Judge Duff said that he had not been able to consider the matter wish to be considered as dissenting from bers thereof, and the comm it. Betore arriving at the verdict the committee took some documentary evidence, and then agreed upon the following as their report and decision:

REPORT.

and then agreed upon the following as their reports and decision:

In other words, it was held that the riparian proprietor has the exclusive right of fishing in a non-tidal river. This proposition was supported by the very highest authority in recent appeal cases in the House of Lords, which is, as Mr. Justice Fisher observed, "The highest Courf of Appeal in the Empire." Having proceeded so far, the next question to be considered was whether there was anything in the "British North America Act, 1867" to change this Common Law right of the subject to fish in a river opposite his own land.

Previous to the Union each Province enacted laws for the regulation of its fisheries, and these laws were in force at the time of the Union. The Union Act, must be held to be the same power enjoyed by the Provincial Legislatures the right to make laws with reference to "property and civil rights." Judge Fisher holds that the power of Parliament to louch rights of property in the fisheries, and does not authorize Parliament to the property in the fisheries. Were it otherwise, the learned Judge argues, the authority is no higher than the right in the ship is no higher than the right in the ship is no higher than the right to the reparation proprisor." Judge Fisher Polds that the power of this property in the fisheries. Were it otherwise, the learned Judge argues, the authority in ships of ship-owners. The right in the ship is no higher than the right to the repartan propristor." Judge Pisher's request be complied with, and that a committee of citizens be appointed to fishing did not already said to contend that it merely contemplated the regulation and protection of the isheries of Canada, in the same way as they had been formerly dealt with the property in the fisherors. Judge Pisher of the committee of citizens be appointed to the same power is sead, and to contend that it merely contemplated the regulation and protection of the isheries and licenses where the exclusive right to the fisheries and licenses where the exclusive and licenses where the exclusive right of fishing did not already exist by law. This the Judge observes was "substantially what the old Provincial law did." Wherever the right to the fish had been sequired by an individual there was no authority to lease. When the stream was in the Crown the license could issue. Now, with few exceptions in this Province, the water streams are retreams.

In the case below.

We have endeavored to perform our duty faithfully, and from the sworn evidence presented to us, we are fully concept by an individual there was no authority to lease. When the stream was in the Crown the license could issue. Now, with few exceptions in this Province, the water streams are streams. flow has been granted, and the proprietors own the exclusive right to fish, so that the act exempts them from its operation With the exception of the Indian lands, and any lands reserved for military purposes, the ungranted lands in the Province are in the Crown for the benefit of the people of New Brunswicz, and the excursive right of fishing is an incident to the property in the soil." Judge Fisher, therefore, holds that neither the British North America Act, nor 31st Vic. Cap. 60, authorizes the issuing of a license by the Dominion Government to fish in the fresh water rivers of this Province. We

The Court of New Brunswick in April last which, although it has attracted comparatively little notice, is of great importance to those anglers who have leased rivers in this Province from the Dominion Government, for the purpose of fishing with the rod. The master came up in the form of an action of trespass brought by the plantiff, Judge Steadman, against Mr. C.

Robertson, the gravamen of the action being that white he plaintiff was engaged in fishing for almon with rod and fly in the South West Miramichi River, on land owned by the News Sootia and New Brunswick Land Company, he was assaulted by the defendant and by another man, the Warden of the River, acting under defendant sorders, and his rod, line and reel taken from him. In justification of this assault the defendant pleaded in effect, that he held that portion of the river in which the plaintiff was shing and the part of the propess of fishing in non-tidal waters in this Province, and that the had a right in protection of his fishing riphes under defendants and the part of mine years from the last January, 1874, for the purpose of fishing in non-tidal waters in this Province, and that the had a right in protection of his fishing riphs under the lease from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries of Canads for a period of nine years from the last January, 1874, for the purpose of fishing in non-tidal waters in this Province, and that the had a right in protection of his fishing riphs under the lease from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to grant the right of fishing in non-tidal waters in this Province, and that this might be tested at the trial before Judge Wetnore, a verdict was extremely a propiector, and as each restrict the propose of fishing in non-tidal waters in this Province, and that this might be tested at the trial before Judge Wetnore, a verdict was extremely an annual rent of fifty dollars, and that the part of the propose of the province, a June, 1878, to April 1879, judgment was delivered by Mr. Justice Fisher deciding ungranted lands on rivers suitable for salmon fishing, and so increase, to some ex

And not one sorrowful word would Aida speak until her Aunt was refreshed and rested. Then with many tears, they spoke of the dead Frank Elton, who was Aida's father's brother, while Mrs. May Wharton was her mother's sister, and now to be her own protectress and comforter. But after there had been a long confidential intercourse, Mrs. Wharton asked :-

But just before he died he made a memorandum, a sort of will and gave it to me. He made me promise to keep it, to show it to no one, unless within one year Elton Graham returns here. If he does, I am to return to him the fortune he rejected when he left here in anger, six years ago."

"And you—what will you have then?"

"Nothing! Unless"—and Aida blushed—"I marry Elton. You know

"You knew or this blushed—"I marry Elton. You know that is impossible; so if Elton returns, Leon will have a portionless bride."

"Your Uncle Frank told me years ago that you were bethrothed to Elton Elton. "But Mr. Wilson told me when he went away."

"Years ago, Auntie May, and I am not twenty-two! It was because Elton refused to agree to this farce of betrothal and wanted to marry some one else that the quarrel arose with Uncle Frank When I, too, exercised my own right of choice, Uncle Frank tried to recall Elton, but all his advertisements were in vain. I have told Mr. Wilson, the lawyer who had charge of all my business to try again to find my cousin."

"And until he comes, you are a prisoner at Eitonglade?"

"Only for one year. If he does not come before the fifteenth of next June I am free, and heiress of Eltonglade."

"It was an odd whim! I think, my was a round whim! I think, my was a round whim! I think, my was a round with the comes, and heiress of Eltonglade."

"Your cousin has gone to the library," he said, "and will return here. Little one, did I do wrong to hasten our journey!"

"We Leon and Aunt May," said Aida.
"I will get you the letter."

She left the room hastily. Now that the dreaded moment had come, ahe realized bitterly how the loss would torture her. To leave Eltonglade, to follow Leon to Brazil, perhaps to die there as Elton's wife had done. This was the future before, her, instead of the ease and happiness of the past year, the power to let Leon choose what occupation he would.

It seemed some moments of struggle foot Aida to summon sufficient self-control to return to the drawing-room, but when she did Leon was alone.

"Your cousin has gone to the library," he asid, "and will return here. Little one, did I do wrong to hasten our journey!" "Years ago, Auntie May, and I am

"It was an odd whim! I think, my dear, your uncle's eccentricities verge on..." and the lady tapped her forehead significantly. "But it is very latepast one, o'clock. Good-night, darling! I am more than glad to be with you again."

The days passed quietly during the months that followed. Aida packed away the wedding garments her uncle's sudden illness and death had rendered useless for the time, and the letters to "I do not! Love is better than fortune, and we have each other."

sudden iliness and death had rendered useless for the time, and the letters to and from Pernambuco became the one excitement of her very quiet life. But although outwardly she was the gentle little maiden Leon loved, there was in her heart steadily and sure growing an ever-increasing dread of Elton Graham's return. Power was something new and pleasant in her life, and it was very delightful to be mistress of this handsome estate and large income, to spend as she would direct and govern uncontroled. And above all, to know that she could give Leon wealth—to remain in his own country if he wished. He was not pleased with his exile, although his business looked prosperous. He disliked the climate, the customs, and he was impatient for the year to end that was to decide his future sourse. The hope of living on Aidh's money never crossed his mind, but he knew if she was wealthy he could find avenues for his own emergies nearer home than this strange Brazilian city.

The year was drawing to a close, when Leon Hartzberg sailed, upon the vessel owned by the firm employing him, for New York. Contrary to their custom, they carried a few passengers,

"You are a widower, then?" "Yes. I married against my uncle's "And I am a selfish brute to doubt you," Leon replied, in a sudden spasm of penitence. "But I had so hoped you would go with me to Brazil?"

WM. SIMPSON

We have been Manufacturing IRON FRAME MOWERS combining greater exceilence of mechanical simplicity together with greater durability and entire reliability for all the requirements of the field, than any other Mower extant.—In construction they are similar to the celebrated Walter A. Wood's Iron Frame Mower, and the Richardson Buckeye, both American Machines. Of the former there are over 200,000 in use, and the extraordinary number of 20,000 were manufactured and sold last season, by the Wood Company of United States. We have over 500 of our manufacture now in use, every one of which no exceptions) stands as a monument of the grand and unprecedented success of home manufacture and our enterprise. A list of our Agents in this sertion of the Province will be found appended, and farmers are requested to ask information of them relative to our Mowers in use in their respective localities, which will establish beyond doubt their unquestionable superiority over any other miver to be had in our market. In a nondity of procuring all parts or pieces within a should will be consumed the claims such an enterprise has upon the farmer to claims such an enterprise.
