

The Speech from the Throne.

The Speech delivered by His Excellency at the opening of Parliament on Friday is shorter than documents of that kind usually are, but it embodies a promise of a great deal of work for the Government and the House of a very important and practical character. In the first paragraph we are promised a ballot bill somewhat similar in its operation and provisions to the one now in force in Britain. Then in connection with this the Government will make some needed amendments to the law relating to controverted elections, which we hope will simplify the steps necessary to be taken in such cases, so as to give the right-fully elected member his seat, or provide for a new election in the event of the member returned being unseated.

The establishment of a General Court of Appeal for the whole Dominion is proposed. This has been talked of for a long time, but the late Government, whether by design or through carelessness, would never deal with the subject, though promised year after year. Then we are promised a bill on the militia, which is a thoroughly disorganized state, and imperatively demands remodeling. Under the late Sir George E. Cartier's management the Force was discouraged and in time became demoralized. We hope that the present Government will bring it back to its former efficient condition, and infuse new vigor into each arm of the service.

The present Insolvent Act is to be dealt with. There have been many complaints about the working of the present Act, and though the question is confessedly beset with difficulties, we trust that such amendments will be carried as will accord full justice to the creditor without dealing harshly or unjustly with the debtor. An amended scheme for the construction of the Pacific Railway will be submitted, which in due time will be explained to the House and the country. The Canal and harbour improvements are to be prosecuted with renewed vigour, and the scheme for the proposed canal between the St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy will be submitted. The progress of the Intercolonial Railway is referred to, and in connection with the question of compensation due to the Dominion for the fishery privileges conceded to the States by the Treaty of Washington, comes up the hope of a renewal of reciprocal trade with that country. We have already stated that the negotiations in regard to this matter are now being prosecuted by the Hon. George Brown in Washington.

The Government frankly confesses that the expenditures during the past year exceeded the receipts, and the House will have to consider how the deficit will be raised, and the revenue so adjusted as to obviate this unfortunate state of affairs in future. For this deficit the present Government are not responsible; it was an unwelcome legacy left them by their predecessors.

The Speech closed with a reference to the efforts made by the Provincial and Dominion Governments to promote immigration, and to the slight commercial depression of last year, which, however, was only partial, and which is now being gradually removed. The programme of work is ample, and we feel sure the country will be satisfied with it, and that the Government will earnestly endeavor to realize the hopes and expectations of their supporters in carrying all the measures promised by them.

In the French Assembly on Friday a motion to settle the form of Government in France—whether it was to be a Monarchy or a Republic—was rejected by a majority of 74.

WEST DURHAM NOMINATION.—The nomination of candidates to represent this riding, in room of Hon. E. B. Wood, took place at Bowmanville on Friday. A host of nominations were made, but all retired except Mr. Burke and Mr. McClung.

The Mail makes an earnest call on all true Conservatives to organize in view of the Local elections next spring. Reformers should follow the same sage advice, and be fully prepared to meet their opponents at the polls.

A Resolution passed the American Congress on Friday, requesting the president to intercede with the Government of Great Britain for the pardon and release of John Condon, of Ohio, who is now confined in goal in England, under sentence of life imprisonment for participating in Fenian raids.

THE IMPRISONED FENIANS.—In the House of Commons on Friday, in answer to a question, Mr. Cross, Home Secretary, said the total number of Fenian prisoners still undergoing sentence was sixteen. Two are now undergoing sentence for the Manchester murder, but none for the Clerkenwell affair. Two others were under sentence of imprisonment for fifteen years; one for seven years; and eleven who had been soldiers were sentenced for life, having been convicted of supplying arms to and otherwise assisting insurgents. They were distributed as follows:—Three were in England; one in one part of Australia, and two in another; and three in Ireland. Mr. Cross concluded by declaring that the Government had no intention of interfering with the execution of their sentences. The announcement was received by the House with cheers.

IMMIGRANT TRAVEL.—The New York Commercial Advertiser says:—"The change in the mode of transportation of immigrants from Europe since 1850 is quite remarkable. In that year the number of steamers arriving with immigrants was 22, the number of sailing vessels 522. The former brought 5,111 passengers, the latter 136,453. Last year the number of sailing vessels which arrived was 51, bringing 9,345 passengers, and the number of steamers was, 675, carrying 258,519 immigrants. It is to be remarked also that this change in transportation mediums has been gradual, each year showing a falling off in the number of sailing vessels and increase in the number of steamers, just as the whole number of immigrants has grown gradually from year to year."

Trouble in Beecher's Church.

The Congregational Council now in session in Brooklyn is attracting considerable attention. Plymouth Church has obtained almost a world-wide reputation in connection with the name of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. The Council is investigating certain matters in reference to the church, and until a conclusion is arrived at it is hardly safe to pronounce on the merits of the affair. The case seems to be a simple one, and as near as we can gather is this: On the 31st of October, 1873, a member was dropped from the roll of Plymouth church. Because this member was allowed to go forth from the church without a full investigation of his case and publication of the same, two sister churches felt aggrieved and made a formal complaint. To this request Plymouth church was asked to consent to a conference on the question at issue. To this request Plymouth church refused to accede. Later, attempts were made by the two sister churches to induce Plymouth church to agree to submit their differences to a Congregational Council. This led to private conferences with Drs. Ruddington and Storrs on the one hand, and Mr. Beecher on the other, and to a lengthened correspondence, most of which has been made public. The Conference and the correspondence failed to reduce Plymouth church to submission; they equally failed to obtain its consent to the calling of a Council. On their own responsibility, therefore, Clinton Avenue Church and the Church of the Pilgrims convened the Council, which is now in session. A Committee was appointed to invite Plymouth church to appear before the Council, but it seems that Plymouth intends to leave the Council severely alone. The presumption is that the action of the Council will favor the idea that congregations, like individuals, always act most easily when they attend to their own affairs.

GOVERNOR'S DRAWING ROOM.—His Excellency the Earl and the Countess of Dufferin held a drawing room in the Senate Chamber on Friday evening, when a very large number of ladies and gentlemen were present. Presentations were made according to precedence. Senators were presented first, the members of the House of Commons next, then high officials, civilians, and officers of the militia. The presentations occupied over half an hour, the band of the Guards performing selections in the meantime. Shortly before ten o'clock Lord and Lady Dufferin left the building, and soon afterwards the assemblage dispersed. The scene was a most brilliant one, the magnificent chamber, illuminated by innumerable jets of gas, formed the setting of a picture in which the gay dresses of the ladies and the bright hues of military costumes, contrasted with the sober civilian black mingled in pleasing variety.

SHE KISSED THE DEAD.
She kissed the dead. Her warm, red lips were pressed against his marble brow. "For he's but asleep," she said, "and is not numbered with the dead, He'll rise and kiss me now."
She kissed the dead. Her warm, red lips were pressed against his marble cheek. "For he will know," she softly said, "My kiss, and if he be not dead, He'll turn to me and speak."
She kissed the dead. Her warm, red lips were pressed against his lips of ice, "He answers not," she weeping said, "I know my darling must be dead, For I have kissed him thrice."

The Rival Clansmen
A Scottish Vendetta.

CHAPTER XXIII.
THE BEGINNING OF THE END—ENAS ASCERTAINS THE DESTINATION OF CAMERON AND HIS—THE CATERANS OF BEN-LAIR—PRISONERS—CAPTAIN WINTERTON JOINS HECTOR IN THE PURSUIT.

"But how have you succeeded in breaking up the band?"
"I came upon them yesterday morning while yet they were engaged with your kinsmen, and our combined force was easily able to overthrow them. I then marched on and rested at Castle M'Leod whence I have just come."
"A thousand thanks for the intelligence sir," joyfully exclaimed Hector. "Your words are welcome, indeed. I observe you have met Enas M'Donald, who generously returned for horses that I and those who are to go with me might be able to pursue our journey."
"Yes," responded Winterton, "I met the youth, and he has told me all you purpose doing, as well as the charge you mean to lay against Cameron, which I shall be glad to receive. I can easily provide you with horses, and will ride on with you in advance of my men. Sergeant Goodley can be left in command assisted by your lieutenant, Roderick M'Leod, who is in charge of your kinsmen and these will be quite sufficient to bring the prisoners. And further, I am now just as eager as you to have an end of this work, and am ready to go on the moment you say the word. When shall you be ready?"

"Immediately," was the young man's reply. "But the others may require a few moments. As Enas has doubtless told you, his father is to accompany us, as also the lady who has been long known as the Witch of Ben-Lair. They wait inside. Please step in and tell them of your success, and that you are ready to go with us, while I go forward to thank my men and yours, Captain, for the signal service they have rendered me."
Without a word more, Captain Winterton walked into the hut, preceded by Enas; while Hector stepped over to his clansmen and the soldiers.
The clansmen, when they found their Chief gone on the occasion of the struggle with the Caterans at the back of the hill of Skerryvach, were very much puzzled to know what had become of him. They had been totally unable to account for his sudden and mysterious disappearance until they had been joined by Captain Winterton and his soldiers, who told them of his heroic pursuit of McKenzie and Cameron. They therefore at present received him with every expression of joyful congratulation, cheering and flinging their bonnets in the air; while the piper of the clan at once caused the valley to resound with a triumphal air in honour of the safe discovery of their Chief. M'Leod addressed cheering words to them, and also to the soldiers, both of whom cheered him again and as he repeated his determination to bring Cameron to justice, and to measure out a due reward to Ian M'Kenzie—the Caterans meanwhile scowling defiance from beneath their heavy, lowering eyebrows. When M'Leod returned and entered the hut, he found that old Murdoch and the Witch of Ben-Lair were ready to go with him; and horses being brought up to the door, the party were shortly mounted, and off in pursuit of the two villains whom they wished to bring to justice, and from whom they wished to rescue the two women they held prisoners. The party were Hector and the Witch of Ben-Lair, old Murdoch, his son, Captain Winterton, and two mounted soldiers. The remainder of the soldiers and the clansmen were instructed to follow as hard as they were able—dingwall being their destination.

London Medical Institute.
This institution is established for the most successful treatment of all diseases pertaining to surgery and medicine. In every instance are all medicines rejected, be they vegetable or mineral, that are capable of producing mischief, or incompatible with organic tissue, such as mercury, lead, zinc, etc.; contending that every character of disease, if curable at all, will yield to those agents which are mild in nature and capable of neutralizing and rendering harmless that morbid matter in the circulation which engenders and supports disease. The remedies employed are less depressing to the vital powers, more in harmony with the efforts of nature, and attended with better success than the generally adopted system of medicine. They are prepared upon scientific principles perfected by time, study and research for the special cure of all lingering chronic diseases, some of the most important and serious of which we here mention, and in which our treatment has proved to be signally successful, viz: All diseases of the lungs, throat, heart, and chest, asthma, catarrh, bronchitis, all diseases of the nerves, atrophy, curvature, and other diseases of the spine; convulsions, cramps, and spasms, gutta, or enlarged neck, epilepsy, disease of the mind, melancholy, etc., consumption in its first and second stages, dyspepsia, and all diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys, etc., scrofula and all other skin diseases, tumors, and morbid growths, ulcers, foul and indolent sores. Cancers are effectually cured without the use of a knife, and hernia or rupture with or without an operation. Other diseases of a grave nature might be given, but it is quite unnecessary. Special attention will be given to female complaints in all their medical and surgical bearings. Every disease of the eye and ear successfully treated, and every operation in ophthalmic and aural surgery performed upon those principles that the science of the Old and New World has shown to be the most successful, as demonstrated in the largest ophthalmic and aural hospitals, institutes, and infirmaries in Germany, France, England, and the United States. Cross eyes will be straightened with very little pain. Cataracts will be removed with or without cutting. Inflammation and ulceration of the eye are speedily and permanently cured. Inturning eyelids are often cause of serious inflammation by rubbing the lash upon the eye. Sight has been restored that from this cause had been lost for many years. Outturning eyelids are at once cured and original beauty restored to the face. Granulated lids thickened along the edges, or in a state of adhesion readily cured. Also watering of the eyes.
The institution is in possession of every facility and original means of successful treatment. Efficacious agents or remedies are imported per order, and kept on hand fresh and pure, so that they are both safe and effectual for the alleviation and cure of all diseases. Added to these means a comprehensive knowledge of medical science obtained by an extensive practice on the part of the physicians in attendance, need further fourth page.
