most interesting, eloquent, and successful ministers in New England. Dr. Trumbull describes him as "of a comely figure, of a mild and winning aspect; his voice smooth and harmonious, the best, by far, that I ever heard. He had the entire command of it. His gesture was natural but not redundant. His preaching and addresses were close and pungent, yet winning, beyond all comparison, so that his andience would be melted even into tears before they were aware of it." Besides his constant labors in the ministry for about forty-five years, he conducted his school in Lebanon about thirty years, and then at Hanover had the double care of the school and college for nine years. Forest lands were to be cleared and cultivated, various buildings erected, distant missions established and directed, funds in the difficult period western border of New Hampshire, and there of English and Indian youth were to be governed and taught. For enlarged views, and indomitable energy, and persevering and most arduous toils, and for the great results of his labors in the cause of religion and learning, perhaps no man in America is more worthy of being held in honor than Eleazar Wheelock. It was a noble Christian spirit, and not a selfish real, which governed him. Although some lands were at first given him, yet for his cares and labors at Hunover he received merely the means of subsistence for his family. His whole life was devoted to the good of mankind. He published a narrative of the Indian charity school at Lebanon, 1762; sermon at the ordination of Charles J. Smith, 1763; narratives in several numbers from 1763 to 1771: continuation of the narrative, 1773, to which is added an abstract of a mission to the Delaware Indians west of the Ohio, by McClure and Frisbie; a sermon on liberty of conscience, or no king but Christ in the church, 1775. His memoirs, by Drs. Me Clure and Parish, were published, 8vo. 1811, with extracts from his correspondence. - Sprague.

The

has still ined

hire.

as a

the stees

rture

it an elock

illipa

larch

isting

a low

y col-

ement

r stu-

elock.

s, des-

whom

. This

experi-

youth

and re-

ebrated

ne mis-

n. C. J.

rkland,

itionary

evolent

fter bee years,

eded in

Two of

ard and

died at

His son,

out Jan.,

eresting

lew Eng-

s " of a

pect; his

st, by far,

command

ot redun-

vere close

mparison,

even into

esides his

forty-five non about the double

ine years. cultivated,

ions estabcult period

multitude

e governed

WIIEELOCK, JOHN, LL. D., second president of Dartmouth college, died April 4, 1817, aged 63. The son of the preceding, he was born at Lebanon, Conn., Jan. 28, 1754. After being a member of Yale college, he removed with his father to Hanover, and graduated in the first class of four persons at Dartmouth in 1771. Two of the others were Frisbie and Ripley. In 1772 he was appointed a tutor, and was devoted to the business of instruction until the beginning of the Revolution. In 1775 be was a member of the assembly; in the spring of 1777 he was appointed a major in the service of New York, and in Nov., a lieut.-colonel in the continental army, under Col. Bedel. In 1778 he marched a detachment from Coos to Albany. By direction of Stark he conducted an expedition into the Indian country. At the request of Gen. Gates, he entered his family and continued with him until he was recalled to Hanover in 1779, by the death of his father, whom he succeeded in the office of president at the age of 25. His associates in the care of the college were Professors Woodward, Ripley, and Smith. The trustees in 1782 resolved to send him to Europe in order to promote the interests of the college. With letters from Gen. Washington, Governors Trumbull and Livingston, and others, he sailed from Boston Jan. 3, 1783, and visited France, Holland, and England, procuring considerable donations for the college in money, books, etc. On his return in the brigantine, Peace and Plenty, be left Halifax Dec. 29th, and in the morning of was in various respects advantageous to the col- graduate of Dartmouth in 1776.

lege. His laborious duties were now resumed and continued for more than thirty years. Besides attending the daily recitations of the senior class, he for many years delivered two public lectures a week on theology, and history, evincing "the extent of his learning, the diversified powers of his intellect, and the irresistible force and pathos of his eloquence." His favorite subjects of investigation were intellectual philosophy, ethics, politics, and history. After faithfully serving the college thirty-six years, he was removed from office by the trustees in 1815. The cause of this event might be found, among other circumstances, in a local ecclesiastical controversy of long continuance. This event aroused a strong feeling of indignation, which induced the legislature to pass an act enlarging the board of trustees and changing the title of the college; but the act was ultimately declared unconstitutional. By the new trustees he was restored to office in Feb., 1817. But his health was by this time effectually undermined. His wife, Maria. the daughter of Gov. Suhm of St. Thomas, died Feb. 16, 1824, aged 66. His only child, Maria Malleville, wife of President William Allen, died at Brunswick, Maine, June 3, 1828, aged 40. He bequeathed about half his estate, consisting of several houses, some wild lands, and some hundred acres of leased lands in Hanover and Lebanon, to the theological seminary at Princeton. To his family he said, that "he had nothing of his own; all was the gift of God; and to him he would devote it. Trust in him and serve him, and he will bless you." He died in perfect composure and peace, relying for salvation on the atoning blood of Jesus Christ. He prepared for the press a large historical work, proposals for the publication of which were once issued by a Boston bookseller; but the work is yet in manuscript. He published an eulogy on Dr. Smith, in 1809; sketches of the history of Dartmouth college, 1816.

WHEELOCK, EDWARD, Baptist missionary to Burmah, died on his passage from Rangoon to Calcutta in August, 1849. His widow, Mrs. Jones, died at sea from Calcutta in May, 1831; she had two children of the name of Jones. Mr. W., in his application to the board, said : To Burmah would I go; in Burmah would I live; in Burmah would I die."

WHEELOCK, RALPH, captain, died at Southbridge, Mass., in Jan., 1822, aged 97.

WHEELOCK, EPHRAIM, colonel, a veteran of the Revolution, died at Medfield, Mass., in 1826,

aged 93.

WHEELOCK, JAMES R., minister of Barre, Jan. 2, 1784, was shipwrecked on the bar off the Vt., died in Boston Nov. 24, 1841, aged 51. His point of Cape Cod, losing his strong box, con- father, James of Hanover, the son of President taining his money and papers. Yet his voyage E. Wheelock, died in 1836, aged about 60; a WHEELOCK, THOMAS, died at Winchester, N. H., in 1853, aged 91.

WHEELWRIGHT, JOHN, the founder of Exeter, N. II., died at Salisbury, N. H., in 1679, between 80 and 90 years of age. He came to this country from Alford, near Boston, in Lincolnshire. He was a graduate of Cambridge, England, a friend of Cromwell, an Episcopal minister until with thirty of his brethren driven from the church by the tyranny of Laud, and then called the Lincolnshire Nonconformists. chasing land of the Indians, he founded Exeter, N. H., and carried out, as his descendants maintain, the first democratic constitution on this continent. Afterwards he purchased five hundred acres and removed to Wells; then became the pastor of Hampton; and thence to Salisbury, where he died; but the place of his burial is not known. After being a minister in England, he was induced in consequence of the impositions of the established church to come to Massachusetts soon after its first settlement. Having married Mary Hutchinson, he was a brother-in-law to the famous Mrs. Hutchinson, and partook of her antinomian zeal. He preached in Boston on a fast day in 1636, and his sermon was filled with invectives against the magistrates and ministers. The court of magistrates in return adjudged him guilty of sedition. As all endeavors to convince him of his error were in vain, sentence of banishment was passed upon him in Nov., 1637. In the year 1638, accompanied by several persons from Braintree, where he had been a preacher, and which was a part of Boston, he went to New Hampshire, and laid the foundation of the church and town of Exeter. The next year, thinking themselves out of the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, they combined into a separate body politic; but in 1642, when Exeter was annexed to Essex county, Mr. Wheelwright, being still under the sentence of banishment, removed with a part of his church to Wells in the district of Maine. In 1644 he was restored to the freedom of the colony upon his making an acknowledgment. In 1647 he removed to Hampton, where he was minister for several years. In 1658 he was in England and in favor with Cromwell. After the restoration he returned to America, and settled as successor of William Worcester at Salisbury, N. H., where he died. He was the oldest minister in the colony, and was a man of learning, piety, and zeal. An Indian deed, alleged to have been given to him in 1629, and which had a bearing on the claims of Mason and Allen, Mr. Savage in his edition of Winthrop has shown to be a forgery. His daughter, Rebecca, married first Samuel Maverick; next William Bradbury of Salisbury. Rev. R. W. Clark of Portsmouth was a descendant. - Sprague.

WHEELWRIGHT, JOHN, judge, died in Wells,

Me., about 1760, aged 85. He was the son of Samuel of Wells, and the grandsor of Rev. John W. His public services were of great value. He was deemed the bulwark of Massachusetts against the assaults of the French and Indians on the east. On his gravestone is the figure of a judge in full wig, with flowing robes. He was the great-grandfather of Ebenezer of Newburyport,

S

aı

01

A

ta

se

m sic

Ip

wa

the

He

wa

By

a c cer

ber

of in

Star

togs

the deat

1804

the :

good

Mari

Sara

died

he w priva

1760 friga

block

Fran

a ce

Char

rema

he co

flag

Ohio

and write

and 67.

W Mas

Brai

lege

dism

in S Nels

W

W

W

WHEELWRIGHT, ABRAHAM, captain, died in Newburyport Oct. 9, 1850, aged 93. He and his brothers were once extensive merchants.— Boston Adv., Oct. 16.

WHEELWRIGHT, JOSEPH, M. D., died at Heathsville, Va., in 1853, aged 61. Born in Newburyport, he graduated at Harvard in 1811, and was forty years a physician. WHEELWRIGHT, EBENEZER, died in Newburyport, Mass., Jan. 1, 1855, aged 91. He was a descendant of John W. His father was Jeremiah, who went with Arnold to Quebec, who was a grandson of Judge John W. of Wells, Me., and he was a grandson of Rev. John W. He was a man of inflexible integrity in business, and a venerable Christian. Reduced in consequence of the war of independence to comparative poverty, yet his perseverance and energy enabled him to bring up as he wished a large family. He had judgment, and great benevolence, and the most amiable domestic virtues. His wife, Anna, was the daughter of William Coombs, a distinguished merchant and Christian: she died Aug. 4, 1855, aged 90. Of his nine children, eight are still living, among whom Mary, the widow of Rev. Dr. John Codman, is the oldest. His son William furnishes a memorable instance of Yankee enterprise. His name is held in the highest veneration in South America, where he has lived many years. He superintended and built the first railroad of any consequence in South America, that from Caldera, on the scacoast, to Copiapo, about latitude 27° S. in Chili, thence to the mines. He also organized the Pacific steam navigation company, and introduced water and gas into the city of Valparaiso. Other sons are Ebenezer of Newburyport, and Isaac W. of Byfield, a graduate of Bowdoin in 1821; and his grandson, Henry B. W. of Taunton, is skilled in the ancestral history of the family.

WHELPLEY, SAMUEL, a minister, died in New York in 1817, sged 51. He was born in Berkshire county, Mass., in 1766. For many years he resided at Morristown, N. J., where he had the charge of an academy. About 1812 he removed to the city of New York. He had acuteness and originality as a writer. He published the triangle, in defence of the New England doctrines, or against three points of old Calvinism, 2d edit., 1831; letters on capital punishment and war; cempend of history; lectures on ancient history.

WHELPLEY, PHILIP MELANCTHON, minister in New York, son of the preceding, was born in Stockbridge, Mass., in 1792; received an honorary degree at Princeton in 1815; was ordained over the first Presbyterian church, New York, April 25, 1815; and died at Schooley's mountain July 17, 1824, eged 31. He published a sermon on the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth, 1822; one before the united foreign mission society in 1823.

WHIPPLE, JOSEPH, minister of Hampton Falls, N. H., died in 1757, aged 56. Born in Inswich, he graduated at Harvard in 1720, and was ordained in 1727.

WHIPPLE, WILLIAM, general, a patriot of the Revolution, died Nov. 28, 1785, aged 54. He was born at Kittery, Me., in 1730; his mother was the daughter of Robert Cutts, a shipbuilder. By several voyages to the West Indies he acquired a considerable fortune. From 1759 he was concerned in trade at Portsmouth. Being a memher of congress in 1776, he signed the declaration of independence. In 1777 he was appointed with Stark a brigadier-general. He fought at Saratoga; and was one of the officers who conducted the prisoners to Cambridge. At the time of his death he was a judge of the superior court.

WHIPPLE, JOSEPH, Dr., died in Boston in 1804, aged 48. He was one of the founders of the medical society and its secretary, and was a good physician and useful man.

WHIPPLE, ABRAHAM, commodore, died at Marietta May 29, 1819, aged 85. His wife, Sarah, sister of Gov. Hopkins of Rhode Island, died in 1818, aged 79. Born in Rhode Island, he went to sea in boyhood: he commanded the privateer Game-cock, and in one cruise in 1759 or 1760 took twenty-three French prizes. In the frigate Providence, in 1778, he escaped from the blockaded harbor and carried dispatches to France, for which service Washington wrote him a complimentary letter. At the capture of Charleston in 1780 he was taken prisoner, and remained such to the end of the war. In 1784 he commanded the first vessel that unfurled our flag in the Thames. In 1788 he emigrated to Ohio. His daughters married Col. E. Sproat, and Dr. Comstock of Smithfield. His life was written by Dr. Hildreth.

WHIPPLE, WILLIAM, an officer of the army and navy, died at Providence in July, 1820, aged WHIPPLE, EDWARDS, died in Shrewsbury, Mass., Sept. 22, 1822, aged 44. Born in New Braintree in 1778, he graduated at Williams college in 1801; was settled in Charlton in 1804, and dismissed in 1821; and installed Sept. 26, 1821, in Shrewsbury, where he lived only a year. -Nelson's Sermon on his Death.

WHIPPLE, SOLOMON, colonel, died in Cum- president of the American bible society.

berland, R. I., in 1824, aged 87. He was an officer of the Revolution. His farm was once the residence of Mr. Blackstone, the original proprietor of Boston. Pawtucket river from Whipple's bridge is called Blackstone river.

WHIPPLE, THOMAS, Dr., died at Wentworth, N. H., in 1835, aged 50. He was a member of congress.

WHISTLER, GEORGE W., colonel, died at St. Petersburg April 7, 1849; chief engineer of the Petersburg and Moscow railroad. A graduate of West Point, he devoted himself to civil engineering. He was chief engineer of the railroad between Boston and Albany. In 1842 he went to Russia: the great railroad was completed a year after his death.

WHITAKER, NATHANIEL, D. D., first minister of Chelsea in Norwich, Conn., died in March, 1795, aged about 85. He was graduated at Harvard in 1730, and was installed at Norwich Feb. 15, 1761. In 1766 Mr. Wheelock employed him to go to England with Semson Occom, to solicit aid for Moor's Indian schoel. He was dismissed in 1772; his successors were Judson, King, Hooker, Mitchell, and Dickinson. the pastor of the third church in Salem, Mass., he was installed July 28, 1769; but after a few years' service he was dismissed in 1784, and was installed at Norridgewock, Me. He died in Virginia. He published a sermon at ordination of C. J. Smith, 1763; on the death of Whitefield; two sermons on reconciliation, 1770; confutation of Wise's churches' quarrel, etc., 1774; sermon against toryism, 1777; two sermons, at the beginning and end of the Revolutionary war; history of the third church, 1784.

WHITAKER, JONATHAN, minister of Sharon, Mass., died at Henrietta, N. Y., in 1835, aged 64. Born in Salem, he graduated at Harvard in 1797; was pastor from 1799 to 1816, in which year he was installed at New Bedford as successor of E. Randall, of the united parish, and was succeeded by O. Dewey in 1823, then by J. Angier and E. Peabody. He published a sermon before a hible society, 1818.

WHITCOAT, RICHARD, one of the bishops of the Methodist church in America, died in 1806, at Dover, Delaware.

WHITCOMB, JOHN, a Revolutionary pensioner, died at Swanzey, N. II., in 1835, aged WHITCOMB, JOHN P., general, died at Harvard, Mass., April 21, 1847, aged 50; a man of extensive business, widely known and respected. He had been a prominent advocate of the temperance cause.

WHITCOMB, JAMES, governor of Indiana, died at New York Oct. 4, 1852, aged 60. He was a senator of the United States, and vice-

John He ainst a the judge s the yport. , died

n of

nts. ied at orn in 1811,

1 New-

e and

He was 18 Jerevho was Ie., and e was a , and a uence of poverty, I him to He had the most nna, was nguished . 4, 1855. are still of Rev. son Wilf Yankee ghest venhas lived built the ith Amer-acoast, to ili, thence he Pacific iced water Other sons saac W. of 1821; and n, is skilled er, died in as born in For many , where he ut 1812 he . He had He pub-New Engints of old capital pun-ry; lectures

WHITE, WILLIAM, one of the one hundred pilgrims in the Mayflower to Plymouth in 1620, died soon, Feb. 21, 1621. Edward Thompson, his servant, died at Cape Cod Dec. 4, and never reached Plymeuth. Mr. White's widow in less than three months after his death married Edward Winslow, whose wife died March 24. His descendants were numerous. His was the first in 1804, aged 66. He was a man intelligent, elochild born in New England.

WHITE, PEREGRINE, the first Englishman born in New England, was born on board the Mayflower in the harber of Cape Cod, before the landing at Plymouth, about Nov. 20, 1620, and died at Marshfield July 20, 1704, aged 84. He was the son of William and Susanna White. The News-Letter of 1704 says: "He was vigorous and of a comely aspect to the last." He bore civil and military offices. The court gave him two hundred acres of land in consideration of his birth. A monument was proposed in 1854. P. White's daughter, Sarah, married Thomas Young of Scituate, and reached the age of 02. His father died Feb. 21, and his mother made good haste to marry, May 12, 1621, Edward Winslow, who was in still greater haste.

WHITE, JOHN, minister of Gleucester, Mass., was graduated at Cambridge in 1698, and died in 1760, aged 83. He published a book, entitled New England's lamentations, in 1734, recommended by Thacher, Sewall, Prince, Webb, Cooper, and Thacher.

WHITE, EBENEZER, first minister of Mansfield, Mass., died in 1761, aged 47. Born in Brookline, he graduated at Harvard in 1733, and was ordsined in 1737. His successor was R. Green, who died in 1808, at the age of 70.

WHITE, THOMAS, the first minister of Bolton. Conn., died in 1763, aged about 63. He graduated at Yale in 1720, and was settled in 1725.

G. Colton succeeded him.

WHITE, TIMOTHY, a minister at Nantucket, died in 1765, aged 63. He graduated at Harvard in 1720.

WHITE, DAVID, first minister of Hardwick, Mass., died in 1784, aged 74. He graduated at Yale in 1730, and was settled in 1736. T. Holt, his successor, reached the same age. Mr. W. was esteemed and very useful, and lived as pastor nearly fifty years harmoniously with his WHITE, STEPHEN, minister of Windham, Conn., died in 1793, aged 75, in the fifty-third year of his ministry. Born in Middletown, he graduated at Yale in 1736, and succeeded president Clap at Windham, 1740. By his wife, a sister of E. Dyer, he had thirteen children. He was a scholar, a Christian, an able and judicious divine. He published a sermen on the death of Gov. Trumbull, 1778.

WHITE, HAFFIELD, major, died at Wolf creek near Marietta. A native of De. he was an officer in 1775. In 148 removed to Ohio. After the peace of 1705 . whived with his son. - Hildreth.

WHITE, ALEXANDER, a distinguished member of the first congress, died at Woodville, Va., quent, patriotic.

WHITE, SAMUEL, a senator of Delaware. died at Wilmington Nov. 4, 1809, aged 39. From March, 1801, he was a senator till his death. The following facts may illustrate the times a little. In his speeches he laid his hat on the bench before him, and his copious brief behind his hat. On the trial of Judge Pickering, he said, "The accused is in default, not in centempt of court, but under the awful visitation of God: and, as he is deranged, our proceedings scarcely deserve the name of a mock trial." Wilson Carey Nicholas, of Va., here called out, "Order, order, order! I will not submit to hear our proceedings called by the name of a mock trial." Mr. W. said to the president: "I am in order, sir. - I repeat it, sir, it is a mock trial. I have no wish to offend; but if that gentleman is offended, I am ready to give him satisfaction at any time and place." It does not appear that the president gave any rebuke at this offer before the senate to fight a duel. Mr. W. was so blinded as to think duelling justifiable; and was second to Gardiner in his duel with Campbell. Yet he was a man of sense, of integrity, of polished manners, of excellent temper; cards and games of hazard he detested. He was zealously opposed to the slave trade. He was himself what is called a dead shot. He and his colleague, William W. Wells, pructised in this way: one would hold a shingle in his hand, and the other five or six paces distant would shoot a ball through it. Then, one would fall on his knees and set a shingle up edgeways on his head, and the other would shoot as before. My informant, a senator, once saw this experiment. Had Mr. W. been married, he might have deemed his life of more value than he held it as a duellist.

a ir

la

рŧ ze

re

sid

thi

Se

17

W

lis

ch

vie

an

COI

H

be

M stu

ap da

he

Sa

pe his car

wit

Uı

vil.

ton

WHITE, HUGH, judge, the first settler of Whitestown, N. Y., died in 1812, aged 80. He was a citizen of Middletown, Conn., when he emigrated with his family in 1784 to the Mohawk river at W., that region being then the abode of savages. He lived to see the western wilderness of New York occupied by about 300,000 inhabitants, being a greater population than that of his native State.

WHITE, JOSHUA E., a physician, was a native of Pennsylvania, and died at Savaniah August 25, 1820. He published letters, being a journal of travels in England, etc., 2 vols. 8vo., 1812.

WHITE, Mrs., widow of Henry White, died in New York in 1836, aged 99; the daughter of Gov. Van Courtlandt.

VIIITE, LEVI, minister of Sandisfield, Mass., for thirty years, died at Gull Prairie, Mich., in 1836, aged 65. Born in Randolph, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1796, and was ordained in 1798. He admitted into the church three hundred and thirty-nine members.

WHITE, WILLIAM, D. D., bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church of Pennsylvania, died at Philadelphia July 17, 1836, aged 88. He was born at Philadelphia April 4, 1748, and educated at the university. In 1770 he repaired to England, and was ordained dencon and priest by Dr. Young, bishop of Norwich. On his return to Philadelphia, in Sept., 1772, he was settled as an assistant minister of Christ church and St. Peter's church. In the Revolutionary war he was chaplain to congress. When chosen bishop in 1786 there were only three of his brethren present, to give him their votes. He and Bishop Provoost of New York were consecrated in England by Archbishop Moore, Feb. 4, 1787. For the rest of his long life he performed the duties of pastor and bishop with ability, prudence, and zeal, being held by his fellow-citizens in high respect. For a long time he was senior and presiding bishop. At the time of his death about thirty-two bishops had been consecrated: Bishop Seabury in Scotland in 1784; Bishop Madison in 1790 in England; almost all the others by Bishop White. He was a voluminous author. He published memoirs of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, 1820; comparative views of the controversy between the Calvinists and Arminians; lectures on the catechism; and ister. commentaries on the ordination service.

WHITE, DAVID, missionary to Africa, died at Cape Palmas, Jan. 23, 1837, aged 29. His wife, Helen M. Wells of Newburg, N. Y., died Jan. 27; both of the fever. He was a native of Pittsfield, Mass.; graduated at Union college, 1851; and studied theology at Princeton. His zeal for the spread of the gospel carried him to the post of danger, where he had been only a few weeks when he died. In his preaching by an interpreter, the Sabbath before he was taken sick, he told the people it might be the last time they would hear his voice, and asked them what message he should carry to the courts of heaven? They heard him with emotion.

WIIITE, HUGH LAWSON, a senator of the United States from Tennessee, died near Knoxville April 10, 1840, aged 67; a distinguished lawyer and statesman.

WHITE, HENRY, M. D., died in Southampton, L. I., Dec. 23, 1840, aged 90. He was the son of Rev. Libanus White, fifty-four years the minister of S. In the Revolutionary army he was a surgeon. Captured in a privateer, he for seven months knew the horrors of the "Jersey" prison-ship. For thirty-eight years he was a ruling elder in the church.

WHITE, THOMAS W., died at Richmond, Va., in 1843, aged 55; editor of the Southern Literary WHITE, ROBERT, judge, died in Nashville, Tenn., in 1844, aged 78. He came from Galloway, Scotland, about 1794, and settled in Virginia. He was a judge of the court of errors and appeals in Tennessee.

WHITE, JOHN, judge, speaker of the house of representatives, in a fit of depression shot himself in Richmond, Ky., Sept. 22, 1845.

WHITE, EDWARD D., governor of Louisiana, died in 1847. He was twice a member of congress, respected and very popular.

WHITE, LEONARD, died in Haverhill, Mass., in 1849, aged 82; a venerable citizen, who had filled various offices and had been a member of congress. He was in the class at Harvard of his friend J. Q. Adams, in 1787.

WHITE, HENRY, D. D., died in New York, Aug. 25, 1850, aged 50; professor of theology in the Union theological seminary.

WHITE, WILLIAM, a Presbyterian minister, died in Liberty co., Ga., Feb. 1, 1851, aged 91.

WIIITE, JOHN, minister in Dedham, Mass., died Feb. 1, 1852, aged 64. The son of Deacon John of Concord, he graduated at Harvard in 1805. He was ordained over the third parish in D. in 1814. His predecessors were J. Dwight, A. Tyler, and T. Thacher.

WHITE, HENRY, died in 1846, in Christiana village, Delaware; a very aged Methodist min-

WIIITEFIELD, GEORGE, an eloquent itinerant preacher, died at Newburyport Sept. 30, 1770, aged 55. He was born in Gloucester, Eng., Dec. 16, 1714. After having made some progress in classical learning, he was obliged to assist his mother, who kept an inn, in her business; but at the age of 18 he entered one of the colleges at Oxford. Here he became acquainted with John and Charles Wesley, whose piety was ardent and singular, like his own. From the strict rules and methods of life which these young men followed they were called Methodists, and they were the founders of the sect thus denominated. His benevolent zeal 1ed him to visit the poor, and even to search out the miserable objects in goals, not only to diminish their wants, but that he might impart to them the consolations and hopes of the gospel. He took orders, being ordained by the bishop June 20, 1736, and preached his first sermon in the church at Gloucester. When a complaint was afterwards entered with the bishop that by his sermon he drove fifteen persons mad, the worthy prelate only expressed was a native inah August ng a journal vo., 1812.

Volf

lass.

oved

with mem-

, Va., t, elo-

aware,

From

death. imes a

on the behind

ing, he

ntempt f God;

carcely

n Carey

, order.

eedings

Mr. W.

sir, — I

ave no

ffended,

my time

ie presi-

the sen-

inded as second to

Yet he polished

id games y opposed

t is called

illiam W.

ald hold a

rsix paces

Then, one

shingle up

ould shoot

once saw

narried, he

value than settler of

d 80. He

, when he

he Mohawk

ie abode of wilderness

,000 inhabi-

that of his

a wish that the madness might not be forgotten before the next Sunday. After preaching at various places he was induced by a letter from Mr. Wesley, who was in Georgia, to embark for America. He arrived at Savannah May 7, 1738. After laboring in this place with unwearied fidelity for several months to promote the interests of religion, he embarked for England Sept. 6th. He was ordained priest at Oxford by Bishop Benson, Jan. 14, 1739. In Nov. he again arrived in America, and he travelled through the middle and southern colonies, dispensing the gospel to immense multitudes. In Sept., 1740, he arrived at Rhode Island from Savannah, having been invited by the ministers of Boston, and he preached in different parts of New England. At the end of Oct. he went to New York, and he soon returned to Georgia. He was much occupied in the establishment of an orphan house near Savannah. In Jan., 1741, he sailed for England. He arrived again in America in Oct., 1744; and he now spent between three and four years in this country. In March, 1748, he went to the Bermudas, and in July he reached London. Having crossed the Atlantic for the fourth time, he arrived at Savannah Oct. 27, 1751, and returned to his native country in April, 1752. In his fifth visit to the new world he remained here from May, 1754, to March, 1755. His sixth voyage brought him to Virginia in Aug., 1763, and he did not set sail again for Great Britain till June, 1765. For the seventh and last time his zeal to do good induced him to brave the dangers of the ocean, and he landed upon the American shore Nov. 30, 1769, never again to leave it. After preaching in various parts of the country, he died suddenly at Newburyport, Mass. Few men since the days of the apostles have labored with such indefatigable zeal in preaching the gospel of salvation, as Mr. W. He was the means of imparting the pure principles and the elevated hopes of religion to thousands both in Great Britain and America. No preacher ever had such astonishing power over the passions of his auditory, or was attended by such multitudes as he sometimes addressed in the fields. Mr. Jotham Sewall stated that Mr. W. died on Sunday, and that on Thursday before he heard him preach at York, Me., on the text, " I am the way, the truth, and the life." In his sermon he said: "How can you be saved? By works. By works! (striking the desk with great force with his hand.) Should you see a man making a rope of sand, with which to climb to the moon, would you not deem him a fool? So is the man who would be saved by works." He also said: "In ancient Rome a man was accused of a capital crime, and brought into court, - when his brother, who had lost both his hands in war for his country, presented himself before the judges and lifted up both the stumps of his arms [lifting up his hands with his fists closed], and said nothing. Instantly his brother for his sake was set free, uncondemned. So Christ in heaven only lifts up his pierced hends, and thus intercedes effectually for sinners." In the early periods of his life he was guilty in some instances of uncharitableness and indiscretion; but he afterwards had the magnanimity to confess his fau't. He was in reality a man of a very liberal and catholic spirit, for he had little attachment to forms, and embraced all who loved the Lord Jesus in sincerity. His life was spent in most disinterested and benevolent exertion. The following lines will show the opinion which was formed of his character by the evangelical poet, Cowper:

"He loved the world that hated him; the tear
That dropy'd upon his bible was sincere;
Assail'd by scandal and the tongue of strife,
His only answer was a blameiers life,
And he that forg'd, and he that threw the dart,
Had each a brother's interest in his heart.
Paul's love of Christ and steadiness unbrib'd
Were copied close in him, and well transcrib'd;
His follow'd Paul, his zeal a kindred flame,
His apostolic charity the same;
Like him cross'd cheerfully tempestnous seas,
Forsaking country, kindred, friends, and ease;
Like him cross'd cheerfully tempestnous ease,
Like him be labor'd, and like him content
To bear it, suffor'd shame where'er he went.
Blush, calumny! and write upon his tomb,
If honest culogy can spare thee room,
Thy deep repentance of thy thousand lies,
Which, aim'd at him, have piere'd th' offended skies;
And say, blot out my sin, confess'd, deplor'd, Against thine image in thy saint, O Lord?"

His letters, sermons, controversial and other tracts, with an account of his life, were published in seven volumes, 8vo. 1771.—Gillies' Life of W.; Middleton's Biog. Evang; Parsons', Pemberton's and Wesley's Sermons.

WHITEHEAD, JAMES, D.D., minister in Norfolk, Va., and in Baltimere, died about 1808.

WHITE-HEAD, DECARI or SCHACHIPKAKA, chief of the Winnebago Indians, on Wisconsin river, died April 20, 1836, aged 89.

WHITEHILL, John, judge, died at Pequea, Lancaster county, Penn., in 1815, aged 94. Ile was a member of the council of safety and of congress, and an associate judge of Lancaster county.

WHITFIELD, HENRY, first minister of Guilford, Conn., died in Winchester, England, after 1650. He was born in England in 1597, the son of a rich lawyer, and was settled at Okely in Surrey before he came to this country in 1639. He continued at Guilford until 1650, when he returned to his native country, and finished his life in the ministry at Winchester. He was a good scholar, a distinguished divine, and an excellent preacher. He published the light appearing more and more, etc., giving an account of

died V bish He mer part time

B. it

the

was and a calog W Mass John horn

He ar

a mor

gathe

for se

his ow

first m was m emiah ledge
His dis sanctit spect
of Cot a treat ham i mons, WH

died be

gradua years i then w next w church death. she ma 'Hadley necticu can qu nsme was the caster, 1697, a lerica, settled He wa Thayer Indian rather 1651. - Magnalia, III. 217, 218: - Sprague.

WH

WHITFIELD, JOHN, a Methodist minister, died in North Carolina in 1833, aged 88.

WHITFIELD, JAMES, Roman Catholic archbishop, died at Baltimore Oct. 19, 1834, aged 64. He was born at Liverpool in 1770. He was a merchant, and became a prisoner under Bonaparte at Lyons, where he became acquainted with Ambrose Marechal, afterwards archbishop of Baltimore, whom he succeeded. He came first to B. in 1817.

WHITING, WILLIAM, major, one of the first settlers of Hartford in 1636, died in 1647. He was a man of wealth and education, a magistrate, and treasurer of the colony. - Goodwin's Genealogical Notes.

WHITING, SAMUEL, first minister of Lynn, Mass., died Dec. 11, 1679, aged 82. The son of John W., mayor of Bosten, England, he was born in 1597, and was educated at Cambridge. He arrived at Boston May 26, 1636. In about a month he went to Lynn, where a church was gathered Nov. 8. Mr. Cobbet was his colleague for several years, and after his removal one of his own sons was his assistant. His son, Samuel. first minister of Billerica, died in 1713; Joseph was minister of Lynn; his daughter married Jeremiah Hobart. He possessed an accurate knowledge of Hebrew, and wrote Latin with elegance. His disposition was peculiarly amiable, and the sanctity of his life impressed all men with respect for him. From his writings Norton's life of Cotton was partly composed. He published a treatise upon the last judgment, 1664; Abraham interceding for Sodom, a volume of sermons, 1666. — Magnalia, III. 156-161; Sprague.

WHITING, JOHN, minister in Hartford, Conn., died before 1689. The son of William of II., he graduated at Harvard in 1653. He preached two years in Salem, Mass., an assistant to Mr. Norris; then was settled in the first church in H.; and next was installed in 1670 over a new, the south church, with which he was connected till his death. His wife was a sister of Rev. J. Collins: she married, after his death, Rev. John Russell of Hadley. His son, William, commanded the Connecticut troops sent to Port Royal. The American quarterly register has by mistake printed his name Samuel, who, graduating the same year, was the minister of Billerica.

WHITING, JOHN, second minister of Lancaster, Mass., was killed by the Indians Sept. 11, 1697, aged 33. The son of Rev. Samuel of Billerica, he graduated at Harvard in 1685, and was settled in 1690. He succeeded J. Rowlandson. He was succeeded by Prentiss, Harrington, Thayer. Surprised, away from the fort, by the Indians, they offered him quarter; but he chose rather to fight than to fall into their hands. His graduated at Yale in 1726, and was a preacher, the progress of the gospel among the Indians, widow, Alice Cook of Cambridge, married Rev. T. Stevens of Glastenbury. His sister, Elizabeth, married Rev. T. Clark of Chelmsford, Mass.

WHITING, SAMUEL, first minister of Billerica, Mass., died in 1713, aged nearly 80. Born in England, the son of Rev. Samuel of Lynn, he graduated at Harvard in 1653, and was settled in 1663. His successors were Ruggles, Chandler, Cummings, Whitman, and Abbott. His mother was a daughter of Oliver St. John, a man of note in Cromwell's time. His son, John, was the minister of Lancaster. A manuscript volume of his sermons fell into the hands of his descendant, Rev. M. G. Thomas of Concord, N. H.

WHITING, JOSEPH, died in 1717, aged 72, the son of the first William W. He was a merchant of Hartford, and treasurer of Connecticut. He married Mary, daughter of John Pynchon and Anna Wyllys: his second wife was Anna, daughter of Col. John Allyn, and of his wife, who was a daughter of Henry Smith and granddaughter of William Pynchon. His daughter, Margaret, by his second wife, married Rev. Jonathan Marsh.

WHITING, JOSEPH, minister of Lynn, died in 1723, aged 82. The son of Rev. Samuel, he was born in Lynn, and graduated at Harvard in 1661, and was settled in 1680, having assisted his father for some years before. In 1682 he went to Southampton on Long Island.

WHITING, SAMUEL, the first minister of Windham, Conn., died in 1725. The brother of Rev. John, he was ordained Dcc. 4, 1700, and died at Enfield, while on a visit to his cousin and brother-in-law, Rev. Mr. Collins. He was succeeded by President Clap. He was the brother of Rev. John of Hartford. His wife was Elizabeth, the daughter of Rev. W. Adams of Dedham: she was born in 1681, and died in 1766. Her second marriage was with Rev. Mr. Niles. She died in New Haven, at the house of her son, Col. Nathan Whiting. His daughter, Mary, married President Clap, and died in 1736. He published a thanksgiving sermon, 1721.

WHITING, WILLIAM, colonel, son of Rev. John of Hartford, died about 1730. He served in Canada. His wife was Mary, daughter of John Allyn. His sister married Rev. S. Russell.

He removed to Newport, R. I.

WHITING, JOHN, minister of Concord, Mass., twenty years, died in 1752, aged about 72. Born in Lynn, he graduated at Harvard in 1700; was tutor from 1703 to 1706, and librarian from 1707 to 1712, in which year he was ordained. He was learned, benevolent, and rich. The first minister of his church was P. Bulkley; his successors were Bliss, Emerson, and Ripley.

WHITING, JOHN, colonel, son of the preceding, died at Windham, Conn., in 1786, aged 80. He ther shed e of Pem-

d ıt

h er in about RAKA,

consin

equea, lle and of caster

Guil-, after Okely 1639. hen he inished He was and an ght ap-count of

then judge of probate, and a colonel. His daughter, Mary, married H. Jones of North Carolina; and their daughter married Gov. Nash in 1779.

WHITING, WILLIAM, Dr., died in Great Barrington Dec. 8, 1792, aged 62. Born in Norwich, Conn., the son of Rev. Samuel of Windham, he studied with Dr. Bulkley of Colchester. He lived in Hartford till 1766; then settled in G. B. He was a professor of religion in the Episcopal church, and often in public life; a member of the provincial congress, and of the convention to frame the constitution, and chief judge of the court of common pleas. His son, Mason Whiting, died in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1849, aged 74, whose wife was Mary, a descendant of Pres. Edwards, and whose daughter, Amelia, is the wife of Prof. W. S. Tyler of Amherst college.

lege.

WHITING, EBENEZER, major, died at Westfield in 1794, aged 50. He was the aon of Charles, who died at Montville, and grandson of Col. William. His mother was Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Bradford of Duxbury, a descendant of Gov. Bradford. His wife was Ann, daughter of Col. Eleazer Fitch of Windham. He resided at Norwich, and was a major in the Revolutionary army. His son, Henry, a brigadier-general in the army of the United States, died at St.

Louis Sept. 10, 1851.

WHITING, WILLIAM BRADFORD, colonel, died in Canaan, N. Y., near New Lebanon, in 1796, aged 65. He was a colonel in the Revolution, a senator of New York, and a judge. His accomplished and excellent daughter Harriet — whom the writer knew more than fifty years ago as the friend of his sister Elizabeth — married Eleazar Backua, a bookseller of Albany, now of Philadelphia, if yet among the living. She died July 13, 1804, after being the mother of one child.

WHITING, SAMUEL, colonel, brother of the preceding, died at Stratford, Conn., in 1803, aged 81. He served in the French war as a colonel, and in the Revolutionary war. Four of his sons were also in the army.

WHITING, SAMUEL, first minister of Rockingham, Vt., died in 1819, aged 70. Born in Franklin, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1769, and was pastor from 1773 to 1809.

1769, and was pastor from 1773 to 1809. WHITING, Thurston, a minister in Warren,

Me., died in 1829, aged 79.

WHITING, JOHN, deacon, died at Canaan, N. Y., Oct. 2, 1844, aged 80. He was the son of Col. William B. He was ready for every good word and work, a pillar in the church, a father in Israel,—like thousands of others, whom God in his grace has scattered over our land.

WHITING, JOHN, general, died in Great death, under the ministry of Dr. Tucke Barrington Jan. 13, 1846, at an advanced age. He was a descendant of William, in the line of of a large family, distinguished for picty.

John, of the sixth generation; the son of Gamaliel. He was an eminent lawyer. His first wife was Hannah, daughter of Col. Aaron Kellegg, married in 1800; his second was Lucy Allen, married in 1831. His son, Francis, was born in 1808; his daughter, Martha, married David Allen.

WHITING, NATHAN, a worthy citizen of New Haven, died Feb. 17, 1848, aged 75, the son of Col. William B. W. By his first wife, Lydia Backus of Norwich, he had a daughter, Harriet B., wife of A. N. Skinner, late mayor of New Haven; and also Alexander, a physician in New York. His second wife, now a widow, was Mrs. Nancy Breed Williams of Norwich.

WHITING, EDWARD, captain, died in Norwich July 14, 1851, aged 74; a man of an excellent character, held in high esteem by his fellow-citizens.

WHITING, HENRY, brigadier-general, dicd at St. Louis Sept. 16, 1851. He was among the oldest officers of the army. He arrived two days before his death from a tour of duty in Texas, and fell dead instantly in his room, probably from disease of the heart. He lived many years at Detroit. He was the son of Gen. John W. of Lancaster, Mass. He was a man conversant with literature, and wrote various articles for the North American review, among which was the sketch of Pres. Taylor, relating chiefly to his military life.

WHITING, GEORGE B., missionary of the American board in Syria, died of the cholera at Beirut Nov. 8, 1855. He was the son of John W. and of Lydia Leffingwell of Norwich, and grandson of Col. William B. W. He had been, with his wife, a daughter of John Ward of Newark, a missionary twenty-six years; first at Beirut, then eight years at Jerusalem. His letters to the missionary herald were most interesting. Dr. Smith, his associate in Syria, says, "The American church has sent into the missionary field few so lovely spirits as that of our brother who has just been called to his reward."

WHITING, DANIEL, died at Philadelphis, at the house of his son-in-law, Rev. Dr. Brainard, June 7, 1855, aged 87. He was the son of Col. William B. Whiting of Canaan, N. Y., and brother of Deacon John W. of Canaan, and of Deacon Nathan W. of New Haven. As a lawyer he practised at Canaan, Albany, and Troy. For a time he was a partner in a book concern in Albany with Backus and Whiting, and editor of the Albany Daily Sentinel. At the bar he was conversant with Hamilton, Burr, Clioton, Kent, and Spencer. He died with trust in the Saviour, whose name he professed thirty years before his death, under the ministry of Dr. Tucker. For nine years he had been blind. He was the last of a large family, distinguished for picty.

Mass Har Dor milji W ton, eted in 16 fellor cedes II is a ister pos

abo

tow

Mass. mouth minist Goshe mon a lock; atoner to mis 1819;

Sprag

WII

to his

Waltha publish on revi WII Mass., Bridge and wa cessor

He pul

Mass., Born in 1779, a He was the con

WHI Bridgev and 4 n ation for children WHI at Lexiuated a minister associat Portlan 1845 ho WIII

WHITMAN, John, the ancestor of a large in Plymouth bay in Feb., 1761. At the second posterity, died at Weymouth, at a great age, capture of Louisburg, in 1758, he was military about 1692. He came from England to Charlestown about 1638.

WHITMAN, ZECHARIAH, minister of Hull, Mass., died in 1726, aged 82. He graduated at Harvard in 1668, and was settled in 1670. The Dorchester records describe him as "Vir pius, humilis, orthodoxus, utilissimus."

1-

Wed

he

138

88, om

at

. of

rith

the

the

mil-

the

ra at

Tohn

and een,

vark,

then

the

Dr.

meri-

few

has ria, at nard,

Col.

, and

nd of awyer

For a lbany

he Al-

onver-

nt, and

aviour,

ore his

For

he last

WIIITMAN, SAMUEL, minister of Farmington, Conn., died in 1751, aged 75. He graduated at Harvard in 1696; was a teacher in Salem in 1699; and was ordained in 1706. He was a fellow of Yale from 1724 to 1746. He was preceded by T. Pitkin and succeeded by S. Hooker. His son, Eluathan, a graduate of 1726, was minister of the second church in Hartford from 1732 to his death in 1776. He published the election sermon in 1714.

WHITMAN, SAMUEL, minister of Goshen, Mass., died in 1827, aged 75. Born in Weymouth, he graduated at Harvard in 1775; was minister of Ashby from 1778 to 1783; then of Goshen from 1788 to 1818. He published a sermen at ordination of L. Lankton; of Mr. Hallock; on baptism of Christ, 1800; a key to the atonement and justification, 8vo., 1814; sermon to missionary society, 1817; at Cummington, 1819; history of proceedings at Goshen, 1824. -Sprague's Annals.

WIIITMAN, BERNARD, Unitarian minister of Waltham, Mass., died in 1834, aged 38. He published artillery election sermon, 1829; letter on revivals, 1831; answer to E. Pearson's letter.

WIIITMAN, KILBORN, minister of Pembroke, Mass., died in 1835, aged about 70. Born in Bridgewater, he graduated at Harvard in 1785, and was pastor from 1787 to 1796. His predecessor was T. Smith, who reached the age of 83. He published sermon at ordination of J. Cushman, 1796; oration, 1798.

WHITMAN, LEVI, minister of Wellfleet, Mass., died at Kingston in Aug., 1839, aged 90. Born in Bridgewater, he graduated at Harvard in 1779, and was pastor at W. from 1785 to 1808. He was a member of the convention for adopting the constitution of the United States.

WHITMAN, JOHN, deacon, died at East Bridgewater, Mass., Aug. 5, 1842, aged 107 years and 4 months, a descendant of the fourth generation from Miles Standish. He had fourteen children; three of his sons were ministers.

WHITMAN, JASON, Unitarian minister, died at Lexington, Mass., in 1848, aged 49. He graduated at Harvard in 1825; was for some years a minister in Saco; then secretary of the Unitarian association in Boston, whence he removed to Portland in 1835, and remained ten years. In 1845 he was installed at Lexington.

governor of the place, being colonel of the twentysecond regiment and brigadier-general.

WHITNEY, AARON, first minister of Petersham, Mass., died in 1779, sged 65. He graduated at Harvard in 1737. He was the father of

Rev. Peter W.

WHITNEY, PETER, second minister of Northborough, Mass., died in 1816, aged 72. Born in Petersham, he graduated at Harvard in 1762, and was ordained in 1767. Joseph Allen was his auccessor. The first minister was John Martin, from 1746 to 1767. He published two fast sermons, 1774; history of the county of Worcester, 1703; at ordination of P. Whitney, jun.; on the death of Lucy Sumner.

WHITNEY, JOSIAH, D. D., minister of Brooklyn, Conn., died in 1824, aged 93. Born at Plainfield, he graduated at Yale in 1752. He studied theology with Mr. Breck of Springfield, whose daughter he married. He was ordained in 1756, and after being sole pastor fifty-seven years, received as colleague, in 1813, Abiel Abbot. who soon became a Unitarian, and was dismissed. He published a sermon at ordination of E. Weld: election sermon, 1788; on the death of Gen. Putnam, 1790; of N. Russell, 1795; a halfcentury sermon, 1806. - Sprague's Annals.

WHITNEY, ELI, inventor of the cotton-gin, died Jan. 3, 1825, aged 59. He was born at Westborough, Mass., Dec. 8, 1765. His mechanical genius was early manifested. He graduated at Yale college in 1792. Proceeding to Georgia, and becoming acquainted with the widow of Gen. Greene, she invited him to make her house his home, while he studied law. While at her house he invented the cotton-gin, a machine for separating the seed from the cotton; an invention of vast importance to the States which cultivate cotton. It has been worth to them 100,000,000 dollars. His disappointments, difficulties, and trials in the vindication of his rights are described in a memoir of his life in Silliman's journal for Jan., 1832, which contains also a heautiful pertrait. In 1798 he commenced the manufacture of fire-arms for the United States. His first contract amounted to 134,000 dollars for ten thousand stand of arms, which he made in ten years. His next contract was for fifteen thousand stand of arms. He had unequalled sufferings from his disease. His wife, whom he married in 1817. was Henrietta, daughter of Pierpont Edwards. Two daughters and a son survived him. He was highly beloved and respected in domestic life. For inventive power and a persevering spirit, which never relinquished an undertaking until it was accomplished, he had scarcely a parallel. His name will he ranked with the names of Ful-WHITMORE, EDWARD, general, was drowned | ton, Arkwright, and Watt. Of his monument after the model of that of Scipio at Rome, a print | ford, Conn., died in 1768, aged 55. He graduis in Silliman's journal. Similar monuments at New Haven have been placed over the remains of Dr. N. Smith and Mr. Ashmun.

WHITNEY, DAVID S., died at Gainsville Ala., in 1840. He was for years a merchant in Northampton, Mass., and removed to the south. His Christian character was always held in high

WHITNEY, SARAH, Mrs., a Quaker, died at Casco, Me., in July, 1843, aged 100 years and 8 months.

WHITNEY, PETER, minister of Quincy, Mass., died in 1843, aged 73. He graduated at Harvard in 1791, and was ordained in 1800, and succeeded by W. P. Lunt. His predecessor was A. Wibird.

WHITNEY, SAMUEL, missionary to the Sandwich Islands, died Dec. 15, 1845, aged 52. Bern at Branford, Conn., he was two years a member of Yale college. He arrived at Hawaii in 1820, was licensed to preach by the missionaries in 1823, and ordained 1825. Most of his time was spent on the island of Kanai. He said in his illness, "I have fought the good fight." In twentysix years of service the Saviour had been with him. "Christ is the rock on which I rest." Throwing up his arms, he said: "And is the victory won? Glory, glory, glory! Hail, glorious immortality!" Let the great warriors of the earth look upon this dying man.

WHITON, JOHN MILTON, D. D., died at Antrim, N. II., Sept. 28, 1856, aged 71, having been the minister forty-five years to a day. Born in Winchendon, Mass., he graduated at Yale in 1805. The first minister was Walter Fullington, from 1800 to 1804. He published a history of N. H. for schools; a history of Antrim. In 1806 he published in the repository an account of the ministers of Hillsborough.

WHITTELSEY, SAMUEL, minister of Wallingford, Conn., died April 15, 1752, aged 66. He was graduated at Yale college in 1705 and was ordained as the colleague of Mr. Street in May, 1710. He was one of the most distinguished preachers and faithful ministers of the colony in which he lived. Such was the vigor and penetration of his mind, that he easily comprehended subjects which presented great difficulties to others. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Rev. N. Chauncy of Hatfield. His son Samuel was minister of Milford from 1738 till his death in 1768. His son, Chauncey W., an eminent scholar, was minister of New Haven from 1758 till his death in 1787. He published a sermon upon the death of John Hall, 1730; at the election; on the awful condition of impenitent souls in their separate state, 1731; at the ordination of his son, Samuel W., at Milford, 1737. - Dana's Cent. Disc.; Sprague.

WHITTELSEY, SAMUEL, minister of Mil- promoted by him.

ated at Yale in 1729, and was tutor from 1732 to 1738. He was a man of an excellent spirit and judgment, an eminent Christian. S. Andrew preceded and S. Wales succeeded him.

WHITTELSEY, CHAUNCEY, minister in New Haven, died July 24, 1787, aged 69. The son of Rev. Samuel W. of Wallingford, he graduated nt Yale in 1738, and was ordained over the first church in New Haven as colleague with Mr. Noyes, March 1, 1758, and continued in office nearly thirty years. Mr. Dana was his successor. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Col. Whiting. He published a sermon at New Haven, 1744; to a class, 1745; on the death of A. Noyes, 1768; of Mary Clap, 1769; at the ordination of J. Hubbard, 1779; election sermon, 1778.— Sprague's Annals.

WHITTELSEY, SAMUEL G., missionary at Oodooville, Ceylon, died at Dindigal March 10. 1847, aged 38. He had gone to D., on the continent, for his health. Eorn in Preston, he graduated at Yale in 1834. In 1842 he was ordained: his station was Oodooville, at the female missionary seminary. He said he had rather be a missionary in that dark land than to be "in America, enjoying all the pleasures of a civilized and Christian country."

WHITTEMORE, AARON, the first minister of Pembroke, N. H., died in 1767, aged 55. Born in Concord, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1734, and was settled in 1737. J. Emery, born in Andover, was his successor.

WHITTEMORE, Amos, inventor of the card machine, died at West Cambridge, Mass., in April, 1828, aged 69. He was the inventor of the machine for sticking cards, which indicated a powerful mechanical genius, and which was a most useful invention. Each machine in his manufactory occupied no more space than a small table; the wire was reeled off, cut off the right length for teeth, bent, holes were pricked in the leather, the teeth were inserted, and this was continued till the card was completed, and all by the unassisted machine.

WHITTLESEY, SAMUEL, died in Utica, N. Y., in 1842, aged 66. Born in Litchfield, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1803; was paster at New Preston in Washington county from 1807 to 1817; then was principal of the deaf and dumb asylum at Hartford; in 1826 he took the charge of a female seminary in Utica; and in 1833 became the publisher of the mother's magazine in New York. - Sprague's Annals.

WHITTLESEY, FREDERIC, judge, died in Rochester, N. Y., in Sept., 1851, aged 54; a member of congress and judge of the supreme court. He was professor of law in Genesee college at Lima. Internal improvements were earnestly had Her miss. W head he g daine a ge eonci He p the d rut !

W

gyle, pious WI died i gradu in 17 Flint, cessor WI 7, 185 Huntin town o

rity an undert

parties.

thirty y

centage

ship in said : " home. N. Y. WIE Aug. 9. Germai

WIG don, ea he wen brother tinued he resid lady of agreeal as a ba giving lost his worth friends his deb fortune sink do ted to in the WIG

graduat

afterwa

WHITTLESEY, ANNA L., Miss, died at Beirut May 1, 1852. She had heen there one year as a teacher in the female boarding-school. She had a vigorous intellect and a zealous heart. He character is described by Dr. De Forest in Esther, and Dorothy; and sons, Samuel and Ed-missionary herald, July, 1852.

WHITWELL, WILLIAM, minister of Marblehead, died in 1781, aged 44. Born in Boston, he graduated at Princeton in 1758, and was ordained colleague with Barnard in 1762. He was a gentleman and a Christian; in his preaching concise and pertinent, instructive and pathetic. He published a sermon to mariners, 1769; on the death of Mr. Barnard.— Sprague.

WHYTE, ARCHIBALD, a minister, died at Argyle, N. Y., in 1840, aged 93; a learned and pious man.

ŗ.

:

of nt

0, n-

d-

d:

on-

1iser-

and

ster

55.

Iar-

ery,

ard

, in r ef

ed a

as a man-

mall

right

the

was ll by

N. Y.,

onn..

or at 1807 dumb

harge

3 beine in

ed in

mem-

court.

ege at nestly

WIBIRD, ANTHONY, minister of Quincy, Mass., died in 1800, aged 72. Born in Portsmouth, he graduated at Harvard in 1747, and was ordained in 1765. His predecessors were Thompson, Flint, Fiske, Marsh, Hauccek, Bryant; his auccessors, P. Whitney, and W. P. Lunt.

WICKES, ELIPHALET, died in Troy, N. Y., June 7, 1850, aged 81. He was the son of Thomas of Huntington, L. I. As a lawyer he lived in the town of Jamaica until 1835. He was of integrity and of reputation as a lawyer. Before he undertook a cause he endeavored to reconcile the parties. He was an elder of the church. For thirty years he devoted to charity a certain per centage of his income. He founded a scholarship in Princeton seminary. About to die, he said: "It may be that I am now to be called home. Well, I have a good home to go to."—
N. Y. Observer, Oct. 19.

WIER, Mr., died in Davidson county, N. C., Aug. 9, 1824, aged 120. He was a native of Germany.

WIGGIN, TIMOTHY, died at Barry, near London, early in 1850, aged 83. Born in Hopkinton, he went into business in Boston with his elder brother in 1798; the firm of B. and T. W. continued about twenty years, during some of which he resided in Manchester, and there married a lady of beauty and piety, most amiable and ngreeable. About 1826 he commenced business as a hanker in London with great auccess; but giving credit largely without security, in 1836 he lost his property; he had considered himself worth a million and a half. With the aid of friends and of the bank of England, he paid all his dehts and repaid the advances; but his own fortune melted away to nothing. He did not sink down in miserable despondence; he submitted to Providence without a murmur, and died in the Christian hope of a blessed immortality.

WIGGLESWORTH, MICHAEL, a poet, was death of Mr. Wadsworth, 1737; inquiry into the graduated at Harvard college in 1651, and was imputation of the guilt of Adam's sin to his posafterwards ordained minister of Malden, where terity, 1738; a letter to Mr. Whitefield, 1745;

73. His wife was Sybil Sparhawk, granddaughter of Rev. Samuel Newman; she died in 1708. He had five daughters, Abigail, Mary, Martha, Esther, and Dorothy; and sons, Samuel and Edward. He was useful, not only as a minister, but as a physician. During his illness, which occasionally interrupted his exertions as a preacher for several years, he still sought to do good by his labors as a peet. The following extract from his sermon on wearing hair may have a peculiar application at the present day: " It argues much wantonness, when men shall affect a kind of bravery, as new-a-dayes they do, by curling or frizeling of their hair, and parting it with a seam in the middest; it argues much effeminacy. The Lord abhors such vanity in women; but for men to do it is a most loathsome thing, and a fashion altogether unbesceming a Christian." "Why should we wear it at such a time as this, when every one useth it, the very basest sort of persons, every ruffian, every wild-Irish, every hangman, every variet and vagabond shall affect long hair, shall men of peace and honor esteem it an honor unto them?" He published the day of doom, or a poetical description of the great and last judgment, with a short discourse about eternity, sixth edit., 1829; a scrmon on wearing hair; meat out of the eater, or a meditation concerning the necessity, end, and usefulness of ufflictions unto God's children, fifth edit., 1718. -Holmes' Annals.

WIGGLESWORTH, EDWARD, D. D., first Hollis professor of divinity in Harvard college, died in 1765, aged 72. The son of the preceding, he was graduated at Harvard college in 1710. After he commenced preaching, his services were enjoyed in different places. So conspicuous were his talents, and so exemplary was he for every Christian virtue, that when the professorship of divinity in Harvard college was founded by T. Hollis, he was unanimously appointed first professor, and was inducted into this office Oct. 24, 1722; when he declared his assent to the confession of faith in the assembly's catechism, especially to the dectrine of the trinity and of the eternal godhead of Christ; also to that of predestination and special grace. He was a prominent writer in the controversy relating to Mr. Whitefield, whose preaching at Cambridge he censured. He died, conscious of the failings of life, yet hoping for pardon through Jesus Christ. His son succeeded him in 1765. His daughter married Prof. Sewall. The next professor was Dr. Tappan. He published sober remarks, 1724; on the duration of future punishment, 1729; a trial of the spirits, 1735; on the death of Mr. Wadsworth, 1737; inquiry into the on the inspiration of the Old Testament, 1753; ful in various places, and was minister of Wendell two lectures on the ministers of Christ, 1764; six years from 1817. Then he was at the head Dudleian lecture, 1757; doctrine of reprobation, of several female seminaries, and prepared and 1763.—Appleton's Sermon; Sprague. delivered astronomical and other lectures, with WIGGLESWORTH, SANUEL, minister of Ipswich hamlet, now Hamilton, Mass., died in 1768, aged 79. The son of Michael by his second wife, Martha, he graduated at Harvard in 1707. He commenced the practice of medicine in 1710, but was settled as a minister in 1714. He published a sermon at the ordination of J. Dennis; of J. Warren at Wenham, 1733; at the election, 1733; account of Mr. Hale; a pamphlet concerning a council; at the convention, 1751; on death of J. Rogers, 1746; at a fast; two sermons to men enlisted, 1755; Dudleian lecture, 1760; on admitting members from other churches, 1765.—Spraque's Annals.

WIGGLESWORTH, EDWARD, D. D., the successor of his father as the Hollis professor of theology at Harvard, died in 1794, aged about 62. He graduated in 1749 and was chosen professor in 1705. He was secretary of the commissioners of the society in Scotland for propagating the gaspel among the Indians. He was an original member of the American academy of arts and aciences. He published the Dudleian lecture on the errors of the Roman church, 1777; sermon on the death of J. Winthrup, 1779.— Sprague's Annals.

WIGGLESWORTH, THOMAS, a rich merchant, died in Boston April 27, 1855, aged 79. He was the son of Rev. Edward W. of Cambridge, and was graduated in 1793. He was engaged in the Russia and India trade.

WIGHT, JABEZ, minister in Norwich, Conn., died in 1782, aged 81. Born in Dedham, he graduated at Yale in 1715; was pastor of the fifth society in N. in 1726.

WIGHT, EBENEZER, second minister of Hollis street church, Boston, died in 1821, aged about 65. Born in Dedham, he graduated at Harvard in 1776, and succeeded Dr. M. Byles in 1778. His successors were West, Holley, Pierpont.

WIGHT, HENRY, D. D., died in Bristol, R. I., Aug. 12, 1837, aged 84. Born in Medfield, he graduated at Harvard in 1782. For one year, while the college exercises were suspended, he served in the army. He was sole pastor in B. from 1785 to 1815, and then had a colleague till 1828. He kept a daily record seventy years. He died in peace, leaving a widow and seven children.

WIGHTMAN, VALENTINE, a Baptist minister, died at Groton, Conn., in 1796, aged 76, in the forty-second year of his ministry.

WILBUR, HERVEY, died at Newburyport Jan. 5, 1852, aged 65. Born in Worthington, his late education was with several ministers in Oneida county, N. Y. As a preacher he was useful in various places, and was minister of Wendell six years from 1817. Then he was at the head of several female seminaries, and prepared and delivered astronomical and other lectures, with illuminated diagrams. He published a sermon on religious education; the reference bible; and various school books and manuals. — Dimmick's Sermon.

WILCOX, JOSEPH, general, died at Marietta, Ohio, in 1817. Before he went to the west he lived at Killingworth and was marshal of Connecticut. He was an officer of the Revolution.

WILCOX, ROBERT, captain, died at Lebanon, Conn., in 1822, aged 71; a native of Newport. He was during the whole war of the Revolution board of ships, except when a prisoner two years. He was with Paul Jones, and was the first who boarded from the Bon Homme Richard the British ship Serapis, which was captured, while the American ship sunk.

WILCOX, CARLOS, a poet and minister of Hartford, Conn., died at Danbury of the consumption May 29, 1827, aged 32. He was born at Newport, N. II., Oct. 22, 1794, but his parents soon removed to Orwell, Vt. He graduated at Middlebury college in 1813; studied theology at Andover; and, after preaching in various places, and spending two or three years in writing his poems, was ordained at Hartford in Dec., 1824. In consequence of ill health he was dismissed in May, 1826. His intimate friends, whom he commemorated in his poetry, were Allen, Larned, Fisher, Parsons, Fisk, and Andrus. He had the genius of a poet. A long and interesting account of him is given in Dr. Sprague's annals. His principal poems are the age of benevolence, and the religion of taste, both of which were published in his remains, 8vo. 1828, WILDE, RICHARD HENRY, born in Baltimore, was attorney-general of Georgia, and died suddenly of a fever, as professor of law in Louisiana at New Orleans, Sept. 10, 1847, aged 58. For several years he was a member of congress. He was best known as a scholar and poet. He published a work on the love, madness, and imprisonment of Tasso.

WILDE, SAMUEL SUMNER, LL. D., judge, died in Boston June 12, 1855, aged 84. Born at Taunton, Feb. 5, 1771, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1789. He practiced law in Augusta, Me.; for thirty-five years from 1815 to 1851 he was a judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts; then lived five years in retirement. He was a member of the Hartford convention. His daughter, the wife of Attorney-general C. Cushing, died some years before him. He was skilled in the law of real estate, and his decisions on the common law were respected. He published oration July 4, 1797; masonic oration, 1799.

WILDER, LUKE, captain, an officer of the aged

to jo
W
In 18
uated succe
was s ful m religi eral
W teeme

Reve

aged WI
Jan. 2
sioner WI
bury,

ham C 76. I imated evil cu lamy a ple to " Place " Ah," this, fo church was th pending his par custom unload of refre heavy out to in and WIL busines fifty cen But in paid up WIL 1852, b hospita an hone

lived th

WIL
N. Y., in publi WII
N. H., ated at June, 1
ordaine

WIL Va., in WIL ville, K aged 82. Born in Lancaster, Mass., he marched to join Stark at Hennington.

WILDER, JOHN, minister of Attleboro', died in 1836, aged 77. Born in Templeton, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1784, and was paster as successor of H. Weld from 1790 to 1822. He was succeeded by T. Williams. He was a faithful minister, and witnessed soveral revivals of religion among his people. He published several sermons.

WILDER, JONAS, of Brighton, a highly esteemed teacher, died at Newton in June, 1839, WILDER, NATHANIEL, died at Wendell, Mass., Jan. 24, 1851, aged 100; a Revolutionary pensiener.

n

D

e l, γf

n-

m ts

at

at cs,

his

24.

in

med.

the

ac-

als.

nce,

ub-

alti-

died

uie-

58.

ress.

He

im-

ıdge,

Born

Dartusta,

51 he achu-

He

His

hing,

led in n the d ora-

of the

WILDMAN, BENJAMIN, minister of Woodbury, Conn., was settled colleague with Mr. Graham Oct. 22, 1760, and died Aug. 2, 1812, aged 76. He was a graduate of 1753; a faithful, animated, popular minister. Rum-drinking was an evil custom of his day. Once he asked Dr. Bellamy as to the best means of persuading his people to attend meeting. The advice given was, "Place a barrel of rum under the pulpit."-"Ah," said Mr. Wildman, "I am afraid to do this, for I should have the attendance of half the church of Bethlehem every Sabbath!" There was then a case of discipline for intemperance pending in that church. At a wood-bee, when his parishioners brought loads of wood, the custom was to ask them to drink before they unloaded. A jocose poor man, wanting a share of refreshment, entered the wood-yard with a heavy log on his shoulder; the minister cried out to him, "Come, come, good friend; come in and drink before you unload!"

WILEY, EDWARD, died in Savannah in 1850, an honorable merchant. Born in New York, he lived thirty years in S. In 1842 he failed in business, and compromised with his creditors for fifty cents on a dollar, and obtained a full release. But in a few years, having repaired his lesses, he paid up the entire balance.

WILEY, JOHN, M. D., died in Brooklyn in 1852, bequeathing more than 20,000 dollars to hospitals and other charities.

WILKIN, JAMES W., general, died in Goshen, N. Y., in 1845, aged 82. He was much engaged in public life, and was respected and beloved.

WILKINS, DANIEL, first minister of Amherst, N. H., died in 1785, aged about 70. He graduated at Harvard in 1736, and was ordained in June, 1741. The next minister was J. Barnard, ordained in 1780.

WILKINS, John, general, died at Pittsburg,

Va., in 1816, aged 54.

WILKINS, JAMES C., colonel, died at Louis-

Revolutionary army, died at Hangor, Me., in 1836, | removed about 1809 to Mississippi, and was an eminent cotton merchant, of the firm of Wilkins and Linton, New Orleans. He was charitable and Many merekants in difficulty experienced his kind aid; the widow and orphan he did not forget.

WILKINSON, JEMIMA, an impostor, died in 1819. She was born in Cumberland, R. I., about 1753, and was educated a Quaker. She was artful, bold, and zealous. About 1773, when she recovered from a fit of sickness, in which she had been apparently dead, she announced that she had been raised from the dead, and had received a divine commission as a religious teacher. Having made a few proselytes, she removed with them to the State of New York, and settled near Seneca and Crooked Lakes, calling her village Jerusalem. In consequence of the dupery of her followers, she was enabled to live in a style of elegance, being waited upon by half a dozen handsome girls. She inculcated poverty; but was careful to be the owner of lands, purchased in the name of her companion, Rachel Miller. When she preached, she stood in the door of her bed-ehamber, wearing a waistcoat, a stock, and a white silk cravat. In a short time her followers began to fall off.

WILKINSON, JAMES, general, a soldier of the Revolution, died Dec. 28, 1825, aged 68. He was bern in Maryland about 1757, and studied medicine. In 1775 he repaired to Cambridge as a volunteer. In 1776 he was a captain in a regiment which proceeded to Canada. On the surrender of Burgoyne he carried the dispatches to congress and received the brevet of brigadiergeneral. After the peace he settled in commercial business in Kentucky. Again he entered the army and had the command on the Mississippi. In the war of 1812 he served on the northern frontiers. Not long before his death he went to Mexico, where he was attacked with the diarrhea, which is common among strangers. At the age of 56, he married Miss Trudeau, aged 26. He published memoirs of my own times, 3 vols., 8mo., 1816.

WILKINSON, ABRAHAM, died at Pawtucket. R. I., in 1849, aged 80. With Slater he founded the first cotton factories at Pawtucket.

WILLARD, SIMON, major, of Salem, died at Charlestown, where he was holding a court, in 1676, aged about 70. The son of Richard of Kent in England, he came to this country in 1634; lived a short time at Cambridge; in 1635 was chief of the settlers of Concord; then lived in Lancaster and Groton, from which last place he was driven by the Indian war in 1676; at last he resided in Salem. He sustained various civil offices, and was skilful as a soldier. His wives were Mary Sharp; Elizabeth, sister of President ville, Ky., in 1849. Born in Pennsylvania, he Dunster; Mary D., the cousin of the president; who might help to people a new country, - nine sons and eight daughters. It is not known by which of these wives President Willard was his son. - Sprague's Annals.

WILLARD, SAMUEL, minister in Boston and vice-president of Harvard college, died Sept. 12, 1707, aged 67. He was the son of Major Simon W., and was born at Concord Jan. 31, 1646. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1659. He was afterward settled the minister of Groton in 1663; but the ravages of the Indian war drove him from that place in 1676. G. Hobart suceceded him at G. He was settled colleague with Mr. Thacher, the first minister of the old south church in Boston, April 10, 1678. In 1700 he received Mr. Pemberton as an assistant minister. After the resignation of President Mather, he as vice-president took the superintendence of Harvard college Sept. 6, 1701, and presided over that seminary till his death. President Leverett suceeeded him. By two wives he had twenty children. Mr. W. possessed very superior powers of mind. His imagination was rich though not luxuriant, his perception was rapid and correct, and in argument he was profound and clear. His learning also was very considerable. In controversy he was a champion, defending the cause of truth with courage, and with enlightened and affectionate zeal. All his talents and acquisitions were devoted to God, who had created him anew in Christ Jesus, and implanted in his heart all the pure, and humble, and lovely virtues of Christianity. In the time of the witchcraft delusion he distinguished himself by opposing the rash proceedings of the courts. The catalogue of his writings occupied a page in Dr. Sprague's Annals. His chief work is his body of divinity, a folio volume, made up of monthly lectures, delivered for nineteen years. His doctrine of the divinity is: "There is one essence or substance and three distinct subsistences in the Godhead. These subsistences, which are eternal, are relative properties, and not merely relations. The unity of essence makes the Godhead one; the three subsistences make the three persons. The Father's manner of subsistence consists in his begetting the Son. The Son's manner of subsisting consists in his being begotton of the Father. The floly Courses manner of successing eonsists in his proceeding both from the Father and from the Son." All this theoretical explanation is rejected in the more modern theory of Professor Stuart. He published a sermon to the second church after they had received the covenant: a discourse on the death of J. Leverett. 1679; of Maj. Thos. Savage, 1682; animadversions on the Baptists, 1681; covenant-keeping the way to blessedness; on the flery trial; at a fast; election sermon, 1682; the child's portion, 1684; on died in March, 1826. Mr. Webber succeeded and by these he had a goodly number of children, | justification; heavenly merchandise, 1686; on laying hands on the bible in swearing, 1689; the barren fig-tree's doom; against excessive sorrow; the danger of taking the name of God in value on promise-keeping, 1691; on worshipping God; on discerning the times; on the doctrine of the covenant of redemption, 1603; at the election; at a fast; the law established by the gospel, 1694: spiritual desertions discovered and remedied, 1699; a remedy against despair; love's pedigree; the perils of the times displayed, the substance of several sermons; on the calling of the Jews, 1700; the Christian's exercises by Satan's temptations; caution about swearing; on the death of W. Stoughton, 1701; at a fast; Israel's true sefety, 1704; fountain opened, or blessings to be dispensed at the national conversion of the lows, 1727; sacramental meditations, His largest work, and the first follo volume on divinity printed in this country, was published in 1/20, entitled a body of divinity in two hundred and fifty expository lectures on the assembly's shorter catechism. It is considered as a work of great merit. - Pemberton's Serm.; Sprague.

WILLARD, SAMUEL, minister of Biddeford, Me., died in 1741, aged 35. The son of John, a merchant at Kingston, Jamaica, and grandson of Rev. Samuel of Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1723. His wife was the daughter of Samuel Wright of Rutland. He was the father of President Joseph Willard. - Sprague.

WILLARD, JOSIAH, secretary of Mass., the son of Rev. Samuel W., of Boston, died in 1756, aged 75. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1608. In June, 1717, the king appointed him secretary of his native province, and he was continued in that station thirty-nine years till his death. He was also a judge of the probate of wills and a member of the council. While he commanded the highest respect in the public offices which he sustained, his heart was the abode of all the Christian virtues. - Sewall's and Prince's Sermons.

WILLARD, JOSIAH, first minister of Sunderland, Mass., died in 1790, aged 90. He was settled in 1718, and resigned in 1721.

WILLARD, JOSEPH, D. D., LL., D., president of Harvard college, died Sept. 25, 1804, aged 65. He was born at Biddeford Dec. 29, 1738, the son of Rev. Samuel W. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1765; and was ordained Nov. 25, 1772, as a colleague with Mr. Champney, minister of Beverly, where he continued in the high esteem of the people of his charge till he was elected president in the place of Dr. Langdon. Into this office he was inducted Dec. 19, 1781. During the last years of his life his usual health was unsettled. He died at New Bedford. His widow, Mary, daughter of Jacob Sheafe of Portsmouth, him. with and Gree Ame ming and t with cured He 1 the c death H. Pa of W 1800 a nicati emy. -Sprag Wİ for his talents to the educati WII bridge, WII at Lau gradua Conn.

was th

uated

years

pensat

North then of WIL Mass., Harvar 1782, a predece Dorr. rough, WIL 1848, a

WIL

Nov. 20 WIL at Har The so vard in 1800 to cessor e publish Advert WIL from 17 was at Norwick WIL

Revolut

him. He was distinguished for his acquaintance | 90. He was in fort Stanwix Aug. 3, 1777, when with classical literature and with mathematical and astronomical science. His attainments in Greek learning have been equalled by few in At the head of the university he mingled paternal tenderness with strict authority, and by his dignified person and deportment united with candor, generosity, and benevolence, he secured at the same time respect and affection. He published a thanksgiving sermon, 1783; at the ordination of J. McKeen, 1785; on the death of T. Hilliard, 1790; at the ordination of II. Packard, 1793; a Latin address on the death of Washington, prefixed to Tappan's discourse, 1800 and mathematical and astronomical communications in the memoirs of the American academy. - Webber's Eulogy; Holmes; Pearson; Sprague.

WILLARD, JOHN, D. D., minister of Stafford. Conn., died Feb. 16, 1807, aged about 76. 11e was the brother of President Willard, and graduated at Harvard in 1751. For more than fifty years he was a faithful minister, with little compensation for his services, toiling with his hands for his own subsistence. He was respected for his talents and acquirements, and generous kindness to the young, who needed his aid in acquiring un education.

n

d

'n ρf

d, nn

r-

of ier

the 56, e in him

on-

his

of

ha

offi-

ode

and der-

set-

dent

1 65.

son

lar-

. 25.

ister

teem ected

this uring

s un-

idow, outh.

ceded

WILLARD, SAMUEL, a physician, died in Uxbridge, Mass., in 1811, aged 63.

WILLARD, JOSEPH, son of Rev. John, died at Lancaster, N. H., in 1827, aged 66. He graduated at Harvard in 1784; was pastor in North Wilbraham, Mass., from 1787 to 1794; then of Lancaster, N. H., from 1794 to 1822.

WILLARD, JOSEPH, minister of Mendon, Mass., died in 1828, aged 86. He graduated at Harvard in 1765, and was pastor from 1769 to 1782, and was succeeded by C. Alexander. His predecessors were J. Emerson, G. Rawson, J. Dorr. He next was installed in 1785 at Boxborough, where he continued nearly forty-three years.

WILLARD, SIMEON, died at Boston Sept. 20, 1848, aged 95; long known as a clock-maker.

WILLARD, ASHBEL, Dr., died at Wrentham Nov. 20, 1852, aged 85.

WILLARD, SIDNEY, professor of Hebrew, etc., at Harvard college, died Dec. 6, 1856, aged 76. The son of President W., he graduated at Harvard in 1798; was librarian of the college from 1800 to 1805; was professor of Hebrew, as successor of Dr. Pearson from 1807 to 1831. He published a Hebrew grammar, 1817. - Boston Advertiser, Dec. 10, 1856.

WILLES, HENRY, minister of Franklin, Conn., from 1718 to 1749, died in 1758. His society was at time of settlement called West Farms, Norwich. He was graduated at Yale in 1715.

WILLET, MARINUS, colonel, a soldier of the Revolution, died in New York, Aug., 1830, aged any of his opinions, sentence of banishment was it was invested by St. Leger. Aug. 6th he sallied from the fort and bravely attacked the enemy in order to favor the approach of Herkimer with aid; but H. had been defeated. In a few days he and one officer effected a march of fifty miles through the wilderness to German Flats, in order to urge the sending of sufficient aid to the fort. July 10, 1781, he defeated a party of the enemy at Correy's town.

WILLEY, ANNA, Mrs., died in Concord, N. H., in 1835, aged 100.

WILLEY, ELIJAH F., a Haptist minister, died at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1841, aged 55.

WILLEY, CHARLES, died in Nottingham, M., Jan. 23, 1853, aged 107; he was a soldier o. he Revolutionary war.

WULLIAMS, THOMAS, one of the Pilgrims in the M vdower in 1620. He died before the end of Mar 1 of the next year. He left no descend-

WILL AMS, ROGER, the father of Providence antation, died in April, 1633, aged 84. He w a born in Wales in 1500, and was educated at Ox and or having been a minister in the church of I gland, his nonconformity induced him to seek religious liberty in America. He arri Ituli Feb. 5, 1631. In April he was chos annistant to Mr. Skelton in the ministry dem. Such was his puritanic zeal, that ded for a complete separation from the English surch, and even refused to join in fellowship th his brethren in Boston, unless they would d are their repentance for having communed. ore they came to this country, with the chuse of England. He was of opinion, also, that the n gistrate might not punish the breach of the S ath, or any violation of the precepta of the first able. Before the close of the summer he was bliged to retire to Plymouth, where he preached as an assistant to Mr. Smith about two years. In 1633 he returned to Salem, and, after the dead of Mr. Skelton in 1634, was the sole minister of the church. His peculiar sentiments and conduct soon brought him before the court, where he was accused of asserting that offences against the first table of the law ought not to be punished, unless they disturbed the public peace; that an oath ought not to be tendered to an unregenerate man; that a Christian should not pray with the unregenerate; and that thanks ought not to be given after the sacrament, nor after meat. He asserted that the Massachusetts patent was invalid and unjust, because a fair purchase had not been made of the Indians. He even refused to commune with the members of his own church, unless they would separate from the polluted and anti-Christian churches of New England. As he could not he induced to retract passed upon him in 1635. He obtained permission to remain till spring; but, as he persisted in preaching in his own house, orders were sent in Jan., 1636, to seize him and send him to England. He escaped, and went with four of his friends to Seekhouck, now Rehoboth, and crossing the river laid the foundation of a town, which, in acknowledgment of God's goodness to him, he called Providence. His early associates were John Throckmorton, William Arnold, William Harris, Stukley Wescot, John Greene, Thomas Olney, Richard Waterman, Thomas James, Robert Cole, William Carpenter, Francis Weston, and Ezekiel Holliman. He purchased the land honestly of the Indians; and, while he enjoyed liberty of conscience himself, he granted it to others. Having embraced the sentiments of the Baptists, he was baptized in March, 1639, by one of his brethren, and he then baptized Ezekiel Holliman, and ten others. But he soon entertained doubts respecting the correctness of his principles; the church, which he had formed, was dissolved; and he came to the conclusion that baptism ought not to be administered in any mode without a revelation from heaven. At this period he studied the Indian language, and used his endeavors to impart to the savages the blessings of the gospel. In 1643 he went to England us agent for the celenists, to procure an act confirming their voluntary government. He obtained a charter, and, returning with it, landed at Boston in Sept., 1644. Though he was still under the sentence of banishment, a letter of recommendation from some of the principal members of parliament secured him from any interruption on his way to Providence. In 1651 he went again as agent for the colony to England, and continued there till 1654. On his return he was chosen president of the government, in which station he was continued till 1657, when Benedict Arnold was appointed. Being zealous against the Quakers, he in 1672 held a public dispute with three of their most eminent preachers, which occupied three days at Newport and one day at Providence. Of this dispute he afterwards published an account. His memory is deserving of lasting honor for the correctness of his opinions respecting liberty of conscience, and for the generous toleration which he established. So superior was he to the meanness of revenge, and such was his magnanimity, that he exerted all his influence with the Indians in favor of Massachusetts, and ever evinced the greatest friendship for the colony from which he had been driven. For some of its principal men he preserved the highest affection, and maintained a correspondence with them. In his controversial writings, especially with Mr. Cotton, respecting teleration, he shows himself a master of argument. His talents were of a superior embraced, he seems to have been remarkably consistent. The Scriptures he read in the originals. Though his writings and his conduct in the latter period of his life evince that he was under the influence of the Christian spirit; yet his mind was so shrouded in doubt and uncertainty, that he lived in the neglect of the ordinances of the gospel. He did not contend, like the Quakers, that they were superseded, but found himself incapable of determining to what church it was his duty to unite himself. He would pray and preach with all who would hear him, of whatever denomination. If his conscience had been enlightened, one would suppose it must have reproved him for not partaking of the saerament also with different seets. His first baptism he appears to have renounced, not so much because he was dissatisfied with the time or the mode of its administration, as because it was received in the church of England, which he deemed anti-Christian. He published a key to the language of America, or a help to the tongue of the New England Indians, 8vo., 1643, which has been reprinted in the collections of the Massachusetts historical society; an answer to Mr. Cotton's letter concerning the power of the magistrate in matters of religion; the bloody tenet of persecution for the cause of conscience, 1644; the bloody tenet yet mere bloody by Mr. Cotton's endeavor to wash it white in the blood of the Lamb, etc., to which is added a letter to Mr. Endicott, 4to., 1652; the hireling ministry none of Christ's, or a discourse on the propagation of the gospel of Christ Jesus; experiments of spiritual life and health, and their preservatives. London, 1652; George Fox digged out of his burrows, 1676, which was written against Fox and Burrows, and gives an account of his dispute with the Quakers. An answer to it was published in 1679, entitled, a New England fire-brand quenched .- Winthrop; Magnalia, VII.; Hist. Collect.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, first minister of Deerfield. Mass., died June 12, 1729, aged 64. He was the grandson of Robert, who came to this country and settled in Roxbury in 1638. He was the son of Deacon Samuel W.; was born in Roxbury, Dec. 10, 1664; and was graduated at Harvard college in 1683. In May, 1686, he was ordained at Deerfield, a frontier town, much expessed to the incursions of the savages. In the beginning of 1704 information was received from Col. Schuyler of Albany of the designs of the enemy against Deerfield, and the government, at the solicitation of Mr. W., ordered twenty soldiers as a guard. In the night of Feb. 28th, the watch patroled the streets, but before morning they went to sleep. Three hundred French and Indians, who had been hovering about the town, order. In the religious doctrines which he when they perceived all to be quiet, surprised the garri into awak and appre seize n neg door ter of ehildi were towar the so ered f afterv About becau lengtl during arrive for eve to pop ineffice over th kill hir kiss a clevate from r One o with hi Indians embrac again i his den His thr ham, w Watert He pul at the 1698; turn fre redeem necount several of holy

> WIL Mass., the son Robert 1633, in cousin, as the s his dea His pre of chur age. I that the fathers'

sermon

n

8

r-

i-

ıt

at ŀе

ar

ce

ıst

a-11)- ch

hе ras

he

to rue ieh

as-

Mr.

ng-

t of

the on's

the

Mr.

ione

n of spir-

ives, f bis

Fox

pute

shed

rand

Hist.

field.

s the

mtry

s the

Rox-

Har-

ns or-pesed

nning

Col. nemy

e soli-

s as a

watch they

and

town,

ed the

garrison house. A party of them then broke music, sacred vestments, etc." into the house of Mr. W., who, as soon as he was awakened, snatched the pistol from the tester. and put it to the breast of the first Indian that approached, but it missed fire. The savages seized and bound him. Two of his children, and n negro woman of his family, were taken to the door and murdered. His wife, the only daughter of Mr. Mather of Northampton, and all his children, excepting his eldest son, with himself were compelled immediately to begin their march towards Canada. In wading a small river on the second day, Mrs. W., who had scareely recovered from a late confinement, fell down; and soon afterwards an Indian killed her with his hatchet. About twenty other prisoners were murdered, because their strength began to fail them. At length, after witnessing the most agonizing scenes during a journey of three hundred miles, he arrived in Canada. Here new trials awaited him, for every exertion was made to convert this heretic to popery. His Indian master, after seeing the inefficacy of other methods, lifted his hatchet over the head of his prisoner, and threatened to kill him, if he did not instantly cross himself and kiss a crucifix; but Mr. W. was governed by too elevated principles to be made to violate conscience from regard to his life. He was redemed in 1706. One of his daughters he was unable to bring with him. She had become assimilated to the Indians, and afterwards married one of them and embraced the Roman Catholic religion. Settling again in Deerfield he continued in that place till his death. He was succeeded by Mr. Ashley. His three eldest sons, Eleazar, Stephen, and Warham, were ministers of Mansfield, Springfield, and Watertown, and were highly respected and useful. He published warnings to the unclean, a sermon at the execution of Sarah Smith at Springfield, 1698; a sermon at Boston lecture after his return from Canada; God in the camp, 1707; the redeemed captive, 12mo., which gives a minute account of his sufferings, and has passed through several editions; a serious word to the posterity of hely men, calling upon them to exalt their fathers' God, being the abstract of a number of sermons. - Foxcroft's Sermons; Sprague.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, minister of Hatfield, Mass., died suddenly in 1741, aged 76. He was the son of Isaac of Newton, and grandson of Robert of Roxbury, and graduated at Harvard in 1633, in a class of three, one of whom was his cousin, Rev. John W. From 1685 he was pastor, as the successor of N. Chauncy, fifty-six years till his death, and was succeeded by Mr. Woodbridge. His predecessor was Mr. Atherton. His notions of church music differ from those of the present | Rev. S. Stoddard, was the sister of his father's age. In a sermon at Watertown in 1723 he says, that the practices of a corrupt church are to be Smith of New York. He published a sermon at condemned, "as burning of candles, instrumental the ordination of D. Ilall, Sutton, 1729; at the

His first wife was Eliza, daughter of Rev. Seaborn Cotton, by whom he had sons, who were ministers, - William of Weston and rector Elisha; his second wife was Christian, daughter of Rev. S. Stoddard, by whom he had two sons, Rev. Dr. Solomon and Israel. A daughter married Rev. J. Ashley. He preached a half-century sermon from his ordination; and so also did his son, Solomon; his grandson, Eliphalet of East Hartford; and his great-grandson, Solomon of Northampton. He was a man of distinguished talents. He published a sermon at the ordination of Stephen Williams, 1716; of Warham Williams, 1723; of Nehemiah Bull, 1726; obligation of parents to transmit religion, 1721; of baptism; the great salvation explained in several sermons, 1717; election sermon, 1719; convention sermon, 1726; on the death of S. Stoddard, 1729; the duty and interest of a Christian people to be steadfast; directions to obtain a true converson, 1736.

WILLIAMS, ELEAZAR, first minister of Mansfield, Conn., the eldest son of Rev. John W., was graduated at Harvard college in 1708; was ordained in 1710; and died Sept. 21, 1742, aged 53. He published the election sermon, 1723; sinners invited to Christ, three sermons, 1735.

WILLIAMS, WARHAM, minister of Watertown, Mass., west precinet, now Waltham, died in 1751, aged 52. The son of Rev. John of Deerfield, he graduated at Harvard in 1719, and was ordained in 1723. As he was preaching he was struck with palsy, four months before his death. - Sprague.

WILLIAMS, EBENEZER, first minister of Pomfret, Conn., died March, 1753, aged 62. The son of Deacon Samuel W. of Roxbury, and nephew of Rev. John, he graduated at Harvard in 1709, and was ordained in 1715. His wife was Penelope Chester, the daughter of John C. of Wethersfield. He was a good scholar, and exerted an influence for good. In his last days he became very corpulent, so that he could not reach his feet. - Sprague.

WILLIAMS, CHESTER, minister of Hadley, died in 1753, aged 36. The son of Rev. Ebenezer of Pomfret, he graduated at Yale in 1735, and was a tutor, and was ordained about Jan., 1741. He succeeded Mr. Chauncy and was suceeeded by Dr. Hopkins. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Eleazer Porter of Hadley .-Sprague.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, minister of Weston. Mass., the son of Rev. W. W. of Hatfield, was graduated at Harvard college in 1705, and died in 1753, aged about 68. His wife, a daughter of second wife. As his widow she married William artillery election, 1737; on the execution of P. Kennison for burglary, 1738; on saving faith; at the election, 1741; on the death of Caleb Lyman, 1742; of his wife, 1745. - Sprague.

WILLIAMS, EPHRAIM, colonel, founder of Williams college, died in 1755, aged 40. He was born in 1715, was the son of E. W. of Newton, who was afterwards one of the first settlers of Stockbridge. In early life he made several voyages to Europe. Possessing uncommon military talents, in the war between England and France from 1740 to 1748 he found opportunity to exert them. The command of the line of the Massachusetts forts on the west side of Connecticut river was intrusted to him. At this period he resided chiefly at Hoosac fort, which stood on the bank of Hoosae river in Adams, and he also commanded a small fort at Williamstown, three or four miles distant. In 1755 he took the command of a regiment and joined Gen. Johnson. Sept. 8th, he was sent out at the head of one thousand men with about two hundred Indians to skirmish with the enemy near lake George. He was ambuseaded, and in the action was killed. His party retreated to the main body, and in another engagement on the same day the enemy were repulsed, and Baron Dieskau taken prisoner. He was a brave soldier, and was beloved by his troops. He was affable and facetious. His politeness and address gained him great influence in the general court. He bequeathed his property to the establishment of a free school in the township west of fort Massachusetts, on the condition that the town should be called Williamstown. In 1785 trustees were appointed; in 1791 the school was opened; and in 1793 it was incorporated as a college, under the presidency of Dr. Fitch. It is now a flourishing seminary, which does honor to the munificence of its founder, and to the liberality of the general court, which has patronized it. - Coll. Hist. Soc.

WILLIAMS, ELISIIA, president of Yale college, died July 24, 1755, aged 60. The son of Rev. W. W. of Hatfield, he was graduated at Harvard college in 1711. He was the minister of Newington in Wethersfield, Conn. In 1726 he was inaugurated president in the place of Dr. Cutler; but his impaired health induced him in Oct., 1739, to resign his office, and Mr. Clap succeeded him. He now lived at Wethersfield and was soon made a justice of the superior court. In 1745 he went as chaplain in the expedition against Cape Breton. In the following year he was appointed colonel of a regiment on the proposed expedition against Canada. He afterwards went to England, where he married a lady of superior accomplishments. He died at Wethersfield. Dr. Doddridge, who was intimately acquainted with him, represents him as uniting in his character "an mate prudence, great candor and sweetness of temper, and a certain nobleness of soul, capable of contriving and acting the greatest things, without seeming to be conscious of his having done them." He presided at commencements with great dignity. He married first Eunice, daughter of Thomas Chester, a grandson of Leonard; next Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Thomas Scott of Norwich, England. Few men have been subjected to such heavy afflictions; yet he bore them as a Christian. Soon after 1740 he was bereaved of his eldest son, who was liberally educated and of rare endowments; then of his eldest daughter, gifted and eminently pious; then of his youngest son, a graduate of Yale, of great promise. About 1750 he lost a daughter of amiable and engaging qualities, and soon afterwards his beloved wife was taken away from him. He published a sermon on divine grace, 1727; on the death of T. Ruggles, 1728; the rights and liberties of Protestants, 1744. - Clap's Hist. of Yale College; Sprague.

WILLIAMS, SOLOMON, D. D., minister of Lebanon, Conn., the son of W. W., of Hatfield, was born in Jan., 1701, and graduated at Harvard college in 1719. He was ordained Dec. 5. 1722, and died Feb. 29, 1776, in the 76th year of his age and the 54th of his ministry, having been one of the distinguished men of his day. His wife was Mary Porter of Hadley. He published a sermon at the ordination of Jacob Eliot, 1730; on the death of J. Woodward, 1741; of John Robinson, 1739; of Rev. Eleazer Williams, 1743; of Rev. J. Meacham, 1752; of Rev. Ebenezer Williams, 1753; of Faith Huntington, 1775; on a day of prayer; election sermon, 1741; the more excellent way, against enthusiasm, 1742; Christ the king and witness of the truth, 1744; a vindication of the Scripture doctrine of justifying faith, in answer to A. Croswell, 1746; the true state of the question concerning the qualifications for communion, in answer to J. Edwards, 1751; for success in arms, 1759; half-century sermon, 1772. - Sprague.

WILLIAMS, STEPHEN, D. D., first minister of Longmeadow, died June 10, 1782, aged 89, in the 66th year of his ministry. The son of Rev. John W., he was born at Deerfield, May 14, 1693, and Feb. 29, 1704, was carried captive by the Indians to Canada, whence he returned Nov. 21, 1705. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1713, and ordained over the second church of Springfield, now Longmeadow, Oct. 17, 1716. In 1745 he went to Louisburg as a chaplain under Pepperrell, and in 1755 he went to Lake Champlain in the same capacity under Sir W. Johnson, and in 1756 under Winslow. By the officers and soldiers, he was held in esteem and honor. By his first wife, Abigail Davenport, he had seven ardent sense of religion, solid learning, consum- | children, three of whom were ministers; all prosent of V of T Day D. send ans, and o publi Keer w. Mass rougl sermo W) dians, was tl born i in her langu and m She ec life. Longn Sprag society The so at Yal was ore his wif Cheshi wife w Haven. being the min a humb bling.". WIL N. II., he grad

WII

was o

dained

WIL in 1794 a brave commai adjutan the cap prisone Carolina was int corps in disposed embarre war he disinter In the r esteem.

ent at his funeral; his son Stephen was minister of Woodstock, Warham of Northford, and Nathan of Tolland. His wife was a daughter of John Davenport of Stamford and, sister of Rev. John 1). Probably ho was the principal means of sending a missionary to the Houssatonnoe Indians, for, Sept. 9, 1734, he went to New Haven and engaged John Sergeant for that service. He published a sermon at the ordination of John Keep, Sheffield, 1772. - Sprague's Annals.

WILLIAMS, ABRAHAM, minister of Sandwich. Mass., died in 1784, aged 58. Born in Marlborough, he graduated at Harvard in 1744, and was ordained in 1749. He published convention sermon, 1757. - Sprague.

١f

le

ţs,

ng

ıts

ce,

ev.

ien

vet

he ally

his hen

reat

ımi-

ards

He

the

lib-

. of

r of field,

Har-

ec. 5,

ar of

been

His

lished

1730;

John

1743;

enezer

5; on

; the 1742:

1744;

ustify-

3; the

qualifi-

wards,

entury

ster of

89, in

f Rev.

lay 14,

tive by

d Nov.

college

irch of

16. In n under

Cham-ohnson,

ers and

or. By

l seven all pres-

WILLIAMS, EUNICE, a captive among the Indians, died in Canada about 1786, aged 90. She was the daughter of Rev. John W., of Deerfield, born in 1696, and carried captive with her father in her 8th year. She soon forgot the English language, became conformed to Indian habits, and married an Indian, named John De Rogers. She could not be persuaded to return to civilized life. In 1740 she visited her brother Stephen at Longmeadow; and she made subsequent visits. -Sprague's Annals.

WILLIAMS, WARHAM, minister of Northford society in Branford, Conn., died in 1788, aged 62. The son of Rev. Dr. Stephen W., he graduated at Yale in 1745; was a tutor four years; and was ordained the first pastor at N. in 1750. By his wife, Ann, the daughter of Rev. S. Hall of Cheshire, he had twelve children. His second wife was the widow of Col. Whiting of New Haven. He was a scholar and a solid divine, being ranked "among the weighty characters in the ministry." At the close of life he cherished a humble hope as to the future, but "with trembling." - Sprague's Annals.

WILLIAMS, SIMON, minister of Windham, N. II., died in 1793, aged 64. Born in Ireland, he graduated at Princeton in 1763, and was ordained in 1766.

WILLIAMS, OTHO HOLLAND, colonel, died in 1794, aged 45. Born in Maryland, he was a brave officer in the Revolutionary war; held a command in the Maryland line; and was deputy adjutant-general of the American army. the capture of fort Washington he was taken prisoner. In the retreat of Greene from South Carolina to Virginia, in the beginning of 1781, he was intrusted with the command of the light corps in the place of Gen. Morgan, who was indisposed, and by his manœuvres he greatly embarrassed Cornwallis in his pursuit. After the war he resided at Baltimore. He was a firm and disinterested patriot as well as a gallant soldier. In the relations of private life his conduct secured esteem.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, a Baptist minister in Virginia, died in 1795, aged 48. He was born in Hanover. He had the care of Merwin church. He had fourteen children. His appearance was noble and majestic.

WILLIAMS, NEHEMIAH, minister of Brimfield, Mass., died in 1796, aged about 47. The son of Chester Williams, minister of Hadley, he was graduated at Harvard college in 1769. He was ordained Feb. 9, 1775. As a preacher he was distinguished for the energy and pathos with which his discourses were delivered. His life was most holy and benevolent, but on his dying bed he declared that his hope of salvation rested wholly upon the free and sovereign mercy of God through Jesus Christ. At the moment of his departure he cried, "I have finished my course with joy," and, clasping his hands as in devotion. expired without a struggle. A posthumous volume of twenty-four sermons was published. -N. Y. Theol. Mag.

WILLIAMS, EBENEZER, minister of Falmouth, Me., died in 1799, aged about 60. Born in Roxbury, he graduated at Harvard in 1760; succeeded Mr. Wiswall in 1765; and in 1798 was succeeded by Mr. Miltimore.

WILLIAMS, SIMON F., first minister of Meredith, N. H., died in 1800, aged about 40. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1785, and was pastor from 1792 to 1798; and was succeeded by D.

Smith and F. Norwood.

WILLIAMS, ELIPHALET, D. D., minister of East Hartford, Conn., died in 1803, aged 76, The son of Rev. Solomon, he was born at Lebanon Feb. 21, 1727; graduated at Yale college in 1743; and was ordained in March, 1748. His predecessor, S. Woodbridge, was minister from 1705 to 1746; his successors were Yates, ordained in 1801, Fairchild, and Mead. His wife was the daughter of Rev. Warham W. Two of his sons were ministers, Solomon W. of Northampton, and Elisha W. of Beverly. Few ministers live, as he lived, to preach a half-century sermon from the time of ordination. He was an eminent minister and an exemplary Christian, and had an unblemished reputation. He published a sermon on account of the earthquake, 1755; at a thanksgiving, 1760; at the election, 1769; on the death of Gov. Pitkin, 1769.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, died at Dalton, Mass., in 1808, aged 74. He graduated at Yale in 1754, and was clerk of the common pleas of Hampshire county until 1775. He was a venerable He married Dorothy, daughter of Christian. Rev. Jonathan Ashley, who died in 1833, aged 89. His father, Israel of Hatfield, died in 1823,

aged 79.

WILLIAMS, HENRY, first minister of Leverett, Mass., died in 1811, aged 67. Born in Stonington, Conn., he received an honorary degree from Dartmouth in 1782. He was settled in 1784.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, a patriot of the Revolution, died Aug. 2, 1811, aged 80. The son of Rev. Solomon W., he was born at Lebanon, Conn., April 8, 1731, and was graduated at Harvard college in 1751. In 1755 he belonged to the staff of Col. Ephraim Williams, and was engaged in the battle of lake George. In 1776 and 1777 he was a member of congress and signed the declaration of independence. In his zenlous patriotism he made great efforts and sacrifices for the liberties of his country. His wife was a daughter of Gov. Trumbull. His surviving son lived in Lebanon. His last days vere devoted to reading, meditation, and prayer. From his youth till his death, he was a deacon of the church and an exemplary Christian. - Goodrich.

WILLIAMS, BENJAMIN, governor of North Carolina, a patriot of the Revolution, was for some years a member of congress. He was governor from 1799 to 1802, and again in 1807, and died July 20, 1814.

WILLIAMS, JONATHAN, brigadier-general, was born in Boston in 1752. For many years he was at the head of the engineer corps of the army. He was also a member of congress. He died at Philadelphia in May, 1815, aged 63. He published a memoir on the use of the thermometer in navigation, 1799; elements of fortification, transl., 1801; Kosciusko's manœuvres for horse artillery, transl., 1808.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, Dr., died at Roxbury, Mass., in 1815, nged 70.

WILLIAMS, AVERY, minister of Lexington, Mass., died in 1816, aged about 34. Born in Guilford, Vt., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1804, and was pastor after J. Clark from 1807 to 1815. C. Briggs was his successor.

WILLIAMS, SAMUEL, LL. D., an historian, died in Rutland, Vt., 1817, aged 73. He was the son of Rev. Warham W. of Waltham, Mass.; was graduated at Harvard college in 1761; and ordained the minister of Bradford Nov. 20, 1765. He was professor of mathematics at Harvard college from 1780 till 1788, when he resigned and removed to Rutland, where he preached from 1789 to 1795. For some years he was the editor and proprietor of the Rutland Herald. He published two sermons on regeneration, 1766; at ordination of T. Barnard, 1773; of J. Prince, 1780; on the love of country, 1775; at the election, 1794; evidence of personal religion, 1799; love of country, 1799; before the centre lodge; the natural and civil history of Vermont, in 8vo., 1794; second edit. in 2 vols. 1809; a masonic discourse, and several scientific papers. -Sprague's Annals.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, Dr., died in Lebanon,

Rev. Dr. Solomon W., of Lebanon; was gradunted at Yale in 1756; and spent his life us n practising physician.

WILLIAMS, ISAAC, died Sept. 25, 1820, aged 84, strong in the faith of a blessed immortality, and rich in good deeds. He was born in Chester county, Pa. At the age of 18 he served as a ranger and spy in the army of Braddock. He settled west of the mountains in 1769, in the west of Virginia. He made money by the entries of lands in a singular way. By girdling a few trees and planting a patch of corn an entry was made: and thus he sold many lots of four hundred acres each very cheap to new-comers. Then the owner by paying a small sum into the treasury gained the right of entering one thousand acres adjoining. His last residence and plantation was opposite the mouth of the Muskingum on the Virginia side of the Ohio. Of course he was likely to hold slaves. He was so generous, that once in n scarcity he sold hundreds of bushels of corn to his suffering Ohio neighbors at fifty cents a bushel, when he was offered by speculators three times that sum. The way by which he acquired his fine farm was this. In 1773 his wife's brother. named Tomlinson, in reward of her services as housekeeper, chose four hundred acres opposite the Muskingum, girdled four acres, fenced and planted it with corn, and gave it to her. After thirteen years he determined to occupy it, and built his cabin. The spot is still in the possession of her descendants. Mr. W's adventures are described by Hildreth.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, a Baptist minister, died at Wrentham, Mass., in 1822, aged about 75. Born in Pa., he graduated in the first class, 1769. at Brown university.

WILLIAMS, SAMUEL PORTER, minister of Newburyport, died in 1826, aged 46. A descendant of Rev. Sol. W., he was born at Wethersfield, Conn., Feb. 22, 1779; graduated at Yale college in 1796; and, after being engaged in a mercantile employment, studied theology with Dr. Dwight, and was ordained at Mansfield Jan. 1, 1807. After being dismissed Sept. 7, 1817, he preached two years at Northampton, and then succeeded Dr. Dana at Newburyport Feb. 8, 1821. A volume of sermons, with a print and a sketch of his life, was published in 8vo., 1827.

WILLIAMS, Отно L., a Methodist minister, died at Winchester, Va., in 1828, aged 45.

WILLIAMS, NATHAN, D. D., minister of Tolland, Conn., died April 15, 1829, aged 93. The son of Rev. Stephen W. of Longmeadow, born in 1735, he graduated at Yale in 1755, was ordained at Tolland in 1760, and retired from his active duties about 1814. His widow, Mary Hall of Wallingford, died March 9, 1833, aged 95. Dr. Sprague gives his remembrance of him. His Conn., in 1819, aged 83. He was the son of was one of the lingering white wigs remembered.

pro He in c moi inde N. 8 cipli Apr W field W 1830

he m

W

War Livin W. town, son, J the ne in one WI died a fret, C of Col father sisters. WII see, o Mount wealth spected

was th

WII Northa son of daught gradua 1778 N and w Spence until, were fd and E afterwa His wi excelle ton in on Chr 1799: sermon

WII Mass., partne. lawyer the de membe lished t

1815. -

In prayer he often said, "we carneatly pray," pronouncing the first syllable of carneatly as air. He was cheerful but dignified, and full of anecdote in conversation. He published the election sermon, 1780; at a fast, 1793; an anniversary of independence, on death of E. Hall, 1794; of Rev. N. Strong, 1795; a dialogue on baptism and discipline. — Sprague's Annals; Puritan Recorder, April 12, 1855.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM S., Dr., died in Deerfield, Mass., in 1829, aged 67.

ď

y, er

1e

est

of

Pes

de;

res

ner

ned

oin-

110-

Vir-

kely

e in n to ts a hrce

nired

ther,

es as posite

and

After

t, and

ession

s are

r. died

ut 75.

, 1769,

ster of

descen-

ethers-

ale col-

a mer-

th Dr.

Jan. 1.

817, he

nd then

8, 1821.

a sketch

minister,

r of Tol-

93. The ow, born

, was or-

from his

Iary Hall

aged 95. im. His embered.

WILLIAMS, HENRY, died in Boston in Oct., 1830. He was an eminent miniature painter, and he made admirable anatomical preparations.

WILLIAMS, DAVID, with Paulding and Van Wart, one of the captors of Maj. André, died at Livingstonville, N. Y., in Aug., 1831, aged 78.

WILLIAMS, JOSHUA L., minister in Middletown, Conn., died Dec. 29, 1832, aged 46. His son, John M. W., of Yale college, aged 18, died the next day; on new year's dny both were buried in one grave.

WILLIAMS, ELISHA, a distinguished lawyer, died at Hudson June 29, 1833, aged 59. He was the son of Col. Ehenczer Williams of Pomfret, Conn., and of Jerusha Porter, the daughter of Col. Eleazer Porter of Hadley. Both his father and his uncle, Rev. Chester W., married sisters. He settled in Hudson in 1799.

WILLIAMS, NATHANIEL W., died in Tennessee, of the cholera, on board the steamboat Mount Vernon, in 1833, aged 44. He was a wealthy banker of Nashville, a man highly respected.

WILLIAMS, SOLOMON, the fifth minister of Northampton, Mass., died in 1834, aged 82. The son of Rev. Eliphalet W., by his wife, the daughter of Rev. Elisha Williams, his uncle, he graduated at Yale in 1770. He succeeded in 1778 Mr. Hooker, whose daughter he married, and was succeeded by Dr. Tucker and Dr. There was but one church in N., Spencer. until, in the last ten years of his life, there were formed the Unitarian, Episcopal, Baptist, and Edwards churches, and, in about ten years afterwards, the Methodist and Catholic churches. His widow, Mary, died in 1842, aged 85. His excellent daughter, Mary, died in Northampton in 1853, aged 67. He published a sermon on Christ the physician, 1777; three sermons, 1799; to a missionary convention, 1802; three sermons, 1805; historical sketch of Northampton, 1815. - Sprague's Annals.

WILLIAMS, EPHRAIM. died at Deerfield, Mass., Dec. 27, 1835, nged 75. He was at first a partner of Judge Sedgwick, and then a leading lawyer in Berkshire. He was the first reporter of the decisions of the supreme court. He was a member of the senate and council. He published the first volume of Mass. reports.

WILLIAMS, NATHAN, judge, died at Geneva, N. Y., in 1835.

WHLLIAMS, JOSHUA, minister at Upper Middletown, Conn., died in 1836, aged 75. He graduated at Yale in 1780.

WILLIAMS, JOHN W., died at Philadelphia in 1837, aged 34. Born in Connecticut, he graduated at Yale in 1822. He was a lawyer, and the editor of the American quarterly review and of the National Gazette.

WILLIAMS, JOSHUA, D. D., minister of West Pennsborough, Pa., died in 1838, aged 71.

WILLIAMS, NATHANIEL, teacher of the Smith grammar school, Boston, died in 1738, aged 63. He graduated at Harvard in 1693, and in 1698 was ordained as an evangelist for one of the West India Islands. But the climate was found unhealthful. On his return he succeeded Master Cheever; he also preached, and practised physic. He was called "the beloved physican," his voice and countenance doing good like a medicine. He wrote a pamphlet on the inoculation for the small pox.—Eliot's Biog.

WHLIAMS, ROBERT, Dr., a surgeon in the Revolutionary army, died in Pitt county, N. C., in 1840, aged 82; a man highly respected for his virtues. He was a member of the convention which adopted the constitution of the United States.

WILLIAMS, DAVID, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1841, aged 84.

WILLIAMS, SAMUEL, died in Boston Jan. 16, 1841, aged 81; a Boston merchant. He lived in London as a distinguished banker thirty years.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, a Baptist minister, died at Richfield, N. Y., in Aug., 1843, aged 100 years and 7 months. He was a great-grandson of Roger Williams. Ordained at the age of 25, he long preached in Foster, R. I. He was respected as a man of understanding and picty, and a good citizen. He left many descendants, some of the fifth generation.

WILLIAMS, ELISIA SCOTT, a Baptist minister, died at Beverly Feb. 3, 1845, aged 87. He was born at East Hartford, the son of Rev. Eliphalet W., and graduated at Yale in 1775. He published a sermon before a missionary society. — Sprague.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, the oldest counsellor at the Boston har, died in 1845, aged 72; a graduate of Harvard in 1792.

WILLIAMS, SIDEY P., M. D., a physician in Philadelphia, died March 5, 1845, aged 33; the only son of Dea. E. Williams, of Northampton, Mass. He graduated at Yale in 1829. When an aged father of wealth is thus made childless, it has sometimes been seen, that, in the absence of the claims of family pride, the claims of generous charity, in obedience to the promptings of wisdom and benevolence, have been regarded;

and thus great calamity, God's appointment, glorifies God.

WILLIAMS, John, Dr., died at Walpole, N. II., in 1846, aged 97. During the war he was a physician in Hanover, N. II.; then in Providence. He was an apothecary, and physician at Cambridge, and made much use of steam.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM G., captain, engineer, fell at Monterey mortally wounded, Sept. 21, 1846. He was graduated at West Point, and for twenty-two years was a topographical engineer, being employed in the Cherokee country, on the Niagara, and in Canada; he was superintendent of harbor constructions, and carried on a triangular survey of the lakes. As a painter he was a member of the national academy of design.

WILLIAMS, EBENEZER, captain, an officer of the Revolution, died at Central Bridge in Scoharie co., N. Y., July 1, 1847, aged 98. The son of Jonathan W. of Lebanon, he entered the army in 1775, and was in various battles. Through the influence of a pious mother, he reverenced religion, and was long an exemplary Christian.

WILLIAMS, JOHN D., of Roxbury or Boston, died in Sept., 1848. He bequeathed about 50,000 dollars to the Boston asylum, to the society for theological education, and the Mass. general hospital.

WILLIAMS, BETSEY, a Punkapog Indian, died at Stoughton, Mass., Feb. 2, 1848, aged 100.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, or TAHORAGWA-NEGEN, died Dec. 16, 1848, at Cahnowaga, near Montreal, aged 89; a chief of the Iroquois nation, and descended from Rev. J. Williams, of Deerfield. In the war of the Revolution he acted with the British at Bennington and Saratoga. He professed the Christian religion, and died respected and beloved.

WILLIAMS, ABIEL, minister of Dudley, Mass., died in 1850, aged 75. He graduated at Brown university in 1795.

WILLIAMS, MARMADUKE, judge, died in Tuscaloosa, Ala., in 1850, aged 78. Born in North Carolina, he was a member of congress from 1803 to 1809. For several years he was a judge of the county court in Alabama, until he reached the age of 70.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, consul of Venezuela, died at New York in 1852, aged 62. He was a translator of French novels.

WILLIAMS, CHARLES K., LL. D., governor of Vermont, died in Rutland in 1853, aged 71. Born in Cambridge, the son of Prof. S. Williams, he graduated at Williams college in 1800, and was many years judge, and chief-justice of the supreme court of Vermont. From 1850 to 1852 he was governor.

WILLIAMS, SARAH P., wife of William F. W., missionary at Mosul, died July 1, 1854.

WILLIAMS, EDWIN, a geographer, died in New York, Oct 21, 1834, aged 58. He was the editor of Williams' annual register and the statesman's manual.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS W., died at New London Sept. 12, 1855, aged 40. He died of a congestion of the brain, after an illness of twenty-four hours; the only son of Gen. William Williams, of Norwich. As an upright and skilful merchant, engaged extensively in the whale fisheries, he acquired great wealth, which chiefly fell into the hands of his father, of well-known liberality and charity. He himself was liberal and charitable. A number of papers contained notices of his death and character, and the sermon of Dr. Tryon Edwards on his death, entitled, the future unknown, were published.

WILLIAMSON, HUGH, M. D., LL. D., a physician, died in New York in 1819, aged 83. He was born in West Nottingham, Penn., Dec. 5, 1735. From 1760 to 1763 he was professor of mathematics in the college of Philadelphia. He afterwards studied medicine at Edinburgh and Utrecht. On his return he practised successfully in Philadelphia. In order to procure subscriptions for an academy at Newark, Del., he sailed from Boston for London Dec. 22, 1773, and was examined before the privy council in Feb., 1774, on the subject of the destruction of the tea at Boston. Dr. Hosack and Thacher give a minute account of the manner in which he at this period procured personally very adroitly and at great hazard, from a public office in London, the famous letters of Hutchinson and Oliver, which Franklin sent to Massachusetts. The account is fortified by letters of Bishop White, James Read and John Adams. Mr. Read received the account from the lips of Dr. Williamson, and John W., a brother, confirmed the account to Dr. Hosack. All this is an extraordinary mistake; for those very letters were made public in Boston and acted upon by the legislature in June, 1773, six months before Dr. Williamson set sail from Boston for London. After his return in 1776 he resided in North Carolina. In 1780 he was surgeon in the militia under Caswell. After the peace he was for five or six years a member of congress; he also assisted in framing the constitution of the U.S. In his last years he resided in New York. He published a discourse on the benefit of civil history, 1810; observations on the climate of America, 1811; history of North Carolina, 2 vols. 8vo., 1812; and many medical and philosophical communications. — Thacher.

WILLIAMSON, MATTHIAS, a Revolutionary officer and a lawyer, died in Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1836, aged 84. He was in the commissary department.

WILLIAMSON, JACOB, judge, a soldier of the Revolution, died in Amwell, N. J., in 1841, aged highi W town gover to 18

office
W.
Bange
terbu 1804. in 180
a sen afterw publis 1832.

died i mouth and whim in were MII died at with m

WI

WII died M water, survive 1780 to and Ra WIL Mass.,

Nathan

John W at Brid, ried firolutions its repr from 18 and wa In his p In his c tian fair WIL in Nor-77. H grandso in 1757 cessor, old. H were m minister nah ma WIL college, aged 37 WIL cliurch, former! aged 83. He was benevolent and kind and highly respected.

WILLIAMSON, ISAAC II., died at Elizabethtown, N. J., July 10, 1844, aged 67. He was governor and chancellor of the State from 1817 to 1829. He was an able jurist, an excellent officer, a citizen highly respected and beloved.

WILLIAMSON, WILLIAM DURKEE, died at Bangor May 27, 1846, aged 66. Born in Canterbury, Conn., he graduated at Providence in 1804. He commenced the practice of law at B. in 1807. In the first legislature of Maine he was a senator, and a member of congress in 1821; afterwards a judge of probate until 1840. He published a history of Maine in two volumes, 1839.

WILLIS, ELIAKIM, minister of Malden, Mass., died in 1801, aged nearly 87. Born in Dartmouth, Mass., he graduated at Harvard in 1735, and was ordained in 1752. A. Green succeeded him in 1795. The two first ministers of the town were M. Matthews and M. Wigglesworth.

WILLIS, HENRY, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Newark, N. J., in 1842, aged 85; buried with military honors.

_

r

t,

e

e

d

e.

is rc

33.

5, αf

le nd

lly

ip-

led vas 74,

ute

boir

ıaz-

let-

let-

ohn the

her,

is is tters

n by fore

don.

Caro-

illitia

r five

as-

U.S.

He

his-

mer-8vo.,

com-

onary N. J., issary

er of 1841,

WILLIS, ZEPHANIAH, minister of Kingston, died March 6, 1847, aged 99. Born in Bridgewater, he graduated at Harvard in 1778, and survived all his classmates. He was pastor from 1780 to 1828, nearly fifty years. Stacy, Macarty, and Rand preceded him; Cole was his successor.

WILLIS, NATHAN, general, died at Pittsfield, Mass., June 16, 1851, aged 88. His father was Nathan of West Bridgewater, descended from John Willis, who lived in Duxbury in 1637, and at Bridgewater in 1656, dying in 1693. He married first a daughter of Col. Tupper of the Revolutionary army. Living in Rochester, he was its representative in 1800, and senator for years from 1806. After 1813 he removed to Pittsfield, and was for several years in the public service. In his polities he was denominated a republicant line in 1800 age he made a profession of his Christian faith, and became a member of the church.

WILLISTON, NOAH, minister of West Haven in North Haven town, Conn., died in 1811, aged 77. He was born in Springfield, Mass., the grandson of Joseph W., and graduated at Yale in 1757. His wife was a daughter of his predecessor, Mr. Birdseye, who lived to be 103 years old. His two sons, Payson and David Howe, were ministers; and his two daughters married ministers: Sarah married R. S. Storrs, and Hannah married E. Kingsbury.

WILLISTON, E. B., president of Jefferson college, Miss., died at Norwich, Vt., in 1837,

aged 37.

WILLISTON, RALPH, minister of Zion's church, died in Hempstead, L. I., in 1839, aged 65; formerly rector of Zion's church in New York.

WILLISTON, SETH, D. D., died in 1851, agec 80. He was a cousin of Dr. Payson W., a graduate of Dartmouth in 1791. In 1796 he preached at Chemango, when there was only one meetinghouse to the west beyond, in the State of New York, and that was Mr. Grover's log-house, at Bristol, near Canandaigua. In 1809 he was settled at Durham, N. Y.; after some years he was dismissed. He was the author of several books: lectures on the moral imperfections of Christians, 1846; harmony of divine truth; vindication of the doctrines of the reformation.

WILLISTON, PAYSON, D. D., died at Easthampton, Mass., Jan. 30, 1856, aged 92 years and 7 months. The son of Rev. Nonh W. of West Haven, he graduated at Yale in 1783, was settled the first minister of Easthampton in 1789, and resigned in 1833, after a faithful ministry of forty-four years. He lived to see a little settlement in the wilderness grown into a large town of two churches, the seat of prosperous and extensive manufactures, conducted by his own son, and that son the founder and benefactor of a large and excellent academy in the same town. In 1853 his name was the first not starred in the Yale eatalogue. Dr. Woodbridge of Hadley preached his funeral sermon. He was well and able to make visits until within a few days of his death. He published a sermon in a volume of sermons, 1799; a half-century sermon from his settlement, 1839. - Sprague's Annals.

WILLOUGHBY, FRANCIS, deputy-governor of Massachusetts, died in Charlestown in 1671. He was in office during his last six years. What is supposed to be his journal, written in cypher, is preserved in the library of the antiquarian society at Worcester. - Budington.

WILLSON, HORACE, Dr., died in Clarksburg, Md., in 1847, aged 54. He was skilful, and engaged in the public service as a legislator.

WILMER, WILLIAM H., D. D., president of William and Mary college, Va., died at Williamsburg in 1827.

WILMER, SIMON, Episcopal minister in Charles county, Md., died in 1840, aged 66.

WILSON, Joins, first minister of Boston, died Aug. 7, 1667, aged 78. He was born at Windsor, England, in 1588, and was the son of Rev. Dr. Wm. W. He was educated at King's college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship; but was deprived of it for his nonconformity to the English church. After studying law for three years at one of the inns of court, he directed his attention to theology, and was a chaplain in several honorable families. He then settled in the ministry at Sudbury in Suffolk. In 1629 he came to this country in the same fleet with Gov. Winthrop. Charlestown was fixed upon as a place of settlement, and Mr. Wilson and Mr. Phillips preached under a tree. A church was formed on Friday, July 30th, and Aug. 27th, Mr. Wilson was ordained as teacher by the imposition of hands. This ceremony was performed by some of the brethren merely as a sign of his election to be their minister, and not because he had renounced his former ordination. In a few menths, when the greater part of his church removed across the river to Shawmut, or Boston, he accompanied them. In 1631 he returned to England for his wife, whom he had left behind, enjoining it upon Gov. Winthrop and some other brethren to prophesy, or to impart instruction and give exhortations in the church during his absence. In Oct., 1632, thirty-three members were dismissed to form a new church at Charlestown. They had Mr. James for their pastor, to whom Mr. Symmes was soon united as teacher. In Nov., Mr. Wilson was again ordained as pastor. In the following year he received Mr. Cotton as his colleague, and after his death Mr. Norton, July 23, 1656. He survived them both. Mr. Davenport succeeded him. His daughter married Rev. E. Rogers; his youngest, Mary, married Rev. S. Danforth. Mr. Wilson was one of the most humble, pious, and benevolent men of the age in which he lived. Kind affections and zeal were the prominent traits in his character. Such was his readiness to relieve the distressed, that his purse was often emptied into the hands of the needy. Every one leved him, and he was regarded as the father of the new plantation. He appears frequently to have possessed a particular faith in prayer. Events sometimes occurred according to his predictions. The blessings pronounced by him had been observed to be so prophetical, that on his death-bed the most considerable persons brought their children to him to receive his benediction. Having a most wonderful talent at rhyming, he used to write pieces of poetry on all occasions, and to send them to all persons. He was also a great anagrammatist. Dr. Mather thinks that he made more anagrams. and made them more nimbly, than any man since the days of Adam. They generally conveyed some religious truth or advice. But it was not always the case that the letters of his anagram corresponded with those of the name. It was perhaps in pleasant allusion to this discordance, as well as in reference to the hospitable temper of Mr. Wilson, that Mr. Ward, the witty author of the simple cobbler of Aggawam, said that the anagram of John Wilson was, "I pray come in, you are heartily welcome." In the early periods of his life his discourses were very correct; but as he advanced in years his sermons consisted principally of exhortations, admonitions, and counsels without much connection or method, but delivered with affectionate warmth. He partook of the common error of his times in calling upon the civil magistrate to punish those who were deemed heretical in doctrine. His portrait is in the library of the historical society. He published in England some helps to faith, 12mo. In this country an extemporary sermon, 1665, was taken down by a stenographer and afterwards published. — Sprague's Annals.

WILSON, JOHN, minister of Medfield, Mass., died in 1601, aged about 68. The son of the preceding, he graduated in the first class at Harvard college in 1642; was ordained as colleague with R. Mather at Dorchester in 1649; but after two years removed to Medfield, where he was minister forty years.

WILSON, MATTHEW, D. D., a physician and minister, died in Lewes, Del., March 31, 1700, aged 61. He was born in Chester county, Penn., in 1720. He studied medicine with Dr. Mc-Dowell, a physician and minister, and himself sustained those offices twenty-four years; he also for years had the charge of an academy at Newark. He was a profound theologian and a good Hebrew and classical scholar, truly benevolent and pious, mild, affable, and courteous. In the time of the Revolution his patriotic zeal was ardent. He resolved to drink no mere tea, and obliged his wife and children to deny themselves. He published a paper, proposing seventeen plants as a substitute. But his wife's sister, on a visit from Philadelphia, infringed his domestic regulation; she brought tea with her, and as it was of the "old stock," which paid no duty, "tea she would drink." He published a history of a malignant fever, 1774; remarks on the cold winter of 1779-1780; an essay to prove that most diseases proceed from miasmata in the air. 1786. - Thacher.

WILSON, JAMES, judge, died in 1798, aged 56. A patriot of the Revolution, he was born in Scotland about 1742. After being educated at Edinburgh, he came to Philadelphia in 1766 and studied law with J. Dickinson. Being a member of congress from 1775 to 1777, he signed the declaration of independence. Being a member of the convention which framed the constitution of the United States, he was chairman of the committee which reported it; he was also a member of the State convention which ratified it. In 1789 he was appointed a judge of the supreme court of the United States. He died at Edenton, N. C., while on a circuit. He was eminent as a lawyer and judge, and was professor of law in the university of Pennsylvania. His works, including his lectures, are in 3 vols. 8vo., published 1804.

WILSON, JAMES, minister in New York, successor of Dr. Rodgers, died in 1799, aged 47. Born in Scotland, he was pastor from 1785 to 1788: then he became a minister in Charleston, S. C.

WILSON, ALEXANDER, an ornithologist and poet was cour Mr. devo He d volu ble v plate Besie ers, land Allar Watt and lished accou has p 1825 and Hack was learne WI in 183 S. C., war.

the st ated it 1810 v wards
Many
He wa
nevole church

WI

he for

adelpl then v Presb in Bu knowl excell as on countr and t 8vo., died J WI missic 1836. mond meml 1839, WI died in

h-

In

as ds

·s., re-

arrue

ter

was nnd

190.

nn.,

Me-

self

also lew-

good lent

the

WRS

and

lves.

teen

on a estic

as it

" tea

of a eold that

e air,

aged

orn in

ed at 1766

ing a

7, he

Being

d the ehairhe was which dge of

s. He

. He

as pro-

lvania.

3 vols.

rk, suc-

ed 47.

785 to

rleston,

ist and

poet, died in Philadelphia Aug. 23, 1813. He | ceived an honorary degree at Brown university was born at Paisley, Scotland, and came to this country in 1794. Becoming acquainted with Mr. Bartram of Philadelphia, he was induced to devote himself to " study of natural history. He commenced in a the publication in seven volumes, 4to., of his most interesting and valuable work, the American ornithology, with colored plates. An 8vo. edition has since been published. Besides his ornithology, he published the foresters, a poem, in portfolio, n. s. vol. I.; in Scotland he published the laurel disputed, a poem on Allan Ramsay and Robert Ferguson, 1791; and Watty and Meg, a poem, 1702. The eighth and ninth volumes of his ornithology were published by Mr. Ord in 1814; the ninth has an account of Wilson. Charles Lucien Bonaparte has published three supplementary volumes, fol., 1825-1828.

WILSON, PETER, L.L. D., professor of Greek and Latin in Columbia college, N. Y., died at Hackensack, N. J., in Aug., 1826, aged 70. He was a distinguished scholar. He published a learned work on Greek prosody.

WILSON, SAMUEL, M. D., a physician, died in 1827, aged 64. He was born at Charleston, S. C., Jan. 26, 1763, the son of Dr. Robert W., an eminent physician. At the age of seventeen he fought under Marion in the Revolutionary war. He went to Edinburgh in 1784 to pursue the study of medicine. In 1791 he was associated in business with Dr. Alexander Baron; in 1810 with his brother, Dr. Robert W.; and afterwards with his sons, Drs. Isaac and Samuel W. Many young physicians were instructed by him. He was a respected physician; an amiable, benevolent man; an elder and communicant in the church for thirty years.

WILSON, JAMES P., D. D., minister in Philadelphia, was first a distinguished lawyer, and then was for many years the pastor of the first Presbyterian church. He died at his residence in Bucks county, Dec. 10, 1830. His general knowledge and talents and his usefulness and excellent character caused him to be regarded as one of the most distinguished men of this country. He published lectures on the parables and the historical parts of the New Testament, 8vo., 1810.

WILSON, WILLIAM, minister at Augusta, Va., died Jan. 1, 1836, aged 83.

WILSON, Mrs., wife of Dr. A. E. Wilson, missionary in Africa, died at Mosika Sept. 18, 1836. Her name was Mary J. Smithey of Richmond, Vn.

WILSON, JAMES, an eminent lawyer and member of congress, died at Keene, N. H., in 1839, aged 72.

died at Providence in 1839, aged 80. He re- of the consumption. He published Watts'

in 1798.

WILSON, ALEXANDER E., M. D., missionary to Africa, died at Cape Pulmas in 1840, aged 36, Born in Mecklenburg county, N. C., he received a college education. He embarked in 1834 for Cape Town: he was at Port Natal in 1837. His wife was Mary Hardeastle of New York. His last sermon was from the text, "There remaineth a rest unto the people of God." He died in peace, relying on the atonement; he asked for the singing of Cowper's hymn, "There is a fountain fill'd with blood." With great fervor he gave his exhortations to the living.

WILSON, JOSHUA L., D. D., died in Cincinnati Ang. 14, 1846, aged 72. Born in Virginia. he was brought up in Kentucky as a blacksmith, but became a minister, first in Kentucky, then in 1808 as paster of the only Presbyterian church in Cincinnati, where for many years he was tha chief minister of the highest character and influence, the most popular until the arrival of Dr Beecher in 1832. His church was so large that in 1833, after the colonizing of the second church, five hundred and eighteen members remained. Dr. W., in the division of the Presbyterina churches in 1837, attached himself to the old school. In his prosecution of Dr. Beecher, his justification or excuse was a conviction that his teachings were erroneous and pernicious. Perhaps he was not aware of an imperiousness of will and of other human imperfections.

WILSON, John, a lawyer, died at Belfast, Me., in 1848, aged 71. He graduated at Harvard in 1799.

WILSON, NATHANIEL, died in Boston in 1849, aged 60; purser in the U.S. navy. He was in the battle of Plattsburg. He left his property. 25,000 dollars, to his native town, Belfast, Me., for the purposes of education.

WILSON, HENRY R., D. D., died at Philadelphia in 1849, aged 69.

WILSON, JAMES G., died at Plainfield, N. J., in 1850, aged 41; a printer and publisher and bookseller. The New Yorker, the N. Y. Whig, the Empire State, and the Brother Jonathan were published by him; also, the Weekly Dispatch.

WILSON, WILLIAM, a painter of high reputation, died at Charleston, S. C., in 1851.

WILSON, ROBERT D., D. D., died in South Salem, Ross county, Ohio, April 17, 1851, aged

WINCHELL, JAMES M., minister in Boston, died in 1820, aged 28. The son of Col. Martin E. W., he was born in Duchess county, N. Y., in 1791; was graduated at Brown university in 1812; and succeeded Mr. Clay in the first Bap-WILSON, JAMES, a Presbyterian minister, tist church in Boston March 30, 1814. He died hymns, arranged according to the subjects; two | discourses, containing a history of his church, WINCHESTER, JONATHAN, first minister of Ashburnham, Mass., died in 1767, aged 51. Born in Brookline, he graduated at Harvard in 1737, and was settled in 1760. He was succeeded by

J. Cushing. WINCHESTER, ELHANAN, an itinerant preacher of the dectrine of restoration, died at Hartford, Conn., in April, 1797, aged 45. He was born in Brookline, Mass., in 1751. Without an academical education he commenced preaching, and was the first minister of the Baptist church in Newton. In 1778 he was a minister on Pedee river in South Carolina, zealously teaching the Calvinistic doctrines, as explained by Dr. Gill. In the following year his labors were very useful among the negroes. In 1781 he became a preacher of universal salvation in Philadelphia, where he remained several years. He afterwards endeavored to propagate his sentiments in various parts of America and England. His system is very similar to that of Dr. Chauncy. He published a volume of hymns, 1776; a plain political catechism for schools; a sermon on restoration, 1781; universal restoration, in four dialogues, 1786; lectures on the prophecies, American edit., 2 vols. 8vo., 1800. WINCHESTER, SAMUEL G., minister of Natchez, Miss., died in New York in 1841, aged 39; a man of remarkable talent and greatly beloved.

WINDER, WILLIAM H., general, died in 1824, aged 49. He was born in Somerset county, Maryland, in 1775, and practised law at Baltimore. In the war of 1812 he was first a colonel, then brigadier-general. At the battle of Bladensburg he commanded the troops. On the return of peace he resumed his profession.

WINDER, LEVIN, governor of Maryland, died July 1, 1819, aged 63. He was a soldier of the Revolution. He was governor during the war with Britain from 1812 to 1815. In 1816 he was a member of the Maryland senate; he was also a general of the militia.

WINDS, WILLIAM, general, died in New Jersey in 1789, aged about 62. His residence was one mile from Dover, Morris county, on the road to Rockaway. He was born in Southold, L. I. He purchased a large tract of land in New Jersey, and was one of the founders of the Presbyterian church in Rockaway, and bequeathed to it more than half his property. In 1775 he was lieutenant-colonel in Lord Stirling's regiment. In 1776 he was colonel, and led his regiment to Ticonderoga. He was a large, athletic man, and ity, 1812; vain amusements; merely amiable had a most powerful voice, of which, on one occasion, he made a very good use. Commanding | tion of B. Sawyer at Cape Elizabeth. - Sprague's a small detachment near Hackensack, he found | Annals.

that a much larger force of the enemy was advancing against him. Unwilling to retire, he awaited their approach to within half a mile and in the hearing of his voice, when he roared out the command, "Open to the right and left, and let the artillery through!" As the enemy were not prepared to meet cannon, on hearing this they fled. He had his singularities. He was excitable, stern, and of an imperious temper. He once during service in church applied his wagonwhip to some unruly boys present. To a cooper, who, from laziness, neglected to prepare some barrels at the time agreed upon, he applied his hickory, saying in no mild tones, "I will teach you to lie, and be lazy too!" With his soldiers he was very popular. Two of them, being out of provisions, put a stone in their camp-kettle when Winds was expected. As he inquired, "Well, men, any thing to cat?" they replied, "Not much." - "What have you got in that kettle?" Their answer was, "A stone, general, for they say there is some strength in stones, if you can only get it out!" He replied: "There ain't a bit of strength in it. You must have something better to eat." Then he rode off to a Quaker's house, and offered the good woman money for a part of her batch of bread. She said, "Thee cannot have it to help men to fight." "I don't care a fig about thee and thou, but I want the bread." Then he seized the bread, and. throwing down the moncy, carried it off in his bag to his hungry men. Rev. John Darley, pastor at Parsippany, attended him as a physician, drew up his last will, preached his funeral scrmon, and wrote his epitaph. - N. Y. Evangelist, Oct. 23, 1856.

WINDSHIP, JONATHAN, eaptain, a skilful horticulturist, died in Roxbury in 1847.

WINDSHIP, CHARLES WILLIAMS, a physieian, died in Roxbury Aug. 27, 1852, aged 78. The son of Dr. Amos W. of Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1793. He was skilful, and practised in the western country, in Havana, Cuba, in Boston and Roxbury.

WINES, ABIJAH, died in 1833, aged 60. Born in Southold, L. I., of Welsh extraction, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1794, and was ordained at Newport, N. H., in 1796, having studied theology with Dr. Emmons. In 1818 he became a teacher in the Maine charity school at Bangor, but in a year he removed to Deer Island, where he preached twelve years. His mind became disordered, and he died in the hospital at Charlestown, and was buried at Amesbury, where his son-in-law, Rev. B. Sawyer, lived. He published a sermon on depravity, 1804; the sinner's inabilman no Christian; moral young men; ordina-

WE an ear quest e ton, ag of Am living |

WE Mass., Hamp 1723, 1 sixty y second Winga WIN N. H., Amesb was gri

at Han

in 1771 He was eration 1793: 1798 to court c spected wife the ter of T aged 10 WIN land No

Mass., I

and the panying

Washin

war de

of Bath

was pre States. WIN Me., die Cambrid June 12

WIN in the A born in he soon to Ports WIN colony, E. W.,

In his Robinso accompa 1620. ered the activity in the first con fered h 1621, h

WINGATE, J. HUA, colonel, t son of J. W , S. Hopkins, with To a tum, or Squanto, an Inan early settler a over, N. H., is at the c quest of Louisburg in 1745, and deed at Ha living graduate of Harvard.

Mass., died in 1786, aged 83 or 86. Horn in Hampton, N. H., he graduated at Harvard in 1723, and was settled in 1726, being the pastor sixty years. He was the first minister of the second church. He was the father of Judge Wingate.

8

.

e

1-

r, ιe

is

h rs

nt

le

٠d,

d,

at

al,

if ere ive

o a

an

She

ıt."

ıt I nd,

his nas-

ian,

ser-

list.

ilful

ıysi-

78.

adu-

and ana,

60.

, he

or-idied

came igor,

here

came arles-

e his shed

nabil-

iable

dina-

gue's

WINGATE, PAINE, judge, died at Stratham, N. H., March 7, 1838, aged 98. He was born at Ameshury May 14, 1739, the son of Rev. P. W., was graduated at Harvard in 1759, and ordained at Hampton Falls in 1763. After his dismission in 1771 he engaged in agriculture at Stratham. He was a member of congress under the confederation in 1787, and a senator from 1789 to 1793; a member of congress 1793-1795. From 1798 to 1809 he was a judge of the superior court of New Hampshire. He was highly respected and esteemed. He had lived with his wife three-quarters of a century. She was a sister of Timothy Pickering, and died Jan. 7, 1843, aged 100 years and 8 months.

WINGATE, JOSHUA, general, died in Portland Nov. 6, 1843, aged 70. Born in Haverhill, Mass., he was graduated at Harvard in 1795, and then was a merchant in Hallowell. Accompanying his father-in-law, Gen. Dearborn, to Washington, he was for years chief clerk in the war department. Afterwards he was collector of Bath, which office he resigned in 1822. He was president of the branch bank of the United States.

WINSHIP, JOSIAH, minister of Woolwich, Me., died Sept. 29, 1824, aged 86. Born in Cambridge, he graduated in 1762. Ordained June 12, 1765, he was fifty-nine years minister.

WINSLOW, GILBERT, one of the pilgrims in the Mayflower to Plymouth in 1620. He was born in 1600, and was a brother of Edward; but he soon left the colony, and went, it is supposed, to Portsmouth, and died before 1660.

WINSLOW, EDWARD, governor of Plymouth colony, died May 8, 1655, aged 59. The son of E. W., he was born in Worcestershire in 1595. In his travels, becoming acquainted with Mr. Robinson at Leyden, he joined his church, and accompanied the first settlers of New England in 1620. He was one of the party which discovered the harbor of Plymouth. Possessing great activity and resolution, he was eminently useful in the establishment of the colony. When the first conference was held with Massassoit, he offered himself as a hostage. In June or July, published good news from New England, or a 1621, he visited the sachem, accompanied by relation of things remarkable in that plantation, dian, for a side; on his way to Pakanokick, the Indians a smarsher we him the best enterton, aged about 90. His son, Paine, was mer tainmet their power, supplying him with the of Amesbury; and his son, Paine, was the o at spawn o had and a kind of bread, called by them Me um. On arriving at the residence of WINGATE, PAINE, minister of Ameabury, the king, he presented to him a horseman's laced oat of ted cotton, and when arrayed with it the savage seemed wonderfully delighted. In 1622 he made a voyage to Monhegan Island, to procure a supply of bread from the fishing vessels. In March, 1623, on hearing that Massa soit was sick, he made him a second visit, having, as he says, "one master John Hampden, a gentleman of London, who then wintered with us, and desired much to see the country, for my consort, and Hobbamoe for our guide." This was probably the celebrated Hampden, for he resided at that period in London; in Jun., 1621, he took his seat in James' third parliament, which was dissolved in about twelve months, and the next one did not sit till Feb., 1624. In this interval Hampden could visit Plymouth. On arriving at Narragansett, the king was found extremely sick : but the skilful attendance of Mr. Winslow was the means of restoring him to health. In his gratitude, Massassoit disclosed a plot of the "Massachuseuks," which was suppressed by Standish. In the autumn of 1623 Mr. W. went to England as an agent for the colony, and returned in the following spring with a supply of necessaries and the first cattle which were introduced into New England. He went again to England in 1624 and returned in 1625.

In 1633 he was chosen governor, Mr. Bradford being importunate not to retain the office, but to have some one appointed in his place; he was again elected governor in 1636 and 1644. He frequently went to the Penobscot, Kennebec, and Connecticut rivers on trading voyages. Going to England as an agent in 1635, he was thrown into the Fleet prison for seventeen weeks, on the complaint of T. Morton, for teaching in the church at Plymouth, and for performing the eeremony of marriage. He exerted his influence in England to form the society for propagating the gospel in New England, which was incorporated in 1649, and of which he was an active member. In 1655 he was appointed one of the commissioners to superintend the expedition against the Spaniards in the West Indies. The troops were defeated by an inconsiderable number of the enemy near St. Domingo. In the passage between Hispaniola and Jamaica he died of a fever, and was buried in the ocean. His wife died March 24, 1621; his second wife, whom he married May 12, 1621, was Susanna, widow of Wm. White. This was the first marriage in New England. He to which is annexed an account of the Indian natives, 1623. His account is republished in Belknap, and abridged in Purchas. He published also hypocrisy unmasked, relating to the communion of the Independent with the Reformed churches, 1646; and the same in 1649 with a new title, the danger of tolerating levellers in a civil State, or a narration, etc.; New England's salamander discovered, or a satisfactory answer to many aspersions cast upon New England, 1647; reprinted in Mass. hist. coll., XXII., 110-145; and a narration of disturbances made in New England by Samuel Gorton and his accomplices, 4to., 1649. - Belknap's Amer. Biog., II.

WINSLOW, JOSIAH, governor of Plymouth, the son of the preceding, died at Marshfield, Dec. 18, 1680, aged 51. He was chosen governor in 1673 as successor of Mr. Prince, and was continued in this office till 1680. In Philip's war, being commander of the Plymouth forces, he evinced himself a hrave soldier. He married, perhaps about 1655, Penelope Pelham, daughter of Herbert P. of Boston. He was general-inchief of the united colonies in 1678, and governor for seven years from 1673 till his death. His print is in the N. E. Register of Oct., 1850, taken from a painting belonging to Isaac Winslow, the only descendant of the name, which is now in the hall of the Massachusetts historical society. He was an accomplished man and a delightful companion, and his magnificent hospitality was enhanced by the charms of a beautiful wife. She died in 1703, aged 72. His son, Isaac W., a councillor and general, died in 1738, aged 67.

WINSLOW, JOHN, major-general in the British service, was the grandson of the preceding. He was a captain in the unfortunate expedition to Cuba in 1740, and afterwards major-general in the several expeditions to Kennebec, Nova Scotia, and Crown Point in the French wars. He died at Hingham in April, 1774, aged 71. His son, Dr. Isaac W., died at Marshfield in 1819, aged 80.

WINSLOW, JOHN, M.D., died at Marshfield, Mass., in 1814, aged 80.

WINSLOW, HARRIET, wife of Miron Winslow, missionary to Ceylon, arrived at Jaffna in Feb., 1820, and died at Oodoville Jan. 14, 1833. Her memoir, by her husband, was published in 1835. Her name was Harriet W. Lathrop of Norwich, Conn.

WINSLOW, BENJAMIN D., assistant minister at St. Mary's church, Burlington, N. J., died in 1839, aged 24. Born in Boston, he graduated at Harvard in 1835. Bishop Doane published a volume of his sermons and poetical remains. -Cycl. of Amer. Lit.

WINSLOW, ANNE, wife of M. Winslow, missionary at Madras, died June 20, 1843; her born in Cuddalore, but brought up in England. She was married in 1838.

who th

inan

of a p

ticut v a lette

of a co

least p

to the

his ser

tracy i called

we hav

of God

it; and

by Goo

There :

consist

the end

nances

a civil,

every (

the ber

for tha

liberty

course

versatil

was lef

ness of his cour

wisdom

nied his

he migh

perance

imnover

ing and wood w

wont to

" Does

"Call h

him tha man ap

it is a

provide yourself

nfterwar had not

Though

try, yet,

while hi

vants, h

exhorta

those w

diminish

in his

of fami

harbor

remains procure of healt

logian

WINSLOW, ISAAC, died at Roxbury July 26. 1856, aged 82; long a merchant in Hoston, a descendant of John, the brother of Edward W. He had a literary taste and read much in the bible. The only notice he desired was, he said. this: " He fell asleep in Jesus, - to God be the glory!"

WINTER, FRANCIS, a patriot of the Revolution and chaplain, died in Bath, Me., in 1826, aged 81. He graduated at Harvard college in

1765. WINTHROP, John, the second governor of Massachusetts, died March 26, 1649, aged 61. He was born at Groton in Suffolk, England, Jan. 12, 1588. His father, Adam, was a lawyer, as was his grandfather, Adam, who was of eminence in his profession and a lover of the gospel in the reign of Henry VIII. He was himself bred to the law, though inclined to theological studies. Having converted a fine estate of 6 or 700 pounds per annum into money, he embarked for America in the forty-third year of his age, as the leader of a company of emigrants to Massachusetts, and with a commission as governor. Endicott had been two years governor before him, being an associate of a company in London, who chose the governor and council. He was the first governor under the colonial charter. But when Winthrop came, the company transferred the government to Massachusetts. He arrived at Salem June 12, 1030, and soon removed to Charlestown, and afterwards crossed the river to Shawmut or Boston. In the three following years he was re-chosen governor, for which office he was eminently qualified. His time, his exertions, his interests were all devoted to the infant plantation. In 1634 Mr. Dudley was chosen in his place, but he was reelected in 1637, 1638, and 1639, and in 1642, 1643, 1646, 1647, and 1648. He died worn out by toils and depressed by afflictions. Mr. Endicott succeeded him. He was the husband of four wives, and the father of thirteen children. His first wife was Mary, the daughter of John Forth, and by her he had sons, John, Henry, and Forth, and three daughters; his second was the daughter of William Clopton; his third was Margaret, daughter of Sir Tindal Knight, and she came to Massachusetts, and by her he had children, Adam, Stephen, Deane, Samuel, Anne, William; his fourth was Martha, the widow of Thomas Coytmore, who lost his life by shipwreck, and by her he had a son, Joshua. From his son John descended most of the Winthrops; from his son Adam descended Prof. Winthrop of Cumbridge. He was a most faithful and upright magistrate and exemplary Christian. He was at first very mild in the administration of justice: name was Anne Spiers, daughter of Mr. Spiers, but heafterwards yielded to the opinions of others, le

d, u-

6,

in 31.

m.

88 ice

the

to es.

nds

rica

rof

and had an iose

zov-

hen

govlem

rles-

aw-

s he

was

. his

tion.

but

d in worn

Mr.

band

dren.

John

and

the

Mar-

she chil-

nne,

w of reck,

s son

from

Cam-

right

as at stice;

thers,

who thought that severer discipline was necessary | that he wore a long beard. He kept an exact in a new plantation. Not having a high opinion of a pure democracy, when the people of Connectient were forming a government, he wrote them a letter, in which he observed : "The best part of a community is always the least, and of that least part the wiser are still less," In a speech to the general court he took occasion to express his sentiments concerning the power of the magistracy and the liberty of the people: "You have called us," said he, " to office; but, being called. we have authority from God, it is the ordinance of God, and hath the image of God stamped upon it; and the contempt of it hath been vindicated by God with terrible examples of his vengeance. There is a liberty of corrupt nature, which is inconsistent with authority, impatient of restraint, the enemy of truth and peace, and all the ordinances of God are bent against it. But there is a civil, moral, federal liberty, which consists in every one's enjoying his property, and having the benefit of the laws of his country, a liberty for that only which is just and good; for this liberty you are to stand with your lives." In the course of his life he repeatedly experienced the versatility of the public opinion; but, when he was left out of office, he possessed perfect calmness of mind, and still exerted himself to serve his country. In severe trials his magnunimity, wisdom, and patience were conspicuous. He denied himself many of the elegancies of life, that he might give an example of frugality and temperance, and might exercise liberality without impoverishing his family. He was condescending and benevolent. In a severe winter, when wood was scarce, he was told that a neighbor was wont to help himself from the pile at his door. "Does he?" said the governor in seeming anger. "Call him to me, and I will take a course with him that shall cure him of stealing." When the man appeared, he addressed him thus: "Friend, it is a cold winter, and I hear you are meanly provided with wood; you are welcome to help yourself at my pile till the winter is over." He afterwards asked his informant, "Whether he had not put a stop to the poor man's stealing?" Though he was rich when he came to this country, yet, through his devotion to public business while his estate was managed by unfaithful servants, he died poor. He was so much of a theologian that he sometimes gave the word of exhortation in the church. His zeal against those who had embraced erroneous doctrines diminished in his latter years. He was careful in his attendance upon the duties of public and of family worship. Governor's Island, in the harbor of Boston, was granted to him, and still remains in the possession of his descendants. He procured a law against the heathenish practice of health-drinking. From his picture it appears | Sept. 7, 1717, aged 75. Born at Boston in 1642, account of occurrences and transactions in the colony down to the year 1648, which was of great service to Hubbard, Mather, and Prince. It was not published till the year 1790, when it was printed in 8vo. A manuscript of the third volume of Winthrop's history was found in 1816 in the New England library, kept in the tower of the old south church. Mr. James Savage transcribed it, and, adding notes to this and the work already printed, published a new edition in 2 vols. Svo., 1825. Besides adding valuable notes, he collated the former manuscripts with the edition of 1790, and corrected many errors and suggested amendments. His model of Christian charity, written on shiphoard, is in hist coll., 3d series, vol. vii; the Winthrop papers are in vols. ix. and x. - Mather's Magnalia, 11. 8-15; Belknap's Riog. 11, 337-338.

WE, THROP, JOHN, F. R. S., governor of Connecticut, died in Boston April 5, 1670, aged 70. He was the son of the preceding, and his fine t provid by a liberal education of Cambridge and of Dublin, in to and by traver upon the continent. He arrived at Boston in Oct., 1635, with authority to make a settlement in Connecticut, and the next month dispatched a number of persons to build a fort at Saybrook. He was chosen governor in 1657, and again in 1659, and from that period he was annually reclected till his death. In 1661 he went to England and procured a charter, incorporating Connecticut and New Haven into one colony. His second wife, Elizabeth Read, was the daughter of Col. Read, whose widow married Hugh Peters; and thus, by mistake, it is sometimes said that he married a daughter of Hugh Peters. Roger Williams calls Mr. Peters the father of John Winthrop, jun. He possessed a rich variety of knowledge, and was particularly skilled in chemistry and physic. His valuable qualities as a gentleman, a Christian, a philosopher, and a magistrate secured to him universal respect. He published some valuable communications in the philosophical transactions. - Felt.

WINTHROP, FITZ JOHN, F. R. S., governor of Connecticut, the son of the preceding, died Nov. 27, 1707, aged 68. He was born March 14. 1639. In 1689 he was major-general of the army sent to operate against Canada. In 1694 he was agent of the colony to Great Britain, and rendered such service that the legislature presented him with 500 pounds. He was governor from 1698 till his death. His son, John, a graduate of Harvard college in 1700, and who died in England in 1747, was a learned man, and a member of the royal society.

WINTHROP, WAITSTILL, major-general, son of Gov. J. Winthrop, of Conn., died in Boston

he was a member of Andros' council and of the founded upon an accurate examination of the first council under the new charter, 1692. His wife was Mary, daughter of William Browne of Salem. His son, John, a graduate of 1700, a fellow of the royal society, married a daughter of Gov. J. Dudley, and died in 1747; and his son, John Still, who died in 1776, aged 56, had five sons, - John, a graduate of 1770; Francis Bayard and William, of New York; Joseph of Charleston, S. C.; and Thomas Lindall, lieutenant-governor. Gen. W., with another executor of his father's will, sold the ten-hill farm in Charlestown, of six hundred acres, for 3300 pounds, to widow Elizabeth Lidgett. The curious and long Latin epitaph on the death of Gen. W., together with an English translation, may be read in Mr. Bridgman's memorials of the dead in Boston. It seems, that, in addition to his military office and that of chief justice, he was also a physician, for the epitaph says:

"He that under this stone new sleeps in death Still lives in the hearts of thousands, Whose lives ne has prolouged."

It says also of him and the three governors reposing with him:

" Four Winthrops lie buried in this tomb, Who were sufficient to enrich even the four quarters of the earth.

He is unacquainted with the history of New England Who is ignerant of this family."

WINTHROP, JOHN, LL. D., F. R. S., Hollis professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in Harvard college, died at Cambridge May 3, 1779, aged 64. He was the son of Adam Winthrop, a member of the council, and a descendant of the governor of Massachusetts. He was graduated in 1732. In 1738 he was appointed professor in the place of Mr. Greenwood. He immediately entered upon the duties of this office and discharged them with fidelity and high reputation through life. In 1761 he and of the American antiquarian society. He sailed to St. John's in Newfoundland, to observe the transit of Venus over the sun's disk, June 6th, agreeably to the recommendation of Mr. Halley. When the day arrived, he was favored with a fine, clear morning, and he enjoyed the inexpressible satisfaction of observing a phenomenon which had never before been seen, excepting by Mr. Horrox in 1639, by any inhabitant of the earth. He was distinguished for his very intimate acquaintance with mathematical science. His talents in investigating and communicating truth were very rare. In the variety and extent of his knowledge he has seldom been equalled. He had deeply studied the politics of different ages; and he was thoroughly acquainted with the controversy between Christians and deists. ticut, and also Waitstill, a brother of the last, evidences of its truth, and the virtues of his life added a lustre to his intellectual powers and scientific attainments. In his family he devoutly maintained the worship of the Supreme Being, While he himself attended upon the positive institutions of the gospel, he could not conceive what reason any one, who called himself a Christian, could give for neglecting them. The day before his death he said: "The hope that is set before us in the New Testament is the only thing which will support a man in his dving hour. If any man builds on any other foundation, in my apprehension his foundation will fail." His accurate observations of the transit of Mercury in 1740 were noticed by the royal society of London. He published a lecture on earthquakes, 1755; answer to Mr. Prince's letter upon earthquakes, 1756; two letters on comets, 1759; an account of several fiery meteors, 1765.

WINTHROP, JAMES, LL. D., judge, the son of the preceding, was graduated in 1769, and fought in the battle of Bunker Hill. For some years he was chief justice of the court of common pleas, and register of probate. He died at Cambridge Sept. 26, 1821, aged 70. His brother. William, a graduate of 1770, died in 1825, at Cambridge. The valuable library which he had collected he bequeathed to Alleghany college, Pennsylvania. He published a translation of a part of the Apocalypse, 1794, and various scientific papers. WINTHROP, THOMAS LINDALL, lieutenantgovernor of Massachusetts, a descendant of Gov. W., died in Boston Feb. 22, 1841, aged 81. He was the son of John Still Winthrop and of Jane Borland, grand-daughter of Timothy Lindall. He graduated at Harvard in 1780, and married Elizabeth Bowdoin Temple in 1786. From 1826 to 1832 he was lieutenant-governor. He was president of the Massachusetts historical society was the father of Mrs. Tappan, wife of Rev. Dr. T. of Augusta, Me., and of five sons, - James, who took the name of Bowdein, who graduated at Bowdoin college in 1814, was a lawyer in Boston, and died in 1834; Francis William, deceased; George Edward; Grenville Temple; and Robert Charles of Boston, late a senator of the United States. He was a man of large property, and highly respected by his fellow-citizens. He was a benefactor of the historical society. His body found a resting-place in a remarkable tomb in the King's chapel burying-ground in Boston, - a tomb in which were placed three of his ancestors, who were governors; John of Massachusetts, John and Fitz John, governors of Connec-His firm faith in the Christian religion was chief justice and major-general. There also rest and motl W in 18 Loui W Feb. burg his i was eated colle law i Geor lottes quain It is a

Eliza

his s He re 1806. trial o of the As a respe in wh dell; bache Heur WI Mass.

son o

at Ha

daine

impris

serme

point

the to an ass an act for de act. tion himse sacred skill. in 1' shoule exerte which In a entitle forme tende eccles ulatio was c Mr. S was e

ited

Elizabeth Bowdoin, the wife of Lieut-Gov. W., religion, uniting a graceful form and majestic and his sister, Mrs. Ann Winthrop Sears, the aspect to a lively imagination and sound judgmother of David Sears.

è

i-

y

n-

re

8-

۱y

et ŀу

ıg

1."

er-

of es,

than ดก nd

me

m-

at er,

at.

had ge, of a

ien-

ant-

iov.

He

ane Iall.

ried

826 was

iety

lle

Dr.

mes,

ated

Bosde-

and

the

erty,

He

His

tomb

ston,

s anachu-

nnec-

last.

rest

WINTHROP, ADAM, died near New Orleans in 1846, aged 68; elerk in the district court of Louisiann. He graduated at Harvard in 1800.

WIRT, WILLIAM, LL. D., died at Washington Feb. 11, 1835, aged 62. Born at Bladensburg Nov. 8, 1772, his father was a Swiss, his mother a German, both dying hefore he was eight years old. By an uncle he was edueated till he was fifteen, but he never was at college. In 1792 he commenced the practice of law in Virginia. Marrying the daughter of Dr. George Gilmer, he lived with him near Charlottesville, and here he was introduced to the acquaintance of Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe. It is said he was reclaimed from dissipation by a sermon of James Waddell. In 1802 he was appointed chancellor and lived at Williamsburg; his second wife was a daughter of Col. Gamble. He removed to Norfolk in 1803; to Richmond in 1806. As a lawyer he was distinguished at the trial of Burr. In 1817 he was attorney-general of the U.S. In 1830 he removed to Baltimore. As a Christian he was exemplary and held in respect. About 1802 he wrote the British spy, in which he spoke of the blind preacher Waddell; it passed through ten editions. His old bachelor was written in 1812; his life of Patrick Henry in 1817.

WISE, JOHN, minister of Ipswich, now Essex, Mass., died April 8, 1725, aged 73. He was the son of Joseph W., of Roxbury; was graduated at Harvard college in 1673; and was soon ordained at Chebacco in Ipswich. In 1688 he was imprisoned by Andros for remonstrating against the taxes as a grievance, because imposed without an assembly. After the Revolution he brought an action against Mr. Dudley, the chief justice, for denying him the benefits of the habeas corpus act. Being a chaplain in the unhappy expedition against Canada in 1690, he distinguished himself not only by the pious discharge of the sacred office, but by his heroic spirit and martial skill. When several ministers signed proposals in 1705 for establishing associations, which should be intrusted with spiritual power, he exerted himself with effect to avert the danger which threatened the Congregational churches. In a book, which he wrote upon this occasion, entitled the churches' quarrel espoused, he exhibited no small share of the wit and satire of a former minister of Ipswich, Mr. Ward. He contended that each church contains in itself all ecclesiastical authority. In 1721, when the inoculation for the small pox was first introduced, he was one of those ministers who approved of it. Mr. Stoddard of Northampton was another. He was enriched with the excellences of nature and | Jersey. He was born in Philadelphia Sept. 13, ment, and to incorruptible integrity, unshaken fortitude, liberal charity, and fervent picty. His attachment to civil and religious liberty was zealous and firm. He was a learned scholar and eloquent orator. In his last sickness he expressed a deep sense of his own unworthiness in the sight of Heaven, and a conviction that he needed the Divine mercy and was entirely dependent on the free grace of God in Christ Jesus. He published the churches' quarrel espoused, 1710; and a vindication of the government of the New England churches, about the year 1717 or 1718. It was reprinted in 1772. He contends that the ecclesiastical government, as established by Christ and as existing in New England, was a democracy, and was best calculated for the advantage of all. - Sprague's Annals.

WISE, JEREMIAH, minister of Berwick, Me., was graduated at Harvard college in 1700, and was ordained successor of John Wade Nov. 26, 1707. He died in 1756. He was a man of eminent piety and goodness. He published a sermon on the death of Charles Frost, 1725; election sermon, 1729; a sermon at the ordination of James Pike, 1730.

WISNER, BENJAMIN B., D. D., died in Boston of the scarlet fever Feb. 9, 1835, aged 40; minister of the old south church, one of the secretaries of the American board of missions. Born in Goshen, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1794, his father, P. B. Wisner, soon afterwards removed to Geneva, where he was one of the first settlers and founders of the church. He graduated at Union college in 1813, and was a tutor for several years. He studied theology at Princeton. His wife was Sarah H. Johnson of Johnstown. He was ordained Feb. 21, 1821. Ill health induced him to relinquish the beloved work of the ministry for the office of secretary in 1832. He died after a short illness, in Christian peace and hope. A memoir is inserted in the missionary herald for 1836, He was a man of judgment, wisdom, and energy. His successor was S. H. Stearns. His predecessors in the old south church were Thacher, Willard, Pemberton, Sewall, Prince, Cumming, Blair, Bacon, Hunt, Eckley, and Huntington, He published a sermon on the death of Mrs. Phillips, 1823; of W. Phillips, 1827; before a foreign missionary society; review of Channing's dedication sermon, 1826; to society for propagating the gospel; history of the old south church, 1830; on Sabbath schools; review of the new divinity tried, 1832. - Sprague's Annals.

WISTAR, CASPAR, M. D., a physician, died Jan. 22, 1818, aged 56. He was a grandson of Caspar W., who emigrated from Germany in 1717, and established a glass manufactory in New he went to England in order to complete his medical education. His father's death put him in possession of a fortune; yet was he not induced to relax in his industry. He returned to Philadelphia in Jan., 1787. In 1789 he was elected professor of chemistry in the college; and in 1808 he succeeded Shippen as professor of anatomy. As a lecturer he was fluent and eloquent, and he gave most ample instruction. As a physician he was scrupulously attentive to his patients and eminently skilful. He died of a malignant fever. Three children, by his second wife, Elizabeth Mifflin, niece of Gov. M., survived him. He published a system of anatomy. - Tilghman's Eulogy; Thacher.

WISTAR, THOMAS, of Philadelphia, died in 1851, aged 88. He was a merchant, a man of probity and benevolence.

WISWALL, ICHABOD, minister of Duxbury, Mass., died it is thought about 1700. But little is known of him. There is, however, a record of one important public service. He went to England with the Massachusetts agents to assist in procuring what was obtained, the charter of Massachusetts Bay, uniting the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts. He was pastor thirty years, and was succeeded by J. Robinson from 1700 to 1737; subsequently by Veazie, Turner, Sanger, and Allyn. His predecessors were W. Brewster, R. Partridge, and J. Holmes.

WISWALL, JOHN, first minister of Falmouth, Me., died in 1812, aged about 85. He graduated at Harvard in 1749, and was pastor from 1756 to 1764. E. Williams and W. Miltimore succeeded him.

WITHEREL, OBADIAH, died in Albion, Me., in 1844, aged 98. Born in Pepperell, he served in the whole Revolutionary war. One of the first settlers of Norridgewock, he lived there more than fifty years.

WITHERELL, or WETHERELL, WILLIAM, first minister of the second church in Scituate, died in 1684, aged 84. He was born in England; settled in 1645; and was succeeded by Mighill, Lawson, Elles, Barnes, and Deane.

WITHERSPOON, JOHN, D. D., LL. D., president of the college of New Jersey, died Nov. 15, 1794, aged 72. He was born in Yester, near Edinburgh, Feb. 5, 1722, and was lineally descended from John Knox. At the age of fourteen he entered the university of Edinburgh, where he continued till he reached the age of twenty one, when he was licensed to preach the gospel. He was soon ordained at Beith, and thence was translated to Paisley. Here he lived in high reputation and great usefulness, until he was called to the presidency of Princeton college. So extensively was he known that he was invited 1761; his parents were Quakers. In Oct., 1783, arrived with his family at Princeton, N. J., in Aug., 1768, and took the charge of a seminary, over which had presided Dickinson, Burr, Edwards, Davies, and Finley, men distinguished for genius, learning, and piety. His name brought a great accession of students to the college, and by his exertions its funds were much augmented. But the war of the American Revolution prostrated every thing. While the academical shades were deserted, and his functions as president were suspended, he was introduced into a new field of labor. As he became at once an American on his landing in this country, the citizens of New Jersey, who knew his distinguished abilities, appointed him a member of the convention which formed the constitution of that State. Here he appeared as profound a civilian as he had before been known to be a philosopher and divine. From the Revolutionary committees and conventions of the State he was sent, early in 1776, a representative to the congress. He was during seven years a member of that illustrious body, and he was always collected, firm, and wise amidst the embarrassing circumstances in which congress was placed. His name is affixed to the declaration of independence. But, while he was thus engaged in political affairs, he did not lay aside his ministry. He gladly embraced every opportunity of preaching, for his character as a minister of the gospel he ever considered as his highest honor. As soon as the state of the country would permit, the college was reëstablished, and its instruction was recommenced under the immediate care of the vice-president. Dr. Smith. After the termination of the struggle for American liberty, Dr. W. was induced from his attachment to the college to cross the ocean, that he might promote its benefit. After his return, he entered into that retirement which was dear to him, and his attention was principally confined to the duties of his office as president, and as a minister of the gospel. For more than two years before his death he was afflicted with the loss of sight; but during his blindness he was frequently led into the pulpit, and he always acquitted himself with his usual accuracy and animation. At length he sunk under the pressure of his infirmities. He was succeeded by Dr. Smith. He possessed a mass of information. well selected and thoroughly digested. Scarcely any man of the age had a more vigorous mind or a more sound understanding. As president of the college he rendered literary inquiries more liberal, extensive, and profound, and was the means of producing an important revolution in the system of education. He extended the study of mathematical science, and it is believed he was the first man who taught in America the substance of those doctrines of the philosophy of to Dundee, to Dublin, and Rotterdam. He the mind, which Dr. Reid afterwards developed with se as a p doctri sermoi he was wished every I addres what h holy. which sons of served a day o

His ' cal, me one has effects ture a by free tauce betwee. highly he yet delicate ties bis princip Scotlan a unior became publish Dr. Ro Nov., 1 WIT Greens publish 9th cen WIT boro', N of Pres ated at afterwa Columb

75. H

WIT Washin cally at city hos of the uted pa WIT

Nov. 12

in Putn his old blind. hope of WOI country of Wo aged 7 Į-

r ιt

d

d.

sre

١f iis

r-ch

he re

۱e.

n-

, a ng

dy,

dst

on-

the vas

lay

ery ıs a

his

the tab-

ced

ent,

rug-

iced

the lfter hich

ally

ent,

han

with

he vays

and res-

l by

tion,

reely

mind

dent

nore

the n in tudy

was sub-

y of oped

with so much success. He was very distinguished land, in 1630; settled at Dorchester; but in as a preacher. He loved to dwell on the great 1636 removed to Windsor, where he was a magdoctrines of Divine grace. Though he wrote his sermons and committed them to memory, yet as he was governed by the desire of doing good and wished to bring his discourses to the level of every understanding, he was not confined, when addressing his hearers, within the boundaries of what he had written. His life was upright and holy. Besides the daily intercourse with Heaven which he held in the closet, and occasional seasons of solemn recollection and devotion, he observed the last day of the year with his family as a day of fasting, humiliation, and prayer.

His works are various, for he wrote on political, moral, literary, and religious subjects. No one has more strikingly displayed the pernicious effects of the stage; and his treatises on the nature and necessity of regeneration, justification by free grace through Jesus Christ, the importance of truth in religion, or the connection between sound principles and a holy practice, are highly esteemed. Though a very serious writer, he yet possessed a fund of refined humor and delicate satire. In his ceclesiastical characteristics his wit was directed at certain corruptions in principle and practice, prevalent in the church of Scotland, and it is keen and cutting. He formed a union of those who accorded with him, and became at length their leader. His works were published in 4 vols., with an account of his life by Dr. Rodgers, 8vo., 1802. - Edwards' Qu. Reg., Nov., 1836.

WITHERSPOON, JOHN R., M. D., died in Greensborough, Ala., about 1850, aged about 75. He graduated at Princeton in 1794. He published a description of a Latin bible of the 9th century, in his possession.

WITHERSPOON, JOHN, D. D., died in Hillsboro', N. C., Sept. 25, 1853, aged 61; a grandson of President W. Born at Newbern, he graduated at Chapel Hill; he was at first a lawyer, afterwards a minister at II., also at Camden and Columbia, S. C. He was able and influential.

WITHERSPOON, ALEXANDER, Dr., died at Washington in 1854, aged 37. Educated medically at New York, he was house surgeon in the city hospital. At his decease he was a member of the medical corps of the army. He contributed papers to the medical journals.

WITHINGTON, LEMUEL, of Dorchester, died Nov. 12, 1847, aged 90. He served his country in Putman's regiment at the age of sixteen. In his old age he was resigned, though twenty years blind. A religious man, he died in peace, in the the Christian, and he entered into his rest. He hope of glory.

WOLCOTT, HENRY, the first ancestor in this country of many distinguished men of the name chester, 1725; a letter to Mr. Hobart in 1761, of Wolcott, died in Windsor, Conn., in 1655, entitled, the New English Congregational churches aged 77. He came from Somersetshire, Eng- are and always have been consociated churches, istrate. Among his descendants may be reckoned three governors of Connecticut. His stone monument, of a handsome form, one of the oldest in the State, was made by his son-in-law, a stonecutter, Matthew Griswold, ancestor of the Griswold family in Lyme.

WOLCOTT, Roger, governor of Connecticut, a descendant of Henry W., died May 17, 1767, aged 88. He was born at Windsor Jan. 4, 1679. His parents lived in a part of the country which suffered much from the Indians, and in the town there was neither a schoolmaster nor minister, so that he was not a member of a common school for a single day in his life. When he was twelve years of age he was bound as an apprentice to a mechanic. At the age of twenty-one, when the laws permitted him to enjoy the fruits of his labors, he established himself on the east side of Connecticut river in the same town in which he was born, where by the blessing of God upon his industry and frugality he acquired what was considered as a plentiful fortune. He is an eminent proof of the power of talents and integrity, in a free country, in raising one to distinction, notwithstanding the disadvantages of education and of birth. He rose by degrees to the highest military and civil honors. In the expedition against Canada in 1711 he was commissary of the Connecticut forces, and at the capture of Louisburg in 1745 he bore the commission of major-general. He was successively a member of the assembly and of the council, judge of the county court, deputy governor, chief judge of the superior court, and from 1751 to 1754, governor. In all his exaltation above his neighbors he exhibited no haughtiness of deportment, but was easy of access, free and affable, of ready wit and great humor. His literary attainments were such, that in conversation with the learned upon most subjects he secured respect. He was much attached to the peculiar doctrines of the gospel, and was for many years a member of a Christian church. From the year 1754, when his life was more retired, he devoted himself particularly to reading, meditation, and prayer. He was very careful in searching into himself, that he might perceive his own character, and know whether he was rescued from that depravity, to which previously to the renewing agency of the Divine Spirit the numan mind is subjected, and whether he was interested in the salvation of the gospel. In his last moments he was supported by the hopes of had eleven children. He published poetical meditations, with a preface by Mr. Bulkley of Coland their liberties greater and better founded in | 1833, aged 73. He was a native of Litchfield, their platform, agreed upon at Cambridge in 1648, than in the agreement at Saybrook in 1708. A long poem, written by Gov. Wolcott, entitled, a brief account of the agency of J. Winthrop in the court of Charles II., in 1662, in procuring the charter of Connecticut, is preserved in the collections of the historical society. It describes with considerable minuteness the Pequot war. His vacant hours was published, 1724. - Hist. Coll. IV. 262-297.

WOLCOTT, Erastus, a judge of the superior court of Connecticut, died in 1793, aged 70. The son of the preceding, he was born about the year 1723. In 1776 he commanded a regiment of militia, and assisted in the investment of Boston. He was appointed a brigadier-general in 1777, and went on an expedition to Peckskill. He was repeatedly a member of congress. Towards the close of his life he resigned his office of judge. Integrity and patriotism were united in his character with religion. He was a zcalous friend to republican principles, an able advocate of the rights of his country. His last illness he bore with a cheerful serenity and submission to the will of God. A short religious tract, written by him, was annexed to McClure's sermon on his death.

WOLCOTT, ALEXANDER, Dr., died at Windsor, Conn., in 1795, aged 93.

WOLCOTT, OLIVER, LL. D., governor of Connecticut, the son of Gov. Reger W., died Dec. 1, 1797, aged 71. He was born about the year 1726, and graduated at Yale college in 1747. He held a captain's commission in the war with the French. Cn retiring from military service he studied physic; but his attention was drawn from this profession by his appointment as high sheriff of the county of Litchfield, which office he sustained about fourteen years. He was a member of the memorable congress which agreed upon the declaration of independence in 1776, and he boldly advocated that measure. Barlow, in his vision of Columbus, says:

"Bold Wolcott urg'd the ail important cause, With steady hand the soiemn scene he draws; Undaunted firmness with his wisdom join'd, Nor kings nor worlds could warp his steadfast mind."

He was chosen governor in 1796. Mr. Trumbull succeeded him. Incorruptible integrity and unshaken firmness were conspicuous traits in his character. He was the friend of virtue and religion. In his last sickness he expressed a deep sense of his personal unworthiness and guilt.

WOLCOTT, WILLIAM, Dr., died at Windsor, Conn., in 1825, aged 72; the son of William of East Windsor.

WOLCOTT, OLIVER, governor of Connecticut

the son of Oliver W., who was also governor. He graduated at Yale in 1778. Educated for the bar, Washington appointed him auditor and comptroller of the treasury. He succeeded Hamilton from 1795 to 1800 as secretary of the treasury, in which place he continued till the end of J. Adams' term of office. From 1800 to 1815 he was a merchant in New York. After the war of 1812 with England, he was governor from 1817 to 1827; then he returned to New York to be near his children. His wife was Elizabeth. daughter of John Stoughton of Windsor. Ilis sister, Mary Anne, wife of Chauncey Goodrich. was a very accomplished woman. Born in 1765. in the war a leaden statue of George III. was carried from New York to Litchfield and east into bullets, and she and other ladies formed them into good patriotic cartridges. He was a statesman, and was acquainted with literature. and in his conversation was sagacious and witty, and made keen observations on the world. His correspondence in two volumes was published by his grandson, Gibbs. - Goodrick's Recollec-WOLCOTT, FREDERIC, councillor and senator in Connecticut, died at Litchfield in 1837, aged 70. The brother of Oliver, he graduated at Yale in 1786. A man of talents and character, he was forty-five years in office.

WOLCOTT, Mrs., wife of Samuel W., missionary to Syria, died at Beirut Oct. 26, 1841, in great peace.

WOLF, GEORGE, died at Philadelphia March 11, 1840, aged 63. He was governor, 1829-1835; first comptroller of the United States, 1836; collector of Philadelphia and member of congress, 1824-1829. WOLFE, JAMES, a major-general in the British army, was killed Sept. 13, 1759, aged 32. He was born in Westerham in Kent, Jan. 2, 1727. He entered young into the army, and soon distinguished himself as a brave and skilful officer. After his return from the expedition against Louisburg in 1758, he was immediately appointed to the command of one of the expeditions destined against Canada in 1759. He arrived at the Island of Orleans, in the neighborhood of Quebec, late in June. On the last of July he attacked the French intrenchments at Montmorency on the left bank of the St. Charles, but his troops were thrown into disorder by the enemy's fire, and he was compelled to give orders for returning to the island. He now determined to effect a landing above the city, and by scaling a precipice to gain the heights back of the town, where it was but slightly fortified. He was fully aware of the temerity of the enterprise, but resolved to execute it. Sept. 13, an hour before and circuit judge, died at New York June 1, daybreak, he landed with a strong detachment plants p heights which l tery. of Abra battle e fate of mediate to attac the acti wrappii tinued a shot i was adv charged his bre still dis anxious Asking the field give wa His sigl extingu was visi treme i soon are " Who replied, are flyin "I am s expired. the thir circums glory. seek th immorta in havir ism app tions, p envied The bod a monu minster military and ele ing per lively a to passi he was i tle, kind was not out the among ebrated that of corresp 2 vols.

about the pre

tions of

d, r.

or ıd

n-

18-

of 15 ar

۱m

to

th,

lis.

ch,

65, vas

ast

ned

ıs a ırc,

tty,

His

hed

lec-

ena-

ged

lat

cter,

mis-

I, in

arch

829-ates,

er of

Brit-

32.

727.

dis-

ficer.

Lou-

inted

des-

it the

Que-

e at-itmo-

at his

emy's

or reed to ling a town,

fully ıt re-

efore

ıment

about a mile above cape Diamond. Ascending the precipice by the aid of the rugged projections of the rocks and the branches of trees and plants growing on the cliffs, the van gained the heights, and quickly dispersed a captain's guard which had been intrusted with a four-gun battery. The whole army was soon upon the heights of Abraham. Montealm now perceived that a battle could no longer be avoided, and that the fate of Quebec depended on the issue. He immediately crossed the St. Charles and marched to attack the English army. In the beginning of the action Wolfe received a ball in his wrist, but, wrapping a handkerchief around his arm, he continued to encourage his men. He soon received a shot in the groin, which he also concealed. He was advancing at the head of the grenadiers with charged bayonets, when a third bullet pierced his breast. Being conveyed into the rear, he still discovered, in the agonies of death, the most anxious solicitude concerning the fate of the day. Asking an officer to support him while he viewed the field: "Tell me, sir," said he, "do the enemy give way there? tell me, for I cannot see." His sight was dimmed and confused, and almost extinguished forever. Being told that the enemy was visibly broken, he reclined his head from extreme faintness on the officer's arm; but was soon aroused by the ery of "They run, they run!" "Who run?" exclaimed the hero. The officer replied, "The French; they are beat, sir; they are flying before you." The general then said, "I am satisfied, my boys!" and almost instantly expired. This death of the illustrious Wolfe, in the thirty-third year of his age, combines every circumstance to gratify the thirst for military glory. If the creatures of God were allowed to seek their own honor, and if men, destined for immortality, would choose to place this honor in having their names repeated and their heroism applauded by future and unknown generations, perhaps no instance of a death more to be envied could be found in the annals of history. The body of Wolfe was carried to England, and a monument was erected to his memory in Westminster abbey. He was formed by nature for military greatness. His apprehension was quick and clear, his judgment sound, his courage dar-ing perhaps to an extreme. With a temper lively and almost impetuous he was not subject to passion, and with the greatest independence he was free from pride. He was manly yet genwas not only just, but generous; and he searched out the objects of his charity and beneficence among his needy officers. One of the most celebrated of the paintings of Benjamin West is that of the death of Gen. Wolfe. His life and correspondence was published in London in 1827, 2 vols. 8vo.

WOMPATUCK, or WAMPATUCK, JOSIAH, the sachem of Mattakeeset, now Pembroke, Mass., received in 1652 fourteen pounds to extinguish his title to the lands. The rights or claims of his son, Josiah, were subsequently purchased in 1686.

WOOD, WILLIAM, author of the earliest printed account of Massachusetts, came to this eountry in 1629, and, after a residence of about four years, set sail for England Aug. 15, 1633. Nothing further is known with certainty concerning him. He says, that in the town in which he resided there were, in three years and a half, only three deaths, and two of those were infants. Mr. Lewis supposes that he lived in Lynn, and was the William W. who was the representative in 1636, and in 1637 removed to Sandwich, where he was town clerk. He published New England's prospects, being a true, lively, and experimental description of that part of America commonly enlled New England; London, 1634, 1635, and 1639; reprinted in Boston with an introductory essay, 1764. This work is well written and very amusing. It is surprising that it has not been republished in the Massachusetts historical collections. The towns which he describes are Wichaguscusset, Mount Wolleston, Dorchester, Roxbury, Boston, Charlestown, Medford, Newton, Watertown, Mistick, Winnisimet, Saugus, Salem, Marblehead, Agowamme, and Merrimack, although in the two last places there were " searce any inhabitants." As to the peninsula of Boston, he says that " a little fencing will secure their eattle from the wolves;" at the south side, at one corner, was "a great broad hill," with a fort upon it; on the north side was an equal hill, having a windmill upon it; and to the northwest "a high mountain, with three little rising hills on the top of it, wherefore it is called the Tramount." This word now appears in the form of Tremont. His specimen of the Massachusetts' Indian language is the earliest to be found, - the following are a few of the words: abamocho, the devil; aunum, a dog; cowims, sleeps; cossaquot. bow and arrows; cone, the sun; coepot, ice; eat chumnis, Indian corn; hoe, the body; hub hub hub, come come; matchet, it is naught; mattamoi, to die; matta, no; mawcus sinnus, a pair of shoes; maw paw, it snows; matchet wequon, very blunt; nuncompees, a boy; nicksquaw, a maid; nippe, water; nasampe, pottage; netop, a friend; ottucke, a deer; oceone, a deerskin; ottommaocke, tobacco; ontoquos, a wolf; tle, kind and conciliating in his manners. He pow wow, a conjurer; pappouse, a child; picke, a pipe; papowne, winter; pequas, a fox; pesissu, a little man; sagamore, a king; saehem, a king; sannup, a man; squaw, a woman; suckis suacke, a clam; sequan, the summer; tokuche, a hatchet; wampompeage, Indian money; winnet, very good; wigwam, a house; wawpatucke, a goose; wompey, white; squi, red; as cos coi, green.

WOOD, SAMUEL, Dr., was one of the first settlers of Danbury, Conn., about 1685. He was born and educated in England, and was a regular bred physician, able, skilful, and useful many years in the town.

WOOD, JAMES, governor of Virginia, died at Richmond in June, 1813. He was a distinguished general officer in the Revolutionary army. He was chosen governor in 1706, and was succeeded by Mr. Monroe in 1799.

WOOD, John, a native of Scotland, died in May, 1822. In 1806 he edited a paper, the Western World, in Kentucky, and in 1817 a paper, the Atlantic World, at Washington. In his last years he resided at Richmond, Va., and was employed in drawing maps of the counties. He published a history of Switzerland and of the Swiss revolution; history of the administration of J. Adams; a statement of the sources, etc. of the above, 1802; exposition of the Clintonian faction, 1802; a new theory of the diurnal motion of the earth, 1809.

WOOD, ABRAHAM, first minister of Chesterfield, N. H., died in 1823, aged 75, in the fiftyfirst year of his ministry. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1767, and was ordained Dec. 31, 1772.

WOOD, ASAHEL, a Baptist minister, died at Poultney, Vt., in 1824, aged 55; bequeathing his property, after the death of his wife, to foreign mission and educational societies.

WOOD, SAMUEL, D. D., died at Boscawen, N. H., Dec. 24, 1836, aged 84. He was born in Mansfield, Conn., but his father removed to Lebanon, N. H.; he graduated at Dartmouth in 1779, and was ordained in 1781 at Boscawen. The next year between thirty and forty heads of families were added to the church. No minister in the State fitted so many young men for college, being one hundred in number, of whom about fifty became ministers of the gospel. By them he was regarded with affection and respect. His charity was manifested in the aid of those who needed his assistance. On the day before his death he preached on "working while it is day." His last words before his death were, "All is well." He published a sermon at the ordination of B. Wood; a fast sermon, 1804.

WOOD, Lois, Mrs., died at Leominster, Mass., in 1836, aged 100 years and 6 months.

WOOD, Mrs., the wife of George Wood, missionary, died at Singapore March 8, 1839. Mr. Orr made an address at her funeral. Her name was Johnston, of Morristown, N. J. — N. Y. Observer, Nov. 14, 1840.

WOOD, SYLVANUS, died in Woburn Aug., 1840, aged 93, a pensioner. In the battle of Lexington he took the first prisoner of the war. WOOD, JAMES, a Methodist minister, died at Kingwood, Va., in 1840, aged 89.

WOOD, STEPHEN, a soldier of the Revolution- he was born in 1622, and graduated in 1642. On ary war, who fought in various battles, died in Salem, Mass., in 1841, aged 94.

WOOD, THOMAS H., minister of Halifax, Vt., died in 1842, aged 69. Born in Norwich, Conn., he graduated at Williams college in 1799.

WOOD, STEPHEN, Dr., died in Miami, Ohio, in 1844, aged 82. He was the last survivor of the hand of pioneers associated with John Cleves Symmes in the settlement of North Bend in 1789. Probably no man had lived so long in Ohio.

WOOD, JOEL, died at Fort Miller, N. Y., June 6, 1845, aged 48. He was fifteen years a missionary among the Choctaw Indians, and one year among the Tusearoras. From ill health he left the south, and for five years was the pastor of a church at Fort Miller. — N. Y. Obs., July 12.

WOOD, SILAS, died at Huntington, L. I., March 2, 1847, aged 78. He was a member of congress, and the author of a history of Long Island.

WOOD, BENJAMIN, died at Upton, Mass., April 24, 1849, aged 76. His parents removed from Mansfield to Lebanon, N. H., where he was born; Dr. W. of Boscawen was his brother. A graduate of Dartmouth in 1793, he studied with Emmons, and was ordained June 1, 1796. He knew eight seasons of revival. His voice was fine; he had earnestness and unction, and was a popular and successful preacher, of pathetic eloquence. He published a sermon at Upton, 1796; on death of Mrs. Ruggles; to an education society; a masonic address at Uxbridge, 1819; masonic at Milford, 1820; masonic at Holden, 1825; on haptism, 1823. — Sprague's Annals.

WOOD, John, a merchant, died in New York in 1850, aged 60. He was a patron of many of the philanthropic institutions of the city.

WOOD, LUKE, minister of Somers, Conn., died in 1851, aged 74.

WOOD, SALLY S., died at Kennebunk, Me., Jan. 6, 1855, aged 95. She was, perhaps, the first authoress in Maine. Among the novels which she published were Dorval, the speculator; Ferdinand and Almira; Amelia, or the influence of virtue; and tales of the night.

WOOD, Joseph, judge, died at New Haven Nov. 13, 1856, aged 77. He was a graduate of Yale in 1801. He formerly lived in Stamford. Present at a weekly meeting of a few literary men at the house of President Day, he spoke with animation twenty minutes, when soon afterwards he fell and instantly expired. His death was caused by an ossification of the coronal artery of the heart.

WOODBRIDGE, BENJAMIN, D. D., the first graduate of Harvard college, died Nov. 1, 1684, aged 60. The son of Rev. John W. of England, he was born in 1622, and graduated in 1642. On his ret Newb a selic After preacl His w of 359 a rare copy l Calam plished and of learnii charm voice a ful, an He pu 1653; of sinr joint, a lished Moses State, lingwo aged a W. of vard in 1679, a He was sor of by Mix first in Bulkley dover,

was the

ton, W passing in priva his unc pastor tion of them in sought sistant with hi After 1 ehurch colony. nard, were 1 wife wa Benjan Kittery wrote Cotton, son, Jo

1690;

his return to England, he succeeded Dr. Twiss at of West Springfield, who died in 1718, and Newbury, where he gained a high reputation as a scholar, a preacher, a casuist, and a Christian. After he was ejected in 1662 he continued to tenth John W. of this family in the ministry, is preach privately. He died at Inglefield in Berks. His work on the justification of sinners, a volume of 359 pages, is a well-written, valuable work, and a rare book. The writer of this holds the only copy he has ever heard of in this country. Dr. Calamy says: "He was a universally accomplished person; one of a clear and strong reason, and of an exact and profound judgment. His learning was very considerable, and he was a charming preacher, having a most commanding voice and air. His temper was staid and cheerful, and his behavior very genteel and obliging." He published a sermon on justification by faith. 1653; the method of grace in the justification of sinners, 4to., 1656; church-members set in joint, against lay preachers, 1656. He also published a work written by Mr. Noyes, entitled, Moses and Aaron, or the rights of Church and State, containing two disputations, 1661.

WOODBRIDGE, Joun, first minister of Killingworth, Conn., died in Wethersfield, in 1690, aged about 46. He was the son of Rev. John W. of Andover, Mass. He graduated at Harvard in 1664, and was pastor at K. from 1666 to 1679, and was succeeded by A. Pierson in 1684. He was re-settled in Wethersfield as the successor of J. Rowlandson in 1679, and was succeeded by Mix, Lockwood, Marsh, Tenney; the three first ministers were II. Smith, Russell, and 28

in ne

is-

ar

eft

I.,

of ng

pril

om

rn:

ıate

ons.

ight

had

and

He

eath

V; a ic at

on

York

y of

onn.,

Me.,

first hich

erdi-

ce of aven

te of

ford.

men

with vards

WAS

ry of first

1684.

cland, On Bulkley. WOODBRIDGE, JOHN, first preacher of Andover, Mass., died March 17, 1695, aged 81. He was the son of Rev. John W.; was born in Stanton, Wiltshire, England, in 1613; and, after passing some time at Oxford, pursued his studies in private. In 1634 he came to this country with his uncle, Thomas Parker. He was ordained as pastor at Rowley in 1645; but, upon the invitation of his friends in England, he returned to them in 1647. Being ejected in 1662, he again sought a retreat in America, and became an assistant to Mr. Parker of Newbury, and acted with him in his controversy with his church. After his dismission on account of his views of church discipline, he was a magistrate of the colony. His successors at A. were Dane, Barnard, Symmes, Loring. In the second church were Phillips, French, Edwards, Badger. His wife was a daughter of Gov. T. Dudley. His son, Benjamin, minister of Bristol, and in 1688 of Kittery, who died at Medford Jan. 15, 1710, wrote the ingenious lines for the tomb of Mr. Cotton, found in Mather's Magnalia, III. 31. His son, John, the minister of Wethersfield, died in 1690; and his descendants, ministers, were John John of South Hadley, who died Sept. 10, 1783, aged 79. The grandson of the last, making the J. Woodbridge, D. D., of Hadley. - Mather's Mag. 11, 219.

WOODBRIDGE, BENJAMIN, the first preacher at Bristol, R. I., died at Medford in 1710. He was the son of Rev. John W. After being for four years from 1680 at Bristol, he was succeeded by Samuel Lee; and in 1688 was a preacher at Kittery, Me. But it does not appear that he was the settled minister in either town. His wife was Mary, the daughter of Rev. John Ward, He wrote an elegy on John Cotton, which is in Mather's magnalia.

WOODBRIDGE, Jonn, first minister of West Springfield, died June 10, 1718, aged 40. The son of Rev. John W. of Wethersfield, he graduated in 1694, and was ordained in 1698. His wife was a daughter of Rev. Joseph Eliot. son, John, was the minister of South Hadley; another son, Benjamin, was the minister of Amity, now Woodbridge, in Connecticut, and died much respected in 1785, aged 73, in the forty-fourth year of his ministry. Two sons settled in Stockbridge. - Holland's Hist, of Western Mass.

WOODBRIDGE, BENJAMIN, the first miserable victim in New England to the code of honor, died in Boston, murdered in a duel, July 3, 1728, aged 19. He was the son of Dudley W. His grave-stone is in the Granary burying-ground. - Bridgman's Pilgrims of Boston.

WOODBRIDGE, TIMOTHY, minister of Hartford, Conn., died April 30, 1732, aged nearly 80. The son of Rev. John W. of Andover, he was graduated at Harvard college in 1675, and was ordained Nov. 18, 1685. His predecessors were Hooker, Stone, and Haynes; his successors, Wadsworth, Dorr, Strong, and Hawes. He introduced into Connecticut, in 1696, the practice of baptizing the children of those who owned the covenant without being received into full communion. He was tall and of a majestic aspect. For his useful labors and Christian zeal and exemplary virtues, he was one of the most distinguished men of his day. He published an election sermon, 1727. He was no mean poet. To C. Mather, on his magnalia, he wrote:

[&]quot;Great your atlempt. No doubt some sacred spy, That lieger in your sacred cell did fle, Nurs'd your first thoughts with gentle beams of light, And taught your hands things past to bring to sight. Thus led by secret, swectest influence You make returns to God's good providence; Recording bow that mighty Hand was nigh To trace out paths, not known to mortal eye, To those brave men that to this land came o'er, And plac'd them safe on the Atlantic shore, -

And gave them room to spread, and bless'd their root, Whence, hung with fruit, now many branches shoot."

WOODBRIDGE, SAMUEL, first minister of East Hartford, Conn., died in 1746, aged 63. He had been forty-three years minister, and was succeeded by E. Williams. He graduated at Harvard in 1801.

WOODBRIDGE, ASHBEL, minister of Glastenbury, Conn., died in 1758, aged 53. He was graduated at Yale in 1724. He was a very humble, excellent, and pious man. WOODBRIDGE, TIMOTHY, minister of Hatfield, Mass,, thirty years, died in 1770, aged 57. He was preceded by Atherton, Chauncy, and Williams; and succeeded by Lyman, Waterbury, and Pratt.

WOODBRIDGE, EPHRAIM, the minister of New London, Conn., died in 1776, aged 30. The son of Rev. John of Wethersfield, he graduated at Yale in 1765. His predecessors were Blinman, Bulkley, Bradstrect, Saltonstall, Adams, Byles.

WOODBRIDGE, John, minister of South Hadley, Mass., died in 1783, aged 80. 'Born in West Springfield, the son of Rev. John W., he graduated at Yale in 1726. He was first settled as a minister in Poquonnuck, a village of Windsor, in 1729, and removed to South Hadley in 1742. He was the ninth Rev. John W. who were all related to each other as ancestor and descendant.

WOODBRIDGE, BENJAMIN, the first minister of Woodbridge, Conn., died in 1785, aged 65 or 75. He graduated at Yale in 1740; he was ordained in 1742; and in 1783 had Mr. Ball for a colleague. The town was named after him; in return for the honor he presented to the town Whitby's commentary. The regicides Goffe and Whalley had a lodge in this town, seven miles from New Haven.

WOODBRIDGE, ENOCH, chief justice of Vermont, died at Vergennes in 1805.

WOODBRIDGE, RUGGLES, colonel, the son of Rev. John W., died at South Hadley March 8, 1819, aged 80. He was a colonel in the Revolutionary army, and a physician; no man in the town had so great influence. For fifteen years he was treasurer of the Hampshire missionary society. He gloried in the cross of Christ .-Holland, 11. 274.

WOODBRIDGE, SYLVESTER, Dr., died at Southampton, Mass., in 1824, aged 70. He was the son of Rev. John W. of South Hadley. He probably studied his profession with a brother, who was a physician. In consequence of a vote of invitation from the town he settled in Southampton, where he toiled skilfully and faithfully during his life. He ever delighted in reading new books and prosecuting his medical studies.

He was also an habitual student of the bible; a constant attendant on public worship; zealous in theological discussion. His general habits were those of the Puritan stamp. Of his children, Rev. John Woodbridge, D. D., is the aged minister of Hadley; Mindwell, who died in 1837, was the wife of Rev. Vinson Gould; and Rev. Sylvester Woodbridge, D. D., is a minister in the city of New Orleans. - B. B. Edwards' Center nial Address.

WOODBRIDGE, WILLIAM, died in Franklin, Conn., Feb. 27, 1836, aged 80. He was a graduate of Yale in 1780, was a preacher, and was an honored teacher fifty years. He wrote for the annals of education, published by his son, W. C. W., and contributed to other papers. He wrote the dead bird, published by the Sabbath school union.

WOODBRIDGE, JOHN E., died in Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 1, 1844, aged 67. His mother was a daughter of President Edwards; his father was Jahleel W. of Stockbridge. He was an early settler of Y., and by his amiableness, urbanity, integrity, love of order, and respect for religion, was, like thousands of other excellent men of like character, and placed in like circumstances, a great benefactor of a new and prosperous town.

WOODBRIDGE, BENJAMIN R., second minister of Norwich, Mass., died at South Hadley in 1844, aged about 60. Born in S. H., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1775, and was pastor from 1799 to 1831. S. Tracy was the first minister of Norwich, born in Norwich, Conn.; a graduate of Princeton in 1770; settled from 1781 to 1799; died in 1822, aged 73. Mr. W. died suddenly, falling from his chair. On the previous day he attended the laying of the corner-stone of a new meeting-house.

WOODBRIDGE, WILLIAM C., died in Boston Nov. 9, 1845, aged 50. After graduating at Yale in 1811, he studied theology. He became a teacher in the institution of Mr. Gallaudet for the deaf and dumb at Hartford. From about 1820 he spent six or seven years in Europe, collecting materials for his geography. After his return he devoted himself to the improvement of education. He published the American annals of education; various works on education and geography. - N. Y. Observer, Dec. 6, 1845; Goodrich's Recollections.

WOODBURY, ISRAEL, Dr., died at Beverly, Mass., in 1797, aged 63; an eminent physician.

WOODBURY, BENJAMIN, died in Ohio Dec. 29, 1845, aged 53. Born in New London, N. H., graduated at Dartmouth in 1817, he taught an academy five years in New Jersey and New Orleans, where he caught the spirit of missions from Sylvester Larned. He was the minister of Fal. mouth, Mass., from 1824 to 1833. In one revival t tem Barr valle most missi ness Savie nt F Palm eesso W mout Fran tor, b

he wa

1823

1831 to 18 In 18 Story State garde party guish able a W ford, his lu ringer

stead

meetin

ford

wheth knowi WO the R had t attack Great was be affair : in Ju W chemi

of the son of Nov. in the sen pi he vi publis ical tree, 1792 1797 on the sition try, w

val there were five hundred converts. He formed | hold, N. J., in 1821, aged about 80; a venerable temperance societies throughout the county of Barnstable. In 1835 he removed to the Mannice valley in Ohio, where he spent the rest of life in most important labors, employed by the home missionary society. He saw the moral wilderness blossom. His last words were: "The Saviour is most precious." His predecessors at Falmonth were J. Metcalf, J. Marshall, S. Palmer, Z. Butler, I. Mann, H. Lincoln; his successors, J. Bent and H. B. Hooker.

in

re

'n,

11-

37,

he lin,

ad-

nn

the

w.

He

ath ıgs-

her

her

arly

nity,

ion,

of ices.

rous

min-

y in

adu-

from

er of te of 799;

enly,

y he

new

Bos-

ig at

came et for

bout

, col-

r his

ment

n an-

ation

1845;

verly,

cian.

Dec. N. H., ht an

w Ors from f Fal-

e revi-

WOODBURY, LEVI, judge, died at Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 4, 1851, aged 61. Born in Francestown, the son of Peter W., a State senator, he graduated at Dartmouth in 1809. In 1816 he was judge of the superior court; governor in 1823; senator in 1825; secretary of the navy in 1831; and secretary of the treasury from 1834 to 1841, when he was re-elected to the senate. In 1845 he was appointed, on the death of Judge Story, a judge of the supreme court of the United States. At the time of his death he was regarded a prominent candidate of the democratic party for the office of president. He was distinguished for indefatigable industry and for the able and fuithful discharge of his public duties.

WOODFORD, THOMAS, was town-crier, Hartford, 1640, to receive two penec for the use of his lungs at a public meeting. He was also bellringer in 1640, for Hartford then had a bell, instend of a drum or a conch-shell, to summon to meeting. He was also sexton. Thomas Woodford was a citizen of Northampton in 1662; whether T. W. of Hartford, or his son, is not known.

WOODFORD, WILLIAM, general, a soldier of the Revolution, died in Virginia in 1792. He had the rank of colonel, when he repulsed an attack made on him by a party of royalists, near Great Bridge, Williamsburg, Dec. 15, 1776. He was behind a breast work; it was "a Bunker Hill affair in miniature." He served in New Jersey in June, 1778, having then the rank of general.

WOODHOUSE, JAMES, M. D., professor of chemistry in the college of Philadelphia, died of the apoplexy June 4, 1809, aged 38. son of a bookseller, he was born in Philadelphia Nov. 17, 1770. In 1791 he served as a surgeon in the army of St. Clair. In 1795 he was ehosen professor. For his improvement in science he visited England and France in 1802. He published an inaugural dissertation on the chemical and medical properties of the persimmon tree, and the analysis of astringent vegetables, 1792; the young chemist's pocket companion, 1797; an answer to Dr. Priestley's considerations on the doctrines of phlogiston and the decomposition of water; an edition of Chaptal's chemistry, with notes, 2 vols. 8vo., 1807.

pastor. He graduated at Princeton in 1766.

WOODHULL, GEORGE S., D. D., died at Middletown Point, N. J., Dec. 25, 1834, aged 60. He graduated at Princeton in 1790, and was a trustee of the college.

WOODHULL, John, died at River Head, N. Y., March 21, 1855, aged 100. Born in Brooklaven, he was for fifty years a member and officer of the church.

WOODMAN, Joseph, first minister of Sanbornton, N. H., died in 1807, aged 59. Born in West Newbury, Mass., he graduated at Princeton in 1766, and was pastor from 1771 to 1807; and was succeeded by A. Bodwell.

WOODRUFF, AARON D., attorney-general of New Jersey, died in Sussex co., in 1817, aged 55.

WOODRUFF, HEZEKIAH N., minister of Stonington, Conn., died in the interior of New York, in 1833, aged about 70. Born in Farmington, Conn., he graduated at Yale in 1784; was pastor at Stonington from 1789 to 1803; then was a preacher at Oncida in the State of New York. He published a sermon at ordination of Clark Brown; of his brother, E. T. Woodruff, at North Coventry, 1801. - Sprague's WOODRUFF, ARCHIBALD, captain, died at Cincinnati in 1845, aged 72. Born in Elizabethtown, N. J., he was editor of a daily paper in New York, and afterwards engaged in navigation. He removed to C. in 1819.

WOODS, ABEL, a Baptist minister, died at Hamilton, N. Y., Aug. 11, 1850, aged 85.

WOODS, LEONARD, D. D., professor of theology in the theological seminary at Andover, Mass., died Aug. 24, 1854, aged 80. Born in Princeton, Mass., June 19, 1774, the son of Samuel, he graduated at Harvard in 1796. After studying theology a few months with Dr. Backus of Somers, Conn., he was ordained as pastor of the church in Newbury, Mass., Dec. 5, 1798, remaining there nine years. He was installed professor of theology at Andover Sept. 28, 1808, and continued in the office about thirty-eight years till 1846. He died of an ossification of the heart. On the night before his death, when a friend asked if he should pray with him, he replied, "There is no prayer that meets my case, but that of the publican, 'God be merciful to me, a sinner.'" He had instructed more than one thousand students in theology. He was one of the founders of the American tract society at Boston, in 1814, and assisted in preparing its early publications; he promoted its union with other societies in the American tract society in 1825. His last years were spent in revising his lectures for publication, and in writing a history of the theological seminary. In regard to the important doctrine of the pre-WOODHULL, JOHN, D. D., died at Free- existent Sonship of Christ, the two professors at contradictory views. Prof. Stuart maintained that Christ is not called the Son of God, except in reference to the miraculous manner of his earthly existence, but that he is called the Word in reference to his pre-existent nature; in fact, that he is the Son of God only as a man. On the other hand, Prof. Woods maintains that he was the Son of God from eternity, not indeed literally but metaphorically; not because derived from God, but because of his Divine dignity, and because he "eternally stood in a personal relation to the Father, which is represented to us under the idea of the filial relation." "He called himself the Son of God in such a sense as to imply that he was God, - one with the Father." So that the constant distinction in Scripture between the Father and his Son would seem to be overlooked by this professor. The two professors, although thus differing, agreed in the general doctrine that Christ, whether called Son or Word, was eternally one of three equal persons making up the one God. If, then, it should be asked, what were his notions of the unity of God, Dr. Woods' reply is: "God is one. All divine attributes and acts belong to this one Being, Jehovah, and to him only." Yet he labors to prove that the existence of three equal eternal persons in the Godhead is not inconsistent with this unity. There are two American books on which he remarks, which are in opposition to his theory; one is the bible news by Dr. Noah Worcester, and the other by a layman, a lawyer of New York, George Griffin, the father of Edmund D. Griffin and the brother of Rev. Dr. Griffin, who maintains that Christ in his Divine nature as the Son of God was the real sufferer on the cross. As to the doctrine of antiquity, in speaking of Christ as "God of God," the meaning seems to be, beyond all doubt, that the Son was derived from God. So the creed of the English Episcopal church says: "I believe in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, begotten of his Father before all worlds, God of God, light of light, very God of very God, begotten not made." So the venerated Richard Hooker of the English church says: "The Father alone is originally that Deity which Christ originally is not; for Christ is God by being of God." And so the fathers in the early ages of the Christian church taught most clearly the derivation of the Son of God. Thus Athanasius says of the Father: "He only is unbegotten and he only is the fountain of divinity; therefore he is styled the only God." So Hilary says: "He is the one God, because he is self-existent God." And Eusebius says, that "God alone is underived and unbegotten, who hath his divinity of himself, and is the cause of the Son's being." It is to be Andover, Woods and Stunrt, seemed to hold the doctrine of three equal, eternal, independent persons, making up one God, is not an American doctrine, the invention of our reasoners, who, taking for granted that Christ is the infinite God. felt constrained to deny that he could be begotten or derived from God, the fountain of divinity. After all, every man is bound to build his faith upon holy Scripture, irrespective of old or new erceds; and he must judge whether or not the bible teaches that the Son of God is a being derived from God. As Dr. W. believed that the eternal, infinite Son could not suffer, the bearing of this theoretical view on the doetrine of the atonement, the first doctrine of importance, is the next point of inquiry. If it be asked, how is his doctrine different from that of the Sociaians, since they believe that only the man Christ could suffer? Dr. Woods replies: "We believe that all the divine and human perfections which the Scriptures ascribe to Christ constitute but one person." "The value of any action or suffering in Christ must be according to the dignity or excellence of his whole character," as it is " attributable to his whole person." He therefore regarded the suffering of Christ of as high value in making an atonement, "as if it had been the suffering of the Divinity." As to all similar statements, Dr. Noah Worcester replied to the supporters of them: "This person you call the Son of God endured no share in the sufferings of the eross; the man only suffered and died. This real sufferer had never enjoyed one moment of pre-existent dignity or glory. But in my scheme," Dr. Worcester continues, "the sufferer is that glorious Son, by whom God created all things in heaven and earth." Every reflecting reader must feel impelled to study the Scriptures earnestly, in order to discover which of these doctrines or what other doctrine relating to the atonement it has pleased God to reveal. The authority of great names can settle nothing. The creeds and confessions of contending sects. churches, and councils can settle nothing. The plain meaning of God's word is the sole inquiry. But if the judgment of others is to weigh with the earnest theological inquirer, he will have to consider whether the earlier fathers of the three first centuries do not teach the doctrine that Christ was "the son of God, begotten before the whole creation," yet capable of becoming and actually becoming himself the sufferer on the cross. He will have to judge whether Dr. Woods' scheme, or that which he opposes, is most consistent with the great, all-important doctrine of atonement for sin by the blood of him who came down from heaven for the express purpose of being himself a sacrifice for sin.

WOODS, John, died in Hamilton, Ohio, in 1855, aged 61. He was a lawyer, born in Pennconsidered by the inquirer after truth, whether sylvania; a member of congress from Ohio from

1824 ton I tor of W died a

W Mass. Newt Harvi died sermo of Jo the de W mathe

1804. in 174 after | profes specte Whee tice of over A was a dolph, old Fr WO Brunsy WO

WO

lon, d son of at Dar 1818. his life neighb Crossw was N N. H. WO ble, M tionary WO of Nor He wa ated a sermon

1814. wo aged 0 He ha WO disting

Mass., years t State ! known to Do North He wa

1824 to 1828; then the publisher of the Hamil- Dr. Samuel Woodward, an eminent physician in ton Intelligencer. In 1845 he was chosen andi- extensive practice, who died in 1835, aged 84, tor of Ohio.

n o.

d.

n

٧.

th

w

he

le.

hе

ng

he is

OW

ni-

rist

eve

ieh

but suf-

ity

is ore

ılne

the ate-

up-

Son

the

This

at of my erer

lall

ting

ures

hese

the

The

hing.

ects,

The

uiry.

with ve to three

that

e the d ac-

cross.

nods'

conine of

eame

ose of

nio, in

Penn-

from

WOODVILLE, Jours, an Episcopal minister, died at St. Mark's parish, Va., in 1834, aged 76.

WOODWARD, SAMUEL, minister of Weston, Mass., died in 1782, aged 56. He was born at Newton, the son of Ebenezer; he graduated at Harvard in 1718, and was ordained in 1751. He died beloved and lamented. He published a sermon at the ordination of J. Wheeler, 1760: of John Marsh, 1774; at Lexington, 1779; on the death of Cyrus Woodward, 1782.

WOODWARD, BEZALEEL, first professor of mathematics at Dartmouth college, died Aug. 25, 1804, aged 59. He was born at Lebanon, Conn., in 1745; graduated at Yale college in 1764; and after being a preacher, was appointed in 1782 professor, in which capacity he was highly respected. His wife was a daughter of Dr. E. Wheelock. His son, William H. W., chief justice of the court of common pleas, died at Hanover Aug. 9, 1818, aged 44. His son, Henry W., was a missionary at Ceylon.

WOODWARD, DAVID, colonel, died in Randolph, Vt., in 1823, aged 97; an officer in the old French war.

WOODWARD, SAMUEL, Baptist minister at Bronswick, died in 1832, aged 83.

WOODWARD, HENRY, missionary at Ceylon, died Aug. 3, 1834, aged 37. He was the son of Prof. Beza W. of Hanover, and graduated at Dartmouth in 1815, at Princeton seminary in 1818. He embarked June 8, 1819, and spent his life at Ceylon and on the continent in the neighborhood. His wife, Lydia Middleton of Crosswicks, N. J., died in 1825. His second wife was Mrs. Frost, Clarissa Emerson of Chester,

N. II. WOODWARD, JONATHAN, died at Dunstable, Mass., Dec. 24, 1840, aged 101; a Revolutionary pensioner.

WOODWARD, JAMES WHEELOCK, minister of Norwich, Vt., died in 1847, aged about 70. He was the son of Prof. Woodward, and graduated at Dartmouth in 1798. He published a sermon on the death of Eden Burroughs, D. D., 1814.

WOODWARD, THOMAS G., died in 1849, aged 61; editor of the New Haven Daily Courier.

He had a fund of native humor.

WOODWARD, SAMUEL BAYARD, M. D., a distinguished physician, died in Northampton, Mass., Jan. 3, 1850, aged 63. He was for many years the acceptable superintendent of the large State lunatic asylum at Worcester. His earliest known ancestor was Henry Woodward, who came to Dorchester in 1638, and was an inhabitant of Northampton in 1658, and died April 7, 1685.

and who had four sons that were physicians: one of whom, Elijah, was his own associate; and two others, Henry and Charles, settled in Middletown, of whom Charles still lives. Dr. W., hefore he went to Worcester, was for years a physician in Wethersfield, Conn., and a State senator. He was superintendent of the lunatio hospital from Jan. 1, 1833, to July 1, 1846. He immediately transplanted himself to a beautiful residence in the town of the abode and the place of the burial of his first ancestor, Henry. wife, married in 1815, who survives, was Maria, daughter of Eleazer Porter of Hartford, Among his children are his daughters Urania and Maria, and his son, Dr. Rufus Woodward, who, after studying his profession in Paris, has been for some years in practice at Worcester. He published annual reports of the State lunatic asylum, and occasionally an article in the medical journals, and two or three pamphlets on medical and moral subjects.

WOODWORTH, SAMUEL, died in New York Dec. 9, 1842, aged 57. Horn in Weymouth, Mass., about 1786, he was an apprentice to the Centinel office of B. Russell, Boston; afterwards a printer in New York, where he died, a drunkard, an outcast, forsaken, with scarcely a friend to follow him, the poor slave of his appetite, to his grave. Yet what he might have done is shown by his famous song of the old oaken bucket, the chorus to which is:

"The old oaken bucket, The iron-bound bucket, The moss-cover'd bucket, That hung in the well."

Alas! that the writer himself should prefer to drink from a different spring. The first stanza is this:

"How dear to this heart are the scenes of my childhood, When food recollection presents them to view? The orchard, the meadow, the deep-tangled wild wood. And every tov'd spot which my infancy knew."

The whole may be read in the New York Observer of July 15, 1852.

WOOLEY, AARON K., judge, died at Lexington, Ky., in 1849, aged 49. Born in Newark, N. J., he settled in Kentucky in 1828, and was a judge, and for ten years law professor in Transylvania university.

WOOLHOPTER, PHILIP D., a printer, died at Savannah in 1818. He was for twenty years one of the editors of the Columbian Museum.

WOOLMAN, JOHN, a writer against slavery, died in England in 1772, aged 52. He was a descendant of J. W., a settler of Burlington, N. J., in 1680, and was born in 1720. He was a He was born in Torringford, Conn., the son of preacher among the Quakers, and a coadjutor of Anthony Benezet in his labors for the freedom of ans living at the mouth of the Thames in Conthe blacks. He was the grandson of Henry necticut. From him these Indians were called Hurr of New Jersey, who at his death in 1742 bequeathed liberty to all his slaves; supposed to be the first instance of emancipation. Peter White, the son-in-law to Burr, also bequeathed freedom to his slaves. These examples had their influence on Woolman, who visited Maryland about 1757 in order to discuss the affair of "slavekeeping," and who wrote earnestly upon the subject. On a visit to England he died. He was a man of great industry, self-denial, and benevolence. His works were published, 1774; 5th edit., Philadelphia, 1818.

WOOLSEY, MELANCTHON LLOYD, general, a soldier of the Revolution, was born on Long Island about 1757. He was a field officer at the age of twenty-two, and rendered important services on the northern frontier. After the war he resided at Plattsburg. While on a journey to visit his son, Com. W., at Sackett's Harbor, he was taken sick, and died at Trenton, N. Y., June

29, 1819, aged 62.

WOOLSEY, MELANCTHON T., a captain in the navy of the United States, died at Utica in 1838, aged 59; an officer much respected and esteemed.

WOOLWORTH, AARON, D. D., minister of Leonard, Thomas, and Samuel. - Farmer. Bridgehampton, L. I., was born in Longmendow; graduated at Yale in 1784; was ordeined in 1787; and died April 2, 1821, aged 57. His wife was a daughter of Rev. Dr. Buell; he left five children. He was a distinguished and useful minister. - N. Y. Observer, Nov. 26, 1842.

WOOSAMEQUEN was one of the Indian names of Massassoit.

WOOSTER, DAVID, major-general in the Revolutionary war, died May 2, 1777, aged 66. He was born at Stratford in 1711, and was graduated at Yale college in 1738. At the commencement of the war with Great Britain he was appointed to the chief command of the troops in the service of Connecticut, and made a brigndiergeneral in the continental service; but this commission he afterwards resigned. In 1776 he was appointed the first major-general of the militia of his native State. While opposing a detachment of British troops, whose object was to destroy the public stores at Danbury, he was mortally wounded at Ridgefield April 27, 1777.

WOOSTER, BENJAMIN, minister of Fairfield, Vt., died in 1840, aged 77. He graduated at Yale in 1790; was settled as the minister of Cornwall, Vt., in 1787, but was pastor only a few years; in 1804 he was installed at Fairfield. He commanded a company of volunteers about 1813 at the siege of Plattsburg, and remained four years in the army.

WO-PEQUAND, or WO-PEQUOIT, was the l'equots or l'equods. The name is given by the Dutch explorers of the country about 1614 as l'equats.

WORCESTER, WILLIAM, the first minister of Salisbury, Mass., died in 1662. He emigrated with his family from Salisbury, England, about 1637. The church was formed in 1638. He was succeeded by John Wheelwright, who was followed by J. Alling, Caleb Cushing, E. Noyes, His sons were Samuel, William, Timothy, and Moses. Of these, Samuel of Bradford died in 1680. leaving a son, Francis, whose son was Franeis of Sandwich. - Farmer.

WORCESTER, Francis, minister of Sandwich, Mass., died at Hollis, N. H., in 1783, aged The son of Samuel, he was born in Bradford, Mass. Without a college education, he became pastor of the second church in Sundwich from 1735 to 1745. He was a zealous friend of the great revival of that period. Subsequently he lived at Exeter, Plaistow, and Hollis.

WORCESTER, NOAH, a venerable citizen of Hollis, N. II., the son of Rev. Francis W., died in 1817, aged 81. He left a large family, of which four sons were eminent ministers, Noah, WORCESTER, SAMUEL, D. D., first secretary. of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, died June 7, 1821, aged 50. He was born in Hollis, N. H., Nov. 1, 1771, a descendant in the sixth generation of William W. He was graduated at Dartmouth college in 1795. and ordained at Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 27, 1797. April 20, 1803, he was installed the pastor of the Tabernacle Church in Salem. At the institution of the foreign mission society in 1810, he was chosen recording secretary, and upon him devolved the chief care and labor of the society. In 1817, when Mr. Cornelius was settled as his colleague, he was allowed to devote three-quarters of his time to the missionary cause. In 1820, in a state of feeble health, he visited the missionary stations at the south. From New Orleans he proceeded to Mayhew, and thence, May 25th, to Brainerd, a missionary station among the Cherokees, dearer to him than any city or mansion on the earth, where he died. His body rests in the territory of the Cherokees. The body of his nephew, Samuel A. Worcester, for preaching the gospel to the same Indians in disregard of the unconstitutional laws of Georgia, was shut up among convicts in the prisonhouse of the Georgians, and there held, in defiance of the supreme court of the U.S. Dr. W. was a bright example of pastoral faithfulness and of habitual, fervent piety. During his ministry in Salem, two hundred eighty-five were name of Sassacus' father, the chief of the Indi- added to the church. He attended more than elghty beneve man : ble th holy c ers. only fo good Christ. judgm enjoye church the te which first su time N lem. Fox o Samue teacher ishmen of the ters to nor En fore th reward 1811; of the and R W. Cog 1812; lem, 18 ning, or 1815; true lib drunkn Americ 1820;

nals; . bury, N of Sani Peacha been or publish death c divinity God, 1 1810; dence faith a tion, 1 1817: WO ton, M founder was bo the br of Rev of Rev

d ıt,

S.

d

n

1-

d-ed

d-

6-ch

of

tly

of

ed

of

ah,

ry,

or-

He

de-

W.

95.

97.

the

ion

m (kg

de-

etv.

his uar-

In

the

Yew

nec.

tion

any

His

ees.

ter.

s in eor-

son-

defi-

. W.

ness

min-

were

than

eighty ecclesiastical councils. He was humble, thury With no ducation except in a common henevolent, and disinterested. He died a poor man; but he left his family what is more valuahle than riches, - the benefit of his eminently holy character and of his instructions and prayers. Multitudes in this world of selfishness toil only for themselves; he toiled incessantly for the good of others, and for the kingdom of Jesus Christ. He was conspicuous for a cool, sound judgment; was distinguished as a writer; and enjoyed in a high degree the confidence of the churches. His wisdom and talents are seen in the ten first annual reports of the board, of which he was the secretary. Mr. Evarts was his first successor as secretary; and then for a short time Mr. Cornelius, his former colleague at Salem. His wife was a daughter of Dr. Jonathan Fox of Hollis. Of his children are Rev. Dr. Samuel M. W. of Salem, and Jonathan Fox, a teacher. He published sermons on future punishment, 1800; two discourses on the perpetuity of the covenant with Abraham, 8vo., 1805; letters to T. Haldwin, 1807; on the death of Eleanor Emerson, 1808; of R. Anderson, 1814; before the Mass. missionary society, 1809; God a rewarder; at the installation of E. D. Griffin, 1811; at the ordination of E. L. Parker, 1810; of the missionaries, Newell, Judson, Nott, Hall, and Rice, 1812; of six missionaries, 1815; of W. Cogswell, 1815; fast sermons on the war, 1812; before the foreign mission society of Salem, 1813; three separate letters to W. E. Channing, on Unitarianism, 1815; Christian psalmody, 1815 : before the American education society, on true liberality, at the first anniversary, 1816; the drunkard a destroyer, 1817; ten reports of the American foreign mission society, from 1811 to 1820; sermons, 8vo., 1823. - Sprague's Annals; Memoir by his son, S. M. W.

WORCESTER, THOMAS, minister of Salisbury, N. II., died in 1831. He was the brother of Samuel. His brother, Evarts, minister of Peacham, Vt., died in 1836, aged 29, having been ordained at Littleton the same year. He published a sermon at thanksgiving, 1795; on death of J. Wardwell, 1814; on our Saviour's divinity, 1810; on the testimony of the Son of God, 1810; on the Divine Sonship of Christ, 1810; the glory of Christ, 1811; call for evidence as to Christ's being God; examples of faith and worship, 1814; ecclesiastical usurpation, 1815; chain of argument as to trinity, 1817; letter to trinitarian brother, 1819.

WORCESTER, NOAH, D. D., died at Brighton, Mass., Oct. 31, 1838, aged 79. He was the founder of the Massachusetts peace society. He was born at Hollis, N. H., Nov. 25, 1758; was the brother of Rev. Samuel W., great-grandson of Rev. Francis W., who was the great-grandson of Rev. William W., the first minister of Salis- graduated at Harvard in 1832.

(school, he was in early life several years in the army. After his marriage he lived from 1779 to 1782 in Plymouth, N. H., and then removed to Thornton, where he was a farmer and town clerk and also taught school. In 1783 he published a letter to J. Murray on his sermon on the origin of evil. By advice of some ministers he studied theology for a while, and was ordained at Thornton in 1787. In 1810 he removed to Salisbury, N. H., and thence in 1813 to Brighton, Mass., where he edited the Christian disciple till 1819. In 1815 he published a solemn review of the custom of war. This led to the formation of the Massachusetts peace society, organized in Jan., 1816. As secretary, and as editor of the friend of peace, he labored till he reached the age of 70. Dr. Channing published a discourse on his character, in which he says, after alluding to his feebleness and sufferings and narrow circumstances yet contented and cheerful, "On leaving his house and turning my face towards the city, I have said to myself, How much richer is this poor man than the richest who dwell yonder?" The peculiar doctrines which he advanced in his bible news, published in 1810, were the following: Jesus Christ, as he believed he found taught in the Scriptures, was truly the Son of God, before the creation of the world; not created himself, as the Arians maintain, but derived; divine in dignity and various powers received from God, but capable of suffering, if he chose to suffer; the animating soul or spirit in the body of Christ, for he tabernacled in the flesh and died in agony on the cross, and the very being who came down from heaven was the sufferer. The Itoly Ghost, or Holy Spirit, or Spirit of God does not mean a person or being distinct from God, but God's agency or sacred influence, bestowed in various ways upon a world of dark-minded, perishing sinners, by which they are enlightened, regenerated, and saved: the phrase he finds thus employed. as he thinks, most plainly, more than two hundred times. He published a sermon at ordination of T. Worcester, 1791; against the Bantist theory, 1809; review of testimonies in favor of the divinity of the Son of God, 1810; bible news, 1810; address to Trinitarian elergy, 1814; appeal to the candid, 1814; solemn review of the enstom of war, eighth edit., 1825. He and Thomas published a word in season, 1813.

WORCESTER, HENRY A., minister of a New Jerusalem church in Portland, Me., died in 1810, aged 38. He graduated at Yale in 1828, and was highly esteemed. He published a small volume of sermons.

WORCESTER, NOAH, M. D., died at Cincinnati in 1847, aged 36; a professor in the Western Reserve college, and a physician in C. He WORCESTER, LEONARD, first minister of Peacham, Vt., died in 1846, aged 79. He was the son of Noah of Hollis, and was first un apprentice to I. Thomas, printer, of Worcester; then a journeyman; then sole printer and partner as a publisher and bookseller. He was a deacon in Mr. Austin's church, and was brought into notice by a reply to a sermon of Dr. Bancroft on the doctrine of election. Studying theology while printing, he was settled at Peacham, and after more than fifty years' service had for a short time as a colleague, D. Merrill, the author of the "Ox sermon." After the publication of the bible news by his brother Noah, he embraced his peculiar doctrines, according to which he modified and published the confession of his church. As to the Son of God, his faith was that Christ was, in his original nature and state, properly the Son of God, derived from God, not created, by an eternal generation; thus distinct from God, not properly God, but Divine. The Spirit he regarded not as a person distinct from God. He delighted especially in the doctrines of atonement and of justification by faith. Four of his sons were ministers, - Samuel A., Evarts, Isaac R., and John II. He was the brother of Samuel of Salem, and of Thomas, minister of Salisbury, N. H., who died in 1831. He published an oration on Washington's death, 1890; at ordination of Gridley and Worcester as missionaries, 1825.

WORTH, W. J., general, died in Texas May 7, 1849, aged 55, a native of Hudson, N. Y. In 1812 he entered the army, and was distinguished in battles in Canada. For some time he was superintendent of West Point. He had the chief command in Florida in 1821. He won at Monterey the brevet of major-general, and fought in various other battles, in some of which, it is thought, he hazarded the lives of his men too freely. But what is the life of his men to a great soldier? He was brave to a fault, chivalrous, of imposing presence, haughty, impetuous.

WORTHINGTON, WILLIAM, minister of Saybrook, Conn., died Nov. 16, 1756, aged 60. He was the son of William of Hartford and Colchester, and grandson of Nicholas, the emigrant ancestor of all who bear the name in this country, who was wounded in the Cromwellian wars, and emigrated about 1650, and settled in Hatfield, and thence removed to Hartford. A graduate of Yale in 1716, he was ordained at Pochog, or that part of S. which is now called Westbrook, in 1726. He was a man of great dignity and influence, a persuasive and popular preacher and faithful pastor. His daughter, Temperance, married Rev. Mr. Smith of Sharon, and was the mother of Gov. J. C. Smith. She died at Albany in 7, 1684, Warrumbec, with five other sagamores, 1800, at the house of Judge Radcliff, her son-in- namely, Darumkine, Wihikermett, Weden Dom-scendant. He published the election sermon. 1744.

WORTHINGTON, JOHN, LL. D., colonel, un eminent lawyer, died at Springfield, Mass., in April, 1800, aged 81. He was graduated at Yale college in 1740. In 1774 he was a member of the legislature of Massachusetts, and opposed the measures of the friends of liberty. Ilis name was in the same year included in the list of the mandamus councillers, but he declined the appointment. Mr. David Ames married his daughter. - Holland, II. 135.

WORTHINGTON, PETER, an African, died in Baltimore in 1833, aged 110.

WORTHINGTON, GEORGE, Dr., died at Georgetown, D. C., in 1836, aged 77; a man highly respected.

WORTHINGTON, WILLIAM, died at Cincinnati June 5, 1846, aged 98: he served the seven years of the Revolutionary war.

WORTMAN, TUNIS, died at New York in 1822. He published an oration on the influence of social institutions on morals and happiness, 1796; a treatise on the liberty of the press, 1800.

WORUMBO, or WARRUMBEE, sachem of the Ameriscoggan Indians, had a fort on the Ameriscoggan, or, as it is now called, Androscoggan river; which, in his absence, was captured by Church in 1690. About the 9th or 10th of Sept., Maj. Church sailed from Portsmouth with three hundred soldiers. In a few days he arrived at Maquoit, and proceeded to Peiepscott fort in Brunswick, and thence murched up the river about forty miles, according to Mather, and Sunday. Sept. 14, captured the Indian fort, making prisoners of one man and the wives and children of Worumbo and Hawkins. The prisoners were afterwards released at Wells, on the appearance of the chiefs with a flag of truce and their engagement to live in peace, with the delivery of many prisoners. From Church's account of the expedition, it is uncertain whether the Indian fort was at Lewiston, Jay, or Rumford, at each of which places are falls, at the distances of twenty, forty-five, and sixty miles from Pejepscott. He says that the Indians ran down from the fort to the river, and ran in under the sheet of water at the falls. At Rumford upper falls, - for there are three pitches, - the water shoots over in a manner which would allow of passing under it. The falls, three miles below Jay point. called Rockamecko, do not answer this description, nor do those at Lewiston. Yet the distance of sixty miles seems a long march with three hundred men into the wilderness. With boats or cances he could not have been supplied. July law. Professor Fowler of Amherst is his de- | hegon, Nehonongassett, and Numbanewett, gave a de which Pejej at P caller grapt upper in a miles Maqu what Andre mean wick; first l tors. wick line fr Norri mense preten compa middle forty r place Andro some o with t swers : many r to con same and his tre of wick a centre, ton. 1793, t miles a and no 1639 q as lyi the riv J. Blar lying I coggan describ river. vious s Heath, five ye tinctly four n

it sec

Brunsy

deed.

have d

and fro

territo

e

c ŀ

n

at ın

n-

en

in ce

88,

0.

he

ris-

gan

by pt.,

ree

l at

in iver

un-

ing

ren

rere

ance

en-

y of

the dian

each

s of jep-

rom

hect falls,

oots

sing

oint.

crip-

ance

hrce

oats

July

ores

Dom-

gave

a deed of land to Richard Wharton of Boston, Is there not a debt of justice due to the few which was the foundation of the elaim of the Pejepscott proprietors. The contract was made at Pejepscott or Pejepscook, as the Indians called the falls at Brunswick, and the territory granted was to extend from five miles above "the upper part of the Androscoggan uppermost falls" in a northeast line to the Kennebec, and four miles westward of the falls, and thence "down to Maquoit." The point of legal controversy was what was intended by the "uppermost falls" of Androscoggan. The court has settled, that it means Lewiston falls, twenty miles above Brunswick; yet, from reading Warrumbee's deed, the first book of records of the Pejepscott proprietors, and other papers, it seems clear that Brunswick upper falls were intended. A northeast line from Lewiston would strike the Kennebec at Norridgewock or Waterville, and confer an immense territory, to which these Indians had no pretensions, and interfere with the Kennebec company. Besides, the falls at Lewiston are the middle falls of the river, and those at Rumford, forty miles distant, are the uppermost. In one place the deed speaks of "the uppermost part of Androscoggan falls," as though the falls extended some distance in the river, which is not the case with the single fall at Lewiston, but which answers to the three falls of Brunswick, separated many rods from each other. This deed professes to confirm a previous grant of land, with the same western houndary, to Thomas Purchase, and his house is described as being near the centre of the territory; as he lived between Brunswick and Bath, his house would be fur from the centre, if the line was four miles west of Lewiston. The deposition of Peripole, an Indian, in 1753, that the river at Brunswick and for some miles above was called by the Indians Pejepscook, and not Androscoggan, is confuted by a deed in 1639 of T. Purchase, whose land is described as lying "at Pejepscott upon both sides of the river of Androscoggan," and by a deed of J. Blaney in 1683, whose lands are described as lying between "the river of Kennebec, Ambroscoggan, and Casco bay." The proprietors in 1715 describe Brunswick as on the Androscoggan river. Tho. Johnson's old map, founded on previous surveys and on a plan in 1719 made by Jos. Heath, a surveyor of the Pejepscott company, five years only after their purchase, exhibits distinctly by a double line their western boundary, four miles from Brunswick falls. On the whole it seems evident, that Warrumbee intended Brunswick falls as one of the boundaries in his deed. But even the poor remnant of his tribe have disappeared from Rocamecko point in Jay and from Pennicook in Rumford, and their whole | He was a man of probity and philanthropy, a territory has fallen into the hands of the whites. | member of the society of Friends.

Indians who yet remain in the United States?

WRAGG, WILLIAM, a lawyer of S. Carolina, died in Sept., 1777. He was born in 1714, and was educated and studied law in England. After his return to this country he was for many years a member of the assembly, and in 1753 a member of the council. He declined in 1769 the appointment of chief justice for a most honorable reason, to prevent a suspicion that his politieal course was influenced by the hope of office. In the Revolution his sense of duty restrained him from espousing the cause of independence. Leaving his country, he embarked for England. and was shipwrecked on the coast of Holland, and lost; his infant son was saved. A monument to his memory in Westminster abbey exhibits the melancholy seene of his last moments. He was a man of talents, and eloquence, and many virtues. He published reasons for not concurring in the non-importation resolution, 1769.

WRANGMAN, John, died at Peru, N. J., in 1835, aged 102.

WRIGHT, MEHITABEL, a distinguished artist, died in London in Feb., 1786, at an advanced age. She early discovered a singular talent in the moulding of figures in wax. On the death of her husband, an aged Quaker of Philadelphia, she repaired with her family about the year 1772 to London, where she acquired great celebrity for her plastie skill. Her numerous busts, among which were those of the king and queen, Chatham, Barre, and Wilkes, and her Indian family, and story of queen Esther, were deemed very fine. Her society was sought for her uncommon powers in intellect and conversation. Her patriotism was unshaken. It is supposed that she communicated to Dr. Franklin much political information, derived from sources to which few could have access.

WRIGHT, Job, second minister of Bernardston, Muss., died in 1822, aged 85. Born in East Hampton, he graduated at Yale in 1757, and was pastor from 1761 to 1782, when he was dismissed on account of the poverty of the people. J. Norton was the first minister.

WRIGHT, NATHANIEL II., a poet, was born in Concord, Mass., in 1787, and educated as a printer in Boston, where he edited the Kaleidoscope, and died May 13, 1824, aged 37. published the fall of Palmyra, a poem; Boston, or a touch at the times, a small pamphlet.

WRIGHT, ISAAC, died in New York in 1832. He and his son-in-law, Francis Thompson, created the first establishment of the very important packet system from New York to Europe. R. I., in Aug., 1837, aged 85; a graduate of Harvard in 1782.

WRIGHT, CHESTER, minister of Montpelier, Vt., died April 16, 1840, aged 63. Born in Hanover, N. H., he was a farmer; at the age of twenty-one a Christian convert, he resolved to preach; and was graduated at Middlebury in 1806, and settled the first pastor of Montpelier from 1809 to 1830. In twenty years the church increased from seventeen to more than four hundred members. In 1836 he was installed in Hardwick, Vt., remaining pastor till his death at M. He was highly respected and remarkably useful as a minister. He published an arithmetic and several sermons.

WRIGHT, JAMES, colonel, died in Duplin co., N. C., in 1840, aged 84; a soldier of the Revolution, a venerable citizen.

WRIGHT, BENJAMIN, died in New York Aug. 24, 1842, aged 72. Born in Wethersfield, he removed in early life to Fort Stanwix. He educated himself as a surveyor. A member of the canal board in 1816, he became a director and a chief constructor of the Erie canal; he was afterwards consulted in regard to a multitude of canals and railroads. No individual did more for internal improvements. He was also a man of acknowledged probity.

WRIGHT, JUDAH, blind from infancy, died in Holden, Mass., in 1844, aged 70. He was a acholar, a reasoner, a philosopher, and a Christian. His knowledge of history was extensive and exact. Yet he was poor, and lived by manual labor and by charity.

WRIGHT, ELIZUR, died in Tallmadge, Ohio, Dec. 15, 1845, aged 83. A graduate of Yale in 1781, he devoted himself to agriculture. In 1810 he emigrated to Ohio with a large family. Much of his time was given to scientific studies: some of his mathematical papers are in the American journal of science.

WRIGHT, SILAS, governor, died at Canton, N. Y., Aug. 27, 1847, aged 52. He was born in Amherst, Mass., May 24, 1795, being a descendant of Samuel Wright of Northampton, who died in 1665. In childhood he lived at Weybridge, Vt.; and was graduated at Middlebury in 1815. He settled as a lawyer at Canton. His various offices were those of a State senator; a member of congress in 1826; comptroller; a senator of the U.S. in 1833 and 1837, and 1843; and governor in 1844. He had many friends, who regarded him as a candidate for the high station of president of the U.S. But he was auddenly smitten down in his strength, showing the vanity of earthly hopes and prospects. -Holland's Hist. 11. 171.

at Belvidere, Ill., in Oct., 1849. A native of and true Christian.

WRIGHT, HENRY, D. D., died at Bristol, | Hanover, N. H., he graduated at Dartmouth in 1837: he attended the meeting of the American board at Pittsfield just before his death.

in

and

Ric

He

pur

cou

ship

dist

His

oak

ter

reta

Hez

ann

deat

1823

to 1

eigh

rank

maje

died

ford

1765

W., near tiona

Revo

aged

Jan.

1758

onel

gress

Conn

ing t

of th fathe

he co

a par

eight

held

lie w

the to

in th W

bury,

he w lum f at sea

land.

1836

Ceylo

ticoti

unde

W

W

W

W

WRIGHT, THEODORE S., pastor of the first colored church in New York city, died March 25, 1847, aged 49.

WRIGHT, EUNICE, widow of Moses W. of Northampton, Mass., died in 1851, aged 98.

WRIGHT, FANNY D'ARUSMONT, died at Cincinnati Dec. 14, 1852, aged 57. If her name shall be remembered, it will be as that of a woman who was an enemy of God's pure and heavenly truth. She published fables and tracts: also, lectures complete, 1836.

WRIGHT, ALFRED, missionary among the Choctaws, died at Wheelock March 31, 1853, aged 65. Born in Columbia, Conn., he graduated at Williams college in 1812, at Andover seminary in 1814; he went on his mission to Mayhew in 1821, to Wheelock in 1832. His wife was Harriet Bunce of Charleston, S. C. He had labored more than thirty years among the Indians, and was eminently useful. It was his wish to finish the translation of the bible on which he had long toiled. His industry was incessant, rising at five o'clock for his work. His end was peaceful, triumphant. Since the church was founded in 1822 five hundred seventy-seven persons were " inter'.

WRIGHT. H. . DAR, died at Chicago in 1854, aged 67. The daughter of Stephen Dewey of Sheffield, Mass., she married, in 1812, Jonathan Wright, who removed to Chicago in 1834, and was ruling elder in the first church till his death in 1840. In 1842 she united with the second church. Her life was a life of devotion and faith, of charity and good works; her end was peace, amid the tears of those who reverenced and loved a woman of great excellence.

WRIGHT, JOHN, one of the first preachers of the gospel in Ohio, died in Delphi Aug. 31, 1854, aged 78. He was licensed to preach in 1802.

WYCOFF, HENRY J., an eminent merchant of New Jersey, died in 1839, aged 72; a zealous friend of benevolent institutions.

WYLIE, ANDREW, D. D., died in Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 11, 1851, aged 62. He had been president of Jefferson college, also of Washington college, and for the last twenty-three years president of Indiana State university at Bloomington. He had done much for good morals and sound learning.

WYLIE, SAMUEL BROWN, D. D., died at Philadelphia Oct. 14, 1852, aged 80; for fifty-three years pastor of the first Reformed church. He had been professor of ancient languages in the university of Pennsylvania. He was eminent in oriental, classical, and general literature, a good WRIGHT, ROYAL N., a home missionary, died teacher, a learned theologian, a philanthropist, WYLLIS, GEORGE, governor of Connecticut | 1844. He was buried in the deep. His widow in 1642, came from England to Hartford in 1638. and died in March, 1644. He was the son of Richard of Fenny-Compton in Warwickshire. He was eminently pious, and, from regard to the purity of divine worship, left a fine estate in the county of Warwick and encountered the hardships of the wilderness. His descendants are distinguished in the civil history of Connecticut. His son, Samuel, died May 30, 1709; the charter in the time of Andros was concealed in a hollow oak, standing until August, 1856, called "charter oak." Hezekiah, the son of Samuel, was secretary, and died in 1734. George, the son of Hezekiah, died April 24, 1796, aged 85, being annually chosen secretary sixty-one years till his death. Samuel, the son of George, died June 9, 1823, aged 85. He also was secretary from 1796 to 1809, - the family holding the office ninetyeight successive years. He was, esides, in the rank of colonel, a soldier of the Revolution, and major-general of the militia. Col. Hezekiah W. died in April, 1827, aged 80.

n

d uer

to

is

Iе

he

iis

on

as

lis

:ch

cn

54,

of

an ind ath

ond

ith,

ace,

ved

s of 854, hant

ilous

ing-

been hing-

years

oom-

s and

Phil-

three

. He

n the

ent in good

ropist,

WYLLIS, HEZEKIAH, colonel, died at Hartford in 1827, aged 80. He graduated at Yale in 1765. He was the last of the family of George W., who died aged 86, and three of whose sons, near 1817, died aged 80 or upwards.

WYLLY, RICHARD, colonel, an old Revolutionary officer, died at Savannah in 1801.

WYLLYS, SAMUEL, general, a patriot of the Revolution, died at Hartford, Conn., in 1823, aged 84. The son of George W., he was born Jan. 15, 1739; graduated at Yale college in 1758; and in 1775 was appointed lieutenant-colonel in Spencer's regiment. In Jan., 1775, congress appointed him colonel of a regiment in the Connecticut line, in which capacity he served during the war. He was afterwards major-general of the militia. In May, 1796, he succeeded his father as the secretary of State, in which office he continued till 1809, when in consequence of a paralytic affection he resigned. For ninetyeight years he and his father and grandfather held the office of secretary, and that in a republic where the elections were annual. He was of the tenth generation from Richard W. of Napton, in the reign of Henry VIII.

WYMAN, Rufus, M. D., died in 1842 at Roxbury, aged 64. A graduate of Harvard in 1799, he was long superintendent of the M'Lean asylum for the insane in Somerville.

WYMAN, ROBERT, missionary at Ceylon, died at sea Jan. 13, 1845, aged 30. Born in Cumberland, Me., he graduated at Bowdoin college in 1836, and, after studying theology, embarked for Ceylon in Oct., 1841. He was a teacher in Batticotta seminary. Ill health compelled him to arrived at Boston May 4.

WYMAN, THOMAS W., a captain in the U. S. navy, died in Florence, Italy, in 1854, aged about 64. He entered the navy in 1810; was made captain in 1842; was faithful in the discharge of his duties and was highly esteemed.

WYNKOOP, PETER S., died in Hudson Nov. 1, 1848, aged 62; pastor at Blooming Grove. He was first settled at Madison, then at Hyde Park; and was a faithful minister .- N. Y. Obserrer, Nov. 18.

WYNNE, J. H., published a general history of the British empire in America, two vols. 8vo.,

WYTHE, GEORGE, chancellor of Virginia, and a distinguished friend of his country, died June 8, 1806, aged 80. He was born in the county of Elizabeth city in 1725. His father was a respectable farmer, and his mother was a woman of uncommon knowledge and strength of mind. She taught the Latin lunguage, with which she was intimately acquainted, and which she spoke fluently, to her son; but his education was in other respects very much neglected. His parents having died before he attained the age of twentyone years, like many unthinking youths he commenced a career of dissipation and intemperance, and did not disengage himself from it before he reached the age of thirty. He then bitterly lamented the loss of those nine years of his life, and of the learning which, during that period, he might have acquired. But never did any man more effectually redeem his time. From the moment when he resolved on reformation, he devoted himself most intensely to his studies. Without the assistance of any instructor he acquired an accurate knowledge of the Greek, and he read the best authors in that as well as in the Latin language. He made himself also a profound lawyer, becoming perfectly versed in the civil and common law, and in the statutes of The wild and Great Britain and Virginia. thoughtless youth was now converted into a sedate and prudent man, delighting entirely in literary pursuits. When the time arrived which Heaven had destined for the separation of the wide, confederated republic of America from the dominion of Great Britain, he was one of the instruments in the hand of Providence for accomplishing that great work. He took a decided part in the very first movements of opposition. Not content merely to fall in with the wishes of his fellow-citizens, he assisted in persuading them not to submit to British tyranny. With his pupil and friend, Thomas Jefferson, he roused the people to resistance. As the controversy grew warm, his zeal became proportionably fervent. undertake a voyage to the United States, Dec. 27, Before the war commenced, he was elected a member of the Virginia assembly. After having resided in Williamsburgh he accepted the profesbeen for some time speaker of the house of burgesses, he was sent by the members of that body as one of their delegates to the congress, which assembled May 18, 1775, and did not separate until it had declared the independence of America. In that most enlightened and patriotic assembly he possessed no small share of influence. He was one of those who signed the memorable declaration, by which the heroic legislators of this country pledged "their lives, their fortunes, and their spered honor" to maintain and defend its violated rights. By a resolution of the general assembly of Virginia, dated Nov. 5, 1776, he and Jeiferson, Pendleton, Mason, and T. L. Lee were appointed a committee to revise the laws of the commonwealth. This was a work of very great labor and difficulty. The three first prosecuted their task with indefatigable activity and zeal, and, June 18, 1779, made a report of one hundred and twenty-six bills, which they had prepared. This report showed an intimate knowledge of the great principles of legislation, and reflected the highest honor upon those who formed it. The people of Virginia are indebted to it for almost all the best parts of their present code of laws. Among the changes then made in the monarchical system of jurisprudence which had been in force, the most important were effected by the act abolishing the right of primogeniture, and directing the real estate of persons dying intestate to be equally divided among their children, or other relations; by the act for regulating conveyances, which converted all estates in tail into fees simple, and thus destroyed one of the supports of the proud and overbearing distinctions of particular families; and finally by the act for the establishment of religious freedom.

After finishing the task of new modelling the laws, he was employed to carry them into effect according to their true intent and spirit, by being placed in the difficult office of judge of a court of equity. He was appointed one of the three judgea of the high court of chancery, and afterwards sole chancellor of Virginia, in which station he continued until the day of his death, during a period of more than twenty years. His extraordinary disinterestedness and patriotism were now most conspicuously displayed. Although the salary allowed him by the commonwealth was extremely scanty, yet he contentedly lived upon it, even in the expensive city of Richmond, and devoted his whole time to the service of his country. With that contempt of wealth which so remarkably distinguished him from other men, he made a present of one-half of his land in Elizabeth city to his nephew, and the purchase money of the remainder, which he sold, was not paid him for many years. While he sorship of law in the college of William and Mary, but resigned it when his duties as a chancellor required his removal to Richmond. Ilis resources were therefore small; yet with his liberal and charitable disposition he continued, by means of that little, to do much good, and always to preserve his independence. This he accomplished by temperance and economy.

He was a member of the Virginia convention, which in June, 1788, considered the proposed constitution of the United States. During the debates he acted for the most part as chairman. Being convinced that the confederation was defective in the energy necessary to preserve the union and liberty of America, this venerable patriot, then beginning to bow under the weight of years, rose in the convention, and exerted his voice, almost too feeble to be heard, in contending for a system, on the acceptance of which he conceived the happiness of his country to depend. He was ever attached to the constitution, on account of the principles of freedom and justice which it contained; and in every change of affairs he was stendy in supporting the rights of man. His political opinions were always firmly republican. Though in 1798 and 1799 he was opposed to the measures which were adopted in the administration of President Adams, and reprobated the alien and sedition laws, and the raising of the army; yet he never yielded a moment to the rancor of party spirit, nor permitted the difference of opinion to interfere with his private friendships. He presided twice successively in the college of electors in Virginia, and twice voted for a president whose political principles coincided with his own. After a short but very excruciating sickness he died. It was supposed that he was poisoned; but the person suspected was acquitted by a jury of his countrymen. By his last will and testament he bequeathed his valuable library and philosophical apparatus to his friend, Mr. Jefferson, and distributed the remainder of his little property among the grandchildren of his sister, and the slaves whom he had

YALE, ELIHU, the principal benefactor of Yale college, died in Wales July 8, 1721, aged 73. He was born at New Haven in 1648, and at the age of ten years went to England, and about the year 1678 to the East Indies, where he acquired a large estate, was made governor of fort St. George, and married an Indian lady of fortune. After his return to London he was chosen governor of the East India company, and made those donations to the college in his native town, which induced the trustees to bestow on it the name of Yale.

YALE, LE ROY MILTON, M. D., died at Holmes'

Hole receiv 1829. YA

N. Y. in Le settle ploye name them was n

YA Conn. he gr ordair the n then 1 paraly peran vals, t church 1828. nation Hawle Adelp on a Hyde ters o Annai

YA: Va., i respec ÝΑ phis, T Repor

YA

sego c a nati

duced

Enqui YA. N. J. respec ÝΑ

died 8

Schen ns a la chairn Under assiste judge tice which memb and re an acc

YA died a judge gover.

Hole in Tisbury, Martha's Vineyard, in 1849. He received his medical degree from Harvard in 1829.

YALE, ELISHA, D. D., minister of Kingsboro', N. Y., died Jan. 9, 1853, aged 72. He was born in Lee. He had been nearly fifty years in K., settled over a very industrious people, chiefly employed in the manufacture of gloves; hence the name of a new village, Gloversville. He trained them to regular and remarkable beneficence. He was a most faithful and excellent minister.

e

e

e ıt

is

g

d.

n ce

rs

n.

li.

ed

ro-

ng

to lif-

ate

in ted

inery

sed

ted

Вy

val-

his

hil-

nad

ale

73.

the ant

he

r of

r of

che-

and

tive

n it

mes'

YALE, CYRUS, minister of New Hartford, Conn., died in 1854, aged 65. Born in Lee, Mass. he graduated at Williams college in 1811; was ordained in 1814; dismissed in 1834, and became the minister of Ware for three years, and was then re-settled in New Hartford till his death by paralysis. He was zealous in the eause of temperance and peace. As the fruits of four revivals, three hundred and thirty persons joined his church. He wrote a memoir of Rev. J. Hallock. 1828. He also published a sermon at the ordination of II. Goodwin; on the death of S. E. Hawley; at the funeral of a child; before the Adelphic society; on erecting a meeting-house; on a living faith; at thanksgiving; life of A. Hyde; to consociation, 1849; sketches of ministers of Litchfield county, 1852. - Sprague's YALES, WILLIAM, Dr., died at Morris, Otsego co., N. Y., April 7, 1857, aged 90. He was a native of England, and was the first who introduced vaccination in the United States.

YANCEY, MARY, Mrs., died in Louisa county, Va., in 1840, aged 100; leaving a numerous, respectable offspring.

YANCEY, ROBERT Y., an editor, died in Memphis, Tenn., in 1852, aged 46. He published the Reporter at Somerville, and at M. the Eagle and Enquirer, and then the Southerner.

YARROW, THOMAS, Dr., died at Sharpetown, N. J., in 1841; an aged physician and much respected citizen.

YATES, Robert, chief justice of New York, died Sept. 9, 1801, aged 63. He was born at Schenectady in Jan., 1738, and became eminent as a lawyer in Albany. In 1776 and 1777 he was chairman of the committee for military operations. Under the constitution of the State, which he assisted in framing in 1777, he was appointed a judge of the supreme court. He was chief justice from 1790 till 1798. Of the convention which formed the federal constitution he was a member. For his many virtues he was esteemed, and respected as an upright, learned judge, and an accomplished scholar.

YATES, Joseph C., governor of New York, died at Schenectady March 19, 1837. He was a judge of the supreme court of New York, and governor from 1822 to 1825.

YATES, Andrew, D. D., died in 1844. He graduated at Yale in 1794, and was professor of logic and ethics at Schenectady from 1814 to 1825.

YEATES, JASPER, judge, a patriat of the Revolution, died March 14, 1817. He was a member of Lancaster county committee of correspondence, Penn., in 1774, and of the convention which ratified the constitution of the United States in 1788. He was a judge of the supremo court of Pennsylvania from 1791 till his death at Lancaster. He was a man of sound judgment and great industry and faithfulness in his office. He published reports of cases in the supreme court of Pennsylvania, 1817.

YORK, ISAAC, a Revolutionary soldier, died in Standish, Me., in 1846, aged 89; the oldest inhabitant born in S.

YOUNG, HENRY, general, died in King and Queen's county, Va., in 1817, aged 75. He was a Revolutionary officer.

YOUNG, DANIEL, minister of a German reformed church in Augusta, Ga., died in 1831. He was also a professor in York seminary.

YOUNG, SAMUEL, Dr., died in Hagerstown, Md., in 1838, aged 99; a man much respected. YOUNG, JOHN, governor of New York, died at New York in April, 1852, aged 50; assistant treasurer of the United States at New York. He was a member of congress in 1841-3 and governor in 1847-9.

YOUNG, SAMUEL, died in Ballston, N. Y., in 1850, aged 71; a man of political distinction, having sustained many offices in the State of New York. He was born in Lénox, Mass. For a long period he was either a representetive or senator in the State legislature. One of the board of canal commissioners in 1817, he continued till the completion of the Eric canal. He was also of the board of regents of the university. He was a man of a simple taste, honest, fearless, indomitable, of high talents. After the age of sixty he studied several modern languages. He loved his books, his garden, and the society of the young.

YOUNG, ALEXANDER, D. D., died in Boston March 16, 1854, aged 53. He was the son of Alexander Young, a printer, and born in Boston; he graduated at Harvard in 1820; was settled over the sixth church in Boston as the successor of Dr. Greenwood, Jan. 19, 1825. He published a sermon on sins of the tongue, 1829; and several works of great value to all readers, who are making inquiry concerning the early history of New England, namely, chronicles of the Pilgrim fathers of the colony of Plymouth; also chronicles of the first planters of Massachusetts.

YOUNG, HENDERSON, judge of the sixth judicial circuit of Kentucky, died in 1854.

YOUNGMAN, JOHN GEORGE, a Moravian missionary, was first employed among the Mohegans in Connecticut, and afterwards among the Delawares on the Susquehannah, and in the western country. He died at Bethlehem in July, 1808, aged 87.

YOUNGS, John, the first minister in Southhold, L. I., had been a minister in Hingham, England, but came to this country with a part of his church in 1040, and in Oct. commenced the settlement of S. He died in 1672, aged 73. His son, John, colonel and sheriff of the county, died in 1688, aged about 64. His brother, Benjamin, and others of the name were judges of the common plea-

YOUNGS, SAMUEL, a soldier of the Revolution, died at Irving, N. Y., in 1839, aged 79. After the war he studied law, and was surrogate, and was much respected.

YUMMANUM, a Pequot Indian, the last sachem of the tribe at Nihantie in Lyme, Conn., died about 1740.

ZABRISKIE, John, a minister, died at Millstone, N. J., in 1850, aged 72. ZEISBERGER, DAVID, a Moravian missionary among the Indians of North America, died in 1808, aged 87. He was a native of Moravin, in Germany, whence his parents emigrated to Herrnhut in Upper Lusatia, for the sake of religious liberty. He was born in 1721. In 1738 he came to Georgia, where some of his brethren had begun a settlement, that they might preach the gospel to the Creeks. Thence he removed to Pennsylvania, and assisted in the commencement of the settlements of Bethlehem and Nazareth. From 1746 he was for sixty-two years a missionary among the Indians. Perhaps no man ever preached the gospel so long among them. and amidst so many trials and hardships. He was one of the oldest white settlers in the State of Ohio. In the last forty years of his life he only paid two visits to his friends in the Atlantic States. His last journey to Bethlehem was in 1781. He died at Goshen, on the river Muskingum, in Ohio. He was a man of small stature, with a cheerful countenance, of a cool, intrepid spirit, with a good understanding and sound judgment. His portrait is prefixed to Heekewelder's narrative. Amidst all his privations and dangers he was never known to complain, nor ever regretted that he had engaged in the cause of the Redeemer. He would never consent to receive a salary, although he deemed it proper for some missionaries. He trusted in his Lord for the necessaries of life, and he looked to the future world for his reward. Free from selfishness, a spirit of universal love filled his bosom. A more perfect character has seldom been exhibited on the earth.

It is a melancholy fact, that he suffered more from white men, called Christians, by reason of their selfishness, and depravity, and hostility to the gospel, than from the Indians. In 1745, on his journey towards the five nations, he was arrested at Albany with Mr. Post, and after much abuse, imprisoned seven weeks in the city of New York. At last he was declared innocent of any treasonable views, and was liberated. At one time a plot was laid by one Girty, an English agent, or trader at Sandusky, to procure his scalp, and nearly succeeded.

In March, 1782, between ninety and one hundred of the Christian Indians at Gnadenhutten, on the Muskingum, were massacred by a party of whites from the settlements on the Ohio. The immediate cause of this massacre was the murder of a woman and child by some Sandusky warriors, in which, however, it is incredible that the whites could have thought the Christian Indians were implicated. The party found the Indians at work in a corn-field, and hailed them as friends, and offered to protect them from their enemies, and even called them good Christians. When they were secured, it was told them that they must die. Begging for a short delay, that they might prepare for death, they fell on their knees and prayed to their God and Saviour, and sang his praises, and then kissed each other with a flood of tears mingled with lofty Christian hope. Some of the party remonstrated against what was proposed, but it being in vain, withdrew to a distance, wringing their 1 saying they were innocent of the blood which was to be shed. Then one of the white monsters began the work of death. Seizing a cooper's mullet, he knocked in the head fourteen unresisting victims one after another, and then handed the instrument to a brother mouster, saying, "I think I have done pretty well!" More than ninety men, women, and children, were killed and scalped, when the murderers, having set fire to the houses, and scalped their victims, went off shouting and yelling. Such a foul and horrible deed cannot be found in the page of history. The object was the plunder of eighty horses, of furs, and other property of these peaceable Indians. Of these victims, sixty-two were grown persons, one-third of whom were women; thirtyfour were children. Two of them had been members of David Brainerd's church in New Jersey. The leader of this horrible party had the name of Williamson. Two months afterwards he attacked the warrior Indians at Sandusky, and was defeated. Col. Crawford was taken prisoner, and the savages, in retaliation, tied him to a stake and put him to death by various tortures; under which he was tauntingly asked, how he felt, and whether they did as well to him They a you wl Had pated the ber culable the da tized a calm d kingun the go times a

In t Mr. Z. to he w patient Jesus, thyself trials;

He

guages

1768 h in Eng man ar pages. awares 1776, 8 mons hundre five hu man ar seript languag Ponces transla last has society ewelder

ZEN

York,

and es establi of som and th from tl kept in drew I phia, tl York t publish admitte publica allow t would well as the dir of not

prosec

to him as he had done to the believing Indians? | manner acquitted. This precedent had its weight They added, "We have to learn barbarities of you white people!"

Y

e

y t

|-|-

r

8.

it

ιt

ir

d

h

n

st

1

8, ch

rs

's

e-

٠d

I

hn

cd

re

ff

le

y. of 11-vn

ty-en

ew ad

er-

ın-

as

on,

by

gly ell

Had the back settlers of our country participated in the benevolent spirit of the Moravians, the benefit to the Indians would have been inealculable. Amidst all obstacles, the brethren, in the days of Mr. Zeisberger, instructed and baptized about fifteen hundred of the Indians. The calm death of those who were murdered at Muskingum is a delightful proof of the influence of the gospel on men concerning whom it is sometimes said they cannot be made Christians.

In the evening of his days, as the faculties of Mr. Z. began to fail him, his desire to depart and to be with Christ continually increased. Yet he was patient and resigned. His last words were: "Lord Jesus, I pray thee come, and take my spirit to thyself. Thou hast never yet forsaken me in my trials; thou wilt not forsake me now."

He made himself acquainted with two languages, the Onendaga and the Delaware. About 1768 he wrote two grammars of the Onondaga, in English and German, and a dictionary, German and Indian, of more than seventeen hundred pages. In the Lenape, or language of the Delawares, he published a spelling-book, first in 1776, and an enlarged edition in 1806; also sermons to children, and an hymn-book of three hundred and sixty pages, containing upwards of five hundred hymns, translated partly from German and partly from English. He left in manuscript a grammar in German of the Delaware language, which has been translated by Mr. Du Poneeau; also a harmony of the four gospels, translated into Delaware. It is believed that the last has been published by the female missionary society of Bethlehem. - Amer. Reg. v.; Heckewelder's Narrative.

ZENGER, JOHN PETER, a printer in New York, died in 1746. He came from Germany, and established a press in 1726. In 1733 he established the Weekly Journal. In consequence of some strictures in that paper on Gov. Crosby and the council he was imprisoned by a warrant from the governor and council in Dec., 1734, and kept in close confinement thirty-five weeks. Andrew Hamilton, an eminent lawyer of Philadelphia, though aged and infirm, repaired to New York to defend him at his trial. Prosecuted for publishing a false libel on the governor, Mr. H. admitted the publication, but insisted that the publication was not false. The court would not allow the witnesses of the truth to be examined; would not allow the jury to judge of the law as well as of the fact; yet the jury, notwithstanding the direction of the bench, brought in a verdict of not guilty. Afterward in England Mr. Owen, he established the first Indian Moravian congreprosecuted by desire of the commons, was in like gation in North America. In 1743 he returned in the trials relating to the writings of Junius. It is to America and to Andrew Hamilton that the principle may be traced, that the jury have a right to examine the truth of the alleged libel and the motives of the writer. The common council of New York presented Mr. H. the freedom of their corporation in a gold box. Zenger's widow, Catherine, and his son, John, continued his paper after his death. A narration of his trial was published at Boston; also at London, with the trial of William Owen, 8vo., 1765. -Holmes, II. 5; Thomas, II. 95.

ZEPHANIAH, an nged Indian at Marshpee, in Barnstable, Mass., died in 1767, aged 90. Ho was the son of Popmunnuck, who was chief of the tribe in 1648.

ZIMMERMAN, SAMUEL, was killed on the railroad near Hamilton, Upper Canada, March 12, 1857, as the cars ran off the track and broke down the bridge over a canal. More than seventy persons were killed. Bern in Pennsylvania, he went a poor boy to Canada, where as a railroad contractor he amassed a fortune. He lived in a splendid style near the Clifton house, Niagara. He was married before his death.

ZINZENDORF, NICHOLAS LOUIS, count, the founder of the seet of the Moravians, died at Herrnhut May 9, 1760, aged 60. He was born at Dresden in May, 1700. He studied at Halle and Utrecht. About the year 1721 he purchased the lordship of Bertholdsdorf in Lusatia. Some poor Christians, the followers of John Huss, obtained leave in 1722 to settle on his estate. They soen made converts. Such was the origin of the village of Herrnhut. From this period Count Z. devoted himself to the business of instructing his fellow-men by his writings and by preaching. He travelled through Germany, and in Denmark became acquainted with the Danish mission in the East Indies and Greenland. About 1732 he engaged earnestly in the promotion of missions by his Moravian brethren, whose numbers at Herrnhut were then about five hundred. So successful were these missions, that in a few years four thousand negroes were haptized in the West Indies, and the converts in Greenland amounted to seven hundred and eightyfour. In 1737 he visited London, and in 1741 came to America, and preached at Germantown and Bethlehem. Feb. 11, 1742, he ordained at Oly, in Pennsylvania, the missionaries Rauch and Buettner, and Rauch baptized three Indians from Shekomeco, east of the Hudson, the "firstlings of the Indians." He soon, with his daughter, Benigna, and several brethren and sisters, visited various tribes of Indians. At Shekomeco to Europe. At his burial, his coffin was carried | French. He was a member of the provincial to the grave by thirty-two preachers and missionaries whom he had reared, and some of whom had toiled in Holland, England, Ireland, North America, and Greenland. What monarch was ever honored by a funeral like this? The sect established by Z. boasts not of great orators and learned theologians; indeed, it boasts of nothing; but no sect has been more deeply imbued with the meek and benevolent spirit of the gospel, or manifested more of a noble missionary zeal.

ZUBLY, JOHN JOACHIM, D. D., first minister of the Presbyterian church in Savannah, died in at the opening of the provincial congress of July, 1781. He came from St. Gall in Swit- Georgia, with an appendix giving an account of zerland, and took the charge of this church in the struggle of Switzerland to recover liberty, 1760. He preached to an English and German 1775. - Georgia Analyt. Repos. I. 49; Gordon, congregation, and sometimes also he preached in II. 75.

congress in 1775, but, as he differed in opinion from his fellow-eitizens with respect to the independence of the United States, he incurred their displeasure, and his subsequent days were embittered. He was a man of great learning, of a vigorous and penetrating mind, and of a heart moulded into the Christian spirit. He published a sermon on the value of that faith without which it is impossible to please God, 1772; a sermon on the death of J. Osgood of Midway, 1773; the law of liberty, a sermon on American affairs,

Allsle Baldy Beck, Birch Brom Bulfle Chene Clark Cleves Cole. Earle, Earle, Evans Fairm Fairm Fultor Graup Green Green Havila Herwi Holbre Holyol Inniai Jenki Jenki Johns Keirn Krimu Law, J Landa Malbo Robert Saril, Savago Smibe Stewa Stuart Trum Vande Werte

Bene Abbot Alford Apple Banni Bartle Berez Betin

Bissel Bond Bong Boyls Boyls Brown Brow Brow Burr, Butle Calds Calan

INDEX.

CLASSIFIED AND SELECT.

Artists.	Page	Page
Pago	Cobb, Sylvanus R	Stevens, John
Allston, Washington 29	Colt, Jonathan246	Stoughton, William
Baldwin, Loammi 57	Cooper, John	congreton, witham
Dantain, Double of the Control of th	2011	Sweetzer, Thomas W
Beek, George 76	resson, Emott	Thompson, Benjamin
Birch, Thomas	rexier, camuel	Thompson, Abr. U
Bronwere, John H	Dixon, Alexander	Thompson, Thomas F
Italians Charles	Dodge, David L	Plant the Thomas P
Building Charles 111111111111111111111111111111111111	Domes Whomas	Thorndike, Israel
Chency, Sech	Dowse, Thomas	Touro, Judah
Cheney, Seth	Dwight, Edmund	Townsend, Samuel
Clevonger, S. L. Val	Dwight, Louis	Treadwell, John tl
Cole, Thomas	Eliot, Samuel	Thornton by
Copley, John S	Posture William Ora	Trowhridge, Henry
Copiey, John S	Ervleg, William	Waldo, Daniel
Dunlap, William	Evarts, Jeremlah	Waldo, Elizabeth
Earle, James	Fancuil, Peter	Waldo, Sarah
Earle, Ralph	Gallaudet, Thomas II	Walland Miland
Evans, Oliver	Claumi Ctarley	Walleut, Thomas
Evans, Onver	Glrard, Stephen381	Weld, Levis
Falrman, Gittenn	Goldtrap, Thomas W	Wiley, John,857
Falrman, Dayld	Goodell, Salomon	Williams, Ephraim
Fulton, Robert	Graham, Augustus	Yala 1911
Granpner, Gottlleb	Hangack Therene	Yale, Ellhu
Granpner, Gottheb	Hancock, Thomas411	Zinzendorf, N. L
Green, John	11 arvard, John418	,
Greenough, Horatio	Henry, Aloxander428
Havliend, John420	Holden, Samuel	Tolonia au
Herwig, Leopold	Hollls, Thomas439	Divines.
HIPFWIR, IACOPOID	11 min, 1 nomas
Holbrook, Ablah438	Homer, George Joy441	Abbot, Abiel 1
Holyoke, Samuel441	Hone, Phillp442	Abeel, John N 2
Inman, Henry	Hopkins, Asa	Abererombie, James 2
Jonkins, John	Horry, Ellas	Andreronine, Sames,
Jonkins, John		Alexander, Archibald 15
Johnson, John481	Jay, Ann471	Allen, John 16
Kearney, Francis489	Klmball, Daulel493	Allen, Thomas 16
Krimmel, John L	Ladd, William	Allen, James
law. Andrew	Lawrence, William	All - Mt 11
1aw, Andrews		Allen, Thomas 21
Lundum, Augusta	Lawrence, Amos	Allison, Francis 28
Malbone, Edward G	Lawrence, Abbott	Appleton, Nathaniel
Robertson, Alexander706	Lay, Benjamlu	Appleton, Jesse
Sarli, Signor	Lee, Francis	Author Bast
Sarii, eigilor		Apthorp, East
Savage, Edward	Lowry, James539	Armstrong, William J
Smilbert, John	Machire, William543	Asbury, Francis 46
Steward, Joseph	Marks, Zachariah	Austin, Samuel
Staart, (illbert	McDonogh, John
Staart, timbert		Backus, Isaac 51
Trumbull, John	McIntosh, Duncan	Backus, Charles 52
Vanderlyn, John807	McLean, Joseph	Backus, Azel
Wertmuller, A. U	Mercer, Jesse	Baldwin, Thomas 57
West, Berjamin842	Miller, Jonathan F	Barnard, John
West, Her Junio.		Darmard, abitd 60
Wright, Mehltabel	Morris, Judah	Barnes, David 65
	Murray, Joseph	Bascom, H. B
	Murray, John	Bass, Edward
Benefactors & Philanthropists.	Mussey, B. B	Bates, Joshua
Tonomicora or Turamentopiana.	Nevins, Russell II	Banton Channes A
	Menney Russell H	Baxter, George A 72
Abbot, Samuel 1	Norris, John	Bench, John 74
Alford, John 16	Olyphant, David	Bellamy, Joseph 80
Appleton, Samuel 40	Parish, H	Benedict, Joel 82
Bannister, William B	Perkins, James	Bentley, William 84
naminister, witham manners on	15 -1-1- 415 - 1 71	Dentity, within
Bartlett, William 68	Perkins, Alfred E
Benezel, Anthony 83	Perkins, Thomas II
Betlanne, Divie 88	Phelps, Anson G	Blair, Samuel
Bissell, Joslah 92	Phillips, John	Blair, John 95
	Phillips, William
Boudinot, Ellas		Battenford, Samuel
Boughton, Penjamin	Plummer, Caroline
Boyiston, Nichoias115	Pomeroy, Jonathan L	Bostwick, David
Boylston, Ward Nicholas	Prescott, Aaron	Boyd, William
Brown, Nicholas	Hedwood, Abraham696
prown, Alenonas
Brown, Moses	Reed, William698
Brown, Nicholas	Reynolds, Miesjah
Burr, Joseph	Richardson, William
Butler, Cyrus	Robbins, Thomas
Butter, Cyrus
Caldwell, Ellas B	Itussell, Thomas
("Ludler, Peter	Sears, Joshua
Chandley, Abiel	Seybert, Adam	Buckminster, Joseph
Clark, Ebenezer229	Sheppard, Moses
All als Man de HZ	Smith Allina 74	Dulet Comes
Clark, Enoch W229	Smith, Univer	5 Bulst, George
2		(897)

Page	Page	Dage
Buikley, Peter. 159 Buillard, Artemas. 191 Burr, Joonthau. 167	Fedinghayan Thundors I 2017	Lyman, Joseph
Bullard, Artemas	French, Jonathan	Maccarty, Thaddens
Burr, Jopathau	Frey, Joseph	Lyman, Joseph
Burr, Aacon	Fristie, Levi	Milewhorter, Alexander
Hurr, Aacon	French, Jonathan 347 Frey, Joseph 368 Frishie, Levi 368 Furman, Richard 370	Macwhorter, Alexander
Ryles, Mather	Gadsden, Christopher	Manning, James
Caldwell, David	Galsden, Christopher. 371 Gardiner, John S. John. 374 Gay, Ebenezer. 370 Gilbert, Eliphalet W. 380	Mailbon James 543
Campbell, Alexander. 189 Canter, Honry. 189 Cannon, James S. 180 Carroll, John 193	they, Ebenezer	Mather, Richard
Caner, Houry	Gilbert, Elipholet W. 3-90 Gille, Sammel. 3-94 Gillet, Eliphalot. 3-90 Goodrich, Elitarr. 3-94 Gray, Thomas. 3-94 Gray, Thomas. 3-94 Gray, Thomas. 3-94 Green, Ashibel. 3-94 Gree	Mather, Increase
Carnell John	41111st Minimulat	Mather, Cotton
Page H Los 901	Charled Wine 9st	Matiener P A
Carroll, John 193 Casas, H. Las. 201 Chandler, Thomas B. 208 Chandler, Thomas B. 209 Chandler, William E. 209 Chaplin, Calvin. 210 Chaplin, Daniel 210 Chaplin, Joreminh 210 Chancey, Charles 215 Chancey, Charles 215 Chancey, Charles 210 Clark, Thomes 221 Clap, Thomas 223 Clark, Peter. 228 Clark, John 221 Clarko, John 221	Univ Thomas. 211	Marcy Innethan 5:1
Channing, William E	Green, Samuel	Maybew Mynorlenge 562
Chaple, Calvin	Green, Ashbel	Maybew, Jonathan
Chaplin, Daniel	Greenwood, Francis W. P	Mct'all, Thomas 11
Chaplin. Jeremiah210	Griffin, Edward D	McCalla, Daniel
Chase, Philander212	Griswold, Alexander V	McCulioch, Thomas
Chauncy, Charles	Hallock, Moses	McKeun, Joseph
Chauncy, Charles	Hardenbergh, Jacobus418	McKeen, Joseph
Cheverus, L. De	Harris, Samuel	McLeod, Alexauder
Clap, Nathablel	Harris, William	Merrill, Thomas A
Clark Daton 900	Hart, Levi417	Merwin, Samuel
Clarke John 291	Haran Samuel 410	Militarion Dillin
Ciay, Joseph 922	Haynes Lemned 499	Miliar Samuel 579
Cleaveland, John. 234	Hedding, Ellish . 434	Milner Janes 580
Cobbett, Thomas	Hemmenway, Moses,	Mitchell, Jc. athan
Codman, John	Henry, T. Chariton	Moody, Josia's
Coffin, Charles	Higginson, Francis	Moody, Samuel
Cogswell, James245	Higgiuson, John431	Moore, Benjamin
Cark, Feter. 228 Clarke, John. 229 Clarke, John. 229 Clarke, John. 229 Clave, Joseph. 229 Cleavelanti, John. 224 Codhett, Honare 242 Codha, Lance 243 Cogwell, James 245 Cogwell, William 245 Coke, Thomas. 246 Coke, Thomas. 246 Cone, Spencer II 228 Cowell, Heny 228 Cooper, William 250 Cooper, Swamel 240 Cooper, Swamel 240 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cooper, Myles. 261 Cornelius, Elias 263 Cotton, John. 245 Cotowell, William 253 Cotton, John. 245 Cotowell, William 253 Cotowell, William 253 Cotowell, William 253	Hart, Levi 447 Havon, Samuel 449 Hayone, Lemuel 423 Hedding, Elljah 434 Henmenway, Moses 424 Henry, T. Charlton 428 Higgiuson, Francis 430 Higgiuson, John 431 Hillian 453 Hillian 453 Hillian 453 Hillian 455 Hillian 455 Honr, Leonard 435 Honr, Leonard 436 Hohrt, Noah 436	Color Colo
Coke, Thomas	Hilliard, Timothy	Moorhead, John
Coman, Benjamia	Hiteneoek, Clad435	Morgan, Abel589
Cone, Spencer II	Hitcheock, Enos	Morrison, William
Convent William 950	Holert North	Mortes (Martin
Copper, William	Hobert John Hoper	Morton, Charles
Cooper Mules 981	Hebart, John Henry	Mountain, Jacob
Corneling Fline 263	Holley Horace	Murdock James 500
Cotton, John	Hollingshend, William	Murdock, James 599 Murray, John 599
Croswell, William	Holmes, Abiet	Murray, John
Cumings, Henry	Holyoke, Edward440	Nelson, David
Cummings, Asa	Homer, Jonethan	Nettieton, Asahel
Cutier, Timothy	Homes, William441	Newman, Samuel
Daggett, Naphtall	Hooke, William	Niles, Samuel
Dana, James	Hooker, Thomas442	Niles, Samuel
Cotton, John 249 Croswell, William 273 Cumings, Henry 274 Cumings, Ass 271 Cutter, Timothy 25 Cutter, Timothy 275 Cutter, Timothy 278 Cutter, Timothy 278 Cutter, Timothy 278 Cutter, Timothy 278 Cutter, Cu	Hoge, Moses	Murray, John 559 Murray, John 659 Murray, John 690 Nelson, David 693 Netition, Asahel 693 Newman, Samuel 695 Niles, Samuel 697 Niles, Samuel 697 Niles, Samuel 697 Niles, Samuel 608 Nortis, John 511 Norton, Asahel 8 613 Norton, Asahel 8 613 Nott, Samuel 613 Nott, Samuel 613 Nott, Samuel 613 Nott, Samuel 613 Nott, Samuel 613 Nott, Samuel 614 Noyes, Junes 614
Davenport, John	Hooker, John. 444 Hooper, Wittiam 444 Hopkins, Samuel 445 Hopkins, Daniel 447 Howard, Singeon 450	Norris, Edward
Davies, Samuel288	Hooper, William444	Norton, John
De With John 200	Honking Duniei	Norton, Anther S
Dickinson Josephan 201	Howard Simon 450	Nott Samuel
Diskinger Austin 303	Howa Nathaniel 451	Novas Inmes 614
Dow Lorenzo	Hubbard, William 452	Noves Nicholes 615
Dow. Daniel	Huntington, Joseph	Oakes, Uriah
Duche, Jacob	Huntington, Joshua	Olin, Stephen
Duffield, George	Ilydo, Aivan	Osgood, David625
Dunster, Henry	Inglis, Charles	Oxenbridge, John630
Dwight, Timothy	Inglis, James	Packard, Hezekiah 630
Dwight, Sereno E	Jackson, William466	Parish, Elijah634
Danis James 220 Danforth Samuel 283 Davopport, John 285 Davies, Samuel 283 Davies, Samuel 283 Davies, Samuel 288 Davies, Iterry 220 Davies, Henry 280 Davies, Henry 280 Davies, Henry 301 Dekithon 301 Dekithon 301 Dekithon 301 Dekithon 303 Dow, Lorenzo 304 Dow, Lorenzo 304 Dow, Lorenzo 304 Dow, Lorenzo 308 Dow, Lorenzo 309 Duche, Jacob 309 Duche, Jacob 309 Duffeld, George 311 Dwight, Timothy 315 Dwight, Timothy 315 Dwight, Serenz E 317 Eckley, Joseph 321 Edwards, Jonathan 322 Edwards, Jonathan 322 Elwards, Jonathan 323 Elwards, Jonathan 328 Elwards, Justin 329 Elwards, Justin 329 Elwards, Bela B 320 Elwards, Bela B	Howard, Sineon.	Nott. Samuel Noyes, Junes. 614 Noyes, Nicholas. 615 Oakes, Urlah. 616 Oakes, Urlah. 617 Oakes, Urlah. 618 Oakes, Urlah. 619 Oakes, Urlah. 619 Oakes, Urlah. 620 Oakes, Oak
Edwards, 71mothy	Jacking Charles	Darker Sound
Edwards, Jonathan	Jurya, Abranom. 409 Jorkins Charles 475 Johnson, Samuel. 473 Johnson, Samuel. 470 Johnson, Samuel. 470 Johnson, Samuel. 480 Kurkinson, Samuel. 480 Kurkinson, John T 496 Kurkinson, John T 496 Kurkinson, John T 496 Kurkinson, John T 496	Parker Vether
Edwards Morents 202	Johnson Wn. Samuel 470	Parker Edward I. 1991
Edwards Justin	Johnson, Samuel	Parkman, Francis, 627
Edwards, Bela B	Kondal, Samuel	Parris, Samuel
Eliot, John	Kinne, Aaron	Parsons, Jonathan 638
Ellot, Andrew333	Kirkland, John T	Parsons, Moses
Eliot, John334	Kollock, Henry	Parsons, David
Edwards, Bela B. 329 Eliot, John. 339 Eliot, Andrew. 333 Eliot, Andrew. 334 Eliot, John. 334 Emerson, William 338 Emerson, Joseph. 339 Emmois, Nathaniel. 339 Emgland, John. 342 Ewing, John. 346 Fenwick, Benedict. 350 Finley, Sanuel. 351 Finley, Robert. 352 Finley, Robert. 352 Finley, Robert. 353	Kirkinal, John T. 496 Kollock, ilenry. 490 Kunze, John C. 570 Kurtz, J. D. 550 Kuypers, Gerard A. 560 Kuypers, Zachariah H. 560 Kuypers, Zachariah H. 560 Larned, Sylvester. 564 Lathrop, John 594 Lathrop, John 595 Laval, Francols. 597 Laval, Francols. 597 Laval, Francols. 597 Laval, Joremiah 519	Parker Edward L. (33) Parkman, Francis. (37) Parkman, Francis. (37) Parris, Sumuel. (38) Parsons, Jonathan. (38) Parsons, Joses. (39) Parsons, Javid. (40) Partridge. Rulph. (41) Patter, William. (42) Patterson, James. (48) Payson, Phillips. (43) Payson, Phillips. (43) Payson, Edward. (44) Payson, Edward. (44) Payson, Edward. (44) Payson, Edward. (44) Pashody, William B. (46) Peabody, William B. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody, Ephralim. (46) Peabody. (46) Payson. (46) Peabody. (46) Payson. (46) Peabody. (46) Payson. (4
Emerson, Joseph	Kurtz, J. D	Patten, William642
Emmons, Nathaniel339	Kaypers, Gerard A500	Patterson, James
England, John	Kuypers, Zachariah H	Payson, Philips
Ewing, John	Langdon, Samuel	Payson, Seth
Fenwick, Benedict	Larned, Sylvester	Darbarty Oliver
Finley, Samuel	Tathran Joseph 505	Danbody William D A 6td
Plahor Ionathan 959	Latheon John 505	Panhody Oliver W B
Fisher, Jonathan	Laval, François	Pegbody, Ephraim
Fiske, Nathan354	Learning, Jeremiah	Peet, Stephen
Fiske, John	Lee, Samuel	Pemberton Ebenezer 648
Fiske, Thaddeus	Lee, Jonathan	Perkins, Nathan
Fitch, James	Lee, Chauncey	Perrine, Matthew
Fitch, Ebenezer	Leland, John	Peters, Hugh
Flinn, Andrew	Le Mercier, Andrew	Peters, Samuel A
Flint, Henry357	Lewis, Isaac	Phelps, Amos A
Flint, Abel	Linusiey, Philip525	Peters, Hugh. 6-55 Peters, Samuel A. 656 Phelps, Amos A. 657 Phillips, Semuel. 658 Pierce, John. 663
Filmt, James	Linn, William	Diemont Innes
Forter Beriamin	Limberton John H	Plorgon Abraham 464
Poster, Benjamin	Livingston, Gilhart R 521	Pomorov Beriamin 670
Fiske, Nathan	Laval, Francols. 507 Leaming, Jeremiah. 514 Lee, Samuel. 512 Lee, Jonathan 518 Lee, Chatucey. 519 Lehand, John. 520 Le Mereler, Andrew. 521 Lewis, Isanc. 523 Linu, Sanc. 524 Linn, William. 520 Linn, John B. 626 Livingston, John II. 530 Livingston, John II. 530 Livingston, Gilbert R. 631 Loomis, Harvey. 534 Lord, Benjamin. 535	Pierpont, James. 663 Pierson, Abraham. 664 Pomeroy, Benjamin. 670 Porter, John. 672 Porter, Nchemiah. 672
Freeman, James	Lord Benjamin 535	Porter, Nehemiah
	,	zorter, zrenemmiritiritiritiriti

Poer Port Present Port Port Port Present Port Present

Page	Page
orter, Eliphalet	Worcester, Samuel	Tantequiggen, Lucy
	Worcester, Nonh	Tectimodi 781
orter, Nathaniel	Worrester, Leonard	Thomas, W
orter, David	Zubly, John J	Vincent, Louis
rentiss, Thomas	mory, man 0.,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	Walsin
rime, Nathaniel S 681		Worumbo
rince, Thomas	Indians.	Vouspanum Zeptraniah895
rondlit, Alexander	Alexander
	Big Warrior. 91 Black Dog. 161	Tomoutous on 1 79
leese, Thomas	Black Hawk	Inventors and Engineers.
teese, Thomas 698 thees, Morgan J 700 dee, John H 700 tlee, Benjumin H 700 dichards, James 701	Black Hoof.	Bushnell, David lice, John H		Coleman, Obed M
dee, Benjumla H	University death Let 194	Cotting, Uriah
dehards, dames	Roudinot, Ellas	Darby, William
Unlay Exp	Renwa Richard 117	Dearhorn, Benjamin295
denards, sames	Brown, Catharine	De Gerstner
tobblus, Abbl H	Brown, David	Godfrey, Thomas
tobinson, John	Bryant, Solomon	Citrest, George todgers, John 709	Burr. Mary. 172 Bushylead, Jesse. 171	Kimball, Increase logers, John	Canonieus	King, William495
Pograma William M	Cannaba	Kyan, John
tolgory, John 709 (ogers, John 710) (ogers, Jahin. 710) (ogers, William 712) (ogers, William 712) (oneyn, John 11 713 (oneyn, John 11 713 (oneyn, John 12 713 (oneyn,	Caonabo 19a Cheeshalteunnick 218 Colbert, Pitman 249 Corbitant 262	Oer, Hugh
Sandeman, Hobert	Colbert, Pitman	Pope, Joseph
Sanders, Daniel C	Corbitant	Pope, Joseph
enbury, Samuel	Coruplanter	Humsey, James
Sewan, Jaseph	Enhance	Street, Henry M
Shurp, Danlel. 731 Shepard, Thomas. 732 Skelton, Sumitol. 737 Sunton, Sumitol. 737 Suntit, John B. 741 Smith, William. 742 Smith, Some S. 433 Smith, John. 744 Smith, John. 744 Smith, John. 744	Coruplanter. 263 Cuffee, Paul 273 Ephraim 342 Folson, David 359 Frayler, David 364 Frayler, David 379 Frayler, David 379	Stevens, Robert L
kelton, Samuel	Fowler, David	Whitney, Eli
mith, Thomas	fledney, Rachael	Whittemore, Amos
Smith, John B	tledney, Rachael
Smith, William	Hawkins, John420
Smith, Samuel S	Hendrick	Judges and Lawyers.
Smith, donn	Hacoomes	Adams Andrew
Inchange Ichahad 9 750	Homer, Emira411	Adams, Andrew
Spring, Samuel 752 Staughton, William 755 Stillman, Samuel 760	Howdee, Sarah	Allen, William 1
Staughton, William	Howooswee	Allyn, Matthew 21
Stillman, Samuel	Humming Bird	Arnold, Peleg 4
Stoddard, Solomon	John 471 Johnson, Joseph. 481 Jones, Peter. 485 Joseph, Francis 485	Admun, John H 4
Tappan, David	Janes Potes 485	Atkinson, Theodore
Tennent, GlDert	Joseph, Francis	Auchmuty, Robert. 4 Baylies, Nicholas 7 Belcher, Jonathan 7
Tennent, William	Jumper. 488 Konkapot, John. 490 Little Turtle. 528
Tenney, Caleb J	Konkapet, John499	Benson, Eghert 8
Timeher, Peter	Little Turtle528	Benson, Eghert
Tuckerman, Peter	Logan	ligelow, Thuothy 9
Wnddell James	Madockawando 545	Halr John G
Wadsworth, Benjamln812 Walnwright, Jonathan M814	Madockawando	Blake, George
Walnwright, Jonathan M814	Mussussoit	Hiss, George
Walnweight, Jonathan M. 814 Wales, Samuel. 815 Walter, Nehemlah. 817 Ward, Nathaniel. 818 Ware, Henry. 820 Ware, Henry. 101 Warbam. 161 Warbam. 161 Warbam. 161 Warbam. 162 Warbam. 161 Warbam. 162 Warbam. 161 Warbam.	McIntosh, William	Bradbury, Theophllus
Walter, Nehemlah817	Mlantunnomu	Brearley, David
Ward, Nathaniel	Miturk	Bryan, tleorge
Ware Hanry inn 820	$111	1 March - Amburna
Warham John	Noah	Burnet, Jacob
Wartham, John	Nonh	1 Hurr, Peter
	Nowequa	Chase, Samuel
	Nunnenunteno	Chauncey, Charles21
Wheelock, Eleazar843
Wheelwright, John	Occom, Samson 61 Ogn-na-ya 61 Ondayaka 62	7 Chew, Benjamin
Whelpley, Philip M. 847 Whito, John. 848 White, William 849	Ondayaka	8 Chipman, Nathaniel
White, William849	(Prono	3 Church, Sabiuel
Whiteheld, George	UMPORA. ,	5 Clayton, Thomas
		6 Colden, Cadwallader D
Wileox, Carlos	Osson	6 Cranch, Illchard
William Invent	Owaneco	Cranch, William
Wiggiesworth, Edward. 850 Wilcox, Carlos 856 Willard, Samuel 858 Willard, Joseph 858 Williams, Roger 859 Williams, Lohn 893	Passaconaway	3 Daggett, David
Williams, John	Paul, Silas	3 Dana, Francis
Williams, William861	Pessicus	5 Dans, Samuel
Williams, Elisha	Philip	7 Dane, Nathan
Williams, Solomon	Pocahontas66	8 Davenport, Addington
Williams, Stephon862	Pomponoho	0 Davis, John
Williams, Roger. $55 Williams, John. $95 Williams, John. $95 Williams, Williams $61 Williams, Selban $62 Williams, Selomon $62 Williams, Etphanet $62 Williams, Elphanet $62 Williams, Elphanet $62 Williams, Solomon $66 Wilson, John. $65 Wilson, John. $65	Pontine	K Day Thomas 9
Wilson, John 905	Puniham68
Wilson, James	Pushmataha	4 De Lancey, James
Wilson, James	Red Jacket	5 Dewey, Daniel
Wilson, Joshua L	Illelisonvillo	2 Drayton, William
Winchester, Elhanan		2 Drayton. John
Wise, John	Robin	94 Duane, James
Wisner, Bonjamin B	Puniham	5 Desanssure, Honry W. 2 5 Desay, Dudel. 2 2 12 Drayton, William . 3 2 2 Prayton, John . 3 4 1 Dunne, James witherspoon, John	Skenondou	27 Durfee Joh
Woodbridge Rapinsola 00r
Witherspoon, John	Sunsecto	3 Dver, Eliphalet
Woodbridge, Benjamin	Sunsecto	73 Dyer, Eliphalet

True
Tad
Tyte
War
Web Whe Will Will Win
Woo
You

Edwards Henry P. Brunnet, Thomas A. Brott, James. Forst, Calciel H. Foster, Jederdinh Golden, Jeseph Godden, Calvin. Godd, James. Graham, John A. Grange, Gheon Greenleef, Simon. Gridley, Jerony.		Page	Pn
Emott, James		Ros., Geo.ge. 734 Ruch, Jacob. 74 Ruthelge, John 72 Regent, Sathaniel P. 722 Regent, John 724 Rewall, Samuel 728 Rewall, Stephen 729 Rewall, Samuel 730 Rewall, Samuel 730 Rewall, Jonathan 731 Roger M 735 Roger M 735 Ruthelge, Edward 735 Ruthelge, Reger M 735 Ruthelge, R	Dummer, Jeremiah
Emott, James	42683	Hush, Jacob	Dunmer, Jeremish Dunmer, Jeremish Dupmens, Peter 8 Dutton, Marthew 8 Duggitt, Thesolore Eaton, Amos Eddy, Samuel Elliott, Andrew Billiott, Andrew Devans, Lewis Evans,
Ford, dabriel H Foster, Jededinh Uniloway, Joseph Goddard, Calvin		Rutledge, John	Button, Matthew H
Foster, Joseph	41611	Saltonstall, Richard	Dwight, Theodore thiloway, Joseph Goddard, Calvin		Sargent, Nathaniel P	Enton, Amos.
Goddard, Calvin		Sedgwick, Theodore	Eddy, Samuel
	1985	Sergeant, John	Ellicott, Andrew
Gould, James,	108	Sewall, Samuel	Ellfott, Stephen
tiraliam, John A		Sewall, Stephen	Evanue, Lewis
tiranger, tildeon		Sewall, Senated	Everett, Alexander II
Greenleaf, Simon		Sewell, Jonathan	Farmer, John
Gridley, Jeremy. Griswoid, Stanley Handiton, Acdrew Harrison, Robert H. Hay, George Heyward, Thomas	400	Sherman, Hoger M	Farrer, John
Orlawold, Stanley	409	Shilurum, Edward 725	Fisher Alexander M 9
Hamilton, Andrew	404	Smith William 741	Fiske, Nathan W
Harrison, Robert H.	415	Smith Jeromiah 745	Ferhous Perrors
May (larger	491	Stronger Ambrosa 750	Follow Charles T () 9
Heyward, Thomas.	429	Stearns, Acabel 765	Foot Joseph I
Hilliouse James A	439	Spencer, Ambrose 750 Stearns, Asshel 755 Story, Joseph 795 Strong, Simeon 767	Pendelta William
Hillhouse, James A Hitchcock, Samuel J	495	Strong Simon 747	Polable fact
Hour Samuel	495	Suilivan flagreta 771	Orace Thomashillas
Hoar, Samuel Hobart, John S	4:17	Sullivan William 779	Origina Valuation D
Haffman Barid	493	Nwift Zonhandah 774	Orleans Thomas &
Hoffman (helen	499	Thurston Charges 797	Oringing William
Holmes John	440	Thurshar Datus ti 727	Organ Lohn D
Hanklagan Pranch	410	Thompson Mudde	Hatter Haten
Honkinger Ingent	4.40	Wildenson William Tie	Fiske, Nathan W
Hermannaridam throdal	4.44	Strong Shucon. 767	Hall Products
Manage Stanton T	4.11	Trucken St. Charmen	Manufa Whatelana W
Houself Street	450	Tuesday Harry St. Clares	Hadrell Dental
Markey Markey	482	Poster Berester George	Harden Forthonny
Incomed bases		Want Antonia	Harmi Planner
ingerson, sared	400	Ward, Aromas,	Manager Land
Hobart, John 8. Hoffman, Ogden. Hoffman, Ogden. Homes, John Hopkinson, Francis. Hopkinson, Joseph. Horsmander, Inniel. Hosmer, Stephen T. Howelt, Bavid. Hubbard, Sannel. Lugersoil, Jared. Lugersoil, James.	463	Tucker, Beverley 802 Ward, Artemas 819 Washington, Bushred 882 Wheeter Lelum	Hakinyt, Hichard
Iredeli, James	464	Wheaton, Laban	Hennepin, Louis4
Jackson, Charles	4/57	wheaton, Henry	Henca, N. M4
Jacob, Stephen	467	Nashington, incurred 842 Wheaton, Idahan. 843 Wheaton, Idahan. 843 Wheaton, Idahan. 845 White, Samuel S. 856 White, Samuel S. 856 White, Patient H. 875 Whithrep, Matted H. 875 Whithrep, James 874 Whithrep, James 875 Whithrep, James 875 Whithrep, James 875	Hewitt, Alexander
lay, John Johnson, William Johnson, Wm. Samuel	4120	Wilson, James	Houghton, Dougiass
Johnson, William	481	Winthrop, Waltstill 873	Hoyt, Epuphras
Johnson, Wm. Samuel	483	Winthrop, James	Hutchins, Thomas 4
Jones, David	483	Wirt, William875	Johnson, Edward4
lones, Samuel	485	Wolcott, Ernstus878	Josselyn, John
Jones, Bavid. Jones, Sanuel Kent, James. Killam, William Kilnsey, James. Kirby, Ephraim Lausing, John Law, Hichard Lee, Charles. Lingeln, Lavi	491	Worthington, John. 888 Wragg, William 880 Wythe, George 891 Yntes, Robert 898	Houghton, Foughers. 4 Hoyt Equiphras. 4 Hutchins, Thomas. 4 Johnson, Edward. 4 Josselyn, John. 4 Josselyn, John. 4 Kaim, Peter Kaim, Peter
Killam, William	492	Wragg, William880	Kaim, Peter
Kinsey, James,	495	Wythe, George	Kemp, John
Kirby, Ephraim	495	Yntes, Robert	Kingsley, James L
Lausing, John			Knapp, Samuel
Law. Hichard			Lafon, Bartindemy
ee. Charles		Men of Learning.	Lawson, John
Ineoin Levi	594	and the mountaining.	Leverett, John
Littell William	527	Abbot, Benjamin 2	Lindov James II
Lincoln, Levi. Littell, William Littell, William Livermore, Samnel. Livermore, Arthur. Livingston, Brockhoist Livingston, Edward Longfellow, Stephen.	.698	Adams, Charles B. 14 Adrian, Robert. 14 Aiden, Timothy. 15	Linsley, James II
Livarmore Arthur	598	Advisor Robert 14	Logan, James
Livingston Brockholst	530	Aiden Timothy 15	Manefield Jured
Livingston Edward	591	Anduhan John James 49	Marsh James 5
Lovefillow Stanban	894	Handston John 59	Marginit Humphan
Lowell, John Lynde, Benjamin	599	Baroiny Hobert 50	Mailah John
vuda Reniamin	541	Barnos Danial II	Michany Andro
March (Thurles	540	Hantman Lohn	Whol Harrie II
Iarshali, John	5.10	Rawbana William 70	White Walter
Baulla Inthon	550	Atoen, Timothy. 19 Anielmo, Timothy. 49 Banister, John. 58 Barciny, Hobert. 59 Barnes, Daniel II. 95 Barteny, John. 69 Bartenun, William. 70 Bartenun, William. 70	Witchell John
Martin Propole Y	550	Religion Lamoure 70	Monotte John W
Martin, Luther	555	Powerly Polyard	Mansfield, Jared 5 Marsh, Jared Marsh, Junes 6 6 Marsh, Junes 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1
dullhows Vincent	600	Bollan William	Morton Nathanial
Valley Desptis		Beck, Lewis C. 76 Belkmap, Jeremy 79 Beverly, Robert 88 Bolian, William 100 Bonnycastle, Charles 191
Mason, Jereminhi, distthews, Vincent. diellen, Prentiss. diellen, Prentiss. dierrill, Benjamin. derrill, James C. dittell, Stephen M. dorris, Robert H. dorrion, Peres. Vicholson, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, Joseph H. Wickell, J.		Dordon Loby D	Mourt, George norm, Benjamin		normey, John B	Murray, Lindley
gerrill, James C		Boucher, Jonathan	Nowman, Samuel P
menen, stephen M		powerten, Nathaniel	Miconet, J. M
iorris, Robert II		Brantord, Aiden124	Paririage, Alden
torton, Perez		Braccio, William	Patterson, Robert
enson, William	603	Brown, Charles B	reabody, Ikivid
tichoison, Joseph II	607	Buckminster, Joseph S	Pearson, Eliphaiet
illes, Nathaniel	608	Hurke, John D	Peck, Witham D
gden, David II	618	Butler, Caleb	Pierce, Bonjamin
leott. Simeon	620	Hutler, Mann	Pemberton, Thomas
	622	Boucher, Jonathan 106	Pemberton, Ebenezer
liver, Peter	632	Cardeli, William S 191	Pickering, John liver, Peter oine, Robert Treat	622	Carey, Matthew liver, Peteroine, Robert Treat		Carter, Nathaniel II	Popkin, John 8 liver, Peteroine, Robert Treat liver, Peteroine, Robert Treat	640	Catesby, Mark	Prince, Nathan.
liver, Peteroine, Robert Treat	638 640 640	Catesby, Mark	Prince, Nathan
liver, Peteroine, Robert Treat	636 640 646	Catesby, Mark	Prince, Nathan liver, Peteroine, Robert Treat	636 640 646 664	Catesby, Mark .203 Chaimers, George .204 Charlevoix, Peter De .210 Chasteliux, Marouis De .212	Prince, Nathan bliver, Peter doine, Robert Treat alne, Elijah arker, Isaac arsons, Theophilus earred, Dutee J inkney, William ratt, Peter		Catesby, Mark 203 Chalmers, George 204 Charlevoix, Peter De 210 Chastellux, Marquis De 212 Cheover Ezaklei 312	Prince, Nathan Dilver Peter Zoine, Robert Treat. Jaine, Elijah. Jarker, Isuac. Parsons, Theophilus. Pearse, Dutee J. Jaikney, William. Tratt, Peter.		Catesby, Mark. 203 Chalmers, George. 204 Charlevoix, Peter De. 210 Chastellux, Marquis De. 212 Cheever, Ezeklei. 218 Clayton, John 299	Prince, Nathan
liver, Peter 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'drie, Elijah. 'arker, Isaac. 'arkons, Theophilus. 'earree, Dutee J. 'inkney, William. 'ratt, Peter. 'ratt, Benjamin. 'rentiss, Samuel.	640 646 646 675 676 678	Carter, Nathaniel II. 1194 Catesly, Mark. 2.93 Chalmers, George. 204 Charlevels, Peter De. 2.10 Chastellux, Marquis De. 212 Cheever, Escklei. 2.18 Clayton, John. 293 Ciffert, John D. 293 Ciffert, John D. 293	Padfold William C
liver, Peter 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'drie, Elijah. 'arker, Isaac. 'arkons, Theophilus. 'earree, Dutee J. 'inkney, William. 'ratt, Peter. 'ratt, Benjamin. 'rentiss, Samuel.	640 646 646 675 676 678	Catesby, Mark .203 Chalmers, George .204 Charlevolx, Peter De .210 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Cheover, Ezekle .218 Chyton, John .233 Cliffort, John D .238	Padfold William C
liver, Peter 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'drie, Elijah. 'arker, Isaac. 'arkons, Theophilus. 'earree, Dutee J. 'inkney, William. 'ratt, Peter. 'ratt, Benjamin. 'rentiss, Samuel.	640 646 646 675 676 678	Catesby, Mark .203 Chalmers, George .204 Chalmers, George .210 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Chevet, Ezeklel .218 Chiylon, John .233 Chilford, John D .238 Colburn, Zera .249	Padfold William C
liver, Peter 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'drie, Elijah. 'arker, Isaac. 'arkons, Theophilus. 'earree, Dutee J. 'inkney, William. 'ratt, Peter. 'ratt, Benjamin. 'rentiss, Samuel.	640 646 646 675 676 678	Catesby, Mark .203 Chalmers, George .204 Charlevolx, Peter De .210 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Chever, Ezekle .218 Chyton, John .233 Clifford, John D .238 Colburn, Zera .240 Colder, Cavadhet .241	Padfold William C
liver, Peter 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'drie, Elijah. 'arker, Isaac. 'arkons, Theophilus. 'earree, Dutee J. 'inkney, William. 'ratt, Peter. 'ratt, Benjamin. 'rentiss, Samuel.	640 646 646 675 676 678	Catesby, Mark .203 Chalmers, George .204 Chalmers, George .204 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Chever, Ezeklei .218 Calylon, John .233 Ciliford, John D .238 Colben, Cadwallader .247 Cooper, Thomas .292	Redfield, William C. 6 Rich, Obadiah 7 Rittenhouse, David 7
liver, Peter 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'dnie, Robert Treat. 'drie, Elijah. 'arker, Isaac. 'arkons, Theophilus. 'earree, Dutee J. 'inkney, William. 'ratt, Peter. 'ratt, Benjamin. 'rentiss, Samuel.	640 646 646 675 676 678	Catesby, Mark .203 Chalmers, George .204 Charlevolx, Peter De .210 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Chever, Ezekle .218 Chyton, John .233 Cilifort, John D .238 Colburn, Zera .240 Colder, Catwallader .247 Cooper, Thomas .252 Cooper, James F .292	Redfield, William C. 6 Rich, Obadiah 7 Rittenhouse, David 7
bliver, Peter voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Response, Theophilus, voine, Robert Response, Theophilus, voine, Robert Response, William, Trratt, Peter, rratt, Benjamin, rrratt, Benjamin, rratt, Benjamin, rratt, Benjamin, rratt, Benjamin, rratt, Benjamin, rratt, Benjamin, rratt, Benjamin, samuel, ultima, Samuel, ultima, Samuel, ultima, Lacob, asale, William, ead, George, ead, John	640 646 646 675 676 678	Catesby, Mark .203 Chalmers, George .204 Chalmers, George .204 Chardelvolx, Peter De .210 Chastellux, Marquis De .212 Chever, Ezekle .218 Chalyon, John .233 Giliford, John D .238 Colburn, Gera .246 Colper, Cadwallader .247 Cooper, Thomas .202 Coxe, Daniel .270 Coxe, Daniel .270	Redfield, William C. 6 Rich, Obadiah 7 Rittenhouse, David 7
hiver, Peter volue, Robert Treat, volue, Robert Treat, value, Elijah. arker, Isaac	640 646 666 675 676 678 687 688 690 694 695	Colburn, Zera. 246 Colden, Cadwallader. 247 Cooper, Thomas. 262 Cooper, James F. 262 Coxe, Daniel. 270 Coke, Teneth. 270	Redfield, William C. 68 Rich, Obadiah 7 Rittenhouse, David. 7
bliver, Peter voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Response, Theophilus, voine, Robert Response, Theophilus, voine, Robert Response, William, Trait, Peter rentis, Samuel vitnam, S	640 644 655 675 676 687 688 689 694 694 695	Colburn, Zera. 240 Colden, Cudwalhader. 247 Cooper, Thomas. 255 Cooper, James F. 293 Cooper, James F. 290 Coxe, Daulel. 270 Cuke, Tench. 270 Cuthush, James. 277	Pickin, Timoday, 5 Popkin, John S. 6 Prince, Natham. 6 Prince, Natham. 6 Prince, Natham. 6 Purchis, Sammel 6 Purchis, Sammel 6 Pynchon, William 6 Reatfield, William 6 Rettfield, William C. 9 Rich, Obadiah 7 Rittenhouse, David 7 Rankerson, John 5 Sanderson, John 5 Sanderson, John 5 Sanderson, John 5 Santin, Sammel 7 Smith, Sammel 7 Smith, Sammel 7 Stilles, Ezen 7
bliver, Peter Johne, Robert Treat, Johne, Robert Treat, Jame, Elijah, Araker, Isaac, Arsons, Theophilus, Pearre, Dute J. Jinkney, William, Tratt, Peter, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Julian,	640 644 664 675 676 678 687 688 690 690 695 695	Calburn, Zera. 246 Collen, Cadwallader. 247 Cooper, Thomas. 293 Cooper, James F. 293 Coxe, Builel. 250 Cocke, Tenels. 270 CuClust, James. 277 CuClust, James. 277 Cutlent, 278	Reutfield, William C Rich, Obadish. Ritch, Obadish. Ritch, Obadish. Ritch, Obadish. Ritch, Obadish. Roble, Thomas. Randerson, John. 7 Say, Thomas. 7 Say, Thomas. 7 Say, Thomas. 7 Salth, Samuel. Stiles, Ezra 7 SRith, William.
bliver, Peter Johne, Robert Treat, Johne, Robert Treat, Jame, Elijah, Araker, Isaac, Arsons, Theophilus, Pearre, Dute J. Jinkney, William, Tratt, Peter, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Tratt, Benjamin, Julian,	640 644 664 675 676 678 687 688 690 690 695 695	Colburn, Zera. 240 Colden, Cudwalhader. 247 Cooper, Thomas. 248 Cooper, James F. 299 Coxe, Daniel. 270 Cuke, Tench. 270 Cuthush, James. 277 Cutler, Manussett. 278 Be Kay James R. 298	Benfall William C. Benfall Willi
bliver, Peter voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Treat, voine, Robert Response, Theophilus, voine, Robert Response, Theophilus, voine, Robert Response, William, Trait, Peter rentis, Samuel vitnam, S	640 644 664 675 676 678 687 688 690 690 695 695	Colburn, Zera. 240 Colden, Cudwalhader. 247 Cooper, Thomas. 255 Cooper, James F. 293 Cooper, James F. 290 Coxe, Daulel. 270 Cuke, Tench. 270 Cuthush, James. 277	Redfield, William C. 68 Rich, Obadiah 7 Rittenhouse, David. 7

mbull, Benjamin	Hervey, Elizabeth Page Hinsdule, Abel K. 433 Hitchcork, Harvey. 435	Wordward, Henry Page Wright, Engal v seat
mrbull, Renjamin 801 dor, William 902 dor, William 802 dor, William 805 dorden, David II 820 dober, Samuel 825 dober, Samuel 825 dober, Samuel 845 meter, Noah 845 liliams, Samuel 801 dorden, Alexander 930 down, Alexander 930 dorden, John 844	Hinsdale, Abel K	Woodward, Henry way, way, well with River was well with Miller Willer was well word. Bobert well
Her, Janes	THE HEAR W. HERTTY	Wright, Alfred was the Remark	Host, Ard. 172 Hume, Robert W. 155 Johnson, Maria P. 182	Wynein, Robert 804 Youngmun, John 44 804 Zeisberger, David. 804
datas Nouls 935	Johnson, Maria P	hourgman, John G
polock, John 815	Johnson, Maria P	Zeieberger, David 1911
Hams, Samuel	James, Sammel T. J. S. Judson, Alam. 187, Judson, Alam. 187, Judson, Mondram 188, Judson, Emily C. 488, Kinney, Henry 185, Kirkhmil, Samuel 193, Kinapp, Horton O. 497, Laurie, Mrs. 540, Lavenuce, John J. 598, Lobslell, Henry 532, Locke, Mrs. 532, Locke, Mrs. 532, Locke, Mrs. 532, Locke, Mrs. 532, Locke, Mrs. 532, Locke, Mrs. 532, Locker, Mrs. 532, Lock
lson, Alexander	Judson, Adoniram 143	Petrona over One II.
athrop, John	Judson, Emily C	Persons over One Hundred Years,
904, William	Kinney, Henry
ed. John	Kirkland, Samuel	Allen, John
ung, Alexander	Kuapp, Horton O 407	Affice 16 Amy 35 Andrews, Jeograph 55 Anone, breatest
	Laurie, Mrs	Amy 84
Missionaries.	Lot-dall Harris 200	Andrews, Journal
	Larko, Mrs. 290	Alige, Francis
eel, David 2	Locke, Edwin	Anglio, Henry
anis, Newton 13	Lankwood, Jesse	Arnold Seth
anis, Newton	Locke, Mrs. 552, Locke, Edwin 552, Locke, Edwin 552, Lockerond, Jesse. 552, Lowrie, Walter M. 553	Amirwa, Joanna 22 Ange, Francis 28 Angel, Francis 28 Angel, Houve 38 Angelon, Lydda 49 Arnold, Seth 44 Avedl, Loretta 49 Badger, Hardnel 55 Bartlett, Eilsba 98 Barlett, Eilsba 98 Barlett, Eilsba 98 Barlett, Eilsba 98 Barlett, Eilsba 98
en, Orpah	Lyman, Henry	Badger, Bachel
en, Azubah	Marquette, Joseph	Berries, Joseph Dest
en, Orpati	Marsh, Samuel D	Bartlett, Eilsha 68
ete Charles d	Mayned Pilishal	Bayley, Matthhot domin. Nathan	McLean, Alexandre 850	Belknap, Ezekiel cot, Vincent, 01	Lowrie, Walter M	Bennet, David. 81 Berkley, Alexander. 87
thy, Susan	Miner, Jesse	Billings, Asabel.
ickburn, Oldeon 93	Montgomery, William B	Blokley, Adam. 95
ardman, George D 93	Mosely, Samuel	Birdseye, Nathan urne, Richard107	Munger, Mrs	Blowers, Sampson S
office, Positio 191	Money, Samuel 688 Munger, Mrs 568 Munn, Louisa 568 Munn, Louisa 568 Munson, Samuel 569 Munzy, Mrs 602 Nowell, Samuel 694 Munzy 694 Munzy 695 Munzy	Billings, Asahel. 14 Billings, Asahel. 14 Birdseye, Nathan. 35 Birdseye, Nathan. 18 Biowers, Sampson S. 12 Beggart, Abraham. 10
strend David	Muzzy Mes	Boucher, Charles lor
dineral, John	Newell, Samuel	Boucher, Charles. to Brown, Syphex. 15 Burgoss, Benjamin. 165
drews, Parnelly,	Newell, Harriet. 604	Burnham, Lydia manni 7. (1	Newton, Mrs	Burr, Mary ebenf, Jean Do. 191 essani, 7. d. 185 Hanan, James G. 198	Nichols, John	Burr, Mary uc . David	Noyes, Ell	Butler, William. 17 Butlerworth, Catharine. 17 Campbell, Jenny. 18 Carrier, Thomas. 19 Clast Leads
yant, James C	Parot, Mrs	Butterworth, Catharine
ielt, William	Parsons, Levi	Campbell, Jenny
irgess, N. M. Hall	Perry, Joseph M. S	Carrier, Thomas
Irgens, airs	Pierce, Mary 993 Politinan, William J. 699 Politinan, Mrs. 1939 P. Cornella E. 671	Clark, Bardel. 99 Coth, Elenezer. 21
telek Itrolal	Pol bran Mrs.	Coffee, John
Duer flottl :	P Cornella E	Cole, Coletta
attrick, Elizasti	t r. Daplel
imphell, John M 189	Powers, Mrs	Copeland, Lawrence impbell, Ha 'ey M	Price, Jonathan D
rheil, E. De	Raile, Sebastlen	Cruft, Philip
Janus Janus G # Janus Janus G acc. Barth. 152 gyant, Janus C 154 helt, William. 155 greess, N. M. Hall 152 urgess, N. M. Hall 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 152 urgess, Mrs. 153 urgess, Mrs. 1	Ramsey, Mrs	Currier, Mehetabel
nstle, Angelina	Ranch, C. H	Cruft, Philip. 27 Currier, Mehetabel 27 Invie, Mary. 25 Davy, John 29 Davy, John 29
mmdon George	Rice, Luther	Deems, Adan. 25
hardon, Peter	Hichards, James	Drinker, Edward
haumonot, Joseph 215	Blehards, William	Dunlap, Hugh
herry, Charlotte	Richards, William L	Easton, Violette
endee, Mrs25	Robinson, tharles	Enton, Abigall ondee, Mrs. 258 range, Edwith 277 unnulpgs, Abraham 277 unnulpgs, Seneva 277 jbble, Sheldon 390	Satterlee, A. B	Elliott, Robert ummings, Abraham	Sondler John	Fra Adam
Ohla Sheldon 201	Scudder, John	Eve, Adam. 3 Farrar, Timothy 3 Farrar, Mary 9 Ferry, Bachel 3
odge, Ash	Sergeant, John,	Farrer, Mary
wight, Elizabeth31	Smith, Sarah L	Ferry, Bachel
wight, Robert ()	Smith, Maria W	Flori
dwards, William	8 Smith, Azeriah	Follow, Peter munulugs, Seneca 241 bibbie, Sieddon 391 olige, Ast. 333 wight, Elizabeth 311 wight, Robert 0 371 wight, R	Seudder, Kutharline. 72 Sergeant, John. 72 Sergeant, John. 72 Smith, Savah f. 74 Smith, Marda W 74 Smith, Mardah 74 Smith, Mardah 74 Smith, Robert 74 Smith, Robert 74 Smith, Robert 74 Smith, Edst 74 Smith, Edst 75 Statemer Edwin 75 Stevens Edwin 75 Statemer Edwin 75 Stateme	Footaine, William
verett, Joel S	Summitting Falueter	Forbes, Duncan
lak lange	1 Stelson Ellen	1 Giller John pole, Hexana	Stevens, Edwin
rench, Henry S. G	7 Stoddard, Harriet	2 Gough, Hannah, rost, Edunud80	Stone, Atossa
age, Thomas	1 Taylor, Samuel A	0 Green, Ezra ambold, John	Stone, Arossa. 1	Orren, Ezra Harlow, Lydh Harvey, Beejamin 9 Hatch, Elisha 1 Hatcheesk, Thomas Hightown, Joshua 1 Hills, Blomezer, 9
oddard, Joslah38	3 Temple, Daniel	I Harvey, Benjamin oodall, Hervey88	9 Phoneson Catherine	t Hetelega Kilshia
rannin, Alexander J.,	1 Thomson Frederic U	1 Hightown Joshua rane, Ashuet	4 Todd, Chrissa
raves, Allen	0 Tracy, Adeline	7 Howell, Silas
riswold, Benjamlu	2 Van Lemep, Emma L	8 Hunt, Littleton rout, Hannah40	0 Tracy, Adeline	8 Jamieson, Robert lrube, B. A	3 Wheelock, Edward84	5 Jarman, Jane. 2 Jefferson, Eleavor. 2 Jerskins, Samuel.
ichley, Elunthun	6 White, David	2 Jefferson, Eleaver
Iall, Alanson C	7 Whiting, George B	2 Jet-Kins, Samuel
Inlinday. Albert R 40	7 Whitney, Samuel	3 Jim lamiin, Henrietta4	9 Wilson Mrs	3) Johnson Yosh Lancock, Martina41	3 Wilson, Mrs	3) Johnson, Nogh. 3) Johnson, Thomas.
Inwiey, timeon	Winsiow, Harriet8	2 Jones, Nancy tenaria, Citry	Wioslow, Anne8	[2 bludd, Lols
	M Wood Mrs	30 Judkins, Philip leekewelder John
Hebard, Story	4 Wood, Mrs	80 Karues, Sarah W

Kennison, Jenny	Shaver, John	Doane, George
Kenmsten, David	Shepard, Mr	Donaldson, William
Killam, Hebecea	Shepard, Mr. 733	Dorsey, John S
Kineald, Mary	Smith, Jacob J	Douglass, William
Knight, Deborsh497	Snider, Andrew	Drake, Daniel
Knox, William499	Sparling, Huldah	Dwight, Benjamin W
acy, Jacob	Stanford, Joahua	Eldridge, Charles
ane, Ezekiel	Ton Eyek, Saran	Emerson, Samuel
Angeworthy Content	Therndike, Robert	Erving, Shirley
Arenn Mary 504	Tilplet West 908	Fled Blebord
avne Charles 509	Van Golder Mr. SOS	Visher Joshua ear. Mrs	Vanhining Honry 908	Fiske Calch
easure, Jeseph	Van Vosst. John J	Fiske, Oliver ee, Elizabeth	Wall, Arthur	Flint, Austin 8
e Forge, Henry	Warden, John	Freeman, Nathaniel
emell, Eleanor	Warren, Mary822	Fuller, Samuel
ent, Isaac	Welch, Samuel837	Gallup, Joseph A
eonard, Abigail521	Welch, Sarah837	Gamage, William8
ewis, Comfort	Welcott, Nannie837	Oarden, Alexander
incoln Buth	Whitman, John	Contant, John D8
Jan John 597	Whitney, Barun	Greene Thomas ovelov Houneh 508	Wilder Nathanial 957	Graham Andrew ovejov Pomney / 598	Willey Appe 850	Greene Pater
ovowell, Mr	Willow Charles 859	Greene, Thomas
usk. John	Wingste Mrs	Greene, Alpheus S
Kennstein, David. (1911) (Illiam, Helveca. 4922 (fineald, Mary 493 (Illiam, Helveca. 4922 (fineald, Mary 493 (Illiam) (1912) Kinght, Deborsh 497 (Sox, William 499 (1912) (1912	Thormunk, Nove: 1714 Thorroy, Dorothy 1780 Ulrick, Mrs. 280 Ulrick, Mrs. 380 Van Holer, 180 Warden, John 319 Warren, Mary 2822 Weich, Samuel 837 Welcott, Nanuel 837 Welcott, Nanuel 837 Welcott, Nannie 837 Welcott, Nannie 837 Willey, Nannie 545 Whitman, John 555 Whitney, Saruh 954 Willey, Charles 559 Willey, Charles 559 Willey, Charles 559 Willey, Charles 551 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583 Woodhull, John 583	Griffitts, Samuel P
Inllet, Angeline	Woodhull, John	Harris, Tucker
farshall,ndrew	Woodward, Jonethan	Hart, John
artha	Worthington, Peter	Hayward, Lemuel
artin, John	Wrengman, John889	Hayward, Nathan4
atthews, Mary	Worthington, Peter	Hazard, Enoch4
latthews, Mary. 561 [ayo, Mrs 564 [cDanlel, Archibald. 566 [cDonald, Donald. 566 [cDougal, Alexander. 567		Hersey, Ezeklei4
cDaniel, Archibald		Hersey, Abner4
eDonald, Donald566	Physicians and Surgeons.	Hinde
[clougal, Alexander	4	Houand, Abraham4
eGuln, Samuel	Ames, Nathaniel 31	Holyoke, Edward A4
leIntire, Mrs	Anderson, James	Hooker, Thomas4
cintosh, Ann	Aspinwali, William 48	Hosack, David4
clotire, John	Atkinson, Israel	Hunt, Ebenezer4
iller, John	Avery, William	ingans, william4
inniek, Mrs	Bard, John 69	Ives, Levi4
oor, merdecal	Bard, Samuel	James, Inomas4
loore, Hannah	Baron, Alexander 00	Journes, John loose Samuel	Dartlett, Joshan	Tones Noble W
leore, Samuel	Durton Durtonin C	Jones Welton
Jumber John 500	Paulos Habard 79	Jones Thomas D
1504cr 11anuah	Rayles William 74	King David alghhors Mr 600	Daynes, William 74	Klasam Richard S
owhy Mrs 604	Routty John 76	Kittredge, Thomas
ewell. Henzibah	Reck John B	Kollock, Lemuel
iblet, Solemon	Beck, T. Remeyn	Kuhn, Adam iles, George608	Belden, Joshua 78	Lathrop, Joshua orris, Phebe	Bllss. James C	Lining, John orton, Molly	Bond, Thomas101	Lloyd, James
rr, John623	Bowen, Pardon111	Lovell, Joseph
rr, Isaac624	Boylston, Zabdlel113	Low, James
shorne, Mrs625	Brackett, Joshua116	Maeneven, William J
allote, Joseph	Brigham, Amariah	Maon, James
almer, George634	Brown, Samuel	Mann, Perez
oris, Piele. 611 orton, Molly. 613 orton, Molly. 613 orton, Molly. 613 orton, Molly. 613 orton, Molly. 613 orton, Molly. 613 orton, Mrs. 622 orton, Mrs. 625 o	Ames, Nathaniel 31 Anderson, James 33 Anderson, James 33 Aspinwali, William 48 Atkinson, Israel 49 Atkinson, Israel 51 Bari, John 59 Bard, Samuel 60 Baron, Alexander 66 Bartlett, Joshuh 67 Bartlett, Zuccheus 68 Bayles, Villehard 73 Bayles, William 74 Baynan, William 74 Baynan, William 74 Baynan, William 76 Beek, John 176 Beek, John 76 Beek, John 76 Beek, John 77 Belden, Joshus 78 Bowen, Pardon 111 Boylston, Zabilel 113 Brigham, Australa 139 Breekett, John 111 Brigham, Australa 139 Brigham, Australa 139 Brigham, Australa 139 Brickett, Joshua 116 Brigham, Australa 139 Brown, Samuel 146 Bruce, Archibald 152 Brown, Samuel 146 Bruce, Archibald 152 Brown, Januel 1567	Manning, John mry, Sarah T		Manufug, John. 5 May Frederic 5 6 May Frederic 5 6 May hew, Matthew 5 Miller, Edward 5 Miller, Thomes 5 Mitchell, Annul R 5 Mitchell, Annul R 5 Morro, George 5 Morro, George 5
rklos, William	Rulfinch, Thomas	Maynew, Matthew
rkins, Erastus	Bull, William161	Miller, Edward
	Bullard, Artemas	Mitaball Appel II
neon Seroh		Mitchell Samuel I
nor Successful	Camigain Dhilln	Monro George nuto Maria	Carrigain, Philip. 193 Chalmers, Lionel 204 Cheever, Ahijah. 218 Childs, Timothy 220 Church, Benjamin 228	Morgan John
Ittis Potor	Cheever Ahlish 919	Morgan, John
rce, Robert	Childs Timothy 990	Moulirle John att Enhreim	Church, Reniamin. 909	Munson, Æness
idean William	Clark John 997	Nleoli, John ldgen, William	Clarke Thaddens 229	Noves Josiah
meny William 000	Clayton Joshus 999	Oliver, Renjamin I. nking Catharine. 809	Cleaveland, Parker 925	Oliver, Daniel am, Jeremlah695	Cleaveland, Nehemiah 927	Parrish, Joseph
dlon, Sarah	Cochran, John 949	Peabody, Nathaplel. ilay, John	Coffin, Charles	Perkios, Elisha.
vnolds, Jose in	Coffin, Nathaniel	Perkins, Cyrus,
berts, Charles 706	Coffin, John G 944	Physick, Phillp S
hin, Marlo	Church Bectanin 223 Clark John 2237 Clarke, Thaddeus 232 Clarkon, Johns 2237 Clarke, Thaddeus 232 Clayton, Joshua 233 Cleaveland, Parker 235 Cleaveland, Nehemiah 237 Cochran, John 244 Coffin, Charles 244 Coffin, Nathaulel 244 Coffin, John G 244 Cogswell, Mason F 245 Corcelius, Ellas 268 Corcelius, Ellas 268 Corcelius, Colon 224 Cotton, John 225 Corten 247 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 271 Cutter, John 272 Cutter, John 272 Cutter, John 273 Cutte	Pierson, Abei D
ese, William	Cooke, Elisha	Post, Wright.
gers, Adams	Cornelius, Elias	Potter, Nathaniel
ss. Alexander 714	Cotton, John	Prescott, Oliver imp, Frederic, 716	Cralk, James, (Ramsay, Alexander
vails, Henry	Cutler, John	Rend. Isaac.
many savant Journal of the control o	Cutter, Ammi R 979	Redman, John nford Joshua 791	Dana, James F	Morton, Samuel G. 5 5
nford, Joshus		Dillanta Charles
nford, Joshus	Danforth, Samuel
nford, Joshus	Danforth, Samuel	Ridgely, Charles
nford, Joshus	Danforth, Samuel 283 Dewces, William P 299 De Witt, Benjamin 200	Rockwood, Ebenezer
aam, Jeremlah. 995 diden, Sarah. 696 diday, Jebn. 688 dilay, Jebn. 688 yundid, Jose h. 700 oberts, Charles 706 oberts, Charles 706 oberts, William 710 ogers, Adams. 712 ose, Alexander 714 ralle, Henry. 719 rford, Joshua 721 vage, Mary 722 vaye, Blizabeth 728 avey, Ilanuah. 726 ober, Henry. 726 ober, Henry. 726 ober, Henry. 728 ober, Henry. 728 ober, Henry. 728 ober, Henry. 728 ober, Henry. 726 ober, Henry. 726 ober, Henry. 726 ober, Henry. 736	Danforth, Simuel 283 Dewces, William P. 299 De Witt, Benjamin. 299 Dixwell, John. 304	Rockwood, Ebenezer

Sewa Shatt Shipp Shur Shipp Shur Shipp Shur Spain Spain Spain Spain Than Titol Todd. Town Titol Warr Warr Warr Warr Warr Warr Walch Welch Willia Wilsa Wood Wood Wood

Adam Ailen, Alson, Alson, Arnold Barlot Bever Biesch Brown Clark, Brown Clark, Brown Clark, Brown Clark, Cole, Crate Barlot Brown Clark, Cole, Crate Barlot Brown Clark, Cole, Crate Barlot Brown Coffee Barlot Brown Communication Cole, Crate Barlot Brown Cole,

Page Page	Wigglesworth, Michael 855	. Page
Sewall, Thomas	Wiggiesworth, Michael	Calbonn, John C. Page 184 Calvert, George. 386 Calvert, Leonard. 187
Shattuck, George C	Wilcox, Carlos	Calvert, George 194
Shippen, William	Wilcox, Carlos	Calvert Leonard 197
Shurtleff, Benjamin		Carroll, Charles
Smith, Nathan		Carrol, Charles 194 Carrol, Charles 197 Casvell, Blehard 197 Casvell, Blehard 197 Casvell, Blehard 197 Casvell, Blehard 197 Casvell, Blehard 197 Casvell, Blehard 197 Chambelin, Samuel De 208 Chitenden, Thomas 219 Chitchenden, Thomas 221 Chalteborne, William C. C. 224 Clair, Arthur 21, 222 Clark, John 229 Clay, Henry 232 Clay, Henry 233 Clinton, George 233 Clinton, George 233 Clinton, George 233 Clinton, George 241 Clymer, George 241 Clymer, George 241 Clymer, George 241 Clymer, George 241 Clymer, George 243 Coldilogton, William 240 Coldilogton, William 240 Colling, John 259 Cooke, Siliaha 259
Smith, Nathan 744 Spalding, Lyman 749 Spooner, William 751 Spiring, Marshall 752 Spurzhelm, John G. 753 Sweet, Benoul 733 Thacher, James 787 Thompson, Samuel 791 Titton, James 793	Printers and Publishers.	Carver, John
Spanding, Lymbers 751		Caswell, Richard202
Spooner, William	Althous Dubout	Champlain, Samuel De206
Spring, Marshall	Altkell, Robert	Chittenden, Thomas
Spurzhelm, John G	Armstrong, Samuel T 43	Clairborne, William C. C. 294
Sweet, Benoni	Bache, Benjamin F	Clair Arthur St 994
Thacher, James	Illogham, Caleb	Clark William 000
Thompson, Samuel	Bradford, William 19)	Charles John matten James	Bradford Andrew 199	Chere, John m_43 F91 704	Butley William	Clay, Henry232
Todd, Mil.	Datier, William	Clinton, George233
Townsend, Daniel	butler, Silneon	Clluton, George239
Thompson, Samuei. [713] Tilton, James. 703 Todd, Ell. 794 Townsend, Daniel 796 Tudor, Ellitu. 802 Tufts, Cotton. 803 Teitchell, Amos. 905 Warren, John. 822 Warren, John . 822 Warshynch, Balley 833	Aitken, Robert. 14 Arnstrong, Samuel T. 43 Bache, Benjamin F. 51 Illogham, Calch. 91 Illogham, Calch. 91 Illogham, Calch. 92 Imalford, Aodrew. 122 Imalford, Aodrew. 122 Butler, William. 177 Butler, Shneon. 117 Celeman, William A. 2250 Cumminga, Jacob A. 274 Days, Stophen. 2019	Cliuton, De Witt 240
Tufts, Cotton803	Cummings, Jacob A274	Clymer, George
Twitchell, Amos805	Day, Stephen	Coddington William 949
Warren, John	Dobson, Thomas 204	Colling John Oco
Warren John C	Day, Stephen293Dobson, Thomas304Duane, William309	Cooks Mills
Washington Balley 833	Dunham, Joslah	Cooke, Misia
Warren, John C	Villet Temether	Corninry, Edward H
Waternouse, Denjamin	Enot, aonathan	Cortlandt, Pierre Von
Welch, Thomas	Fieet, Thomas	Crawford, William II
Welch, Archibaid83(Fowle, Daniel	Cushing, Thomas
Williamson, Hugh866	Fox, Justus362	Cushman, Hobert
Wilson, Samuel	Frankiln, Benjamin	Cott. John 978
Wistar, Caspar	Frankila, James	Dallas Alexander I 970
Welch, Archioatd	Gaine, Hugh	Danforth Thomas
Woodward, Samuel R	Hoddard, William 000	D'Antour
17 004 11424 Dalla and 27111111111111111111111111111111111111	Grav Harrison	Dania John
	Green Thuckhy	Davis, John
Poets.	Male Deald	Dayton, Jonathan294
	Itale, David405	Collins, John
Adams, John. 3 Allen, James. 25 Allen, Paul. 27 Aisop, Richard. 30 Arnold, Josiah L 46 Barlow, Joel 51	Dunham. Joslah. 313 Elllot, Jonathan. 335 Fleet, Thomas. 256 Fowle, Banlel. 394 Fowle, Danlel. 392 Franklin, Benjamin. 592 Franklin, Janes. 394 Johne, Hugh. 371 Hoddard, William. 382 Gray, Hardson. 304 July. 305 Hale, David. 405 Hillard, William. 428 Hot, John. 449 Hot, Cherles. 449 Hough, George. 449	Dexter, Samuel
Adams, John	Holt, John	Diekerson, Mahlon301
Allen, James	Holt, Charles	Dickinson, John
Allen, Paul 21	Hough, George449	Diekinson, John
Aisop, Richard 80	Lang, John	Dinwiddle, Robert304
Arnold, Josiah L 46	Hough, George 449 Lang, John 502 Minns, Thomas 580 Moore, Jacob B 589	Dinwiddle, Robert
Barlow, Joel 61	Moore, Jacob B	Dudley, Joseph
Beveridge, John 88	Mussey, B. B	Dummer, William312
Bleecker, Anthony 98	Nancrede, Joseph	Dugmore, John
Boyd, William	Mussey, B. B	Early, Peter 818
Bradstreet, Anne	Noah, Mordecai M	Eston, Theophiling 310
Brainard, John G. C	Parker, James	Edwards, Ninlan 202
Brooks, James G	Prentiss, Charles,	Edwards Henry W 990
Brown, William H	Ritchie, Themas	Ellery, William 885
Capen, Joseph	Parker, James. 635 Prentlss, Charles. 677 Ritchle, Themas. 704 Rivington, James. 705	Ellsworth, Ollver. 836
Clark, Willia G	Russell, Benjamin	Dudley, Thomas 3.99 Dudley, Joseph 310 Dummer, William 312 Dummer, John 818 Early, Peter 318 Eaton, Theophilus 319 Elwards, Ninhan 328 Elwards, Henry W 329 Ellery, William 336 Elleworth, Oliver 336 Elleworth, Oliver 334 Eddecott, John 341
Clifton, William,	Russell, Benjamin	Eustle, William 349
Coffin, Robert S	Southwick, Solomon	Endecott, John 841 Eustls, William 348 Fauquier, Fraceis 349
Cole, James L	Stone, William L	Febber, Janies
Crafta, William270	Thomas, Isajah	Foot Samuel A 250
Davidson, Lucretia M	Thomas, Isaiah	Forsyth John 260
Dinamoor, Robert		Forsyth, John
Fasthurn James W		Free Simon 960
Possenden Thomas G	Statesmen and Magistrates.	Frye, Simon
Frenent Philip	- was a second of the second o	Galllard, John371
Godfrey Thomas 283	Adams, Samuel 5	Callatin Albert 979
Georgia Joseph 895	Adams John 7	Gallatin, Albert
Tillhouse Inmes A A22	Adams John Oniner	Come Physics
Milliouse, sames A	Atlan John	Cultar Print P
Tioney wood, St. John	Amon Platen	City 27
Johnson, william Br	Andrea Whenevel	Cili, stoses.
Rey, Francis S	Analysis Inter	Contain, John L
Knapp, Francis	Armali Games 41	(doch, william
Anight, Henry C.,	Adams, Samuel	GOOKIN, Daniel
Laud, Joseph B	Daudwin, Abraham 56	Gore, Christopher
Lake, William502	Bartlett, Josiah 67	Gray, William394
Leggett, William520	massett, menard	Grayson, William
Low, Samuel	nayard, James A 72	uriswold, Matthew
Lyon, Richard	Belener, Jonathan 77	Griswold, Roger402
Makin, Thomas	Bell, Samuel 80	Grundy, Fellx408
Markoe, Peter	Bellumont, Richard 80	Hauersham, Joseph404
McCreery, John	Beilingham, Richard 85	2 Hall, Lyman406
Mellen, Henry	Berkeley, William 8	Ilamilton, Alexander
Mellen, Grenville	Berkley, Norhorne, 8	7 Hamilton, Paul
Miller James W	Bernard, Francis	Haucock, John
Morell William	Bibb. William W 8	Harner, Robert G
Munford William	Bingham, William	Harrison Benjamin 115
Ochown John 694	Rinka Joseph	Horrison William II 418
Osborn Wellook	Rland Bichard	Hawley Joseph 490
Oamad Persons 9	Riand Theodorio	7 Havno Robert V 499
Dalus Debart W 499	Rowdoin Lames	Hayon John 499
Palle, Robert A	Dowdoin James	O Heisten Joseph 494
Develoral James G	Rowen James	Handrick William
Disks of Edward C	Redford William	7 Honey Datelok
Plumane William	Brodford William	1 100 Jane
Plumer, William	Deciford William	9 1000bonso Tomos 400
nay, william	Danillar Stanton D	4 Charles Themes
Rose, Aquis	Description Character Char	I Wolten Samuel
Sands, Robert U72	Braustreet, Simon	I Honor William
snaw, John	Burnet, William16	Hooper, William
Smith, William M74	Burr, Aaron	O Heather Stanton
Tappan, William B	Burrin, James	Z Hopkins, Stephen
Tilden, Mr	Butler, Peirce	noward, John E
Wain, Robert	1 Unpot, George	z 110ward, Benjamin
Welby, Amelia B	2.0
	Calhonn, John E18	4 Huntington, Samuel 456
	Cathonn, John E	4 Huntington, Samuel
	Bayard, James A	4 Huntington, Samuel 456
Alsop, Richard	Cathonn, John E	Gallatta, John. 371 Gallatta, John. 371 Gallatta, Albert 572 Genet, Edmund C 377 Genet, Edmund C 378 Gerry, Elbridge 378 Gille, William B 380 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Gilli, Moses. 389 Grandy, William 385 Gookhi, Daniel 387 Gere, Ciristopher 389 Gray, William 384 Gray, William 384 Gray, William 384 Gray, William 384 Gray, William 482 Griswold, Hoger. 402 Griswold, Hoger. 402 Griswold, Hauther 402 Gray, William 406 Hamilton, Alexander 408 Hamilton, Paul 410 Haucock, John. 412 Haurjes, Hoeber G 418 Harrison, Benjumin 416 Hawrison, Benjumin 416 Hawrison, William 486 Hawrison, George 482 Hayne, Johert 482 Hayne, Johert 482 Haynes, Johert 482 Highert, Milliam 485 Hieler, Samuel 484 Holden, James. 483 Hillinckley, James. 483 Hillinckley, Jones. 483 Hillinckley, James. 483 Hillinckley, James. 484 Holden, Samuel 444 Hopkins, Edward 444 Hopkins, Edward 444 Hopkins, Edward 447 Howard, John E 450 Huntington, Samuel. 450

Page Page	Page	Page
Huntington, Samuel	Rodnoy, Cæsar	Brooks, Eleazer142
Tutchinson, Thomas	Russwirm, John B	Brooks, John142
Izard, Raiph	Sultanate II Combon	Brown, John
Jackson Innes 485	Sevier, John	Prown Moses
Jackson Androw 466	Sharman Barrer 794	Brown Joseph 150
Jefferson, Thomas	Shirley William	Ruii, John 181
Jenks, Joseph	Shute, Samuel	Burbeck, Henry
Johnson, Isaac	Smith, John	Burd, Benjamin
Johnson, Nathaulei	Smith, Israel	Burgoyne, John
Johnson, Imbert478	Smith, John C	Burrows, William
Johnson, Gabriei478	Southard, Samuel L	Butler, Itichard174
Johnson, Thomas479	Stockton, Richard761	Butler, Thomas
Johnstone, Samuel482	Strong, Caleb	Butler, John
Kent, Joseph	Stuyvesant, Peter	Butter, Zebulon
Wine William And	Sumven Tuesses	Butler, William
King William R 495	Taylor Zachary 790	Cadwallader John 199
Knight, Nehemiah R	Thomson, Charles	Calbona Patrick 181
Langdon, John	Thornton, Matthew	Campbell, Samuel
Laurens, Henry	Tiehenor, Isane	Cariton, Guy
Law, Jonathan	Tomlinson, Gideon	Cass, Jonathan
Lee, Richard Henry514	Tompkins, Daniei D	Champe, John
Lee, Arthur	Tracy, Urlah	Chandler, John
Lee, Thomas Sim	Treadwell, John	Channeey, Isaac213
Jackson, Andrew. 448 Jackson, Andrew. 448 Jackson, Joseph. 471 Jenks, Joseph. 471 Johnson, Isaac. 477 Johnson, Nathaulel. 478 Johnson, Kubert. 478 Johnson, Kubert. 478 Johnson, Thomas. 479 Johnston. Thomas. 470 Johnston. Thomas. 470 Johnston. Samuel. 482 Kent, Joseph. 481 King, Kiris. 492 King, William. 495 Kingki, William. 495 Kingkit, Nebeniah R. 498 Laugdon, John. 563 Laurens, Henry. 596 Law, Jonathan. 597 Lee, Richard Henry. 514 Lee, Arthur. 551 Lee, Thomas Sim. 518 Leet, William. 520 Leverst, John. 522 Leverst, John. 522 Leverst, John. 522 Leverst, John. 522 Jacks, Morgane. 523 Janeola, Borgane. 525	Serier, John	Chester, John219
Leverett, John	Trumbull, Jonathan	Charles Barlands
Lowis Morgan	Trumbull, Jonathan 189 Tryon, William 801 Upshur Abel P. 807 Tryon, William 801 Upshur Abel P. 807 Vane, Henry 828 Van Hensseiner, Stephen 809 Waldron, Helbard 514 Walton, George 813 Walton, George 818 Walton, George 818 Worte, Moslach 824 Wibster, Daniel 820 Wortworth, John 940 Wontworth, John 940 Wulliams, Benjumb 940 Wulliams, Benjumb 940 Williams, Benjumb 940 Williams, Henjumb 940 Williams	Cities Joseph
Lewis, Morgan. 222 Lewis, Morgan. 322 Lincoln, Enoch. 325 Lincoln, Enoch. 325 Lincoln, Enoch. 325 Lincoln, William 229 Livingston, William 329 Livingston, Robert R. 229 Livingston, Robert R. 329 Lidoyd, Livingston, Robert R. 329 Lloyd, Livingston, Robert R. 329 Lloyd, James 522 Lowndes, William 528 Ludlow, Roger. 539 Macon, Nathanlei 543 Madlson, George. 544 Martin, Alexander. 553 Maybew, Thomas. 562 Maybew, Thomas. 563 Maybew, Thomas. 563 Melboweil, James. 567 McDuffle, George. 567 McDuffle, George. 568 Melgs, Return J. 572 Melecol. 572	Vano Honry	Clarke George R
Livingston, Philip. 899	Van Renselner, Stephen 800	Clarkson, Matthew
Livingston, William	Waldron, Hichard814	Clinton, James
Livingston, Robert R	Walton, George	Clinton, Heury, Sir
Lloyd, Edward	Weare, Meshech	Coffee, John
Lloyd, James	Webster, Daniel836	Conway, Henry
Lowndes, William	Wentworth, Benning840	Conway, Robert258
Ludlow, Roger	Wentworth, John840	Cooper, James B
Macon, Nathaniel	Williams, Benjamin864	Cornwallis, Charles264
Madison, George544	Winslow, Edward871	Cortex, Hereando
Madison, James	Winslow, Josiah872	Covington, Leonard270
Martin, Alexander	Winthrop, John	Crognan, Wilnam272
Mason, George	Winthman Fitz John 979	Cumming John N
McDowell James 567	Winthrop Thomas I. 974	Cumming Robert 971
McDuffe George	Wolcott Hoger 877	Cushing Thomas II 970
McKean, Thomas	Wolcott, Oliver	Daie, Richard
Moigs, Return J	Woodbury, Levi	Davidson, William 287
Mercer, John	Wright, Silas	Davie, William R
Metcaife, Thomas	Wyllis, George891	Dayton, Elias
Middleton, Henry		Dearborn, Henry, 994
Milledge, John		Decarur, Stephen
Milledge, John	Warriors and Patriots.	Decavur, Stephen
Milledge, John	Warriors and Patriots.	Decavur, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 303 Dieskau, John II. 304
Milledge, John 577 Miller, Stephen D 578 Miller, Johu 578 Mitchell, David B 583 Mitchell, David B 583	Warriors and Patriots.	Decavur, Stephen 206 Dloklnson, Philemon 303 Dlesknu, John H 364 Dwight, Joseph 315
Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Mitler, Johu 578 Mitchell, David B. 583 Monroe, James 583 Monroe, James 583	Warriors and Patriots. Abereromble, James	Decaur, Stephen 296 Dlokinson, Philemon 393 Dieskau, John II 304 Dwight, Joseph 315 Eastou, James 319 Eaton, William 309
Milledge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abercomble, James 2 Ackland, John D 8 8 8 8 8 8 8 8 8	Decaur, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Diekau, John H. 364 Dwight, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 320 Schort. 320
Milledge, John. 517 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John. 578 Mitchell, David B. 583 Monroc, James. 583 Morrill, David L. 592 Morrill, Juvid L. 592 Morrill, Juvid L. 592 Morrill, Lewis. 582 Morrill, Louise 582	Warriors and Patriots. Abereromble, James. 2 Ackland, John D. 8 Adatr, John 8 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 15 Alex Ethics. 15	Decaut, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 398 Dickinson, Philemon. 398 Dickinson, Philemon. 391 Diskaton, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 329 Mystert, Samuel 329 Wusters, Labu. S. 329
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abercromble, James. 2 Acklaud, John D. 3 Adair, John. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 16 Allen, Ethan. 18 Allen, William Henry. 26	Decaur, Stephen. 296 Dlokinson, Philemon 398 Dleskau, John II. 364 Dwight, Joseph 315 Easton, James 319 Eaton, William 320 Eghert, Samuei 330 Bustace, John 343 Fellows, John 343
Milledge, John 517 Miller, Stephen D 578 Miller, Stephen D 578 Miller, John 578 Mitchell, David B 683 Morrol, James 583 Morrill, David L 592 Morrils, Lewis 592 Morrils, Lewis 592 Morrils, Genverneur 593 Morrow, Jereniah 504	Warriors and Patriots. Abereromble, James. 2 Acklaud, John D. 3 Adair, John D. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 16 Allen, Ethan. 16 Allen, William Honry. 26 Amuerst, Jeffrey. 26 Amuerst, Jeffrey. 26	Decaut, Stephen. 298 Dickinson, Philemon. 398 Dickinson, Philemon. 398 Dickinson, Philemon. 398 Dieskau, John H. 394 Dwight, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 220 Egbert, Samuel. 330 Eustace, John. 345 Fellows, John. 345 Few. William. 350
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abercromble, James. 2 Acklaud, John D. 3 Adair, John. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 15 Allen, Ethan. 18 Allen, William Henry. 25 Amherst, Jeffrey. 33 Andre, John. 34	Process
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abererombie, James. 2 Ackland, John D. 3 Adair, John B. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 16 Allen, Ethan . 16 Allen, William Henry. 25 Amiters, John . 34 Arbucklo, Matthew . 44	Decaur, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dieskan, John H. 394 Buright, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 220 Egbert, Samuel. 330 Eustace, John. 349 Fow, William. 350 Floyd, William. 355 Foison, Nathanicl. 359
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abereromble, James. 2 Ackland, John D. 3 Addar, John. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 15 Allen, Ethan. 18 Allen, William Henry. 25 Amierst, Jeffrey. 33 Andre, John. 34 Arbuckle, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42	Decaur, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon 303 Dickinson, Philemon 303 Dickinson, Philemon 304 Diskan, Joseph 315 Easton, James 319 Easton, William 220 Egbert, Samei 339 Eustace, John S 343 Foilows, John. 349 Fow, William 359 Foilown, Nathaniel 359 Forbes, Joseph 359
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abereromble, James. 2 Ackland, John D. 3 Adair, John B. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 16 Allen, Ethan 1. 18 Allen, William Houry. 25 Andres, John. 33 Andres, John. 34 Arnuskod, Matthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistead, Robert. 42	Decaut, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Diekan, John H. 394 Buright, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 220 Egbert, Samuel. 393 Eustace, John. 343 Fellows, John. 349 Fleyd, William. 350 Forbex, Wathanel. 359 Forbex, Joseph. 359 Forrest, Urthh. 390
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abercromble, James 2 Ackland, John D. 8 Adair, John D. 8 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 15 Allen, Ethan. 18 Allen, William Henry. 25 Amberst, Jeffrey 83 Andre, John. 84 Arbuckle, Matthew 41 Armistend, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Hobert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 42 42 42 42 42 42 4	Decaur, Stephen. 299 Dickinson, Philemon 393 Dickinson, Philemon 393 Dickinson, Philemon 393 Diskaton, Joseph 315 Kaston, James 319 Eaton, William 320 Eustace, John 339 Eustace, John 349 Feliows, John 359 Few, William 358 Folom, Natianiel 359 Fortes, Joseph 359 Fortest, Urish 391 Faster, Glüchen 361
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abererombie, James. 2 Ackland, John D. 3 Adair, John B. 3 Alexander, William, Lord Stirling. 15 Alien, Ethan Henry. 25 Amiers, Jeffrey. 33 Andre, John. 34 Arbuckle, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistroog, Hobert. 42 Armistroog, John. 42 Armistroog, John. 42 Armoto, Benedlet. 43	Decaur, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dieskan. John H. 304 Buright, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 320 Rustace, John S. 343 Fellow, John. 349 Fleyd, William. 359 Forben, Joseph. 359 Forrest, Urith. 360 Foster, Gileon. 361 Foster, Gileon. 361 Foster, Gileon. 361 Foster, Gileon. 361 Fester, Gileon. 361 Fester, Gileon. 361 Fester, Gileon. 361 Fester. 362 Fester. 361 Fester. 36
Millelge, John 517 Miller, Stephen D 578 Miller, John 578 Miller, John 578 Mitchell, David B 683 Monroe, James 583 Morrill, David L 592 Morrill, David L 592 Morrill, Johyid L 592 Morrill, Johyid L 592 Morrill, Johyid L 592 Morrill, Genverneur 593 Morrow, Jereniah 504 Moultrie, William 597 Murray, William 597 Murray, William 597 Murray, William 598 Molon, Thomas 598 Micholas Wilson C 604 Ogden, Aaron 618 Ogdetherpe, James 619 Oggeden, Aaron 618 Ogdetherpe, James 629 Otta James 627 Otta James 627 Otta James 627 Otta James 627 Octa J	Warriors and Patriots. Abercomble, James	Decaut, Stephen. 296
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abercromble, James	Decaut, Stephen 296
Millelge, John 517	Warriors and Patriots. Abereromble, James	Decaut, Stephen. 298
Millelge, John	Warriors and Patriots. Abercromble, James	Decaut, Stephen. 296 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Dickinson, Philemon. 393 Diekan, John H. 304 Buright, Joseph. 315 Easton, James. 319 Eaton, William. 320 Egbert, Samuel. 393 Eustace, John. 349 Few, William. 355 Floyd., William. 359 Forber, Joseph. 359 Foster, Gideon. 361 Foster, Gideon. 361 Foster, Joseph. 368 Frye, Joseph. 368 Frye, Joseph. 368 Frye, Joseph. 369 Galues, Elmund P. 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun. 374 Gates, Horatio. 374
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armotto, Benediet. 43 Asiley, John. 47 Ashley, William 47 Atherton, Humphrey 48 Bacon, Nathaniel. 58 Batabridge, William 56 Barmer 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John. 577 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John . 578 Miller, John . 578 Miller, John . 578 Miller, John . 578 Mitchell, David B. 583 Monroe, James. 583 Morrils, David L. 592 Morris, Lewis . 592 Morris, Lewis . 592 Morris, Lewis . 592 Morris, Genverneur . 593 Morris, Lewis . 593 Morris, Lewis . 59	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John. 577 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Mitchell, David B. 583 Monroe, James. 583 Morrils, David L. 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Genvernen 593 Morris, Genvernen 593 Morris, Genvernen 593 Morris, Genvernen 593 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Millen 594 Millen 594 Millen 594 Millen 594 Morris, Genvernen 594 Millen 693 Morris, Albion K. 637 Morris, Albion K. 637 Morris, Albion K. 637 Morris, Albion 694 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Millam 649 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, Morris, 669 Morris, John 689 Morris, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John. 577 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Mitchell, David B. 583 Monroc, James. 583 Morrill, David L. 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, Lewis 5892 Morris, William 5893 Morris, William 5893 Morris, William 5893 Nicholas, Wilson C. 906 Ogden, Aaron 618 Ogden, Aaron 618 Ogden, Aaron 618 Ogden, Aaron 619 Oggeod, Samuel 625 Otis, James 627 Otis, James 627 Otis, James 627 Otis, James 631 Parris, Albion K. 637 Parterson, William 639 Parterson, William 649 Phillips, John 631 Parris, Milliam 649 Phillips, John 631 Phillips, John 631 Plinger, William 639 Pilips, William 639 Pilips, William 639 Pilips, Milliam 639 Pilipser, Milliam 639 Pilipser, William 639 Pilipser, William 639 Pilipser, William 639 Pilipser, William 639 Polipsert, Joel R. 639 Polipset, Joel R. 639 Polipset, Joel R. 639 Polipset, Joel R. 639	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 44 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John. 577 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Mitchell, David B. 583 Monroe, James. 583 Morrill, David L. 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, Lewis 593 Morris, 1993	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armold, Benedlet. 43 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Matthew. 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armold, Benedlet. 43 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Ashley, William. 47 Atherfon, Huuphrey. 49 Bacon, Nathaniel. 53 Bainbridge, William. 68 Barnerg, Joshua. 66	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279
Millelge, John. 577 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Morrie, Johniel. 589 Morrie, Johniel. 599 Morrie, Lewis 599 Morrie, John 599 Morrie, John 599 Morrie, James 699 Morrie, Lewis 599 Morrie, James 599 M	Arbucklo, Mutthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, Sohn. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William 47 Ashley, William 48 Bacon, Nathaniel 53 Bainbridge, William 56 Barney, Joshua 65 Barney, Joshua 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 76 Barron, Jamos 77 Barron, Jamos 78 Barry, John. 72 Biddle, Nicholas. 53 Bidkeley, Johnston 98 Biddle, Nicholas. 59 Biddle,	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forset, Urinh 399 Foster, Glideon. 291 Frelinghuysen, Froderic 387 Frost. Jolin. 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galues, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, Jun 374 Gates, Horatic. 376 Glibon, John 379 Glist, Mordecal 382 Greene, Nathaniel. 386 Gridley, Richard. 440 Halpon, Wade. 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Milliam 422 Herry, William 422 Herry, William 428 Herry, William 428 Herry, 439 Hilding, 439 Hild
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Mutthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, Sohn. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William 47 Ashley, William 48 Bacon, Nathaniel 53 Bainbridge, William 56 Barney, Joshua 65 Barney, Joshua 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 76 Barron, Jamos 77 Barron, Jamos 78 Barry, John. 72 Biddle, Nicholas. 53 Bidkeley, Johnston 98 Biddle, Nicholas. 59 Biddle,	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forset, Urinh 399 Foster, Glideon. 291 Frelinghuysen, Froderic 387 Frost. Jolin. 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galues, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, Jun 374 Gates, Horatic. 376 Glibon, John 379 Glist, Mordecal 382 Greene, Nathaniel. 386 Gridley, Richard. 440 Halpon, Wade. 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Milliam 422 Herry, William 422 Herry, William 428 Herry, William 428 Herry, 439 Hilding, 439 Hild
Millelge, John. 577 Miller, Stephen D. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Miller, John. 578 Morrio, James. 583 Morrio, James. 583 Morrio, James. 583 Morrio, John. 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, Lewis 592 Morris, John 594 Morris, John 594 Moultrie, William 593 Nieholas, Wilson C. 906 Ogden, Aaron 618 Oglecherpe, James 619 Ogged, Aaron 618 Oglecherpe, James 627 Otis, James 627 Otis, James 627 Otis, James 627 Otis, James 639 Page, John 631 Parris, Albion K. 637 Parris, Albion K. 637 Partierson, William 649 Ponn, William 649 Ponn, William 649 Ponn, William 649 Pilekering, Thouthy 661 Plece, Benjimin 662 Plinchery, Thomas 664 Plinckney, Charles 666 Plessants, James 667 Presect, William 687 Prince, Thomas 676 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 677 Presect, William 678 Randolph, Peyton 683 Randolph, Peyton 683	Arbucklo, Mutthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, Sohn. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William 47 Ashley, William 48 Bacon, Nathaniel 53 Bainbridge, William 56 Barney, Joshua 65 Barney, Joshua 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 76 Barron, Jamos 77 Barron, Jamos 78 Barry, John. 72 Biddle, Nicholas. 53 Bidkeley, Johnston 98 Biddle, Nicholas. 59 Biddle,	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forset, Urinh 399 Foster, Glideon. 291 Frelinghuysen, Froderic 387 Frost. Jolin. 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galues, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, Jun 374 Gates, Horatic. 376 Glibon, John 379 Glist, Mordecal 382 Greene, Nathaniel. 386 Gridley, Richard. 440 Halpon, Wade. 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Milliam 422 Herry, William 422 Herry, William 428 Herry, William 428 Herry, 439 Hilding, 439 Hild
Millelge, John	Arbucklo, Mutthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, Sohn. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William 47 Ashley, William 48 Bacon, Nathaniel 53 Bainbridge, William 56 Barney, Joshua 65 Barney, Joshua 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 76 Barron, Jamos 77 Barron, Jamos 78 Barry, John. 72 Biddle, Nicholas. 53 Bidkeley, Johnston 98 Biddle, Nicholas. 59 Biddle,	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forrest, Urinh 399 Forset, Urinh 399 Foster, Glideon. 291 Frelinghuysen, Froderic 387 Frost. Jolin. 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galues, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, Jun 374 Gates, Horatic. 376 Glibon, John 379 Glist, Mordecal 382 Greene, Nathaniel. 386 Gridley, Richard. 440 Halpon, Wade. 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Joseh 441 Harner, Milliam 422 Herry, William 422 Herry, William 428 Herry, William 428 Herry, 439 Hilding, 439 Hild
Penn. William 933 Phillips, John. 690 Philps, William 690 Phips, William 690 Piekeriog, Timothy 661 Piece, Benjmin 692 Pluckney, Thomas 697 Pluckney, Charles 697 Pluckney, Charles 698 Plumer, William 688 Plumer, William 688 Polit, James 670 Polit, James 675 Prescott, William 677 Prescott, William 677 Prescott, William 678 Pynchon, John. 687 Pynchon, John. 687 Pynchon, John. 687 Rundoll, Glebard 688	Arbucklo, Mutthew 41 Armistead, W. K. 42 Armistrong, Robert. 42 Armistrong, Sohn. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 42 Armistrong, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, John. 47 Ashley, William 47 Ashley, William 48 Bacon, Nathaniel 53 Bainbridge, William 56 Barney, Joshua 65 Barney, Joshua 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 66 Barron, Jamos 76 Barron, Jamos 77 Barron, Jamos 78 Barry, John. 72 Biddle, Nicholas. 53 Bidkeley, Johnston 98 Biddle, Nicholas. 59 Biddle,	Folson, Nathaniel. 359 Forbes, Joseph 359 Forrest, Urish 930 Foster, Gilcon 361 Frelinghuysen, Frederic 367 Frost, Join 368 Frye, Joseph 399 Galusco, Edmund P 372 Gansevoort, Peter, jun 374 Gates, Horatio 376 Gibberg, Edward 279

rwin, Jared464	Porter, David	Women of Eminence.
ames, John468	Porter, Peter B	_
olinson, William, Sir480	Porterfield, Robert	Pag
ohnson, Richard M		Adams, Hannah
	Preble, Edward676	Anthony, Susanna
ones, John Paul483	Prescott, William673	Beekman, Cornelia 7
ones, Jacob485	Putnam, Israel	Bleeker, Aun Eliza 9
ones, Roger485	Putnam, Rufus	Brace, Lucy C11
(alb, Baron De488	Quluey, Josiah689	Bradford, Allee
Cearney, Stephen W	Reed, Joseph	Bradford, Susan
onnon, Beverley491	Revere, Paul	Brooks, Maria1
Toox, Henry498	Ripley, Eleazar Wheelock	Bullock, Lydia16
osclusko, Thaddens	Rodgers, John	('aldwell, Rachel
afayette, G. M	Scammell, Alexander	Campbell, Maria aurens, John	Schuyler, Philip	Case, Mary
awrence, James	Scott, Charles	Caman, Catherine2
edvard, Colonel	Sereven, Thomas724	Colby, Maria Otls ee, Charles	Sewall, Henry	D. Wild Comme ee, John518	Shelby, Isaac	De Witt, Susan
ee, Julii		D'Ossoll, Sarah M., ee, Henry518	Sheldon, Daniel	Dustan, Hannah
ee, Samuel	Shepherd, William734	Dwight, Margarette
lneoln, Benjamin523	Smallwood, William738	Dyer, Mary
ingan, James M	Smlth, Samuel745	Edwards, Sarah
lvingston, Henry	Spencer, Joseph	Farrar, Phebe
ovewell, John537	Stanwix, Colonel	Faugeers, Margaretta
yman, Phinchas	Stenben, F. W	Ferguson, Elizabeth fackenzle, Alexander S	Stevens, Edward	Fiske, Catharine lacomb, Alexander	Stevens, Ebenezer	Fletcher, Bridget
fanly, John	Sullivan, John	Freeman, Sarah
Iarien, Francis	Sumter, Thomas	Freilinghuysen, Charlotte3
Iason, John	Talcott, John
Iason, David558	Tallmadge, Honjamin	Gould, Bulah H
Taxon, David		Hart, Huth4
Inttoon, Ebenezer	Throop, Benjamin	Hentz, Caroline Lee4
deClary, Andrew	Towson, Nathan796	Hinsdale, Nancy
feDonough, Thomas	Truxton, Thomas	Hodge, Hannah4
deDougall, Alexander	Tucker, Samuel	Hooper, Lucy4
dcIntosh, John,	Tupper, Benjamin803	Hubbard, Polly4
delgs, Refura J	Ulmer, George806	Huntington, Susan4
dercer, Hugh	Varnum, James M	Hutchinson, Ann4
fifflin, Thomas	Wadsworth, Peleg	Hyde, Naney M
Miller, James	Ward, Artemas	Jacobs, Phebe Ann4
Iltchell, David	Ward, Samuel	Johnson, Arbeila. fontgomery, Richard	Warner, Seth820	Jones, Margaret
Iopers, Benjamin	Warren, Joseph821	Knox, Ruth.
Jorgan, Daniel	Warren, James	Lake, Mary
forris, Lewis	Warrington, Lewis823	Lee, Ann.
HOFFIS, LEWIS		Lev, Aud.
forris, Charles	Washington, George823	Logan, Martha
Iorton, Jeremish	Washington, Thomas	Logan, Deborah
Inhlenberg, Peter	Wayne, Anthony834	Lyon, Mary
Inrray, Alexander601	Whipple, Abraham847	Madison, Dorothy
lash, Francis	Whiting, Henry	McDonald, Flora
Ielson, Rogor	Wilkinson, James,	Neff, Mary
licholson, James	Williams, William	Qutein, Nancy C
Ilcholson, Samuel	Williams, Otho II	Phelps, Elizabeth
Neholson, John B	Williams, Jonathan	Ramsay, Martha L
lixon, John	Williams, William G866	Reldesel, Frederica
ogden, Matthias	Williams Ehenezer Sec	Ripley, Dorothea
Poles Primeri	Williams, Ebenezor	Rowson, Susanus
Paine, Edward633	Winds, William870	Smith, Susan.
Parsons, Samuel H	Wiles Towns 970	Warner Manage
Pepperrell, William650	Wolfe, James	Warren, Mercy
Perry, Ollver II	Wood, James	Washington, Martha
Plekens, Andrew661	Woodford, William883	Wheatley, Phillis
Pike, Zebulon M	Woolsey, M. L886	Wood, Sally S
Pinekney, Charles C	Wooster, David886
Pomeroy, Seth670
Porter, Moses	Wyliys, Samuel

