IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences

Corporation

CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur

Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculéeCover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque
Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
Colourad ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que blaue ou noire)
Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents

Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La re liure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure

Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/ Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
Pages damaged/
Pages endommagéesPages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées

Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquéesPages detached/Pages détachées

Showthrough/
TransparenceQuality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impressionIncludes supplementary material/ Comprend du matériel supplémentaire

Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible
Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/ Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, otc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure ir:age possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of the Public Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the beck cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol $\rightarrow$ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol $\nabla$ (meaning "END"). whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diegrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la derniére pege qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole $\rightarrow$ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole $\nabla$ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, cábleaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'engle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenent le nombre d'imeges nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

CANDID   REFLECTIONS   REFLECTIONS  ON THE

$\begin{array}{llllll}\mathrm{R} & \mathrm{E} & \mathrm{P} & \mathrm{O} & \mathrm{R} & \mathrm{T}\end{array}$

(As published by Authority)

OFTHE

GENERAL-OFFICERS,

Appointed by His Majesty's Warrant of the Firft of November laft, to enquire into the Causes of the Failure of the late Expedition to the Coafts of France.

In a Letter to a Friend in the Country.

> Non, $\sqrt{\text { i quid turbila Roma }}$ Elevet, accedar, examenve improbum in illa, Caftiges trutina.

The SECOND EDITION.

> LONDON:

Printed for S. Hooper and A. Morley at Gay's-Head, near Beaufort-Buildings in the Strand. mbcclviri.
ntincound

CR

C A N D I D   REFLECTIONS   REFLECTIONS  ONTHE

Report of the General Officers.

S I R,

AFTER your having all along expreffed fo great a curiofity for knowing what paffed here, with refpect to the confequences of the failure of our expedition, I cannot be furprifed that, on receiving the Enquiry thereon, publifhed by authority, you fhould defire to have fome further explanations, to clear up what may be ftill left obfcure, or whereon to ground your conjectures of any ulterior procedure therein. Willing as I am to oblige, and at the fame time not to deceive you, I can only affure you, that you may depend on nothing but the mont exact truth in any communication of mine, fo far as I B am capable of attaining or comprehending it. No fallhood of fact or inference will you find, that may be a reproach to my profeffion of candor, however it may be one to any judgment or information; for neither of which I call pretend to anfwer.

[ 4 ]

I need not tell you with what eagernefs and fatisfaction the public received his majefty's moft gracious declaration of his incontions, that a faithful enquity fhould be made into the caufes of a failure of an expecition, prepared with fo much oftentation of force, whilft its deftination was kept fo profound a fecret, and on which the perhaps over-raifed expectation of many feemed io reft the very iffine of the war.

But though the fpecific place on which the ftorm was defigned to burft was not known, at leaft to the public here ; yet it was long enough beforehand pretty clear, from many indications, that whatever it was, it muft lie on the weitern coaft of France, from Calais to Bayonne inclufively. This foreknowledge then, would doubtlefs induce the French to give orders for guarding, in the beft manner that could be, the whole extent of the threatened country, and each particular place of it liable to infult in a lefler or greater degree, according to the apprchenfions reafonable to be refpectively entertained for it.

To fay the truth, Rochefort, the very place which, from its fituation, feemed the leaft to invite an attack, was confequently the mott neglected by the French in their plan of defence, and therefore bid the faireft for fuccefs againft it, in cafe of its being practicable to penetrate with a body of troops, fo far as to get before it; whilft the difperfion of their forces, ftationed either in the places judged more obvious to infult, or within reach to fuccour them, fhould give our's the fairer play for carrying it by furprize. Confidering however its importance, efpecially in point of its being one of the principal ports of equipment, implying in courfe its containing docks, ftores, arfenals, and hhipping, the detroying of which wond be cutting the very finews of their marine-force, which muft make it the more a national object for us to attempt; it cannot, reconcileably to common fente, be imagined they would intirely leave it out of their general plan of defence. They might not indeed do all that would have been done to put it into a condition of not fearing an infult, if they had feared one ; but they undoubtedly made fome difofitions againft a contingency, which if not probable, was not however impoflible; or, no doubt, the great wifdom of hur government would not have pitched upon it for its object.

Befides,

[ 6 ]

Befides, that in all enterprizes, efpecially meant for bold ones, all the objections, which it is fo right to weigh and confider, are not, for all that, to be fighted, on fufficient motives to out-balance them ; amongft which not the leaft is that axiom of marhal Turenne's in war, That one is not always to fuppofe an enemy will do all that he might do. The point is to weigh refolutions maturely; but when taken, to execute them with conftancy and intrepidity. Whether then the expedition, now under confideration, was defective in the projection or in the execution, ftood the matter of a fair enquiry. But as the decifion on the exccution, by fuch an enquiry, naturally and ultimately includes the judgment to be formed on the projection of the enterprize, the failure of it was not without propriety, made by his majefty's orders, fpecifically the object of examination.

But before I take notice to you of the report of the commiffioners on that enquiry, 1 hall obferve to you the fate of the public opinion on the difgraceful return of fo powerful an armament, without effecting any thing anfwerable to the hopes or defigns of its outfet.

The greater part of the nation, with the beft of meanings to its honour and intereft, in the heat of its refentment for difappointed expectations, took the readieft objects to vent it on, the commanders on this unfuccelfful expedition. Another part, and by far the leart numerous one, though equally well-meaning, remounted higher, to the plan of projection ittielf; and doing juftice to the grodnefs of its intentions, doubted at leaft of the: chaving been fufficient grounds of knowledge or information to have warranted the undertaking.

Some, merely guided by private attachments, or prejudices in favour of the projectors, or at leaft of the principal promoter of this attempt, extolled it to the fkies, admired the activity of the new m-n-r, that made fo glorious a contratt for him to the paft indulence and inaction of his predeceflors; not without throwing out hhrewd hints of the cnvy of fome who had oppofed his rife to power, having been carried to fuch treafonable lengths, as fecretly to have thwarted and comntermined his operations. On the other hand, others, perhaps influenced by contiderations of the like private nature, by picpe, prejudice, or even that convy of which they were accufed, treated, or affected to trat, the whole plan as chimerical, crode, and indigented, both in the projection and appointment of the execution, from which no better nor other fuccefs could be expecked than what bofel it; that the whole of it was the fcheme of a man, who wanted to value himfelf upon what he did not underfand, and rather than do nothing, with which he had fooften reproached others, would do fomething that, he could have no jult reafon to imagine, would not be infinitely worfe than nothing. For which of thefe two opinions was the lean unjut, I not only refer you to the tades and teltimonials that appear in the comerfe of the enquiry, but to that knowledge of the lewal pofition of things, where the atank wa levelied, which you cither have, or may fo eafily come at.

[^0]
[ B ]

It is alfo not unw orthy of remarl: to you, and what you will eafily helieve, that the loudert dechamers againot the commanders of the expedition on their return, for their tendernefs to their perfons, their declining of danger, and the timidity of their councils, were to be found precifely among the rankeft cowards, or at leaft the mof reatomaily to be fufpected fuch. You might have hoard in coffec-houfes, public afemblies, not excluding the higheft perions, who had never feen the face of danger, nor mof probably ever defired to fee it , the fierceft in the condemmation of the genticmen employed; ridiculous and contemptible howevci as this divifion of judges may be, theyare alway too numerous, and ferve to fill the cry. On the other hand, the mot truly brave and noble, who ever judge n, who he did othing, others, nave no finitely efe two ly refer арреси to that things, ch you to you, lite the tanders or their ming of uncils, ankeft to be ard in xcludfeen y ever manculous on of rous, 1and, ever udge jutge the beft, were not athamed to own, they thought the mon-protetation and concurrence of a Hawke, a Knowles, and a Broderick, (to fay nothing of the military officers, as being with equally unattainted characters more perfonally however concerned) were a great prejudice in favour of the refolution of returning, on taking it for granted, that nothing could be done.

I hall here fay nothing to you of thofe over-refined politicians, who pretend to difcover in the combination of conjunclures, a tendernefs for $\mathrm{H}-\mathrm{n}-\mathrm{r}$, or at leaft a connexion with the convention of Stade, which might either occalion an armament to be fent out, by way of amufement, on an enterprife, where it was fore-known nothing could be done that might toomuch exafperate France to reprifals on H--r, or an intmation to be properly given, that mothing being done, would not be the mofl difpleating thing imaginable. Such conjectures however countenanced by the iflic itielf, or by fortuitous circumftances, cannot be penetrated, at leaff. by the public; and, without proof, it is moft. certainly not only unfuir, but even treafonable to infinuate them.

In one point however all ranks of people united, and that was a general diflatisfaction, at this enterprife having either been fo weakly projected, as not to fuffer even attempt to execute ecute it, or at the defect of the exccution itfelf: it is plain the fault lay fomewhere, and it was natural to wifh the afcertainment of, where the blame was to be imputed for a mifcarriage, which, not to mention the interefts of the nation, affected by the great charge to which it was put on this occafion, gave in the eyes of our enemies, and indeed of all Europe; a kind of ridicule to our arms and councils, to which, moft certainly, there before needed no addition.

[ 10 ]

The city, whofe power of example has fuch an influence over the other towns and corporations of the kingdom, was beginning the motion, for an enquiry, which would probably have been univerfally followed. But to this a ftop was put by an extraordinary, but moft gracious preventive meffage of affurance from the throne, delivered by a kind of fubfecretary, importing, that there was no occafion for its being addreffed for fuch a meafure, which was already determined, without the trouble of fuch an application.

Many were charm'd with this unufual ftrain of condefcenfion, in the court's being pleafed to take notice of what was tranfacting in a city-affembly, and even preventing thofe defires, the formal expreffion of which would probably have been the refult of its deliberation. Some indeed, thought the ftep rather irregular, and that fuch an interference in ecution it-here, and ment of, for a mifintercts charge to gave in ed of all rrms and here behple has vis and ginning would ed. But rdinary, of affukind of vas no fuch a mined, ion. 1 frain leafed in a fe devould beraather ce in mat-matters only under confideration, could not on any prctext whatever, be either acceptable, or ftrially conformable to privilege. But, waving that queltion as foreign to my prefent purpofe, 1 hall go on to obferve, that the promifed enquiry was fet on foot, in manner and form ats you will have feen by the account publiflied by authority.

( II )

You will naturally too have concluded, that the three great perionages appointed for the examination of fo important amater, on fo flemn an occafion, as giving the nation at leatt a preparatory latisfaction, were fuch as were at the head of the mitimery protefion, confummated in the art of wat, and had feen a great deal of fervice, or at leat enough of it to give abundant weight to their decifion. In fo concluding, you wili have been in the right: to none is it unknowa, how much they were fo.

Yet, however authontavely, herond Mispute warrouted this hoard of enquiry was, as no accuftion was formed, no charge haid; the commander of the expedition, whom the enquiry principally affected, thought himed at liverty to call it, "A prockethes not quite " common." (Enq. p. 59.) 'To by the truth, I am not lavyer, or verfed enoigh in the courfe of practice on the like occafons, to determine whether he was in the righ or wrong for making fuch an objection. Nei© . bles
( 12 )
ther do I pretend to give a proper name to the procedure founded upon the royal warrant : it has indeed the air of a military inqueft, proceeded upon by a grand-jury of general officers. But even before a grandjury, there mult be a bill, with fpecification of the party charged, found for a return of Ignoramus or Billa vera; and furely a trial it could lefs be called, as there was neither arraignment of party, nor fentence, nor any thing but a bare opinion pafled, which has nothing of judicial in it, however greatly inftructive it may be ; of which more hereafter.

Should, however, the refult of this enquiry operate in the nature of a billa vera of a grandjury, without the formality of a particular charge having been included in it; certain it is, that though the commander of the expedition ought to, and probably does wilh for nothing foardently, as a regulartrial proceeding upon the foundation of the report; he will, however, be under this difadvantage, that he will have had twice to anfwer one and the fame matter : and, that his defence will have been ftaled by fuci a pre-examination.

Now, I doubt not, Sir, but you will have perufed the Enquiry with all that candor and impartiality which alone can give you a right to judge of it ; and it is in that confidence Surely that I offer you fuch remarks as have occurred to me on it.
er name to royal wariilitary in-d-jury of a grandecification return of ly a trial is neither nor any hich has reatly inereafter. enquiry a grand articular ertain it te expewifh for roceedort; he ge, that ind the Il have I have or and right dence have Itcannotin the firft place have efcaped you, that all the officers of land or fea, whether witneffes or within the contingency of being parties either to a future charge, or to the blame only, unanimoufly agreed on fupporting the expediency of returning without further attempt. Not one of them give fo much as the leaft reafon to imagine there could have been any thing done againft Rochefort, circumfanced as things were, except indeed fomething of a tendency to fuch an infinuation may be gathered from the examination of col. W-- Cl-- on whom it was more immediately a perfonal incumbence, to fupport the honor which the information he had given in, of the fate of Rochefort at the time he faw it, that is to fay, three years before the expedition took place, had met with, in that the refolution of having that place attacked feems to have been principally founded upon it.

But before I enter upon a difcuflion of the motives for or againft attempting a defcent, it may not be fuperfluous to ftate to you fome material differences between the accounts given in or believed here, and thofe which were circulated in Holland and other neutral parts of the continent.

You will fee, efpecially (Enq.p. 69.) in the Memorial of the actual force of France by land, \&xc. the fum of its regular troops to be under two hundred thoufand: and there $\mathrm{C}_{2}$ fecms fecmis at leaft to be fome exactuefs in the calculation, as well as in the account of their dentimation. I am far then from calling the truth of this account in queftion ; but fo much is ccrtain, that the French king is more generally judged to have upwards of three handred thoifand regulars in pay: and if this laft ftate of his force is exaggerated, at leaft, it is very cafy to know whether it is fo or not. The military lifts are in France open enough to examination, not to make it inexcuable the taking any falfe meafures by any mifreprefentation oí them.
(14)

As to the militia, and efpecially the guardecôtes, as they are called, ftationed along the weftern coaft from Calais to Bayonne inclufive; you may have known it currently roceivcd here, that there were not above thirty thoutand men fpread along that vaft extent of comntry, which muft but thinly indeed line the coafl of it. Whereas it is much more near to prolability, if not to truth, what not alone the French themfelves give out, but what many others acquainted with the ftate of that country aver, that there are above one bundred thouland militia men kept upinconteant trairing, and have been fo ever fince the year 1686, now about feventy-one years, fpecifically along the weftern coaft. The reafons two for kecping up fuch a militia are obvious;
mef's in the int of their calling the n ; but fo ng is more $s$ of three y : and if crated, at eether it is in France o make it eafures by the guarred along Bayonne currently ove thirty If extent deed line ch more vhat not put, but the flate ove one inconince the ars, fpereafons bvious; being being defigned not only as an occafional guard againf any invafion, but as a nurfery of foldiers ever ready to recruit their amies; the draughts for which fervice are immediately replaced by thegeneralities, according toafettled repartition, which is feverely obferved.

( 15 )

I have the more infifted on this article of the militia, becaufe it feems contradieted by a paragraph in colonel Cl--'s letter (Enq. p. 67) in which are the following very remarkable words.
"By the expedition to Port L'Orient in " 1745 , it appeared to me, that the country" people in arms are very little better than " cur own; and that an officer who poffefes " himifle, might march fafely from one " end of a province to another, with only "five companies of fremadiers, where there "are no regular troops. They imagine at " firt, that they can fight, and their inten"tions are good, till it comes to the point, " when every body gives way almoft before " the fring of a platoon."

Now, whether that gentleman means by country people in arms, only a fudden collectitious rabble of peafants, or the militia of the country, I Iannot poffibly think them in either of theie conftructions even fo good as ours. In bravery I am fure, the common countrypcople of England are at leaft, equal to the fame clafs amongft the French, and in bodily ftrength ftrength greatly their fuperiors; and difcipline is herc out of the queftion : fo that I grant him towards his argument for placing the French in a defpicable light, even more than he afks. Nor am I in the leaft in this partial to my own countrymen: and furely no Englifh officer can, with a very good grace, fuppore his countrymen, efpecially the irregulars of it, inferior to the French cnes; if he but recollects, that our regulars have within thefe few years flood in no very advantageous light of comparifon with our irregulars, either within the precincts of this ifland, or in America. The naming of Port L'Orient feems too a little mifplaced; for I do not remember that we made a very capital figure in that fame expedition of ours againf it in 2746. I do not know what proofs of cowardice, on coming to the point, the French country-people in arms then fhewed; but this I know, our regulars gave inconteftible ones of their expedition at getting on board their fhips again. There were fcurvy reports at that time propagated, of their having taken rather too fudden a panic; but may be they were falfe ones raifed by the French; though never fufficiently contradicted here.

$\left[\begin{array}{lll}{[16}\end{array}\right]$

As the above quoted paragraph, however, tended to corroborate the recommendation of an attempt to furprife Rochefort, by fhewing there was no material oppofition to be feared from difcipling at I grant acing the nore than this parwrely no od grace, the irreches; if ve within ntageous ulars, eind, or in L'Orient o not reaí figure nfe it in cowarFrench but this ble ones d their oorts at g taken oe they though wever, tion of rewing feared from from the militia, or the country people in erms, you will not think it betide the purpofe, my having given you the contradictory idea others have entertained of that point. I do not pretend to fay which is the trueft ; but I dare iwear you will not hefitate upon pronouncing which is the mont probable.

But granting that the militia was no fuch invincible obtiable to fuch a fine body of regular troops, on the fuppofing thefe landed, and on their march towards Rochefort ; and that it would not have ftood a brufh at their approach, how many efientials remained to be indifpenfibly confidered? which never were fo, becaufe they were not even known, before Rochefort could be, with any fhadow of reafon, prefumed poffible to be carried by a coup-de-main, if I underfand that expreffion right.

Definitions, it is faid, in law are dangerous; but in common fenfe I am fure, they are abfolutely necefliary. I prefume then, a coup-de-main is a French term for what in plain Englifh I fhould call, a fudden exploit of arms, or ftroke of war; the fuccefs of which generally depends on the furprize and confternation of the parties affailed, and the impetuofity of the affailants. I do not, however, pretend to give this Englifh tranflation of mine for a juft one; but of this, $I$ am fure, the French exprefion, confidering the idea it is meant to convey, is a very vague and deficient one; as aceording to the flrict import of the words, thace is hardly an action in war but what may come under that denomination. But not to chicane terms farther where the idea feems to be fiefficiently fettled, you will cafily fee, in the Enquiry, that the time confidered between the thect's appearance on the conft, that is to fay, the 2oth, when the object. of it's mifion became patent, and the council of war held the 25 th, that furprize which is one good half of the conflitutive of a coup-demain, muft have abfolutcly ceafed, and been out of the queftion. Unlecis, indeed, you can fuppofe, that after having fo long known the general dertination of the armament againft the French coaft, that people had falle:a into a profound fleep, or would ftand with their hands folded, and omit all difiofitions for receiving, as the cale required, fuch a vifit.
meant

$\left[\begin{array}{ll}18\end{array}\right]$

As I fincerely believe, not only col. Cl--'s account to be exactly juft, to the beft of his knowledge and apprehenfion, and conformable to the truth of things; may, that no material alterations had been made in the works for defending Rochefort itfelf, fince the time he faw them in 1745 ; fo mult it be full as evident to any officer or engineer, who confiders his defcription, joined with the neceffity of taking preliminarily the fort of Fouras efpecially, at the mouth of the river, deficient it of the war but nimation. here the you will me conre on the ne object council which is coup-dend been you can own the againt len into ith their ions for viht. 1. Cl--'s of his forma-omateworks le tima full as 0 Conle neort of river, (of $\left[\begin{array}{ll}19\end{array}\right]$ (of which colonel $\mathrm{Cl}-$, coull for very and reafons give no acceunt at all;) that few places on the globe conld more fufely defy a fudden infult than Rochefort.

A numerous militia, a ready fupply from neighbouring garrifons, on the appeance of a fleet, the neceflity of 10 much time to be confomed in a debarkaion, at fogreat a difance as Chatelaillon-bay, and that under every difadvantare imoginable; or the impofirbility of landing nearer, withont taking the fort of Fouras, at the mouth of the Charente, are all fuch glaring remoras, that before a body of troops could bope to fenctrate before Rechefort itfelf, that town, with no more works than defcribed by colonel (.---, night with infinite eafe, be put into a condition of laughing at almont any number of troops that Dhould appear befure it ; efpecially unprovided with ftores and materials for a rezular afiult, into which the attempt to furprife it, muit have been in courfe converted. As much as it is a rule in war, not to itppole that an enemy will think of every thing that might guard againf an attack, as little can it be one, to fuppofe that he will think of nothing. And furely a fupplement of the deficiencies in the works for defence, that need not take up four and tweny hours labour, conld not well be imagined to have been o nitted. No wonder that the French have fince given ont, that if they they could have fpecifically named the place for the Englifh to have pointed their attack at, it flowld have been Rochefort. If you would believe them too, or if you will but believe the fuggeftion of common fenfe, nothing could be more grofly falle, than the reports which prevailed here of their being fo panic-ftruck, with the preparations of our tremendous armament, as they were reprefented. Numbers indeed, of families, either retired from the seighbourhood of the fhore, or, fecured (thofe who had any) their effects, by fending them up the country; but nothing more: for the reft, all the difpofitions were made with the uimof phlegm and tranquillity. The militia was raifed, the regular troops ftationed, in read nefs to carry their affiftance where ncedful. And what in all this is either improbabie, or rather not impoffible, but to have befpoke? Such a handful of men as our troops of invafion were notoriouly known to confift of, could alarm for nothing more than for fome fivdden affault, or tranfient ravage of one of their fea- pors along the coaft; and for their moft capital ones, or fuch as were the only ones worth attempting, they had little or nothing to dread, from their being inacceffible to our hips; and furely for Rochefort, leaft of all, fituate up a river, unnavigable for veffels of burthen, and where there is even no landing-landing place near it for troops under the cover of cannon.
(Enq. p. 20.) You will fee that this very meafure was, 'tis very likely, greatly defired and preffed by his R. H. the duke, as well as the king of Pruffia, in the hopes of its making a powerful diverfion in their favour. Too great a complaifance then, could not well be paid to their reprefentations, and fuch a meafure, had it had no other motive than condefcenfion to their requeft, could not bu: be a laudabie cne. Nolefs was owing to a prince of our own country, actually cagaged with our enemy on the continent, and to a king, whofe entertainement of the French forces, has been fo ferviceable to our caufe. But furely they muat have mennt another fort of diverion, both in point of power and object, than Rochefort, or muit have but imperfectly known the fiuation and natural ftrength of that place. It is not furely imaginable, that eight or ten thournd men defigned againf a coaf, neither unprovided with regulars nor militia, to fay nothing of the fortified places with which it is every where lined, could frighten the French cours into the recalling a fingle file of muiqueters from Germany : that they could but do, ia cafe of expecting the invafion of an amy fufficient to attempt the conqueft of, or at leaft a material penerration into the heart of their country. Such a plan required another fort of preparation than we mace for a mere coup-de-man. The faying of Schomberg, who bade no fort of reafon to love the French, and was one of King William's beft generals, is well known, viz. "That attackian France " in France, wis takiar a bedl by the " horns ;" alluting to the excellent fortificati ins with whic! it is every where provided, and which are at once its defence asainf freign invafion, and its tyrannical flrong-hohis firi perpetuating domeftic flavery: an advantuge which Britain would not wihh io buy at fo dear a mate, bor, thank God, has any occafion for, whillt its natural bulwark of a faperior navy fubiths.

[ 22 ]

Victio Amndus of Savoy, whofe juft jealoufy of Freach ambition no ties of alliance could diffipate, and was certainly neither a coward nor a bad politician, on being urged to make an irraption into France, conftantly anfwered, "That be knew a thoufand ways " into Pance, but did not know one out of " it ayain."

Can the commander of the expedition then, who was at once intrufted with the fuccets of it, and the lives of fo many of his galdant coumermen, incur fo much as the fhadow of biame, for maing a point of previoully taking the fort of Fouras, by way of feuring a reirent, when the hopes ired another e for a mere Schomberg, the French, cft generals, king France all be the lent fortifiwhere proits defence tyrannical eftic favewould not hank God. ral bulwark fe juft jeaof alliance neither a fing urged conttantly fand ways ne out of xpedition with the many of much as a point puras, by e hopes of of taking Rochefort by furprize ware already fontably cut off? Where the open conquelt indeed of a country has been intended, a commander has, in order to take from his troops all hopes of retreat, burnt the hips that brought them, from which they were to know, that there was no alternative for them but death or conqueft. But this bold meafure always fuppoled in the commander a thorough knowledge of the country he was attempting, and of the dangers he was to encounter; whereas, in this cafe, the ftate of the place to be attacked is not, even to this hour, known here, with any fort of precifion lufficient to ground a plan of operation upon it.

To hase landed them, and without fecurins fort Fouras, to have marched on to Rochefort, without the leaft intelligence of what difpolitions were there made to receive them, or on fuch a mad prefumption as that of their having been intirely neglected, would not have argued true courage, or even merited fo honourable an appellation as that of rathnefs, which is often in military exploits crowned by fuccefs; but of fuch grofs ftupidity and ignorance of duty, as no general, that deferved the name of one, could have been guilty of it.

Fouras then was undoubtedly to be taken, before the reduction of Rochefort could be at-attempted. But how ? " Ay, that is the " queftion." Difficulties invincible appeared, merely from its fituation, againft carrying even that pauliry hen-coop. A fingle fhip, laying againit it, would probably have battered it to the ground in a fees hours; but even a frigate could not be got up within gun-hot of it (Enq. p. 32). The pilot Thierry engaged, indeed, to pilot a Thip within a quarter of a mile of it; but it does not appear that he was capable of performing that eng:gement. The Barfleur, which drew two foot water lefs than the Magnanime (the hip which he defied for that purpofe, and which was refufed him, on the account of the damage it had recently furtained!, was on ground where the lay, between four and five miles diftance from the fhore. Even a bombketch (Enq. p. 44), that drew but eleven feet of water, ran aground at a greater diftance from Fouras than the bombardier could throw the fhells, with the greatef requifite of powder, at an e'evation of forty-five degrees, that is to fay, above two miles and two thirds. In the mean tinc, you will obferve, the French gave them one proof of their being neither afleep, nor frightened out of their fentes; fince, whilft the bomb-ketch was amore, they detached two large row-boats with two pieces of heavy cannon in their prow, and full of men each, to attack the ketch, in ared, ying hip, batbut ithin pilot hip does :maich the face of the whole fleet; and would probably have carricd her too, if the viceadmiral Knowles had not effectually interpofed, by making a fignal immediately for all the boats of the. fleet to fpeed to her refcue, himfelf going on board the Coventryfrigate, to drive away the row-boats; in which time he ran a-ground, confiderably within the !pace of an hour, five times, and at a greater diftance from the fhore than the bomb ketch.

[ 24 ]

This however may hew you, that Fouras was unexpugnable by our fhipping. And here it is prefumeable, that the pilot Thierry, who had engaged for bringing the Magnanime, which drew (as before obferved) two foot water more than the Barfleur, muft have acknowledged his mifake; for it can hardly be fuppoled that he would refufe undertaking to pilot the hip fubftituted on fuch good reafons. He was not, you will remark; examined before the board, being, it feems, abfent, as well as Sir Edward Hawke.

It appears ton, by the Enquiry, that even after the council of war of the 25 th of September, in which it was unanimoufly agreed, that the reduction of Rochefort was, in the actual pofition of things, neither advifeable or practicable, both the land and fea commanders were highly unwilling to give over all thoughts of fanding, and attempting at leaft to do fomething. Some probability of fuccefs in attacking Fuuras dawning to them, in freth information that came in to them by their prifoners, they greedily feized it. The coming on the back of it, by landing forces in Chatelaillon-bay, carried with it at firft an air of temptation. Nothing feemed more eafy, more inviting, or more fafe, than a fine beach, acceffible to boats; not a man to be feen on the fhore, no batteries to anncy a landing on it: for a few guns, en barbette, on Chatelaillon-point, that could not reach it, are fcarce worth mentioning. This fpot, though at fo much greater a diftarce from Rocheforr, yet as it fiemed to give fome chance for an attack by land on Fouras, induced the land and fea officers in chief command to think of putting the forces aflhore there.

26 ]

Here it plainly appears, by the Enquiry, that they were fo far from being defircus of returning wilhost attempting a defcent, that they feized the firt overture of one, without even a due regard to the moft obvious rules of war, and is might not unjufty add, of common fente. For, according to all accounts, this beach was furrounded by fand-hil's, confilerably within lefs than mulket-dhet of the water-edge, by which any number of mon might have been conccaled, cealed, with the utmof fafety from the cano non of the fhips, till the inftant of fallying nould offer for taking advantages of the troops in their landing.

$$
(27)
$$

This too was a circumftance in which the night would but be the more favorable to the enemies; in the confufion they muft fo reafonably hope to find troops fetting foot on an unknown fhore, themfelves not only being at home, with a firm footing on diry land, but in cafe of a fuperior repulfe, being atiured of an eafy retreat. If it fhould be faid, that the exiftence of troops behind thofe fand-hlls is only a gratuitous fuppontion, a mere beging of the queftion; let any one who knows any thing of the matter, but ank himelf, whether any general could pofibly not take it for granted, that there muf be forces at hand, even without the information of prifoners? Would any man in his fenfes, that knew in the leaft what France or War was, allowhimfelf to doubt of there being troops in that country, alarmed and forewarned as it had been? The motions then of our flect being watched, as they naturally muft have been, nothing on earth could offer a more favorable mafk to the numbers the French would have to oppofe a defcent, than thofe fand-hills. As nothing need to be furer too than that fuch forces they bad in readinefs; fo it was equally E fure, fure, that it was their game to conceal them, till the madnefs of a defent hould afford them a cheap market of us, when not the greatef courage could have ftood the leaft chance againtt fuch obvious and unfair advantage.

[ 28 ]

But this was not all. When from an eagernefs pardonable only to that courage which does not fand upon weighing of obftacles, and to that juft firit of theirs for ferving their country at all events, this landing was refolved on; when even one divifion of the troops was already in the boats prepared to carry them to land, you will find a new and infuperable difficulty farted. It appeared, that it was not poffible to carry above two thoufand men at a time to the landing-place. There were they to remain fix hours, expofed to the whole force of an enemy, that could not weil be fuppofed to be dead afleep, or infenfible of fuch an advantage, before they could poffibly be reinforced by a fecond debarkation. Then it was that the commanders opened their eyes at length, on the foily of fich an attempt, which had been thut by the falte hame only of doing nothing, where nothing was to be done: then it was they returned to the mof fentible reiolution they had yet taken, that of the council of the 25 th, of giving over what, for fo many clear

29 )

clear reafons, had fo much better never have been undertaken.

I do not afk you to fuffer your judgment to be influenced by merely the mames of the gentlemen who fublcribed to that contultation of the 25 th, though I firmly believe they do not yield in point of bravery cuen to the foremoft of thofe who have bhaned their refolution for returning. No! only weigh but their reafons, and the examination previous to the report, and more elpecially the defective information of the frit fuggetter of the undertaking (be it faid without the leat offence to him, fince he could fay no more than he knew, and what he did fay was probably the exactef truth), and you will own, that none but the French could have withed our armament had proceeded further is the execution of its miffion. They indeed might have rejoiced, that fo finc a body of troops fhould fall into a trap, the grofnets of which would have robbed them of any pity for falling into it. They mutt, in all human probability, have been the victims to a miftake that was not their own, and that with their cyes open on the palpability of it.

But, Sir, the unpromifingnefs of this expedition was not judged of only by the event, but numbers here, on knowing its deftination for the conft of France, and the confitution of things in thofe parts, made even no merit of pronouncing boldly, that nothing would of could be done by that grand armada. Many too, on feeing the equipment of fo gallant a fleet, lamented its not having been earlier fitted out againft another, and the only place in which France can receive a wound in her vitais, and thac is Cape-Breton. The infinite imponance of America, and the actual fituation of things there, loudly called for fuch a decifive mealure. And what could hinder its being taken with all affurance of fuccefs, early enough in the feafon, unlefs the activity of the frate's bei:g about that time miferably fufpended by a feramble for power amongft private juntos, and infignificant party-cabals, may be given for a reation?

L 2 of

(30)

Had a much lefs armament than this one proceeded on that defination, the French interef in Amuica muft, in all human probability, have been deftroyed by the ax being thus laid to the root; and the fhips of our late unfortunate fquadron in thofe parts might have, not unlikely, been riding the form out fafe and trimmphant in the harbour of Louifbourg. Thofe who know moft of things, know there is nothing exagerated in the confequences, nor romantic in the hopes of fuch an undertaking; efpecially bad it been then carricd into execution. Had Rochefort even been been taken, what would have been the confequence but the deftruction of a few fhips, naval fores, and arfenal: call it great ; but flill it could be no more than a tranfient reparable damage : whereas, by getting poffeffion of Cape-Breton, you not only cut off the fyringhead of the French power in America, but may nip in the bud their beft, and perhaps only nurfery of feamen for their navy, with many other advantages therefrom, too obvious need deducing here, where the mention of it figures only as a digreffion; but a digreffion you will, I hope, pardon, in favor of the well-meaning of it.

[ $3^{1}$ ]

In that confultation of the 25 th above referred to, and efpecially from the opinion of the chief engineer, wha cannot be fuppofed very favorable to any refolution of defiftence from an attempt of which himfelf was in fome fort the parent, you will eafily fee at one glance, the nature, and caufe of failure of the enterprize. You will fee, that not a foul on board knew half the requifites to be known before any exccution could be proceeded to, or even rightly planned; and at the fame time, that it was no fault of theirs that they did not know them. Vague and contradictory reports of the fate of Rochefort, of its ditch and rampart; in hort, only the moft material points, and fuch as the fate of the enterprize, and of the lives of thofe empioyed in it, muft turn upon, were the very points that remmined, and ftill remain perfecty madectamed.

The phan furnihed from memory by the chief enchineer, with at leaft a confefied doubt of his, for want of information, what alterations might have been made fince, was of it felf fufficient to afine any general or engineer, "That if no place was more capable of being taken by affult, if it could be come at by finpuife; fo no place, you can perhaps name, was more capable of being, within even a few hours, put into a pofture of defence againft fuch a fudden affault: and that no regular attack made any part of the defign, cannot appear plainer, than for fo good a reafon as the engineer himfle gives. That the imall quantity of artillery they had, was not fent on that plan." (Enq. p. 105.$)$

The polfility of a furprife, then being ablolutely over, the only chance for fuccels by a regular affalt, mut have been their bringing their forecs before it, and that too withont atilicry. But even that chance, defperate as it wes, and which the commandershowever were apparenty determined to try, was denied them. By water, the fituation was inacceffibe: by landing indeed at Chatelation-iay, that is to tay, if the Freach would have been fo very polite as not to mo-

[ 33 ]

left them, in their attempt of it, they might have got perhaps before Ruchefort; and what to do there? to ftand with their fingers in their mouths, or try to batter down its defences with threats, for other effective arms they could have nonc. In fhort, when I figure to myeflf the fituation of our troops, fairly arrived betore Rechefort, drums beating, and colors flying, I as tempted to think the French knew their own intereft too well to interfere with the hading of cur forces, or hinder them from proceeding up to the town. Wothing in all human probability would have afforded them a finer opportunity, or have played the game better into their hands. No retreat, no communication with the dhips, any more than if thefe fhips hat been at Japan, no chance for cfaping, but by fighting their way back again, under the greateft uncertainty in the world, of being able to get off the thore, even flould the hats be ready to take them off, and all the while harrafled by thofe Freach forces, which not invincibly to have prefumed, were ready for their reception, after fo long an adam, would have been a folly beneath ferious effetation: all thefe, 1 fay, incline me to think the French defired nothing fo much, as what fome are fo forry here did not happen. Every true Englifhman, however, who will give his own udgment judgment fair play, in forn of popular anc ignorant prejudice, may rejoice, that fuch a number of his countrymen did not perifh in fo filly a finare, without profit to their country, without honor to themiclves.

$\left[\begin{array}{lll}14\end{array}\right]$

You will, I hope too, Sir, forgive me if I own myfulf not extremely edified by fome paffages in the enquiry, of which I refpectfully take for granted, the forms of public procedure, rendered the publication indifpenfably neceffary ; and which otherwife one would imagine, were highly improper to be publifled: and that is the names and defcriptions of perfons, who, either they, or their families are ftill under the French power, or are liable to come under it. Every one knows the alert and watchful genius of that government, over its fubjects, or rather its flaves, whofe actions and words are under the rigideft comptrol of its arbitrary refentment or caprice.
Mr. Macnamara is, if I am not miftaken, deceafed, or the leaft that his politenefs to an officer in Englifh regimentals, in permitting him to view the works of the place, would have coft him, was a fevere reprimand, or perhaps a difmiffion from his poft, which he would have owed to the fpecific mention of him in the report. Further: amongtt the accidents of war, there might occafions often offer for cxamination of French prifoners, from whence very valuable difeoveries might a:ife. Now, might not it prove a oreat check on their confidence, on their communicativenefs and matural inclination to taliking; the having fuch reafon to think their names and perfons might poffibly come to be publifhed acaint them, in the procedure of fome court-matial, or enquiry, fo as to render them obnoxious to their own govermment? Might not this be a ftrong motive for their being thy and referved? I am apt to believe fuch publications are never practifed under any government but ours; but at the fame time, no doubt, it has its reafons for being above fuch an attention, though I do not pretend to penetrate them.

It was alfo for much the fame caufe I obferved with infinite pain, that paffage in Sir J. L-r's memorial of advice to Sir J. M--(Enq. p. 22.) "There are numbers of protef" tants in that province that wifh you well, "and would be glad to go on board with you." This hint was doubtlets purely intended as a private one, and never for publication, fo that no blame can in that light fall upon it. But is it not unhappily publifhed? All who know the nature of the French government, efpecially its conftant difpofition to opprefs the proteftants, muft eafily allow that fucis a paragraph cannot come unwelcome to it, as it may give it a handle, at leaft for a greater viF gilance, gilance, over a fet of people thus marked out to them. Nor can they themfelves be extremely obliged to us for fuch a defignation : but what is ftill worle, it is moft probably not entirelv a jur one. The proteftants, who are ftill fuffered, or rather commived at in France, in general, pieque themielves on the utmoft lovalty to their king and country. They deduce this duty from their religion, which even under perfecution, forbids them to turn traitors, at fuch a crifis too, as that of an actual invafion. If numbers of refugees, on their quitting France, and flying from the face of oppreffion, took fervice under powers at enmity with it ; it was not till after their local refidence in the countries in which they had found refuge, from the moft inhuman oppreffion at home, had changed the objects of their allegiance, that they departed from it, and becam perhaps the moft faithful, and certainly not the leaft ufeful fubjects of thofe powers that were wife enough to give them harbour and protection. It is, I fancy, with reafon, faid, that numbers of the prefent proteftants of France, efpecially in thofe very parts that were the fcene of our projected in. vafion, would defire no better than an opportunity of fignalizing their loyalty to their country, ly way of the jufteft and bittereft reproach to their opprefliors, for their infamous as well as impolitic fpirit of perfecution. Numbers, we are told, of there people offered their fervice, fpecifically on this very occation, to the French government. But, however that may be, I cannot but think fuch a pallage might, for obvious realons, have better been left out, efpecially as it is nothing to the purpofe of the Enquiry.

[ 36 ]

$[37]$

I come now to the report iticlf, given in by the appointed commiffioners of Enquiry, and cefulting from the matter of it. (Sie En\%. " (2.) And here 1 begin with fairly i.. ., to you, that it paffes my compre$\therefore$ Could fo extravagant a cafe be c. .., as that there was a collufive compromife agreed on between the projectors of the expedition and the commanders of it; that fince fome report muft necefliarily pafs, fuch an one hould be dictited as ihould neither acquit the one, nor condem the other ; I hould think there could not have been a more admirable piece framed for fuch a purpofe.

Not a word is, indeed, faid in it that might impeach the wifdom of the projection, or impute the failure of the expedition to its infufficiency. But not a word too is there in it, but what the commanders might even glory in avowing and fubferibing to. If it fatisfies the public but half as anch is F2 it it ought to fatisfy them, then all parties owe to thofe honorable perfonages who paffed the Report the jufteft thanks.

( $3^{8}$ )

I pafs over the preamble, as being merely matter of form and introduction; and fhall only point out to you fome parts of the Report, that cannot but juftify to you my admiration of it. I fuppofe you have it before you, and proceed.

The firft caure of failure appears to have been the not aitacking Fouras by fea, at the fame time that it wouid be attacked by land. But the abfence of fir Edward Hawke, and of the pilot of the Magnanime, not admitting an examination into that particular, the opinion upon that point is left open and undecided. All that appears very plain is, that Fouras was inaccefible to an attack by fhipping, notwihftanding the pilot Thicrri's promife, which, it thould feem, he could not make good. At leift, in this the commanders arc in no fault.

Another caufe of fallure afigned in the Report, is the non-attempting to land on the report received on the 24 th of September from rear-admiat Brodrick and the captains, who had been fent out to found and reconnoitre; when, inftead of landing directly, a council of war was called on the 25 th, in which it was manimory, refolved not to land, land, as the attempt upon Rochefort was neither advifeable nor practicable. To day the truth, after fuch a report as the commanders then received, after what they themfelves could fee of the local pofition of things, and what they muft know or prefume of the ftate of the country, they were, if it is not too difrefpectful in me to fay fo, rather in the wrong for calling any confultation, if their retolution could have difpenfed with the form of it: for, in fact, there was no matter of confultation at all. The nature of the errand they were fent on, and the impofiblity of its execution, were already plain enough.

[ 39 ]

"But it did not appear that there were " then, or at any time afterwards, either " a body of troojs or lateries on the fhore, " fufficient to have prevented their defcent." This is moft religioufly true. As to troops, nothing can on earth be more certain, than that troops there wore and mult be in the country; and as certain, that the French muft have been very great ideots indeed to have fuffered them to be feen, when it was fo eafy and fo much their game to conceal them. As to batteries in Chatelaillon-bay, the only convenient place for a defcent, not. ono otficer ever faid there were any, or did not but aver the contrary; but who of them

$$
\left[\begin{array}{lll}
& 40
\end{array}\right]
$$

could not but fee the impropriety, according to all the rules of war and of common fenfe, of effectuating a defcent, from which no good could be hoped for the fuccefs of the main of the enterprize, the attack upon Rochefort? Could any thing counterballance the moral affurance of being cut off divifion by divifion, which muft have been the cafe, unlefs the French could be fufpected of falling off, on fuch a tempting occafion, from their ufual alertnefs, or have only fufpended its exertion, in order to draw us more compleatly into the fnare ?
"It does not appear (fays the Report), " that there were any fufficient reafons to " induce the council of war to believe that " Rochefort was fo far changed, in refpect " of its ftrength, or pofture of defence, " fince the expedition was firft refolved on " in England, as to prevent all attempts of " an attack upon the place, in order to " burn and deftroy the docks, magazines, " arfenals, and fhipping, in obedience, " &c."

To all this the commanders might chearfully fubfcribe, fince it does honor both to their fenfe and obedience. They were fent furely on the plan of a furprize, or coup-demain. Nothing can be plainer than their inftructions on this head : but that cafe of furprize not exifting, as confidering the fituation of that place, it could never, but by the favor of a miracle, exift: Rochefort might not indeed very materially be changed as to its ftrength, or pofture of defence; but obvioufly ceafed, from the inftant there was no hope of coming on it by furprize, to be a place polfible to be taken by a fudden affault.

41 ]

As to what the Report adds, " that no " reafon could exift fufficient to prevent the " attempt of landing the troops, previous " to the 28 th of September, as the council "then unanimoully refolved to land with all " poffible difpatch." Nothing can be more juft, on the fuppofition that it was right to have landed at all. It is even too favorable to the commanders; for certainly every hour's delay, after the inftant of their arrival, ftrengthened their reafon for not landing, could that have required Atrengthening. And they are juftly punifhed for the imprudence of not adhering to their firft and beft reiolution of the 25 th not to land at all, unlefs their zeal for attempting evident impoffibilities, in the fervice of their country, may be allowed to excufe them, and the intention acquit them for the abfurdity of their perfeverance in an enterprize, of which their own perfonal knowledge might have alrcady already fufficiently exploded the plan to them.

Even then by the report itfels, abifractedly confidered, you may, Sir, eafily difcern, whether the failure is impurabie to the original fin of infufficiency in the project itfelf, or to the perfons commithoned to carry it into execution. You may fafely pronounce, without the hazard of a rafh judginent, on the materials of information before you, whereon the enterprize was it feerns embraced and planned, whether ali the prerequifites of knowledge were duly oitained before the difpatch in the armament (that is to fay, on fuppofing that it was ever ferioufly meant, or hoped that it fhould fucceed) or whether a fet of gentlemen of unattainted characters, and trulted with the arms of their country, could be fo grolly wanting to its honor, and to their own, as to retarn back with fo bad a grace, if a better knowledge and a perfoinal view of things had not forced them to it, with a regret they rendered but too apparent, by perfifting in it fo much beyond the bounds of their duty, that one would have thought them willing to prefer the bare opinion of others at a diftance, to their own actual and paipable recognition on the fot.

Should

[ 43 ]

Should you, however, after fettling this point in your own mind, proceed to any degree of curiofity for what further may be expected from this meafure of an enquiry, which feems but a preparatory one to an ulterior procedure upon it, it is not at leaft to me you muft addrefs yourfelf for fatisfaction. The low level range of humble common fenfe can never pretend to reach the fublimity of thofe clouds in which the exalted wifdom of our councils has fo long rolled, and carried the public affairs to that pitch of profperity and renown in which they are at prefent fo confpicuoufly feen. But if you will deign to accept a general rule of conjecture on any future turns of affairs that as yet lie hid within the womb of time, or in the heads of our modern ftatefmen; a rule that has for thefe many years hardly been known to fail; this it is. Imagine to yourfelf fpecifically what is moft agrecable to common fenfe, and to the once believed juft order of judgment, and then do not be furprifed at finding the event diametrically oppofite to it. In the prefent current of things, no oracle can afford you a furer prognoftic than this method of anticipation by contraries. Should you then find a ftatue decreed to the great projector of this celebrated expedition, and national G dif-

[ 44 ]

difgrace, or even an ignominious punimment allotted for thofe unfortunate enough to have been fent in command upon it, there can be nothing fo ftrange in fuch a diftribution of juftice as to make you ftare at it, if you reflect upon all the unaccountablenefs in our judgment and affairs for thefe many years laft paft. The folly would indeed now be to be furprifed at any thing.

I am, Sir,

Yours, &c. and upon it, there n fuch a diftribuyou ftare at it, if inaccountablenefs $s$ for thefe many y would indeed any thing.

[^0]:    whole

