Inclination towards the British Government; hostile or otherwise.  Friendly.  ditto.   Contribution to the Gover ment. Nothing.

Hah, pnying revenue of about ossesses an extensive but illutain $600 \mathrm{~s}^{8}$ puare miles. The in to warrant any calculations as to the population, number of villages, or revenue, arising from it. From personal observation, however, I can state that the part of Tipperah claimed as independent is not all hilly, but includes many level wellwatered vallies, admirably suited for agriculture; but which are, in general, neglected and wholly unoccupied, owing to the unwillingness of the lowlandera to aubject themselves to the rapacity and tyranny of the Rajah and his officers; a few spota, however, as at Anger Collah and Killaisur, are under cultivation, and might, if assessed, yield a revenue to the state of about 5,000 rupees.

No. 4.-Northern Cachar.-Under this designation l include the mountainous country recently held by Tooleram, the chieftnin whom I have found it necessary to arrest with a view to bring him to trial for the murder of two of the inhabitants of the country of Dhurumpore, now held in attachment by a Sazawul deputed for that purpose by Mr. Scott. This region does not appear of sufficient importance in any point of view to merit particular notice. Its inhabitants, I understand, belong chiefly to the Cacharee and Marec tribes, and are not more hostile than, from their relative position, it is natural to expect. Lieutenant Fisher is now engaged in forming an arrangement with them for the future government of this country, and this will, ere long, form the subject of a separate despatch.
Next to the states above detailed in the order of geographical progression, follows the confederation of petty chiefs by whom the Khoseat Mountains have hitherto been hell.
These are said to be 30 in number; but it is unnecessary, with reference to the immediate object of this despatch, to enter into detail with regard to any but the following:-

No. 23.- l3ootan.-From Chardour, in Lower Assam, to the country of the Sikhem Puttee our frontier, for an extent of about 200 miles, touches that of Bootan. Along the line a tract of the low lands, originally acquired perhaps by sufferance, has gradually become the unquestioned right of this state; on it, indeed, they appear to be entirely dependent for grain, as the population is described as being considerable, and far beyond what they conld raise food for in the narrow vallies of their own hills. This circumstance places it in our power, in case of a rupture, to reduce Bootan to our terns by merely shutting the doors or passes during the cold season, and preventing its subjects from coming to the plains or receiving any supplies therefrom. Should it prove further necessary to retain the tract of low land in our own possession, the consequent expense might he met hy the establishment of hants or markets, on the principle of those in the Goulparagh district, which, on the Bootan frontier, would prove a most plentiful source of revenue.

Of the internal state of Bootan, little more is known how than may be gathered from Captain Turner's Narrative of his Fmbassy to Thibet, in 1783. A more recent account of the country may probably bave been given to the world by Mr. Manning, who lived for a long time at lassa; but this I have nut the means of ascertaining.

I hope, while in Assam, to be able to collect much more information; but I can now add little to what is in print.

The envoys who recently visited me at Cherra were men of low rank and little intelligence. From what I could gather from them, it does not appear that the Chinese exercise a much greator influence than they did in Turner's time, either over the undying superior, the Dhurram Rajah or Sama, or his mortal vassal, the Deb Rajah or immediate ruler of Bootan.

The Booteas are notoriously an unwarlike race, and, from the little which I have scen of their demeanour towards us, I am inclined to think that they have less of the overweening arrogar $e$ of the demi-harbarian than might be expected from their political and moral situation. A rupture with thas state will only be formidable as indicating that it has the countenance of another and greater power behimit :
[All the foregoing statements, and to the end of page 109 , are given as I received them from the lndia House, in manuscript. R. M. M.]

Note.-The independent chieftains of Bundlecund have, during a long course of years, and at the periorls when the British Government was engaged in protracted warfare with other states, invariably shewn their attachment to British supremaey. During the Mahratta war of $1817-18$, the protection of the numerous passes, or Ghants, into the province, was entrusted to them. During the Burmese war, not merely were offers to assist with their lorces submitted, but the commissariat department was materially aided hy the voluntary assistance received from them. During the sigge of lhhurtpore, supplies of grain were forwarded from the states nearest the scene of action to the army ; and when the Fort of Cabee was attacked by a rebel subject of Salown, the Sumpthur troops, at the request of this office, immediately proceeded to the protection of Koonah, whilst the forces of Oorchah, Jhansi and Duttiah advanced, on the agent's application, to effect his reduction. In the fidelity of the Bondelah states, inplicit confidence may be reposed; their attachment to British rule originates in self interest. Under no previous government did they at any time enjoy their possessions free from all demand, either of service or tribute. Their union tor the attainment of a conmon object, is a chimera. Between the Boondelahs and Mahrattahs a deeply-rooted antipathy has long existed, and time has not diminished it; Jhansi would fall an easy prey to Uurchah and Duttiah, and Jaloun could not support its existence against the aggressions of the Juggut Raj branch of the Chuttersal's family. The several members against one of that famaly, hold each other in mutual distrust and aversion; and as the portion of the province held by the British Goverument is not claimed by the Boondelahs, as it formed the undisputed part of the ex-peshwa's possesssions, obtained by the adoption of his ancestor by Chuttersal, they would in all probability commit an aggressive act against it, but would turn their arms agniust each other, if any general ferment should exist in 13ritish India : for each alleges a right to some portion of his neighbour's territory. I.-General account of the state of Cnleutta in 1717.

As the Court of Directors may probably wish to have some genernl account of the state of the town of Calcutta, the following (being extrncted from my proposed statisticnl reports) may be acceptable. Thi accounts of several respectable natives (eollected by my assistant, Mr . Blaquiere) correspond in the following description of Calcutta, in the year 1717, viz.:

1. That the present town was a village apperiaining to the Zillah of Nuddec.
2. The houses were scattered about in clusters of 10 or 12 in each, and the inhabitants chicfly hus. bandmen.
3. A forest existed to the southward of the Chaundpaul Ghaut, which was afterwards remoied by degrees.
4. Between Kiddepoor and the forest were trio villages, whose inhabitants were invited to settle in Calcutta by the ancient family of the Seals, who were at that time merchants of great note, and vcry instrumental in bringing Cnlcuttu into the form of a town.
5. The new fort and esplanades are the sites where this forest and the two villages formerly stood.
6. The present old inhabitants of the town recol. lect a creek, which ran from Chaundpaul Ghaut to Ballia Ghntit. They say that the drain before the government house is where it took its course; and there is a ditch to the south of a garden, at the By. takkannah, which bears evident traces of the continuation of this creck.
7. There was a small village, consisting of a few straggling houses, surrounded by filthy puddles of wnter and trees, where the elegant houses at Chou. ringee now stand.
8. Calcuttn mny be said to have extended north. ward as far as the Chitpore Bridge, if uncultivated ground covered with wildernesses may be said to have composed a part of it. There war no high rond, and it was dangerous to travel at late hours from roibers infesting the paths.

In 1742, a ditch was dug round a considerable part of the present houndaries of Calcutta, to prevent the incursions of the Mahrattas, the expense of which was defrayed by an assessment on the inhabitants of the town.

It appears liy Major Orme's History of the War in Bengal, that at the time of the capture of Calcutta, in 1756 , there were about 70 houscs belonging to the English.

What are now called the Esplnnade, the site of the New Fort, the Course and Chowringee, were even at that period (with all the territory more than 800 yd . to the castward) a complete jongle interspersed here and there with a few buts, find small parcels of grazing and arable land.

Some tolerable idea may be formed of the state of the town of Calcutta in the begimning of 179 s , from the two following statements:-

1. -Statement of the Number and Value of Hou-

0 ; cutters and retailers of ers and sellers of hooka $s$ and cleaners of swords, sellers of tinsel lace, 3 , s and sundry other avocaas, estimated at $87,59,000$. 9,900 . Total amount of de in the year 1800, and $t$ to the Court of Directors.]

The value of the houses and huts, with the ground appertaining to the same, is stated to $1 \mathrm{e}, 3,02,96,000 \mathrm{rs}$. The value agrecable to the assessinent by the officers of poliee, and corrected to the 1 st. February 1798,

My estimate, therefore, is about 20 per cent. more than the valuation formed by the officers of police, and is, I beticve, as corrett as possible.

Note.-The foregoing return is algned "Johm Romer, Magistrate;" I give it, an I do several others of population in this Appendix, for the virpose of stimulating further inquiries Into the important subject of the popuiatlon of Brifish lodia. I am aware of the difficultien in the way of obtainilig correct censuses, owing to the jealousy of the natives but this dificulty may be got over by prudence and kindness. We possess no correct ceosus of any District in British ladia except those given in this volume, and several of these are not to be reiled oul. I am strongly of opinion that in may parta there in a decreasing population; and that although several districts in Bengal are densely peopled, the greater pal of our territory is but thiniy inhabited. ## 3 b．－Table of eabtern coins

［Prepared at the Assay Office，Calcutta Mint，in Novenber，1832，by H．H．Wilsun，Esq．，Assay Master．］

The following tahles comprise the weight，standard， pure contents，intrinsic value，and mint price of most of the gold and silver coins current in various parts of India，and of a few Europesn coins imported into that country．

The weight and pure contents are expressed in troy grains．The standard of the gold is valued in carats，of the silver in pennyweights，and their res－ pective subdivisions ；a quarter of a carat grain and a half pennyweight being the lowest limit of valua－ tion．The relative standard，or the betterness and worseness，has reference to the standard of the Cal－ cutta coins，which both gold and silver are composed of 11 parts fine，and 1 of alloy；or，in the terms of the tables，the gold of 22 carats purc and 2 carats alloy，and the silver of 220 pennyweights（ 11 oz ．） fine，and 20 pennyweights（ 1 oz. ）alloy．
The intrinsic value of the coins is the relative value of their pure metal，as compared with the value of the pure contents of the gold mohur and Calcutta rupee．The mint price is what they would realize in the Calcutta mint，after paying any charges for re－ finsge，should such be necessary in consequence of inferiority of standard，and a deduction from the nett value of two per cent．as coinage duty．

The intrinsic value and mint price have been cal－ culated upon 100 pieces of each kind of currency，as the most convenicnt mode of expressing their valua－ tion．The silver coins are valued in rupees；the gold in gold mohurs and decimal parts；to determine the value of these in rupecs，it is only necessary，for the regulation value，to multiply the mint price by 16 ； for the Bazar price，by the price of the day；thus， the first item of the gold table，or Ahmedy Pagoda， may be valued ：

The measure of length is the cubit, of which there are two sorts-the tendam of about 18 inches, and the saundaum of 22. The latter ia termed the King's Cubit, being used in measuring crown lands.

Weights and Meabures. From the Appendix to the Itinerary of Western India of Captain John Clunes.Throughout India, and particularly the Deccan, a very considerable diversity prevails not merely in every district, but in every village, in measures, whether of weight, length or capacity; nor are the sub-divisions to be found in a determinate proportion of each other. To whatever this may be owing, whether to the want of a common or universal standard in former times, the decay, or abrasion of the measure and weights, the knavery of the owners of them, or to the apathy or connivance of the native district authorities, is probably immaterial, but the present ill defined system must be felt by all the class of buyers as a hardship, and they doubtless would be grateful for any beneficial amendment.

There are three kinds of weights in use in India: the first are for weighing drugs, gold, ailver, &c.; the second for all bulky articles; and the third for pearls and precious stones.

Those of the first class seem to be founded on the weight of a tola throughout India, and the tola, under most governments, seems to form with the rupee, or principal current coin of accounts in towns. The weights generally are of iron or lead, sometimes in a determinate form, but oftener as a shapeless masa. In many villages, however, the shopkeepers have only basalt stones as weights, which are met with in beds of rivers. Indeed, when great weights are required, they are generally made of stones, and under any circumstance, considerable advantage would be derived by the people, were the use of stones as weights prohibited under severe enactments. The table of weights annexed will shew the great variety of the first class, and the corresponding English weights, which exist throughout Western and central India. Nor are the weights at the Presidency less multifarious than they are in the interior. In the following table of the various weights by which goods are sold in Bombay, it will strike one as a singular incongruity, that, varying as thoee weights do, with almost every varicty of goods, and that, serving as such they must clog commerce, this system should be submitted to when the fact is known, that actually every article is weighed by one weight, viz., the English avoirdupoise, afterwards reduced by calculation into the great variety of local weights, which are nerely nominal.

How much would it facilitate commercial operations, were the English weights the only ones actually in use, substituted for those local ones that exist but in a name, and what an advantage would such afford the stranger, in readily comprehending at once the value of goods, and simplifying his calculations. It is most difficult to overcome native prejudice in favour of customs they have for generations been familiar with, yet might not firmness on the part of European mercantile community in Bombay effect a change?

The small weight, commonly called goldsmith's weight, is either founded on the goonj or ruttee, or the mustard seed. The goonj or ruttee is the small red seed, whether of the white or red specles, of the abrus precatorius; these seeds are very uniform in size, and the plant producing lizm grows wild all over India. Two seeds, otherwiae goonj, make one wasl, a weight represented hy a seed of the Cheelur. This weight is further aub-divided as follows :-two barley corus-l goonj and eight mustard seeds--one bsrley corn,under different governments of India the total is composed of different proportions of the goonj, or of the mossa: The Bengal tola being of 100 goonj, or $12 \frac{1}{2}$ massa; the Malwa tola of 96 goonj, or 120 massa. The Bombay tola of 92 goonj, or $11 \frac{1}{2}$ massa. Several districts in the Southern Concon of 92 goonj, or $11 \frac{1}{2}$ massa; 90 goonj, or 11 ta massa ; and 96 goonj, or 1 massa. The pice of Kota in Malwa is equal in weight to 80 massa, so that from these we may hope to obtain something approaching to the common weight of the massa or goonj, the fundamental measures of weight.
The weight of the Bengal massa, in troy grains, is 15,353 , being 191,916 troy grains, the weight of a Cal cutta sicca rupee, divided by 125, the number of massa in one tola. The weight in troy grains of the tola in Malwa is 190 grains; which being divided by 12 , (the number of massa in 1 tola,) gives 15,8333 troy grains for the weight of the massa.
In ascertaining (says Major Sykes) the weight troy of a goonj with a hydrostatic balance, turning with the tenth of a grain, the result was as follows;-32 seeds or goonj, weighed 605 grains troy ; 16 seeds or goonj, weighed 305 grains; 8 weighed 15.1; and 56 seeds weighed 10.52 grains, which would give an average weight of 1,914 grains troy for each sced; 96 of these would make the tola equal to 183,7536 grsins troy. But as the aeer weight of 80 rupecs, 13,800 grains troy, is to consist of 72 tolas, the tola should weigh 191,6666 grains, instead of 183,7536 , affording sufficient evidence that the tola in use, like every other weight, is below the proper standard.

Goldsmith's weight in Guzerat.

Measures of capacity.-Whether measures of capacity in India are derived from those of length, agreeable to the notions of many able theorists in Europe, and in which they are borne out by very ancient writings among the Hindoos, or whether they were invented originally merely to save trouble in weighing grains and liquids, is a subject of inquiry for the philosopher. I am much inelined to the latter opinion, as far as regards Western India, from observing that the same detominations refer to the measures of weight as to the measures of cspscity, and so relatively, to the sub-division. In this case it seems to me highly probable that the tonka or tukka, $n$ amall silver coin, current during the period of the Mogul supremacy, and in which the revenue was collected and reckoned throughout the western provinces of their empire, and particularly in the NizamShahee's territories, was the foundation of the weights at gresent in practice throughout the Deccan. Seventytwo of these tukkas go to the secr, which makes it ncarly similar to the tola, and the now, tank or nine tanks, is still a measure for liquids in very general use. The chetak, or six tanks, is the 17th part of a seer or weight in the Deccan; but my inquiries regard the weights that are in use, and not those that have been. The most popular of the actual mcasures of capacity are the nuotank, the scer, the puseeree and the Adholee.
Dry measure. The adholee.-The dry mensure, called adholee, of two seers, which is the largest in use in the Deccan, is in towns and large villages made of wood, turned in a lathe and lackered. It is in form nearly similar to that of an hour glass, and a $\frac{1}{2}$ seer, $\frac{3}{3}$ seer, and $5-8$ ths seer resemble it in form and Inckering. In the small villages where the dealcrs are poorer, these measures are made from large bamboos, sawed through at the joint.
The adholee in the Northern Kunkan consists of $3 \frac{1}{2}$ and 4 kutcha seers, and the number of adholees to the kakuni maund varies in different towns in the Collectorate from 17 to 24 . Where the 4 aeer adholee obtsing there the maund contains 20 adholees; and where the adholee is $3 \frac{1}{2}$ seers, there the maund consists of 24 adholees; so that the adholce and not the maund differs; the 17 adholees measure is perhaps confined to Sulsette. The Kokuni and Arabia candy are both in general use in this Collectorate; the first consists of seven maunds, the other of eight maunds. The catti, or Deccan candy, is also in use, and is used for measuring salt.
In most countrics south of the Nerbudda grains are sold by measures, but in aelling the flour a measured seer of grsin is put into one scale, and the flour weighed against it.
In countries north of the Nerbudda there seems to be no dry measure of capacity, and every thing is therefore sold by weight. This appears also to he the case in most of that Nizam's districts adjoining those of Ahmednugger. The introduction of measures into the Deccan appears to be of a late date, but on what principle they were constructed it is difficult to conjecture. The solid contents of a seer a capscity is widely different from a seer of weight throughout the Collectorship of both Poona and Ahmednugger ; the first filled with the grain bajree, varies from 108 to 120 rupees, while the other weighs about 80 rupees or 73 tola and 4 masss.
The pusseree or punj-serre.-There is n measure as well as weight termed pusserce or punj-seree, both occasionally met with in the Deccan, but the former is in general use in the Nizam's country. It ought to contain five seer as the name imports, but it varies so much, arising either from ignorance or fraud in the construction, that it occasions very general complaint.
In Guzerat the punj-seree is in fact but the representative of weight, but Its cubical contents are ascertained through the medium of a variable standard, that is, one species of grain rice in the rash which is liable to fluctuation according to the varying weight of the kind of corn in different soils and seasons.

The large dry measure in Bombay for salt is the para, containing $10 \frac{1}{2}$ adholee, whereof 100 make an anns ; one anna is equal to $2 \frac{1}{2}$ tons, and 1,600 para, or 16 annas, make one rash, or 40 tons. The para measure when used is struck off even with the rim by a rod made for the purpose.
The small dry measure for grain is the seer, whereof four tmake one puheelee; 17 puheelees a para; and 8 para a candy. Butty or rice in the husk ia reckoned by moora of 25 para.

The grain Khundee in the Poonah districta consists of 20 mun, each mun 12 puheelee, but sometimes of 16 pubeelee; and each puheelee of 2 adholee; each adholee of two seers. The sub-divisona of the seer sre $3-8$ ths, $2-3$ rds, 1-4th. The pulla is a measure of capacity, the contents of which weigh 120 sers of 80 Allkoosey rupeea the seer; or rather it is the representative of the weight called pulla. The puhcelee at Bheema, Shunkurs, Neelsee, and some other places bordering the Konkon, consiats of 3 3 seer only, instead of four. The mun thercfore of 12 puineelee at these places consists of 42 seer instead of 48 dry measure.

Liquid measure.-The liquid measure is used in the Deccan and Concan, hy the oil tellers and spirit deslers ; the measures used are of brass or iron, commonly in the form of a truncated cone. Like the other measures, the aliquot parta will be found irregular, or varying from truth. Milk in our camps, and indeed in large towns, is sold by arbitrary measures, but they should, properly, be regulated by the seer weight of 80 rupees.

Oil, milk, ghee and spirits are weighed in the Southern Konkan with a seer of 28 tolas. The vessel in which they are contained being previously weighed, and the weight thereof deducted. The liquids are also vended by weight throughout Guzerat, but the oil and spirit dealers' measures constructed on the principle of their solid contents, being equal to the weight they are intended to represent, hence measures must vary with the specific gravity of the articles.
Throughout the Northern Khonkan every talook seems to have its own oil or liquid measure ; it seems, however, to have heen originally framed to contain a portion of oil, which would weigh one Kutcha seer. When oil is bought for retail, 45 seers are reckoned to the maund.
The liquid secr measure used in Bombay for spirits, arrack and milk is equal in weight to 50 rupees, or 11 b .10 oz . $7 \mathrm{~d} w \mathrm{ta} .12 \mathrm{grs}$. troy. The maund consists of 50 of these seers, and the seer is sub-divided into half seers, quarter seers ; and the latter into two measures called nou-tanks, or nine tanks, tukka. The measure of oil corresponds with the maund of 28 lb ., that is the contents weigh that, and the contents of the seer consequently weigh 11. oz. dwt.

Long Measure.-The measures of length are the Khathee, the Guz, and the cubit. The first is only used as a land measure, the other two are more used by artificers, and sometimes in measuring piece goods, cloths, silk, \&cc., are not sold by the piece. In most of the provinces under this Presidency, the Guz is divided into 20 tussoo. In Guzerat it measures 27.5 inches, making the cubit of 14 tussoo, equal to 19.25 inches. At Bombay and in Malabar it is 28 inches, and the cubit 19.6 inches. In the Deccan, the Dooab, the Southern Konkan, and Surat, and also in Cutch, the Guz is divided into 24 tussoo, but of a greater variety of length, and the cubit into 14 tussoo. The Peishwa's Guz, which is in use in the public departments at Poonah, is 33.86 inches. At seven of the principal towns in the Dooab, the Guz varies from 31.75 inches to 34.75 inches, and broad cloth, velvet, chintz, and other articles of European manufacture are measured by it. An average accurately taken at 12 of the chief towns in the Southern Konkan, makes the Guz 33.438 inches, and the cubit $1 \cdot 508$ inches.

In Surat the Guz used by tailors is 27.8 , and by artificers 24 inches. In Cutch the Guz is divided into 24 tussoo, and measures 26.5 inches. The length of the cubit however, almost everywhere, is usually determined by the mean length of five different men's arms measured from the elbow to the end of the middle finger : turbans, &c. are sold by this measure, but it is seldom met with out of Surat, as a neasure, unless with tailors : purchasers usually by their own arm's length. The English yard is in common use at Bombay in measuring Europe manufactures, and indeed in many placcs in the interior.

Superficial and Solid Measures.-Superficial measures for the ineasurement of land. Solid messures for ascerialning the quantity of timber, and many kind of artificer's work are obtained from the same data ss the measures of length.

Artificer's Work.-In superficial measurement throughout Guzerat, Deccan, Konkan, and at the Presidency, the reckoning is made by 100 in length, whether Guz or Cubit by one in breadth. This rule applies also to the manufacture of carpets, mats, &c.

Masonry is calculated by the brass, which is 25 cubits in length by one in breadth, and one in height. The cubits in use among masons in Bombay is 23 inches, (being 4 longer than the timber Guz) so that 8 brass of masonry contains, 115.74 cubic feet.
Timber is measured by the Guz, and the rule for determining the contents is, by the square of the quarter girt multiplied into the length. A sawyer's Guz is 32 inches in. length and 9 inches in breadth; 329 by= 288 square inches, 2 square feet.
Bombay and Canara Measurement of Timber and Planp...-Timber; 20 visvassa make 1 vassa-20 vassa 1 covit or candy. Plank is measured by the guz of 28 Erglish iuches, or 24 borcls. 24 b.rrels in length, 12 borels in breadth and 1 borel in thickness, make a guz. A borel is equal to 4,666 English inches.
Malabar Meusurements.-Timber is measured by the candy or covit-16 moganies make 1 borel- 24 borels 1 koll; 24 kolls 1 covit or candy. Plank is measured by the guz-thus 10 noganies make 1 borel-92 borels in breadth, 24 borels in length, and 1 borel in thickness, constitute a guz.
English and Bombay Maasurement in the Dock Yard.-Timber-12 cubical fect, and 1,216 inches makea covit or candy- 3 covits and 183 vassa make 1 ton or 50 cubical feet. Plank- 26 cubical feet, and 206 inches -make 100 guz-(the quantity in which plank is bought and sold.)

Land Measure.

(Extracted from Captain Thomas Jervis's Report.)

The Land Measures are as follow :-The standard rod of five eubits length used throughout Gujerat called a guntha, also a ' bans,' sometimes a ' moula,' and sometincs a ' wussa.'
Of five and a half cubits length in the Deccan, called a cathee.
Of five cubits, and five mooshtees (or palms breadth) in Malwa, also called cathee.
Of five cubits and five mooshtces (or palms-hreadth) in the Konkan, also ealled cathee.
The length of the several measures, obtained by Major Williams hereunder specified, led me to fix the length of the hustu, or cubit, at about 19.3 or 19.4 inclies,-the districts in which the shorter measures are used being ao amall in comparison of the distriets, in which the large measures arc used.

The Cathee measures obtained from the different parts of the southern Konkan, are as follows -

In Goojerat the bheega, or veega it is sometimes pronouneed, is equal to the square of 20 gunthas; the square of one guntha being termed a wuswassa. 22 wuswassa $=1$ wassa; and 20 wassa $=1$ bheega.
It may be observed here, that the terms wussa and wuswassa, so generally used in all mcasures in Goojerat, are corruptions of beeswa and beeswansa, meaning the twentieth part and twenty-twentieth.
On the western side of India the bheega is equal to the superficial contents of a square of 20 cathees; the aquare of one cathee is called a poluh. 20 poluh $=1$ pand; 20 pands $=1$ bheega; and 120 pands $=1$ chaoor.
It is customary in the Konkan to reckon 23 pand equal to one bheega, and the mhars, whose office it is to measure the land, do not lay cathee or measuring rod on the giound, but raise the one end up, and pass it quickly over to the supposed place of the other end, which gives a much less quantity than the true superficial content-this last cuatom is also observed in Goojerat; but in the Deecan, land is measured with a rope, which gives the true contenta.

The following is by the late Byram Rowles, Esq. of the Bombay Civil Service, from whose abilitics in Revenue Matters, we may infer it to be very correct.
lat.-Acbar Shah's bheega (on the authority of Mr. Colebooke) 3,025 aquare yards. 2d.-Sashtee or salsette bheega (on the authority of Mr. Duncan) 3,927 square yards. 3d.-The blicega of the Neriad Cusba, (by marks on the Chuklase Bhagul Dhurumsala) 2,994 square yards 4 fect. 4th.-Supposed extent of the large bheega throughout the Neriad villages, 2,500 square yards. 5th.-Small bheega of Sulamee, land positu tenures, as well as the wuseefa, and other lands, not fully assessed, 1,600 square yards. 6th.-Bheega of the weatern division of Gujerat, comprising grassia tenures, 1,600 square yards. 7th.-Turab of Mahomedan law, 1,600 square yards. 8th.-Kaira bheega, according to the patells rods, 3,404 square yards. 9 th.-The Bengal bheega, 1,600 square yards.

The proportions between the different land measures of thls country and England, are lliustrated as follow :
Yards. Feet. Inches.
In a standard koomblia of the Jumboosur, Amod, and Dehej Purgunnas $\quad=\quad 4641 \quad 0 \quad 20$
In a standard bheega of the Baroche, Unklesur, and Hausot Purgunnas $\quad$ - $\quad 2477 \quad 7 \quad 64$
In a standard bheega of the Admedabad, Kaira, and Surat collcetorates

There are various modes of reekoning land in the Deccan, but they are all founded on the bheega, mea. suring in superficial coitents, 400 eathee of 5 cubits and 5 palms-breadth. In the Poona districts 10 bheega =1 Rooka; 48 bheegn = 1 tukka: a chandy contains from 20 to 35 bhecgas; and a mun or maund of land is the twentieth part of a khandy. In Khandes and in many of the Admednuggur districts, 4 bheegas $=1$ pur. tun, and 80 bheega=1 doorce. In the Dharwar Zillah, a koorge is as much land as can be sown with a drill plough in one day, consequently varying from 2 to 8 bheega.

3 F.-PECULIAR OFFICES AMONG THE CEYLONESE.

The Singalese have certain established national laws or old customs, according to which most things are determined, where the will of the king does not interpose to make any alteration. The children inherit the landed property, which does not descend exclusively to the eldest son; but where the right of primogeniture is allowed, the individual is obliged to support the mother and children. No man may marry a woman who has run away from her husband until the hushand has married another woman. The children of a freeman by a mother who is a slave, are born slaves, but the children of a slave by a free woman are free. A thief who cannot make a sevenfold restitution becomes a slave. Old people who run in debt barter their children for the amount, or pawn them as a security for the payment.

In a part of Valentyn's work, entitled "Extract uyt de Consideratien van de Heer van Rheede over Ceylon," dated in the year 1677, it is said that a ganima, or village, is composed of aeveral hamlets; a pattu, or district, of several villages; a corle, or county, of several pattus; and a dessaveny, or province, of several corles.-Hist. Ceylon, 323, n.
A coraal is the overseer or president of a corle or county, who has two, three or four attacoraals under him, according to the size of the corle and the number of pattus into which it is divided. He has moreover from six to eight lascaryns, pamideas, or messengers, aubject to hls orders. The attacoraals are to see that these orders are punctually executed.

It is their business to attend to the payment of the annual inposts, to see that the land is sowed and the harvest got in at the proper time, and to render a good account to the lord or proprietnr of the soil. When the lord visits the village it is their duty to see that proper apartments are preparcd for him, that they are hung with white calico, and his stool covered with the same. They are also to attend to the supply of his food during his stay.

Canganeme is an officer who musters the people of the village and calls them together when any work is to be done.
Mananna is a measurer of grain ; when the harvest has been got in it is his business to measure out that grain, which is a common stock, to the different proprietors. He was also p.uticularly to measure the corn that was due as an impost to the king.

APPENDIX V.-AUSTRAL-ASIA.*

A.-Sexuar. Proportion of the Free and Convict Population in New South Wales and Vak Diemen's Land.-[From the Report of the House of Commons Transportation Committee in 1838.]
Since the year 1793, 74,200 convicts have been transported to New South Wales, of whom not more than 10,000 were females; from 1825 to 1836 there have been 45,029 immigrants into that colony; yet by the census of 1836 its population did not exceed 77,096, not more, probably much less, than three-fifths of the number of persons that have landed at Port Jackson during the last half-century. The number of convicts transported to Van Diemen's Land since 1817, have been 27,759, of whom 2,974 were women. The population of the colony in 1834 was 40,283 , of whom 11,482 were women. The disproportion of sexes is about the same in both penal colonies ; it exists chiefly amongst the convicts, and is most remarkable in the country districts.

In 1836 the free population of New South Wales amounted to 49,255 , of whom about 17,000 had been convicts. In 1834 the free population of Van Diemen's Land did not exceed 23,315, of whom about 3,000 were expirees. In 1836, Sydncy covered an area of about 2,000 acres, and contained about 20,000 inhabitants ; of this number 3,500 were convicts, most of them in assigned service, and about 7,000 had probably been prisoners of the crown.

K--CRIME IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

(From the H. C. Select Committee on Transportation, in 1838.)
The committee have not been able to obtain any returns of any importance with regard to summary convictions in New South Wales. In 1835, the number of convicts in that colony were about 28,000, and the summary convictions in the year were estimated to be about 22,000 . In one month in 1833, as has already been stated, 247 convicts were flogged, and 9,784 lashes inflicted, which would make for the whole, 2,964 floggings, and above 108,000 lashes inflicted.
The following tables refer to the amount of grave crimes committed in the penal coloniea, and which are cognizable only before the Supreme Court and Quarter Sessions. It should be remarked, that no convicts are prosecuted by the Attorney-general in Van Diemen's Land, except for crimes punishable with death; for all lesser crimes they are tried summarily before magistrates, 80 that generally offences committed by convicts do not appear in the returns of crime as published.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

O.-TREATMENT OF CONVICTS IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

Copy of a Despatch from Governor Sir R. Bourke, K. C. B., to Lard Glenelg, dated Government Housc, Sydney, 4th December, 1837. (Separate.)
My Lord,-In reply to your Lordship's despatch of the 30th April, 1837, I have the honour to transmit answers to the querics touching the treatment of convicts in New South Wales, presented ly the Prison Discipline Society. In these answers I have confined nyself almost entirely to statements of facts, referring occasionally to published regulations, and to those despatches addressed hy this government to the Colonial Office, which have been laid before the House of Commons, and printed by its order. 1 have, however, in replying to the last query, alluded generally, and without giving numbers and dates, to despatches which have not been printed, which your Lordship can communicate or not as may seem proper.
(Signed.)
1 have, &c. Richard Bourke.

Enclosure to Sir R. Bourke's Despatch (marked separate), 4th December, 1837, with an Appendix.

I. On landing in the colony, under whose care and superintendence are the convicts placed? Under that of the principal superintendent of convicts.
2. In what description of building are they lodged on their arrival? In Hyde Park Barracks, Sydney. The construction and arrangements of this building do not materially differ from those of a nilitary barrack.
3. Do they associate by day? There is no other restriction in this respect than what arises from their several occupations. They are mostly kept to work in gangs in the streets of Sydney, from their landing until assigned. Some hours of the day during this period are, when required, allotted to their receiving religious instructions from the clergy of their several communions, who attend at Hyde Park to impart it. To give longer time for this course of instruction, Dr. Polding, the Koman-catholic bishop, shortly after his arrival in New South Wales, requested that the period between the arrival and assignment of the convict should be lengthened, which was done accordingly. He has, as regards those of his communion, attended to it with great earnestness and regularity; and there is reason to belicve that the result has been beneficial to those who receive his admonitions, and to the public in general.
4. Are they separate at niglit? If nct, in what numbers are they confined? -They sleep in hanmocks in large rooms, the numbers in each varying with the size of the room.
5. What distinction is made in the treatment, discipline, or assignment of convicts sentenced to 7, 14, 21 years, or for life. None in their assigıment. There is a distinetion between convicts sentenced to different terms of transportation, in the length of prohationary servitude required, before they can obtain tickets of leave. The statute 2 \& 3 Will. $4, \mathrm{c} .61, \mathrm{~s} .2$, enacts, that no convict shall obtain any remission of servitude from the governor of the colony until he shall first have completed, of a sentence of life, eight years ; of a sentence for 14 years, six yeara; of a sentence for aeven years, four years. The nature of the servitude, while it lasts, is not in any way affected by the length of time for which it is imposed. In all cases the remission is delayed by misconduct; and if this be gross, or repeated, it will preclude the convict froin receiving any indulgence whilst the term of his sentence endurcs. (See Tieket-of-leave Regulation of 25th May 1835.)
6. Is regard paid in those respects to their former station in society, or good conduct on that veyates, or previous guilty habits in Eugland? With regard to former station in socicty, those convict:, wit: are me!
educated, or have been engaged in mercantile pursuita, or in the profession of the law, are aeparated from the rest, by removal from Sydney immediately on arrival, to the distant settlement of Port Macquarie, to which place they are restricted until the expiration of their sentence, or until they receive a pardon. A few convicts have likewise been for some years past sent out, with express directions from the secretary of state for the Colonics, founded upon recommendations of the judges befure whom they were severally tried, either for their removal to Norfolk Island, or their employment in hard labour on the roads or public works within the colony, instead of assignment to private service. Except in the cases above enumerated, no distinction in treatment, discipline, or assignment is made on account of either station, good conduct on the voyage, or previous guilty habits; of which last, indeed, little or nothing is known here by any communication through an official channel. With respect to assignment to private service, it may be proper to observe, that it is now geverned by a code of regulations calculated to ensure a due diatribution of convict labour, according to the power of the colonists to employ it, and the means of supply possessed by government, with the strictest impartiality in the assignment. The exercise of a discretionary power in distributing convicts by a board, as formerly practised, was found to be extremely invidious, from its very extensive influence over private interests. The whole mechanism of assignment is now in the hands of a single ministerial officer aworn to administer the regulations without favour. (See Regulations, 9 May 1835.)
7. What means are taken, and how soon after the arrival of convicts, to procure situations for those who are allowed to work as mechanics, &c., or to enter domestic service? They are assigned without delay, me. chanics as well as domestic servants and labourers, pursuant to the regulstion above referred to.
8. On what terms are mechanics or domestic servants usually employed; and are they allowed any pro. portion of their earnings. The government does not recognise the practice of paying any wages whatever to convicts, although there is little doubt that many, and especially mechanics and domestic servants, do receive wages from their masters, whose interest it is to encourage and conciliate them. Distinctions are also made by masters, from similar motives, in the articles of food and clothing. The treatment which is prescribed to the master in these respects, by the order of government, may be considered as a minimun which the servant is entitled to demand as a right. Most masters supply tea, sugar, or milk, and some. times tobacco, in small quantities, in addition to the ration required by regulation.
9. Do employers enter into any security to the government for the proper maiutenance and treatment of the convicts? -The power of the government to remove, not only the servant improperly dcalt with, but ah the other convict servants of the oflending master, is the only security; but this is as ample as any other supposed security could be.
10. Has the government any continued surveillance over convicts who are assigned to settlers, either as field-labourers or as domestic servants?-The surveillance over convicts, exercised as through the summary jurisdiction of magistrates, may he understood by perusal of the Act of Council, 3 Will. 4, No. 3. Any complaint of the convict himself may be heard before the same tribunal ; and if the magistrates represent misconduct on the part of the master, the governor exercises the power of removal referred to in the answer to query 9.
11. Is a settler required to make a report to the Governor from time to time relative to the conduct and treatment of a convict in his service? if so, what is the nature of such report?-When the time required by law to render the convict eligible for indulgence has expired, the form of his application for a ticket of leave contains a certificnte to be signed by his master. If the master decline signing it, the regulations acquaint him that the servant will be considered blameless. The master may also be called on by the magistrates to give his reasons for omittilg to insert the servant's character. (See Ticket of Leave Regulations before referred to.) This is the only report required from the master of the nature alluded to. If the servant behave ill, and the master desires to punish him, he applies to the magistrates. Reports of the hearing of such complaints are transmitted monthly to the Government by the magistrates.
12. Are any and what precautions taken to prevent convicts from absconding from their employers?No coercion is used for this purpose by the government, the servant being placed in the custody of the master, who is at liberty to watch him as he thiuks fit, or lock him up at niglit in his room, hut or barrack. The means adopted for the apprehension of runaways, and the punishment which on conviction they incur, as stated in the next reply, may however lee considered as the precautions referred to in the query.
13. In the case of absconding, what measures are adopted for the recapture of prisoners? If taken, what punishments are usually inflicted; and what is the greatest punishme't to which they are liable :-1, A corps of mounted police and a numerous constabulary are kept up, whose attention is dirccted to the apprehension of runaway convicts, and their exertions stimulated by rewards for all such capturcs to a greater or less amount, according to circumstances. 2. The apprehension of these delinguents is much facilitated by an Act of Council, (last renewed and amended in the session of 1834 ), which gives a power of apprehension on bare suspicion. Nothing but the peculiar case of the colony could render such a law tolerable to Englishmen. 3. The punishment for absconding is 50 lashes, or 14 days' solitary confinement with bread and water, or one inonth's treadmill for the first offence. If the convict is found illegally st large with fire-arms, lie is liable on this alone, without any proof of having actually committed an outrage, to he convicted of felony ( 3 Gul .4, No. 3, s. 12) ; and a sccond absconding is of itself punishable with a yests labour in irons, (ld. s. 12). 4. A penalty of not less than $5 l$., or more than 106 ., is inposed on any free person harbouring a runaway convict ( 3 Gul .4 , No. 3, sec. 25 ), recoverahle in a summary way before any two justices. This is in a case where the runaway has committed no other offence. If he lie a robber or housebreaker, the harbourer, knowing him to be such, is liable to capital punishment as an accessory, (ld. sec. 13). If the harbourer be a convict, he is linble, in the flrst case, to whipping or one year to an ironed gang, (Id. sec. 25) ; and in the latter to the same punishment ns a free person.
14. Are any particular description of convicts distinguished by a dress, mark, or badge?-The convicts In ironed gangs, and those employed on pulblic works, hy order of the Secretary of State, as before refered to, are distinguished by particoloured winter and branded summer clothing.

15. What is the daily ration of food per head for convicts in the service of the Government?-See annual contracts for 1837 , and contracts for the colonial service for 1838.
16. Are spirituous liquors allowed, and in what quantities?-None are ever issued to convicts in the service of Government. In private service masters sometimes allow spirits to their convict scrvants when washing sheep, but wine or beer are now given by many instead of rum. The Licensing Act impoaes severe penalities on publicans supplying conviets with any quantity without consent of the master. Drunkenness is punishable in the convict by whipping or solitary confincment. If the master occasion or permit the offence, he is liable to lose his servant.
17. What number of hours per day are such prisoners employed, and at what decription of labour?-Ten hours of labour per day is the maximum. The principal work of government gangs is on the strcets, roads, and in the quarries. A gang is employed in the botanical gardens at Sydney, and others with the royal engincer, commisariat, and other public departments. Mcehanics in those gangs are employed in their scveral trades. Many convicta, not brought up to any trade, have become good stone-cutters and setters during their employment by Government.
18. What punishments are usually inflicted for refractory conduct or negligence of work ?-Sce 3 Gul. 4, No. 3.
19. Is corporal punishment inflicted, and to what extent, and by whose directions, and under whose superintendence?-Corporal punishment is inflicted under the provisions of the Colonial Act referred to in the preceling number. The punishments within their respective chargea are superintended by the police magistratcs, assistant engineers, and superintendent of Hyde Park Barracks. In the necessary absence of the police magistrates, a chief constable superintends. For further intormation on this head, sce Reports of Police Magistrates, printed for the House of Commons, in Appendix to Sir Richard Bourke's Despatch to Mr. Secretary Stanley, of January 1834.
20. Is aolitary coufinement adopted as a punishment? for what offences, and to what extent ?-The magistrates have by law, in nearly every case, a discretionary power of substituting solitary confinement for corporal punishment. But in practice this discretion is materially restricted by the want of a sufficient number of solitary cells. The slow progress of the required gaols and other public buildings, (the cause of which has been frequently reported to Her Majesty's Government), has contributed to this deficiency. When the buildings now commenced or contemplated, are completed, it will be in the power of the magistrates to apply solitary confincment as a punishment much more frequently. But in such a country as New South Walcs any (even the most extravagant) expenditure could not secure the means of such punishment in the remoter districta; and the difficulty, expense, and other mischiefs arising out of escorts, if the offender be ordered to a distant place of confinement, will always lead to the alternative of corporal punishment in many cases where solitary confinement would have been preferred if the necessary buildings were at hand.
21. What is the usual daily rations for convicts assigned to settlers?-See Scale of Rations as prescribed by Government Order before referred to.
22. Where do such convicts take their meals, and reside when not at work ?-There is no positive regulation on this head; and wher regulation is silent, the treatment of the convict, as of a free servant, depends on the master by whom, and the occupation in which, he is employed. The mass of convict servants are however, agricultural or pastoral, and are lodged in rough huts on the farm or stock station, bcing provided with bedding, and some few articles of furniture. In those huts they cook their rations, and take their meals.
23 Are they allowed spirituous liquors? and in what quantitics? -See reply to No. 16.
23. What number of hours per day are they employed, and at what kinds of labour ?-The occupations and circumstances of master and servant have been found too varied to allow of any positive regulation in this respect. Complaints against the servant for neglect of work, or against the master for excessive inposition of labour, are respectively cognizable by the magistrates of each district.
24. What punishments are usually inflicted fur refractory conduct or neglect of work?-See Act of Council before referred to, and reply to No. 20.
25. What checks exist against excessive punishment?-The limitations prescribed by the colonial law before referred to.
26. How is the Sunday usually spent among convicts?-The only imperative rule which the Government has found it possible to apply is that which secures to the convict freedom from all compulsory labour on the Sunday. Some mastera read prayers to such of their servants as are willing to join in the form of worship used. Places of public worship are open to convicts; in aome seats are especially appropriated for them; but the variety of creeds and degrces of cducation, as well in masters as servants, and the remote habitations of the majority of settlers, render it absolutely impossible, though otherwise desirable, to introduce any more specific regulation on this aubject thun the establishment of the right of the convict to rest from his labours, with the privilege of attending Divinc worship if casily accessible in lis neighbourhood. The provisions for rendering it thus accessible belong to the general subject of the colonial ccclesiastical affairs, as to which see the papers on this subject lately printed for the House of Commons.
27. Are any means generally employed for morul and religiaus improvencut of such convict?-See preceding reply ; to which it may be added, that some masters supply their assigned servants with the Holy Scriptures, booke of prayer, and religions and moral works.
28. Is each convict furniahed with a Bible?-See furegoing reply.
29. What description of convicts are cmployed in the road-gangs and quarries ?-See replica to Nus. 3,6 , and 17 .
30. By whom are they appropriated, ard on what principle are they selected?
31. Are any desription of convicta ironed during the hours of labour, or at any other time?
32. In what numbers do they work?
33. In what manner do they associate at their meals, and are they confaed at night?
34. Are any armed guards placed as superintendents over thia class of convicta?
35. How is the Sunday spent by this description of convicts?
36. What means are provided for their moral and religious improvement?

See regulations for ironed-gangs, road and bridge parties.
38. What parts of the colony are assigned as penal settlements?-Norfolk Island and Moreton Bay.
39. What class of convicts are sent therc ?-Those who, having arrived in this colony under sentence of transportation, are again sentenced to transportation by the colonial courts for subsequent uffences : and a few sent there on their first coming out by order of the Secretary of State.
40. At what kind of labour are they employed, and for what number of hours daily?-At field labour in the quarries, or in any way that is required, for 10 hours daily.
41. In what doea the distinction consist between the treatment of ordinary convicts in the colony, and those assigned to penal settlements?-There are no settlers allowed either at Norfolk Island or Moreton Bay. No convicts are therefore assigned to private service. A very few of the best conducted are permitted to serve the Government officers at those places. The rest are worked in gangs in field labour, in the quarries, or roads, or other public works, as required; locked up in barracks at night, and liable to be punished corporally at the discretion of the commandant, not excceding 300 lashes. They are in other respects subject to the provisions of the Colonial $\Lambda \mathrm{ct}, 3 \mathrm{~W} .4$, No. 3, before referred to.
42. How is the Sunday spent by convicts in penal settlements?
43. What means are provided for their moral and religious improvement?

Sunday, as in the colony, is at the penal settlements a day of rest from labour; and the service of the church of England, and of the Roman-catholick church, is performed by members of each to the congregations of their respective communions. There is at present a chaplain of the church of England at Norfolk island, on account of his health, who does duty there. A protestant chaplain was specially appointed for the island in 1836, who after a short service resigned. A Roman-catholic priest is expected out immediately. It has been found extremely difficult to procure clergymen for this station, repented applications from the colony having been made without effect. Cathechists have been employed by direction of the local government or commandant, and the religious services of Sunday have been thus provided for, and mural and religious instruction communicated by lectures and books. Chnplains have not been provided for Moreton Bay, where the number of convicts is small, and it is proposed to withuraw them from the station; but there is now a Protestant missionary there who performs divine service, lectures, and attends to the schools, and Sunday serviee has always been provided for by the commandant.
44. What is the number of the free population, and of convicts, in the principal towns of New South Wales?
45. What is the number of the free population, and of convicts, in the rural districts ?-A copy of the last census is annexed.
46. On the expiration of their sentences, what course is usually adopted by the convicts to obtain a liveli-hood?-This question does not admit of a general answer. The modes in w!ich convicts whose sentences have expired obtain a livelihood, are as various as those of an equal number of other persons of different qualifications and pursuits.
47. Are liberated convicts registered, or is there any kind of inspection over them on the part of the government?-They hold certificatcs of freedom, to protect them from being dealt with as conviciz under servitude. They are not liahle to any particular inspection on account of their having been previously under servitude, unless they have suffered a colunial sentence of transportation to a penal settlement. Such peisons on becoming free are placed under the special surveillance of the police.
48. What proportion are considered to return to England?-It is not possible to state the proportion ; but it is considered too insigniticant to be of any importance.
49. What number of convicts have been transported a second time during each of the last 10 years?This information can be nore accurately obtained at the office of the secretary of state for the home department.
50. What has heen the number of executions in the colonies in each of the last five years? - See return.
51. What descriptions of crime are most prevalcut in the colony?-])runkenncss and petty thefts constitute a large proportion of the offences brought before the police and inferior courts; and cattle stealing has been for the last three or four years a very frequent subject of investigation before the superior tribunals. The seattered locations and pastoral pursuits of the settlers have facilitated the commission of this crime, but it has been lately much checked by the vigorous administration of the law.
52. What effect have letters from influential persons in England in producing mitigation of a prisoner's sentence? Since the passing of the Act $2 & 3$ Will. 4, c. 62, which prescribes given periods of prohationary servitude, letters from influential persons in England las been nearly, if not wholly, withont effect; good conduct for the prescribed periods leading to indulgence at their expiration as a matter of coursc, upon bare application properly authenticated under the ticket-of-leave regulations before referred to; to which it may be added, that applications for pardon from convicts who have held a ticket-of-leave for six years, withuut interruption, who have few or no colonial offences recorded against them, and are well recommended by respectable people in the colony, are usunlly transmitted for the gracious allowance of the crown. This government cennot do more than law and regulation anthorize in deference to any recommeridation whatever; and no influence is necessary to obtain for the well conducted convict what these permit.
53. Are settlers permitted to lend convicts to cach other?
54. Are convicts ullowed to quit for a time the settler with whom they heve been locareu, to visit another settler? Not unless in particular cases, for which sec Assignment Regulations, before referred to.
55. The wives of convicts, who go out to their hushands at the government expense, by whom are they received immediately on their arrival? According to the policy of the regnintion now in force, the wife is not officially applicd for, until her husband has $n$ prospect of obtaining $n$ ticket-of-leave before her arrival

Being qualified by this indulgence to labour for his living and that of his family, she joins him on her arrival, and no other interference of the Government is necessary than to inform her where her husband resides, which is done by the principal superintendent of convicts.
56. What pcriod usually elnpses on their arrival betore they join their husbands? Sce foregoing reply.
67. When they join their husbands, in what manncr are they domiciliated? According to the condition and occupation of the husband. The Government does not interfere with their domestic arrangements.
58. What proportion of convicts exported during the last ten ycars have become signally respectable, or signally troublesome, or remained between the two extremes? Answer, if possible, ycar by year; should any remarkable variance, in the above proportion, year by year, occur, suggest if any general cause can be assigned for it? The convicts in New South Walcs are by far too numerous, and the true conduct of those in private servicc is neccssarily too little known to the officers of Government, to admit of an answer upon which any just reliance could be placed. An cstimate from the police history of every convict, as recorded in the office of the principal auperintendent of convicts, would not furnish a satisfactory reply.
59. Are instances frequent, or very rare, of convicts reforming after being sent to a penal settlement? It is the opinion of clergymen, Protestant and Catholic, who have visited Norfolk Island on duty, that the system pursued there is not such as to effect a change of heart and disposition in the criminals who are subjected to it. On the other hand, it is found that instances of a second transportation to a penal station are very rare indeed, and that the convicts returned from thence conduct themselves regularly; many who have been at penal settlements obtained tickets of-leave after undergoing the full period of servitude reckoned from their return, in conformity to the regulations before referred to.
60. What has been the conduct, in such instances as can be obtained, of convicts whose wives have been allowed to join them from England, or who have been allowed to marry in the colony? There can be no douht of the beneficial effect on the character of the convict, produced by sending to him his wife and family, provided he be qualified, by holding indulgence, to live with and maintain them. When by any means they arrive before this degree of liberty is obtained, or that the husband lose it afterwards by misconduct, the result is frequently deplorable, as the wife and children are not always able to maintain themselves. In aome instances, the master to whom the husband is assigned may consent to receive and maintain the family, but Government does not require such a condition. In general, it is observed, that convicts with wives, whether brought from home or wedded in the colony, conduct themselves in an urderly manner.
61. Can any difference be traced between the conduct of convicts who have relations in the colony (convicts or others), and that of such as have none? None, it is believed.
62. Could detailed statements be obtaincd of the career of any considerable number of such convicts as have reformed; if so, procure them? It would be difficult to procure any upon the correctness of which reliance could be placed; nor is it quite clear what is intended in this question, or in 59, by the word reformed. Real reformation of hcart and disposition can be known to Him only who is the Searcher of Hearts. It may be stated, however, of the convicts in general, that a large proportion of those who have served their aentences, or ohtained pardons, or tickets-of-leave, scattercd over all parts of this immense colony, conduct themselves in such a manner as to keep out of the hands of the police and the clutches of the law. In their homes and families they will not be found, in the same proportion, free from the grosser vices and immoralities to which the lower class of the people are subject. Nevertheless, there are very many of admitted probity and industry, and many who bring up their children virtuously and decently; and, judging from the conduct and nppearance of such families, they might be considered as not below the ordinary standard of the peasantry of England. Of the convicts in servitude a large proportion are found, upon application for their tickets-of-lcave, to bave no offence, or very trivial offences, recorded against them; and many obtain good characters from their masters and the mingistrates. There arc also many emancipists in trade, many shopkeepers, and others, large proprictors of land and houses, become wealthy by a course of industry and frugality, pursued steadily for many years.
63. Have any temperance societics heen established in the colony ; if so, have any convicts joined them, and with what effect?-Many, with very useful effect, considering the strength of the temptations they have to encounter.
64. Is the distinction very marked in the colony between emancipated convicts and free settlers; and, if so, is it readily acquiesced in or complained of?-See reply to No. 67.
65. Are any collection of books within the colony in the reach of the convicts; if so, transmit catalogues of them?-As to convicts in government employ, see regulations for ironed gangs, before referred to. As to those dispersed in the service of the culonists, see replies to Nos. 27 and 28 . With regard to convict boys under 16 years of age, whose sentence sellom exceeds scven ycars; these are not assigned to a settler without an engagement on his part, that the boy shall receive elementary, religious, and moral instruction, and shall be taught to read and write. Under this engagement the boy is pernanently assigned for what remains of his acutence of scven years.
66. Arc any attempta made to establish achools for the convict's bencfit ; or is any other machinery, purely moral, brought to bear upon then ?-See replies to Nus. 3, 27, 28, and 65, and regulations for ironed gangs, before referred to.
67. Make such general remarks as occur on the whole convict system of the colony, and on its effect on the moral and socinl state of the community; also remark on the effect of the latter on it. Enter on the aubject largely, making any observations nud suggestions which may be instructive or uscful in regard thereto?-In the correspondence of this government with the colonial office, the conviet system of Now South Wales has been largely discussed; and some of the most important of those papers have been laid before the House of Commons, nnd printed by its order. It appears, therefore, hardly necessary to renew the topic here, at the length which the query seema to contemplate; whilst a few unconnected and general observations would not add any value to the foregoing statements of facts.

Enclosure to Sir Richard Bourke's Despatch, 4th December 1837. (Separate.) Colonial Secretary's office, Sydney, 25th May, 1835.
Tickets of Leare.-The ticket-of-leave regulations published in the aummary dated lat October 1830, having been partly superseded by act of parliament, and requiring revision in other respects, his excellency the governor has been pleased to direct, that the following be observed, with reference to that indulgence, from and after the 30th day of June next.
I. Qualification.--1. The first and indispensable qualification, is the completion of the probationary servitude required by the act of the Imperial parliament, 2 and 3 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 2, viz -Four yeara of a sentence for 7 years, six years of a sentence for 14 years, eight years of a sentence for life, to be reckoned from the date of employment by the government, or of assignment to private aervice in the colony.
11. Additional probation on account of changes of service.-In addition to the probation required by law, one year is added for every change of service of any male convict appearing to have been occasioned by his misconduct.
III. Additional Probation on account of punishment.-1. One year is added for every punishment inflicted on a male convict by colonial aentence, except that to an ironed-gang, or penal settlement, in which cases the probation recommences from the expiration of the sentence.
2. Aa it has sometimes happened that a convict has behaved so ill as to be punished between the period of application for a ticket of-leave and the decision thereon, magistrates by whom auch punishments are ordered, and masters by whom the complaints are made are to give immediate and apecial notice, by letter to the principal superintendent of convicts, of all auch cases, in order that the required additional probation may be enforced.
IV. Discretion of the Magistrates.-Notwitstanding the foregoing rules, magistrates entertaining an application for a ticket-of-leave, are not precluded from recominending, at the instance of the master, a remission of the additional probation required, either for change of service or punishment, if they shall be of opinion that the subsequent good conduct of the applicant has merited the remission. This observation will equally apply to an application made for the first time, and to that authorized by (VI, 6) of these rules.
V. Probation of Female Convicts.-As the propriety of granting tickets-of-leave to female convicts materially depends upon the connexions which it may enable them to form or maintain, it is not intended to lay down any strict rules with regard to them, in addition to those imposed by the atatute referred to in paragraph 1. When the probation therely required has been completed, the giving or witbholding of a ticket-of-leave will depend on the particular circumstances of each case. Magistrates will, however, continue to receive and forward the applications of females as is now practised, being caretul in addition to inquire and represent, not only their eligibility from term of service and good conduct, but also the manner in which they propose to maintain themselves while holding the desired indulgence.
VI. Mode of Application, and of Inquiry and decision thereon.-1. Applications for tickets of leave are to be presented personally by the applicant (in a form to be supplied for that purpose) to the petty gessions of the district in which he is employed, on such day or days in every month as the justices shall appoint and make known in their respective districts. If but one justice should be present, such justice may receive and deal with the application in conformity to these regulations. If the applicant's place of employment be not within any autborised district, he shall apply to the nearest court of petty aessions. No application is to be received by the sessions which is not in the prescribed form, and signed by the master or overseer.
2. Blank forms of applications for tickets of leave will he delivered to masters, gratis, by the clerks of the several benches, upon demand, and masters are required to be constantly provided with them for the use of the convicts in their aervice who have applications to make.
3. Should the master of any servant applying for a ticket, consider the applicant undeserving the indulgence, he is required to state his opinion in writing to the bench, with the grounda of it. In case he decline giving such written statement, the magistrates are bound to consider the applicant as deserving.
4. To allow full time for the inquiries hereinatter directed, the application may be made three months before the term of probation required by law or regulation has expired, and the master of every servant entitled to apply under this rule, is bound to furnish him with a printed form of application and pass to the appropriate court of petty sessions, and further to answer all questions of such court, relating to the conduct and claims of the applicant; attending in person for such purpose, if required.
5. If the court ahall have reason to believe that any convict has knowingly presented an application for a ticket of leave, before the time herein prescribed, or made any false entry of service in it, cither with respect to dates, or by omitting to enter the aeveral services in which he shall have been employed, the bench shall immediately report the case through the principal superintendent of convicts, for the governor's information, and one year (or more if the case shall scem to deserve a higher degree of punishment) of additional servitude will he required of every such officuder.
6. It is to be understood that the master is required to give the form and pass before mentioned three months before the expiration of the period of servitude to which the convict is bound by the statute 2 and 3 W . IV., chap. 62 referred to in paragraph 1, But if, after submission to the proper authoritics, the sp. plication of a ticket of leave be refused, and an additional period of probation be required, the master will not consider himself obliged to give another form and pass, for the purpose of a renewed application, until the expiration of the additional period. If, however, from the subsequent good conduct of the scrvant, the master shall wish to obtain a remission of the additional probation, he may furnish the servant with the form, stating thercon his desire that the additional probation be remitted, and his reason for such recommendation.
7. The court entertaining the application, will enter on the form all such particulars relating to the conduct of the applicant, as cnn be obtained from his present or former masters fif these be residing within the district), or from their own records; and will add such observations as the case may seen to require, and transmit all applications so prepared on the last day of every month, or oftener, if required, to the principal superintendent of convicts. Previously to transmission, the clerk of the bench will transcribe the applications into a book to be kept for the purpose, in which a cclumo will be left to enter the decision when obtained, but the original application, with the magistrates' remarks thercon, attested by their signatures, are in all cases to be forwarded to the principal superintendent of convicts, for the governor's information.

8. The principal superintendent will, on receipt of such application, examine the records of his office for such other facts aa may be necessary to complete the evidence in favour of or against the claim, referring, where necessary, to the former masters, or to the magistrates of the several districts in which the applicants may have formerly served, or to other convenient sources of information. The principal superintendent will then forward the application, with the several statements and certificates, and his report upon the qualification of the applicant, to be submitted to the governor.
9. If the application be rejected, additional probation being required, such rejection will be notified inmediately by the principal superintendent of convicts to the court of petty sessions through which the appiication was forwarded. The magistrates will tnke the earliest opportunity of informing the master, and will post a notice of the fact in some conspicuons place inside and outside the court-house, and will not receive any application for a ticket of leave from the same party, until the additional period of probation shall have expired, unless at the instance of the master, as before-mentioned. (VI. 6.)
VII. Restoration of Ticket cancelled.-Any convict whose ticket of leave has been cancelled by the governor, inay apply for its restoration, through the master to whom he has heen assigned, and not otherwise. The master will, if he thinks the servant deserving of indulgence, apply for the restoration by letter, addressed to the appropriate court of petty sessions, who will forward it, with their remarks endorsed thereon, to the principal superintendent of convicts, to be laid, with that officer's report, before the governor. Unless in this manner, no application shall be made for the restoration of a ticket of leave, until the convict shall have served a probation of four years from the date of his ticket being cancelled, when a regular application in the manner and form preseribed in pnragraph VI. may be made for a new tieket.
Note.-When the convict affected by any of the foregoing regulations is in the service of government, the offer in charge of such convict is to be considered as the master within the meaning of the regulations.
VIII. Muster of Persons holding Tickets-of-Leave.-(Males)-1. Holders of tickets-of-leave for the district of Sydney, residing within the town, shall be mustered in the parishes in which they reside, under the inspection of a police-magistrate, upon the first day of every month, (or the second if the first aball fall on a Sunday), at such place and hour for each parish, as the first police-magistrate shall appoint.

Any ticket-of-leave holder neglecting to give such return will become liable to be apprehended as a runaway.
3. If a ticket-of-leave bolder shall quit his residence for another in the same parish, he shall within 24 hours report in writing to the wardsman the place to which he removes, or if the removal be from one parish to another, he shall report in like manner his removal and netual residence, both to the wardsman whose parish he quita, and to the wardsman within whose parish he takes up his new residence. Any neglect of this regulation will cause an immediate cancellation of his ticket.
4. Holders of tickets-of-leave, residing without the town of Sydney, but within the district for which petty sessions are held at Sydney, shall be mustered quarterly in Sydney, under the inspection of a policemagistrate, on the first days of January, April, July, and October, in every ycar, or the second if the first should fali on a sunday, at such place and time as the first police-magistrate shall appoint.
5. Holders of tiekets-of-leave in the other districts of the colony shall be mustered quarterly, on the days mentioned in the preceding regulation, at the court-house at which the petty sessions for such district are held, by a police-magistrate where such is stationed in the district, or otherwise by the clerks of petty sessions, under the inspection of a justice of the peace acting for the district.
6. Holders of tiekets-of-leave for any place not included in a district for which petty sessions are held, and a clerk of the bench appointed, will be mustered quarterly, on the days above mentioned, before the uearest justice of the peace, according to instructions which will be given him to this effect.
7. Immediately aftcr eacli muster, the magistrate under whose superintendence it has heen made, or the elerk of the bench, if no magistrate has attended, will report the names of all absentees to the principal superintendent of convicts, for the governor's information.

The magistrate superintending the muster, will, whenever he thinks it necessary, interrognte the holder of a ticket-of-leave respecting his means of subsistence and mamner of life, and if he shall not be satisfied that the ticket-of-leave holder subsists honestly, he will render a special report of the case to the principal auperintendent of convicts, for the governor's information.
9. No other musters than the foregoing will be required from the first day of July next, but any holder of a ticket of-leave failing to attend at muster as herein required, or to show such cause for non-appearance as the governor, upon investigation of the case, shall think it right to admit; will be deprived of his ticket.

Any omission in the delivery of these reports, unless satisfactorily accounted for to the magistrates, or any false statement therein, will aubject the offender to the loss of her ticket; and the magistrates are requested to cause frequent inquiry to be made to ascertain the correctness of these reports. At the same time as it is desirable that married women, and generally women of good character, should not be obliged to leave their homes to deliver these reports, the magistrates are authorized to dispense with them where the character and habits of the woman shall justify in her case a relaxation of the rule. Printed forma of reports may be obtained gratis on application to the clerks of the several benches of magistrates.
2. Women found absent from their district without a pass or licence, as hereinafter mentioned, will be subject to the loss of their ticket, equally with males.

2. When holders of tickets-of-leave shall be obliged, from the nature of their occupation, to attend the markets in Sydney, application may be made in like manner through the petty sessions, or nearest justice, to the principal superintendent of convicts, who will grant them, if satisfied with the propriety of the application, a license to attend the markets accordingly. 1. That the master shall pay at the rate of 1 s . a day for the time his servant shall be in the hospital, to the extent of 30 days. Should the servant continue under treatment for any longer period, the master will not be required to make any further payment.
2. That the persons who send their servants into any of the hospitals shall appoint an agent on the spot to take them away as soon as they are recovered, and unless they be so taken away, they shall be considered as immediately assignable to other parties, in order to prevent the hospital from being improperly burthened with men who do not require treatment.
3. That all persons to whom convicts shall be assigned shall send for them to Sydney, or to such other place as they shall be assembled at. For example, the men to be assigned from road partiea will be collected at or near the stations of the assistant surveyors of roads :-(1) At Parramatta. (2.) At Colletts', on the Bathurst road. (3) At the station of the assistant-surveyor, on the Maitland road. (4.) At Bong Bong.
4. That if the party to whom a prisoner is assigned shall fail to send for him, the prisoner will be assigned to some other person ; and in order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience which must be experienced in such cases, the master will not be considered as an eligible candidate for servants in future.
5. That in order to avoid disappointment, it is suggested that persons residing at a distance applying for servants, who may be assigned in Sydney, should appoint an agent, whose name and residence should be stated in the application, to receive at the time any men who may be assigned to them.
6. That as all convicts who are assigned immediately on their arrival from England and Ireland, are supplied with a complete suit of new clothing, and as it is only reasonable that the person having the benefit of the convict's scrvices should be at the expense of this clothing, the assignces of all such convicts will henceforth be required to pay 20 s. for the clothing so furnished at the tine of receiving the men.

The government has further been induced, as well with a view of protecting those masters who act with liberality towards their servants from the complaints of the discontented and $\ldots i$-disposed, as to insure to all assigned servants a due proportion of food and clothing, to lay down the following regulations for the supply of these necessaries:
7. Rutions.--The weekly ration is to consist as follows, viz. : 12 lbs . of wheat, or 9 lbs . of seconds flour ; or, in lieu thercof, at the discretion of the master, $3 \frac{1}{2}$ lbs. of maize meal, and 9 lbs. of wheat, or 7 lbs . of seconds flour, and 7 lhs . of beef or mutton, or $4 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{lbs}$. of salt pork, 2 oz . of salt, 2 oz . of soap.

Any articles which the master may supply beyond those anve specified are to be considered as indulgences, which he is at liberty to discontinue whenever he may think proper.
8. Clothing.-The clothing which assigned servants will be entitled to annually is to consist of two frocks or jackets, three shirts, two pair of trowsers, three pair of shoes, one hat or cap ; and is to be issued as follows, viz. :

On the lst of May in each year.-One woollen jacket, of Parramatta or strong Finglish cloth ; one pair of woollen trowsers, of Parramatta or strong English cloth; one shirt, one pair of shoes, one hat or cap.
On the 1st of August.-One shirt, and one pair of shoes.
On the lst of November.-One woollen or duck jackct, one pair of woollen or duck trowsers, as may best suit the age and state of health of the servant during the summer season, one shirt, one pair of shoes.
The shirts are to be of strong linen or cotton, and the shoes of stout and durable leather.
Each man is to be kept constantly supplied with at least one good blanket and palliasse or wonl mattress, whieh are to be considered the property of the master.
9. In the event of a man being assigned who shall have heen clothed by the government at any time within two months previous to the general issue on the lst of May, his master will not be required to supply him with any clothing until lst of Angust, and then only with those articles which are specified for that day. In like manner, the master of any servant clothed by the government between the 1 st September and lst November shall only be required to issue to him a shirt and a pair of shoes on the lst of February following; hut after those dates respectively, the several articles enumerated must he regularly supplicd at the established periods.
10. Persons who do not comply with these regulations, which are founded on just and equitable principles, as they reciprocally apply to the government, the settler and the assigned servant, cannot be allowed the indulgence of having convicts assigned to them thereafter.

By conmand of his Excellency the Governor,
Alexander M'Leay.

[The following Official Documents ahew the discipline and treatment of the convicts in New South Wales, who are employed upon the roads and public works.]

Head-quarters, Sydney, Oct. 1, 1837.
His excellency lieutenant-general Sir Richard Bourke, к.с.в., governor, and comnanding the forces in New South Wales, having been pleased to place the construction mind repair of roads and bridges within the colony under the charge of the commanding royal engineer ; the following instructions are to be issued by that officer to the assistant engineers under his orders.

By his excellency's command,
K. Snolgrass, Colonel, major of brigade.

Instructions for Assistant Engineers.-Military officers emp nyed upon the roads and public works in New South Wales as assistant engineers and superintendents of ironed gangs, have three distinct duties to perform: that which relates to the military command of the detachment under their orders: that which regards the safe custody and discipline of the convicts whom they have to keep at hard labour; and that which embraces the actual execution of the work, according to instructions received from the commanding royal engineer. Instructions are bere given for the performance of the two first of these duties, under heads marked respectively A and B . The instructions of the comunanding royal engineer relating to the execution of the work, will he conveyed by him to the assistant engincers, as occasion reguires.
Instruetions (A),-1. The officer will diseharge his military duty in strict conformity to the rules of the service, and the standing orders of this command, and will accordingly make the reports, and send in the returns required of liin hy the major of brigade and the commanding officer of his regiment.
2. He will tike such mensures in the exereise of his military command, for the safe custody of the convicts over whom his guard is placed, as are contained in these instructions, or as he shall he required to do hy the major of brigade or other staff offiecr, conveying the orders of the general officer in command, or as the practice of the service shall dictate. In the discharge of this most important duty, he will be held strictly responsible for any act or omission, hy which the escape of a convict may be rendered practicable.
3. The officer will divide the men fit for duty in his detachanent, as nearly as circumstances will permit, into three parties, of which one, under the command of a non commissioned officer, is to proceed witin the convicts to work, and is to furnish all the sentries over them whilst at work, and going to and returning from it. This will be a day duty only, ceasing on the return of the convicts from work in the evering. $\Lambda$ second party also, under the command of a non commissioned officer, is to take all the duties of the stockade for 24 hours, furnishing the day and night sentrics that may be required. The third will be off duty, cxcepting cooks, men reguired to clean barracks, and other duties of the kind. This arrangement will give the men two nights in bed; hut should it he required for the safe keeping of the convicts to angment the number of the sentries, the officer will put as many men on duty as he shall find necessary, reporting the case to the brigade major, at Sydney, in order that the defachment may be reinforeet.
4. When the convicts are brought in for meals, the stochade guard will furnish the sentries over them, to allow the working guard time for meals and rest.
5. If the stockade guard shall be of grenter strength during the day than is required for the number of sentries it has to furnish, the officer may, at his diseretion, nllow the disposable men to form an inlying piquet, remaining in barracks, realy to be called out at a moment's warning, for patroles or any other duty.
6. The foregoing instructions apply to detachments which are not called to perform any other duty than to guard ironed gangs. Where other duty is required, additional instructions will be furnished by the hrigade major.
7. The stocknde guard will be relieved in the morning on working days, when the convicts are alout to proceed to work, when both old and new guards will be nuder arms.
8. The guards will nount with loaded muskets and fixed bayoncts, and each man is to have 10 rounds of lall cartridge in his pouch. The convicts, at each time of going out to work, will be connted over by the serjenut of the stockade to the non-commissioned otticer commandnig the guard, before he guits the phace, who will give a receipt for the number. They will be again counted on returning from work. If right, the receipt will be cancelled; if any be missing, steps will be immediately taken, as directed in paragraph 17 of these instrue ir. .s.
9. The officer will see such sentries postell over the convicts when at work, and will give such orders to the non-commissioned otticer respecting them, as shall render the escape of a convict impracticable, if dae vigilance be observed. He will also take sare that the convicts be sutliciently guarded, in proceeding to and returning from work; that they move on those occasions at a quick pace, and that none are allowed to loiter or remain behind, under any pretence whatsoever.
10. It will be the duty of the officer to regulate the distibution of the work, so as to avoid breaking uip the gang into small detached parties, but where it may be unavoidable, sucl detached parties, it consisting of more than one convict (unless when two or more are fastened on a chain, as hereinatter mentionel), shall never !e sent to work under the charge of one soldier only.
11. When convicts in irous are fastencel to a chain, to be marched from one place to another, or if they can, under any circumstances, be worked when so fastened, one soldier will be cousidered a sulficient guarid for a detached narty of eight convicts; but in such case, the grentest care must be taken that their irons are perfect, and that they are securely fastened to the chain. If marching without being intended to work, the convicts are to be handcuffed when fastened to the chain.
12. When tide convicts are within the stockade, the officers will dircet sentries to be posted at the wooden loouses, and to be so placed as to have every part of tho a buildings, at all times, in view of one or other of the sentries. The convicts will he ordered to kecp silence, and the sentrics will turn out the guard, and the non-commissioned officer report if any noise be made within the houses at any time of day or night. Upen such report, the officer or non commissioned officer in charge, will take the most efficacious infans to restore silence, and the officer will punish any convict found transgressing. It is essential to the safe custody of the prisoners that this order he strictly attended to.
13. In like manuer, when the convicts are at meals, he will post sufficient sentries for securing them, giving orders that the strictest silence be ohserved at those times; and on Saturdays, when the convicts are allowed to wash, great cantion is necessary to prevent escape.
14. The officer will himself visit, and will direct the serjeant of the detachment to visit the guard and sentries both by day and night, and will order the non-commissioned officers commanding geards, to note and report for trial any convict who in 11 neglect his work, or be guilty of any disorderly or improper con duct.
15. He will have a sentr? coistantly mounted over the arms, nad will use every precaution to preventithe convicts from making a rush on any guard or sentry near them, by keeping both at such a distance, as to preserve the free but sure use of their fire-arms.

16. In case it shall be necessary to send convicts away under escort to a colonial hospital, or to prison under committal for any heavy offence, or on any other occasion, the officer will take care that their handcuffs are well secured and attached to a marching chain before the convicts move off.
17. If a convict should escape (which, with due vigilance is hardly possible), patroles are to be immeuiately sent out in all directions, information is to be given to any justice of the peace or settler, in the neighbourhood, that a hue and cry may be raised, and reports are to be made by the first opportunity to the major of brigade and commanding royal engineer. The officer will further closely investigate the manner of escape, and all the circumstances connected with it, either by himself or a court of inquiry, if such can he formed, reporting the proceedings to the major of brigade. The consegnence of an escape under suspicious circumstances will be made known to the dctachment, by causing an abstract from general orders of 7th May, 1832, No. 106, to be read to them once a week on parade.
18. The officer in command of a guard over an ironed gang, will consider himself during the period of his charge, as always on duty, and will on no account absent himself from his post, nor sutfer any one under bis command so to do ; nor will he allow any stranger or unauthorized person to live at or loiter near his post under any pretence whatever.
19. The officer will report his detachment to the brigade major, at Sydney, on the 1st and 15th of every month, according to a form which will be furnished. All extraordinaries will be reported by the earliest opportunity.
20. The position of the wooden houses for convicts, and the officers' and soldiers' barracks, and the whole arrangement of the stockade being established, in conformity to the instructions of the general officer commanding, no altcration is to be made without apllying for leave, through the commanding royal engincer. Any damage done to the buildings by officers or men, will be charged against them, according to the regulations of the service.
21. The ofticer will take special care that the non-commissioned officers under his orders are fully infornsed of every part of these instructions that rclates to their duties.
22. The orders of the commanding royal engincer are to be strictly attended to by the assistant engineers, not only when they relate to the work, but to any other particular of an oflicers' duty. All applications for leave of absence are to be mate hy these otlicers, through the commanding royal engineer.
instrutions (13).-1. The otheer appointed assistant engineer has, as superintendent of iron gangs, the legal costody of all convicts committed to his charge, and being duly anthorized by a warrant from the governor under the provisions of the 3 d Will. 4 , No. 3, and 8 Will. 4 , No. 1 , he has the power of having consicts in ironed gangs or road parties brought before him to be immediately tried, and when convicted, to be punished by the innliction of not more than 50 lashes for dronkenness, disohedience of orders, neglect of work, abseonding, ahusive language to his overseer, or for other disorderly or dishonest conduct.
2. He will keep a record, according to a form to be farmished to him, of all summary trials had before him, in conformity to the foregoing paragraph.
3. If the officer holds a commission of the peace he will confine his jurisdiction to the ironed gangs or road parties he has in charge, unless upon urgent occasions, when the prompt interference of a magistrate is required for the public service, or maless when specially invited to give his assistance by a justice of the peace in the neighbourhood of his station, for some special public object.
4. When any erime of too great magnitude to be dealt with wiy the limited powers granted under the govemor's warrant, be committed by a convict moder the charge of an assistant engineer, he will have the offemer taken before the bearest justice. But this course is to be avoided as much as possible, and by a strict excreise of the powers given to him, the ofticer will, by his own authority, be enabled to keep the gangs in proper onder.
6. Consicts in irons will be divited into gangs of about 80 prisoners each, and this number will occupy four wooden houses, which, with the officers' aud solders' barracks, guard-room, store, and convicts' mess shed, form what is called a stockade, these buildngs having been formerly surrounded with a stake fence, lout which has been discontinued, as it is lund the convicts me more securely guarded by placing sentries at the angles of the wooden houses, and leaving a space all around open to their fire.
6. With regard to the food, clothing, and extent of labour of the convicts sentenced to work in irons, the officer will strictly ohselve the regulations of the governor and council, 3d Will. 4, No. 3.
7. Eiscapes being most frecuently effected by conviets first getting ofl their irons, the oflicer is frequently to inspect and carefully to examine the irons on cach prisoner; this must be done either by himself personally, or by a non-commissioned officer, every morning when the prisoners go out to work, hefore guitting the stockade, and again before they are locked into their huts at hight. The oflicer either personally, or by a non commissioned ollicer in his presence, will treguently seareh the prisoners, and will take from them anything made of iron or other metal, or may instrument which might be used in getting of their irons, any money he may find upon them, my artiche of food or chotbing not appointed by regulation for ironed gangs, and anything whatever which he suspects they may have obtained dishonestly. He is also carefilly to exiamine the strength and form of all irons either in use or sent to him to be used, and will reject all l.e shall find insuflicient, reporting all such with the eause of their insufliciency to the commanding royal engincer.
8. If a convict has made an attempt to escape, or the olicer pereeives any dizuosition in a convict to attempt an escape, he will provide for his safe keeping by additional irons at night, or when at work, in such manner as may seem necessary.
9. The oflicer is to inspect the hits mul stockade where the convicts are confined, onee a day at least, and if he finds any danage which renders the continement less secure, he will torthwith have it repuired; or if this cannot be immediately done, he will cause an additional sentry to be posted at the insecure part until the repair is complete.
10. The officer will frequently muster the convicts on Sundays and during wet weather when they cannot work. He will also occasionally, and at uncertain times, personally, or by a non-commissioned officer, muster them at night, and will make a note of the same in his journal.
11. The conviets will rise every morning during the summer montlis at 5 o'elock, and during the winter months at day-break, when they will be regularly mustered by name. They will be required to keep them. selves as clean as eircumstances will admit, and to wash their faces, hands and feet every evening, before they are mustered into their berths, for whieh purpose water will be provided by the wardsmen in the tubs, which are to be earefully cleaned every day. Each man is to be shaved twice a week, and the hair is to be kept at all times closely cut, as the shortness of the hair will not only contribute to cleanliness, but to the discovery and conseduent apprehension of runaways.
12. The othicer will frequently visit the gangs while at labour, that he may be able to judge of the attention and activity of the overseers in carrying on the work, and of the general behaviour of the convicts.
13. The conviets on working days, when not at labour or meals, or employed in washing on Saturdays, are to be kept loeked up in their huts. On Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday, they are to be brought out under a sufficient guard to hear prayers read and for meals, and any well-behaved men, not excecding one-third of the whole gang at one time, may be allowed to take the air just outside the huts, for one hour, under a sufficient guard.
14. When a medieal practitioner (being a convict) is appointed to the gang, the officer will take care that he attends duly on the sick, Should he appear negligent or disorderly, the otlicer will have him brought up for summary trial ant punishment. If a free practitioner is appointed to visit the gang, the oflicer will require him to be regular in his attendance, and if he fails, will report hin to the commanding royal engineer for the governor's information.
15. The otlieer will receive into his clarge such conviets as shall he forwaded to him by the commanding royal engincer, or under the warrant of any two or more justiees of the peace, as directed by the 3d Will. 4 , No. 3. lle will, immediately on receiving them, enter their names and deseriptions, notieing all scar:, marks, and blue tatooing, in the registers with which he will be furnished, taking care that the columns of each book are kept regularly tilled as reguired.
16. Every conviet received at the stochnde will, on his nrrival, be stripped of tise elothing he wears, which is to be fumigated and cleaned, tied up, labelled with his name and ship, and put into the store. He is to be put into the clothing appointed for men in ironed gangs, with which the officer will be provided, either by requisition or by having old spare clothing in store, no part of which he is to take away on the expiration of his sentence; but the clothes be took with him are to be returned to him, or such other pieces of common slop clothing may be put upon him as the oflicer shall find it absolutely necessary to provide him with, from a small quantity which is to be obtamed by requisition, and kept for the purpose. In like manner, when a convict is sent from an ironed gang stockade to hospital, he is to be deprived of the parti-coloured elothing of the gang, and put into his own old clothes, or provided with a few artieles of commor: slop clothing, and the stockade clothing ngain issued to lim un his return. His irons are not to be take, off on remuval to hospital.
17. Upon the periodical issues of elothing, every article of the old: $:$, to be taken from the convict when the new is delivered. As soon as practicable after delivery, the old elothing is to le examined, and any part found fit for further wear is to be repaired if required, and taken into store for future use as wanted, and the whole of what is found unserviceable is to be immediately burnt. No article of the old elothing of any kind is, upon any account, to be left with the convict, or given away to any other person. The execution of this order, with the quantity of old clothing taken into store, is to be reported periodically to the commanding royal engineer.
18. When the sentence of a convict to labour in irons has expired, his irons are to be taken off, but the gang clothing is to be kept on him, and he is to work with the gang under precisely the same regulations as the men in irons, until otherwise disposed of by regulation.
19. The otlicer will take care that no spirits or other liquors, or any other provisions than those supplied by government, are received by any convict under his charge, and no smoking is to be permitted within the stockarle.
20. One wardsman will be allowed to every two wooden houses, containing each 40 convicts in irons, whose duty it will be to keep the honses, both without and within, and the utensils and bedting used therein, as clean as possible, and to air sud slake the blankets daly; to provide woot and water for the cooking and water for the drinking of and washing of the convicts, and to be niding nod assisting at nll times in the custody and mangement of the prisoners under the direction of the offieer or non commissioned offieer ia charge. One cook and one messman will be allowed to each stockade.
21. One scourger will be allowed to each stockate, whose duty it will be to inflict all corporal punishments directed by the oflices. He will also (il required) perform the duty of wardsman, and he at all times aiding and assisting in the sa.e custody and control of conviets under the orders of the otheer or non-commissiond otheer in elarge.

2:. Cooks, messinen, wardsmen, and scourgers, will not be appoirited from the men under sentence to worls in irons; they will be supplied by requisition. The scourger will be allowed a gratuity of is. gid. per diem, in addition to the usual ration, to be raised to 2 s .9 d . alter a year's faithful service; and eneh cook, mes. man, and wardsman will receive yearly one blue jacket, two shirts, and two pair of shoes, in addition to the clothing provided by regulation, with an allowance of tea, sugar, and tobaceo, and ufter one yen's approved service, a gratuity of $1 s$, a week. Any misconduct will, lowever, be visifed witls immediate punishant and a forfeiture of all previous claims for indulgence. Bullock drivers, and others specially employed, will reccive the allowance of tea, sugar, and tobacco, but no extra clothing, unless shoes, when required by the nature of their employment, nor any gratuity. These convicts may, however, if well conducted, be assigned to private service after a year's work with the gang, if recommended by the assistant engincer. Convict mechanics, when specially employed with the gang, will receive the same treatment as if in a bridge party.
23. All bedding, cooking utensils, and every article which may be denominated barrack furniture, used for or by the convicts, will be in charge and custody of the officer, who will be held responsible that every reasonable and practicable precantion is taken to preserve them from loss or injury.
24. Each stockade will be supplied with a large steclyard, and a set of weights and scales, of moderate size, to enable the non-commissioned officer to receive and issue the rations correctly. Proof sieves will also be furnished to each stockade, for the purpose of determining the fuality of the meal supplied by the contractors. The olficers will look carcfully to the quality of the provisions furnished by the contractor, adopting such measures as the orders of the command prescribe for rejecting any of an unwholesome or inferior description, and replacing them by artieles of a proper quality.
25. No pigs are to be kept by any person belonging to the stockade at or near the station, nor is any poultry to be allowed near the convicts' huts or soldiers' barracks. The whole space between those buildings, and between the huts and the guard room, is to be kept at all times dry, level, and clean. Where good gravel is near at hand, this space should be kept covered and neat.
26. The afternoon of each Saturday, from three o'clock in the summer, and two in the winter, is to be appropriated by the convicts in washing their shirts and cleaning their persons, to which purpose the officer will take care that the soap allowed by government is strictly appropriated.
27. One knife and fork, onc pannikin, and oue mess kid, will be allowed to every six convicts, and one spoon to each ; these are to be issucd as required at meals, special care being taken that each artiele is given back before the convict quits the mess shed.
28. The officer will keep a journal in which he will enter daily the proceedings and conduct of the convicts under his charge, and any occurrence herein required to be recorded, or otherwise deserving of notice.
29. He will keep all such other books, and address to the commanding royal engineer all such periodical or special reports and returns regarding the convicts in his charge, as that officer shall desire; and the commanding royal engineer will cause those books to be kept which the principal superintendent of convicts shall state to be necessary, and will transmit to that functionary those reports and returns which are required for the business of that department. All such reports and returns are to be marked by the assistant enginecrs at the top by the word "Convict." He will pay particular attention to the regulations respecting the assignment and delivery of convicts whose sentences to irons have expired.
30. When the principal superintendent of convicts requires any specinl information respecting any convict at labour on the roads or public works under charge of the commanding royal enginecr, he is instructed to address that officer, stating the gang in which such convict is employed. The commanding royal engineer will make the necessary communication to the assistant engincer in whose immediate custody the convict has been placed. This channel of communication is prescribed in order to prevent any confusion that might arise by a direct correspondence between assistant engineers and the principal superintendent of conviets, The commanding royal engincer will take care that every neeessary information is duly furnished to the principal superintendent of conviets, in whose office a complete bistory of every convict in the colony is expected to be found.
31. In addition to the foregoing instructions, relating chicfly to the safe custody of the convict, and the exaction of a duc portion of lahour from him, the attention of the officer in charge of an iron gang is partheularly called to the adoption of all such measures as shall seem most likely to effect the criminal's reformation. To contribute to this important object, the officer should watch over the conduct of each individual; the most ferocious are on no acconnt to be permitted to tyrannize over those who are comparatively more obedient and well-disposed, whilst the latter are to be noticed and encouraged by cominendation, and, when practicable, by reward. All indecencies of manner and langunge are to be repressed as observed, and if repeated, to be punislied. No noise or loud talking is to be permitted when at work, or in guing to or returning from it. The convicts are required to be cleanly in their persons, as well as orderly in their conduct, whether at work or in their huts; no gambling or trafficking in provisions or clothing is on any account to be permitted, whilst it will be the duty of the officer to secure to the convicts the regular issue of both. Their complaints are to be listened to and investigated. Harsh and abusive langunge on the part of the overseers is to be interdicted, and " a kind anxicty is to be manifested to procure for the convicts as much comfort as is consistent with their condition under the regulations of government." They are, however, never to be allowed, with a view of improving their condition, or even as a reward for good conduct, to work under a private employer. Their labour is to be exclusively appropriated to the scrvice of the crown. It is to be incessant during the hours appointed for work, but it is never to be assigned by task, however advantageous such an arrangement might seem to the assistant engincer.
32. The holy seriptures, books of prayer, and works of a moral and religious character, will be placed with the officer for distribution amongst the convicts, at such times as they have leisure to peruse them. These works will be chosen with the concurience of the clergy of their respective communions, and will be distributed for perusal accordingly; the books are to be changed when required, and taken back into store when done with; the convicts being held resjonsible that they are not lost or defaced whilst in their possession.
33. If a chaplain or cutechist attend the stockade, the officer will afford him every countenance and assistance in the religious and moral instruction of the convicts. If neither attend on Sundays, the olficer will cause the prinyers of their respective communlons to be read to the prisoners, at least once on that day, and will permit such religious instruction to be given as the pastors of those communions shall direct, to be imparted by one of their own persuasion.
34. For those convicts who are ignorant of letters, the establisliment of a Sunday-school, under the superintendence of the officer, is strongly recommended. The payment of $2 s .6 d$. a week to any capable non. commissioned officer or soldier enployed on this duty, will be allowed, upon the report and recommendation of the officer in charge. Books, when required for such schools, may be applied for, and will be allowed.
35. For the further improvement of the conviets, and as an inducement to good conduct whilst in the gang, it will be useful to introduce as perfect a system of classification as the establishment of a stockade may admit of. This is to be attempted by dividing the gang into three classes; the first being considered the lowest, and in which all prisoners are to be placed on their first reaching the stockade.
36. If, upon the expiration of one-third of the period for which the convict is sentenced, the officer shall consider the conduet of the prisoner to have been so industrious and orderly as to merit attention, he will name him for the second class, and will allow him as much time for airing outside the huts on Sundays and days of broken labour, as circumstances will permit, and any other similar indulgence, which shall not break in upon the order and regularity necessary to be observed in the stockade.
37. Upon a convict having passed a further portion of the period of his sentence, also equal to one-third of the whole, in the second class, he may be placed by the officer in the third class, and from thence recommended to the governor, through the commanding royal engineer, for such remission of the remaining portion of his sentence as the officer shall consider him to deserve.
38. In order to distinguish the three classes, a piece of red cloth, cut into the shape of a heart, 6 inclies long by 4 wide, will be sewed on the back of the jacket of each convict of the seeond class of merit, and a similar distinction in yellow cloth is to be used for each convict in the third class; the convicts of the first or lowest class being left without any.
39. If a convict, whilst in the first class, be tricd and found guilty of any offence under the colonial law for convicts, he shall not be removed to the second, until a period equal to one-third of his original sentence shall have expired from the date of such last-mentioned trial and conviction. If, whilst in the second class, a convict shall be so tried and convicted, he shall be returned to the first class, there to await another period equal to one-third of his original sentence. If, whilst in the third class, a conviet shall be so tried and convieted, he shall be returned to the first class, there to serve out the residue of his original sentence.
40. All communication between convicts of the diflerent classes is, as far as cireumstances will permit, to be carefully prevented; this separation may easily be accomplished when at work or meals, and is to be observed in the distribntion of the prisoners in the wooden houses ns much as possible.
41. The ofticer is to check any intimacy between conviets of bad character, and if it be necessary, in his opinion, to separate the parties, he will recommend to the commanding royal engineer the removal of such of them to another gang as may effect this object.

Instructions (C).-1. The foregoing instructions, marked ( $\Lambda$ ) and ( $B$ ), have been prepared for the service of ironed gangs. They are, however, to be applicd, as far as may be practicable, and is not otherwise pro. vided by regulation, to those convict gangs who labour for the public out of irons. These are,-1. Convicts sent out from England monder instructions from the Sccretary of State to be kept to labour for certain periods on the public works, and are ealled in the colony second class men. 2. Road parties. 3. Bridge partics. The two last are composed of convicts assigned to the commanding royal engineer. The former to work on such roads as require constant repair, ehiefly in the neighbourhood of Sydney; and the latter to construct and repair bridges.
2. The second class, convicts out of irons, are to wear parti-coloured clotling, and will be kept in a stockade or other convenient place under the charge of an nssistant engineer, under treatment similar to that directed for ironed gangs. But the period of their public labour is to he thus regulated: it under sentence for seven years, they are to work two; if for 14 years, to work three; if for lite, to work four. After which periods respectively, if their conduct has been good, they are to be recornmended by the assistant engineer for assignment. Whilst on public labour, they are to be subject to the same punishonent for misconduct as convicts working in irons.
3. The period tor which these convicts are to labour, being thus of considerable duration, it will be convenient that the assistant engineer divide them into thrce classes, according to their conduct, upon the system detailed for the ironed gangs. To the well-conducted men in the third class, the reward of an earlier assignment to private service may be held out as an object of lope and encouragement.
4. When at work, the second class men are not to be placed umder the guard of sentrjes, but military overseers will have charge of them and enforce their labour. These overscers are to carry their sille arms and pistols in a waist-belt, and are required to keep a strict watch to prevent escape from the work, or going to or returning from it.
5. When returned to the stuckade, this description of convict labourers will be kept either under military ghard, as directed for ironed gangs, or will be locked up under military oversecrs, as detailed in the follow. inr paragraph, according us the order from head quarters may require.
6. The road and hridge parties will be kept to labour under military oversecers, and will be loeked upat night-fall in their huts or barrack, water charge of one of the overseers. They are to wear the ordinary slop clothing in which they come from Hyde Park barracks, and are not to be allowed to change it for any other kind. These parties will usually consist of from 20 to 40 conviets, and will be under the immediate charge of a non-commissioned oflleer and three military overseers, two of whom will be constantly out at work during the day with the gang, nad one will be on duty every night to prevent escapes or disorder. They will carry the urms and ase all the precautions directed in paragraph 4 . These gangs will be visitel by an nssistant congineer, who will exereise the same control over thean ns over ma ironed gang, punishing corporally, when required, the ide or refractory.

The mechanics in bridge parties are not to be assigned, but they are, if well conducted, to receive allowances of tea, sugar, and tobacco, according to a fixed scale, to wear blue cloth jackets, and to be returned for a ticket of leave as soon as it becomes due.
8. Cooks, messmen, and wardsmen for these parties, and for the second class convicts out of irons, will be chosen by the officer in charge from tbeir own body, and those persons will receive the same allowances as the stockade servants of ironed gangs, but no extra clothing or gratuity. They will be assigned to private service when it comes to their turn, in the same manner as others of their clas3. If a scourger be attached to any of these parties, he will be paid nt the same rate as a scourger to an ironed gang. Bullock drivers and others, and attached to mechanies, will be treated in these parties as directed for ironed gangs.
9. The several partics will be supplied with books, receive religious instruction, and attend prayers as required in ironed gangs, and the same attention is to be paid to their conduct by those who have charge of them.
10. Though not escorted or glarded whilst at work by a regular guard, these parties are, nevertheless, under military charge, and the greatest vigilaner is to be used by the several non-commissioned oflicers and privates who are over them, to prevent escapes either whilst at work or in quarters. The assistant engincer who has to visit these parties, will not fail to report any non-commissioned offieer ar soldier who relases in the slightest degree from any particular of his duty over these partics, and he will take care that this instruction is mate known to all concerned.

Pay and Allowances of Assistant-Engineers, and of Non Commissioned Onticers and Soldiers employed on Roads or Public Works - 1. The officer apprinted assistant-engineer, will receive the extra pay of 6s. per day whilst employed, and forage for onc borse, upon the usual ecrtificate of being kept and effective for the public service.
2. The officer will have a wooden house or hut constructed for his oceupation at the stockade where he is stationed, but he is to provide his own furniture of every description.
3. On proceeding to the stockade, and in case of any subsequent movement, carriage will be provided for the officer's furniture, as well as bis baggage, the latter being reg lated by the orders of the command.
4. One non-commissioned officer will be employed as constabie and turakey at eaeh stockade, with the extrapay of $1 s$, per day, and overseers appointed by the commanding royal engincer will be allowed $1 s$. a day to each non commissioned officer, and $6 d$. to a private. Steady, active, and intelligent men are to be selected for this duty, and no more employed than are absolntely necessary for carrying on the work with efficiency.
5. The assistant-engineer will be allowed to employ a steady non commissioned olficer or soldier as clerk, with a pay of Gd . per day.

Instructions (D.)-Instructions for Delivery and Assignment of Convicts on the expirntion of their Sentence to Labour. - Assistant engineers are required to transmit to the princijal superintendent of corvicts through the commanding royal engincer, one month at the least previous to the expiration of their sentence to irons, the names and ships of all convicts under their charge, eligible to assignment upon such expiration. In like manner they will transmit a list of the $2 d$ class convicts or labourers in road or bridge parties one month at the least previous to the period at which their labour on the public works will expire. These lists are to be made upon the 1st and 15 th of every month, and despatched on the post day next ensuing, care being taken that at least one month's notice be thus given to the principal superintendent of conviets of the day at which any of these convicts become eligible for assighment.
2. In those cases where the warrant under which a convict in irons is detained, directs that he be returned to his master at the expiration of his sentence, one month's clear notice of the day of expiration is to be conveyed in a letter from the officer in charge and despatched to the master by the post. Upon the e.piration the convict is to be delivered to his master on demand, or to his order on its being presented; but if not claimed within 10 clear days from the expiration of sentence, or before the first despatch of post for Sydney; after such 10 days, his name is to be submitted in a list for assignment, stating the name of the master by whom he bas not been claimed.
3. Convicts, whose names have been submitted in any list for assignment, are not upon any account to be discharged until the return lists, and then only to the assignees named in such lists, or to their order. If the convicts so assigned shall not be claimed within 14 days after the receipt of the list, or before the first despatch of the post for Sylney after such 14 days, their names are to be submitted again in a fresh list, in which the failure of the assignees to clain is to be motified, and the convict kept in custody until the return of the list with a new assignment.
4. Though it shall be required to assign but one convict, bis name is to be duly returned on a list, that his assignment may not be unnecessarily delayed.
5. Whenever it shall happen that the assistant-engincer desires to have as a stockade servant any convict becoming or become assignable by the expiration of his sentence or period of labour, he is not to note bis desire on the list, but to make application by letter to the commanding royal engineer, who will forward it to the principal superintendent of the conviets if he thinks it expedient.

Memorandum.

Hend Quarters, Sydney, 20 October 1837.

1. The lieut ant-general commanding, having reason to believe that the permission sometimes grart, ed to conviets empioyed on public works, to prepare plaited straw and do other light works for their own benefit. during the hours ol rest from labour, has been much abused, and that dishonest and disorderly practices have resulted, is pleased to direct that the commanding royal engineer give strict orders to the sevensl assistantengineers and others inder his command, in charge of convict gangs, to forbid, from the receipt of this memorandum, the use of myy description of work by gangs or convicts attached to them, except that which is required of them for the public service. The assistant-engincers are to be desired to promulgate this order to the gangs, and to call before them and punish any convict who shall, after such notice, he found guilty of a breach of it, reporting every such case in their weekly return to the commanding royal engineer, for the lieutenant-general's information.
2. If any vacant time be at the disposal of convicts employed on public works, the assistant engineer will endeavour to obtain their attendance at the school; he is authorized by regulation to establish, or will direct their attention to, and put into their hands, the books with which it is ordered that every gang be provided.
3. Commanding royal engineer will further please to instruct the assistant engineers to use their best endeavours, and to direct the non-commissioned officera and military overseers to prevent any convict in a gang or attached to it from being employed for the service of private individuals in any way whatever. Upon the discovery of any such offence, they are to report, for the Lieutenant-general's information, the name of the person for whom or by whom the convict has been employed, that means may be taken for withdrawing from such person any convict assigned to him.
4. If any non commissioned officer, on detachment over convict gangs, or any military overseer, shall be found abetting or conniving at the employment of any convict by a private person, every such non-commissioned officer and overseer will be brought before a court martial for disobedience of this order.
5. It being understood that non-commissioned officers and privates at aeveral of the stockades bave supplied convicts with tea, sugar, tohacco, &c. contrary to orders, the commanding royal engineer will instruct the assistant engineers to assemble their detachments, and caution them against holding any traffic whatever with convicts, giving them clearly to understand that, if detected, they will be brought before a court martial for disobedience of orders.

By command of his Excellency,
Lieut.-general Sir Richard Bourke, к. с. в.
To the Commanding Royal Engineer, &c. &c. &c.
W. Hunter, Captain,

Memorandum on the subject of Employment of Convicts on the Roads, Fortifications, &c., in New South Wales, by Major Barncy, Commanding Royal Engineers, Nov. 2, 1837.
The imperfect state of the roads and bridges offer very important and extensive openings for the employ. ment of convicts.
Of three great lines of road already traced to the extent of nearly 1,000 miles, not onc-tenth of that distance can be said to be even formed; the bridges, with few exceptions, are of a temporary character, and several of large dimensions are urgently required. In wet seasons the roads are barely practicable. I am not aware of any important work upon which a large body of convicts could be more advantageously em. ployed than in the completion of the roads and bridges.

By the Seprember return, the following number of prisoners were employed in the colonial engineers department, inder my direction : Roads and bridges, 1,207; Breakwater, 184; Liverpool Dam, 79; total, 1,470 . In reterence to this number, I consider it totally inadequate to the required work; for instance, on the northern road there are two stockades, when complete, affording accommodatiop for 160 men in irons, the line embracing nearly 200 miles of traced road, and not 10 miles completed. This remark will nearly apply to the south and western roads. It is to be imagined that the public cannot for many years be expected to possess sufficient labour to enter gencrally into contracts for making and repairing roads or constructing bridges. Taking the importance of the subject into consideration, 1 cannot too strongly recommend the empluyment of a large body of prisoners on these works. I am of opinion that 3,000 are necessary to cffective progress; with this number, the three principal roads would not be completed, to the extent now traced, in less than 10 years, within which period I do not anticipate much road-work will be done under contract by free labour.
It is necessary to observe that 3,000 prisoncrs could not be securely worked with the existing strength of military force in this country.
Independent of the roads, there are other colonial works, such as the breakwater at Newcastle, the basin at Illawarra, the projected quay at Sydney, which are of much importance, and under the deficicncy of free labour and capital, can only be accomplished by prisoners. As the coast becomes occupicd this description of work will multiply ; the nature of the coasts render such necessary ; probably affording employment for 500 convicts for 10 years.
As regards the probable labour required upon engineer works, ior which convicts would be nvailable : the harbour of Sydncy and defence of the town offer the means of employing a considerable number. A series of hatteries hetween Sydney Heads and the Cove are necessary to the defence of the channels; a worl: of defence on the site of Fort Philip is also an important object, and fapproved, should be carried on with all possible despatch; 300 men may be employed on these works for four or five years.

Taking projected works into consideration, both goverument and colonial, I am satisfied that 4,000 convicts may be most protitably employed for a period of 10 years, and that no more beneficial empluynent for the public can possibly be devised.
The alove memorandum applies solely to the works of the Ordnance, Treasury, and Colonial Engineer Department.
Regulations for the assignment of Male Convict Scrvants. Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 9 May 1835.-The Governor is plensed to direct that the following regulations be strictly observed in the assignment of prisoners of the Crewn to private service, l'rom the date at which they come into operation, from which time they will supersede all regulntions now in force.
His excellency has endeavoured, by means of these rules, to introduce a fixed standard of qualification according to which convict labour is to be obtained, and to render the colonists the principal instrumeats in securing for themselves $n$ just distribution of that labour, by the publicity which will be given to all the arrangements relating to assignment. It will be open to the settlers in their several districts to attend the special sessions when application is made for assigned servants, and to give to the justices such information as they possess, with respect to the quantity of land held by an applicant, his eligibility from character and habits to receive, and his means of maintaining, convict aervants. Such information given with an honest intention, upon sure knowledge, will at all times be thankfully received by the magistrates, as enabling them to prepare their certificates with the greatest certainty of their being correct.
The Governor has only to add, that as much pains have been bestowed in framing these regulations to meet the circumstances of all descriptions of Colonists, and to operate for their general beucfit, no de. parture from their plain meaning will, in any instance, be permitted.
Justices of the peace will perceive that, alter the introduction of these regulations, assigned servants will no longer be returned to Govermment, or sent to road parties by their order. The 29th Regulation points out in what manner masters are to return their assigned scrvauts whom they do not wish to retain in their service, and the duty of the justice in such cases. It is hardly necessary to observe that this regulation in no way limits the power of magistrates to punish assigned servants by imprisonment or otherwise, for of fences of which they shall be couvicted, upon the complaint of their masters. Nor, on the other band, does it impede the admission of complaints of servants against masters, nor the representation of the magistrate to Government on the subject, when it is thought right to recommend the removal of the servant in consequence of the neglect or ill.treatment of the master. But the actual removal, unless under legal sentence, to goal, is not to take place but by order of the Governor, communicated through the principal superintendent of convicts.
No further applications for convict servants of any description will be received by the Board of Assignment from the present date, except in conformity to these regulations.

Applications for convict labourers and mechanics assignalle in the country are to be made at the special sessions, to he holden in September next, as directed in Rule 4. Newly arrived emigrants, however, becoming qualificd hy the acquisition of land, may apply immediately to the petty sessions, or magistrate acting singly for the distriet in which their land is situated, in manner preseribed in Rule 13; but all such applications must be renewed in September next, and at the special petty sessions, to be holden in September in each year.
Applications fo: domestic servants, and for mechanics assignable to masters exercising the same trades, may be made at any time from this date, as directed in Rule 18 , to the petty sessions, or magistrate acting siagly for the district in which the applicant shall reside.
Applications for convict labourers now registered by the Board will be complied with, as far as practicable, until the period at which the list under these regulations shall be prepared, when the registries will be cancelled; but applications for mechanics mentioned in Rule 3 , and assignable in the country, will, if renewed in September next, and annually at the special sessions, take precedence, as specified in article 12. All other applications now registered by the l3oard will be cancelled from the present date.
The particular attention of applicants is directed to that part of Article 4 , which requires them to furnish a nominal return of the convicts in their strvice, with their ships and trade or calling, to the special sessinns to be held in September. The Board of Assignment will not be authorized to entertain any application which shall not contain all such particulars, or shall be otherwise incomplete or informal according to the terms of these regulations. Any omission in this respect will subject the applicant to the delay of a twelve-month, until the special sessions of the ensuing year shall enable him fully to comply with the regulations.

By his Excellency's command,

Alexander M'Leuy.

Regulations.-l. All convict servants, with the exception of those professing the particular trades hereinafter mentioned, will be assigned to masters in proportion to the land they occupy, under grant, or promise of grant from the Crown, or through purchase, or lease of such land, such lease being for a term of which not less than three years remain unexpired; provided that no person receive convicts in respect of land upon which he shall not reside, or maintain a free or ticket-of-leave overseer.

whole number of conviet servants they recquire, giving in a return of the whole quantity of land in respect of which they are entitled, and a nominal list of all the convicts in their service, with the names of their ships, and their respective trides or callings; and if possessed of land in other districts, requiring their overscers to appear at the sessions of their respective districts, and give in a return of such land, and a nominal list prepared as aforesaid of the assigned convicts serving thereon, in the form marked (B). Such apecial sessions shall be held amnually, and shall consist of not less than two magistrates in every district in which petty sessions are estallished; and in places in which there are no petty sessions, but wherein a justice of the peace acts singly, of that justice, assisted by two landholders, to be named for that purpose by the governor.
5. Every such sessions shall be held anumilly, on the first Monday in the month of September, and on so many subsequent days as may be necessary for the purpose of recciving, investigating, and reporting upon all applications for convict servints which shall be made to them. The report of the sessions shall be annexed to the application, and forwarded in original to the bonrd for the assignment of convict servants in Sydney, on or before the first day of October then next ensuing.
6. It shall be the duty of the sessions to inquire into the correctness of the facts stated in each application, requiring such evidence thereof as to them shall scem proper, and they shall in no case recommend the claim of any applicant unless perfectly satisticd of the truth of the stntements upon which the application is founded.
7. All npplicntions shnll be presented to the sessions by the applicant, or hy his agent, or by an overseer residing on the land in respect of which he apphies, between the hours of ten o'clock in the morning and four in the afternoon on the days for holding such sessions, and all proceedings had, and every decision pronounced thereon, shall be had ned pronounced in open court.
8. The applicutions of magistrates and others forming the special sessions shall be presented, investigated and reported upon by then in the same manner as other applications: provided only, that no applicant shall vote in his own case, and that the report on such claim shall be sulficient, notwithstanding that the number of members may be reduced by his withdrnwal below that required in other cases.
9. It will be the duty of the bourd of assignment upon receipt of the applications from the sessions every year, to prepnre an abstrnct in alphabetical order of the npplicntions from each district, according to the form hereunto annexed, mirked (C.) and to trnnsmit the same to the magistrates of the districts from which the applientions procecded, for the purpose of being by them posted upon the court-house, in order to give due publicity to the statements of the parties, and the decisions thereon.
10. The board will also prepare an alphabetical list of the applicants for the ensuing year, containing the aggregate quantity of land (from whatever district returned) occupied by the applicant, the number of servants actually assigned to him, and the number to which he is entitled, which will be published annually for general information.
11. The mode of nssignment of convict lahourers by the board shall be as follows: a list of unemployed labourers, nombered from the first on the list to the last, being furnished to the board by the principal superintendent of convicts, a set of these numbers shall be put into a box, nad the first applicant on the list of applicants shall obtain the convict whose number is first drawn, and so on, until the applicants entitled to one or more labourers are supplied with one; the same proceeding shall be then adopted for the assigament of a second labourer to those applicants who are entitled to two or more, and so on until the whole number of applicants be fully supplicd: provided, however, that whenever any such list of labourers shall be exhatusted by assignment, the hoard shall recommence assignment from any new list furnishecl by the priacipal superintendent of convicts, with the individual standing upon the list of applicants next to the person last supplied; and shnll recommence in every year upon the new annuil alphabetical list at the name immediately following that at which they left off in the list of the preceding year.
12. Mechanics will be assigned according to the order in which the applicants stand by priority of application upon the present lists, provided they be qualified and apply at the special sesssions under these regulations. The board of assignment will add annually, in alphabetical order, to the lists of applicants for cach particular trade the names of those who apply at the special sessions, who will be supplied in the order in which they shall thus stand. It is, however, to be distinctly understood, that all applications for mechaniss, as well as for other convict scrvnnts, must be renewed annually, or otherwise the names of the applicants will not be retained on the lists, as they will be considered to have no longer a desire to receive a mechanic of the description previously applied for; and any subsequent applications will only take priority in the order in which they shall be made. It must also be understood, that not more than one mechanic of the same trade or calling will be assigned to any individual, nor will an application for such person he entered on the list, so long as such mechanic shall remnin in his service.
13. Any person acquuring property in land for the first time, and being otherwise qualificd, shall be immediately supplied by the board from the next list of convicts for assignment, furnished by the principal superintendent of convicts, with the convict labourers (not excceding six in number) to which such land shall entitle hin, and with one mechanic of any trade assignable in the country, when such mechanic shall be at the disposal of the hoard, on his making application, according to the form marked ( l .), to the petty sessions, or if there be no petty sessions, to the magistrate neting singly for the district in which his land is situated, who shall immediately forward the same to the board of nssigument with the report thercon; lis name shall then be placed on the alphuhetical list to take his turn for the residue (if any) of the servants to which he may be entitled, as other applicants.

Until such assignment be completed, and intimated to the master to whom the servants were first assigned, he will he held responsible to the government for their maintenance and control.
16. The following descriptions of mechanics will be assigned to persons evercising the trades which those mechanics have required, residing in any part of the colony, and without reference to any qualification of land:
Bakers, boat-builders, bookbinders, braziers, brewers, candle-mukers, cloth-workers, comb-makers, coinpositors, engravers, farriers, gunsmiths, hatters, malsters, painters, plumbers and glaziers, pri-ters, pressmen, punpmakers, shipwrights, soap-hoilers, tinmen, weavers, whitesmiths, and such other mechanics, not being included in the list of those assignable in the country, as may be applied for by persons exercising their trades.
17. Ilouseholders, residing in any part of the colony, without reference to landed qualification, will also be entitled to receive domestic servants of the following description, viz. Cooks, coachmen, footmen, grooms.

The principal superintendent of convicts is charged to take particular care in returning convicts of this description to ascertain that they actually held such employment previonsly to their transportation. If there be any doubt whatever of the fact, the convicts are to be returned as common fabourers.
18. Applications for mechanics assignable to masters of the same trade, and for domestic servants, are to be made according to the annexed Form, marked (E.), to the petty sessions, or if there be no petty sessions, to the magistrate acting singly for the district in which the applicant resides, who shall immediately forward the same to the Board of Assignment, with report thereon. The Roard of Assignment will, from time to time, on reccipt of such applicutions, add the names of the parties to the list of applicants for mechanics and domestic servants of the description applied for, and will assign them according to the order in which the applicant may stand by priority of application on such list, giving the same preterence to those on the present lists who apply and are qualified under these regulations, as in the case of mechanics assignable in the country.
19. Mechanies not applied for under the foregoing rules will be assigned in the country as labonrers, as well as any of the tradesmen or mechanics contained in those lists for whom there shall be no application.
20. The sessions, or magistrate, as the case may be, shail not recommend as assignee for convict servants of any description any person who is not free, of good character, capable of maintaining the servants applied for, and to whose care and management they may not in their or his opinion be safely entrusted. The strictest attention is particularly enjoined to this rule, as the moral improvement of the convict poputation so much depends on its careful observation.
21. The board shall assign the labourets, mechanics and domestic servants due to every applicant in the order in which he stands on the list, such applicant not being at liberty to defer his turn, without losing it altogether.
22. Any person losing the services of a convict servant iy his olbtaining a ticket of leave, or his becoming free, shall, on its being notified in the government gazette, be immediately supplicd, on application to the board, with a convict servant in lieu; and if such convict receiving a ticket of leave be a meehanic, he shall receive the number of labourers to which such mechanic is estimated as equivalent; provided that he be not already fully supplied by assignments made previously to the publication of these regulations.
23. The principal superintendent of conviets shall, from time to time, furnish in duplicate to the board of assignment a list of all convicts assignable, classified in the manner in which they are hereinbefore distinguished. The board will insert in such lists, opposite to the nnones of the convicts, the names of the parties to whom they are to be assigned, and after signing, shall torward them with as little delay as possible to the colonial secretary, to be luid before the governor for approval. When approved, the original will be returned to the board to be kept as a record in their office; and the duplicate will be transmitted to the principal superintendent of conviets, in order that he may give immediate notice to the several assignees, and distribute the convicts therein named accordingly.
24. Any person who shall neglect for the space of seven days to take away his assigned servant, after notice directed to him or his agent, at the place in Sydney set forth in his application, and transmitted through the general post-oflice, shall forfeit his turn, and the name of the servant assigned shall be ruturned by the principal superintendent of convicts in the next list sent to the hoard for assignment.
25. Convicts being assigned as mechanics may be leut by one master to another in the same district, for any period not exceeding three months, upon permission granted by the petty sessions, or il there be no petty sessions, by the magistrate acting singly for such district, on a written application by both parties, which shall be recorded by such sessions or magistrate, and immediately reported to the principal superintendent of convicts. As such loan is intended for the general henefit of the district, without, at the same time, depriving the originul assignee of the services of the mechanic when required, any assignee who shall be discovered to have granted sueh mechmic on loan for a pecumiary or other valuable consideration will be immediately deprived of the services of that convict, and dechared incapable of receiving any in future. Convict labourers will also be permitted to be lent by one maater to another doly qualified under these regula. tions, with the written sanction of the nearest bench or magistrate acting singly, during the months of harvest only.
26. Any person who shall employ a convict belonging to a rond party, or oth rwise in the service of government, ahall be immedately deprived of all his assigned servants, and considred indigible as an assignce in future.
27. No convict assigned under these regulations (those specially assignable in towns excepted) shall be permitted to remain within the limits of the town of Syducy, for more than one week at any one time, or for more than three weeks in nny year, upon pain of such servants being withdrawn, and the assignee considered incapable of receiving conviet servants in future,
28. No application specially made for any convict by name, or in any other than the present printed forms, shall be received either by the special or petty sessions, or mngistrate, or by the Board of Assignment.
29. Any person desirous of returning his aervant to government shall give notice in the form hereunto annexed, marked ( F .), to the petty sessions, or to the magistrate acting singly for the distriet in which such person resides, who shall inquire the cause of such intention on the part of the assignec, and report to the principal superintendent of convicts if in their or his opinion the convict so returned is a proper person to be re-assigned within the district, or whether it be expedient that be be removed to any other district for assignment, or whether he be totally unfit for private service, and for what cause. The principnl superintendent of convicts, upon receiving such report, shall, if it be recommended that the convict be re-assigned, include his name in the next list for assignment, specifying the district in which he is to be assigned, and the board will assign such convict to the person next on the alphabetical list for an assigned servant within such district. The origimal assignee shall retain the convict in his service until he shall have notice from the principal superintendent of convicts in what manner he is to be disposed of. Auy master failing so to keep and to maintain his convict servant, will he deprived of all those in his service, and deemed ineligihle to receive any in future. A similar arrangement will take p;ace when convicts become disposable for assignment from the public works or other government employ.
30. The magistrates of petty sessions, and magistrates acting singly, are requested to report to the assignment board when any alienation of land within their district comes to their knowledge, as well as any breach of these regulations in respect of which they may nrjudicate.
31. If it shall at any time be made to appear to the governor that any application made to the scssions, or to a magistrate acting singly, contains a false statement, with a view to obtain convict aervanta, any servant so obtained, as well as all others assigned to the applicant's service, shall be withdrawn, and the applicant considered incapable of receiving convict servants in future.
32. In cases where parties have received convict servants under formal regulations, although not qualifed to hold any under the present, they will be allowed to retain those servants until removed by casualty or regulation; those mnsters also who bave received a greater number of assigned servants than they will be hereby entitled to may in like manner retain them; and when the number shall hercalter fall below that to which their land entitles them under these regulations, they will be supplied in their turn as other applicants.
33. If it shall at any time appear to the governor, from an inspection of the books of assignment, that a larger supply of convict lahour can be appropriated to private service, a supplementary scale, or an amendment of the present will be promulgated.
34. Convict boys under 16 years of age will continue to be assigned under the regulations contained in the government notice, dated 18th March 1833, but will not be considered in satisfaction of the claima of applicants under these regulations.

Extracts of a Despatch from Governor Sir Richard Bourke, K. C. B., to Lord Gienelg, dated Government House, Sydney, 29th December, 1836.

"In several deapatches which I have had the honour to address to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the condition and treatment of convicts in New South Wales, and more particularly in those named in the margin, I have represented the imperfect organization and discreditable appearance and behaviour of the gangs out of irons which I found established throughout the colony in great numbers as working parties on the roads. From want of legal power, and of adequate means to enforce that which the law permita, I was never able to bring these parties under auch efficient auperintendence as shoutd at once control their lawless and vagrant disposition, and obtain for the colonists a fair proportion of useful labour. On this account I atated my desire to abolish those parties whenever I could make other arrangements for obtaining work on the roads.
"That arrangement I commenced, as reported in my deapatch of 3d November, 1832, No. 114, by the formation of iron gangs, superintended by military officera (an employment of which General Lord Hill was pleased to approve) in all mattera connected with their custody and discipline. By the change in the colonial criminal law affecting convicts, which I introduced in 1832, I contemplated a considerable accession of workmen to these gangs, by cheeking the improvident transportation of labourers to penal aettlementa. This law, amongst other good which it has done, has effected that which I thus proposed; and whilst the penal station of Moreton Bay has deen diminished by nearly three-fourtha of its former numbers, the gangs working in irons within the colony, for the great benefit of the settlers, have been augmented in the same proportion. There are now about 1,000 convicts in irons, divided into 16 gangs, working under the control of military officera, under aentences to labour vnrying from one to three years. Their labour is as efficient as any forced labour can ever be, and without tyranny or cruelty their discipline, submission and aafe custody are fully secured. Escapes are very rare, and corporal punishment not so frequent aa from the previous bad habits of these criminals might be supposed necessary. Such measures for their morai reformation and mental improvement as circumatances permit are not neglected. The Scriptures and useful books are placed in their hands, and in some of the gangs schools have been established, and are auperintended by the officers in charge. I bave great pleasure in recording the very meritorious conduct, in this and every other respect, of many of tie officers whom I have employed on this duty.
"Such being the state of the ironed gangs, both as to discipline and numbers, I have determined to reduce the road parties from the first proximo, leaving no gangs on the roads but those under military superintendence. Hitherto the work, whether of gangs, in or out of irons, has been, nominuliy at least, directed by oversecrs named by the surveyor general, and inspected by the officers of that department. It has happened，however，that in many cases the voluntary attentions of the military superintendents of ironed gangs have done more for the speedy improvement of the roads than the paid services of the civil overseers and surveyors；I have therefore thought it expedient at once to reduce，along with the road parties，the overaeers and inspectors to whom I allude，and to transfer the charge of constructing and repalring the roads and bridges from the surveyor－general to the commanding royal engineer．The military officers will thus become assistsnt engineers，and continue their very useful employment under that title without addi－ tional pay or allowance．They will receive their inatructions from and report to the commanding royal engineer for my information，and thus a perfect unity of operation will be obtained，the want of which under the former system was occasionally，though not frequently，experienced．＂

＂The work required within the town of Sydney I propose to leave，as at present，under the immediate direction of the town surveyor，an active and very intelligent officer，who has given great and general satia－ faction．I propose that he shall report directly to the Government，until the time arrives at which the people of Sydney can be induced to take the management of their municipal concerns into their own hands．＂

Y.-WOOL OF AUSTRAL-ASIA.

[As the wool trade of Anatral-Asia is a subject of nationai importance, the following official ciocuments shewing Its cominencement deserve being placed on record.]

Copy of a atatement deilvered by Captain Macarthur at the ligit Honourable Lord Hobart'a Office, 20th Juiy, 1803.

Statement of the improvement and progress of the breed of fine wootted sheep in New Snuth Wutey.一The samplos of wonl bronght from New South Waies having exetted the particalar attention of the merchanta and principal English manufactirera, Captain Macarthur considers it his duty respectfully to represent to his Majesty'a ministers, that he haa found, from an experience of many years, the climate of New Sonth Waiea peculiarly adapted to the increase of fine woolied aheep; and tisat, from the nolimited extent of luxuriant pastures with which that country abounds, miliions of those valuable animals may be raiaed in a few years, with but little other expence than the bire of a few shepherds,

The apecimens of wonl that Captain Macarthur has with hiot have been inspected by the beat judges of wool in this kingdom, and they are of opininn that it possesses a aoftneas supcrior to many of the wools of spain; and that it eertainly ia equal, io every valuable property, to the very best that is to be obtalicd from thence.

The sheep producing this fine wool are of the Spanish kind, sent originally from Hoiland to the Cape of Good Hepe, and taken from thence to Pert Jackion.

Captain Macarthur being persuaded that the propagation of those animals would be of the ntmost consequence to this ceuntry, procureii, in 1797, three rams and five ewes; and he has aince had tie satisfaction to see them rapidly increase, their fleccen augment in weight, and the wool very visibly improve in quality. When Captain Macarthur left Port Jackson in 1801 , the heaviest fleece that had then been ahorn weighed only 3illbs., but he has received reports of 1802, from which he learns that the geeces of ilis aheep were increased to sibs. each; (in the grease the average weight of the fecees of fine woolled aheep in New Santh Waics, when washed, ia 2 ifibs.) and that the wool is finer and softer than the wool of the preceding year. The flecee of one of the sheep originally imported from the Cape of Good Hopa bas been valued here at 4 s .6 d . per lb., and a fleece of the same kiod bred in New South Wales, is estimated at 6s. per lb .

Being once in the posaesaion of this valuabie breed, and having nsccriaised that they improved in that elimate, he became anxioua to extend them as much as posaible; he thercfore crossed ail the mixed bred ewes of which his flocka were composed with Spanish rams. The lamba produced from this croas were much improved: but when they were again crosaed the change far exceeded hia most sanguinc expectations. In four crosacs, he is of opinion, no distinction will be perceptible between the pure and the mixed breed. As a proof of the extraordinary and rapid improvement of his flocks, Captain Macarthur has exhibited the fieece of a coarse woolied ewe, that has been valued at $9 d$. per lh., and the fleee of her lamb, begotten by a Spanish ram, which is aliowed to be worth 3 s . per lb .

Captain Macarthur han now about 4000 sheep, amongst which there are no rams but of the Spanish hreed. He calculaten they will, with proper carc, double themselves every two yeara and a half; and that in 20 geara they will be so increased as to produce as much fine wool as is now imported fom Spain and othcr countriea, at an anmal expense of 1,800,000t, ateriing. To make the principle perfectiy plain upon which Captain Macarthur founds this expectation, he begs thatate that hait his flock has been raised from 30 ewcs, purchased in 1793, out of a ahtp from India, und from about eight or ten Spanish and Irish sheep, purchaserisioce. The other half of hia fiock were obtained in 1801 by purchases from an officer who had ralaed them in life same time, and from about the saine number of ewes that Captain Macarthur commenced with. This statement proves that the sheep have hitiserto multipiied more rapidly than it is calculated they will do in future, but thin is attributed to the first ewes being of a more prolific kiod than the Spanish sheep are found to be ; for bince Captain Macarthur has directed hia attention to that breed, he haa observed the evea do not ao oftea produce daubie lamba.

Aa a further cunfirmation of the princtple of Inerease that Captain Macarthur has endeavourcd to estabilah, and which he is positive time will prove to be correct, he would refer to tine general returns transmitted from Neve south Wales. la 1796 (since when not 100 sheep bave heen imported), 1531 weru retirned as the pubtic and private atock of the celony. in 1801, 6757 were returned : and although between those periods all the males bave been killed, as soon as they became fit, yet there is a aurplus over the calculation of 633 .

Captain Macarthur is ao convinced of tie practicability of supplying this country with any quantity of fine wool it may rcquire, that he la earneatiy aolleitous to prosecute this, as it appears to him, important object, and, on hia return to New south Waiea, to devote his whole attention to accelerate its compiete attaloment. All the risk attendant on the undertakiog he will cheerfully bear, the wili require no pccuniary ald, and ail the encouragemant he humbly solielts is, the protection of government, permission to oceupy a aufficlent tract of unoceupied lands to feed bis flock, and the indulgence of selecting from amongat the convicts auch men for shepherds as may, from their previous occupations, know comethiug of the business.

Landon, 26th July, 1803.
To the right honourabie the lords of the commmittee of hia Majenty's most honourable privy council appolnted for the consideration of all matters relating to trade and foreign piantations.
The memorial of Captain John Macarthur most respectulify states, that, as some donlsts have been expressed of the practicability of increasing the production of fine wooi in New South Walea, to the extent that ina been dencribed in the memorials which have been presented to the right honourabile the lords commisaioners of his Majeaty's treasury, your lordshipa' memorialiat feels it incumbent upon him reapectfuliy to endeavour to remove those doubts by a repetition of the principal facta contained in the representation isc liaa aircady had the honour to make, and to accompany it with auch further expianatlons and with a reference to such evidence as he humbiy hopes may be considered conclusire.

In the year 1797, your memoriaist procured from the Cape of Good Hope three ranis and five ewes of the Spanlsh breed of theep, and beinz persuaded that these animals might be of great ennsequence to the colony of New sonth Walea, he pald very particular attention to preserva the breed pure. He had soon the gatiafaction to see them increage, and the feeces of their nffaping improve in fineness and augment in weight.
liaving ascertained those facts, and heing deslrons to extend the growth of fine wool an mnch as possihle, he caused all the mixed bred ewes of which his flock were composed, to be crossed with rams of the Spanish kind ; the lambs po dnced from this cross were elnthed with wront infriltely superlor to thint of their mothers: but when the crnsa was repeated again, the imurnvement became greater thmin his must sanguine expectations liad induced him til calculate npon, Inasmuch that he is of opinion no distinction will be perceptlble in four crosses betwixt the pirc and tise milxed breed

When yonr bordshins' memnrialint left Port Jackann in 1801, Isis focks consisted of more than $20 n 0$ sheen, the whic nf which had been bred fromabnut 50 ewes in little more than seven years; and hy the returns that he has recelved of 1802 his tock were inereased to 3000 . He has not yet recelved any mecounta of the vear 1803, hut he conclutes there mist then have heelf ahoit 4000 ; bevonif which he has no expectation they have increasen, as the whate of the iands contl guons to his farms hase, since his departure from the colony, been appropristed for cultivation.

Your lordshipg' menioriallst brought with him to Eusland as aanules, fleeces shorn from the sheep imported fram the Cape of Good lione, fleeces shorn (rum their progeny bred in New Sonth Wales, and fleeces shorn from sheep of the mixed breed, whose dams bore nothing bithair or coarse wool. When these samples were ahown to the most eminent manufacturers and merchants eonccrued in the wonllen trade, they all concurred in opinion that the worst speelmens of the mixeil breed would he valuable here, and that the specimens of the finest kind bred In New South Wales wora much superior to the wooi of the arikinal sheep imported from the Cape of Gond linpe, and that they were equal to the very best we ever recelve from Spaing indeed some of the manufacturers deciared the wool to be superior to Spanish wool in many respects, and that if they couid procure a sufficient supply, it would enable them to surpassall other countrien In the manufacture of the best woollen eloths. But of there opinions, perhapa, it would be superfluous to ary mare, as the numerons memorials presented to the lords of the treasury froin the manufacturers and merchants, must contain moie decisise ridience than any other testimony that can he offered upon the suhject.

Your lorinhlpa' memorinilst is entlrely convinced, from the number of sheop that have already been bred in New South Wales, and from the Improsement which he has switnessed in the quality of the wool, that millions of shcep may he rataed in that conntry, and that in a few yenrs the present stock, hy proper attention, may beso increased as to produce a greater quantity of fine wool than we are now obliged to purchnse from Spsin, and whleh he has aacertalned, by the proposala of nome eminent zhlpowners, inay he brought hlther from New South Wales at no greater frelght than ia paid for the freight of entton wool from the East Indles, namely $3 \boldsymbol{r l}$. per It. in the tlme of war, and itd. In peace.

It is impossihle any one cun fecl more anxiety than your lordships' niemorialiat, not to advance a aingle asserfien that he is not convinced to be correct, and his anxiety extends to a desire of removing every doubt, and of answering every ohjection that can he urged by a reference to the heat evidence the nature of the case will admit. He dechares that all the sheep shich have been bred in New Sonth Wales have been reared in the wooda upon the natural grasaes These grasaes are, in all seasons, rich and abundant, and when they hecone too rank they are burnt off, and are almeast iminedlately succeeded by a young and swecter herbage, whlch the slicepi greedily eat and keep barc. The tracta n land ndapted for pasture are so boundless, that no assignable limitation can be set to the number of fine wonlled sbeep which may he ralsed In that eountry, with but little other expense than the hire and food of the shepherds. The native woods, Instcad of making the grass soor, are generally so njen as not to deteriorate its quality; whilst they at the sanue time afford a winter. To this the extranrilinary softness that the wool is finnil to possess may be atribited, for periaps nothing can more contribute to preserve and improve the finencss of wol, than the keepling sheed in a mild and equal temperature, and screening them as much as may be possible against the nntural inequalities of the acasons.

To prove these facts, your lorishins' memorialiat woold tespectfully eotreat to refer to Captain Honter, the predecessor of Governor King, and to Captnin Waterhouse of the royal navy, who was many yeara in New South Walea. Indeed, your memorialist, solicitnus to remove all suspicion of the correctness of hls statements, wrote to the lattel officer, some time ago upon the subject, and he lias now the honour to subjoin a copy of his letter, with a copy of Captain Waterhouse'a reply, he has olso annexed the names and addresses of several respectable officers and gentlemen who have had opportunities to make thelr own observationa upoo the pastures in New South Wales, add who have seen how well sheep thrive upon them.

With such a prospect of becoming usefui to hin country, an the foregoing facts afford, your lordships' memorialist has long entertalned an ardent desire to return to New South Wales, and to devote his whole attention to the linerease and improvement of hls flocks. And having understood that his Majesty's minlsters were more disposed to approve of the undertaking being earried on by a company than by an Individual, he hast the hononr to aubmit a plan far the for matlon of the company to the right homourable the lorils of the treasury. [This eompany was not formed; it is thereore unnecessary to give Mr. Mtacarthur's plan.]

Your lordshipa' memorlalint respectfully hopes thnt the statement he has now given, and the evidence he has referred to in corroboration of it, will remove every doubt, and he persuaties himself that under no possible circnmatance an attempt to supply this country with fine wonl, the poduction of its own colony, caus sppear to your lordstlpa impolitle, or in any degree hazardous; for, as your memorlalist requires no pecunlary all, the hazard would be all his own : and even for a moment supposing hlm to be mistaken (which, however, he cannot in justice to himself admit to he possible, founded as hls opinions have heen upit sn many years' successful experience), yet the infant setilements of New south Wales could not derive but great advantage add security from such an abundant supply of animul food as mast Judiaputahly be raised.

Your memorialist will no loncer trespass upon your lordships' attention than to say, that If your lordshipa shall be pleased to annction him In the unflertaking, on behalf of a company, he will submit to your indshlps' consideratinn the names of the many respectable persons who have offered thrir asaistance, and declared their wilitingness to frim a company.

Bnt should your lordships more approve making the experiment on a small seale, npon the individual account nt your memorialist, he will most checriully commence it with an allotment of $\mathbf{1 0 , 0 0 0}$ acres of land, and permission to elect 30 conviets for sheplierds.

Your lordahtps' memoriallst would chonae the land 10 mlleg from any of the settlements where there is cultivatien; and he would engage, in return for the iniluigence, to supply the public with all the sbeepit might be proper to kill, at 8 stipulated price; by whlch means your lordships' memorialist humbiy presumes the expenses of goverument in that colony would be very much diminished in a few years.

Proceedings before the privy coonell, July 1804. At the councll chamher, Whitehall, the 6 th of July 1804.
Thelr lordshipa took into consideration a propositlon from Captaln Macarthur for encouraging the breed of fine wonlled sheep in New South Walpa, tngether with the several papers on the rame subject.

Captaln Macarthur attended and stated that he bad resided in New Snuth Wales 11 years, and held landa there, a very small part only of which lands were lu cultivation, and that he pastured the rest with sheep and cattle.

Tha following questions were then put to Captain Macartinur:-
What is the nature and quality of the land In New South Wnleal-Rich and atrong, so much mo, that weare obliged to lufn off the long grass and feed the shcep upon the young grass: there are different surts of grass, some ipsembling tise conch grass ill this country ; another sort la a short grass of a succulent natmre, proper for feedian sheep.

Suppase those lands on whlch sheep are now fed were to be turned to the purposes of cultivation, are there other lands further on proper for the fecd of siseept-I think there are, and better calculated for the purpose, and nut unlounded extent.

Were the sheep helonging to the other settlers of the mameqnality as yours l-Noi Iknow nn other person in the colony who han paid any attention to the improvement of the wool.

Of what kind are your sheep, and what is the kind of the sheep nf the country p-The sheep I firat began to breed from were of the Bengai race, weighing nhout fiha. per quarter: I improved these by rama ef a inrger hreed, obtained finm a cross hetween the Cape ewo and mome rams of the Englinh breed bearing wool. (The fieecen of the Beogal and Cape sheep approach more nearly to hair than to wook.) I cannot ascertain tive particular breed of the rams. I afterwards ohtained a number of ewes of the Capebreed, and these I continued to eronh with ramg bearing wooi f by this mean it obtsined, what I conceived to he, a fine breed of whcep. In the year 1797 I procurcd three rams and five ewes of the spaniah or Merinorace; Ibred as many of this pure breed whanlbie, and crosqed all the other ewes benrine cosrne wool, or being of the hairy nort, with rams of this Spanish breed. The wheep in the coiony are mostly of the liairy and enarge woolled nort. I conceive that there exists a sort of prejurice in the colony in favour of the aheep bearing inferior wool, founded on an opinion that the carcasses of sueh mheep are the moat proftable.

What do you conceive to be the hest mode of encouragement to be heid out to the aettlers, with a view to promote the hreed of fioe woolled sheep ? -To feed the inhahitants on mutton rather than on proviginns sent from this country, and to give a amail additional price on the carcassea of wheep of the pure Spanish breed, and grants of iands to those who are inclined to engare in the breeding of fine woolied sheep.

Captain Macnurthur ntated thnt his sheep weighed about 16 iba, per quarter, and that he thought each sheep required an acre of iand to keep it. Ile also ntated that no granta have hitherto been made to any individusi of creater extent thin 1200 acres; these grants are given in perpetuity. Captain Macarthur possesses about 4000 acres, part of which was purchased from a former proprictor; he is preparing ahortly to return to New South Wales in any event, as a civil settler in the colony.

Being asked as to the number of nettlera in the colony, mupposes them to amount to about 1000 .
Are there any animais in New South Wales destructive to the sheep - Vonc, unless the native ding, which is an animal somewhat between a fox and a wo'f; there are not many of them, and they are no timid in their nature that they will not approach the sheep by diy. Captain Macarthur was in the hahit of housiar his sheepevery aight by reason of the wetness of the climate at certain periods of the year; each of his fincks have a yard anit a shed.

Do the natives mix nuch with the settlers $p$-They come aming the settlers familiariy, but have no fixed abode, and Ure upon what they can find for themselves.

Captain Macarthur being asked, whether in case it should be found objectionable to recommend the making a mpecific krant of land to him, any other measures could be taken for effectually eneonraging the breed of fine woolied sheep Repiled, he is so convinced of the advantage which would result to the country, that he should mast checrfully proceed in the buainess upon receiving a conditional grant of land, until government ahall be aatisfied of the importance of the measire.

If tine ohjeet shouid not be found to answer the expectations of government, sinch grant to be reaumable; but, in that event, Captain Macarthnr expreased a hope that he should be indemnified lor the expenses he must unavoidably ineur in fenclng, &c., which be calculated would not exceed the sum of 1001 .

Governor Hunter attending, was called in, and examined; as follows:
You bave been governor of New South Wales $1-1$ have.
How long is it nince you returncd i-About threc years.
Is there a considerable quantity of grass ground in New Snith Wales, in common and unemployed i-There is a very cosiderable quantity of pasture land, hoth clear of wood and covered with grass fit for cattle and for sheep. The quality of the grass appears to be excellent, as the hay made of it is preferred by strange cattle to that of their native soil

Is the grass of a coarse or fine pile ?-Sume coarse, but a great deal of fine pile; it grows very luxuriantly, and is anme times three fcet high.

Is not the climate favonrable to agriculture and for the breed of cattle ?-The iatitude is $34^{\circ}$, and it is a very fine climate.
Is it not subject to great rains ? -There are no periodical rains; the cllmate is variable, and the pasture is good the whole year.

Did you pay attention to the nature of the sheep during your residence there, and particularly to the won ?-The first tock was from Bengal and from the Cape of Good Ifope, with a few English sheep; their wool was haity, but the fleeres from the croas breed aoon improved and became very good: cloth was made of it, which was very fit for the clothing of the ennvicts.

Were there any Spanish sheep '—Two officers whom I sent to the Cape of Good liope had an opportnnity of making there a purchase of some Spanish sheep, which hud helonged to Colonel Gordon, a Duteh officer wcll kuown; and since their introduction into New South Wales, the wool improved very much.

The convicts have been fed by government hitherto on salt provisions and the grain of the country; bint a aupply of provisions from this or any foreign country will not long be necessury, as the colony will produce enough for its own support. The price of wheat was tos. per bushel, as established by governor Philip, and this prige procured a good supply.

Do you know Captain Macarthur, who has been in that country i-I do. He has * : : , argest atock of sheep in that conntry, and has heen very industrious in improving his flock and the breed of cattle; ar . . 4 . sarc and attention, I am of opiaion that a great quantity of fige wool may be produced. I have no doubt that any, math make will berth attending to.

Do you apprehend that there would be any great objection to the making grants of lands to persona disposed to attend to and increase their flocks of shcep and cattle ?-There is so minch land that 1 cannot conceive there can be any objection to such grants. I made some grants larger than nsual upon applications of that nature, and tor that purpose.

Are the rains so vinlent as to Injure the sheep t-I have known it rain violentiy for a week. We always housed our sheep. Captain Macarthur made an experiment of kceping his shecp out, but lost a good many by it.

The 14th July, 1804.
The Lords of the committee having resumed the consideration of the aeveral papers relative to the breed of fine woolled sheep, &cc. in New Sonth Wales, and of the examination thereon of Captain Macarthur, John Hunter, Esq., formerly governor of Ncw South Wales, and Joho Prinsep, Esq., a merchant of the eity of London, from whom a proposition was some time since received, and has undergone some consideration, relative to opening a regular trade with Port Jackson, their lordships were pleased to order that a copy of the memorial presented hy Captaln Macarthur, and of a proposal submitted by him to the lords commissioners of his Majesty's treasury for establishing a coinpany to encourage the increase of fine woolled abeep in New South Walea, be transmitted to Eilward Cooke, Escl., for the informatlon of Lord Camden, with a letter atating that their lordships are of opinion, from the evidence in the papers relating to Captain Macarthur's petition, from the opinion of the manufacturers of cloth, atated in their memorials, and from the examination of the gentlemen before mentioned, that it is probable wool of very fine quality, suited to the manufacture of fine cloth, may be produced in New South Wales, and brought to this country at a price which the manufacturers can afford to give for that material.

That their lordahips alsn conceive, that without more knowledge than they now possess of the nature and state of the colony, and without full communication with the governor of the nettlement, inconvenience might arise from recommendIng an uneonditional grant of lands to Mr. Macarthur, or to a Joint company, or to any individuai, as auch grant night re. tard or prevent the other inhabitants of New South Wales from turning their attention to the growth and improvement of the wool, or perhaps, in other repects, counteract the improvement of the coilony.

Th, at the lords of the committee, however, are of opinion that encouragement ought to be held out to the inhabitants of New South Wales to keep a breed of sheep with fine wool, and to improve its quality as mueh as possible.

That the Committee are inclined to recommend that Mr. Macarthur's plan shnuld be referred to the governor of New South Wales, with instructions to give every encouragement to the growth of fine wool, and to report his opinion on the petition of Mr. Macarthur, and on the plau of a joint company ; and that he should be further dirceted to state alisn in what manner be conceives the growth of flue woot can best he encouraged, together with the hopes he may entertain that a sumply of that artiele can be affortel from New South Wales, and to what extent such supply is ilkeiy to be ohtained, and wilhin what space of time.

That the lords of the committee think it right to observe that a conditional grant of inuds of a reasonabie extent may be, perhaps, with safety granted to Mr. Macarthur for the pasturage of sheep only, or to other persons, provided a powe be reserved in such grant to resume the same at any future period, on giviug other ianif further listant from the cultivated land of the colony (with reasonabic indemnification for expenses incurred in fencing, Ke.,) and tint such conditional gran would not cramp the cultivation of the colony, or be attended with bad effeets in any manner at present apparent to the iorts of the conimittee.

That in addition to these encouragements, it oceurs to their Lardships that the governor whnuid be directel to provide mutton for the food of the couvicts rather thon to feed them on mated provisions; atid that it might equally tend to en. courage the breed of sheep with fine wool, if it were recomnended to the governor to purehase only that deserintion of sheep for that purpose, or at ieast to give a preference to sheep of that deacription over any other kind, and to give all af vanced price for the sheep with fine wool. That many other ways may, however, oceur to the governor, from his heal knowledige, of promoting an object so important to this conntry : and that he should be directed to state the same to taril Camden.

That from the information obtained from the fleeces bronght from the gettiement in question, and from the description given of the climate of the colony, the lords of the committee are iel to imagine and entertain hopes that wool of a fioc quality may be proluced in this eolony; and that as wool of such the quatity is mueh wanted and desired by the manfaccurers of cloth In Engiand, it being mostiy drawn at this time from a country intluenced, if not depenilent on France, their Iordships entertain no doubt that it is weil deserving the attention of his Majesty's government to encourage the produce of fine wool in the colony of New South Wales.

Z.-STATE PAPERS

Extraet of a Letfer from Governor Philips, Botany Bay, to the Right Hon. Lord Sydney, dated Sidney Cove, 12 h February, 1790.
[The following extracts from State Papers will convey a knowiedge of the eariy condttion of the now flourishing settie. ment in Australia.]

I had the bonour of informing your iordship, that a aettiement was intended to be made at a place I named Rose-hilt. At the head of this harbour there ls a ereek, which at half fiood has water for large boats to go three miles up: and one mile higher the water is fresh and the soil good,-a very industrious man, whom i brought from Engiand, is employed there st present, and has under his dircetion a hundred conviets who work in clearing and euitivating the ground. A barn, granary, and other necessary buildings are crected, and 27 acres in corn promise a good erop. The soil is good, and the country for 20 miles to the westward, which is as far as I have examinet, lies well for enitivation, but even there the labour of eiearing the ground is very great, and I have seen none that can be entivated witinut eutting down the timber, except some few particular spots, which from their situation, lying at a distance from either of the harbours) ean be of no adrantage to us at present ; and I presume, the meadows mentioned in Captain Cook's voyage were seen from the high grounds above Bntany Bay, and from whence they appear weil to the eye, hit when examined, are found to be marsires, the drain. ing of which would be a work of time, and not to be attempted by the first settlers.

The captain's guari, which mati! iately did duty at Rose-hili, is now reduced to a lleutenant and tweive privates, and intenied merely as a guard to the store which contains the provisions, and which is in the redoubt; for 1 am now scasibic there is nothing to be apprehended from the natives, and the little attention which had been desired of the officers, more than what was immediately garrison dnty, when at Rose-hill, is now no ionger required.

At Sydney Cove all the officers are in good huts, and the men in barracks, nud although many unforeseen difficoties have been met with, I belleve there is not an individual, from the governor to the private soldier, whose situation is not more eligrible at this time than he had any reason to expect it coutd be in the course of three years station; and it is the same with the convicts, and those who have been any ways industrions, have vegetabies in plenty. The huildings now carrying on are of brick and stone. The house intended for myself was to consist of only three rooms, but having a good foundation has been enlarged, contains six rooms, and is so well built, that I presume it will stand for a great number of years.
The stores have been lately over-run with rats, and they arc equally numerons in the gardens, where they do considerable damage: and ar the loss in the stores couid only be known by removing all the provisions, that work was ordered to be done, and many casks of fiower and rice were found to be damaged, or totally testroyed. The lose in these two articies by the rats, since landing, has been more than tweive thousand weight.

Vegetables and provisions having been frequentiy stolen in the night from the convicts and others, tweive convicts were chosen as a night wateh, and they have actually answered the end proposed, no robbery having been conmitted for several montins, and the conviets in general have bebnved better tinn I ever expected. Only two convicts have suffert death in the last year. Four were executed the first year.

As near two years itave now passed since we first ianded in this country, some judgment may he formed of the climate, and I believe a finer or more healthy one is not to be fonnd in any part of the worid. Of 1030 peopte who were landel, many of whom were worn out by old age, the seurvy and various disorders; only 27 have died in 21 months, nand by the surgeon's returns it appears, that 26 of those died from disorders of ioug standing, and which, it is more than probabie, would bave earried them off much sooner in England. Fifty-ninc chitidren have been born in the above time.

In December, thecorn at Rose-hill was got in ; the corn was exceedingly good; about 200 bushels of wheat, and shout 60 of barley, with a small quantity of fax, ludian corn, and oats; all of which is prescrved for seed. Here I beg teave to observe to your lordship, that if settlers are sent out, and the conyiets divided amongst them, this settlement will very siac:tly maintain itself, but without which, this country ennnot be cuitivated to any advantage. At present, I have only ouc per son (who has about a hundred conviets under his direction) who is employed in cultivating the ground for the public beneit, and he has returned the quantity of corn above mentioned into the public store; the otricers have not raised sufficient to support the littie stock they have. Some ground I have had in cuitivation wlil return 40 busheis of wheat into store; $$ 0$ that the produce of the labour of the convicts empioyed in cuitivation has been short of what migbt have heen expecied and which I take the liberty n! pointing ont to your lordship, in this piace, to show as fuliy as possible, the state of this colony, and the necessity of conviets being employed by them who have an interest in their labour. The giving convicts to the officers has been hitherto hecessary, but it is attended with many inconveniences, for which the advantages arising to the oficer (in not make amends; it will therefore be discontinued atter this detachment is relieved uniess part numbers einployed in cultivation will, of course, be increased, as the necessary buildings are finished

In November, the Supply sailed for Norfolk isiand with some convicts, and returned after being absent six weeks; all the people in that isiand were well, and their erops, after all they had suffered from rats, hirds, and a worm, whicli had done them considierable damage, so gool, that they had grain sufticient for six month's bread for every one upon the island, rescriug sufficient for their next year's crops.

Eariy in January, 1790, the Supply again sailed for Norfolk island with more convicts, and in her passage icft a small party on Lord Howe island to hunt for turtle, but in fifteen days three only were taken. No grent advantages will at present acerue from thence. The island has fresh water, but no anchoring ground.

Since the deaths mentioned in a former part of thia tetter, one woman has suffered for robbery, five children hare died, and twenty-eight children been born.

Extrart of a Letter from Governor Philis .o the Right IIon. Lord Sydney, dated Botany Bay, $13 t h$ Fpbrunry, 1790.
In order tn ret a knowledge of the country round the settlement, frequent excursions have been masle since the shipa mailed In Novemher, 1788, soon after which I went to Botany Bny, and the five daym spent in that harbour confirmed me in the opinion I had first formed of it ; that it afforied no ellgible situation for fixing the settlement, and was a bad harbour, sot affording good security for ships against the easteriy winds, which frequently blow very hard in the winter, and which has been further proved by Captain Ilunter and the first Lieutenant of the Sirius, who went there to survey the Bay.

After having been geveral times with the boats to Broken Bay, in oriler to examine the different branches in that inarbour, a river was found, but the want of provisions ohllged us to return withnut being able to trace it to its souree, which has since been done; andi in the 16 days we were then out, all those branches which had any depth of water were traced as far as the bosts conid proceed.

The breaith of this river, named the Hawkesbury, is from 300 to 800 feet, and it appears from the sonnding we had, to be navigahie for the Jargest merchant ships to the font of Richmond-hili; but as the water near the head of the river sometimes rises after very heavy rains 30 feet above its common level, it would not be safe for ships to go so far up; but 15 or 20 miles beiow Richmond-lili they would lie in tresh water, and perfectly safe. I speak of Riehmond-hill, as being the head of the river, it there growing very shallow and dividing into two tranches.

The high rocky country which forms Broken liay, is lost as you proceed up the Hawkesbury, and the banks of the river are there covered with timher, the soll a rich Hght mould, and, judging from the little we saw of the country, I should suppose it good land to a very considerable extent; the other branches of fresh water are shoals, hut probably run many miles further into the conntry than we eould trace them in our hoats. On these rivers we asaw great numbers of wild ducks and some black swans; and on the banks of the Hawkesbury, several decoys were set by the uatives to catela quall.

Richmond-hill (near the foot of which a fall nf water prevented our proceeding furtier with the boats) is the southern extremity of a range of hills, which running to the northward, mnst probably join the mountains whieh jle nearly parallel to the coast, from 50 to 60 miles inland. The soil of Richmond-hili is good, and it lies well for cultivation. Our prospect from the hill was very extensive from the southward and eastward, and the eountry appearing from the helght at which we were, a level covered with timber. There is a flat of six or seven miles between Richmondi-hill and a hreak in the mountains, which separates Lansdown and Carmarthen-hilis, and in this fiat I suppose the Hawkestury continues its course, but which could not be seen for the timber, that with very few exceptions covers the country wherever the soli is good. The great advantages of so noble a river when a settlement ean be made on its banks will be obvious to your Lorishlp.

The setticment made at Port Jackson, near the head of the harbour (Rose-bill), very fully naswers my expectations: the soil is exceeding good, lies well for cultivation, and is well watered. Six miles to the southward there is a small fresh river, and twenty to the southward there is a more considerable river, the sonrce of which 1 suppose to be at the foot of the mountain. The banks of this river, which most probahly empties itself into the Jiawkesbury, are high, the soli a good light mould, and covered with trees; the wood of some of the trees is very light, they are about the size of large walnut trees, which they resembie ; they shed thetr leavea and bear a smail fruit, which is said to be very wholcsome. This river likewise rises 30 fect above its common level; It is, as far as I have seen it, from 300 to 400 feet in breadth, I named it the Nepean, and its source will be trseed in the course of the winter. From lts banks I bope to reach the mountains, which has been attempted by a party who crossed the river, but after the ist day's journey they met with such a constant succession of deep rsvines, the sides to which were frequentiy inaceessible, that they returned, not having been alile to proeeed above is miles in five days; when they turned baek they supposed themselves to be 12 miles from the font of the mountains.

As the land for eeveral miles to the snuthward, and 20 miles to the westward of Rose-hill, that is, to the banks of the Nepean, is as fige land for tillage as most in England (some few particular spots excepted, the soll of whleh is poor, and bears a very small proportion to the good land), I propose that tract of land for thoae settlers who may be sent out, and though they will be placed at some distance from each other for the convenience of water, from one to three or four miles, they will have nothing to apprehend from the natives, who avoid those parts we most frequent, and always retire at the dight of two or three people who are armed.

As the labour of elearing the ground of timber will be great, I think each settier should not have lesg than twenty men on his own farm, which 1 suppose to be from 500 to 1000 acres. It will be necessary to give that number of convicts to those settlers who eome out, and to support them for two years from the publie stores; in that time, If they are at all indus trioas, they will be in a situation to support themselves, and I do not think they would be ahie to do it in less time. At the expiration of the two years, they may return half the convicts they have been allowed, and want no further assistance from Government.

It may be necessary to grant land to officers and soldiers, who, beeoming settlers, will of course be entitled to every indulgence, but few of the ofticers now here have reaped any good advantage from being allowed convicts, and It is attended with uoavoldable inconvenience from the convicts being left ao much to themgelves, and from their mixing with the soldiers. It may be found more to the advantage of the Crown, and the officers likewise, if officers on duty in this settlement were allowed a certain quantity of grain to support their live stock until they have a market to go to ; and I make no doubt but that in the third year from the time settlers arrive, there will be a market, well supplled with grain poultry, hogs, and goats, of all which there has been a great increase, hut killed from wanting corn to support them; and the natives so frequently setting fire to the country, whieh they do to cateh the opossum, fiying spuirrel, and other animals, has prevented swine from being turned out, as was intended.

If this plan of distributing among the settlers those convicts who are not inmediately necessary for carrying on the public works is approved of, and which I suppose will, as appearing to me most likely to render this settlement independent for the necessaries of life in the shortest time possible, there are many regulations which will of course take place.

C C.-AUSTRALIAN AGRICULTURAL COMPANY.

This company received a free grant of $1,000,000$ acres of land in the territory of New South Waies, and is incorporated by charter : its objects are-

Ist. From the growith and export of fine wool, from Merino sheep of the most approved breed.
2nd. The breeding of horses, on an extensive scale, for sale in New South Wales and In India.
3 rd . The breeding of cattie ani nther live stock, the raising of corn, tubacco, &c, for the aupply of the residents in the colony, and the manufacture of silt.
th. The introduction, at a future period, of wine, olive oll, hemp, flax, ailk, opium, &c. as artleles of export to Great Britaln.

Of cattle, in 1834 , Durham, 23 ; improved colonial, 867 i colnnial, 1,305 ; working oxen, 227 :-total 2,803 ; in $1836,3,169$. The number uf acres of land in cuitivation and partiy cleared in 1839, was 2.000 . The people employed were-of free, 60 ; tickets of leave men, 62 ; convicts, 343 ; exclusive of wompn and children.

In the year 1825, a negociation was concluded with his Mujexty's goveroment, by which the raines of coal in New South Waiea which had been previously worked by the jocal government, were tranaferred to the conipany, with a grant of 2,000 acres of the coal field.

These mines aresituared at Newcastle, about 60 miles to the north of Sydney, at the south entrance of a mecure harbour, called Port Hunter, contalning a sufficient depth of water for vessels of about 250 tons, and into whioh the Cosi Itiver emptics itself. The cntrance of these mines is on a considerable elevation above the level of the sea, and the neama of coal are visibie un the surface of the cliff, which forms the sonth headland of the harbour. The country immediately to the south of Poit Hunter is an extensive ficid of coal, of which the strata have been traced for nine miles, when they bend downwards, and sink below the level of the sen. Between the coal beds, are atrata of sandstune and of clay siate, embedded in which there is found abundance of arziliaceous irot ore.

The mines are within a short disiance of the sen, an inciined plane and level railway leading from the pits' mouth to the whart $\mid$ the coai is, therefore shipped with facility.

The works have been compieted in a very superior style, and the operations nre proceeding in a most astisfactary manner. The sale of coal has been steadily increasing eaci year since the estabishment of the company's works, and the quality continues to improve. Thie rapit incrense of the town of Sydney, the comparative falluie of wooll for fuei in Its neighbourhood, together with the increasing introduction of steam vesseis nais steam engines, combine to offer the most fiattering prospect of adding annually to the company's profits in this important departmeat of their undertaking.

It empowers the compsny to expend their capital in the improvements of their lands and the construction of works thereon, and in carrying out emigrants. It conveys the power of "working and raising mines and minerals," subject to auch conditions as might be imposed by the government.
The company may make loans on the security of "lands and hereditaments" aituated within the colony, to the amount of $50,000 \mathrm{l}$. in the whole; a record of each loan to be entered in the supreme court within one month.
They may also make loans to the amount of 20,000 . on any "bonds or judgments" (such loans to be subject to the further regulation of the goverument), provided they do not enter into any banking operations. Loans may be made without restriction to persons settling on their lands for the purpose of inproving them.
They may contract for public works to the extent of 50,000 . This licence to continue for 10 years only, and be then subject to renewal or otherwise.
They may advance money to the government to the extent of $100,000 l$. on security of any tolls or taxes. This licence also to continue for 10 years only, aubject to renewal.

They may advance money on whale or aeal fisheries to the amount of $20,000 l$.
They may lay out capital to the extent of $20,000 l$. in the aequirement of "houses, wharfa, and buildings," and capital to the amount of $10,000 l$. in the acquisition of any other description of real property, "lands or hereditaments." Such last-mentioned deseription of property (not being a house, wharf, or other building) to be only through a license from the governor. The aecretary of state may authorize the company to increase such loans and investments of capital, if it aliall appear to be for the benefit of the colony to do so. Provision is then made for regulating the tenure of their grant.

1. The grants to be made under the seal of the colony, in pursuance of warrants under the Royal Sign Manual.
2. A quit-rent to be chargeable of $1 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the lands.
3. No quit-rent to be due or payable for five years from the date of the grant.
4. May redeem the quit-rent by payment of 20 times its amount.
5. They ahall employ a number of convicts equal to the number of their free labuurers, provided the governor should be able and willing to supply such a number.
6. The company to empioy one free overseer to every 50 convicts.
7. None of the company's land to be alienated for five years from the date of the grant, under penalty of $a$ forfeiture to the crown.
8. The company have the power of alienating any portion of their land (after auch period of five years) not exceeding 12,500 acres, after having proved to the local government an expenditure of $2,500 l$; and so on in like proportion, and on the same conditions, to the extent of one-half their grant. They may aiso lease for any period not excecding 21 years any portions of their land, to the extent of one-half their grant.
$9,10, & 11$. The quit-rent chargeable on the company'a land shall be paid at intervals of five years; the first payment to be made after the expiration of 10 years from the date of the grant. It is also provided, that the quit-rent may be redeemed by the employment and maintenance of 150 convicts during the greater part of the second period of five yeara from the date of the grant, of 250 convicta during the third period, and of 350 during the fourth period.
9. The lands shall be free from quit-rent if, within 20 years from the date of the grant, the company ahall make it appear that they have relieved the local treasury from a charge equal to 25,000 . by the maintenance of convicts, to be calculated at the rate or 161 . for each convict supported during the year.

The capital of the company is fixed at $1,000,000$ l. sterling, to be raised in shares of $100 l$. each.

E.-Copy of a Letter from Earl Bathurst to Mr. Edward Curr, Secretary to the proposed Van Diemen's

 Land Company.Sir,
Downing-street, 15th April, 1825.
Having had under my consideration the letter which on the 22d ultimo you addressed to me on behalf of the merchants and others who have associated themselves together as a company for the cultivation and improvement of waste lands in His Majesty's Island of Van Diemen's Land, I have thought it right in transmitting my answer to your proposals to avail myself of the opportunity this correspondence affurds, of atating to you explicitly the terms upon which I am prepared to advise His Majesty to sanction the formation of the projected company.
2. It would be superfluous to state in this place the reasons which have induced me to consider the ctablishment of a company for the cultivation and improvement of waste lands in more than one of lis Majesty's colonies as an undertaking deserving the support of His Majesty's government. It is sufficient to express the conviction of His Majesty's governinent, that the introduction of capital, judiciously applied, cannot fall to produce the most beneficial results. It must therefore form the essential basis of every such plan, that adequate security should be given that the nominal capital of any company of this description will be really raised and expended in carrying the avowed desigus of the aubscribers into effect.
3. I must therefore stipulate, on the behalf of His Majesty's guvernment, that before any bill is brought into Parliament for investing the Van Diemen's Land company with the necessary powers, four-fifths, at least, of the capital should be actually subscribed; and I shall expect to receive, on the personal eredit of the very respectable gentlemen whose names are placed at the head of the proposed company, an assurance that the subscribers are in general persons of capital and substance adequate to the payment of their subscriptions.
4. I shall further require as a necessary preliminary to the granting of the charter, that the subseribers shall actually pay up and deposit in the hands of the directors five per cent. upon the amount of the capital subscribed, and an additional five per cent. on that amount before the lands to be granted by the Crown are actually delivered into the possession of the company. If, in addition to these secutities, it were possible to render the shares of the capital stock of the company inalienable for a few ycars, I should be mueh disposed to insist on such a condition. But being, upon full consideration of the subject, persuaded that the number of exceptions to such a rule which must be admitted, combined with the various contrivances which might be devised for eluding its operation, would deprive the rule itself of all practical efficacy, I have decided nut to insist upon such a condition. As a substitute for it, however, I shall expect the company to agree to the following regulation: The capital originally subscribed will be divided into shares of $50 l$. each, and the certificates to be delivered to shareholders will be expressed accordingly. But as, in the progress of the undertaking, it may be necessary that additional capital should be raised, it will be provided, that His Majesty's government may authorize the creation of an additional capital, equal in amount to that originally subscribed.

This additional capital will also be divided into shares of 506 . each, and the original sulscribers will be required to agree, for themselves and their representatives, that each person will accept a number of the aecond set of shares equal to the number which, at the time of such increase of capital, he may hold in the original shares.
5. Although the sanction of His Majesty's government will thus precede the increase of capital, it is, on the other hand, to be understood that this sanction will not be given unless it shall be applied for in a petition adopted at a general meeting of the subscribers, and unless His Majesty's government shall receive satisfactory proof that a considerable proportion of the original capital has been bona fide applied and expended in the prosecution of the undertaking.
6. The capital to be originally subscribed will be $500,000 l$. sterling, and will be divided into ten thousand shares. Each director and auditor of the company will be required to hold fifty shares, as the necessary qualification for his admission and continuance in those ofices.
7. It is necessary that the manner in which it shall be lawful for the company to er ıploy this capital should be defined with as much precision as the nature of the subject will admit; for it must be clearly un-

8. As soon as the proposed cliarter of incorporation shall be obtained, and the necessary surveys completed, I shall be ready to advise His Ma, ty to make to the company a grant of two hundred and fify thousand acres of land in the island of Vau Diemen's land; and one of the primary objects in which the company will be authorized to expend their capital, will be the clearing, improvement and cultivation of this tract of land. The words "improvewent and Cintivation" will be understood in a large and liberal sense, as including the formation of roads, drains and biliges; the erection of houses, mills, and other works and machinery necrossury or convenient for the occupation or profitahle cultivation of the soil ; the depasturing of sheep or cattle, and genersily such operations of agriculture or pasturage aa the exigencies and peculiar situation of settlers in a new enuntry may requife.
9. Another mode of employing the capitul of the company wifl ennsist in the defraying the expenses incident to the emigration of persona proposing to mettle upon any part of the company's estates ; in which is of course included all charges of freight, outfit, and other expenses incident to the removal of emigrants, snd to the settling them on their arrival.
10. With respect to the operations of mining, it may be necessary to remark that the Crown has always reserved to itself, upon the grant of waste lands in the colonies, all mines and minerals hencath the surface. A similar reservation will be made in the grant which may be issued in favour of the proposed company. Permission, however, will he given to the company to accept leases or grants of mines froin His Majeaty within the island of Van Diemen's Land, and to employ their capital in raising minerals, and in all other expenses ordinarily incident to that operation. It will, however, be clenrly understood that the company is not to engage in any mining concerns, except upon such lands as may be expressly demised or granted to them by the Crown for that purpose; and that such grants or leases will prescribe such conulitions as may from time to time appear necessury to His Majesty, for preventing the capital of the company being engaged in these undertakings to an unreasonable extent, or in an improvident manner. It is acarcely necessary to sild, that it will altogether be opitioual with the Crown to make or to withhold such grants or leases, and that without an express grant or lease the company will not be at liberty to engage in mining operations, even upon their own lands. The ordinary operations of quarrying, or raising lime, clay, or other materiala for buildings, do not fall within the meaning of this prohibitory rule.
II. The employment of the capital of the company in making loans to settlers will be permitted, but thia power must not be exercised, except under auch reatrictions as have appeared to me necessary for preventmg the abuses to which such a power, if unrestricted, might obviously lead. First, then, it will be required that all loans of this nature should be matter of puhlic record, and that the whole amount of the money for which the company may at any one time be in advance to aettlers shall not exceed 50,000 . sterling. Further, the company will be permitted to lend money on mortgage to persons not settled on their own estates, but in such manner as only will give them, in default of payment, the right, not of foreclosure, but of sale; and in every loan made on mostgage, a provision shall be introluced for the repayment of the money borrowed by inatalments. In the event of the company bringing the estate of their debtor to a judicial sale, they will not be permitted to become the purchascra of it from the sleriff, for any price greater than the sum which the company may have vested on the mortgace of such estate.
12. The preceding regulations respecting the lending of money on mortgage will not extend to the case of persons effecting settlementa on the company's estates. I do mut deen it necessary to limit the amount of capital which may be advanced to this class of settlers, or to restrain the company from entering into such contracts with them, as, upon general principles of law, may be made by way of nortgage between any private capitalist and the ownera of land.
13. With respect to the employment of the capital of the company on loans to private individuals upon mere personal sccurity, it is requisite to lay dow'n explicitly the distinction which it will be necessary to observe. It cannot be too plainly stated, that transactions in the nature of banking operations cannot be permitted. The company will therefore not be at liberty to lend money at interest to any private person by way of discount upon bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other negotiable accurities, which by the cus. tom of trade are transferable by delivery, or by a simple indorsement : still less can they be allowed to open a running account with any private person in the nature of an ordinary banker's account. But they will be permitted so advance money to any private person resident in the island on the security of bonds or judgments, provided that the whole amount of auch loans sball not at any one time exceed 20,000 . and subject to such regulations as may from time to time be laid down for the prevention of abuase.
14. The employment of a portion of the capital of the company in the accomplishment of public works, will be expressly sanctioned: but here also the permission must be qualifed by such limitations as have appeared to be necessary to obviate ita possible abuse. In the firat place, the company will not be permitted, at any one time, to embark more than 50,000 . in the whole, in any undertaking of this nature. At the expiration of ten years from the date of their charter, the power of employing any part of their capital in the execution of public works, will cease, unless hia Majesty'a government ahall, at that period, see fit to continue that power for a further period. And finally, the company will not consider themselves as having any claim to be preferred above private persons in contracts of this nature, unleas their proposals should, by the local government, be deemed more advantageous than those of any other candidates.
15. If the governor and legislative council of the colony should, at any time, pass any act for borrowing money for the public service, on the security of tolls, or other public taxes, the company will be permitted, in the event of such acts being confirmed by his Majesty, to become competitors for any such loans, provided that they are never in advance, on that account, in a greater sum than $100,000 l$, at any one time. This power of making loans will, bowever, expire in ten years from the date of the charter, unless it should be then renewed for a limited period, by the express sanction of his Majesty's government.
16. Whaling and senling are mentioned in your letter as affording a mode in which the capital of the company might be invested with advnntage to the colony. The conduct of a whale fishery, upon an extensive acale, requires so much attention, and so large an expenditure, and involves so much risk, that I cannot deem it right to snuction the diversion of the capitnl of the company, or the time of its agents, into such a channel. But so far as whaling and sealing, undertaken on the account and risk of others, can be promoted by loans of money to be made by the company, according to the preceding.conditions, there will be no objection to that employment of it, to an extent not exceeding 20,000 .

17 Having thus defined in general the purposes for which the cnpital of the company may be employed, I proceed to state the general rule, that it is not to be engaged in any species of trade. Without undertaking to furnish a precise definition of the general term, I would be understond to mean by trade, any transnction in the nature of barter and snle, which might not be fairly and bona fide undertaken for the purpose of converting into cash, or remitting to other ports, in the most convenient and economical manner, the produce of the company's lands.
18. The investment of the capital of the company in the purchase of lands in the colony, will not be permitted except in special cases, in which they shall first obtain the licence of the governor, it being understood, that even with his licence, they can never at any one time have invested in the purchase of land moore than 10,0001 .
19. In reference to your request that the company may be at liberty to invest some portion of its capital in the purchnse of houses and wharfs in the different townships, I am to apprize you that to the extent of 20,0001 . such investments will be permitted, and that for that purpose the licence of the local governmeut will not he necessary.
20. As the preceding limitations, with regard to the amount of the capital which the company may embark in the aevernl particular operations above enumerated, may in process of time require revision, a power will be reserved to the crown to authorize by a licence through the secretary of state, any augmentation of such advances which experience may show to be necessary or desirable.
21. With respect to the grant and selection of the lands to be conceded to the company, the following rules will be observed :-
The company will receive their grant in the north-west district of the island, that district being for the present purpose, considered as bounded on the north by Bass's Streights; on the west by the ocean; and on the east and south by lines drawn from either shore, so as to afford the necessary depth of country. Within that district they will be at iberty to select any ungranted lands nt their own discretion. Those lands must however lie in one continuous and unbroken tract, approximating to the form of a square, as nenrly as may be, conipatihle with preserving a elear ard well-defincd natural boundary. The whole quantity of useful Innd, that is of land capable of being used in pasturage or tillnge, to be contained in this square, is two hundred and fifty thousand acres. Whatever useless nud unprofitable land may he unavoidably included in order to complete the square figure, will be granted to the company gratuitously.
22. The survey and valuation of the land thus to be granted to the company, will be carricd into effect by five commissioners, of whom two will be appointed by the crown, and two by the company. The fifth commissioner will be elected by the four thus apppointed. If the majority cannot concur in the election within fourteen days after their own appointment, then at the expiration of that period the governor or officer administering the government of Van Diemen's Land, will, on his Majesty's behalf, nominate a fifth commissioner.
23. In the event of the death, resignation or absence from the colony of any one of the five commissioners before the survey is completed, a successor will be appointed by the surviving or continuing commissioners; and if they cannot concur in clecting a successor within fourteen days after the vacancy has occurred, the nomination will be made by the officer administering the government of the island.
24. The remuneration of the commissioners appointed by his Majesty will be providel for and paid by his Majesty; that of the commissioners appointed by the company, will be provided for and paid by them. The remuncration of the fith commissioner, and the other expenses incident to the commission, will be proviled and paid for equally between his Majesty and the company, those expenses being first taxed and allowed by the officer administering the government of the islnad.
25. The commissioners will make a report in writing to the governor or lieutenant-governor of the result of their survey and valuation, and a report of the mnjority of their number must be taken as the report of the whole body. In that report, they will state with all possible precision, the exact limits of the grant to be made to the comprany, especially distinguishing all the natural boundarics; and they will also state the average value per acre of that part of the land which is capable of being employed in pasturage or tillage.
26. So soon as the limits of the intended grant shall be thus nsecrtained, the officer administering the government of the island will be authorized to issue a grant of it to the compnny, to be held by them and their successors in free and common soccage. In this grant a quit rent will be charged upon the land, amounting to 30 s. per annum, upon every hundred pounds of the ascertained value of the land to be comprised in the grant. The quit rent will not become payable until the expiration of tive years from the date of the grant. Upon giving six monthe notice in writing to the local government, the company will be at liberty to redeem the quit rent, or any part of it, by paying into the colonial treasury a sum equal to twenty times the amount of the rent proposed to be extinguished. If the local government should be able and willing to supply the company with a number of convict labourers, not exceeding the number of free labourers employed by them in their grant, the company will nceept such convicts and employ and maintain them at their own expcuse. If within fifteen years from the date of the grant, it shall be made to appear that the company have savel to His Mnjesty's government, by the maintenance of convicts, the sum of $25,000 l$. sterling, then all the lands contained in sueh grant will be fur ever exonerated from all future quit renta. It will be estimnted that His Majesty's government has saved 16l. steriing by each convict wholly kept and maistained by the company for one year.

In order to carry into full effect the preceding conditions, and to invest the company with all the powers which may be necessary for the accomplishment of their undertaking, I will recommend the necessary measures for obtaining a charter of incorporation under the grent seal of the United Kingdom, and for introducing into parliament a bill for granting to the company auch necessary powers as it would not be competent to His Majesty, in the excrcise of his prerogative to confer.

I am, Sir, your obedient humble servant,
(signed) BATHURST.
Van Diemen's Land Company was established by Act 6 Gco. IV., chap. 39, and incorporated by royal charter, 1825. The capital is one million aterling, divided into 10,000 shares of $100 l$. each. The amount paid on each share is $\mathfrak{£}$ -
The general management of the affairs of the company, in London, is vested in a governor, deputy-governor, 18 directors, three auditors, and the clerk to the company.
The superintendence in the colony devolves upon the chief agent, and the objects are similar to the Australian Company.
The company's grants consist of 180,000 acres on the north-west coast, including three islands off the coast, in climate and soil resembling the west of England, as lnid down in the map.
170,000 acres of the interior of the island, in climate and soil resembling the northern counties of England, and the southern counties of Scotland.
The present determination of the directors is to pursue tillage with the view to artificial grasses chiefly at Circular Head, to encourage the increase of the valuable imported flocks of sheep at Woolnorth, to discontinue for the present the attempt to keep sheep at the Hampshire.and Surrey Hills, and to convert that district into a cattle estate. The stock, &e. belonging to the company is as follows :-

B.-SIERRA LEONE.-CHARTER OF JUSTICE.

Ninth Part Patents of the Second Year of King George the Fourth.

Grorge the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Whereas by an Act of Parliament made, and passed in the thirty-first year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, our dearest father intituled, "An Act for establiahing a Company for carrying on Trade between the Kingdom of Great Britain and the coasts, harbours, and countries of Africa, and for enabling the aaid company to hold by grant from His Majesty, his heirs, and successors, and from the native Princes of Africa, a certain district of land, commoniy called the Peninsula of Sicrra Leone, now vested in his Majesty or belonging to the said princes, for the better enabling the said company to carry on the aid trade," it was, amongst other things, enacted, that the several persons therein named and described should be and they were therehy created one distinct and separate body politic and corporate, by the name or style of "The Sierra Leone Company;" and it was also enacted, that it should be lawful for his said late Majesty, his heirs, and successors, to make unto the said company a grant by letters-patent, under the great seal of Great Britain, of so much and such part of all that tract or district of land situate and being at Sierra Leone, on the coast of Africa, and commonly called or known by the name or description of "T' a Peninsula of Sierra I.eone," as thell already might have or should thereafter by any grant, purchase, or cession from any of the kings, princes, or chiefs having right therein, become vested in his sald late Majesty, his heirs, or successors, with power and liberty to and for the said company to purchase of and from all kings, princes, and chiefs, or other powers having right to make sale thereof, so much land as should include the whole tract or district so commonly called or known by the name of the Peninaula of Sierra Leone as aforesaid, bounded as thereinafter mentioned; to hold the same to the sajd company and their assigns, upon such terms, conditlons, and reservations as his said late Majesty, his heirs, and successors should judge expedient; and it was thereby further enacted, that the said Act should take place and have continuance from the 1st day of July 1791, for the term of thirty-one years, and from thence to the end of the next session of Parliament : And whereas the said company, in pursuance of the said Act and immediately after passing the same, did raise a large capital of stock, and did enter upon the business and undertakings for which they were incorporated, and did also purchase from the natives of Sierra Leone aforesaid a part or district of the said peninsula, and form a very considerable establishment for their nfficers, servants, and settiers, and built a town called Frectown, and laid out plantations there, and also formed some other settlements or factories on the neighbouring coasts for the purpose of carrying on trade with this country in the natural productions of Africa: And whereas the said company humbly besought his said late Majesty, by petition, to make unto them such grant of the said penillsula as in the said Act of I'arliament is specified; and further to grant unto them certain powers, privileges, and franchises for the government of the said peninsula, and for the effectual administration of justice in civil causes, and for the trial and punishment of crimes or misdemeanors committed there, or in the said company's other factories and settlements, suggesting that the granting of such powers unto the said company would not ouly conduce to the welfare of the said peninsula, but would also tend (as there was great reason to believe) to advance the national interests on the continent of Africa: And whereas his said late Majesty having considered the premises, did by virtue and in pursuance of the said recited act, and of his own special grace, certain knowledge and mere motion, give and grant, by letters-patent under the great seal of Great Britain, bearing date at. ## APPENDIX VIII.-ON EMIGRATION.

A.-Notices for general circulation on Emigration to Australia.

Government Emigration Office, 2, Middle Scotland-yard, 20th October 1837.
The preaent paper is printed for the encouragement of the emigration of useful settlers. Government will occasionally send, from different parts of the United Kingdom, ahips provided expressly for the purpose, in which free passages will be allowed to a limited number of persons, who must fall within the following deacription:-
They must belong to the clasa of mechanica and handicraftsmen, or of farm servanta. They must be married, and be accompanied to the colony by their wives. They will generally be taken under 35 yesra of age, and must not exceed 50. They must be able to establish their character for industry, sobriety, and good moral conduct.

Although young women are no longer sent out separately, yet unmarried female relatives of married couples going out under the above description, and not below 15, nor above 30 years of age, will be allowed a passage with their friends, provided they go out as forming part of the same family, and deatined to remain under ita protection until otherwise provided for in the colony.

During the voyage the people will be under the care and superintendence of a aurgeon, usually taken from the list of surgeons of the Royal Navy who have already been in the colony.
The condition upon which the emigrants are to be taken, is a free passage for themaelves and their familiea ; but they must defray out of their own means any expenses previous to joining the ship, and must come supplied with a sufficient quantity of clothes for the voyage. Only proviaions, bedding, and cooking utensils will be found for them.
The following is a liat of clothing which may be conaidered indispensable for the voyage :-
Two auita of clothes, including two hats or bonneta, and two pair of shoes. Two flannel petticoats for the women. From six to twelve shirta or shifta. From six to twelve pair of dark hose. Two pair of duck trowsers, and two neck-kerchiefs for the men. For the women, dark gowna would be preferable to light.

The preceding is given as a list of the very amallest quantities which would suffice; but as a general rule it may be atated, that the more abundant the stock of good clothing, the better for health and comfort during the passage.
Every security will be taken for the convenience of the emigrants on their first landing, and information will be provided for them of che demand for employment in different directions, ao that the people may know what opportunities are open to them. They will be entirely free to work for whom they please, and will in no reapect be bound to government, nor be liable to be called upon for repayment of the cost of their passage.

Any letters in reference to the subject of the present notice, ahould be addreased to T. Frederick Faliot, esq., agent-general for emigration, 2, Middle Scotland-yard; and, if by general poat, should be placed under cover to the Under Seeretary of State, Colonial Office, London.
T. Frederick Elliot.

*Sir R. Bourke, the governor, remarks on this return, that "although confined to Syduey, it may be considered applicable to the whole colony, servants of all klnds being engaged by the settlers in Sydney, and taken from thence to their property in the interior, while provisions of all deseriptions, varying as they may in price in different distriets, may ressonsbly be taken at the average of the Sydney market."

+ In respect to coopers, it is mentioned in some evidence by Dr Lang, whose publications on New South Wales are so weli known in England, that the branch of making herring barrels is not wanted in the colony.

is very uneven, being intersected in every possible direction hy innumerable streams of water, upon which saw and fiour mills can be erected to advantage; a tract of 100 acres can scarcely be found without its run of water. In regard to timber, it is very irregularly covered; there are open plains of considerable extent, 300 to 1,500 acres.
4. The herbage of the district, though too coarse for Merino and fine wool sheep, is, when burnt, very good pasture for riore hardy sheep; the Cheviot, Cotswold, and Leicester breeds, &c., are found to thrive well upon It. Affer burning in spring, it grows rapidly to a considerable height. Some of the marshes produce a fine bladv grass in great profusion, and of excellent quality.
5. The stringy bark and gum trees are in most parts plentiful, and are adapted either for the carpenter or for splitting for fences. The qualities of the myrtle have not yet been ascertained, but it is believed it will make $\varepsilon$ good furniture wood, and for the inside work of houses.
6. Lime-stone has been found at the Surrey and Hampshire Hills. Stone of a rough nature, fit for common buildings, is plentiful, and of a very durable kind. Clay is also everywhere plentiful and good.
7. The climate of the Surrey and Hampshire Hills is humid, nearly as much so as the wettest parts of the north of England or Scotland. High winds prevail at most seasons of the year, but their force is a good deal mitigated by the height of the trees. Snow falls in winter to the depth of a foot or more. It never lies long ; the heavy rains soon carry it off. Summer frosts are frequent, and often destructive to potatoes and other tender plants. Still the summer is generally sunny and hot; quite sufficiently so to ripen and and to allow time to gather the harvest. Fogs are almost unknown, and the climate is perfectly salubrious, as is proved by the fact of the company's surveyors and their men having been exposed to it for a whole year or more without any bad effects, with nothing hetter than tents to cover them.
8. The soil of the Surrey nnd Hampshire Hills is rich enough to produce grain crops of any kind in ordinary seasons, but oats, from the prevalence of summer frosts, will be sometimes a precarious crop.
9. Turnips, beans, peas, and cabbages, with goud cultivation, it is conceived, may be relied upon as certain crops.
10. Cattle do well at the Surrey and Hampshire Hills, on the native pastures; and there can be no doubt that when managed on the English system, they will do still better. The young stock there at present is of a very good kind, the original cows having been selected from the best in the colony, and the bulls used have been, with the exception of one of the Ayrshire breed, pure Durham short-horned only.
11. The hardy breeds of sheep, or a cross between thein and the Merino, kept within enclosures, and obtsining in the winter season some portion of improved grass or turnips, succeed well, and their wool always finds a ready sale.
12. Blood horses and the Clevcland breed succeed well in the district.
13. Kangaroos are abundant, and form a very useful and palatable article of food, and their skins are worth about 9d. each. Emu, quail, snipes, and wild ducks are all met with, but in no great plenty.
14. Working bullocks are fast going out of use in Hobart Town and Launceston, their places being taken by horses. Hence the increasing demnnd for oats in both places, which will afford an extensive and sure market, and would be principally beneficial to the Surrey and Hampshire Hills districts, because if a really good article could be produced there, it would render the light and inferior production of other districts unsaleable, and would compel settlers to devote their lands to wheat, for which they are well adapted.
15. The old districts of Va: Diemen's Land are particulariy adapted for the rearing of fine wool sheep. Hence, sheep are rapidly increasing, whilst cattle are, in consequence, diminishing there; the natural pastures being not very nutritive, and the sheep keeping them close fed, cattle hnve little chance to get fat, and old settlers are in consequence anxious to get rid of them. While mutton therefore is plentiful, beef is scarce, and becoming more so every season. These circumstances produce the singular anomaly of settlers destroying their young calves to prevent increase, at the very time that beef is bcaring a highly remunerating price. Stall-fed beef is always in demand in Van Diemen's Land, being retailed out by the butchers at from $6 d$. to $8 d$. per lb ., a price which cannot certainly be expected to stand against mutton and grass-fed beef nt $3 \frac{1}{2} d$. per lb . But as $3 d$. per lb . would well remunerate the established tenant at the Surrey and Hampshire Hills, with respect to beef there is abundant room for prices to fall, before the settler could be apprehensive of wanting a good mnrket for his produce.
16. Van Diemen's Land being the only extensive region in the south-eastern part of the globe which possesses a really temperate climate, there is great reason to expect that pork and beef could be readily cured on the company's estate, and it is wcll known that salt provisions may be always sold to advantage in the colony. If this be the case in Van Diemen's Land generally, it may be fairly anticipated that at the Surrey snd Hampshire Hills, with cultivated lands and careful feeding, salt provisions may be produced which will be fully equal to those now sent thither from Ireland.
17. The same ohservations may be made with regard to dairy produce, which bears a very high price in Van Diemen's Land, and will continue to do so, because the old districts are generally ill adapted to dairy purposes, and will be still less productive in that way as they become more closely stocked with shecp. Cheese is now about $9 d$. to 1 s ., and butter 1 s .8 d . to $2 \mathrm{~s} .6 \mathrm{~d} l$. per lb .
18. Pork, cither salt or fresh, and bacon and hams always command ready sale at good prices; the present prices of fresh pork vary from $5 d$. to $9 d$. per 16 ., bacon and hams $10 d$. to $1 s .4 d$. per 1 b , and even higher. They are always in demand.
19. Working horses of a good growth and well broken in are always saleable. It seems the general apinion, that when they can be obtuined at $50 l$. to $60 l$. a pair, they will not only supersede the use of bullocks in the towns, but in the country also, and then they will command a good sale.
20. The establishment of breweries at the Surrey and Hampshire Hills would be extremely beneficial to the tenant, in forming him a market for his produce near home.
21. Emigrants going out to the colony as tenants to the company, will have the advantage of arriving in a country which hus been surveyed, and is well known throughout, and which would greatly facilitate the purchasing of land on the borders of the company's property, lf they at any future period should feel so disposed.
22. The lands will be let in locations of one square mile, or 640 acres, according to the capital and means of the tenant; it is not, however, necessary that the farms should be arranged in square blocks of a mile each, but that they should be adapted in shape to the natural boundaries of the country.
23. The rent to be $64 l$. per annum for the 640 acres. The first year and a half's rent to be expended by the tenant in fencing; half of the next half ycar's rent, or $16 l$, also to be expended in permanent improvements, and the balance, or 161. , to be paid in cash ; half the third year's rent, or 32l., to be expended in like manner, and the balance paid in cash. The fourth and future years' rent to be paid wholly in cash.
24. Leases will be granted for twenty-one years to the first twenty families going out, after which no leases will be granted for a longer periud than fourteen years.
25. Cottages in Van Diemen's Land are in gencral erected at very little expense, though it would be most desirable to take out a small portable cottage from England, which can be had at a trifling cost.
26. Assistance and advice as to the sale of produce at the best markets will at all times be given, and the company's chief agent will be ready to make such arrangements for the general body in this respect as may be beneficial to the whole.
27. Tenants may be supplied with stores by the company on moderate terms.
28. Seed corn will be lent to tenants, to be repaid out of their first crop.
29. Clover and grass seeds will be supplied to tenants engaging to lay down lands to grass on the company'a estates.
30. Timber carriages, to assist in clearing away trees, will be lent gratis by the company to tenants of forest lands.
31. So soon as the population is sufficiently increased, schools will be established upon very moderate terms.
32. The services also of the company's medical officers may always be obtained upon very reasonable terms.
33. Tenants will have the advantage of knowing when they leave England, that they will be received on landing in the colony by persons interested in protecting them, an incalculable advantage to settlers with small capitals.
34. Mechanics engaged in England, or elsewhere, will be established throughout the settlements.
35. Live stock of every kind, and the most approved breeds, will be supplied at reasonable prices, one half to be paid in cash, and the balance at such credit as may be arranged by the company's chief agent.
36. The gradual rate at which the company's lands can be settled, enables then to offer the first emigrants in rotation a preference in the selection of their farms.
37. These advantages will place a tenant under the company on a better footing than if he obtained lands elsewhere; this will be more apparent, when it is considered that the price fixed by the commissioners for colonizing South Australia is 20 s. per acre, and which will no doubt be shortly increased.
38. The company will reserve the right of making roads, bridges, &c., through any lands, or wherever they may consider it necessary for the good of the general body of tenantry.
39. The expense of passage from England to Van Diemen's Land depends upon the accommodation and comforts which emigrants require, and varies from $16 l$. to $25 l$. each for steerage adult passengers; children in proportion. The voyage is usually performed in four or five months at farthest.
40. To enable a tenant to judge of the capital which he will require for a farm, the prices by the last despatches, and at which he may expect to ottain his supplies in the colony with cash, are here enumerated :

Eight bullocks at $6 l$. each, 48l.; 1 cart or dray, 15l.; 2 ploughs, $7 l$. ; 2 pair of harrows, $3 l .10 s$.; bullocks' chains, bowa, and yokes, $3 l$. 103 .; various small implements, $10 l$.; total, $87 l$.
Meat, $4 l$ l. per lb. ; flour, $2 d$. to $2 \frac{1}{2} d$. ditto; sugar, $2 \frac{1}{2} d$. to $4 d$. ditto; tea, $2 s$. to 3 s .; soap, 7 d . to 8 d .
41. From these data, a tenant will be able to calculate, according to the number of his family, what his maintenance will cost, during the period which will probably elapse before he can expect to reccive any returns from his own cultivation. In the mean time, if he wishes any convict servants, he will be bound by the government regulations to supply them as follows: $10 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{lbs}$. bread or flour, 7 lbs , fresh meat, 7 oz of sugar and 7 oz . of roasted wheat for coflee, or 14 pints of milk, or 14 pinta of table beer, $3 \frac{1}{2}$ oz. of soap, 2 oz . of salt, per week.
The convict's :ivthing would cost the tenant about $6 l$. a year in the colony. On these terms convict labour is found very advantageous to the settler, and the $r$ en in general, under proper management, conduct themselves tolerably well. But those tenants who have sons and daughters will find their services extremely valuable.
42. Upon the whole, an industrious and respectable person, who arrives in the colony possessed of a sum of from 300 l . to 500 l ., may undertake a farm with confidence of ultimate success, for it is but fair and reasonable to suppose that each tenant will be able to maintain himself in comfort from his own produce at the end of the second year.
43. It is clearly for the interest of the Van Diemen's Land company, that settlers upon their lands should prosper, and they hope the advantages held out will give encouragement to industry and the investment of capital.
44. The artisans, &ce, who would meet with employment at good and steady wages, so soon as the settlement advances, are,-ploughmen, farm-labourers, blacksmiths, carpenters, coopers, sawyers, shoemakers, boat-builders, millers, tanners, brewers, malsters, wheelwrights, bricklayers, masons, shipwrights, brickmakers, horse-breakers, and saddlers.

K.-Regulations for the disposal of Lands belonging to the Crown in the British North American provinces. Colonial Office, 7th March, 1831.
The lands are no longer to be given away by free grants, but are to be sold.
The commissioners of crown lands will, at least once in every ycar, submit to the governor a report of the land which it may be expedient to offer for aale within the next ensuing year, and the upset price per acre at which he would recommend it to be offered; the land so offered having been provioualy surveyed and valued in one or more contiguous tracts of those which are most adapted for settlement, according to the local peculiarities of the province, and in proportion to the number of deputy-surveyors who can be employed.

The lands to be lsid out in lots of 100 acres each, and plans of such parts as are surveyed are to be prepared for public inspection, which plans may be inspected in the office of the survcyor-general, or in that of his deputies, in each district, on payment of the fee of $2 s .6 d$.

The comissioner of cro. n lands will proceed to the sale in the following manner :
He will give public notice in the official gazette, and in such other newspapers as may be circulated in the province, as well as in any other manner that circumstances will admit, of the time and place appointed for the sale of lands in each district, and of the upset price at which the lands are proposed to be offered; he will give notice that the lots will be sold to the highest bidder, and if no offer should be made at the upset price, that the lands will be reserved for future sale in a similar manner by atction.
The purchase-moncy will be required to be paid down at the time of sale, or by four instalments with interest; the first instalment at the time of the sale, and the as oond, third and fourth instalments at intervals of half a year.
If the instalments are not regularly paid, the deposit money will be forfeited, and the land again referred to sale.

Public notice will be given in each district in every year, stating the names of the persons in each district who may be in arrears for the instalments of their purchases, and announcing that if the arrears are not paid up before the commencement of the sales in that district for the following years, the lands in respect of which the instalments may be due will be the firat lot to be exposed to auction at the ensuing sales; p.d if any surplus of the produce of the sale of each lot should remain after satisfying the crown of the sum due, the same will be paid to the original purchasers of the land who made default in payment.
The patent for the land will not be issued, nor ary transfer of the property allowed until the whole of the instalments are paid. The lands sold under this regulation are not to be chargeable with quit rents, or any further payment beyond the purchase money and the expense of the payment.
Persons desirous of buying land, in situations not included in the tracts already surveyed, must previously pay for the expense of survey, and the price must of course depend upon the quality of the land and its local situation.
The crown will reserve to itself the right of making and constructing such roads and bridges as may be neeessary for public purposes, in all lands purchased as above; and also to such indigenous timber, stone and other materials, the produce of the land, as may be required for making and keeping the said roads and bridges in repair, and for any other public works.
The crown further reserves to itself all mines of precious metals.
The regulationa for granting licencea to cut timber will be learned by application to the aurveyor-general's office, in the respentive colonies.
L.-Information for the use of military and naval officers, proposing to settle in the British Colonies.

Colonial Office, 15 August 1834.
lst. Annexed (sec above) is a statement of the regulations according to which, with auch modifications as loeal circumstances may render necessary, lands belonging to the crown are disposed of in the several British colonies in North America.
2. Under these regulations military and naval officers cannot receive free grante of land, but in buying land they are allowed a remission of the purchase money according to the undermentioned scale.
Field officers of 25 years' service and upwards, in the whole, $300 l$.; field officers of 20 years' aervice and upwards, in the whole, 250l.; field officers of 15 or less years' service, in the whole 2001.; captains of 20 years' service and upwards, in the whole 200l.; captalns of 15 years' service or less, in the whole, 1501 .; subalterns of 20 years service and upwards, in the whole, 1501 . ; subalterns of seven years' service or less, in the whole, 100 l.

Regimental staff officers and medical officers of the army and navy will be deemed to come within the henefit of this rule.
3. Officers of the army and navy who propose to proceed to the colonies in order to take advantage of this indulgence, should provide themselves with certificatea from the office of the general commanding-inchief, or of the lords commissioners of the admiralty, showing that their emlgration has been sanctioned, and stating exactly their rank and length of service. No document from the office of the secretary of state is nacessary.
4. Officers on half pay, residing in the colony, when they propose to settle, may be admitted to the privlleges of miititary and naval settlers without referring tn this country for testimonials, provided they can satisfy the governor that thice is no objection to their being allowed the indulgence, and that their return of their rank and length of service is accurate, and provided, if they belong to the navy, that they produce their letter of leave of absence from the admiralty.
5. Military chaplains, commissariat officers, and officers of any of the civil departments connected with the army, cannot be allowed any privileges on this subject of land. Puraers, chaplains, midshipmen, warrant officers of every description, and officers of any of the clvil departments connected with the navy, must also be considcred as not qualified for those privileges. Although members of these classes may have heen admitted formerly, and under a different state of circumstances, they must now be excluded.
6. Gentlemen who have ceased to belong to His Majesty's service cannot be allowed the advantages to which they were entitled while in the army and navy. It is not, however, proposed to affect by this rule officers who desire to quit the aervice for the express purpose of attling in the colonies; it is only required that when they resign thelr commissions they ahould apply for a certificate from the general commanding-inchief, or from the lorda commissioners of the Admiralty, that they do ao with a view of emigrsting; and such certificate, if produced to the governor of any colony within one year from its date, but not otherwiae, will be a sufficient warrant for allowing the bearcr the aame advantages as officers of His Msjeaty's service.

Officers who have aold out withir the last 12 months preceding the date of thls memorandum will be allowed the usual privileges, notwithatanding their want of the certificate required by these regulations, if they present themselvea to the governor of the colony within a year from the present date. And all officers who have already been recommended by the general commanding.in-chief, will be entitled to their privileges without regard to any obatruction which might otherwise be offered by the regulations now established.
7. Officera cannot be allowed advantages in the acquisition of land in any colony, unleas it be their intention to fix their residence in that colony. In order to insure the observance of this rule, it has been determined that the titles to lands obtained by officers who take advantage of the peculiar regulations existing in their favour, shall be witholden for a period sufficient to prove that they have not repaired to the colony for the mere purpose of gaining possession of a portion of land and then departing. Two yesrs is the period for which it has been decided that the titles shall be kept back; this delay will be sufficient for the salutary object in view, and will not constitute any serioua inconvenience to the bond fide settler.
8. By the annexed regulations for the disposal of Crown lands, it will be observed that the general sales will take place periodically. But in order to prevent inconvenience to the officers who may arrive in the intervals between those sales, and be desirous at once to obtain an allotment, the governors of the colonies are authorized to allow officera to acquire at any time, on payment of the upset price, landa which have been previously offered for sale, at some general sale, and not been bought.

Officers will thua be relieved from delay at the time of establishing themselves in the colony. They will also be enabled by this arrangement, which will permit them to ohtain their land at a fixed price, to choose such a quantity as shall be exactly equivalent to the amonnt of the remission to which they are entitled, instead of being liable to be called upon to pay a balance, which must be the caae if they bid for lands at a sale by auction.
9. There being little or no Crown land available in Prince Edward'a island, officers cannot be offered any privilegea in the acquisition of land in that colony. In Cape Breton, an island in which the natural inducements for the aettlement of officers are not very considerable, it is necessary, from local circumstances, that there should not be a remission of purchase-money as in other colonies; to such officers as may wish to settle in this island, allotments of land will be granted on the aame scale and conditions as before the general introduction of the syatem of aelling the Crown landa; viz.-To a lieutenant-colonel, 1,200 acres; to a major, 1,000 acres; to a captain, 800 ; to a aubaltern, 500 .

U.-CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

This excellent Institution, known also by the name of its benevolent founder-as the "Brenton Juvenile Asylum" -was founded by Captain Brenton R.N. in 1830 -for the wise and good purpose of preventing crime, by taking children off the streets and from the haunts of misery and crime before they become tainted by the moral pestilence of our goals, or branded with the stamp of convicted felons. Depending solely on individual assistance, and under the patronage of the Queen and Ducbess of Kent, the founders and managers of thia truly Christian Society bave already effected much good; the extent of their operations being alone circumscribed by their means. The children are received into two asylums while in England; that for the boys is situate at Hackney Wick, ( 3 miles N. of London) ; the girls asylum is at Chiswick on the banks of the Thamea. The plan of these Asylums and the mode in which the children are provided for in the Colonies will be best seen by the following transcript from the books of the Society.
"At 'The Brenton Juvenile Asylum,' Hackney. Wick, boys, under an able and vigilant superintendent, receive the advantages of religious and moral instruction, combined with a system of agricultural labour and manual employment, calculated to form habits of general usefulness and industry.
"The eatablishment of the society for the reception of girls, at Chiswick, called; by permission, the 'Royal Victoria Asylum,' is under the separate management of a committee of ladies. The giris remain in the asylum until good and respectable habits have been so far acquired, chat bope may be reasonably entertained of their becoming generally useful.
"After this preparatory discipline, the children, unlesa removed by their friends, or discharged in consequence of a refusal, on their part or that of their parents or guardians, to emigrate, are apprenticed, as farm or domestic servants, to respectable individuals in our colonies.
"Committees of ladies, in the respective colonies, take care of the girls upon their arrival, and keep a watchful authority over them during their time of apprenticeship.
"Committeea of influential gentlemen at Cape Town, King George's Sound, Perth, Albany, Graham's Town, Toronto in Upper Canada, and Huntingdon in Lower Canada, have already enabled the society to provide for a considerable number of destitute children, who would otherwise probably have perished from want or disease, or have been driven by misery to crime. These local committees have the power of cancelling any indenture in case of ill usage.
"The plan of training and education pursued in the asylums of this society differs essentially from that in common use. Under a plan of dicipline applied to the heart and affections, rendering corporal punlshment almost unnecessary, children are aufficiently susceptible of training to render them valuable apprentices, yith the prospect of becoming useful and respectable members of society: the system, thongh turning rincipaliy on farm, out-door, and in-door labour, combines also that of the artisan.
"Character and conduct meet with due appreciation, and book learning is considered more in the light of relaxation than in that of labour : yet it will be found that the pupils make certain and rapid progress in necessary acquirements.
"The objects of this charity are: orphans; children exposed to crime from the vice or poverty of the parents ; children of parents who are in a state of great destitution, but whom a noble feeling prevents from applying to the parish; and children who are actually inmates of the workhouse: and it should be understood that it is for such objects only that the charity is designed. It is unnecessary to enlarge upon the advantages which muat follow from removing that host of young and wretched beings with which the streets of the metropolis are frequented, and rescuing these poor children from certain wretchedness and temptation to crime, while they are still at an age when it is practicable, by a judicious and well-considered system of religious and moral discipline, to reform these habits, and to reuder them bappy in themaelves, and contributors to the general welfare."

The following are the regulations under which the society is supported and managed :-
A donation of $5 l$. or upwards constitutes the donor a member for life.
A subscription of 5s. or more, yearly, an annual member, and by increasing the subscription to $5 l$. within the year, the subscriber becomes a life member.

All members have a right to vote upon every question propounded, and every election held, at any general meeting of the society.

A legacy of $10 l$, and upwards bequeathed to the society constitutes the first named acting executor a member for life.

Every annual subscription is considered as made on the lst of June, on on the lst of December next pre-' ceding the first payment.

Subject to the following regulations, and to the approval of the general committee, any child shall be cligible to the benefits of the institution.

Any person contributing the sum of $15 l$., or producing tickets to that amount, is entitled to place a child, between the ages of eleven and fourteen, upon the male or female establishment, as the case may be.

The general committee of management have power, in special cascs, to admit any child under the age of eleven, and between the sges of fourteen and sixteen, if in the latter case the child be of gond moral character. When, however, the child to be admitted is under the age of eleven, a sum varyling from 4 s . to 5 s . per week (not in tickets) must be paid, over and above the entrance-money, until it shail attain that age.

Children are received from public institutions or parishes on payment of a weekly sum of $4 s$., and also of 10l. when embarked.

A limited number of young children between the ages of four and seven are received into the female establisliment at Chiswick, from public institutions or parishes, on payment of $4 s, 3 \mathrm{~d}$. per weck, and without entrance-money, to be educated in the infant-school system; their continuance in the institution must, however, depend upon the discretion of the general committee of management.

No child is received by the society until it shall have been examined by a medical man, and certified to be in a sound state of health.

When the child has not been baptized as a member of the Established Church, or otherwise formally admitted into any other religious community, measures are taken to supply the deficiency, according to the wishes of its parents or guardians; and, in the case where no parents or natural guardians can be found, the child is considered a member of the Established Church. The period of apprenticeship for which the child is to be bound in the colonies, is determined by the age declared on admission.

Upon admission, the boys are placed in the asylum at Hackney. Wick, and the girls in the asylum at Chiswick, and retained there respectively till considered by the general committee fit for service or other employment in the colonies.

No child is sent from England without the previous sanction of the general committce of management, nor without its own free consent, and the consent of its parents or guardians.

On the withdrawal of a child from the institution, all claim to the money paid with it is forfcited, and a refusal to go abroad is considered equivalent to a withdrawal.
N.B. The general committee of management meets every Wednesday; all applications for admission must be made on that day, between the hours of eleven and one, at No. 9, Throgmorton-strcet, where letters to the secretary must also be dirccted.

A personal examination of the boya' and girla' school, and an attention to the working of the institution, for several years, enables me to bear my personal testimony to the great benefit which England and the colonies derive from this excellent establishment. It is impossible to witness the condition and treatment of the boys at Hackney, under the mild, firm, and judicious management of Mr. Wright, without experiencing a great delight, and being convinced how important to the character of a nation is the early physical and moral discipline, as well as mental education of its youth. There is no appearance of a cold charity among the boys; a sturdy, frank, cheerful, and manly demeanour is immediately observant in their conduct. They farm their own ground, mend and wash their own clothes, work in the carpenter and blacksmith's shop, repair their shoes, print their tracts, draw maps of the colonies to which they are proceeding, learn to swim, climb a mast; " rig a yard," go through military exercises-in short, they are fitted for any occupation which may enable them to obtain an honest livelihood. There is no personal chastisement (which brutalizes either child or man) ; a constant round of useful occupations leaves no leisure for vice; every ten boys are in clarge of a monitor, chosen from among themselves; they go into school, two hours in the morning and two hours in the evening, and, according as they rise in the scale of good conduct, they are permitted to make choice of the colony to which they may prefer proceeding. Their emigration, therefore, is a reward for their good conduct ; and the excellent reports which have come home from the colonies, is the best proof of the soundness of the aystem which Captain Brenton, Mr. Maubert, and others, so beneficently see carried into effect.

The following is a General Embarkation Return to December in each year except 1838.

The plan of emigration was commenced in the year : 833, when all the children then in the asylums were sent to the Cape of Goo:l Hope. The total number of children received from November 1830, to December 31, 1837, was $1,53 \mathrm{~N}$; the total expenditure during that perlod was 21,880 . The number provided for in the colonies to October 31, 1838, is as above, 1,070 ; provided for by friends, 8 c., 570 ; died, 4 ; now in the asylums, 157 ; total number admitted since the first establishment of the institution, 1,801 . It were much to the wished that Her Majesty's Governinent would extend the benefits of this institution by a parliamentary annual grant and by allotting a portion of land In Canada and other agricultural colonies for the formation of branch asylums. Into thuse branch asylums the children would be received on landing; they would be instructed in coloninl farming, in the management of a dairy, and in every pursuit advantageous to a settler in a new colony. On proof of long-continued good conduct, the adult should receive ten acres of land, a horse, cow, and some farming Implements ; and, on the marriage of one of the girls of the Institution; her dower should be five acres of land, a cow, \&cc. The advantagea of such an institution, both to the colonies and the mother country, would be incalcuable. The former would have a constant influx of a young healthy population morally and usefully trained for the good of snciety; the latter would be checking crine in the bud. Our prisons in 1838 are filled with the neglected children of 1828 and 1818. It is seldom that a man hecomes a criminal; the seeds of vice are sown in youth, and produce, in dense and civilized communities, like England, a fatally abundant crop of the clements of gencral misery and national decay.
A society like the one now in existence, managed by a highly respectable committee, would be better adapted for carrying this plan into effect than Government. Zcal seldom or ever pervades the officers paid and appointed by Governments (such as they are now constituted), and, althougls integrity may be secured, apathy predominates. Moreuver, if Government were to carry the plan into effeet, the children might be considered as " transported," and the good effects arising from their feeling that they were earning their own livelihood would be lost. I would earnestly urge on those who look to the welfare of the rising gencration as essential to the future happiness and prosperity of England, to consider this aubject, and, instead of building penitentiaries for male and female infant criminals, to take them out of crime unstained by the contamination of a prison, and without affixing an indelible stamp of infamy, which clings like a curse through life to the unfortunate being whom parental neglect has subjected to temptations, ere their sinfulness was appareut, before there was moral strength to resiat them, and long prior to the mental consciousness of the misery which inevitably ensues from a downward course of guilt. When, alas I will Governments act on Christian principles, and endeavour to prevent crime, instead of punishing it when committed.
