Jas. Roddy was the only drunk. He admitted the charge and was fined $4. A very interesting case then came on Mary Ann Gear was charged by Margare McCue with assaulting her and throwing dirty water on her. The evidence showed they were both tenants in the same house and Miss Geer had her beau in the porch came out and sat on the platform in front of the door. Miss Gear thinking they seeing what was going on between her and "her feller" went into the house, and returned with some dirty water, which of Parlia she threw over Margaret. This was proved and admitted by Miss Gear, who was fined $4 with $2.10 costs. There was a counter charge in which Miss Gear accused Catherine McCue with assaulting water on Margaret, Catherine got her nad up, and tried to give Miss Gear a thrashing. The latter was too smart for her, however, and closed the door before she had a chance to strike her. Catherin struck the door and skinned her knuckles, and though Miss Gear swore she was struck several times in the face, it was not believed, and the case against Mc-Cue was dismissed. The cause of the attack is that Mr. Richards considered Mr. Skinner had insulted him by language used in the City Court while defending a case against him. After the case was concluded there was some trouble that would have ended in blows but for the interference of other parties. Mr. Richards says that that time he only intended to demand an apology, but as he could get no satisfaction he prepared his cowhide and deliberately assaulted above. He claims that he was grossly insulted by Mr. Skinner where he had no chance to reply, not only by the learned ounsel's criticisms of his evidence, but also by references to his business transactions that had nothing to do with the case. Since the termination of the case, PULLMAN PALACE CARS ON ALL and the result of the dispute at the Court House, Mr. Richards says he has been unable to enjoy a comfortable night's sleep, but last night, feeling that he had done his duty, he was able to enjoy his repose.
