LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER IV.

The governess, Miss Aveland, had accompanied her pupil through all her travels, the result of which was that Angela's education had not been neglected for a single day; and on her return to Rood Abbey she was able to speak French and German with fluency.

For over four years mother and daughter led this pleasant wandering existence, and then Lady Rooden began to feel a longing for home. The first bitterness of her grief had begun to abate, and she told herself that she had mourned her husband well and sincerely.

He had been most devoted, and his loss was an irreparable one to her; but she was still young and beautiful, and, as her sorrow died, all her love of social life returned, and her keen sense of enjoyment, all her desire for pleasure and gaiety. True, she would miss the kindly husband who had made her days so bright, her home so happy, who had surrounded her with such loving care and tenderness; but life had innumerable sources of interest left for her yet.

When Lady Rooden first spoke to her daughter of returning home, the girl's face beamed with delight, and then suddenly grew sad. "I am glad, mamma," she said—"glad yet sorry. We shall seem nearer to papa; but it will almost break my heart to see Rooden Abbey without him."

Four years had in a great measure healed the wound that the death of her husband had caused in Lady Rooden's heart; they had given her time to forget him, they had shown her how it was possible to live without him; but those same four years had brought Angela Rooden to look upon her father as a hero and a saint. The most reverential affection filled her heart and soul. In the ranks of the living there was no one like her father; and she worshipped his memory with a growing and strengthen ardor. During those years of travel she had never lost an indefinable sense of his near presence; she had never forgotten her mother's words, that she was to think of him always as watching her from the blue skies. And now she was going back to the home she had left in such a passion of sorrow and despair a few years before—returning with her mother to begin a new life.

While Miss Aveland had lived with them, Angela had, of course, spent the greater part of her time with her in perfecting her education. Lady Rooden was somewhat of a Sybarite; she delighted in easy couches and French novels. Her daughter, although living under the same roof with her, and never having been parted from her for a day, did not understand her casually. Naturally enough, she idealized it. In her loving eyes, while others considered faults she recognized only as virtues.

When Lady Rooden and Angela returned to Rooden Abbey, Miss Aveland left them. The old home was more beautiful than ever in the eyes of the young girl who had spent such a happy childhood there, the loveliness of the dawning spring added to its attractions, and Angela was loath to leave it even for all the promised glories of London. She had reached her seventeenth year now and Lady Rooden was anxious that she should be presented at the first Drawing-room held in May.

So in May they went to town; and Angela's presentation was a great success, and society welcomed mother and daughter with open arms. Before many days had passed they were inundated with invitations and courted by all the leaders of London society. The world found Lady Rooden more beautiful and charming than ever, and it found her daughter even more beautiful than herself.

"What a curious life it is, mamma!" Angela remarked one morning, when they were dressing to attend a fashionable wedding. "It always seems to me so unreal."

"In what way, Angela? It is real enough to me."

"It gives me the impression of always being at a theatre, or on a stage," she replied. "We go from one thing to another—ridings, driving, visiting; we go to dinners, balls, gatherings; nothing occupies us for long together, and every hour brings a change. I should not like the rush of a London season always mamma."

"I should," confessed Lady Rooden; and the girl looked up in undisguised wonder at her mother.

"Would you?" she questioned; and then she flung her arms round her mother's shapely neck, and cried, "No wonder, mamma; you are so lovely, and every one loves you! It is a fancy of mine that no room is bright until you enter it."

And Lady Rooden, who delighted in nothing so much as praise, smiled at the eager young face. She enjoyed thoroughly her daughter's worshiping love and honest admiration. She liked to know that her child admired her and thought her the fairest of women.

It was a new experience to Angela to see her mother surrounded by admirers. She had idealized her so completely, and had so convinced herself that her mother's heart was enshrined in her father's memory, that she had never contemplated the possibility of her mother's contracting another alliance. She had never in her own mind separated her father from her mother. Although he was no longer on earth, they were still united in her thoughts—not parted, even though death lay between them. No girl ever wept more bitterly than did Angela when her mother took off her widow's cap and allowed her luxurious tresses to be seen.

Lady Rooden could not understand such strange conduct.

"You ought to be pleased, Angela," she said, rebuking the girl; "I cannot even understand why you cry."

Nor could the girl herself explain the feeling of jealous love for her father's memory which made her dislike to see the outward sign of mourning laid aside.

Now, when she saw her mother surrounded by admirers, the sensation was a novel one. To see men hovering about her, trying to outvie each other in paying her attention, trying to discover who could win from her brightest smiles, astonished her. She forgot all about her own admirers in her contemplation of the new situation. It was a fresh light in which to view her own mother; and she was not at first quite sure whether it pained or pleased her most. She was unconscious of the admiration which she herself excited—indeed she did not care much about the fashionable life or the homage she unwittingly extorted. Hitherto she had lived more in the world of art than of men; and to herself she acknowledged that she preferred the former. She was wonderfully inexperienced in the ways of fashionable men and women. This was the result perhaps of not having any youthful friends of her own sex with whom to converse "on lovers and fashion," and the many other encouraged conversation on such matters. Many girls of twelve knew more of love and flirtations than this tall, slender girl who took such a serious view of life. She brought with her into the world of fashion and frivolity all the noble thoughts, the lofty and spiritual ideas, the tender delicate fancies and vague sweet longings which were the outcome of her peculiar temperament and of the peculiar life she had led.

CHAPTER V.

"I think," said Lady Rooden to her daughter, as the door closed after their handsome visitor, "that Captain Wynyard is, without exception, the most graceful and chivalrous man I have ever seen."

"Not that you have ever, but that you have seen for some time, mamma," corrected Angela. "You have seen papa!"

The fair face of Lady Rooden flushed and paled as her daughter uttered these words.

"My dear Angela," she said, "there is not and cannot be any comparison. Your papa stands apart from the whole world of men. I never did and never shall compare him with others. When I speak of men I never include him."

Angela kissed the beautiful face, as if in token of her satisfaction with the explanation.

"I know, mamma," she responded; "but he is always so vividly present to me. I wonder if, as the years pass on, I shall lose the curious feeling I have of his always being near me, of his seeing all that is done, and hearing all that is said? It is so real with me that, even when you said that Captain Wynyard was the most chivalrous man you had ever seen, I had an uneasy feeling it would hurt papa."

"That is a morbid feeling, Angela, and comes from the fact that you have lived more in the world of thought and memory than in the world of every-day life. We were speaking of Captain Wynyard, and I was about to observe that I admire him exceedingly—I have not met with any one in society who has pleased me so much."

"I am glad to hear it, mamma. I like you to meet pleasant people."

Finest Railway Systems.

The only railway station without a staff in England is the High Rocks station, between Tunbridge Wells and Groombridge. It has no station-master, booking clerk, porter, booking office, or waiting-room. The trains serving it are drawn by baby engines, and the guard acts in the manifold capacity of a complete station staff.

But one need not go out of London to find stations run on almost similar lines, says an English writer. The Waterloo-City Railway, known to tens of thousands of business men, consists of two termini, one at Waterloo and the other in the City, and at least a third of its length runs "under the River Thames."

At neither station is there a station-master, porter, or ticket clerk, for you buy your ticket on the train as you do on a bus, and throw it away when you get to the other end!

There is a railway station in Derbyshire where trains stop only on one day in the week to enable the inhabitants of the village of Blackwell Mill to go shopping to Buxton!

What claims to be the shortest passenger line in the world may be seen at Grouville, not far from Douglas, Isle of Man. It is one mile long, and the gauge is only two feet. It was made to convey passengers from the entrance to Grouville Glen to the seashore. The engine looks like a toy, but is powerful and well made, and the open cars carry ten passengers.

The smallest fully working line is probably the Eskdale Railway, which runs over the seven miles which separate Ravenglass, on the west coast of Cumberland, from the foot of Schafall, the highest mountain in England.

If the engine fails to take the points and runs off the lines, passengers help the driver and guard to lift it bodily back to its proper place! This novel railway carries large quantities of goods as well as passengers, reducing the cost of road transport in a very different way by one-half.

Fireproof defended.

British scientists contending that the fireplace is not so wasteful as it may seem, have recently completed experiments showing that the best coal-fired grates give out 25 per cent. of the heat of the fuel consumed, while gas fireplaces are nearly 60 per cent. efficient and electrical heaters about 75 per cent. Radiant heat, moreover, is said to have certain physiological advantages over warm air from a heating apparatus.

Radiated heat, travels directly through space without appreciably warming the air it traverses, although it heats any solid body it strikes. The British heating ideal was explained by Prof. W. A. Bone, of the British Fuel Economy Committee.

"The more nearly conditions under which our living rooms are warmed and ventilated approach those of a warm summer's day—a cooling breeze blowing around our heads, the varying sunshine warming one side of the body, and the heated ground warming our feet—the more healthful our rooms will be; radiated heat creates these conditions."

Women Who Care Now beautify teeth in this way Millions of them—the world over

Careful people, well advised, now use a new teeth-cleaning method—millions of them in every clime, and largely by dental advice. Beautiful teeth you see everywhere show the results of this method. It is something you should know. Learn what it means to you and yours. Make this free ten-day test. In contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film. Under old methods, they were constantly increasing. The most careful people rarely escaped. Two combatants now found two film combatants. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it. Able authorities have amply proved their efficiency. Now leading dentists the world over are urging their daily use. A new tooth paste has been created, based on modern research. It brings five effects now considered essential. It avoids several old mistakes. This tooth paste is called Pepsodent. And those two great film combatants are embodied in it. Other desired effects Modern research has found other effects essential, and Pepsodent brings those effects. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth which may otherwise ferment and form acids. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize the acids which cause decay. Thus Pepsodent gives manifold power to Nature's great tooth-protecting agents. It polishes the teeth so film less easily adheres. Old-time tooth pastes, based on soap and chalk, brought just opposite effects. In these ways, Pepsodent is bringing a new dental era. Already it has brought to millions whiter, cleaner, safer teeth. The peoples of fifty nations are being taught to use it. And their children will get life-long benefits which your childhood missed.

COMPARISONS.

"Watchman," who is writing a series of articles on current topics, particularly political, in the Daily News, has patently disturbed the customary equanimity of the "official organ," and to use a modern expression, slangy it is true, but none the less apropos, has put the wind up the Advocate. His letter in yesterday's issue of our morning contemporary offers a few lines of new thought to the pencil artists of the former paper, who are working overtime drawing pictures of comparison between the financial conditions of Canada and those of Newfoundland. But it is not expected—it cannot be expected—that the multiplicity of controversial writers at present employed on the staff of the "organ" will come back with any sane or comprehensive arguments. Rather will they put on the loud pedal and endeavour to perform by noise and sound, that which they have so signally failed to do by the process of logical reasoning. Canada's National Debt, it is true, is huge, but the Dominion has equally huge natural resources of field, forest, mine and ocean, and beside all these, there is an enormous increasing population. Canada's Debt to-day is something like $2,400,000,000. This is a colossal sum, but when divided by the number of population, it is not so gigantic after all, considering that much of this money has been spent in production, construction and development. And much can be shown in actuality for such expenditure. True Canada's debt has grown, but so has the country. With Newfoundland the very revenue is the case. The debt has grown but the country has not. We are not a great deal—if anything—better off to-day, with all our boasted railroad and steamboat transportation facilities, and if the truth were told it is in these and other costly experiments and failures that the greater portion of our public borrowings have been swallowed up; and will continue to be, so long as a singularly inept and incapable administration remains in uncontrolled and irresponsible charge of the Colony's affairs. The burden of the public debt is made up by the increase per capita. That alone tells the story. For every loan raised on the public credit, there has to be more and more taxation to meet the growing interest. Countries with a view to reducing this burden on the taxpayers have discovered ways and means to bring about this process gradually. Newfoundland has not even made the attempt. On the contrary another loan will have to be raised in the very near future, with its further weight of interest, for which the already sweated taxpayer will have to find funds. And so it goes on. Promises of reduced taxation are illusory, and cannot be otherwise when the public debt is piling up and piling up. In Newfoundland, as elsewhere, it can be said that to reckless taxation to pay for foolish commitments of the Government, is due the unemployment which is such a menace to the community, and such a misery to the individual.

Congratulates Royal Grandparents.

His Excellency the Governor has sent the following message to Their Majesties, through the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on behalf of the Government and people of Newfoundland:—"Newfoundland Govt. and people send respectful congratulations to Their Majesties on the birth of their first grandchild."

U. F. Movement.

DELEGATES HOLD SUCCESSFUL MEETINGS. The following message, received from Bonavista Bay yesterday, intimates that the Fishermen's Campaign in the Northern Districts is meeting with the approval of the people. Southern Bay, N.B., Feb. 7.—The United Fishermen delegates, Messrs. White and Winsor, are here. They have held meetings at Green Hill, Plate Cove, Summerville, Sweet Bay, and Southern Bay with marked success; the people being strong for the movement.

Springdale, Feb. 8.—An enthusiastic meeting was held here last night, when the delegates of the United Fishermen's Movement, Messrs. Carter and Winsor, spoke on the resolutions adopted at the beginning, pointing out just what were the aims and aspirations of the organization, which were heartily received and applauded. The cutting out of useless expenditure, and the reduction of taxation appeals to all, and Springdale, in common with other places, visited by delegates in this district, endorses the movement.

Fire at Mercantile Office.

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE AT BOW-RINGS. Last evening the Central and East End Fire Companies were called to Bowring Bros. Ltd., Water Street, where a blaze was discovered in the firm's office, situated over the hardware and grocery stores. The seat of the blaze appeared to be near an open fire grate in the Insurance Office. A stream of water and chemicals were used with good effect and after 15 minutes the fire was put out. Considerable damage was done to the furnishings both in the insurance and correspondence offices. The hardware and grocery stores, on the ground floor, were also damaged by water. For the first time the new salvage covers, recently imported by the Department, were used, and a large part of the stocks were kept dry in consequence. How the fire originated is not known, but it is believed to have been caused by fire from the grate falling on the floor. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Schooner Workman Lost.

RAN AWAY FROM S.S. MARYLAND. According to a message received yesterday by Messrs. A. E. Hickman, Ltd., the tern schooner "Workman," bound to Seville, Spain, with a fish cargo, was run down by S.S. Maryland and so badly battered by the collision that she sank. The crew were all taken off by the steamer. The news of the collision was received yesterday by Messrs. Hickman & Co. from the owners of the Maryland at Copenhagen, who had been informed by a wireless from the captain of the ship. The "Workman" loaded here last month from Lazo & Company. She was built in 1917 at Bonavista to the order of A. E. Hickman & Co. The vessel was commanded by Capt. Anstey and the crew are all local men.

Terrible Experience of the S.S. Kyle.

One Hundred and Twenty Hours on Trip St. John's to Port aux Basques--Ice Shrouded and Battered By Tremendous Seas--Second Officer Washed Overboard and Drowned.

The report received by the Reid Newfoundland Co. at noon to-day stated that S.S. Kyle was making Port aux Basques, steaming slowly through heavy ice. The ship, since leaving here on Saturday evening last, has been beset with exceptionally stormy weather, with the consequent loss of one of her crew, second officer Robert Carter, who was washed overboard, and the injury of seaman Blackmore. Shortly after the Kyle left the port of St. John's a storm came on, and the thermometer dropped to 10 below zero. Many anticipated that the ship would have an awful battle with the elements, as on the land the wind raged with hurricane force. The Reid Co. said that she was in the vicinity of Cape Race making little or no progress. On Monday night a further message stated that the ship had progressed far as St. Pierre. With a N.W. gale striking down from the Gulf the ship had the hardest part of the trip to face, and in all probability she would have made her destination on Monday evening, but for the fact that zero weather, with seas continually sweeping the decks, led the ship so that any rate of speed was impossible and Captain Stevenson was obliged to leave the ship in order to free her of the weight of ice which impeded steaming. It was whilst engaged at this work that the loss of second officer Robert Carter occurred. According to a wireless message received from Captain Stevenson yesterday the tragic happening occurred on Tuesday morning at 2.45 o'clock. The message stated that second officer Carter was washed overboard from the forecastle deck whilst he, with other members of the crew, was engaged in beating ice from the bulwarks and rails. A heavy gale of wind with high seas prevailed at the time and though all possible was done to try and save the unfortunate man the effort proved unavailing. In Captain Stevenson's message relative to the sad occurrence to the Reid Co., he also stated that an accident had happened to one of the sailors named Fred Blackmore of Chagnel. This seaman had his leg injured by being thrown about the ice coated deck. The limb is badly swollen, but it is not known if it is broken. The loss of Officer Carter will be deeply regretted. For a long number of years he has been connected with the Reid ships and about 18 months ago he was promoted to the position of Second Officer on the Kyle, succeeding the late Benjamin Billard of Port aux Basques. Mr. Carter, who was born at Cape Ray, was about 32 years old and has a wife and three children living at Port aux Basques. On receipt of the sad news the Reid Co. Company wired the Rev. H. J. Read, who broke the terrible tidings to the family. YESTERDAY THE Kyle was about 120 miles East by South of Channel Head, steaming through sheet ice, and according to the latest information the ship should reach her destination this evening. The trip has occupied nearly 120 hours, and is probably the most eventful one in the experience of any of those on board. Leaving here the ship took a large mail and the following passengers:—Miss E. Cheeseman, M. Parsons, A. Spieler, Mrs. A. T. Ward, A. Gill, J. Foley, W. G. Parsons, W. Walsh, N. Ryan, P. Walsh, E. Penney, V. White, J. Kennedy and J. Manuel.

Exorcism Still Practiced.

CHARGE AGAINST INDIAN PAKER. LONDON.—(Canadian Press).—The exorcising of evil spirits in the old barbarous manner by fakirs in India has not entirely died out yet, although it has been supposedly out of fashion as a result of British rule. At one time the practice was not uncommon. For a number of years however, nothing has been heard officially as to operating until very recently. The correspondent of the "Times" at Lahore, India, writes about a recent case. He states that the Amritsar police have published particulars of a most extraordinary charge against a fakir, who is believed to have caused the death of a man who had been confined to his bed for several months. The victim and his relatives, believing that evil spirits had entered them, decided to summon the fakir. His method of exorcising the spirits was to beat one of the sick brothers with hot irons and to thrust smoke into his nostrils, the victim walling in agony during the treatment. The man's walls were attributed by the fakir to the gripes of the spirit within him. The patient here this torture for an hour. Then he died. The fakir is at large, and the police are searching for him. A medical examination of the man who was tortured to death shows that he had received not less than eighty serious injuries.

Lived 12,000 Years Ago.

Skeletons and weapons of a colony of cliff dwellers, believed to have lived more than 12,000 years ago, described as a pre-bush man race—have been discovered by Mr. P. Fitzsimmons, Director of the Fort Elizabeth Museum during his investigations of the cliff dwellings overlooking the rocky shores of the Trisitikama region, between Humbermouth and Kayne, Cape Colony. "It is a point of great interest," says Mr. Fitzsimmons, "that these cliff dwellers were not of stunted physical growth, but according to their skeletons, big men and women." The rock shelters are in the face of the cliffs which overlook the sea, and it was in some instances necessary to cut a way up to them from the sea shore. "I have obtained specimens of practically everything in these cliff dwellings," Mr. Fitzsimmons says, "including a number of human skeletons, bone chisels, awls, beads, and food grinders. The cliff dwellers ate shell fish, dug pitfalls for animals, and their shelters were only accessible by perilous pathways, a slip from which would have meant certain death. Until now they were erroneously termed Pygmy Bushmen but I am able to prove that they were physically big, and the ancestors of the Pygmies, who eventually became stunted, because their forebears lived in the low wooded caves."

Russian Girl and Millionaire's Son.

The New York Herald states that Sir Derrick Werther, Bart, whose father was head of the firm of Werther, Bell and Co., was married in New York three weeks ago to Miss Thores Romanoff, a Russian. The news is a small fact. Sir Derrick declares that he is a poor man, and is engaged in an advertising business. By Sir Derrick's marriage at the age of 33 an unusual provision in his father's will becomes operative. The late Sir Julius Werther, who died in 1912, left some £5,000,000, but to his eldest son, Sir Derrick, he bequeathed only £250,000. This sum was to be held in trust, and Sir Derrick was not to receive more than £1200 a year while between 25 and 30, or more than £1200 after he reached the age of 30. The balance of the interest as well as the £150,000 principal will be held on Sir Derrick's death for the benefit of his wife and children. Sir Derrick was made bankrupt in the year that he succeeded to the title. He has lived in the United States for the past few years. His mother, after the death of Sir Julius Werther, married Lord Ludlow, who was killed recently in a hunting acci-

OUT OF THE DEAD PAST.

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 8. Excavators, working at King Tutankhamen's tomb, have come to the conclusion that some malignant influence is radiating from it. Yesterday an endeavour to get an electric light service set up inside the tomb went out of commission. A thorough overhauling uncovered no flaws, and was put into operation again, but only for a short time, when the tomb was again plunged into darkness, thus further delaying the opening of the inner chamber. Controversies are raging in Egypt as to the ownership of these discoveries, and an act is being passed rendering all future discoveries of a like nature the property of the Egyptians.

WHAT OF OUR N.R.'S?

OTTAWA, ONT., Feb. 8. The Canadian Naval Authorities are distributing over four hundred thousand dollars of prize money, growing out of seizures made by the navy during the war. 5,070 officers and men, who were with the Royal Canadian navy and auxiliary services during the war, are entitled to naval prize money. The first payment to date, $175,000 is nearly completed and the second payment of $258,000 is well under way. In order to receive payments of prize funds at full rates, Royal Canadian naval officers and men are required to have performed sea service for not less than thirty months, between August 4, 1914 and November 11, 1918. For lesser periods the service payment is proportionate to the number of months served, one month being the minimum required.

TURKS BLUFF CALLED.

LONDON, Feb. 8. An order to French and British war craft at Smyrna to defend themselves if attacked by the Turks is the answer of Paris and London to the Turkish ultimatum demanding the withdrawal of these vessels from Smyrna Harbor. News from Constantinople is to the effect that the British have gone a step further in ordering other ships to the Mediterranean fleet to Smyrna. To-day's reports say all is quiet in Smyrna and there is no attempt on the part of the Turks to enforce their order.

"Lady Bountiful" Arrested.

Mrs. Lillian Knox the young and beautiful widow, who is stated to possess a fortune of more than $2,000,000, was arrested on Tuesday at her country estate and charged with the murder on November 25 of her aged husband, Miriam Knox, one of the richest men in Texas. The arrest has caused much stir, for Mrs. Knox is widely known and beloved because of her philanthropic activities and lavish hospitality. During the latter years of her husband's life she built the Bronson and Hemphill Railway to gratify the wishes of her country neighbours. For their entertainment she frequently engaged theatrical companies, whom she imported from distant towns on her own railway in order that they might perform at her private residence. She acted as general manager of her husband's many lumber mills. Mr. Knox was found dead in bed on November 25th, with a bullet through the brain.

Newfoundlander

RETRIBUTES HIS NATIVE LAND—
SAYS JAMES E. MCGRATH

say—had better take cognizance of his presence in New York City, and send him away on a mission to the Patagonians or Terra del Fuegians. In this direction his talents would show to better advantage, and he would have all the latitude possible to teach the natives that to damn the British was the height of culture. But on the other hand Mr. McGrath's heart may be bigger than his head. In that case, and there seems no doubt of it, he has an outcropping of the vital organ, for which he should receive immediate treatment, otherwise the swelling or protrusion might prove fatal, simply because there was no brain to be affected. That Mr. McGrath possesses a certain quality of grey matter, your correspondent does not wish to discuss, but these may be left over until each time as the renegade Newfoundlander desires to make reply. There are also other Newfoundlander holding positions in towns and cities of the Atlantic States of the Union, who may feel disposed to answer some of the idiosyncrasies of this magician of the pen, who poses as being on the staff of the Wall Street Journal. Until such time as I read their disclaimers in the local press, I shall withhold any further comment upon one who is as lacking as he is mean in mental capacity. By way of conclusion I may be permitted to say that I was not surprised at the republication of this amazing letter of Mr. McGrath by the Advocate yesterday, under the heading of "Gets After Telegram." That paper has an inherent propensity for saving, doing and publishing anything that it thinks will bring discredit to the "People's Paper," but its patriotism is only on a par with that of James E. McGrath, whose sentiments it espouses and whose letter it prints four days after it appeared in the columns of your paper. The Advocate is supposed to be and it boastingly proclaims in every issue, that it is the friend of the fishermen of Newfoundland, but did it defend the sealers what that time George Allan England wrote up his hot pole of incomprehensible diatribe on their manners, customs and language in the magazine of America? Not so that, one could notice it; but rather that custodian of the fishermen's rights and privileges violated over these same articles and said they were the best examples of folk talk that ever were written. Let the Northern men read the letter of James E. McGrath as published in the Advocate yesterday, and then they can judge for themselves who was really the defender of the sealers against Allan England's half truths, the Advocate, the selfish friend of the sealers, or the Telegram, which promptly took Mr. England to task.

Choir Concert.

AT PRESBYTERIAN HALL.
Tonight in the Presbyterian Hall the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will give a grand concert consisting of part songs, solos, instrumental selections, etc. Among the items to be rendered are such favorites as "The Bridal Chorus," from the Rose Maiden (Cowan), "Song of the Vikings" (Fanning), "March of the Cameron Men" (Scottish), "Anvil Chorus" from Il Trovatore, also two charming unaccompanied numbers "My Heart is Fair" (Scottish), and "O' Hie Me, Me, Me" (Sullivan). The choir has been rehearsing very earnestly during the past few weeks and a splendid rendition is assured. The following members of the choir (all well known on local concert programmes) will render solos:—Misses M. Mitchell, Ruth Calvert, Isa Glendinning, Phyllis Murray; Messrs. A. R. Stansfield, A. Lawrence, while Mr. Billy Mawer will be heard in numerous Scotch songs. An interesting item will be that fine Scottish song, "A Highlandman's Toast," to be given by J. C. Hoppburn. The assisting artists are Hon. Alex. Mews, who will be heard in two delightful cello solos, and Mr. Arthur Bulley who has so often charmed St. John's audiences with his horn solos. Taken altogether, the programme is a very popular one and should prove attractive to all music lovers. The concert is under the able direction of Mr. Montefel Mawer, who will also act as accompanist.

THE TROUBLE WITH ENTERTAINING.

"The trouble with entertaining," says a letter friend who reads my remarks on automobiles and Sunday cottages "is that people will not do things as simply as they used to do. They want to have everything so much more elaborate, they want to put on so much front that they wear themselves out and don't get any fun out of the entertaining. It isn't so much the fault of the automobile that hospitality has become a problem and a burden to some people as it is the fault of the way we live nowadays. There is a great deal of truth in that, isn't there?

"We could have a lot more fun out of visiting, and being visited, if we didn't try so hard to put up a front, as she says.

When the Bills Come In.
We could entertain more freely without worrying about the expense

If we simply shared what we had instead of buying what we cannot afford and then being staggered when the bills come in.

A friend of mine had to sail very close to the wind during the peak of high prices as her husband was one of those many men in small executive positions who had no raises commensurate with the rise in cost of living (when the wages of any large class are forcibly raised beyond the level of their economic value it has to come out of someone else.)

One day she told me that she had thought she would have to resign from the little neighborhood club of six couples who dined at each other's homes every two weeks. "If they would be willing," she explained to each have a dinner such as they would naturally have, things would balance up. But they aren't willing to do that. They all insist on giving a costly dinner when it comes their turn. And yet some of them can't afford it any better than I."

Why It Costs So Much.

It is the same way with week-end and longer visits. If we would simply take turns sharing our homes, the extra expense would be cancelled by a diminution in expense at some other time. But this is what happens. It is customary when people visit nowadays to carry a gift, candy or fruit or perhaps something for the house. When you return the visit, you do the same thing. Naturally that adds considerably to the cost. Then you feel obliged to have a much better table than usual and when you return the visit your host does the same thing. Furthermore, you must take your guest to any and all entertainments which your neighborhood affords and when you return your visit your host must do likewise. When you come to total it all up an exchange of visits has cost you both a goodly increase in your expenses.

An Artificial Life.

And the same thing is true of time and effort as is true of money. Instead of allowing time to share your life while they are with you and doing the same while you are with them you each try to live an artificial life for the time being and consequently find the visit a tax, are tired when it is over and tell yourself you must cut down on entertaining now. In the old days people made much longer visits than they do to-day. But the way they managed it was by making their guests part of the family. To be sure they gave the guest the best they had, brought out the best preserves, killed the chicken, gave him the most comfortable chair and the top of the cream, but they didn't try to live on an entirely different scale while he was with them.

Not What He Meant.

The good-looking new curate wanted to make a good impression, as it was his first sermon. He was determined not to neglect his personal appearance.

Smoothing his hair, he said to the old vergar: "Could you get me a glass? A small one will do."

The vergar hurried away, but soon returned, concealing something under his coat.

"I know what nervousness is, sir," he said. "I've brought you a whole bottle."

"A yoke of real Venetian lace in cream color gives interest to a black velvet gown. The yoke was quite deep, giving the effect of a low-cut frock."

U. S. Forest Revenue.

Revenue amounting to $5,063,527 was paid into the treasury from the national forests during the fiscal year 1922, according to the annual report of the forest service. Nearly $4,500,000 in receipts were derived from the use of timber and forage. The remainder were for use of land, including waterpower sites. Receipts for the last quarter were far in excess of those for any previous quarter in the administration of the national forests, except in 1920. It was reported.

Income-producing business in the national forests showed remarkable stability, the report continued, in view of the depressed or uncertain conditions in the timber and livestock industries of the West, which afford the principal markets for national forest products. The abnormally low output of western sawmills, which caused a decrease in receipts from timber sales for the preceding year, continued until the last quarter of the fiscal year 1922, but for the quarter they exceeded $820,000, and for the entire year totalled $1,789,347, almost identical with those of 1921.

Approximately 22 per cent. of the cattle and 53 per cent. of the sheep in eleven western states are grazed upon national forest ranges during a part or all of the year. Of national forest receipts, 25 per cent. are given to the counties in which they lie, to be used for schools.

How Gold is Beaten Out.

The beating of the innumerable little square pieces of gold which are used to cover domes and signs and so on, forms a distinct industry in the gold trade, which employs a large amount of skill.

The building in which the work is carried on is filled throughout the day with the sound of hammers. On every side little boxes containing tiny rolls of gold are to be seen, which, although measuring an inch and a half in length, are each worth about $10. The gold is received in bars one-eighth of an inch in thickness, an inch in width, and weighing 240 pennyweights. This is rolled out into a ribbon thirty yards in length. It is then given out to the workmen in strips measuring seven yards, each of which is cut up into 180 pieces. These are now ready to be beaten out by hand. They are placed (protected by fine skins) in a tool known as the "clutch," and are thoroughly pounded out on a great granite block set in the ground in such a way that there is absolutely no vibratory movement. The process is repeated several times, the gold as it spreads being continuously subdivided until it is of the exact dimensions required.

MUTT AND JEFF

A SILLY ANSWER TO A SILLY QUESTION.

By Bud Fisher

Finger And Toe.

That destructive disease, finger and toe, is practically unknown on land naturally containing a high percentage of lime, and for that reason the artificial application of burned lime has long been practised as a preventive, and it certainly is the most effective agent known. In applying lime immediately after a turnip crop has been grown one should mark where the disease, if any, had been most destructive, and increase the dressing accordingly. The usual custom is to apply two to four tons per acre, the dressing being given in the autumn either six months or eighteen months before a turnip crop is to be grown, and just prior to ploughing the land. On the whole the better of the two systems would appear to be that of applying the lime eighteen months ahead of the turnip crop. Although the virulence of the disease can be minimised by the use of there is no doubt that to get the completely, careful attention also be paid to other matters. Working the land while it is in condition is often a fruitful posing cause of an outbreak soil that is sored by waste of the drainage, frequently exhibits the disease. Neglect of keeping the ground of charcoal and similar waste contribute to the spread of the trouble, for such plants are as well as cultivated plants.

France Has Copious Supply of Wine

PARIS.—The amount of wine produced in France in 1922 exceeded that of 1921 by more than 20 per cent, according to the official figures published recently. The 1922 crop amounted to 1,513,500,000 gallons of wine as compared with 990,000,000 in 1921. In addition to the French wine, Algeria produced during the season, 163,000,000 gallons of wine and taking into consideration the 44,000,000 gallons of wine which from 1921, it is evident that never else France may be short of wine will not be wine. It is anticipated many dealers that a cut in the price of wine will be necessary to dispose of the surplus stocks.

Aviators Seek Distinctive Danger Call.

LONDON.—The Air Ministry announces that tests are now being carried out to determine an international distress word or signal for use in radio telephony in aircraft. Pending results a spoken phrase, S.O.S. will be used, and will ensure immediate attention by all stations receiving it.

Too True.

"It's hard," said the sentimental landlady at the boarding-house, "to think that the poor little lamb should be destroyed in its youth just to cater to our appetites."
 "Yes," replied the smart guest, struggling with his portion, "it is tough, isn't it?"

“Bretonia.”

POSTED AS MISSING.

Canadian N.S.—(By Canadian N.S.) It is now almost two months since the auxiliary steam tug Bretonia weighed deep with cargo, and was driven into St. Pierre harbour into the sea already beginning to foam under the approach of a storm that has swept the islands in the memory of the inhabitants. Dread forebodings beset the hearts of the group of people on the quay at St. Pierre when the Bretonia's preparations were made. Surely, they thought, the vessel would induce Captain Anderson to put his craft to the face of such unmistakable signs of a tempest. Those who followed the news of marine disasters now that the fears of the fisher-folk were only too justified, for since that day no word has been heard of the Bretonia. Her crew, when the Bretonia was driven down the slip under the almost and coal, the more anxious the watchers declared that Anderson would anchor in the harbour, and not defy the sea so surely approaching. The stumpy-nosed trawler-tug steadily and unwaveringly faced the open sea and soon disappeared between the darkening sky and the ocean. A few hours later the light had settled down and the ship of St. Pierre and Miquelon was up from the Bretonia. The workers who say the Bretonia was at the harbour that afternoon when she was driven down the slip, say that it would be their duty to go to sea. Her destination had been hazily supposed to be New York, but those St. John's people knew differently—they knew the dread fact that the Bretonia would be “The Post Office.” She would founder in the waters of the Bretonia.

DRINKING. Those whose business took them to the quay with revived hope to see the ship had come back to harry the out the storm, but they were vain. Over in the little jail of the Gendarmes, the cook of the Bretonia, who had implored St. Pierre cheer on the evening of his ship's sailing, heard the news of his incarceration. He wondered if his Bretonia had been a blessing in disguise. A fortnight before, when he appeared in the newspapers in the whereabouts of the ship and the safety of her crew, many stages, the sorrowful news known to the world that the Bretonia had left on her voyage and that eleven lives had been lost to the vast army of the sea.

FROM THE OCEAN. John N.B. Mrs. Anderson, the Bretonia's captain, and her wife, hopeful but anxious, were rewarded only with the newspaper items that told of the Bretonia's fate. Finally they gave up their families in St. John were those whose loved ones had been the Bretonia, while, in North St. James Dunne, whose wife was super-cargo, despaired of her husband again. The news was said to be worth twelve dollars and was uninsured. A staunch craft, according to the men, and had rigging for motion to her steam power. Many better than the Bretonia, she was the North Atlantic, she succeeded last to her life-long foe and the eleven men whom the sea had taken from the face of the sea of the wise people of St. John's.

Wally Reid Drives Locomotive in Blizzard.

To drive some sort of machine, be it an automobile or a locomotive, is all in the day's work for Wallace Reid the athletic Paramount star. In "The Love Special," his latest starring vehicle which comes to the Majestic Theatre to-day, Wally drives a railroad engine over a mountain in a driving snowstorm with the same ease and poise he displays when at the wheel of a roadster in a grueling auto race.

"It was great sport to feel the big engine pick up as I pulled the throttle," said the star, "but I felt lost without a steering wheel. At times when we went around a sharp curve, I would instinctively grab for the wheel, only to remember that I was in a locomotive and didn't have to do any steering. I think a fellow feels better, though, when he knows that he is doing the guiding. It makes one feel dependent and a bit useless to know that he must stick right to the steel rails and that they will guide the engine for him."

The story upon which the picture is based, is said to be one of the best railroad stories by Frank H. Spearman, a well known fictionist. It is a big story, full of speed and thrills and seasoned with a delightful romance which continues all through the picture. Agnes Ayres is leading woman and in the cast are Theodore Roberts, Lloyd Whitlock, Sylvia Ashton, Alexander Gaden, Clarence Burton, Earnest Butterworth and others.

The Cost of Marine Strikes.

UNION SEAMEN UNDER A BAN.
During the past four years there have been no fewer than 43 strikes or stop-work agitations in the shipping trade of New South Wales. The longest was when the coastal and Inter-State vessels were hung up for 95 days—from May 22 to Aug. 25, 1919—because of a demand for increased wages and better accommodation. In the period mentioned the men have lost 239 days, representing hundreds of pounds to each man. At the present time an extension has taken place in Sydney of the seamen's strike which broke out during the autumn on the water-front in New Zealand owing to the recent award there of the Arbitration Court, which reduced the men's wages by 25c. $d. monthly in accordance with the movement in the cost of living. In Sydney 23 of the crew of the steamer Moreaki have received a sentence of 10 weeks imprisonment for absenting themselves without leave and without sufficient reason. As was to be expected, the extremists in the Union jumped at the chance thus afforded to extend the strike, and a mass meeting of the New South Wales members of the Australian Seamen's Union was held. An endeavour will be made to hold up the whole of the vessels of the Union Steamship Company, plying between Australia and New Zealand. Up to the time of our advice the trouble had been confined to members of the crews on New Zealand articles. It was decided that no member of the Australian organization should man any vessel for New Zealand belonging to the Union Steamship Company. Officials of the Union have advised the men that it would be disastrous to the Australian members if they were involved in a general strike at the present time.—Syren and Shipping Illustrated.

THE FLAG.
Emblems of all that make life worth while, Freedom, security and sheltered homes, The mother happy in her baby's smile, Bright window panes and temple spires and domes. The school door open to the feet of all, Books and sweet music and the realms of art, Strong hands to help the weaker who may fall, Fame for the genius, whatsoever his start. My chance that was—my boy's that is to be, All this is shielded in her starry folds, All this and more in fancy I can see— This is our flag, and this is what it holds.

HIS PROPOSAL.
"Jean," asked Donald, "didn't I take you to the pictures on Monday?"
"Yes."
"An' didn't I take ye to the dance on Tuesday?" said Donald.
"Yes," replied Jean.
"An' who went with you to the theatre on Thursday?"
"Why, you did."
"Well, Jean, my girl," said Donald
A gown of brilliant blue chiffon velvet has a full circular skirt and a simple bodice. A silver lace bertha and a rolled girde of the silver and velvet were the only trimming, while the silver cloth lining of the skirt added interest.
