The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of the Public Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the leat page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une teile empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

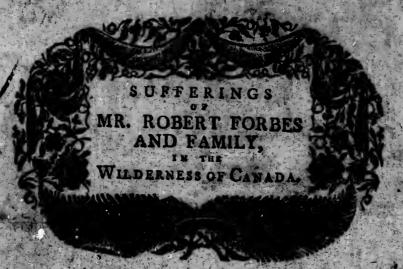

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

MR. ROBERT FORBES, WITH HIS FAMILY, &c.

R. ROBERT FORBES, not being a native of Canada, but having refided there feveral years, was defirous of being where he might have a more frequent opportunity of affociating with his own countrymen.

He and his wife had premeditated a removal to the United States of America, when falling in company with three Dutchmen, by the names of Midstoff, Pancake, & Christian, were induced by their infinuations to undertake the journey by land; the faid Midstaff engaging, for a certain sum, that with the assistance of the other two he would conduct them, in twelve days' time, to the settlements on Kennebeck river.

Mr. Forbes' neighbours endeavoured to dissuade him from the attempt, not only on account of the length and difficulty of the way, but because there was a possibility of his being deserted by his guides in the midst of the wilderness.

Nevertheless, being determined on a removal, and having paid to Midstaff a large stipulated sum for that purpose—On the seventeenth day of March, A. D. one thousand seven hundred and eighty-four, they entered upon this unfortunate journey.

From Nouvelle Bois, on the river Chadore, they took their departure. The men, and Mrs. Forbes (who was then pregnant) and Mr. Forbes fon John, a lad about thirteen years old, on snow shoes.

Their provisions and other effects, together with four young children—viz.— Mary about seven years, Peggy about five, Katharine about three, and Robert about fifteen months old, they undertook to hall on Indian sleighs, or handsleds. the to, par fo i clu

In this manner, but with great difficulty, they pursued their way eight days; and on the ninth, being obliged to leave the river which they had followed hitherto, and whereon they had travelled some part of the time, they found the country so broken by large and deep gullies, and so rough and mountainous, that they concluded it next to impossible to proceed any further with the sleighs.

Here they were obliged to make a halt. And after a short consultation, having sirst erected a small camp, wherein to leave the woman and children, they took the chief part of their provisions, and as much of the rest of their baggage as they were able to carry on their backs; and leaving the woman and children, about ten o'clock in the morning, set out in quest of Meconich Pond (otherwise called Lake Chidore) expecting to return the next day. But meeting with much difficulty, they did not reach the Pond until the next day about 3 o'clock in the asternoon.

Here, being much fatigued, they left their baggage; and Midstaff having had some previous notice that there was an Indian residing not far from thence, went in quest of him to the other side of the Pond, where they found an old camp, but without inhabitants; and there encamped that night.

The next morning, being Sunday the 27th day of March, they crossed the Pond back to where they had left their baggage. When, to the great assonishment of Mr. Forbes, his Pilot and the other two (taking to themselves the provisions and all his other essents of any considerable consequence) frankly told him that they were determined not to return with him to his samily; and that they must now leave him, and make the best of their way through to Kennebeck.

This may well be supposed to have been shocking indeed to one who was already discouraged and disheartened.—"This, said he, struck me to the heart, and filled my eyes with tears—it confirmed what my neighbours had repeatedly mentioned among their sears of what might happen to myself and to my family."

most earnest intreaties and solicitations, they would not be prevailed upon to continue any longer with him; but, leaving him only one poor axe, a small firelock, & two small loaves of bread, they departed.

With a heavy heart did this unfortunate man then make the best of his way back to his family; where he arrived, with the forrowful tidings, that evening.

Here were they left, in the wide wilderness, strangers to the country, destitute of provisions, and without a compass—eight days' journey from the inhabitants in Canada, and how far from any other settlement they knew not; but probably not less than an hundred and sifty miles.

The wife and son had laboured under the most terrible apprehensions during Mr. Forbes' absence, especially seeing he did not return at the time appointed. Their sears had driven them almost to despair.— And the poor lad, a little before his father's return, had fatigued himself almost to death, having sollowed their tracks for several miles; and had but just got back when his father arrived. The next morning they were in the most doubtful perplexity whether to go backward or forward Should they undertake to return to Canada, it might take them more than double the length of time in which they had got thus far, the river being then about breaking up; and in that case they must inevitably starve.

While the husband and wife were in this pitiable situation, gazing at each other, and tears gushing from their eyes, their children were hanging around them, and crying bitterly for a morsel of bread.

Upon the whole, as the beforementioned two loaves of bread were in the way towards Kennebeck, and as they might, peradventure, find the Indian at Meconnick. Pond, they concluded, by the help of God, to proceed on their journey.

Accordingly they left the most cumberfome, though necessary articles, which they had now remaining, and the cldest daughter undertook to travel on foot with er mother—while Mr. Forbes took two of the children, and John one, upon sleds; and thus they proceeded with as much dispatch as was possible. The way, however, was rough, and they travelled but a short distance during that day. At night they encamped, and the next morning there came on a violent storm of rain, hail and snow, which continued till Wednesday evening. In the mean while the children were pinched with hunger and with the cold, and their cries were so bitterly distressing, that, leaving the mother and children in camp, the father and son pushed forward with all speed to the Pond; but it was still stormy, and the traveling so dissicult, that they did not get back with the two leaves till Wednesday evening.

Upon their return, they had not a dry thing about them, nor any dry cloaths to put on. And to add to their misfortune, the fire was extinguished, and they were unable to rekindle it for the whole night.

The next morning, the florm being considerably abated, they proceeded on their journey; but the trees and bushes being wet, they had an uncomfortable time, and did not reach the Pond till Friday morning about ten o'clock.

Soon after this, to their great consolation, they met with the before mentioned Indian, who proved to be one John Baptist, and with whom they had had some previous acquaintance in Canada.—He very hospitably invited them to his camp, which was at a considerable distance from the Pond; and there he kindly treated them with the best of what his house afforded.

This was a camp where he and his wife resided, while he followed hunting. Here they tarried until the next Monday. And the Indian having just before their meeting killed a Moose, at a few miles distance, Mr. Forbes and his son went with their sleds, and assisted him in bringing it home.

The Indian gave them as much Moofe meat as they would undertake to carry; and agreed to pilot them to Kennebeck river.—This agreement he punctually fulfilled; and would have proceeded with them to the fettlements, but his wife was fo unwell that he did not dare to be any longer absent from her. He therefore marked the way on a piece of bark, representations.

On taking leave of the Indian, they could not sufficiently express their gratitude. His kindness was beyond their expectation.— Before his departure, however, they gave him what things they had lest behind, together with some other articles of considerable value. And they had reason afterwards to wish that they had presented him with more; for their loads proved so much too heavy for them that they were obliged to leave by the way a large bag full of valuable articles.

They now met with almost insurmountable difficulties; for in pursuing the river their progress was obstructed by craggy wind falls, rocky ledges, lofty mountains and hideous precipices.

On the 12th day of April, their provisions was again exhausted;—and Mrs. Forbes thought it most adviseable to have a camp erected, and for herself and the children to remain there, while her husband and oldest son should go forward to fee whether they could find the inhabitants—apprehending that they were much nearer than they afterwards proved to be.

A camp was therefore crecked, and leaving Mrs. Forbes with her four young children, Mr. Forbes and his fon went forward with as much speed as possible. The first and second days, finding the ice would bear them, they travelled on the river; and would have made considerable progress, but unfortunately they mistook their way at a material carrying place, where, instead of leaving the river and crossing by land to the next bend, which was only twelve miles, they followed the river sixty unites round.

A little before night, the second day, they came to Falls, and could go no further on the ice. They went on shore, and soon after came to a precipice where they were obliged to descend twenty feet, almost perpendicularly, and at the risque of being dashed upon the rocks.——Night coming on, they encamped; and the next day, finding affical rocky place in the river, they croffed over to the other fide, in hopes of finding better travelling, and a more convenient place to encamp. Here they were obliged, by reason of stormy weather, to encamp for the remainder of the day.

The next day they travelled on; and perceiving the river to be almost clear of ice, they concluded to build a kind of rast—a thing with which they were altogether unacquainted, and by means of which they had both like to have lost their lives.

They got on to the raft, and under way, about ten o'clock the next morning. The current, however, run so swift, that they soon found there was no possibility of turning it to the shore. As they passed down the river they struck against a tree, which they were obliged to cut away, in order to clear the raft. When they descended over ripples, the water never failed of dashing over them, so that they were wet continually.

About the middle of the day, the raft moving with great rapidity, struck a large sock, parted one of its corners, and spread into a single string of logs. At this time they lost their axe, and it became extremely difficult to keep upon their broken machine.

They were from this time driven with amazing rapidity, expecting every moment would be their last, until about 4 o'clock in the afternoon; when, falling into an eddy, they were brought up by a point of land, and both got safe on shore.

They now travelled on by land till their firength was almost exhausted. About the 20th of April they heard the report of a gun, which seemed to give them new life. They fired several times, but were not answered. Then, concluding that it might be nothing more than the falling of a tree, their spirits again sunk within them, and they moved on with heavy hearts.

But on the evening of the 22d, having built a small fire upon an eminence, they were discovered and kindly relieved by two hunters—Jonathan Crosby and Luke Sawyer.

It was now the 10th day lince they left.

Mrs. Forbes and the children. And daying this time they had caten up the two or three curies of Moofe meat which they had taken with them, and their moggafons—having had nothing elfe to fublift upon.

The hunters supplied them with such articles of nourishment as they had with them; and then conducted them to the settlements at Seven Mile Brook, so called, a little above Norridgewalk, where they arrived in a few hours; but so reduced, that they were scarcely able to stand alone.

Upon their arrival, Mr. Forbes procured Major Hale, and Messieurs Wm. Huston and Ebenezer Hilton, three of the most suitable men that could be found, to go with all speed to the relief of his wife and children. They set out immediately, and after having been gone thirteen days returned without having been able to find them.

pound and a half of Moofe meat, and a pound and a half of tallow for their subliftence: It was the general opinion, thereforty that they must have been dead.

Nevertheless Mr. Forbes' anxiety would not permit him to rest satisfied until he had procured two other persons (Mess's James McDonald and Jonathan Ames) to go with him, and see whether they might not be still alive. But by this time all the low lands adjacent to the river were overslowed, which rendered the passing extremely difficult. For this reason, and because they had no expectation of sinding them alive, they could not be prevailed upon to set off until the waters were abated.

On the twenty eighth day of May they fat out. Having travelled one day, Mr. Forbes found himself, unable to keep up with them; and upon their telling him he could be of no service, and that he might depend on their fidelity, he consented to return.

the second day of June arrived at the place where Mrs. Forbes and her children were left. And here, to their great assonishment, they found the mother and one of her children alive. It was now fifty days since they were left with nothing besides the beforementioned Moose meat and tallow. Nor had they any thing elfe during that whole time, excepting cold water and the inside bark of the Fir tree. And in addition to this, they had been forty eight days without fire.

To paint in proper colours this scene of distress, is altogether beyond my powers of description. It must be left to the imagination of the reader.

On the 38th day after the departure of Mr. Forbes, the little boy expired. Katharine died the next day; and Mary lived but four days longer. It is remarkable that this last child had often told her mother, they should all certainly flarve to death; and earnestly begged, in cale her mother should outline her, that she might be put where the wild bealts could not devour her.

The poor woman was herfelf but just alive, and expected every hour to close the eyes of Peggy, her only remaining child and companion. The odies of the deceased children were land out, and kept by her side: For she was unable to bury them—having been so weak for the last sisteen days that she had been obliged to crawl upon her hands and knees to the spring for water.

The breath of life, however, was still remaining in them. And the two men, who came to their relief, afforded them such affistance, and addinistered to them such nourishment as their situation and circumstances required.

On the third day of June they fet out for home; and carried Mrs. Forbes and the child on a bier by land, and in a canoe by water, till they all fafely arrived at Norrigewalk: Where, to the furprise of the inhabitants, and the unter attonishment of Mr. Forbes, he was once more presented with a living wife, and one living child.

POSTSCRIPT.

A FTER the artical of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes at Norridgewalk, a number of gentlemen gave them a writing from under their hands; in which the relation of their unparalleled sufferings was confirmed, and by which they were warmly recommended to the notice and charitable assistance of all christian people. This recommendation was signed by some of the sirft Characters in the county of Lincoln.

Mr. Forbes and his wife, with their two furviving children are now living in the town of Newgloucester, about twenty five miles from Portland; where, by their industry and economy they have since been enabled to procure a very comfortable subsistence.

Mrs. Forbes, from the emaciated state in which we have before discribed her, has now become a large and corpulent woman. And the child, of which she was delivered soon after her arrival at Norridgewalk, is a healthy and very promising Boy,

THE END.
