Dr. McAlpine's Manifesto

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE BROCKVILLE RIDING:

Having accepted the nomination of the Liberal party for the riding of Brockville in the ensuing election, it is fitting that I should declare my position upon some of the matters under discussion in this election.

1. One of the outstanding questions agitating the public mind and engaging the attention of the province to-day is the temperance issue, and the Liberal party at its recent convention adopted the following as its platform on temperance:

"Be it resolved, that the Liberal party of the Province of Ontario in convention assembled, affirms its attitude in favor of progressive temperance legislation to the fullest extent of the provincial jurisdiction, and pledges itself to take all necessary steps to vigorously and effectively carry into effect the will of the majority of the people as expressed by the said referendum vote."

To this platform I give my absolute allegiance and support, and, if elected, I will do my part to enforce the will of the people in regard thereto.

DR. DONALD McALPINE

I am, and have been for many years, a total abstainer and no Act of Parliament was required to make a temperance man out of me. I think this should sufficiently explain my attitude in respect to this question.

2. I am strongly in favor of the various planks contained in the platform of the Provincial Liberal party. Particularly am I in favor of the planks in that platform which refer to agriculture and highway construction. I feel that the highways of this country have been sadly neglected, and as set forth in the Liberal platform, there must be a vigorous prosecution of work for the improvement of our roads. Furthermore, the burden of the cost, in my judgment, requires considerable adjustment.

3. The practice of my profession brings me daily in very close contact with the farmers. I claim, therefore, to understand their needs. I fully agree that the time has arrived when our farmers should unite to protect their own interests. I do not agree with the Hearst Government when it says that the farmers are not justified in uniting to take part in discussing and deciding political matters, as the Government sets forth in its campaign literature now being distributed. As manufacturers and laboring men have united to promote their interests, farmers should surely have the same privilege, and I promise that no vote or word of mine shall ever be given to prevent the farmers from so doing.

4. I have no other interests in other places than this Brockville riding, and I therefore feel that the town of Brockville should at least have one of its representatives in Parliament living right here in this Brockville riding so as to be constantly in touch with our people and thus better able to minister to their requirements.

5. As the Government has not allowed candidates sufficient time to interview personally the electors, I issue this manifesto to solicit the votes and influence of the ladies and gentlemen of this riding. If elected, I shall do my utmost to serve the best interests of all the people of this constituency and province, irrespective of politics.

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant,

D. McALPINE.

Every one who bought Canada's Victory Bonds has received 5½ per cent. interest per annum—paid twice a year.

Over half a million Canadians who bought Canada's Victory Bonds on the instalment plan saved money that they would not otherwise have saved.

The guarantee back of Canada's Victory Bonds is the same as the guarantee back of a One Dollar or a Two Dollar bill. There is this difference, however, that you get interest on the Victory Bonds and you don't on the One or Two Dollar bill.

Canada's Victory Bonds will always be accepted as security for a loan.

Banks are ready to loan money on Canada's Victory Bonds.

Canada's Victory Bonds may be turned into cash at any time.

There is no other way in which you can invest your money with such absolute security—paying such a good rate of interest.

Canada will soon give her citizens an opportunity to buy Victory Bonds 1919. It will probably be the last chance to buy Canada's Victory Bonds on such favorable terms.

Prepare to buy as many Victory Bonds this time as you now wish you had been able to buy the last time

NATIONALISTS TO RULE TURK

Their Party Seems to Be Gaining Power.

Sultan's Decree Points to Them.

Paris Cable.—French official circles direct attention to the fact that Djemal Pasha, the new Turkish War Minister, is the political ally of Mustafa Kemal, and the French generally are of the opinion that the change in the Cabinet may result in stabilizing the Government and extending its authority over greater territory.

The Sultan's decree, according to the version received by the French authorities, outlines a policy which appears to embody an endeavor to reach an understanding with the Nationalists.

According to the Intransigent, the resignation of the Cabinet of Damad Ferid Pasha was the result of the ultimatum from General Mustafa Kemal, the Nationalist leader, who has set up a new Government at Erzerum, and has issued a call for elections to a new national Parliament to meet at that place, away from the influence of the Entente, following the occupation of Konieh, in Southern Asia Minor, which is connected by railroads with Constantinople (Asiatic side), and Smyrna, Mustafa Kemal called upon Damad Ferid to resign with his entire Cabinet.

The capture of Konieh and the retirement of Damad Ferid's Cabinet in response to the ultimatum, will, it is thought, give fresh impetus to the Nationalist movement and increase the dangers of the situation, even though the country may not be able to support important military operations. Some papers believe that massacres are almost sure to follow the present anarchy, and that even the throne is threatened by latest developments in Turkey.

The noon papers regard the Cabinet change as a last warning to the Supreme Council, and will ask whether it is time for a superficial investigation as to the will of the population of Asia Minor.

The new Grand Vizier is Ali Riza Pasha.

The rescript of the Sultan defines the mission of the new Cabinet as according to arrange for the holding of elections and convene the Parliament.

Small but Potent.—Pamelée's Vegetable Pills are small but they are effective in action. Their fine qualities as a corrector of stomach troubles are known to thousands, and they are in constant demand everywhere by those who know what a safe and simple remedy they are. They need no introduction to those acquainted with them, but to those who may not know them they are presented as the best preparation on the market for disorders of the stomach.

TIRED MOTHER'S TERRIBLE DEED

Sends Her Two Children to a Slow Death

And Watches Effect of Deadly Drug.

Pontiac, Despatch.—Giving as a reason for her act that her two golden-haired little boys, aged eight and seven, were "worried" her because she felt too tired to attend to their wants at bedtime, Mrs. Hazel Leukart, aged 29, who, with her husband, lives on a small place between the village of Royal Oak and Pontiac, poisoned them both. In capsules she forced each to swallow a slow, insidious poison that paralyzes the victims and attacks with slow march upon the heart, which it finally stings. Those so doomed to die feel no pain, but a great lassitude. They retain consciousness to the end.

Shirley, the elder, is expected to die within a few hours. Edna has but three or four days to live, declare the doctors.

Mrs. Leukart was arrested to-day and taken to Detroit after she had made a full confession to the assistant prosecuting attorney of Oakland county. She told the prosecutor she had had the poison in her house for a long time, and was aware that it would bring slow, lingering death to those who took it.

"On the morning of September 28 it came to me like a flash from hell that the best way for the children was to put them where they could not bother me any more," said the woman in her confession.

"Then I went to the medicine cabinet and took the poison and gave it to Shirley and Edna. All that night I watched them and prayed that they would die. I felt happy. But in the morning I realized what I had done, but there was no help then. I told a neighbor what I had done, and then the doctor came."

From September 29 until yesterday, when the continued illness of the two children and their refusal to yield to the ordinary course of treatment caused the attending physician to become suspicious, the little victims each day became weaker.

Sharp cross-questioning established the fact that the mother was aware of the nature of the trouble. She had, at first, declared both girls had eaten green peas and it was for this they had been treated by the physician.

From Mrs. Leukart told to-day.

Roy E. Leukart, the husband and father, is a factory employe. He told the Sheriff this, his wife had never exhibited any indication of insanity; that she had always been a good, affectionate mother to the little ones, and that the day before she administered the death doses there had been a little argument because she opposed her going back to the stage. She had been a vaudeville singer, and she was not the slightest bit crazed. So far not the slightest motive, other than the weak reason given by Mrs. Leukart, has been found for the unusual crime.

Thousands of mothers can testify to the virtue of Mother Graves' Worm Expeller, because they know from experience how useful it is.

LOST INDIAN TREBE

Arawaks, of Jamaica, Victims of Spain.

When in 1494, on his second voyage, Columbus discovered the island of Jamaica, it was populated by the Arawak Indians, who, although at first hostile to him, became friendly on his giving them clothing and other articles hitherto unknown to them.

When later the Spaniards settled the island they forced the Indians not only to do agricultural work in their own island, but to labor in the gold mines of Hayti. So hard were the Spanish taskmasters that by 1558 the whole Arawak nation was exterminated.

During the past eight years efforts have been made, under the auspices of a scientific society, to recover all possible traces of the lost race. To that end explorations have been made in the old kitchen middens, or refuse heaps, of the Arawaks, in which there have been found, besides shells and pottery and fish, turtle and cony bones, many celts, or rude chisels, grinding stones, some pendants and axes—1,500 objects in all, which have been given to the American Museum of Natural History in New York city.

To the anthropologist the most interesting objects are the cylindrical stone pendants, which are fashioned with sand and stone and endless rubbing. Pendants of exactly the same sort are worn to-day as insignia of office by chiefs or headmen or tribes in northern South America.

Women and Asthma. Women are numbered among the sufferers from asthma by the countless thousands. In every climate they will be found, helpless in the grip of this relentless disease unless they have availed themselves of the proper remedy. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has brought new hope and life to many such. Testimonials, sent entirely without solicitation, show the enormous benefit it has wrought among women everywhere.

PLOWING NOW WELL ADVANCED

Comparatively Large Acreage of New Fall Wheat.

Toronto despatch.—The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

Plowing and other fall work is more advanced than usual, as timely rains caused the land to work up nicely, and the weather generally has been remarkably open for field activities generally.

The new fall wheat has a comparatively large acreage, and is looking well. That sown late has been favored with suitable weather for a good start.

Buckwheat is turning out much better than was expected a month ago.

Corn is well spoken of both for husking and the silo, very little being immature. The lack of labor for handling the crop has been the only drawback.

Roots are making great growth with moist and warm weather.

Pastures have revived greatly with the recent rains, but rather too late to have much effect upon the milk flow.

Feed will be comparatively scarce this coming winter, and this, with the slump in prices, has resulted in a considerable number of cattle and hogs being put on the market in an unfinished condition.

Oxford points out that hogs in that county have dropped in value from $24.25 to $16.50 a cwt, in less than eight weeks. Little pigs have also fallen off greatly in value. Oxford says fifty per cent., while Lennox and Addington state that six and eight week old pigs are offering at $4 each.

Less grain is being marketed in Lambton than usual, and the representative is of the opinion that most of the barley and oats will be kept on the farm for feeding purposes.

Peel reports that three more tractors have gone into the township of Chinguacousy during the week.

SOME YUKON FLOWERS.

Pot plants, such as geraniums, sauseveria, fuchsias, agapanthus, begonias, plants, asparagus ferns, or nanus plumosa and sprengeri thrive luxuriantly set out in some sheltered spot or kept in pots on the verandas. Tea and hybrid tea roses grow and bloom splendidly when planted out in the open ground. Tardescantia—wandering Jew—a native of the Philippines, grows profusely in hanging baskets on our porches, and instead of the bleak and dreary country we expected, we have a country and a climate in which any plant or flower will grow luxuriantly. We of Yukon should thank the Guide of our destinies that our lives have fallen in pleasant places, for our flowers are part of the lure of the North.—Dawson Daily News.

WHAT HE PREFERRED.

The second course of the table d'hôte was being served. "What is this leathery stuff?" demanded the diner. "That, sir, is fillet of sole," replied the waiter. "Take it away," said the diner, "and see if you can't get me a nice tender piece from the upper part of the boot, with the buttons removed."

The fewer you want the nearer you resemble the gods.—Socrates.

THE INVENTOR OF THE TANKS

Impossible to Name Him, Says Churchill.

Eighteen Models Appeared Feasible.

London Cable.—"It is impossible to say that this or that man invented the tank," Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary for War, testified in this wise to-day before the Royal Commission on Awards to Inventors, which is leading with the claims of eleven men who are seeking the honor and bounties attached to the invention of this formidable instrument of war.

The testimony and the statements of the attorneys indicated that the tank was a sort of middle ground between armored motor cars, which wide trenches rendered ineffective, and the huge steam rollers planned to batter down barbed wire and other obstacles.

Mr. Churchill testified that from the beginning of the war numerous plans of various types of land ships had been submitted. Eighteen of these appeared so feasible that models were constructed and trials were made, and it might be said that the original tank, first used in the Somme offensive in 1915, was the result of each of these 18.

Armored cars had failed, said the secretary, because they could not get over or around the trenches, whereupon he had called into conference Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon, the ordnance expert. Admiral Bacon built a motor with bridge to be laid across a trench on the approach and picked up on the return; but this failed to get over a double line trench.

Then came tests of machines with huge wheels able to span a wide space, but these are discarded. Finally, the caterpillar tractor scheme was adopted, bringing on an extended discussion as to whether they should be constructed to transport troops through fire-swept areas. Out of these discussions came the trials of the Mark tank, with which the inquiry is dealing.

But the caterpillar plan was once abandoned by the War Office, Major-General Ernest D. Swinton, one of the claimants, testified. It was kept alive in the Admiralty because, according to a statement by one of the attorneys, of Mr. Churchill's belief in the necessity of producing some machines to override the trenches. Gen. Swinton claims that he is the father of the caterpillar idea, dating back to October, 1914.

Among the other claimants are Commodore Murray Fraser Suter, Sir Eustace Tennyson-D'Evencourt, Director of Naval Construction of the Admiralty, and Sir W. A. Triton, of the Ministry of Munitions.

General Swinton was the only one heard to-day.

BRITISH UNREST.

Not All Labor Troubles Ended as Yet.

London, Cable.—(Reuter Despatch)—Leading labor men with whom the settlement of the railway strike was discussed yesterday issued warnings against the ending of the dispute now being regarded as final and as ending all the labor troubles. It is pointed out that the protracted strike of iron miners, which is seriously affecting the engineering industry of the north, is still unsettled.

There were other disquieting incidents, showing that the temper of labor was still on edge. It is particularly complained of that the Government delayed putting into operation the Joint Industry Council established at the beginning of the year to secure a universal living wage and a 48-hour week.

Many German Industries in a Bad Way.

London Cable.—Reports reaching this city from Germany relative to the Leipzig fair throw light on Germany's economic position. According to the secretary of the exhibition, there were 7,000 foreign buyers present.

Conversations with exhibitors gave observers the impression that many German industries were near bankruptcy, owing to the shortage of coal and the loss of export trade, their only hope being to trade with neutrals and America. Fear was expressed that the continued hostility of the British would prevent trade with England.

JUST THE THING FOR POTS AND PANS

SIR WILLIAM'S
WILL

She suspected nothing. It remained with him to decide what he should do. Flight occurred to him, of course. Flight is the first thing a man thinks of when he has been struck to the heart by love's dart.

But flight seemed to him mean, cowardly. He had undertaken to oversee the building of this jetty at Pethwick; he had thrown himself heart and soul into the work, not recognizing that his ardor sprang from his desire to remain near Clytie; Lord Stanton, the lad who had treated him so well, and to whom he had grown attached, relied upon him; flight was distasteful to him. And Clytie had not heard his passionate avowal, was still ignorant of his identity with Wilfred Carton; he could surely keep a watch and guard upon his lips for the future. No; he would not fly. He would remain until the jetty was finished; then he would return to Parraluna, develop Silver Ridge, and bury himself in Australia as "Jack Douglas."

strongly, he had protected her against the storm, against herself.

She turned to and fro, and strove to forget him, to blame him; but the memory of his strength, of his manly tenderness, prevailed over her; and when at last she fell asleep, it was to dream of him. She woke in the morning exhausted as much by her emotion as by the feverish cold which Jack had dreaded.

"You will stay in bed, my dear," Mollie said decisively. "Girls who go skylarking in an open boat through a record storm must pay the penalty. And if I have the pleasure of seeing Jack Douglas—I beg his pardon, Mr. Douglas—I shall give him a piece of my mind."

"It was not his fault," murmured Clytie, in muffled accents, as she drew the covers about her.

"Oh! Then whose was it?" demanded Mollie. "If he doesn't know when a storm is impending, he's not much of a fisherman, and ought not to be trusted with a delicate girl."

"I'm not delicate!" declared Clytie indignantly.

"Yes, you are," retorted Mollie. "Any way, you are far too delicate to face such a storm as we had yesterday; in an open boat, too! I should think Douglas would be ashamed of himself."

"It was not his fault," she said again. "And—Mollie, I won't have you abuse him," she added, in a low voice.

"Won't you? I shall abuse him all I know; and that's not a little, as you are aware. There! Tuck yourself up, and try and sleep. You won't get up out of this to-day, my gentle sister."

Mollie made her way to the beach, and finding Jack beside his boat, expressed her opinion with absolute and devastating candor.

"My sister is quite ill, Douglas—I beg your pardon, Mr. Douglas," she said. "Quite unable to get up. Severe cold, mental prostration, low fever, and the rest of it."

"I'm very sorry, Miss Mollie," said Jack humbly, penitently. "All my fault. I ought to have seen that the storm was coming."

"Of course, you ought!" declared Mollie resentfully. "But you men, with your brute strength, never think of us women."

"Sometimes," he pleaded.

"Then why didn't you think of my sister?" she demanded aggressively.

"I did think of her. I mean—" he faltered humbly.

"Not you!" retorted Mollie, cutting in upon him. "You thought you'd get another hand in the boat with you, and you didn't care—"

He looked at her with all the heart

in his eyes; and Mollie, as she turned away and marched up the beach, hid a smile as she thought of the anguished expression of his very expressive face.

Jack took the boat to Pethwick, and tried to force his attention to the loading of timber and shaping of stone; but his thoughts were fixed on Clytie and her condition. Low fever is a dangerous thing, you see; and dreadfully dangerous when viewed by the eyes of a lover. He longed for a sight of her.

And the next day his longing was gratified. She came down to the beach with Mollie and Lord Stanton. She was looking pale and thoughtful, and Jack was at once overwhelmed by remorse; but then she laughed at something Lord Stanton had said, and her eyes as they met Jack's were calm, placid, unembarrassed; and, with relief, he thanked Heaven that they were so; it was still more evident that she had not heard the passionate words which had sprung from his lips. Indeed, she scarcely glanced at him, and did not address him directly; not even when Lord Stanton said:

"Miss Bramley's nose the worse for the storm, Douglas."

"I'm glad," was all Jack said; and he said it with eyes fixed on the boat.

She stood for a moment or two looking out at the sea, then she went up the beach, and Jack felt as if she had put off in the boat for Pethwick, and tried as yesterday, to absorb himself, to lose himself, in the affairs of the moment, the setting of the timber, the hauling of the stone; but her face, pale and with its subtle wistfulness, haunted him; and his position irritated him.

Here was he, Sir Wilfred Carton, masquerading as Jack Douglas, not permitted to exchange a word more than his assumed position allowed, and others—Lord Stanton, for instance—were free to look at her, talk with her, unrestrainedly.

But he did his duty; and the workmen that day had more than ever good reason and excuse for calling him a "masterpiece"; and though he was sterner, shorter, than usual, they obeyed him cheerfully; for they acknowledged that power, that spell, which had made itself felt by Mr. and Mrs. Jarrold and all at Parraluna.

For that day, and many after, Jack worked with the men with what seemed a whole-souled absorption in the task at hand; and seemed so occupied that even Lord Stanton could scarcely get a word from him that did not apply to the building of the jetty.

The two girls came down to the beach every day, but Douglas seemed to avoid them; and once, when Mollie proposed that they should row to Pethwick, Jack declared that he must stay to see the unloading of a cargo of stone, left them to the care of one of the Withycombe boatmen; and he watched the boat awhile with jealous eyes, and turned away with a sigh, as if he begrudged the man his precious charge.

Strangely enough, as Jack grew more wistful and grave each day, Clytie seemed to regain her strength and her old light-hearted spirit. She thought—and Mollie said openly—that it was the wonderful sea-air of Withycombe, and the relief of getting away from the cares of Bramley; but Clytie felt that these two causes were not wholly accountable for the improvement. To a woman there is no elixir like that of love, and though Clytie would not have admitted it, the knowledge that she was loved by Jack Douglas was a precious, but secret, anodyne which soothed her worried mind; and though it did not solve the problem of her life, indeed, rather complicated it, was like balm to her restless spirit.

She knew he avoided her; but she found a subtle pleasure in watching him from a distance, in listening to his voice, as he gave orders to the men, or called to his horse.

The day arrived for their return to Bramley; and it seemed as if she would leave Withycombe without speaking to him, without saying "good-bye," but, the morning of their departure, Mollie met him just outside the cottage as she was going down to the beach in search of a book which Clytie had left in the boat.

"Oh, good morning, Mr. Douglas," she said. "I've come down for a book of my sister's."

"I have found it," he broke in. "I found it last night; I'll fetch it."

He went into the cottage, and returned with the book, followed by Polly.

"Oh, thanks," said Mollie. "Would you mind taking it up to the farm? My sister is just packing."

"Polly shall go up with it," he said; but Mollie shook her head.

"Polly's coming down to the shop to buy chocolates for the journey," she said. "You take it, if you don't mind."

He looked round for another messenger; but there was no one about, and, half-gladly, half-fearfully, he went up to the farm. Clytie was packing, as Mollie had said, and she was running down the stairs, singing to herself, as she opened the gate. The door was open, as usual, and she saw him and stopped, a faint color stealing into her face.

"I've brought this," said Jack, his voice sounding almost gruff.

"Oh, thank you," she responded, brightly, and she came out to him.

"How stupid of me to forget it. My favorite Browning, too! It is very good of you to bring it."

"Not at all," he said, his eyes downcast, his manner still reserved. "You—you are going, so Miss Mollie told me."

"Yes," she said, checking a sigh.

"And I—we are very sorry. We have enjoyed the holiday, the change, so much."

"And you are so much better," he remarked, almost to himself.

She nodded. "It is the air, and the pleasant time we have had. I have to

in his eyes; and Mollie, as she turned away and marched up the beach, hid a smile as she thought of the anguished expression of his very expressive face.

Jack took the boat to Pethwick, and tried to force his attention to the loading of timber and shaping of stone; but his thoughts were fixed on Clytie and her condition. Low fever is a dangerous thing, you see; and dreadfully dangerous when viewed by the eyes of a lover. He longed for a sight of her.

And the next day his longing was gratified. She came down to the beach with Mollie and Lord Stanton. She was looking pale and thoughtful, and Jack was at once overwhelmed by remorse; but then she laughed at something Lord Stanton had said, and her eyes as they met Jack's were calm, placid, unembarrassed; and, with relief, he thanked Heaven that they were so; it was still more evident that she had not heard the passionate words which had sprung from his lips. Indeed, she scarcely glanced at him, and did not address him directly; not even when Lord Stanton said:

"Miss Bramley's nose the worse for the storm, Douglas."

"I'm glad," was all Jack said; and he said it with eyes fixed on the boat.

She stood for a moment or two looking out at the sea, then she went up the beach, and Jack felt as if she had put off in the boat for Pethwick, and tried as yesterday, to absorb himself, to lose himself, in the affairs of the moment, the setting of the timber, the hauling of the stone; but her face, pale and with its subtle wistfulness, haunted him; and his position irritated him.

Here was he, Sir Wilfred Carton, masquerading as Jack Douglas, not permitted to exchange a word more than his assumed position allowed, and others—Lord Stanton, for instance—were free to look at her, talk with her, unrestrainedly.

But he did his duty; and the workmen that day had more than ever good reason and excuse for calling him a "masterpiece"; and though he was sterner, shorter, than usual, they obeyed him cheerfully; for they acknowledged that power, that spell, which had made itself felt by Mr. and Mrs. Jarrold and all at Parraluna.

For that day, and many after, Jack worked with the men with what seemed a whole-souled absorption in the task at hand; and seemed so occupied that even Lord Stanton could scarcely get a word from him that did not apply to the building of the jetty.

The two girls came down to the beach every day, but Douglas seemed to avoid them; and once, when Mollie proposed that they should row to Pethwick, Jack declared that he must stay to see the unloading of a cargo of stone, left them to the care of one of the Withycombe boatmen; and he watched the boat awhile with jealous eyes, and turned away with a sigh, as if he begrudged the man his precious charge.

Strangely enough, as Jack grew more wistful and grave each day, Clytie seemed to regain her strength and her old light-hearted spirit. She thought—and Mollie said openly—that it was the wonderful sea-air of Withycombe, and the relief of getting away from the cares of Bramley; but Clytie felt that these two causes were not wholly accountable for the improvement. To a woman there is no elixir like that of love, and though Clytie would not have admitted it, the knowledge that she was loved by Jack Douglas was a precious, but secret, anodyne which soothed her worried mind; and though it did not solve the problem of her life, indeed, rather complicated it, was like balm to her restless spirit.

"Thank you, Mr. Douglas, for—for taking us out in the boat—and taking so much care of us."

"Well, I nearly drowned you," he said, gravely.

"Nearly is far from quite," she retorted, with a bright smile and a heightened color. "I suppose we were in some danger; but I enjoyed myself very much, more than I have done for a very long time."

He looked at her with a grateful sense of what he considered to be her magnanimity, but said nothing; and she went on:

"I suppose you will remain in Withycombe or Pethwick until the jetty is built, Mr. Douglas?"

"I don't know," he replied, looking beyond her, as if he feared to meet her eyes. "It all depends."

"Oh, I hope so—I mean," she continued, hurriedly, "that Lord Stanton would be so disappointed, that—that—Oh, you must not leave them in the lurch!"

"He could soon fill my place," he said. "But I'll see." He still lingered, his hand on the gate, as if loath to go, and Clytie stood, a graceful figure in her tailor-made coat and skirt, the book clasped in her hand, the other raised to protect her hair from the attacks of the wind; and presently, with a jerk, he said: "Can I help you?"

"There must be a good deal to do—your packing—"

"No, thanks. Oh, but yes! Would you mind ordering a box for me?" she said with a smile. "It is so heavy, and all the men are away."

He followed her into the sitting-room, where a box stood on the floor.

"That is it," she said. "Is it rather full, isn't it? It's the last box, and everything one had forgotten, all the odds and ends have been thrown into it. Perhaps the lid won't shut."

Jack knelt beside it, and eyed the disorder, the shoes, gloves, books, and odds and ends doubtfully as he essayed in vain to close the lid.

"Oh, well, she said, resignedly. "Some of the things don't matter; they are most of them of no value."

She swept off the top layer laughingly; but Jack interposed.

"I'm not much of a hand at packing," he said; "but I think I could manage better than that."

"Oh, I give you a free hand," she said; "but please don't trouble about those old gloves and things. I don't know why I put them in."

She turned away as she spoke, and Jack, as he rearranged the muddle, took up one of the old gloves and slipped it into his pocket. Clytie happened to be standing in front of the looking-glass, and she saw the act reflected in the mirror. Her face went crimson, and she stood quite still for a moment or two, her hand resting on the mantelshelf, her eyes fixed on him.

"I think that's better," he remarked reverently, as he laid a tiny pair of shoes on the top and closed the lid.

"Oh, you have everything in! How clever of you!" she said. "But will you be able to cord it by yourself? Shall I ring for some one? Perhaps I can help you?"

"No, no; please keep away!" he adjured her earnestly. "You might get hurt."

She took hold of the cord and laughed at his anxiety.

General Grant was a kind and warm hearted man in spite of a certain brusqueness in manner. A story that General Logan used often to tell is to the point.

At the time General Logan was with General Grant at Holly Springs, Miss., General Forrest, the Confederate cavalry leader, had just captured a train of supplies, and General Grant had issued an order to his men to scour the country for twenty miles round in order to get food for his troops. The country had already been swept pretty clean, and the new demands brought a good deal of hardship on the people of the neighborhood. At many of the homes there were only women, old men, children and faithful colored servants. These people, hungry and without money to buy provisions, were often forced to apply to the northern army in their distress. Food was always given them if they would take the oath of allegiance to the United

"Why, I could have done it by myself, if I'd been forced to it," she assured him, rather ungratefully.

Jack smiled, but took the cord from her hand, and interposed between her slight figure and the box.

"I'm glad you weren't, then," he said. "It is more than probable that you would have hurt yourself trying to lift it, or, having lifted it, have let it drop on your toes."

"Now, you want a knife," she remarked, looking round.

"Thanks, I have one," he said, and he pulled out the useful and somewhat formidable weapon which fulfilled so many purposes. In taking it from his pocket he brought the glove with it; but Clytie affected not to see it, and he covered it with his knee quickly, waiting for an opportunity to take it up again. But Clytie leaned against the table, her hands clasping the edges, her whole attitude one of indolent interest in the proceedings.

"You won't want a label?" he suggested, with the object of getting her to move so that he might secure the glove.

"Oh, no," she replied. "A cart is coming for the things."

"Is that it I hear coming down the road?" he asked, hoping she would go to the window; but she did not move, or remove her eyes from him, as she replied sweetly:

"Oh, no; it will not be here yet. Have you quite finished? It is so kind of you. What is that? Oh, one of my gloves," she went on, in despair, he rose and revealed the purloined article. "Thanks."

"I—I must have left it out," he said remorsefully.

"Yes; but it does not matter. It is quite an old one," she protested brightly. She swung the glove to and fro, and, at last, as if absent, tossed it out of the open window. By the exclamation of extraordinary self-restraint, Jack refrained from watching it, and, having given a superfluous knot to the cord, rose and reached for his cap.

"I will wish you good-by, Miss Bramley," he said gravely, "unless there is anything else I can do?"

"No; nothing, thank you, Mr. Douglas," she returned. "Good-by, and thank you very much—for all you have done for us—unconsciously her hand stole out to him, but suddenly she remembered his assumed character, and she let her hand wander to the ribbon at her neck, as if it wanted pulling straight.

"Good-by," said Jack simply. "I'm sorry you are going."

As he left the room she ran lightly up the stairs, but paused at the top and called to him:

"Mr. Douglas!"

Jack swung round at the door like a soldier obeying the call of his superior officer, a dog that of its master; ah, yes! a lover that of his mistress.

"Oh, if you come up to Bramley—to see the Hall, you know—please let me know."

"It will," he replied, gratefully.

"Good-by."

Having got outside the door, he stopped to light his pipe; it seemed a more than usually elaborate preparation, and he edged toward the bit of garden in front of the open window, dropped a match and stooped to pick it up, then, with his pipe in full blast, strode down the road.

Rules of Voting

1. Be sure to vote early, in the forenoon, if possible. Although additional Polling Booths are being provided in the larger polling divisions there will be great difficulty in taking the vote if too many wait till the afternoon. Remember that even if you reach the booth before five o'clock, old time, you cannot vote after that time.
2. Do not take up more time than is absolutely necessary, and leave the booth as soon as you have voted.
3. After marking your ballots, fold them separately, in such a way that the initials of the Deputy will show and hand them back to him.
4. No loitering will be allowed in any booth. Only officials and Scrutineers will be allowed to remain.
5. Women are entitled to vote on both the Referendum and the Election. Come prepared to use both ballots.
6. Do not write "Yes" or "No" on your ballot. Mark a cross in the proper column of the Referendum ballot. Any other marking will spoil it.
7. Be sure to vote on all four questions on the Referendum Ballot. If you miss one question your ballot will not be counted.

Opportunity tapped at the door With a chance for the brother within; He rapped till his fingers were sore, And muttered, "Come on, let me in. Here is something I know you can do, Here's a hill that I know you can climb."

But the brother inside very quickly replied: "Old fellow, I haven't got time."

Opportunity wandered along In search of a man who would rise, He said to the indolent throng: "Here's a chance for the fellow who tries."

But each of them said with a smile, "I wish I could do it, but I'm busy to-day."

Very busy to-day, and I'm sorry to say That I really haven't got time."

At last Opportunity came To a man who was burdened with cares,

And said: "I now offer the same Opportunity that has been theirs. Here's a duty that ought to be done. It's a chance if you've got time to take it."

Said the man with a grin, "Come along, pass it in!"

I'll either find time or I'll make it." Of all the excuses there are

How to say "No!"

Mark Your Ballot with an X after Each Question under the word "No"

1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?	YES	NO
			X
2	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	YES	NO
			X
3	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure to standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	YES	NO
			X
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	YES	NO

Above is an exact reproduction of the Referendum ballot, showing the correct way to Vote in order to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act as it stands.

Everybody should study the four questions and realize exactly what they mean. Do not be misled by the insidious demand for "light" beer.

The beer of the ballot is 118% stronger than the Ontario Temperance Act now allows, and over five times as strong as the limit allowed for beer defined as non-intoxicating in Great Britain and the United States.

Answer Each Question

1. Unless you vote on every question your ballot is spoiled.
2. You must mark your answer to each question with an "X" only. Anything else would spoil your ballot.
3. Unless a majority vote "No" on question 1 the bars will be restored and the sale of all kinds of intoxicants permitted.
4. Unless a majority vote "No" on questions 2, 3 and 4 the Ontario Temperance Act will become almost worthless.
5. The only SAFE course is to mark your ballot as shown above.

"No!"—Four Times—"No!"

No repeal; No government beer shops; No beer saloons; No government whiskey shops.—Four X's, each under the word "No."

Ontario's Golden Era

Continue
PROGRESS—PERFORMANCE—PROMISE

IF we have given worthy service during the trying time of war, may we not be relied upon to serve the nation faithfully and well in hastening the time of still greater prosperity and happiness? As we have begun, so we will continue; fearless in the discharge of duty and ever alert in the service to the people. Conscious of our shortcomings and grateful for the opportunities we have had to serve our Province, we submit our record with confidence to the electors for their consideration and approval, and ask from a united people a mandate to carry on the Government of this Province.

WAR WORK

Ontario gave in men 232,895; in contributions $54,532,188; to Victory loans $540,465,550. Ontario provided 50 per cent. of Canada's war effort. The Ontario Government spent in war work over $10,000,000; maintained in England the most efficient military hospital in Europe; furnished club houses for the soldiers in London and Paris; made gifts of food and guns to the Mother Country; made large grants to the British Red Cross, Belgium, Serbian relief and other worthy patriotic objects. Ontario's war effort made the name of Ontario resound in every corner of the world.

EDUCATION

Ontario's educational system is designed to provide the most efficient training possible for the boys and girls who are to become the future citizens of the state. Under the leadership of the Minister of Education no expenditure has been denied to accomplish this purpose. Generous grants have been made for agricultural, technical and vocational training; returned soldiers are encouraged to enter the teaching profession; teachers' salaries have been raised and a super-annuation scheme inaugurated. This year nearly $4,000,000 will be spent on education in Ontario.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC

Hydro is to-day the most extensive public-ownership enterprise of its kind in the world. Since its inception Hydro-Electric has saved to the consumers of electric power in Ontario over five millions of dollars. Hydro displaces annually 5,000,000 tons of coal. Hydro develops and distributes 350,000 horse power to over 230 municipalities, 175,000 domestic consumers and 6,000 customers for power. The Queenston-Chippewa undertaking will provide an economical development of 400,000 horse power, and the prospective ultimate development in the whole Province is over 1,000,000 horse power.

AGRICULTURE

The agricultural industry in Ontario is in a prosperous and thriving condition. Appropriations in 1904 amounted to $475,000; in 1919, $1,675,000. Last year the value of the farm products of Ontario was $550,000,000, and the value of the combined farm assets was one and a half billion dollars. Within the last three years ten thousand farm mortgages have been paid off. Encouragement has been extended to every branch of the industry, education has been fostered, and social conditions have been improved. Agriculture now receives the "earliest and unremitting attention of the Government."

FINANCE

In 1904 the income of Ontario was $4,464,000; in 1913 it was $11,138,302; in 1918 it was $19,270,123. This has been accomplished without resorting to direct taxation—apart from the war tax, which has been repealed. Out of this revenue the Government has returned to the people in larger grants, $3,807,000 for Education; $1,676,235 for Agriculture. The public services have been enlarged and ample grants have enabled important public duties to be undertaken.

HIGHWAYS

Good roads add wealth and comfort to rural life. The highway improvement programme of the Ontario Government is applied to both urban and rural districts. A complete system of roads, including provincial roads, provincial county roads, county roads and township roads with a mileage of 12,500 miles, has been worked out and will be constructed. The entire motor license revenue, with a large amount added, will be spent annually on this work.

LABOR

Ontario's industrial leadership in Canada has been maintained by broad and effective labor laws. Under the Workmen's Compensation Act $10,000,000 has been paid out in awards. Special safeguards have been provided for female and child labor. A minimum wage in Ontario is assured, and a direct representative of Labor will sit in the Cabinet. Free employment agencies have been established, and technical education has been encouraged.

HEALTH

Ontario's public health service is not excelled on the continent. Public health education, child welfare, sanitary engineering service, and the free distribution of anti-toxins and serums have conserved life and prevented epidemic. A scheme of pensions for mothers is to be established. The Provincial Board of Health supplied all the typhoid vaccine used by the Canadian troops in the war. This feature of the work has brought about a saving of over $100,000 a year to the people of the Province.

As a war measure the Ontario Temperance Act was so passed, suspending for the duration of the war the retail sale of liquor. The promise was given that as soon as the war was over the whole question of the character of the liquor legislation of Ontario would be submitted to the people by Referendum, and the will of the people would prevail. This promise is now being fulfilled.

PROMISE

Greatest possible assistance to Agriculture—Faithful enforcement of the Referendum—Support of Hydro-Electric; cheap light and power for the farmer—Convert railway branch lines into Hydro railroads—Good roads in every part of Ontario—State pension fund for mothers—Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet—A minimum wage—Housing accommodation—Legislation implementing the findings of the National Industrial Conference—Consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation—Educational progress, technical and agricultural instruction—Improved transportation in Northern Ontario—Timber conservation—Encouragement in mining development—Enlargement of Ontario's free public health service.

BROCKVILLE DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The annual district convention of the Woman's Missionary Society was held in the Methodist church, Athens, on Wednesday, October 8th. There were three sessions, and each was filled with helpful and inspiring discourses.

Mrs. (Rev.) T. G. Williams, of Montreal, and Mrs. J. Holt Murray, of Delta, were present at all the sessions and did much to make the convention one of the best held on the district.

At the morning session the reports from auxiliaries, circles and bands were given, showing an increase in givings and interest all over the district; the objective of a 20 per cent. increase in money being surpassed, and although there are on the Brockville district 1,505 linked up with the missionary enterprise, yet the increase in members is not quite satisfactory, and while Mrs. Williams' appeal was for "advance all along the line," her special plea was for a larger membership.

Solos were rendered at the evening session by Miss Bessie Rowsome and Miss Marion Robinson.

Mrs. W. T. Towriss was again unanimously elected district superintendent, showing that her efforts on behalf of the district are appreciated.

Luncheon and tea were served in the church dining room, and the Athens auxiliary again showed its ability to happily entertain the district.

ROD AND GUN FOR OCTOBER.

The cover painting on the October issue of ROD AND GUN IN CANADA is bound to evoke the admiration of all lovers of the great out-of-doors who have seen a partridge in its native haunts. To accompany this wonderful painting, F. V. Williams, the artist, has written a graphic story entitled "When Leaves Turn Brown." A beautiful nature story. "Under Canvas with Moses," by J. Livingston, tells of Moses Missabi, an Ojibway guide in the Timagami Reserve and his cheerful Indian philosophy. "Coyote and Coy" is the title of H. Mortimer Batten's latest tale of the prairie foothills. Other interesting stories and articles in this issue are "The Kejistik Monster," by Phil. H. Moore; "The Sea Serpent," written by A. E. Jay; "Dredging with the One Hundred Fathom Line," by Bonnycastle Dale; and "Wild Life Sanctuaries," by J. B. Harkin, Commissioner of Dominion Parks. ROD AND GUN IN CANADA is published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

A WORD TO THE WOMEN.

Two votes will be taken on the 20th of October—one on the temperance referendum and the other to elect members to the Legislature. This is the first election in Ontario when all women may vote. It is important for every woman to remember when voting on election day that she should receive the referendum ballot and the ballot for members to the Legislature. Answer every question on the referendum ballot and mark the legislative ballot for your choice of candidates.

Intolerance or Compromise?

A Challenge to Common Sense!

DON'T let anyone tell you that the issue on October 20th is "The Beer or the Boy"—"Is Alcohol a Poison or not"—"Economy or Extravagance"—any such an abstraction.

The plain situation is—three sections of the people of this Province are absolutely dissatisfied with the Ontario Temperance Act and want new legislation that will permit the sale of light beer and wine generally, and the sale of pure, spirituous liquors only through Government agencies.

These three sections of the population are—ninety per cent. of organized labor, by actual vote; a large number of returned soldier organizations, by actual vote; thousands of the rank and file of the electorate who have joined the Citizen's Liberty League.

The plain issue then is—Are you going to vote for the safe, sane, fair compromise that these men and women want; or, are you going to insist on the retention of the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act—insist on the retention of legislation that is breeding and will continue to breed dissatisfaction and discontent among our workers, returned men and a large section of the citizens generally?

Which are YOU for—COMPROMISE and HARMONY, or INTOLERANCE and Widespread Resentment?

Study the Ballot and analyze the situation conscientiously. This is one of the most vital concerns you have just now—a settlement of Ontario's vexed temperance problem that will be in the best interests of all the people.

Vote "Yes" to all Four Questions

Mark your ballot with an X. Any other marking will spoil it. Remember also—Every voter must vote on every question or his ballot will be spoiled.

"Here's my idea of a razor—

one that sharpens its own blade!"

"Why, I remember when I used to have to throw away a blade after a couple of shaves. Now, I simply take it and give a few turns on the strop and it's as good as ever."

"I can shave in three minutes; and my face is as smooth and slick and comfortable as when the head barber used to go over it. To clean, I simply put the blade under the tap and wipe it off. There's no taking the razor to pieces and messing around with parts. In fact, the whole thing is so simple and easy, I wish I had had one long ago."

Life Span of Industrial Workers.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Sanitary Institute, reported in the Westminster Gazette, Dr. Edgar L. Collis, Director of Welfare and Health, Ministry of Munitions, said that to-day the average age of death among industrial workers was 50, which compared sadly with that of about 67, the average for underpaid and badly housed agricultural workers.

Describing the methods adopted by the Ministry of Munitions for improving the conditions in factories, Dr. Collis said the introduction of welfare workers has been a great success. This would always be the case wherever their duties were not strangled by routine and red tape. Four thousand women welfare workers had been appointed to care for women and girls, and four hundred for boys.

An important part of the new industrial development would be the light work depots, which would also be day nurseries and centres of mother-craft for mothers of young children.

OID IN BULGARIA.

Stolen Statue Will Be Returned to Roumania.

It was a bitter blow to Publius Ovidius Naso, the best selling poet of Augustan Rome, when the Emperor exiled him to a desolate town on the barren shores of the Black Sea as a punishment for too faithfully reflecting the manners of his time. There he lived his last years and there he died; nor did a gentleman used to the luxurious life of the capital of the world ever quite reconcile himself to the society of barbarous Scythians.

Two thousand years later Ovid would have liked it better. By that time the town of Tomi had become Constantza, one of the principal ports of Roumania and the summer resort of the wealthy and ease-loving society of Bucharest. And every day gentlemen very much like Ovid, and ladies whom Ovid would have liked very much, passed through the Plaza Ovidiu, where a statue of the poet commemorated the first incursion, if an unwilling one, of the leisure class. In due course of time, however, Constantza fell into the hands of Scythians more ungracious than those among whom Ovid had lived. When the Bulgarian army overran the Dobruja in 1916 it was followed by the expropriators whom all the Central Powers sent into occupied territory. The Bulgars, like the Germans, were acquisitive; they would take anything from factory machinery to first editions and Japanese prints. Among the plunder shipped back into Bulgaria from Constantza was the statue of Ovid, once more an exile.

Malicious Roumanians had said that the Bulgarians did not know who Ovid was, that they thought the statue was that of the Mayor of Constantza. Whether this be true or not, the Bulgars have been considerably more careless about the preservation of classical remains than the Roumanians. Some years ago a great heap of stones with Roman inscriptions lay in a museum yard in Sofia with grass growing among them; nobody had cared to take the trouble to carry them indoors. Perhaps Ovid was thrown in among them to await such time as the Bulgar had leisure from his forays into other lands and could arrange culture to suit himself; at any rate, Ovid escaped the ignominy of being melted and burned into shell cases, for after vigorous protests from Roumania and the Allies the Bulgarian Government finally shipped him back to Constantza. One could wish that all the wrongs suffered by Roumania could be so easily redressed.

Ivory Mats.

There are but three mats of ivory in existence. The largest one measures 8 by 4 feet; and although made in the north of India, has a Greek design for a border. It is used only on state occasions, like the signing of important state documents. The cost of this precious mat was almost incalculable, for more than 6,400 pounds of pure ivory were used in its construction. Only the finest and most flexible strips of the material could be woven and the mat is like the finest woven fabric.

PUZZLED.

"What is worrying you now?" asked the commonsense man.
"Oh, nothing much," replied the man who is perpetually pensive. "I am merely trying to work out what has become of all the daylight I saved since we set the clocks forward."

Cleanses the Blood, Builds Up Strength, Improves Complexion

As a result of debility, sickness or improper diet, the blood often becomes weak and unable to free itself of poisons.

Morbid, unhealthy matter accumulates and breaks out in sores that discharge and will not heal. Washes, salves and ointments are useless because they have no action on the poisoned blood.

But Dr. Hamilton's Pills cleanse and enrich the diseased blood, drive out impurities and fill it with nutritious and strong building material. Ulcers, boils and sores heal up. Likewise all weakness due to impoverished blood is cured by these famous pills, and anemia, erysipelas and rheumatism go before it as chaff before fire.

The skin grows smooth, complexion clears, health, vigor and strength are evident on all sides. A blood remedy for blood diseases, the formula of a famous physician—no improvement can be made on Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Their use extends to the people of many nations and thousands have proved that they do cure when all else fails.

No matter what your ailment may be, if it has its origin in the blood it is curable with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Sold everywhere, 25c a box.

Blue Moons and Suns.

Astronomers of different countries have more than once recorded a blue moon. This remarkable phenomenon has been twice observed, both in Italy and Austria, but only once in England.

A blue sun has appeared once only, and will probably never be seen again, even to the end of existence. This occurred in August, 1883, at the Sunda States. The cause was the eruption of a large volcano. In the terrible shock that followed, a great range of mountains was blown completely into the air. The cavity left on the Sunda States after this explosion was one thousand feet deep. Billions of tons of rock, dust and mud were blown heavenwards for no less than seventeen miles.

The reader will see what the explosion was like, when it is said that at Batavia, exactly one hundred miles away, the street lamps had to be lit, although the time was not yet noon. The sun up to this time was completely obscured; but towards sunset—the sunset that only the tropics know—came the magnificent phenomenon known to astronomers as the Blue Sun. This was seen by everyone within thirty or forty degrees of the Equator.—Answers.

Primitive Ferryboats.

In a country where rivers are subject to sudden and heavy floods, bridges are in many cases so insecure that ferries must always be maintained in addition. Such is the case in India, and the methods of crossing streams to-day are what they have been from the earliest times. An American consular officer tells how he was taken across an Indian river at the time of a freshet. The contrivance was simple, and has been used in the Orient as long as history shows any record.

A cord having been fastened to a large, elongated gourd, and a smaller gourd being also tied to it, the native gets astride, and laying his breast upon the larger gourd paddles himself across with his hands and feet.

Women, too, avail themselves of this singular contrivance, under the escort of a ferryman, who, stowily mounted, takes his charge in tow, carries her basket, with perhaps a child in it, on his head, and conveys them safely across.

Herds of cattle swim these flooded rivers like water rats, and the herd boy, as a matter of course, takes the tail of the hindmost bullock in his hand, and thus gains a very comfortable lift across.

These methods of crossing rivers, however, are hardly in accordance with our ideas of comfort. So the American thought one day as he stood, after a long ride, on the bank of a wide and rapid stream which separated him from his halting place. He did not relish the idea of buffeting the muddy current on a horse of gourds, but as there was no boat within twenty miles it seemed as if he must either do this or bivouac on the bank without his dinner.

While he was in this dilemma a native signified that he would soon set the foreigner right. From a neighboring hut he brought a native bedstead—not a four poster such as Westerners use, but a small, light frame of wood having four little legs and held together by the interlacing of a piece of cord, which thus forms a sort of notched bottom to this simple piece of furniture. The native next brought out four round earthen pots, and after protecting the bottom of each with a few inches of sand he put the legs of the cot into the pots and signified that the vessel was ready to be launched.

As the American sat doubled up on the extemporized raft in company with his saddle he found himself raised an inch or so above the level of the water, the earthen pots forming admirable floats. A couple of lusty swimmers then took him in tow and soon landed him on the opposite bank.

SOME NEW SAUCES

In these wearisome days of high prices we housewives must serve bread, rice and poor man's puddings for dessert over and over again until our long-suffering families cry out in protest. Until eggs and sugar and cream go down, we cannot give them the charlottes, custards and souffles that we used to love to make, but we can vary them by making sauces that are different.

TRY A MOLASSES ONE.

A molasses sauce is especially good on an Indian cup. Boil a cup of molasses with a heaping tablespoonful of butter for about five minutes, remove from the fire and stir in slowly one tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar.

Nothing is better for a cornstarch pudding than a cup of left-over fruit juice. It can be watered if it is strong enough and thickened slightly with cornstarch, boiled and then cooled.

If you have a cup of stewed apricots, rub them through a sieve and mix with the beaten white of an egg. Serve it over plain boiled rice.

A veritable pudding sauce de luxe for a dark steamed pudding is made by creaming together one-half a cup of butter and one cup of brown sugar. Then add a few drops at a time, beating after each addition four tablespoonfuls of milk and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

A SOUR SAUCE.

Most people like a sour sauce on puddings, especially on cottage puddings. Mix half a cup of sugar with a tablespoonful of corn starch and a pinch of salt, and pour over it gradually a cup of boiling hot water. Boil five minutes, stirring all the time, then take from the stove and add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and a half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a few gratings of nutmeg.

A DESSERT MAKER.

A half a cup of heavy cream will make a sauce that will make any dessert popular. Beat the white of one egg, then add the yolk beaten until it is thick. Add a cup of powdered sugar gradually, then half a cup of milk, and flavor with vanilla.

QUEEN OF SAUCES.

Heat a pint of milk and add four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Moisten a tablespoonful of cornstarch with a little cold milk and stir into it and cook until it thickens. Remove from the stove and add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, a few drops of almond flavoring and a little grated nutmeg. Serve at once. The yolks can be used in the pudding.

FOR CHILD SAFETY.

Hydro Commission Plan to Avoid Fatalities.

This letter was recently sent to school teachers throughout the Province with a request that it be read to the pupils. It is part of the Hydro Commission's "Safety First" campaign.

Some days ago a schoolboy, while playing on the street, picked up an electric light wire. It seemed quite harmless, but he was instantly killed. During the last few years many lads have been killed by climbing poles and trees and touching wires.

The wires that you see support the poles along the streets and roads all carry electricity, very often at great pressure (or, as it is called, "voltage") when it is very deadly. These wires are always dangerous, and should never be touched under any circumstances.

Be careful to remember the following things:

1. Do not touch fallen or hanging wires.
2. Do not climb poles or towers.
3. Do not climb trees through which the wires pass.
4. Do not touch or shake any wires.
5. Do not throw stones at the insulators.
6. Do not fly kites across the wires.
7. Do not stand below men working overhead.
8. If you see a wire down, report it.
9. Keep away from switching towers, sub-stations and power houses.

THE COUNTRY JUSTICE.

An old offender was introduced to a new county justice as follows:
"John Timmins, alias Jones, alias Smith."
"I'll try the 'two women first,'" said the justice. "Bring in Alice Jones."

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent colds or if it does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly relieve it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRIEF MENTION

China's foreign population at the last count was 220,500.

The production of yarn from paper was known in Japan more than a century ago.

Germany has produced the greatest potato crop, with the United States second and the British Empire third.

Pennsylvania has more blind people among its residents than any other State, but the percentage is greater in New Mexico.

Columbus Circle is the busiest part of New York city. Forty thousand vehicles pass here in 12 hours.

The most satisfactory means of measuring the flow of gas is by means of a new electrical device. Amber can be made into a varnish by melting it, pouring oil upon it, and stirring in a little turpentine as it cools.

The pro rata share of the money in circulation in the U. S. is $54.56—nearly $5 more than it was last year. Anemone means "windflower," and is so called because it is so delicately poised that it sways with the lightest motion of the atmosphere.

Australian engineers have invented three-rail switches for use by railroads where three rails are laid in each track to accommodate rolling stock of different gauges.

To make ironwork proof against rust, heat it until it is almost red-hot, and then brush it over with linseed oil. This makes a varnish, which unlike ordinary paint or enamel, does not chip off.

THIS WOMAN SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, One of Thousands of Such Cases.

Black River Falls, Wis.—"As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation, I cannot say enough in praise of it. I suffered from organic troubles and my side hurt me so I could hardly be up from my bed, and I was unable to do my household work. I had the best doctors in Eau Claire and they wanted me to have an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me so I did not need the operation, and I am telling all my friends about it."—Mrs. A. W. BINGER, Black River Falls, Wis.

It is just such experiences as that of Mrs. Binger that has made this famous root and herb remedy a household word from ocean to ocean. Any woman who suffers from inflammation, ulceration, displacements, backache, nervousness, irregularities or "the blues" should not rest until she has given it a trial. For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Lynn, Mass.

A Labor Saving Combination

"It is the last straw that breaks the camel's back." So runs the old proverb. And it is the little extra efforts which tire you out on wash-day.

Eddy's Indurated Fibreware Washtubs and Washboards form a combination which save you much extra labor. Indurated Fibreware tubs are much easier to lift and to move about. They keep the water hot for a much longer space of time, because they do not conduct heat as metal does. They are easier to keep clean, because they are made in one piece without joint or seam, and the hard, glazed surface is impervious to liquids or odors. And they cost no more. Last longer, too. Eddy's Twin Beaver Washboard has a double rubbing surface of Indurated Fibreware which loosens the dirt quickly and saves many tiresome motions.

Brass is perhaps the best-known and most useful alloy. It is formed by fusing together copper, and zinc. Different proportions of these metals produce brasses possessing very marked distinctive properties. The portions of the different ingredients are seldom precisely alike; these depend upon the requirements of various uses for which the alloys are intended. Peculiar qualities of the constituent metals also exercise influence on the results.

"Why, I remember when I used to have to throw away a blade after a couple of shaves. Now, I simply take it and give a few turns on the strop and it's as good as ever."

"I can shave in three minutes, and my face is as smooth and slick and comfortable as when the head barber used to go over it. To clean, I simply put the blade under the tap and wipe it off. Life Span of Industrial Workers.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Sanitary Institute, reported in the Westminster Gazette, Dr. Edgar L. Collis, Director of Welfare and Health, Ministry of Munitions, said that to-day the average age of death among industrial workers was 50, which compared sadly with that of about 67, the average for underpaid and badly housed agricultural workers.

Describing the methods adopted by the Ministry of Munitions for improving the conditions in factories, Dr. Collis said the introduction of welfare workers has been a great success. This would always be the case wherever their duties were not strangled by routine and red tape. Four thousand women welfare workers had been appointed to care for women and girls, and four hundred for boys.

An important part of the new industrial development would be the light work depots, which would also be day nurseries and centres of mother-craft for mothers of young children.

OID IN BULGARIA.

Stolen Statue Will Be Returned to Roumania.

It was a bitter blow to Publius Ovidius Naso, the best selling poet of Augustan Rome, when the Emperor exiled him to a desolate town on the barren shores of the Black Sea as a punishment for too faithfully reflecting the manners of his time. There he lived his last years and there he died; nor did a gentleman used to the luxurious life of the capital of the world ever quite reconcile himself to the society of barbarous Scythians.

Two thousand years later Ovid would have liked it better. By that time the town of Tomi had become Constantza, one of the principal ports of Roumania and the summer resort of the wealthy and ease-loving society of Bucharest. And every day gentlemen very much like Ovid, and ladies whom Ovid would have liked very much, passed through the Plaza Ovidiu, where a statue of the poet commemorated the first incursion, if an unwilling one, of the leisure class. In due course of time, however, Constantza fell into the hands of Scythians more ungracious than those among whom Ovid had lived. When the Bulgarian army overran the Dobruja in 1916 it was followed by the expropriators whom all the Central Powers sent into occupied territory. The Bulgars, like the Germans, were acquisitive; they would take anything from factory machinery to first editions and Japanese prints. Among the plunder shipped back into Bulgaria from Constantza was the statue of Ovid, once more an exile.

Malicious Roumanians have said that the Bulgarians did not know who Ovid was, that they thought the statue was that of the Mayor of Constantza. Whether this be true or not, the Bulgars have been considerably more careless about the preservation of classical remains than the Roumanians. Some years ago a great heap of stones with Roman inscriptions lay in a museum yard in Sofia with grass growing among them; nobody had cared to take the trouble to carry them indoors. Perhaps Ovid was thrown in among them to await such time as the Bulgar had leisure from his forays into other lands and could arrange culture to suit himself; at any rate, Ovid escaped the ignominy of being melted and burned into shell cases, for after vigorous protests from Roumania and the Allies the Bulgarian Government finally shipped him back to Constantza. One could wish that all the wrongs suffered by Roumania could be so easily redressed.

Ivory Mats.

There are but three mats of ivory in existence. The largest one measures 8 by 4 feet; and although made in the north of India, has a Greek design for a border. It is used only on state occasions, like the signing of important state documents. The cost of this precious mat was almost incalculable, for more than 6,400 pounds of pure ivory were used in its construction. Only the finest and most flexible strips of the material could be used and the mat is like the finest woven fabric.

Cleanses the Blood, Builds Up Strength, Improves Complexion

As a result of debility, sickness or improper diet, the blood often becomes weak and unable to free itself of poisons.

Storbid, unhealthy matter accumulates and breaks out in sores that discharge and will not heal. Washes, salves and ointments are useless because they have no action on the poisoned blood.

But Dr. Hamilton's Pills cleanse and enrich the diseased blood, drive out impurities and fill it with nutrient and strong building material. Ulcers, boils and sores heal up. Likewise all weakness due to impoverished blood is cured by these famous pills, and anemia, erysipelas and rheumatism go before it as chaff before fire.

The skin grows smooth, complexion clears, health, vigor and strength are evident on all sides.

A blood remedy for blood diseases, the formula of a famous physician—no improvement can be made on Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Their use extends to the people of many nations and thousands have proved that they do cure when all else fails.

No matter what your ailment may be, if it has its origin in the blood it is curable with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Sold everywhere, 25c a box.

Blue Moons and Suns.

Astronomers of different countries have more than once recorded a blue moon. This remarkable phenomenon has been twice observed, both in Italy and Austria, but only once in England.

A blue sun has appeared once only, and will probably never be seen again, even to the end of existence. This occurred in August, 1883, at the Sunda States. The cause was the eruption of a large volcano. In the terrible shock that followed, a great range of mountains was blown completely into the air. The cavity left on the Sunda States after this explosion was one thousand feet deep. Billions of tons of rock, dust and mud were blown heavenwards for no less than seventeen miles.

The reader will see what the explosion was like, when it is said that at Batavia, exactly one hundred miles away, the street lamps had to be lit, although the time was not yet noon. The sun up to this time was completely obscured; but towards sunset—the sunset that only the tropics know—came the magnificent phenomenon known to astronomers as the Blue Sun. This was seen by everyone within thirty or forty degrees of the Equator. Answers.

Primitive Ferryboats.

In a country where rivers are subject to sudden and heavy floods, bridges are in many cases so insecure that ferries must always be maintained in addition. Such is the case in India, and the methods of crossing streams to-day are what they have been from the earliest times. An American consular officer tells how he was taken across an Indian river at the time of a freshet. The contrivance was simple, and has been used in the Orient as long as history shows any record.

A cord having been fastened to a large, elongated gourd, and a smaller gourd being also tied to it, the native gets astride, and laying his breast up on the larger gourd, paddles himself across with his hands and feet.

Women, too, avail themselves of this singular contrivance, under the escort of a ferryman, who, similarly mounted, takes his charge in tow, carries her basket, with perhaps a child in it, on his head, and conveys them safely across.

Herds of cattle swim these flooded rivers like water rats, and the herd boy, as a matter of course, takes the tail of the hindmost bullock in his hand, and thus gains a very comfortable lift across.

These methods of crossing rivers, however, are hardly in accordance with our ideas of comfort. So the American thought one day as he stood, after a long ride, on the bank of a wide and rapid stream which separated him from his halting place. He did not relish the idea of buffeting the muddy current on a horse of gourd, but as there was no boat within twenty miles it seemed as if he must either do this or bivouac on the bank without his dinner.

While he was in this dilemma a native signified that he would soon set the foreigner right. From a neighboring hut he brought a native bedstead—not a four poster such as Westerners use, but a small, light frame of wood having four little legs and held together by the interlacing of a piece of cord, which thus forms a sort of netted bottom to this simple piece of furniture. The native next brought out four round earthen pots, and after protecting the bottom of each with a few inches of sand he put the legs of the cot into the pots and signified that the vessel was ready to be launched.

As the American sat doubled up on the extemporized raft in company with his saddle he found himself raised an inch or so above the level of the water, the earthen pots forming an admirable float. A couple of lusty swimmers then took him in tow and soon landed him on the opposite bank.

SOME NEW SAUCES

In these wearisome days of high prices we housewives must serve bread, rice and poor man's puddings for dessert over and over again until our long-suffering families cry out in protest. Until eggs and sugar and cream go down, we cannot give them the charlottes, custards and souffles that we used to love to make, but we can vary them by making sauces that are different.

TRY A MOLASSES ONE.

A molasses sauce is especially good on an Indian cup. Boil a cup of molasses with a heaping tablespoonful of butter for about five minutes, remove from the fire and stir in slowly one tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar.

Nothing is better for a cornstarch pudding than a cup of left-over fruit juice. It can be watered if it is strong enough and thickened slightly with cornstarch, boiled and then cooled.

If you have a cup of stewed apricots, rub them through a sieve and mix with the beaten white of an egg. Serve it over plain boiled rice.

A veritable pudding sauce de luxe for a dark steamed pudding is made by creaming together one-half a cup of butter and one cup of brown sugar. Then add a few drops at a time, beating after each addition four tablespoonfuls of milk and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

A SOUR SAUCE.

Most people like a sour sauce on puddings, especially on cottage puddings. Mix half a cup of sugar with a tablespoonful of corn starch and a pinch of salt, and pour over it gradually a cup of boiling hot water. Boil five minutes, stirring all the time, then take from the stove and add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and a half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a few gratings of nutmeg.

A DESSERT MAKER.

A half a cup of heavy cream will make a sauce that will make any dessert popular. Beat the white of one egg, then add the yolk beaten until it is thick. Add a cup of powdered sugar gradually, then half a cup of milk, and flavor with vanilla.

QUEEN OF SAUCES.

Heat a pint of milk and add four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Moisten a tablespoonful of cornstarch with a little cold milk and stir into it and cook until it thickens. Remove from the stove and add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, a few drops of almond flavoring and a little grated nutmeg. Serve at once. The yolks can be used in the pudding.

FOR CHILD SAFETY.

Hydro Commission Plan to Avoid Fatalities.

This letter was recently sent to school teachers throughout the Province with a request that it be read to the pupils. It is part of the Hydro Commission's "Safety First" campaign. Some days ago a schoolboy, while playing on the street, picked up an electric light wire. It seemed quite harmless, but he was instantly killed. During the last few years many lads have been killed by climbing poles and trees and touching wires.

The wires that you see support the poles along the streets and roads all carry electricity, very often at great pressure (or, as it is called, "voltage") when it is very deadly. These wires are always dangerous, and should never be touched under any circumstances.

Be careful to remember the following things:

1. Do not touch fallen or hanging wires.
2. Do not climb poles or towers.
3. Do not climb trees through which the wires pass.
4. Do not touch or shake any wires.
5. Do not throw stones at the insulators.
6. Do not fly kites across the wires.
7. Do not stand below men working overhead.
8. If you see a wire down, report it.
9. Keep away from switching towers, sub-stations and power houses.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent colds or if it does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly relieve it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Referendum Headquarters, Brockville, Ont., Oct. 14, 1919.

Editor Athens Reporter.

According to reports coming into this office, there seems to be a misunderstanding with respect to Question 4 on the Referendum ballot. A number of voters have signified their intention of voting "Yes" to No. 4 in order to remedy what they consider a weakness in the present method of dispensing liquors for medicinal purposes.

The point to notice, however, and to emphasize is this: The present ballot has absolutely nothing to do with the sale of liquors for medicinal purposes. It is a 'clear-cut' question as to whether the people want liquor sold in the shops for any purpose.

It may be true that the method in use at the present time is not the best that can be devised, but that can be improved on from time to time by amendments to the Act now in force as the growing experience of the Province reveals its weakness, until ultimately a method shall be found that will meet the needs of the situation.

It is necessary to vote X under "No" to No. 4 in order to prevent the re-introduction of the liquor shop with all its attendant evils. When that has been accomplished, we can turn our attention to the task of amending the present Act, in order to find, if possible, a better method than that now in use in dispensing liquors for medicinal purposes.

To vote "Yes" to No. 4 would mean that every woman and man citizen of Ontario would be a partner in the liquor dispensing business and would to a degree be responsible for the evil results that would very likely ensue.

The only way to mark a safe prohibition ballot is to put "X" under NO to question 4 as well as to Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Yours truly,

W. T. ROGERS,
